The May meeting of Creston and District Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Jas. Cook on Friday afternoon. The president, Mrs. H. W. McLaren, was in charge. There was an attendance of thirteen members and two visitors.

An appeal from the Salvation Army had to be refused for this year, the Institute already having numerous other calls for help of a strictly community character. It was decided to pay the per capita tax, this enabling the Institute to continue in the federation.

Mrs. Mallandaine gave out interesting reading matter on the work done by women's institutes in previous years, in connection with the crippled children's home and the Queen Alexandra solarium. The institutes are sponsors of both these organizations.

Mrs. R. Stevens reported for the home industries committee, and is still collecting work suitable for exhibit at the Vancouver exhibition this year. Home craft is particularly required.

Mrs. W. Fraser reported for schools' committee. The first aid kit in Miss Wade's room needs replenishing. Principal Marriott of the public school has submitted lists of work required from pupils wishing to compete in the school fair this fall. Copies will be sent to the rural schools.

Committees were struck for the annual bulb show on Saturday A feature of the session was a very practical talk on his travels in Mexico last summer by vice principal O. Sostad of Creston high school. He gave a graphic description of the country, and also reviewed the history of Mexico prior to the eighteenth century up to 1934. His de cription of a visit to Mexican schools during school hours was particularly good He was accorded a vote of thanks at the close of his address.

Some bulbs were raffled at the close of the meeting, Mrs. Dee holding the lucky ticket. Tea hostesses were Mrs. Cook and Mrs. Stevens. The June meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Mallandaine.

At the C.C.F. Club whist and dance Friday night the drawing took place on the rooster that had been raffled, but as yet the holder of the lucky ticket has not been found. The raffle netted $3.50 and this has been donated Creston hospital.

Overdue Dog Tax Must Be Paid

May 27th is Last Day—Collect Through Magistrate's Court—Penalty $10 or 30 Days—Pass $415 of April Accounts.

Unless 1935 dog tags are procured on or before May 27th the owners of canines within the village limits will be summoned into police court and payment enforced according to the terms of the village by-law. This was the outstanding piece of business transacted at the May meeting of the village council on Monday night. Reeve F. H. Jackson presided, with Councillors A. Comfort and C. Murrell in attendance.

With the erection of residences along Wilson Avenue has come the shutting off of a blind lane that formerley served the places of business on the west side of the avenue. To give access to these premises the council will buy 12 feet from Oscar Pettersen at a price of $15, the dozen feet being required to provide a turn at the upper end of the lane off Fifth street. Mr. Pettersen was present and the deal was made in about two minutes.

There was a letter asking some member of the council to attend a meeting to de held at the public school on May 21st at which Dr. Todd, a well known educationalist, will speak on adult education. The reeve and Coun. Murrell will attend. If the executive of the schools' track meet to be held today will guarantee good care for the benches at Park pavilion the use of them will be conceded for spectators to the athletic get together.

The council decided to accept the offer of F. N Imhoff to make a composite map showing all the property in the village. There are about 25 different plans and the map will be about 6 x 4½ feet. Mr. Imhoff guarantees a satisfactory map at a charge of $110. H. B Dawson of Nelson ofiered to supply a similar map for about $100. The council will go into the matter thoroughly with Mr. Imhoff before work is commenced.

A charge of $2 per tank to empty cesspools will be made where the village supplies men and equipment for thi work. Ratepayers who want to do the job themselves will be granted the free use of the truck, pump, etc. J. W. Robinson will be allowed one day's pay for making certain improvements on Fifth street in the rear of his own property.

There was a letter from Creston Valley Co Operative Association in connection with the addition they are putting to their store and the proposed widening of Canyon street. The association agrees to be responsible for setting the addition back ten feet should widening of the street from Dr. McKenzie's to Corrie & Sons store be undertaken within three years.

The erection of the new blacksmith shop on Canyon street, about opposite the Orchard Service Station will not be permitted unless the owner complies with the building regulations, particularly in respect to the chimney construction and the putting on of a Rubberoid roof. The front of the new building will also be required to conform strictly to the building by-law. April accounts passed for payment totalled $415, about $135 of which was spent on the streets.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Krisby of Big Valley, Alberta, arrived this week and are settled now on the former Harry Vernon place.

H. Dodding of Nelson, field representative for the Land Settlement Board, was here on official business at the first of the week.

The Lister area got about one third of an inch of moisture in the showery spell of Saturday. More rain is badly needed as April was very dry and May has been but little better to date.

The government grader in charge of Messrs. Vigne and Ostendorf and Taylor and Willis was operating on the sideroads on Friday and Saturday, making a big improvement in travel.

John Huscroft is busy with clearing operations on another ten acres, and is utilizing the steam engine from the sawmill at the stump pulling. When ready for planting the new area will be sown to alfalfa.

Deer Lodge Club had eight tables in play at their whist-bridge-cribbage tournament at the schoolhouse on Saturday evening. At crib the winners were Mrs. H. Yerbury and Wm. Demchuk. At old style whist first prizes were taken by Mrs. W. Demchuk and Douglas McKee. The high scorers at bridge were Margaret Huscroft and A W. Wilson.

The recreation field at Huscroft had a great day of softball and baseball on Sunday, which attracted a large crowd, one estimate placing the number of autos at the park at 25. At softball the Lister-Huscroft girls trimmed Canyon ladies 17-11, but at baseball the men were not so fortunate, dropping a game to Canyon 6-4. Porthill handed Copeland a 15-5 setback at baseball for the closing feature of the day.

Word reached here on Tuesday of the death at St. Mary's hospital, at Walla Walla, Wash., on May 6th, of Mrs. Albert E Dent, who had left for that city about two weeks previous on a visit with relatives in hope of improving her health. The funeral took place at Walla Walla on May 9th. Mr. Dent left here at the first of last week to be with her but arrived after she had passed away. In addition to her husband, six children survive.

The secretary explained that in the queen contest 28 votes were received too late for the poll, and were not counted. 18 of these votes were for Kate Payne, and 10 for Doris Ferguson.

Hospital Buys X-Ray

There was a fair attendance at the monthly meeting of the directors of Creston Valley Hospital Wednesday last, with President F. V. Staples in the chair.

The president announced the purchase of Dr. Olivier's X-Ray machine and equipment. Chas. Murrell reported on the condition of the drainage system, and was authorized to excavate a hole in order to obtain a better strata.

The secretary's report showed that April had been an average month for this year, and 152 more hospital days than for April 1934. Receipts included a special grant of $750 from the provincial secretary towards the cost of an X-Ray machine. Collections from patients were fair. Collections in kind, al ways an important feature of the hospital's financing, have not been as good this spring as they were last fall, due the fact that no major improvement is now being carried out on which the labor tendered in payment can be used.

T. Goodwin reported that the grounds had been put in shape, and lawn on the south side of the building now ready for seeding The greater part of this work was donated to the hospital. The thanks of the board were accorded Mrs. Archibald, Mrs. Cook and Mrs. Murrell for gifts during the month.

Planning

In these days much is heard of the art of planning and the dire necessity for scientific, constructive planning in finance, economics, industry, social services, in fact in all the organization of our modern life and its varied interests and activities. Indeed, if a person was prepared to unthinkingly accept the advice being so freely tendered in many quarters, only one conclusion would be reached, namely, that mankind in mass could, if it would, definitely plan and order its way of life, and clearly and authoritatively scale and draw a plan that would work with the simplicity and accuracy of the multiplication table.

But life is not like that; too many contrary factors enter into the scheme of things and life, too many factors, influences and natural laws which are beyond human control to permit of any such artificial planning that will prove workable and fool proof. As the poet Burns so well expressed it:

The best laid schemes o' mice an' men
Gang aft a-gley,
An' lea'e us naught but grief and pain,
For promised joy.

Two years ago President Roosevelt's "brain trust" decided that the whole economic life of the United States could be planned and charted in advance; that it could scientifically plan and control the production of that great country so as to overcome and prevent what was alleged to be the evils of over-production. It set out to do so, but instead of facing the primary cause of the alleged over-production, it adopted and acted upon the easy formula that all that was necessary was to compel by law a reduction in the volume of production.

So wheat farmers were bonused, not to grow wheat, but to stop growing it; cotton planters were bonused to stop growing cotton; farmers were paid to quit raising hogs, and so on and so forth, and the consuming masses of the people were taxed in order to raise the funds wherewith to pay these bonuses on destruction. Then Nature stepped in, withheld its usual bountiful supply of rain, sent excessive heat and blistering winds and swirling dust storms, and in a brief space of time reduced production over man's mistaken efforts, and to a far greater extent, until within a few months a shortage of supplies faced the nation instead of an over-production, which over-production had actually resulted from a previous form of artificial planning in the shape of tariffs and other trade restrictions.

Following the Great War, the statesmen of the world assembled in Paris to draft a treaty of peace and to plan the future of Europe and the world. They labored for months, created elaborate international machinery to direct and control world affairs, re-arranged the boundaries of countries, and gave birth to new nations. On paper their plans looked good; they were hailed as a great advance in the cause of world peace and international goodwill and co-operation.

But in the years that have followed all the passions, prejudices, suspicions, racial and religious animosities, and vagaries of human nature have continued to hold sway over millions of mankind. Much of the planning has proved an abject failure, some of it has been thrown into the discard, and what remains is in danger of destruction through another world upheaval.

Thus has it been amply demonstrated that man cannot direct and control the immutable laws of Nature, nor can he forecast them in any scheme of planned economy he may devise; neither can a few planners, however able and sincere they may be, draft plans and charts which will work despite all the selfishness, the ambitions, the ignorances, passions and prejudices of man.

This being so, the nations are now being told by the planners that mankind in the mass can no longer be trusted; that democratic forms of government are a failure; that instead of the people creating and controlling their governments, forms of government must be set up which, controlled and directed by a few, will super-impose their will upon the masses, control and order the people, instead of the people controlling the governing bodies.

Such a plan may be inaugurated; it may work for a time, but not for long. It can never possess any degree of permanence, because man was created a free being with a mind, a will, a soul of his own, and in the final analysis he will, because God and his own nature intended that he must, work out his own salvation. No other power, and least of all a government, can do it for him.

The proper study of mankind is man, and the proper, only permanent, planning is by individual man, namely, that he so order his life and his activities, so control his ambitions and his passions, as to come within the plan laid down in the Golden Rule—Do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you.

Queen Mary's Tea Chest

Gift From Ceylon To Be Exhibited In Toronto

Visitors to the Ceylon exhibit at the forthcoming Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto will have an opportunity to see the beautiful chest presented to Her Majesty at Christmas by the Empire Tea Growers. The chest is made of rare and lovely woods—rosewood from India, inlaid with satinwood and ebony from Ceylon and purleheart from British Guiana, the woods being left in their natural state at the express wish of Her Majesty. The inlay on the lid has the Queen's own royal cypher. When presented to Queen Mary the chest contained fifteen pounds of the finest grown Empire tea, valued at over $3 per pound.

Of Canadian Make

Dominion Supplies Medium-Quality Gauntlets For English Motorists

Motorist and motor cyclists in the United Kingdom wear leather gauntlets when driving during the winter. Even during the summer months motor cyclists use them when travelling at night. A large proportion of the medium-quality motor cyclist's gauntlets are of Canadian make, according to the Industrial Department of the Canadian National Railways. While the British are experts when it comes to sheepskin gloves, strange as it may seem, in the case of those made of heavier leathers, such as cow, mule and horse hide, they have to be imported.

NOT A RHEUMATIC PAIN FOR 4 YEARS

70-Year-Old Man Praises Kruschen

A man who once suffered severely from rheumatism writes:—

"For a long time I suffered with rheumatism, and at one time was laid up for about nine weeks. About five years ago I was advised to try Kruschen. I did so, and have continued using them ever since. Kruschen did the trick, as I have not had a rheumatic pain for over four years. I am nearly 70 years of age, and feeling fine, and always able for my day's work—thanks to Kruschen."—A. S.

Kruschen dissolves away those needle-pointed crystals of uric acid which are the cause of all rheumatic troubles. It will also flush these dissolved crystals clean out of the system. Then if you keep up "the little daily dose," excess uric acid will never form again.

Helps Building Industry

Chemistry Comes To Aid With Many New Materials

Even eggs and milk may enter the making of new construction materials in a building boom predicted by famous chemists at the opening session of the American Chemical Society's tercentenary celebration in New York.

A boom in the building industry inspired by discoveries of chemists, many of them made during the depression, was forecast by Prof. James R. Withrow of Ohio State University.

Artificial stones are already made in every color and with any degree of hardness a customer desires. Wood rot and metal rust are both stopped by numerous new protectives.

Bricks that partake of the lightness of thistledown and other light weight construction materials promise much higher, yet even safer skyscrapers.

A Dangerous Procedure

Doctor Warns Against Forced Giving Of Cod Liver Oil

Dr. Irving Graef, pathologist of Bellevue hospital, New York, told the American Association of Pathologists and Bacteriologists, mineral oils and animal fats drawn into the lungs of infants and adults had proved fatal in six cases of pneumonia. Cod liver oil, described as good when taken into the stomach for bone building, Dr. Graef said was deadly when it entered the lungs. He cited one case to show the oil had entered the lungs through forcing a reluctant child to swallow it by holding his nose. 2693

How Spare Pennies Grow

British Post Office Savings Increased By $28,000,000 Last Year

More pennies and shillings than ever are being put into Post Office Savings Banks in Britain.

The head office has announced that deposits of small savers have reached the record figure of £355,000,000. They increased by £28,000,000 during last year alone. Over the last two years they have increased by £50,000,000.

These large sums are made up entirely of the occasional spare coins of villagers and townsmen in Britain. One of the methods of saving is to buy special stamps and stick them in a savings book. When a certain number have been collected the book is given in to the local post office and the amount represented is credited to the saver's account.

Last year 250,000 "home safes" were issued. These are special post office home money boxes which can be taken to the local post office when the owner desires and the amount in them credited to his account.

The Post Office Savings Bank now has more than 9,500,000 depositors. And that number is increasing by 12 per cent. each year.

Another Surgical Find

Human Suffering Reduced By Operation On Pain Nerves

Surgery on the nerves of pain offers hope of reducing human suffering.

The operations possible were reviewed by Francis C. Grant, M.D., of Philadelphia, at the meeting of the American College of Physicians.

Some of the fibres form the bundles of nerves, just as separate fibres form threads, carrying the sensation of pain; others give the movement orders.

By cutting the pain fibres in the spinal cord pain can be stopped in the legs and up into the pelvis. Touch and position nerve fibres remain unimpaired and the movements of the legs are not interfered with.

Another operation severs the roots of some of the nerves, but is seldom used because, while it relieves pain, it interferes with movement.

Seeking to block the "pain pathways" through the nervous system is the latest method of attack. This has been done successfully for some pelvis malignancies and for angina pectoris.

Camels For Russian Farms

Farmers of Soviet Russia are to be supplied 257 camels this year to be used in the establishment of new camel farms. The farm in the semiarid Yedich district of Western Kazakstan now has 2,335 ships of the desert, the herd increasing 24 per cent. in 1934.

Upholding The British

New York Paper Sticks To Statement About War Debts

The New York Daily News says: "We've received a number of unflattering letters in reply to our editorial in which we said England is right in refusing to pay any more of its war debts to us for the time being. These letters advise us that we are in the pay of the Redcoats, traitors to Uncle Sam, trying to lick the King's boots, etc.

Let's come down to brass tacks. How about our debts to our own people (and to any foreigners who happened to buy our bonds)? We aren't paying them, are we? President Roosevelt has taken 40 cents out of every dollar, and he won't pay a dollar of those debts in gold. Furthermore, our Supreme Court sustained that default. So if John Bull is a nasty old repudiator, what is Uncle Sam?

The fact is the war cost so much that every country which took part in it, including ourselves, has had to repudiate a large part of its war debts."

Bible Distribution

Colporteurs Deliver An Average Of 30,000 Bibles A Month

By dog team in the far north and on foot through every part of Canada, Colporteurs distribute an average of 30,000 Bibles a month, according to the annual report of the Canadian branch of the British and Foreign Bible Society.

An increased demand for Bibles in English is reported from foreign language groups of workers in Western Canada.

After all expenses were met, $39,000 was sent to London for world-wide work compared with $23,000 in 1933. Bibles distributed showed an increase of 22,000.

Manitoba will increase its air force—by one seaplane. The plane, for the provincial forestry patrol service, will be the first of a plane-replacement program, as the four machines now in use are getting old.

It cost the Viennese newspaper Die Stunde 200 schillings (currently $50) to poke fun at Chancellor Adolf Hitler for his May Day speech. The fine was levied on charges that the newspaper had insulted the head of a foreign state.

Looking Back Hundred Years

Coal Oil Lamps Lighted Montreal Streets In 1835

One hundred years ago Montreal's streets were lit with coal oil lamps. In April, 1835, the city was asked for a subsidy of $500 a year by the projected gas light company. Two years later 200 gas lamps were first used to light city streets. In 1863, a new contract was made between the city and the gas company, whereby Montreal was to be supplied with 700 gas lamps. The lamps were to burn 21 nights in a month, "the other nights being declared moonlight nights."

Optimism For Pessimist

The Ottawa Journal says for the twelve months to the end of March, Canada exported goods to the value of 659 millions, and imported to the valued of 522 millions—a total trade of $1,181,000,000. Is there no message in this for the pessimists?

Will Save Millions Of Dollars For Frozen Fish Trade

Prince Rupert scientists of the Pacific Fisheries Experimental station, where a constant program of research to benefit the fishing industry is carried on, have discovered a crack-proof "antiseptic ice-glaze" for frozen fish, which will mean millions of dollars saved for the frozen fish industry.

It is believed that the new process, for storage purposes, will: Prevent rusting discloration; overcome the cracking of the glaze which resulted in stored fish drying out, and gases in the storage chamber penetrating to the surface of the fish; prevent deterioration and consequent unpalatability.

The new glaze is antiseptic, and thus kills bacteria on fish or makes them negligible.

Process invented, and already demonstrated by one British Columbia firm, which glazed 100,000 pounds of halibut with every success, is cheap and easy.

ANIMAL PARASITES

(By Gordon H. Guest, M.A.)

An animal parasite can be defined as "an animal which lives in, or on, other organisms." Parasitism is a mode of life and is not confined to any one group of animals. Every group in the animal kingdom contains some parasitic members but those most prolific in parasites are the protozoa, the arthropods and the flat and round "worms".

The protozoa are single-celled and as a rule can only be observed by means of the microscope. This group of animal organisms contains quite a few parasitic forms. These include the parasites of malaria, sleeping-sickness and red-water in cattle. The arthropods are mostly external parasites and they carry infecting organisms from one host to another. The biting flies, mosquitoes, lice, fleas and ticks all function in this way. The arthropod group of organisms also contain a number of true internal parasites, such as the warbles of cattle and the bots of horses, which are of much economic importance.

Parasitism always leads to specialization on the part of the parasite. Unused organs degenerate, whereas used organs become larger or more efficient. The host furnishes food and warmth and hence, in the internal parasites at least, there is a corresponding degeneration of the appendages and locomotion organs. At the same time, their power to increase in numbers becomes much greater because of the increased dangers of passing from one host to another. Many young parasites fall by the way and only a few survive to continue the race.

In civilized countries parasites are not very common, although they do occur, and parasitic disease breaks out when the least chance is given. In the tropics, however, there is a continual struggle against parasites. Malaria is still the greatest killing disease in the world; flea-carried plague annually claims the lives of thousands; hookworm infects sixty per cent. of the earth's population. The greatest diseases of the tropics are mostly parasitic, whereas those of the temperate climates are chiefly caused by bacteria which are plant parasites. 2098

YOUR HANDWRITING REVEALS YOUR CHARACTER!

By LAWRENCE HIBBERT
(Grapho-Analyst)

(All Rights Reserved)

In certain of my articles I have endeavoured to answer certain objections that some correspondents have raised regarding Graphology. As a result I have received quite a number of letters from readers expressing their agreement with my comments.

But one correspondent took issue with me, and all because of certain things I had told him about himself. Apparently I had told him that he thought too much about himself—that he was too self-satisfied.

He said that he was not at all like this—but it took him eight large pages to tell me what he did think about himself. There is nothing very much to answer to this gentleman, excepting to express the conviction that if he thought he needed eight large pages to give me his opinion of himself, then indeed my previous observations about him were correct; that, indeed, he did think too much of himself.

In the same mail there came a very broadminded letter from a man of forty years of age. He thanked me for analysing his character, and went on to say: Thank you for giving me the best laugh I've had in years—a laugh not at you, but at myself! When I wrote to you for a character analysis I did it with my tongue in my cheek, as it were. I didn't for a moment believe that you could tell me anything like the truth. But you have done just that. You told me that I was selfish and self-centred, and was very much inclined to study my own self-interest. Well that was a good one on me, because I am sufficiently broadminded to know that you have got me down exactly as I am. I admire your courage in telling me the unpalatable truth, although I had asked you to show me no mercy!"

Now, it isn't everyone who can be so broadminded about his faults—but there is a lesson in this letter, and that is the reason I have quoted it. There is no virtue in fooling ourselves! Most people have faults of one kind or another—and it is the height of wisdom to wish to learn about them, so that they may be rectified. The great trouble with most of us is that we do not really know ourselves. It takes an unbiassed outsider to tell the real truth—and Graphology, because of its scientific accuracy, will show the real truth about you.

BAPTISM

Golden text: Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit. Matthew 28:19.

Explanations And Comments

The Last Commission with its Direction to Baptize, Matthew 28:19, 20. Upon a mountain in Galilee after the resurrection of Jesus the disciples saw him and worshipped him. He told them of his universal dominion—"All authority had been given me in heaven and on earth"—and gave them his world-wide commission to make his power a reality—"Go ye therefore and make disciples of all nations."

He directed his followers to baptize disciples into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever he commanded. "Baptism is (1) into the name of the Father, as our Creator, Preserver, and Benefactor, who rules us, as free agents, by his love. It is (2) into name of the Son: in baptism we assent, as Peter did, 'Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.' We give ourselves to be taught, and saved, and ruled, by Christ. It is (3) into the name of the Holy Spirit. We give ourselves to his guidance, as our Sanctifier, Teacher, Guide, and Comforter."

And then Jesus gave his wonderful words of comfort and encouragement and cheer: "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

"Morally speaking, baptism—the sacrament of personality—signifies: 'Thou art the child of God—become it!'"

Times Speaks Highly Of Canada's New Governor-General

John Buchan has been described as the "best bridge" between the two continents that were once tied together with Scotland as the further bridgehead. He is now to have a conspicuous part in making the history for the next chapter of British America, whose earlier chapters he has written, but also to bring the distinction of his genius to all North America—"one of the Scotsmen who represent our English-speaking race at its very best."—New York Times.

GARDENING

Gordon L. Smith

Thinning Important

Thinning of both flowers and vegetables is most important after the plants are up an inch or so. With flowers a good rule is to have half as much space between as the plants are high. This will be about a foot between ordinary Marigolds, Petunias and Asters, two to three feet between Cosmos, and Dahlias, but only an inch or so separating tiny Alyssum, Lobelia and other edging plants. Well spaced flowers will be more sturdy, thus resisting heavy winds and rain, and the plants will be more symmetrical. Even the smallest vegetables such as lettuce and radish, must be thinned too. An inch or so will be sufficient and that is also all the room that will be needed for carrots and beets, because when these things have developed roots an inch thick and two or three long, every other plant should be removed and used, and this proceeding followed until the whole row is used up.

Hot Weather Vegetables

Tender beans, tomato plants, squash, cucumbers, and melons should not be planted outside until both weather and soil are really warm. In order to get a long and steady supply of green beans make at least three plantings at intervals of ten days and use several varieties. To do the same thing with tomatoes one may use a few well started plants for the first crop and hurry these along with fertilizer and possibly mulch paper. All garden tomatoes should be staked, using either wooden or steel stakes about six feet high. Trim off all side shoots as they develop, training the main stem up along the stake and tieing loosely about every foot. All these warm weather vegetables prefer rich open soil and any members of the melon family, that is squash, cucumber, citron, etc., take special delight in hot sandy soil though it must be made rich with well rotted manure or good garden fertilizer. Along with the vegetables mentioned one may set out egg plants, well started peppers, and the first planting of celery. The latter must have very rich soil and water during dry weather.

Can Still Have Garden

While it is important to get a portion of seed in early in order to stretch out the season as long as possible, in practically every section of Canada it is possible to continue planting such things as beans, spinach, radish, lettuce, carrots, beets, and corn, right up to July, and if well started plants can be obtained, this late work may include, tomatoes, cabbage and cauliflowers, too. In flowers it would be well to secure well started plants from the nearest green house. Of course where the whole garden is put in late, say after the middle of June, it would be well to hurry along a portion of it at least with quick acting commercial fertilizer and if possible, water. Frequent cultivation is essential.

Tulip Shipping Nearing Peak

Littlejohn Flower Farm to Ship 9000 Dozen Blooms—Winnipeg Good Market—Some Go Fort William—Does Bulb Trade.

The flower farm of W. G. Littlejohn at Erickson has been visited this week by people coming from all directions even from outside the province, desirous of inspecting his wonderful array of tulip blooms which are now about at their peak, and occupy one and a half acres of the Hurworth ranch

The blooms are divided into two sections accounting for fifty different varieties and almost as many colors. The bulbs are planted about six inches apart with each bed containing about eight rows. These bulbs require no end of care and have to be weeded at least three times each spring and cultivated by hand with a very small hoe.

This year from an area accounting for almost a quarter million bulbs, Mr. Littlejohn expects to ship from 7000 to 9000 dozens of blooms. When the bloom is at its height eight pickers are employed at the flower harvest. The varoius shades are done up in bunches of a dozen and placed in water for a few hours They are then packed in boxes made of corrugated cardbboard, which hold any where from six to fifty dozeus, the latter being the one most in demand.

These blooms will travel a great distance and stand up to perfection. Winnipeg is the furthest east market for the Littlejohn tulips, though on occasion shipments go as far as Fort William, Ontario.

Besides the tulips a half-acre of daffodils and narcissus are being handled. The daffodils were also marked before the coming in of the tulips. Apart from the sale of cut flowers Mr. Littlejohn has developed a considerable trade in bulbs. The outgo of bulbs starts in August, as all the bulbs have to be dug up and examined and replanted, and it is at this time the surplus bulbs are taken and sold.

Mr. Littlejohn started in the tulip business in 1911 on a small scale and from that time until 1935 has developed a real healthy demand for the cut flowers as well as the bulbs. The original plantings on the Littlejohn farm were from Holland and England, with very great care taken to get the best obtainable.

Dominion Day Celebration

Editor Review:

Sir,—For many years Creston did not attempt a Dominion Day celebration. Four years ago the Knights of Pythias undertook to revive interest in Dominion Day by staging children's sports. They now find that this is not adequate as a celebration for this day, and beleive, in order to have a celebration worthy of the day, it is necessary that the whole valley co-operate. For this purpose a public meeting will be held in the Town Hall, Monday night, May 20th, at 8 o'clock, from which a chairman will be appointed.

Serious Auto Crash

FERNIE, B.C., May 12—Mrs. Ethel Leveque of Medicine Hat, Alta, and her son Russell are in the Fernie hospita badly injured as a result of an automobile collision on the Hosmer bridge over the Elk river, seven miles from here, Friday night.

The coupe driven by young Leveque crashed practically head-on into a sedan driven by Frank Leigh, a commercial traveller. Responsibility for the accident has not yet been determined.

Mrs. Leveque is suffering from concussion and shock and from a fractured lower leg. In addition to these injuries one thumb was so badly crushed that portion of it had to be amputated after her arrival at the hospital.

The son's condition is the more serious of the two owing to loss of blood. He had a fractured upper jaw and a broken knee cap. It will be some time before either of the patients will be able to leave the hospital. Leigh, the driver of the other car, was badly shaken up, scratched and bruised but not seriously injured. The Doctors Kelman are in attendance.

ROYAL LEVEE IS HELD AT PALACE OF ST. JAMES

London.—In tones of warm affection the leaders of the empire overseas reaffirmed the loyalty of their peoples to the crown, evoking from His Majesty the King an expression of heartfelt gratitude and the vow "to work on with you in the years that remain."

Not all the glitter and pomp of the occasion could dispel the true family atmosphere as one by one the empire's prime ministers and other representatives spoke to His Majesty and the king replied in like vein. At the outset he mentioned the pleasure it gave him to hear persons from the overseas empire speak of "coming home."

Prime Minister R. B. Bennett was warm in his personal references to their majesties, saying that in their life and work together they had given the peoples of the empire an example ennobling the conception of family life "which is the true basis of all human happiness and national greatness."

The occasion was a royal levee in the stately white and gold throne room of the Palace of St. James. The king and Queen Mary sat on twin thrones, His Majesty wearing the uniform of an admiral of the fleet, and the queen a blue satin gown trimmed with silver and sable fur. They were flanked by members of the royal family.

Prime Minister J. B. Hertzog spoke for South Africa, Prime Minister J. A. Lyons for Australia, Prime Minister G. W. Forbes for New Zealand. Prime Minister G. M. Huggins represented South Rhodesia. J. H. Thomas, dominions' secretary, spoke for Newfoundland, now under commission government "but yielding to none in deep-rooted devotion to your majesties' persons and throne." Sir Joseph Bhore spoke for India, and Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister for the colonial empire.

The king, wearing a bowler hat, and the queen, ablaze with diamonds, threw a jubilee crowd of 50,000 into delight by twice appearing on the balcony off the Chinese room of Buckingham palace.

Despite the chill caused by a sudden break in temperature, Their Majesties stood for 10 minutes in their first appearance at 9:30 p.m., and then for three minutes at 10:30. The king waved his bowler to the wildly cheering throngs.

The inspiration furnished by the king "of wise and tactful leadership" and of "unswerving devotion to duty," was praised by Prime Minister Bennett as no small factor in the success of the empire in withstanding the period of stress after the war.

At the reception in St. James's palace to empire leaders and foreign diplomats, Prime Minister Bennett presented to His Majesty the gift gold casket containing the humble address of loyalty passed by the Canadian senate and House of Commons.

Missionaries In Danger

Forced To Abandon Stations In China On Account Of Communists

Toronto.—Letters received by the foreign mission board of the United Church of Canada said English missionaries in north and northeastern Szechwan province, western China, were forced to evacuate their stations because of advancing Communist forces. Capture of Chengtu, the provincial capital, was believed the objective but the drive failed.

Rev. Gerald S. Bell, of Toronto, wrote that some Canadian missionaries, due home this year on furlough, left a few weeks ahead of schedule.

Canada On Committee

Accepts League Membership To Study Repudiation Of Treaties

Ottawa.—Without committing itself to disciplinary action against Germany or any other nation, the government of Canada has accepted a membership in the League of Nations committee established to study application of sanctions against unilateral repudiation of international obligations. Sir George Perley, acting prime minister, issued a statement setting forth the position taken by Canada.

Dr. W. A. Riddell, Canadian advisory officer at Geneva, has already notified the secretary-general of the league of Canada's acceptance and reservation. The committee was named by the league council following repudiation of parts of the treaty of Versailles by Germany.

Besides Canada the following nations were invited to take part: Great Britain, France, Chile, Hungary, Italy, The Netherlands, Poland, Portugal, Spain, Turkey, Russia and Yugoslavia.

Sir George Perley's statement read:

The invitation to Canada to accept a seat on a committee established by the council of the League of Nations to consider sanctions against unilateral repudiation of international obligations, arose out of a resolution adopted by the council on April 17.

Jubilee Honors List

Awards To Be Published On Morning Of June 3rd

London.—The jubilee honors list will be published on the morning of June 3, combined with the king's birthday honors list, it was announced here. It is believed the jubilee awards will be very lengthy.

In accordance with custom, the leaders of both the opposition parties have been asked to make nominations. The Liberal opposition accepted the offer. It is understood the honors they recommend include the rank of privy councillor for Isaac Foot, former secretary of mines and a member of the Indian select committee.

With regard to the Labor opposition, it is understood George Lansbury declined to make any nominations, leaving the matter in the hands of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald. However, it is expected Clement Attlee, deputy leader of the Labor party, will become a privy councillor and that the honor also will be conferred upon William Lunn, a former parliamentary under-secretary for the Dominions.

Travels Incognito

Sister Of Princess Marina Arrives In Victoria From Orient

Victoria.—The Princess Katharine of Greece, sister of the Princess Marina, Duchess of Kent, was a passenger on the Empress of Canada, which arrived here recently from the Orient. The princess was not on the liner's passenger list and was known to her fellow travellers as Catherine Constantine.

On the passage of the Canada, the princess was just one of the younger set, entering into the social life of the ship enthusiastically. Fellow passengers voted her a "good sport" and a charming girl.

She will proceed from here to Seattle for a visit to the United States and will embark on the Empress of Britain at Quebec for Europe early in June.

Demand For Silver Dollar

Ottawa.—The royal Canadian mint will strike off 20,000 more silver dollars and these will be made available to the public at once. So great has been the demand for the coin, issued specially for the king's silver jubilee, that the Bank of Canada has requested more to be put into circulation.

German Penal Code

Will Provide Something More Severe Than Headsman's Axe

Berlin. — The future reich penal code, which judiciary authorities believe should provide something more severe than the headsman's axe, such as for example the "living death" of medieval proscription, will be based on fundamental Nazi concepts, it was learned.

All offences, now being classified by a preparatory commission, will be subdivided into these four categories:

Attacks against the safety of the people; attacks against the safety of the state and government; attacks against national patriotism; attacks against nationals.

Death by the headsman's axe is too good for those who violate the more sacred tenets of Chancellor Adolf Hitler's code, some Nazis contend, and they plan to condemn those guilty of heinous offences to be deprived of all human rights. They will be subject even to condemnation to death without trial, it is said.

Treason will head the list of crimes classified as "attacks against the safety of the people," it was reported.

Mercy Flight

Unique Incident In Aviation History Of The North

God's Lake, Man.—One of the most unique "mercy flights" in aviation's history in the north was written into the records, with Pilot Herb Seagrim of Wings Limited, the hero.

A woman was lying in hospital at Winnipeg, 350 miles south of here, seriously ill. An operation was imperative, but her physician was unwilling to proceed without the assent of her husband, at a small lake north of here.

Details were sent here by wireless, but communication with the man was complicated by the fact ice conditions would not permit landing of an aeroplane on the lake where he was staying. Seagrim solved the difficulty.

He dropped a message, asking if the husband wished the operation to be proceeded with, to signal by making a triangle of three limbs on the ice of the lake. The signal was given, Seagrim returned here and the operation was successfully performed.

Air Limitations

Great Britain Will Stipulate For 1,600 Planes As Minimum

London.—Great Britain, in preparing to discuss air limitation, will stipulate 1,600 planes as her minimum need, the diplomatic correspondent of The Daily Telegraph reports.

This estimate, he said, has emerged from British deliberations toward making an "air Locarno" a separate item from the five-point proposition extended to Germany by the Anglo-French agreement of Feb. 3.

The plan shortly will be submitted to France and Italy, it is understood. The correspondent said the situation had changed since the Geneva air commission met in February, 1933, raising the minimum requirements.

Tame Swan Shot

PREMIER BENNETT SPEAKS ON EMPIRE TRADE MATTERS

Ottawa. — Great co-operation in trade matters between nations of the British empire was held out by Prime Minister R. B. Bennett as a solution of some economic problems of empire countries.

Mr. Bennett spoke from London in an empire broadcast and his remarks were directed primarily to the people of the United Kingdom. He told them he appreciated the honor of representing Canada at the king's jubilee celebrations and assured them Canadians would accept a second place to none in loyalty to the crown.

The empire was a "goodly fellowship," he said, and Canadians were proud to share in it. This pride was based not "on boastful imperialism" but on a realization the British crown stood for the reign of law, liberty and justice. The traditions of British institutions and loyalty to the crown had meant much to Canada in its development as a new country. They had imparted social and political stability in the formative years.

The most notable event in the king's 25-year reign had been the Great War. It had meant suffering and Canada was still suffering from its effects. But Canada had emerged from it a full-fledged nation under the British crown. Canadians did not regret their part in it but hoped its lessons would not be forgotten.

How better, he asked, could subjects in every part of the empire, pay tribute to the king than by dedicating themselves to the renunciation of war and the promotion of peace.

Mr. Bennett dealt with empire trade agreements from the British point of view, said they had helped Canada over a difficult period and brought increases in British exports to Canada. If these increases were not as great as might be hoped it was to be remembered that British goods were manufactured products which suffered most in a depression.

Canada was now an industrial as well as an agricultural country and because of economic nationalism the world over had been forced to develop more balanced internal economy than before. Also because of debts due in the United Kingdom and elsewhere this country had to export more than it imported.

Canada Asked To Establish Permanent Cancer Fund

Ottawa. — Establishment of a permanent cancer fund in Canada was suggested by King George in a cablegram sent to the governor-general, expressing the king's thanks for donations to the jubilee cancer fund.

The king's message read:

I have received with much pleasure your telegram informing me that my people in Canada are contributing so generously towards the King George V. silver jubilee cancer fund for Canada.

I warmly thank all those who have joined in helping this most noble and humanitarian cause, and I fervently trust that a permanent fund may be established and thus further the relief of much suffering and distress.

CHAPTER I.

Dad was worried about something. All through dinner Nancy had been aware of it. Not once had he taken part in the conversation, and though outwardly unchanged (the girl was proud of her well-groomed, youthful-looking father) he seemed, somehow, miles and miles away. When even Jack's spirited account of Exeter's victory at the game that afternoon quite failed to rouse him, both aunts glanced up, puzzled; and Mother, saying: "Let's have our coffee in the living room," went to her husband and touched his shoulder.

"What's wrong, Jim? Has something happened?"

Dad turned quickly, as if startled at the question.

"Something has," he admitted, pulling himself together with what seemed to all of them a tremendous effort, "and since the little boy's away, it's a good time to tell you. Don't bother with coffee tonight, Margaret. Come into the other room and close the door. I—I must get it over."

But after all, James Nelson did not have to break the news. It was his sister, always quick to grasp a situation, who asked as they gathered in the living room: "Did that crash in the market to-day hit you very hard, Jim?"

Her brother nodded—wet his lips.

"I—I am down and out, Louise," he answered; but Nancy saw that he was looking at her mother. And Mother was looking at him, strangely. She seemed, thought the girl, stunned for just a moment.

"Down and out," James Nelson repeated grimly, still staring at his wife with eyes that had grown haggard. "After all these years the firm's gone under. I think—I fear, Margaret, that we'll have to begin all over again."

"Well," countered Mother, coming suddenly to life, "why not?" She sat down on the davenport beside Dad, and put an arm across his shoulders. "Tell us, dear, just how bad everything is."

He drew a relieved breath, as if the worst were over.

"Not so bad as it might be, perhaps. I can't go into details now; but at least, I'm not in debt to others. That's the thought I held onto when I looked at the crowd of desperate men in the stock exchange this afternoon—a terrible scene. Their faces—well, I wish I could forget them. I went back to the office and just sat there thinking—trying to see my way. I'm fifty-six. It's not easy to start again at that age, Margaret. This house is yours; but we can't afford to live here. What hurts me most is that the hardest part will fall on you—all of you, I mean. The servants, too; they'll have to go. And—and Nance was to have had her debut so soon!"

"Oh, forget it!" The girl spoke flippantly because she couldn't have spoken otherwise without crying.

"For my part," observed Jack, "I should think Sis would be relieved to get rid of all that fuss. I'll get a job, Dad. I never was keen on college anyway. I was only going so's not to disappoint you. And I won't need Mary Ann if I go to work. She'll bring in—something."

"Mary Ann" was the boy's beloved roadster. James Nelson's eyes brightened suspiciously as he said: "You're good kids, both of you. I feel better already to have you meet this blow with so much pluck. I knew I could count on Mother; and Phil's too young to feel the hurt. As for you two," (turning to his own sister and his wife's), "you're safe, thank heaven! That was my first grain of comfort—relief that I'd put your money into good, dependable bonds."

"For mercy's sake!" broke in Aunt Louise. "Why didn't you tell us sooner? If Judy's savings and mine are still intact, things aren't so bad. Even with that small capital you can start again, Jim."

"If you think I'd touch a penny—" he began, when Aunt Judy interrupted:

"Why shouldn't you? What would I have now, Jim, if you hadn't managed my affairs so carefully all these years? This crash in the market is no fault of yours. Make him see sense, Margaret. Of course he'll take our money if it will help."

Said Mother: "Perhaps he won't need to if we sell this house."

"This is no time to sell real estate," Dad told her, "but I've no doubt we can rent it at a good price. And if we move to a small apartment, or even into the suburbs for a while, so as to cut all possible expense, it will give me a chance to look around."

"See here!" spoke up Aunt Judy as if inspired, "the place at Edgemere is vacant now. Why not go there and have no rent to pay?"

Judith Hale had inherited the family home at her father's death some fifteen years before; but Edgemere was more than twenty miles from the city, and as no one spoke for just a moment, she questioned: "Could you stand commuting, Louise? It would mean a pretty early start for you."

"I ought to be able to stand it as well as Jim; or I could stay in town and go home for the week-ends. But I'm thinking about Nance. It seems hard to give up a debut and be torn from all one's young friends at the same time."

This was a surprise, not only to Nancy but to her elders. It was seldom that Louise Nelson, who taught English in a fashionable girls' school, displayed sympathy of this sort. She considered the debut a foolish, unnecessary display, and had said so repeatedly. She wanted Nancy to go to college and fit herself to be a teacher. It was amazing that in this time of stress she should give thought to her niece's disappointment, and the girl said:

"Don't worry about me. If I'm not to come out in a blaze of glory, Aunt Louise, I'd almost rather be away somewhere."

"Why shouldn't Nance go to work?" asked Jack abruptly. "She's almost nineteen. Lots of girls her age—"

"Oh, see here!" broke in her father, "I guess we'll manage without that. I think your plan about Edgemere is a good one, Judith, unless it sounds too hard for Margaret. But of course I'd pay the rent like any other tenant."

"Oh, no you wouldn't!" Aunt Judy bristled with indignation. "It's a pity if I'm not allowed to help after all you and Margaret have done for me. Don't I know that when I came here years ago you'd never have thought of engaging a mother's helper if you hadn't known I was lonely and adored the children? And later Margaret pretended to need a housekeeper, so I'd feel I wasn't imposing on you to stay longer. Take the old house and use it, Jim. I've always felt it was Margaret's as much as mine. Don't say the word rent to me again!"

She was so obviously wrought up that Dad laughed a little, and Mother said: "Honestly, Judith, since we must go somewhere, it will seem heaven to go back home. But whatever we decide, Louise must do what's best for her. As for Jack, since this term's tuition at school is already paid, he may as well finish, I suppose."

"Wouldn't they give the money back, Dad?" questioned the boy.

James Nelson glanced at his sister, the inner workings of a private school being more in her line than his; and she responded: "In a case like this I believe they'd refund most of it; though if Jack wants to finish out the year I'll finance his expenses."

"And relinquish that European trip next summer?" countered her brother.

She colored, as if guilty of some misdeed.

"Oh, what's a European trip when I've been before? I'd hate to have Jack change schools, when he's done so well; and you've set your heart on his going to Harvard, too. Let him stay where he is."

The boy arose, standing with his back to the fire as he looked down at them. During the past year he had grown an appalling number of inches and like others who shoot up with such rapidity, was far too thin. He said, soberly: "With all due respect to you, Aunt Louise, I think I have a right to decide this thing myself. I'd feel like a slacker to stay at an expensive school when Dad has lost his money and Nance is giving up her party. You say I'm doing well in my studies, but it's only because I'm crammed, and I'm sick of cramming. I'm no bright star, and you all know it. It's a shame to disappoint you, Dad, but I'm not going to college—that is," he added, "if I can help myself."

His father answered: "But I wanted a son to graduate from my Alma Mater, boy."

"Send Phil then. Phil's smart. He'll be a credit to you. Why, that kid knows more now than I did when I entered Exeter! I'm the dumbest member of the Nelson family, but I bet I can get a job that'll pay my board. And if you ask me, so can Sis, if she's a mind to try.

Aunt Judy had been listening attentively to her nephew's words. Now she said: "He's right, I think, about leaving Exeter, Jim. Let him work for a while. He can finish school a year later if all goes well; and the boy will be happier to feel that he's helping now."

Said Jack, throwing her a grateful smile: "I can always count on 'our shield and defender'!" And Aunt Judy continued:

"It's really queer how things happen. It just came over me that I'm out of a job, myself!"

"The very idea!" This was Mother. "While we've a roof over our heads, Judy, you've got one too—especially when the roof in question is your own property!"

Her sister laughed.

"But you see, Margaret, I feel as Jack does. I'd rather be a help than a burden; and while he was talking I remember that last week Caroline Spear told me she was hunting a suitable person to take her girls abroad. She said: 'Want the job, Judith? They'll wear you to shreds but I'll pay well for it.' Of course I laughed at the idea. I thought with Nancy's debut and everything, that I'd be needed here. But I'll call Caroline tonight and see if she still wants me. I always get along with young folks, and if they keep me sprinting maybe I'll reduce."

"Reduce!" Jack whistled expressively. "I wager that by the time you return to the land of the free, Aunt Judy, there'll be nothing left of you 'but just the bones and skin,' like that small, red hen you used to read about to us when we were kids. Those Spear twins are wild babies, believe me. Why don't they go to Europe by themselves?"

"That's what I asked Caroline. Girls go everwhere alone these days. But it seems that their grandfather is financing the trip and stipulated that they take a chaperon."

"Chaperon!" burst from Nancy. "I didn't know they existed any more."

"They do," smiled her aunt. "You see one before you now, my dear, unless I'm too late to get the job. Don't look so mournful, Jim. It's a wonderful chance to get a trip abroad."

But her gay tone did not deceive them. Even Jack knew that Aunt Judy didn't want to go abroad with two restless young adolescents like the Spears. Dad said, after a moment:

"Well, we can't decide everything to-night, and I'm dead tired. The thought of all these changes makes me a bit sick. But I do appreciate—" He stopped, because, they all saw, it was impossible to go on; and Mother broke in with her unfailing tact:

"Let's get to bed, Jim. It's been a frightful day for you, but after a good sleep things will look brighter. As for me, I really believe it will be a relief to go back to Edgemere and drop all this 'keeping up with Lizzie'."

She arose, a courageous smile curving her lips; but her hand sought Nancy's with a little squeeze which said as plainly as any words: "I understand, daughter; but we mustn't let him guess our disappointment."

They are happy who have a wide field and great strength to fulfil His missions of compassion, and they too are blessed who in sheltered homes and narrow ways of duty wait upon Him in lowly service of love. Wise or simple, gifted or slender in knowledge, in the world's gaze, or in hidden paths, encompassed by affections and joys of home, or lonely and content in God alone, what matters as long as they bear the seal of the living God.

"Just an idea to save an argument in case of a heavy swell upsetting the board," said one officer.
