Mr. and Mrs. Manfred Samuelson are leaving this week for Kimberley, where they have taken over a confectionery and and ice cream store. Manfred has sold his ranch here to his brother, Arvid.

Jas Bateman received word on Friday of the death of his brother, Wilfrid, at Calgary, Alberta, and in company with his mother left on Saturday to attend the funeral. Deceased was known to a number of Canyon, as he was a visitor here about ten years ago.

The Sunday service at the United Church was the largest attended and brightest Easter service ever known at Canyon. The music was by the junior choir under the direction of Miss F. Knott, the latter joining with Mrs. Kolthammer in a delightful rendering of the "Old Rugged Cross."

The new residence of Mr. and Mrs. Matt. Clayton was suitably housewarmed on Saturday evening when a party of fifteen pioneers of Canyon dropped in to spend the evening. Music by T. R. Mawson on his pioneer violin was a feature. Mr. and Mrs. Clayton came here in 1909 and their new home is a comfortable one.

All who attended are agreed that the Easter Monday concert at the hall on Monday evening under the direction of the Sunday school was about the best Canyon has had in recent years, and reflects great credit on those who trained the children for the affair, superintendent W. H. Kolthammer, Mr. Hunden, Adam Johnston and Misses Nissie McRobb and Frances Knott. The chair was taken by Rev. A. Walker, and on the programe were the following numbers: Opening chorus by junior choir. Acrostic by the juniors. Violin solos by Misses Holly Bond and Anne Berggren. Duetts by Mrs. Kolthammer and Miss F. Knott. Recitations by Gerald Bateman and Gerald Jarvis. Solo by Mrs. Norman Strong. Dialogues by the Intermediate boys, senior girls and senior boys. Solo by Miss June Browell, and music by a boys' four-piece orchestra.

Arrange Plans Jubilee Parade

Arrange Much Entertainment for Accession Day Silver Anniversary—Queen Contest is Going Strong All Candidates.

Further plans for the celebration of Jubilee Day, Monday May 6th, have been worked out, and a tentative programme arranged as follows: Parade falls in at the Orchard Service Station. The parade will consist of the Jubilee Queen, her four ladies-in-waiting, the brass band, floats, decorated cars, the Boy Scouts, and all the school children in the Valley.

At the Shell Oil Station the children will leave the parade, but the Queen, her attendants, the band, and following cars will continue to the Park where the Queen will be crowned with due ceremony. A souvenir of the occasion will be presented to the Queen, and to each of her ladies-in-waiting. Prizes will then be awarded for the best fancy dressed boy and girl, the best comic boy and girl, the best decorated bicycle, the best decorated car and float.

After he dinner recess there will be a basebell game, races for boys and girls, dances round the maypole, followed by more sports, and then the barbecue, adults being 25c. each.

The demand for tickets shows plainly that the popularity contest is appealing to the puplic, and that competition for the honor is keen. Candidates are requested to send in their books of votes as soon as same are filled, so that the secretarial work at the last moment may be reduced to minimum. All votes should be in the secretary's hands not later than 6 p.m. Saturday, May 4th, so that the winner's name may be announced after the show at the Grand theatre.

Indians Win Appeal

Judgment For $18,309 Awarded Northern Saskatchewan Band

Judgment for $18,309 and costs was awarded members of the Mistawasis Indian band, near Leask, Saskatchewan, against the federal department of Indian affairs by Hon. Justice P. E. Angers in exchequer court, according to word received at Prince Albert.

Action for $20,309 was based on the premises funds of the Indians had been improperly used by the department, contrary to the treaty of 1876. Richard Mulcaster, K.C., assisted by W. G. Elder, Prince Albert, appeared for the Indians at the trial at Prince Albert last fall. R. G. Hamilton, Regina, acted for the crown.

The successful action was based on the contention funds of the Indians were used to provide medical services, purchase stock, pay the farm instructor and for other purposes for which, under the treaty, free provision by the Dominion government had been promised.

The judgment also restrains the Indian agent at Leask from farming on the reserve.

Will A Yard Long

Probate Document Was Sold In London For $190

The parchment probate of the will of William Harvey, the discoverer of the circulation of the blood, was sold recently in London for $190. There was a yard or so of crisp parchment, as fresh as when it was granted in the name of Richard Cromwell, Lord Protector of the Commonwealth. The scribe must have taken weeks to print the details of Harvey's many gifts. Harvey died in 1657.

YOUR HANDWRITING REVEALS YOUR CHARACTER!

By LAWRENCE HIBBERT
(Grapho-Analyst)

(All Rights Reserved)

I have often been asked of what practical value is it to anyone to have their handwriting analysed? Well, the more we know of ourselves, our innermost natures, the greater will be our understanding of ourselves, qualities, characteristics, talents. And the more we understand ourselves, the greater our opportunity of getting on in the world, the better able we are to make friends and keep them. In other words, to be happy, popular and successful.

Are you happy?—or are you continually frowning at life, with a constant chip on your shoulders?

Are you progressing in your work?—or are you dissatisfied; a square peg in a round hole; unable to make any real progress in the work you are doing, yet not knowing what to do to effect a change for the better?

If you are married, are you contented?—or is disquiet and unhappiness creeping in, with perpetual bickering between yourself and your wife or husband?

Do you make friends and keep them?—or are you living the life of an involuntary recluse, unable to enjoy the society and companionship of real friends?

Are you self-confident?—or are you diffident and bashful, restrained from realising yourself to the full because of inner qualms and self-consciousness?

If you go through life without knowing and undertanding yourself—your faults and your virtues; your merits and your weaknesses of character and disposition—you will be seriously handicapped.

Graphology helps you to know yourself, to the end that you will seize on your strong points and make the most of them; and shows you the way to overcome the weak traits, so that you will not be handicapped in the race for happiness and success.

Handwriting is not merely a matter of putting your pen to paper. You have to use your brain in order to write. And because the brain is the captain of your body, everything that you do emanates first from your brain. Handwriting is merely the physical expression of the brain impulses. Whatever you are and what you might be if you make the fullest use of your capabilities, are expressed in your writing.

A character analysis from your handwritnig will not, of itself, effect a change in you, but it will show you wherein you need to strengthen yourself, and what traits you have but are not utilizing to the full. And knowledge is the forerunner to action.

Would you like to have your character analysed from your handwriting? Have you any friends whose characters you would like to know? The author of these articles will send you a personal delineation. Send specimens of the handwriting you wish to be analysed, stating birthdate in each case. Send 10c coin in each specimen, and enclose with a 3c stamped addressed envelope to: Lawrence Hibbert, care of Winnipeg Newspaper Union, 175 McDermot Avenue, Winnipeg, Man. All letters will be treated confidentially, and replies wil be mailed out as quickly as possible. Please allow at least two weeks for your answer, however, owing to the volume of mail that is coming in.

Since 1929 there has been a steady decline in the per capita consumption of bread in Canada. This, says the statistical report of the industry for 1933 is no doubt due to two factors, viz., the lessened demand resulting from a decrease in purchasing power and the changes in the dietary habits of the people. 2095

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

APRIL 28

THE HOLY SCRIPTURES

Golden text:
Oh how love I thy law!
It is my meditation all the day.
Psalm 119:97

Devotional Reading: Psalm 119: 105-112.

The Value of the Scriptures, Psalm 19:7-11. The law, the testimony, the precepts, the commandment, the ordinances of Jehovah—all of these expressions are terms for the Old Testament Scriptures, especially for the sacred Law which they contain. This, the Psalmist declares, is perfect, restoring the soul; sure, making wise the simple; right, rejoicing the heart; pure, enlightening the eyes; true, and righteous altogether.

The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring for ever. "When among the five terms, each clearly significant of the Scriptures, the Psalmist introduces the abstract expression 'the fear of the Lord,' he must mean the awe, the obedience, the discipline and inspiration of the Book whose praise is the burden of his song." (George Adam Smith).

More to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold. Then, with heart aglow, the Psalmist cries, More to be desired are they than honey, and the droppings of the honey-comb—the purest of the honey. Sweeter than honey itself, than honey from the comb, Moffatt's translation. Moreover by them is thy servant warned; in keeping them there is great reward.

Public Works Undertakings

Inclusion Of Railway Equipment In Government Program

Guarantee of equipment securities of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways to the extent of $15,000,000 is a feature of Dominion government legislation of which notice has been given to create employment by public works and undertakings throughout Canada.

Inclusion of the railway equipment works in the government's re-employment legislation had been forecast but it had been expected the amount would be double the figure named in the resolution. Extension of the public works program launched last year, and other works undertakings are to be included in the measure.

For nearly a year the government has been considering representations from the makers of railway equipment in Canada seeking federal guarantees to cover equipment orders for both systems. Some employment had been created in the Algoma and Sydney steel plants a year ago by the Dominion government guaranteeing the cost of rail orders until such time as the companies took delivery. The equipment orders suggested in early representations had been for around $30,000,000.

Had No Sentiment

Sentiment apparently has no place in the business philosophy of an East Boston junk peddler—even where a dead horse is concerned. Seven hours after his horse dropped dead on Bennington Street the junk peddler, whose name was withheld, returned with hammer and chisel and removed the animal's shoes. He then went his way, leaving to police the task of arranging removal of the carcass.

A talking clock, giving a three "pip" signal like the B.B.C. model, is the latest device of the postoffice for warning trunk telephone users of the length of the call.

GARDENING

Gordon L. Smith

Lengthening Vegetable Season

It is good business to make several sowings for each vegetable. If this is not done, all will mature at the same time, and there will be a feast or a famine. After all, with such things as radish, spinach, peas, corn or practically everything else, the time they are best eating is when they are fresh, that is just mature, and taken right out of the garden. They must be quickly grown and used immediately when they are the proper size. These vegetables will deteriorate whether they are left in storage or ripening in the vegetable rows. The good gardener, to avoid this, has his vegetables coming along continuously, a few feet of lettuce and baby carrots and beets ready for the table all season. It is a good plan to sow a third of the package, a week or two ahead of the regular time, another third a fortnight later and the balance still later. With some things like peas which must be put in early as they make their growth during the cool weather, but two sowings can be made, one at the earliest possible moment and the other ten days later, but by using early, medium and late varieties the season can be extended up to six weeks.

These Flowers Will Grow

It is not any more difficult to grow beautiful flowers than a few rows of common vegetables. Of course there are certain things like gorgeous roses, delicately shaded Iris and tender stately Lilies which certainly will not thrive on neglect, but there are also a dozen or so annuals, and a few herbaceous perennials, which require practically no skill and the minimum of attention. The little Alyssum, for instance, for edging walks or borders. It comes in several sizes up to six or eight inches in height. It will bloom all season and will grow almost anywhere if the dead flowers are sheared off with clippers or even a lawn mower two or three times. Portulaca is another which one can plant and forget. It likes a hot, sunny location and does not want much moisture. It will bloom all summer. The Calendula or pot Marigold is a little larger. It thrives almost anywhere, though it should not have too much shade. After thinning no more attention is needed. The ordinary dwarf French Marigold is another flower that should not be overlooked by the gardener who has little time to devote to his hobby and also the California Poppy, Cosmos and ornamental Sunflower. This selection will give plenty of bloom and a fair range in color and height. In rough and ready perennials, there are Evening Primroses, practically any of the Daisies, Peonies, Lupine and Oriental Poppies.

A Television Newspaper

Placed In Operation By Radio Committee In Moscow

Called the first television newspaper, the Telechronique has been placed in operation by the Soviet Radio Committee in Moscow. It is really a talking picture film, and is televised from Moscow to be picked up by anyone having the necessary apparatus. Two radio receivers are needed, one to pick up the sound, and the other working on a different wave length, to pick up the vision. It is predicted that television illustrated newspapers will be seen in many countries within two years.

Peyotl goggled at him.

"Oh, hell, man! There's no use skirmishin' with us. We found the bandanna you dropped when you stuck the pistol in old man Carr's pocket. Come across."

"I got the pistol from Mister Dustin's desk," said Peyotl. "What now?"

"You come with us," said Jameson shortly.

CHAPTER XVII.

Sheriff Garcy sprang to his feet as Jameson's car stopped outside his office. He had just taken old Carr to a bedroom and seen him tucked away for the night under a dose of Bromide. He ran down the steps and almost jerked Jameson from the wheel. Then he saw Peyotl huddled in the back seat.

"What you got, Evan?" he demanded. "This's as bad a mess as I ever saw. Old Joe's quietly crazy. He swears he didn't tell me about that shootin' because he can't."

"Is he drinkin' again?"

"He is not but I gave him some dope. Anybody who can throw some light on this blot'll be doin' a favor . . . ."

"That's what I brought Stone and this man for. Take him inside, Jim."

Garcy drew Peyotl forth and gave one indignant sniff at him.

"You smell like somethin' the dog buried," he growled. "Where'd you git that stuff from? . . ." Peyotl crouched and gibbered . . . "I been pinchin' the people who use that for three years an' now you got the nerve to come right to my office stinkin' of it. Come inside."

Inside the little office, Garcy flung Peyotl into a chair and turned to Stone.

"Shoot," he said tersely. "And for God's sake try to git on the target the first shot."

Without a word, Stone laid on the desk the bandanna neckerchief; the Derringer pistol, the pieces of cigarettes and the entire one that he had taken from Dustin. Then:

"I reconstruct the affair this way," he said. "Here's what I can swear to. . . ." He told them only what he actually knew . . . That he had taken those peyotl cigarettes from Dustin's pocket. Then he swung on Peyotl, who sat staring dully at him.

"Where did you get this pistol?" he asked shortly. "We know you shot Keene. The smell of the peyotl on the neckerchief gives you away. Where'd you get this pistol from?"

"Unless you want to hang, you'd better talk," said Garcy.

Still Peyotl stared at them. Finally he muttered dully:

"I took the pistol from Mist' Sam's desk. . . ."

"Whose desk?"

"He means Dustin," said Jameson quickly. "How did you put the gun in Mr. Carr's pocket? Better tell all you know. . . ."

"Easy enough," said Peyotl. "I slipped in through the back door the minute the light went out. I shot the gun an' stuck it in Mr. Carr's coat. Then I got out before the light came on again."

"Why did you want to shoot a man you'd never seen?" asked Stone. "A man you didn't even know. . . . Why?"

"I knowed who he was," said Peyotl. "Mist' Sam told me. He was a man who come out here to . . . to . . . His name's Kane," he said.

"Keene," said Stone sharply. "Not Kane but Keene. . . ."

"Same thing," said Peyotl obstinately. "Mist' Sam told me so."

"I see. . . ." Stone leaped to his feet with an oath. "This poor fool was played on by Dustin. Dustin holds Carr's note for half the Hour-glass. He wanted the other half that Keene owns. He played on this poor fool. . . . When he jammed the rag and gun in Carr's pocket. . . . Did Dustin tell you to shoot this man?" He wheeled on the shrinking man.

"No, sir. He didn't know I had the gun. . ."

Garcy, whose face was blood-red with astonishment, stared from man to man.

"Why would Sam Dustin be mixed up in a thing like this?" he asked.

"I'll tell you. . . ." Stone repeated about the note. He told about his fight with Dustin at Soda Springs. "There's another reason why he wants the Hour-glass, too," he said. "I'll show you. I've got it in the car."

He almost leaped down the steps to the car and was back instantly with a little canvas sack that he emptied on the desk.

"Gold ore," he said. "From a vein that Kane found on the lands of the Hour-glass. Look at this piece. . ."

His hand lit on that brown-stained piece that he had picked up by the old camp-fire. The next moment Peyotl gave a half-scream and slumped into a heap over the desk.

"Not that!" he shrilled. "For Christ's sake not that! I didn't go to do it. . . . My God . . ." And he gibbered and moaned till they thought he had lost what little mind he had.

"There's a lot behind this that we haven't uncovered," said Stone. "Peyotl. . . ." His tone rang out sharply. "Where's old man Kane?"

"I . . . I . . ."

"I told you what Buxton said," said Jameson. "That's blood on that stone. . . ."

". . . I didn't go to do it," quavered Peyotl. The sound of his own voice scared him. "Mist' Sam said you'd find it out. . . . Oh God! He knows I never meant it. . . ."

Stone shook his head at the others who half rose from their seats.

"How'd do you come to do it, Peyotl?" he asked.

"I swear to God I don't know," wailed Peyotl. "I was layin' by the fire . . . Mist' Sam had some o' them cigarettes. I got 'em from his pack . . . No I didn't . . . He got 'em out and laid 'em by his saddle and I swiped 'em. . . . Then I went to sleep. . . . When I come to, Mist' Sam was shakin' me and old man Kane was lyin' there with his head all bashed in. That rock was in my hand but, . . . I swear to God, I don't know no more'n you do about a fight. . . ."

"No wonder we couldn't find Kane," said Stone in a half-whisper. "Where'd you bury him?" he asked quietly though the very hair on his head was rising.

"Up there. . . . In Red Water canon," said Peyotl vaguely.

Stone turned to Garcy and Jameson.

"The whole story hinges on whether this poor fool is telling the truth or not," he said. "If he's tellin' the truth, then old man Kane's been murdered. Get me two ponies at once, Garcy. If it's all right with you, I'll take this poor devil to show me the place. If we find Kane's body then we'll know Peyotl's told us the truth and that Sam Dustin is the man we want. . . ."

"For the murder of Gerald Keene," quoth Jameson.

Stone laughed and Garcy stared at his heartlessness.

"I got Epps to give out the false news of his death," he said. "He's not dead and he isn't going to die for some time, I hope. I just want to see what Dustin's game'll be when he hears Keene was killed by Carr."

"What do you reckon'll happen . . . ? You'll be gone three or four days. You can't keep a dead man that long. Dustin'll find out that Keene's not dead."

"That's so. I better swear out a warrant against Dustin. You can arrest him, Sheriff, and hold him three or four days so he will not know I've taken Peyotl off into the hills."

"That's better. . . .," Garcy sat up. . . . "What'll you charge him with?"

Stone considered. "I could swear out a warrant for cattle rustlin' but he'd get out on bail. I might lodge a charge of complicity in the shooting at the Silver Dollar. . . Wait . . ." He emitted a whoop of joy. . . . "I've got him as sure as shootin'. I found him with those doped cigarettes on him and Peyotl says he has been supplied with peyotl by Dustin. . . I charge him with violation of the Narcotic Law. . . That's a Federal offense as well as a State violation. Grab him on that charge."

Garcy rose tempestuously.

"By God," he said; "I'll do it. It's takin' a big chance. All depends on what you find. If that cur Peyotl has told the truth . . . which I don't believe . . . then Dustin is in one hell of a mess. If he's lied . . . and if I arrest the richest cattleman in Seco valley on a false charge, then I'm in one hell of a fix and I'll sure pass it on to you."

"That's all right . . ." Stone grinned. "You get me the ponies and after I've gone, arrest Dustin and don't let him talk or get word. I'll leave at day-light."

They left at dawn with a sandstorm brewing. It began in fitful puffs that started the tumble-weed rolling across the mesa and raised whirling "dust-devils" across the plain. All day they pounded along through the growing storm and made a dry camp at Coyote Crossing. The ponies made no attempt to forage but stood with lowered heads and turned their rumps to the wind that drove the sand like shot and piled it deep in the blankets.

"It'll be clear to-morrow," growled Peyotl. "A sandstorm never lasts but three days."

Dawn came clear and cold and Peyotl lapsed into sullenness that grew with each mile. Old dreams came to him, old visions appeared in a series of broken scenes. For years of use of that debasing drug had worked on a brain that was never too strong. They were never pleasant dreams. Peyotl does not work like that; they were just the horrible phantasmagoria of a partially disordered brain.

Grinning faces bobbed above a saw-toothed sky-line. They hung to that sky-line with claw-like hands as birds hang to a telegraph wire and they gibbered and mowed at him and then ducked behind their menacing claws. A weeping face, the face of old Dad Kane, stared at him from a distant pile of rocks where Stone saw only a coyote yelling. From time to time Peyotl wiped the sweat out of his eyes and furtively looked at Stone. How much of these things was real? How much did Stone see?

But Stone rode on through the shifting sands deep in thought. Peyotl broke one of his infernal cigarettes into pieces and chewed the fragments as a dog chews an old boot. Suddenly . . .

A burro blundered out from the mesquite-tangle and jogged across the trail, a loaded burro with a top-pack of two buckets, a pick and a shovel . . . Exactly as old Dad Kane used to make up his packs! Peyotl could even see the "Squaw-hitch" that held it! That burro was not six paces in front of Stone when Peyotl shouted, his voice shrill with terror. Then the unspeakable happened.

Stone rode straight through that burro as a man rides through smoke.

Then the burro with his pack disappeared in the sand-laden air and a sudden swirl of yellow dust drove down over the place where he had been.

Peyotl shouted aloud in shrill-voiced terror and Stone turned on him with a hearty curse. He saw at once that something very real was the matter. Peyotl's eyes were white-rimmed with fright but there was no sight in them. If he was seeing things then they were things unseen by mortal man. His mouth was working and white foam lay in the corner of his mouth.

"My God," he said, and his voice broke. . . . "Did you see that? You rode right through him! A loaded burro right in yore path and you rode straight through him!"

Stone jerked him from his saddle, swung from his own horse and stood over the cowering wretch.

"This sand-storm's bad enough," he growled, "without my havin' to ride the range with a damned fool of a drug-addict. Where's any burro?"

"There! . . . My God! There he is again. . . ."

Peyotl's wavering finger swung to a spot; then it bobbed up and down as though following a moving burro. Stone's eyes followed the moving finger and saw, above a mesquite bush, the figure of a burro! For a second he stared at it half-paralyzed, then he realized what it was and he began to laugh; a relieved cackle of shrill-voiced laughter that startled himself.

"It's a mirage, you fool," he said. "Look! Don't you see the line of light under his feet; between him and the ground?"

He picked up a rock and threw it with all his force and it struck ground exactly where the burro stood.

"Some prospector over in another valley has got in just the right position for his reflection to be lifted over to us. Let's go on."

But Peyotl would not go on. He hung to Stone's stirrup leather and he babbled wildly as Stone had never heard a man talk before; exactly like a frightened child trying to talk courage into itself.

"Say, Stone," he said in a burst of incoherence, "do you believe the dead kin come back?"

"What? Come back? Come back from where? Do you reckon any man who's got a warm place in hell would try to come back to this place? Who'd you think you saw, Peyotl?"

"It looked to me like old Dad Kane was at that burro's heels. I seemed to see him with a chaw of tobacco as big as a lemon in his face an' a short-handled fry-pan stickin' in his boot like he always carried it."

Why at 40 You Think You're "GROWING OLD"

It's Frequently Just an "Idea." Not "Old Age." And According to Scientists, May be Something No More Alarming Than A Touch Of Acid Stomach

At about 40, many people think they're "growing old." They're tired a lot. Have headaches. Stomach upsets. Dizziness. Nausea.

Well, scientists say the cause, in a great many cases, is merely an acid condition of the stomach. The thing to do is simply to neutralize the excess stomach acidity.

When you have one of these acid stomach upsets, all you do is take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia after meals and before going to bed.

Try this. You'll feel like another person! Take either the familiar liquid "PHILLIPS'", or the convenient new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets. Made in Canada.

Also in Tablet Form:

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at all drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Making Tests For Radium

Ontario Man Claims Precious Ores Lie Under His Farm

Photographic plates made, he claims, solely by radium rays reflected through hundreds of feet of rock and earth have convinced John R. Howie, 90-year-old Clinton Township resident, near Grimsby, Ontario, that valuable deposits of pitchblende, and other precious ores lie under his farm. Metallic articles, such as keys and coins, were placed next the photographic plates in a metal holder which was then buried a few feet under ground with the emulsion side of the plate, facing downward. Next morning the developed plates showed clear images of the metal articles and in some cases radiation of light bands when the plates were buried on certain parts of the farm. The engineers said quite definitely, Howie claims, that these results positively proved the existence of radium deposits, and possibly lead, silver, gas and oil.

Find Butterfly In Mine

Miners in Frickley Colliery at Yorkshire, England, recently saved a brilliantly-colored butterfly from the mine. They found it one and one-half miles from the pit bottom and 1800 feet below ground. It was thought to have been taken into the mine with straw for the pit ponies. The men carried it to the surface and released it.

CRESTON, B.C., FRIDAY, APRIL 26

HOME BREW

In connection with the King's jubilee celebration on May 6th it is to be hoped that the various committees are having in mind the possibility of cool weather, and the necessity of having alternative plans to make the day a memorable one regardless of prevailing climatic conditions. With so much cool weather during April everything points to an early May that will enable those in charge to put the day over in capital fashion if the several items in the programe are given the wholehearted support of the general public they so well deserve. Up to the present nothing is heard of a general public church service Sunday, May 5th, that in many places is being made an outstanding feature of the jubilee exercises. A similar service featured the Sabbath preceding Canada's diamond jubilee celebration in 1927, and should not be overlooked on this occasion.

In view of the extensive dyking operations in this district this season more than the usual interest is being manifest as to the liklihood and extent of 1935 high water. Much the same interest is manifest at Bonners Ferry, with its 25,000 acres of dyked lands, and this has led the Herald to scan the official river records for the past 24 years, along with the snowfall and other moisture conditions, and here is the way it sizes up the situation: "Using the precipitation as a guage for high water, indications are that there should be no danger of floods this year, as the total precipitation for 1934 is almost four inches under that of 1933, when the Kootenay River rose to the highest mark since 1916." The Herald expres es the further opinion that "If conditions at this time can be taken as a guide the Kootenay will probably not reach its highest point until in the lattee part of June or may even run into July, which happened in 1920, with a comparatively low flood stage."

Now that discussion as to sites for Creston's new postoffice building has quieted down, and no word forthcoming as to even a possible date for construction getting under way, this might be an opportune time to ask the federal and provincial authorities if some arrangement could not be made whereby the new structure could be utilized for something more than postoffice purposes. If $30,000 is to be expended that amount will provide a structure [illegible] in excess of that required for some years to come for local postal facilities. For some time past Creston has sorely needed bigger and better quarters for the provincial police, and particularly for the administration of justice. The quarters now being made to serve for police court purposes are inadequate in every respect, and certainly a more central location for the various services rendered by the provincial police wouid be appreciated by all concerned. If Ottawa authorities would be willing to share the building with the province the latter cannot very well refuse to acquire the much needed better accomodation on the score of insufficient revenue. Even in a none too prosperous year like 1934 the intake at the Creston office of the provincial police showed a surplus of more than $4000 over salaries and all expenses incurred.

In connection with the recent hospital sweepstakes, or membership drive, it is most satisfactory to learn that the effort netted almost $600 cash, along with wnich the hospital owns the ten acres of land donated by Creston Reclamation Company, Limited, which at no remote date should readily sell at the $750 valuation placed on the acreage. When decis on was made to sell the tickets at one dollar the Review had serious doubts of the effort realizing much more than the $750 cash prize offered. That the total intake went to almost $1800 convinces us that sp endid organizing ability was behind the drive and full credit must be given H. A. Powell, who was business manager of the "sweep." The directors are particularly fortunate in having the services of Mr. Powell as secretary to the board. As business manager for the hospital he has shown real talent, especially in the matter of financing which, after all, is the most important feature of his work. Had someone of his ability been in charge of collections from the hospital's inception its present excellent financial standing would be still more impressive.

Creston Winners Shuttle Honors

Badminton Season Wound Up with District Tournament — Boswell, Sirdar, Wynndel and Creston Supply Contestants.

The first district badminton tournament ever staged at Creston featured the windup of the 1934-35 shuttle season and staged at Park pavilion Wednesday afternoon and evening last. Wynndel Sirdar and Boswell participated, the latter having seven competitors.

Although Creston carried off all the honors this does not indicate the actual play the visitors put up good opposition. In the men's doubles Dick Malloy and and J. Johnstone of Boswell were able to beat H. Cornwall and O. Sostad in play which extended over three hard games, the Boswell entries winning by 7 points. W. Mackie and Sherman, also of Boswell, beat their home town oppon nts and reached the finals, where they were beaten by F. V. Staples and G Sinclair of Creston. This set went into three games.

In mixed doubles the final was a battle royal with four Creston players, Miss Jean Henderson and G. Sinclair opposing Mrs. F. P. Levirs and F. V Staples, the former having a little better combination and enabled a win in two out of three sets.

Miss M. Smith and Mrs. F. P. Levirs were playing a real game when they beat Misses Jean Henderson and M. Hamilton in two straight games, the get into the finals against Mrs. D. Weir and Mrs. J P. MacDonald, the latter making the going tough necessitating two overtime games with scores of 18-17 and 17-13.

The feature of the consolation play was in the final of the mixed doubles when Mr. and Mrs. J. P. MacDonald, after putting up a great fight against two of the best shuttle duetts, Mr. and Mrs. Telford and Mrs. Chandler and Ted Moore, took the honors.

Wynndel and Sirdar were represented at the tournament. The former sending along L. Benedetti, A. W. Birch, Dave Taylor and C. Wilson. The Sirdar representatives were Fred Martello and Syd. Rogers

Yes, it's True

That the Review is owned by an individual. It's his property, and he must pay his bills and assume all responsibilities.

On the other hand, it is also true that somehow or other the public looks upon the community newspaper as being partly their property.

The community expects its institutions to be defended, to be favorably reported, to be kept in good report throughout the district and the province.

Individuals, societies and organizations look for and expect their activities to be reported in their home paper. And the home paper does all these things—likes to do them.

This being so, it is only human that the owner of, and those who are employed at the local newspaper office should expect that all these interests would return the compliment through giving it printing orders.

If all the printing requirements of this district were to be printed in Creston, The Review would have to increase its staff at least 50 per cent.

Making Survey Of Ireland

Scientists Have Already Found Mysterious Type Of People

Ireland, land of fairy legends and romantic twilights, is being put under the scientific microscope by American experts from Harvard University, who are engaged in a five years' archaeological, anthropometric, social and economic survey of the country.

As a result, all kinds of surprising, fascinating facts are being discovered, including a mysterious type of dark-haired, blue-eyed and fair-skinned people.

Dr. C. W. Du Pertuis, head of the radial section of Harvard's survey, who has established temporary headquarters at Ennis, County Clare, described how he and his little band of experts are taking the measure of Paddy and Molly. With him is his wife, an enthusiastic worker, who acts as recording secretary.

Ten thousand people will be measured and classified in 18 months, Dr. Du Pertuis hopes. In five minutes 125 facts are collected about each individual. At the end of the survey the Harvard workers will be in possession of one and a quarter million facts, which will be taken to Harvard and tabulated, a two-year task.

One thousand people will be measured in the Clare district during the next month, Dr. Du Pertuis said. He declared that Clare has been the easiest county to work so far because the people are taking an intelligent interest in the work and are more willing to co-operate than most people.

When all the facts have been digested at Harvard, Dr. Du Pertuis hopes they will answer such questions as: Who were the Celts? Where are their their descendants? And so on.

Go Through Long Ceremony

Ancient Rites Used When English K.C.'s "Take Silk"

Sixteen barristers, whom the King had been pleased to raise to the dignity of king's counsel, recently participated together in the quaint ceremony of being admitted "within the Bar." Jealous as is the English law for its ancient usages there repeatedly rises a demand that the ceremonial of admitting new K.C.'s should be considerably curtailed.

Wearing silk gowns, lace cuffs, full-bottomed wigs, white kid gloves, court breeches and buckled shoes, the new king's counsel assemble in a body in the law courts and proceed to the first court. Ordinary business is at once suspended.

The judge addresses the nearest new K.C.: "His Majesty having been pleased to appoint you one of his counsel learned in the law, you will be pleased to take your seat within the Bar accordingly." The K.C. so addressed steps into the front row of seats. He bows to the judge, then to the K.C.'s already there. Finally the candidate turns round and bows to the junior Bar in the rear seats.

"Mr. Blank, do you move?" inquires the judge. Mr. Blank merely bows and steps out. The next newly-fledged "silk" steps in and the same ritual is repeated. And so on, until the whole company of new K.C.'s have been so dealt with. Then they move off in a body to another court, where the ritual is again observed. It may be that 20 courts have to be visited.

It has often been suggested that the admission of the new K.C.'s would be more impressive if the ceremony was conducted before the Lord Chief Justice alone, with other judges supporting him.

Predict Longer Day

After some billions of years the earth's day will be 47 times as long as it is now, that is, there will be 1,128 hours to count instead of 24. Astronomers at Pasadena, Cal., have figured this out on the strength of the fact the moon is surely but gradually applying the brakes to the earth's spin. The day is now lengthening at the rate of 1-1000th of a second a century.

The Russian match industry has been built up to a scheduled production of around nine million cases of matches a year.

Decided In Dog's Favor

Magistrate Ruled Airedale Was Not Running At Large

Occasionally there comes from our courts pronouncements that are out of the ordinary but that immediately commend themselves to the good sense of the community.

Such a one emanated from the Calgary Police Court the other day and reveals Magistrate H. G. Scott in a Solomonic light. He ruled that a dog going in orderly fashion to the butcher shop to get his daily rations, according to his regular custom, cannot be declared to be wandering at large. Under this ruling, a charge against one John Riddock of violating a city bylaw was dismissed.

Riddock admitted his dog was about a block from his house without being under immediate restraint. He explained, however, that the 12-year-old Airedale was in the habit of going daily to a nearby butcher shop for a bone and on the occasion cited, a Wednesday afternoon, the dog forgot the butcher shop was closed for the half-holiday and was standing barking at the door when observed by the police constable. Such a dog could not be described as "wandering at large," the court held. He was in lawful pursuit of his business and might be described as a "purposeful dog."

"You might warn him about the early closing bylaw," the magistrate advised Riddock, a remark which, says the report, was greeted with laughter. But why?

An intelligent dog would soon realize that his butcher shop had two "Sundays" a week, and being a purposeful and orderly dog, would act accordingly. Undoubtedly on this occasion he was not inciting his butcher to a breach of the Wednesday closing bylaw. He, as his master explained, just forgot. Even humans do that, as witness the appearance of a tin of pork and beans for Wednesday evening dinners!—Edmonton Journal.

Fleet Greeted Islanders

Searchlight And Rocket Give Lonely People A Thrill

Greetings were exchanged between the residents of lonely Kangaroo Island, Australia, and the British fleet as it passed recently. Pennesha residents built a huge bonfire on Christmas Cove Hill, and when the warships arrived a man morsed "Kangaroo Island greets you." "Thanks" was flashed back from the fleet, which then turned its searchlights on the island, making it light as day. Then the searchlights were flashed into the air to form a crown. A rocket shot from one of the ships ended the display.

X-Ray Outwits Thief

Use of the X-ray enabled police to outwit an ingenious jewel thief. An elegantly dressed man entered a jeweller's shop in Bombay, India, and asked to see some valuable rings. During the inspection, he cleverly substituted a fake ring from his pocket for one of them. The shop assistant's suspicions were aroused and police notified. The ring, however, had myteriously disappeared. The man was X-rayed and the ring was discovered inside his stomach. 2093.

Cattle That Never Drink

Hawaii Has Cows That Balk At Sight Of Water

Hawaii has cows that never drink. Grazing in fertile valleys on the slopes of Mauna Kea, the 13,800-foot mountain in the northwest of the Island of Hawaii, where mists constantly drift in on the trade winds, the cattle slake their thirst through the air they breathe or by cropping the wet grass. When taken to drier regions they balk at the sight of water, not knowing what it is.

The existence of this non-drinking cattle has just been brought to the attention of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture. The cattle are bred on a ranch, adjacent to the 500,000-acre Parker Ranch, which has 32,000 Herefords. It was not intended to deprive the animals of water. Originally they were kept on land where water was plentiful. But portions of the herd, attracted by luxuriant grass, wandered into valleys where there were no streams nor lakes.

They soon discovered that they obtained enough moisture without drinking, because of the mist and rain. The offspring of these cattle grew to maturity without ever having seen as much as a bucketful of water.

Hawaii has been a paradise for cattle as well as for man. The natives had never seen cattle prior to 1793, when a British captain presented some to King Kamehameha I. The king forbade his people to kill them. In 1815, John P. Parker, a sailor from Newton, Mass., married a native girl and established a ranch. His descendants grew rich. They imported blooded Herefords from Kentucky, Missouri, Wisconsin and Indiana, and grass from England, South Africa and mainland United States.

Tides along the coast of Siberia cast up bits of ivory from the tusks of mammoths entombed in ice floes 10,000 years ago.

Just As Represented

Canadian Poultry Is Being Appreciated By London Buyers

The following is an extract from "The Fish Trades Gazette", London, England, March 2, 1935:

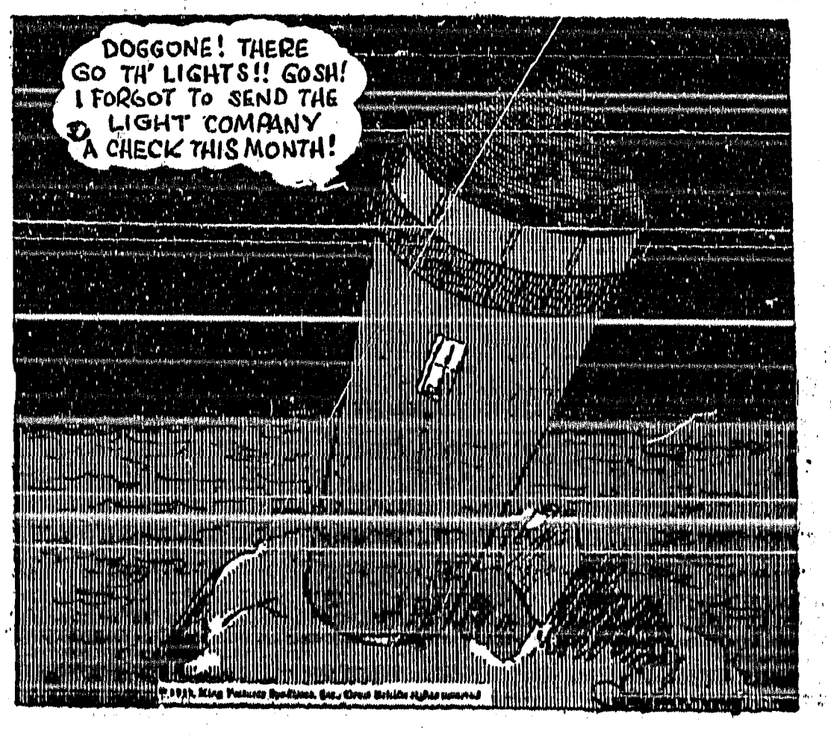
"There is one very good point this year when buying Canadian turkeys or chickens without inspecting them—whatever grade they are, or shall I say, whatever grade is put up to you for sale, you can rely on the marking, as all goods are under Canadian Government supervision and turn out according to what they are represented to be.

"Since writing about ducks and ducklings in these notes of February 16, I have seen some of the finest Canadian ducks that have ever been shipped to this country. These Canadians are quite as good as the Long Island ducks, which as you know are the produce of the United States. In fact the Canadian packing is far superior, being graded as 12 and six per case, which, as the trade is at the present time, is a very handy size for any tradesman. The quality is excellent, as they are ducklings of all sizes and cannot fail to please the most particular. Also, in my opinon, they will make a vast difference to the sale of the States ducks, as, if they have come to stay and the shipments can be relied upon, the demand is bound to increase as the season advances. As we all expect London to be the first on the list for a bumper time as far as poultry is concerned, these birds should hold first place amongst the imported ducks. They are Empire produce, which will go a long way when displayed for sale in the poulterers' shops, as no doubt they will be when better known."

Keeps You Awake

Here's another old theory shot to atoms. A Denver psychiatrist is authority for the statement that counting sheep is a sure way to stay awake at nights, his contention being that "we do not put ourselves to sleep, but rather allow ourselves to sleep," and having anything on the mind will not induce sleep.

FANCIFUL FABLES



Re-Union In Honor Of Selkirk Pioneer

Venerable Violin Plays Part In Festivities Of Occasion

It was just 125 years ago that a group of Highland families, leading a meagre life in the old land, were ejected from their homes, and sought a new land. Some were moved to other Isles; some went to Cape Breton. The ancestors of the people at a recent gathering were brought out by Lord Selkirk to the Red River.

There for many years, they lived a life of great hardship and isolation. Their only outlet to the world was via the Hudson Bay, and that was a nine months' journey.

All this was recalled by Dean J. W. Matheson at the annual reunion of the Lord Selkirk Association of Rupert's Land. Miss Janet Bannerman, now 96 and the oldest member, was present, and was the centre of a ring of old friends and well-wishers. Nearby were Mr. and Mrs. James Fraser, who will celebrate the 61st anniversary of their wedding this year. Scattered about were to be found the Mathesons, the Sutherlands, the MacBeths, the Gunns—members of all the families so intimately woven into the history of the Canadian west.

For the dance a link with the first settlers was present in a violin brought over by Donald "Sandy Sojer" Sutherland, father of the late Senator John Sutherland, in 1811. Before coming to the Red River, Mr. Sutherland had played it to his fellow-campaigners in the Napoleonic Peninsular wars.

The old violin has passed from father to son in the Sutherland family, and is now owned by John Hugh Sutherland. At the reunion it was played by Norman Matheson, of the fifth generation of that family. The first air he played, "The Road to the Isles," was the last song heard by the settlers as they left Stornoway in 1811; and just as their ship neared Churchill, the pipers played it again.

Miss Bannerman and John MacBeth led the way, followed by Mr. and Mrs. Fraser. Old hearts and feet lightened to the old-time music, and when the famous Red River jig was called soon after, the old people went into the intricate steps with a will. Couple after couple performed the jig, with others cutting in and giving the fiddler no rest for almost half an hour. The younger folk stood by, and applauded each dancer heartily as she or he left the floor.

A Powerful Telescope

Lighthouse Keeper Can See Fishpot Robbers Many Miles Away

Fishermen with light fingers are keeping carefully away from the Great Sound in Bermuda, following the latest exhibition of how wary an eye Edgar Gibson, keeper of the Gibbs Hill lighthouse, has peeled on the water around Bermuda.

Seated in the balcony of the lighthouse, 371 feet above sea level, the highest point in the islands, Gibson watches over the Sound with a powerful telescope. Latest malefactors to fall victim to his vigilance were two men whom he spied in a strange boat making off with fishpots that didn't belong to them three miles off shore. He promptly notified harbor police and then observed their arrest through his glass. Several months ago Gibson brought about the arrest of three other men who were raiding fishpots four miles off shore. Gibson can read the time on the face of the clock on the House of Assembly tower, eight miles away in Hamilton, so powerful is his telescope and so clear is the atmophere in Bermuda.

Proof Enough

Two travellers were comparing ideas about foreign cities.

"London," said one, is certainly the foggiest place in the world."

"Oh, no, it's not," said the other. "I've been in a place much foggier than London."

"Where was that?" asked his interested friend.

"I don't know where it was," replied the second man, "it was so foggy."

Builders And Wreckers

Glancing through a little trade magazine the other day the writer came across a short bit of verse entitled "Wreckers", which, in these days and times, is worthy of still wider circulation. So we reproduce it:

I watched them tearing a building down,
A gang of men in a busy town.
With a ho-heave-ho and a lusty yell,
They swung a beam and the side wall fell.

I asked the foreman, "Are these men skilled.
And the men you'd hire if you had to build?"
He gave a laugh and said, "No, indeed!"
Just common labor is all I need.
I can easily wreck in a day or two
What builders have taken a year to do."

I thought to myself as I went my way,
Which of these roles have I tried to play?
Am I a builder who works with care,
Measuring life by the rule and square?
Am I shaping my deeds to a well-made plan,
Patiently doing the best I can?
Or am I a wrecker, who walks the town,
Content with the labor of tearing down?

All over this world of ours there are men and women earnestly striving to build,—people in governments, in churches, in education, in finance, in industry, in business; statesmen around the League of Nations council table, sitting in international conferences, or engaged in diplomatic negotiations. They are trying to build anew out of the wreckage and upheaval of political, economic and social conditions thrown into chaos by the Great War and its bitter aftermath. They are striving to save civilization, and make it a finer thing than anything hitherto known.

But because the times are temporarily out of joint, weaknesses have developed in the economic system, social evils have become multiplied; in a word, because abnormal conditions exist and many people are in difficulties, the "wreckers" have become bold and walk the town blatantly engaged in the easiest of all tasks—that of tearing down. Men and women who never constructed anything, who lack both the ability and the incentive to construct, are busying themselves in criticizing the efforts of the builders, imputing unworthy motives to them, seeking to wreck anything and everything of a constructive nature that is attempted.

Even the best and most patient of people are inclined to be critical and become fault-finders. In fact, how often are people now heard to speak in praise of anything, of any institution, or of any effort that is being put forth? Rather, is it not the general attitude to denounce and attach blame?

The popular thing to-day seems to be to destroy, to wreck. In some countries they are deliberately trying to destroy religion and so to revert to the dark ages; in these and other countries the attempt is being made to deprive people of liberties won through the suffering and bloodshed of past generations. The wreckers would in a day tear down the constructive work of centuries.

There are those, of course, who still hold fast to the faith that is in them; who still believe in liberty as the sacred right of the individual citizen; who hold true to democratic forms of government and trust in the people and hatred of dictatorial autocracies.

Builder or wrecker—which are you? Which class has brought mankind to its present civilization? Which class lifted mankind from the caveman stage? Which group has developed modern medicine, which is responsible for modern inventions, which built our transportation and communication systems, our modern towns and cities, which brought into being the higher standard of life in this twentieth century? And was it not the wreckers who precipitated the Great War and are responsible for the whole train of evils which have followed.

The builders are still building in the face of enormous difficulties and the opposition of the wreckers; the builders are striving to save civilization which the wreckers would destroy through revolution and bloodshed in order that out of civilization's crash they may reap goulish benefits.

Each of us may well take stock of ourselves, study our present habits of thinking, examine our actions, watch our words—in brief, take a measure of our lives and see whether we are builders, "patiently doing the best we can," or merely wreckers "content with the labor of tearing down."

Indian Did Not Forget

Sends Gift To Lawyer Who Saved His Son In Trial

Sixteen months ago a Nanaimo jury acquitted Andrew Moses, slender Port Alberni Indian, of a charge of attempted murder—a charge laid after an Indian from the west coast of Vancouver Island, who had allegedly stolen Andrew's girl-wife, was stabbed through the heart and saved from death by a young Victoria surgeon.

For two days the jury listened to how Andrew had followed his pretty 18-year-old wife whom he had married according to Indian custom.

When he found her there was a fight and Charlie Sam was stabbed in the heart. Sam's life was in doubt for more than a month but he recovered eventually and Moses went on trial.

When the jury returned its verdict Chief Moses, Andrew's father, broke a two-day court room silence. "I don't forget you," he said to R. L. Maitland, K.C., his son's counsel. "I don't forget you save Andrew's life. Andrew's good boy. You won't forget me."

Recently Mr. Maitland received two eight-foot intricately carved totem poles. What each figure and character denotes he will probably never fully know, but whenever he looks at them he will know that the old chief did not forget.

BROKE HER LEG AGAINST A STAIR

Whilst Hampered by Rheumatism

"Two years ago," writes a woman, "I was suffering with rheumatism in my legs, and when walking upstairs one day just kicked my right foot against the stairs, and broke my leg just below the knee. I was in hospital for four months, and when I came out someone advised me to try Kruschen Salts. I did so, and now I have no trace of rheumatism. I would not be without my daily dose of Kruschen, which I take every morning—half a teaspoonful in warm water."—Mrs. P. B.

The six salts in Kruschen stimulate the liver and kidneys to healthy, regular action: assist them to get rid of the excess uric acid which is the cause of rheumatic pains. When poisonous uric acid goes—with its deposits of needle-pointed crystals—there's no doubt about those aches and pains going too!

Want Branch Lines

Plea Is Made For Completion Of Two Branch Lines In Northern Saskatchewan

A plea for completion of two branch lines of the Canadian National Railways in northern Saskatchewan was made before the select standing committee on railways by C. R. McIntosh (Lib., North Battleford). Mr. McIntosh was supported in his request by P. G. Davies (Cons., Athabaska).

At present a branch line runs north from North Battleford, Sask, to St. Walberg, a distance of 90 miles, but the remaining 100 miles to Beaver River Crossing is unfinished. This line was projected originally to join North Battleford with Edmonton. Mr. McIntosh urged the road be completed, and estimated the cost to be not more than $350,000.

The other line was from North Battleford to Edmonton, via Spruce Lake.

Japan's New Ships

Merchant Marine Fleet Finest Naval Reserve In World

The Japanese are leaving no stones unturned in their expansion to major world power. Their new merchant marine fleet, the finest naval reserve in the world, is speedily dominating Pacific Ocean shipping. One of six new luxury liners being built by Japan has entered service; a fleet of 50 freighters which travel at speed of more than 20 miles per hour, span Tokyo to San Francisco in 11 days with rich cargoes of silk. This constitutes a tremendous saving in time and dollars.

Little Journeys In Science

THE SPECTROSCOPE

(By Gordon H. Guest, M.A.)

Scientists have shown that the earth and every star which can be observed by the telescope, including the most distant, are composed of the same substances. Of course the proportions are different, but the substances are not.

A glass prism in the hands of the great scientist Sir Isaac Newton in 1672 commenced the train of thought that led to this discovery. Newton observed that the prism split up ordinary sunlight into the various colors of which it is composed. The prism was the beginning of a very powerful instrument of science, namely the spectroscope, which was developed about a hundred years later. It is this instrument that tells us that all the suns and planets are composed of the same materials in different proportions.

The spectroscope sees more than our eyes enable us to see. Man can only observe those substances that give off vibrations to which our eyes are sensitive. The spectroscope is sensitive to all vibrations that matter sends out. We cannot see colorless gases, but the spectroscope can. In fact this instrument can see gases so plainly that it can tell one from another. This is because every solid substance and every kind of gas sends out vibrations, each having a rate of vibration of its own. Science has determined the rates of vibration of the various solids and gases of which the earth is composed. When the same vibrations come from other planets and suns scientists know that they are composed of the same materials that are in the earth.

Research Council

Work Carried On By This Body Is Worth Millions To The Farmers

With their work estimated at "tens of millions of dollars" in value to farmers, associate committees of the National Research Council ended their seventh annual convention held at Winnipeg.

Dr. H. M. Tory, president of the council, declared in his windup address that the group had as much of Canada's future in its hands as any other body of Canadian citizens. The work was worth millions to farmers, he declared.

Farewell was said to Dr. O. S. Aamodt, University of Alberta, who will shortly join the staff of the University of Wisconsin. Regretting Dr. Aamodt's departure, the council members extended him best wishes in his new work. Tribute to Dr. Tory's work was voiced by Dr. W. C. Murray, president of the University of Saskatchewan.

Sub-committees were re-established and their chairmen named.

Does Not Want Freedom

Rev. L. D. Stueland has for a constant companion on his motor trips about the Wind River Indian reservation in Wyoming a domesticated wild finch. Seven years ago he captured the bird near Castle Rock, Colo., after it had broken a wing. It soon became a household pet and, although free to leave at any time, returns to its cage each night.

SENATE APPROVES BILL TO COMBAT DROUTH MENACE

Ottawa.—Sweeping legislative decks for the Easter recess, the senate gave second and third reading to bills to provide for rehabilitation of drouth and soil drifting areas in the prairie provinces, supply of one-twelfth of the main estimates, and to permit the Bank of Canada to export gold under license as in the case of chartered banks.

The elder statesmen then proceeded to give first reading to measures for a minimum wage, authorizing provision of moneys to meet expenditures and indebtedness of the Canadian National Railways during 1935, changes in the copyright act relating to performing rights in musical work and reducing the cut in civil servants' salaries.

The bill of T. L. Church (Cons., Toronto East), to compel newspapers to publish a list of their shareholders, had a setback. When the measure was called for second reading, its sponsor, Hon. James Murdock (Lib., Ottawa), moved the bill be discharged from the order paper for the day to be placed on the order paper for June 4. The motion carried.

The rehabilitation bill to spend $750,000 this year and $1,000,000 annually for a specified period towards a solution of the problem of drouth and soil drifting areas in the western provinces, saw Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, senate leader; Senator Raoul Dandurand, Liberal leader; Senator W. A. Buchanan (Lib., Lethbridge), and Senator J. A. Calder (Cons., Regina) take the floor. All agreed the legislation was desirable to fight the menace.

"A large section of our heritage is threatened," Senator Meighen stated, in speaking of drouth and dust storms in the southern portion of Western Canada. Consequently, he continued, it was the part of wisdom to address the problem of trying to find some way of rescuing from this devastation as much of that area as could possibly be rescued.

The problem was not a simple one, and many had advanced schemes of solution, Senator Meighen said. Opinons of those whose judgment ought to be best differed in important features. For the present, reforestation seemed to hold sway in the minds of public men in the United States, but there was grave doubt as to whether or not this solution would accomplish anything in the immediate future.

In speaking of the proposed personnel of the commission, Senator Meighen stated the intention was to combine the practical with the theoretical, to associate scientific men with those who had actually lived among and wrestled with problems on the land. The commission would devise experimental tests, the cost of which would be met by the moneys provided.

Senator Dandurand believed the bill would be unanimously accepted by the house.

Senator Buchanan declared he looked upon the bill as important not only to western farmers but to the whole Dominion, because if it succeeded in solving the problem it would benefit every person who had an investment in those sections. "If we were to allow the southern parts of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, which are affected by drouth and soil drifting, to be abandoned without any effort to reclaim them," Senator Buchanan stated, "the loss to the elevator companies, the railways, the mortgage companies and individuals would run into hundreds of millions of dollars.

"I think," Senator Buchanan said, "the commission will probably find it desirable to make a systematic effort to determine the best means for reclaiming and rehabilitating certain areas, and to this end some studies will probably be undertaken to find out the most suitable uses to which the lands can be put."

Approximately 3,000,000 tons of sugar were exported by Java in 1931.

Price Spread Report

More State Intervention In Business Is Deemed Necessary

Ottawa.—Creation of a federal trade and industry commission with wide powers of law enforcement, supervision over business and suppression of unfair, unethical commercial practices, was the main recommendation of the price spreads commission.

It would be a commission of five men, operating directly under the prime minister in somewhat the same way as the Dominion board of railway commissioners.

"We have been forced by the evidence," the report stated, "to conclude the situation calls for a frank recognition of the necesstiy of more state intervention in business."

The trade commission would be empowered to:

Enforce the Combines Act to retain and restore competition.

Regulate industrial monopolies where open competition cannot or should not be enforced. An industry would be declared monopolistic, exempted from the operation of the Combines Act and automatically come within the supervision of the trade commission.

Sanction and supervise agreements between industrial units modifying cut-throat competition and generally regulate the industry.

Prohibit unfair competitive practices.

Supervise or co-operate in administering laws relating to merchandising and business practice for which no agency exists.

Administer laws to protect consumers.

Regulate security issues for the protection of the investor.

Co-operate with chambers of commerce and boards of trade in development of commercial arbitration or refereeing of business disputes.

Co-operate with other government agencies, federal, provincial or municipal, in solution of trade problems.

Railway Dining Car Runs

Propose Longer Period Of Layover At Winnipeg

Montreal.—A proposed rearrangement of dining car runs between Montreal and Winnipeg will not have the effect of transferring the headquarters of the dining car department from Montreal to Winnipeg but result in the longer period of layover being at the latter city, W. W. Swindon, general superintendent of sleeping and dining service, Canadian National Railways stated, here.

Mr. Swindon was making a reply to Ald. Dave Rochon, pro-mayor of Montreal, who stated at a public meeting "Mayor Camillien Houde will fight to the last ditch any attempt by the C.N.R. to remove dining car headquarters on the two trans-continental trains from Montreal to Winnipeg."

Lake Navigation Opens

First Cargoes Of Grain Vessels Clear From Fort William

Fort William—Threading their way through a passage cut in the ice field, five vessels cleared from the harbor, loaded with grain and headed "down-lake" with the first cargoes of the 1935 season. Vessels were the Stadacona, Donnacona, Granby, Winnipeg and Saskatoon, owned by the Canada Steamship Lines.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.—Thirteen days ahead of last year, the steamship L. E. Block opened navigation at this port, upbound for Marquette to load ore.

Increase In Rates

Railway Commissioners Grant Request For Increase On International Traffic

Ottawa.—The board of railway commissioners has decided to grant the request of the Canadian railways for an increase in rates on international traffic between Canada and the United States to conform with the emergency increases granted U.S. lines by the interstate commerce commission. Increases which range up to seven per cent. and are limited by maximum rates per hundred pounds, will come into effect on April 18.

The board was convinced shippers would have to pay the increases on international traffic in any event. The difference would be that if the board refused the application of the Canadian roads, the increase would all go to the United States railways.

The principal commodities which will be excluded from the increased rates are: Grain, flour, mill products, hay, straw, fruits of all kinds, vegetables, livestock except horses, milk, pulpwood, lumber except certain woods, and fertilizers.

Tax Higher Salaries

Edmonton.—Higher salaries are struck a fresh blow by the provincial government under the terms of a bill to amend the Income Tax Act which was given second reading in the legislature. The act provides for higher levies on those whose incomes, after allowing for exemptions, are in excess of $5,000 per year.

Progressing Favorably

Edmonton. — Father Charest, of Grouard, Alta., flown into Edmonton after having one hand crushed beneath a snowmobile; was reported by hospital attaches here to be progressing favorably. He may be in the hospital for two weeks. Four fingers were amputated.

Want Wheat Conference

Propose Meeting To Be Held In Argentine To Discuss Wheat Exports

Buenos Aires.—An invitation to Canadian and Australian farm organizations to send representatives here for a conference to discuss the removal of limitation on wheat exports was sent by the Argentine Co-operative Association. The latter is composed of 25,000 farmers from all sections of the Argentine.

London. — The wheat consultative committee probably will meet in London May 15, it was reported.

The big four wheat exporting countries, Canada, the United States, Australia and Argentina, met in London early in March but failed to reach any agreement for extension of the existing agreement limiting wheat exports, which extends only until July 31 next.

Investigate Auto Industry

Tariff Board To Visit Plants Where Motor Cars Are Produced

Ottawa.—The tariff board will begin the investigation of the automobile industry by visits to the plants which produce motor cars and parts. These visits will likely be made this week, it was learned.

The hearing of evidence will open in Calgary when the board is there in connection with the gasoline inquiry. The board had planned going to Calgary early in May but requests have come from those submitting evidence in that city to have the hearing postponed. The board will comply with this request.

While in the west the board will go to Vancouver where hearings will be conducted in connection with both inquiries. Afterwards the board will return to Ottawa and conclude its hearings in this city.

No Wheat Shortage In U.S.

Estimated Production This Year Placed At 625,000,000 Bushels

Indianapolis.—The United States need have no fear of a great wheat shortage resulting from drouth and dust storms, said G. E. Farrell, director of the division of grains of the agricultural adjustment administration, here.

Farrell, who conducted the first of a series of conferences to be held throughout the middle west and west on plans for holding a referendum on continuing the wheat control program, pointed out the estimated wheat production for this year is 625,000,000 bushels, which is the normal consumption of that grain. In addition there is a surplus of 120,000,000 bushels on hand.

Health Conference

Ottawa.—The conference of provincial ministers of health with Hon. D. M. Sutherland, federal minister of pensions and national health, will open in Ottawa, April 25, Mr. Sutherland stated.

SETS REMARKABLE SOLO FLIGHT RECORD

Here is Mr. H. L. Brook, British airman, after he had landed at Croydon Aerodrome from Australia. He completed the flight fom Darwin to Lympne in 7 days, 10 hours, 15 minutes, thus breaking the record for the solo flight from Australia, held by Mr. C. J. Melrose, by some thirteen hours.

RE-ARMAMENT OF GERMANY IS LEAGUE PROBLEM

Geneva. — Germany's re-armament and the whole question of preventing future one-sided repudiation of international treaties was thrust squarely on the doorstep of the council of the League of Nations.

Clarifying the hitherto confused picture of just what procedure would be followed here, French Foreign Minister Pierre Laval submitted a draft resolution on behalf of the governments of Great Britain, France and Italy, and on his own behalf backed it up with a strongly-worded denunciation of German re-armament and abrupt repudiation of treaty obligations by her military decree of March 16.

Great Britain and Italy supported the French spokesman in no uncertain terms, but Foreign Minister Joseph Beck of Poland promptly challenged the draft's proposed strengthening of the league covenant, and with a scarcely-veiled reference to the Franco-Russian accord said Poland wondered whether certain suggested agreements were not calculated to prejudice, rather than foster, the peace of eastern Europe.

The draft resolution was couched in such vigorous terms in its expressions that Germany had failed to keep her obligations, and in denouncing unilateral repudiation of treaties generally, as to bring immediately from Berlin semi-official word that if it is approved as it stands the league statesmen might as well abandon entirely efforts to get Germany back into the league.

Message Of Loyalty

Senate Unites With House Of Commons In Address To The King

Ottawa.—The senate united with the House of Commons in the address to the King expressing loyal and respectful congratulations on the 25th anniversary of his accession to the throne.

Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, senate leader, as mover, and Senator Raoul Dandurand, Liberal leader, as seconder, moved that the upper house join in the address passed last week by the commons.

"We, who possibly best of all citizens of the empire," Senator Meighen stated, "know of the blessings that flow from the occupancy of the throne by a person of the character and great common sense of His Majesty the King, are particularly pleased to offer our congratulations. To us who believe that we are of a country wherein the best forms of democratic government had their birth, it is a matter of extreme gratification that at a time when the institutions of democracy have been subjected to a continuous and ferocious challenge, as never before in their long history, our institutions, in the full flush of their democracy, are presided over by a monarch such as blesses the British Empire."

"We all join heartily in wishing long life and happiness to His Majesty King George, to his gracious consort, and to members of the royal family," Senator Dandurand said.

Get Leave Of Absence

Toronto.—All war veterans in the employ of the Ontario government will be given leave of absence with salary so they can attend the Canadian corps reunion at Vimy, France, in July, 1936, Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn announced in the legislature.

Protest Coal Price Cut

Edmonton.—Reduction of prices by 50 cents a ton paid by the C.N.R. fuel department to mines in the Coalspur region, was protested in a resolution passed by the legislature, on motion of Chris Pattinson, Labor, Edson.

Ban Slot Machines

Edmonton.—The ban on slot machines in this province will take effect July 1 next, when similar legislaton also will become operative in Saskatchewan, the legislature in committee of the whole decided.
