Scenery Feature "Eyes of Love"

The play, "Eyes of Love," which is to be produced by the Community Players at the Grand Theatre on Wednesday, March 20th, is sure to prove an entertainment of the highest order. The Players have spared no pains in their determination to make this an outstanding event, and they have been assisted in this by the other members of the club.

The scenery is in the capable hands of Richard Chandler and he assures that he has been promised the hearty co-operation of several of the town merchants in suitably equipping the stage. The two other members of this committee are Sam Steenstrup and R. W. Maxwell.

Music is to be a feature of the presentation, and Geo. H. Kelly is in charge of this work. The Community Playars have felt for some time that an orchestra was a necessary agent to dramatic work, and extended an invitation to become members to the orchestra conducted by T. Goodwin. This musical organization is certain to provide a well balanced program for those who love the music of song.

The artistic posters which are exciting so much comment in town and outlying districts are the work of Miss Eleanor Blair of Canyon, and her voluntary effort in this conection is deeply appreciated by the Players.

As for the play itself there is not a dull moment in it. It is a play of action and the thrilling climax of the first act is only a foretaste of the remaining two. On no account miss "Eyes of Love," showing at the Grand on March 20th.

Proficiency badges just awarded at the United Church Sunday school were gained by Holly Bond, Leonard Bond and Gottfried Samuelson for six years' perfect attendance; Grace Bond with a record of five years, and Charlie Kolthammer, three years. For a rural community it is claimed this record has never been excelled.

There was quite a good turnout at the hall on Friday night for the dance put on under the direction of Mrs. Lister's orchestra, which was assisted by Geo. Kelly and Charlie Cotterill on saxaphones. The music was exceptionally good and all will welcome the next dance the orchestra will be putting on later.

Miss Lily Cook and Myles Hurl were very quietly married on Saturday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. Mrs. William Cook, with just the immediate friends and relatives of the young couple in attendance. Fernie Pastor is Banquet Speaker

Over seventy representatives of the United Church congregations at Lister, Canyon, Wynndel, Creston, sat in at the annual banquet of Trinity Beaver Brotherhood in the church hall on Friday night with Presidenn Fred Lewis in charge of proceedings.

The wives of the Brotherhood members provided a splendid spread of good things to eat, and certainly the hall could hardly have looked more attractive than it did in its dress of red, white and blue which was effectively carried out in every detail. The same colorscheme was strikingly in evidence in the cap and dress of the members of the Girls' Go Getter Club who were responsible for serving the dinner.

Following the dinner W. J. Truscott led the gathering in communitysinging and then came the toast list as follows:

The King.

The Brotherhood—G. W. Taylor, Wynndel; W. J. Craig.

Our Guests—Dr. Lillie, W. H. Kolthammer, Canyon.

The Ladies—O. M. Srmuelson and Miss Muriel Knott, Canyon.

The Church—Rev. R. E. Cribb, Rev. E. L. Best, Fernie.

Rev. Mr. Best spoke briefly to the toast with which his name is associated and then proceeded to give an interesting talk on "The Art of Living Together." In very practical terms the spetker pointed out that it was only through thorough co operation that the highest development would come in our national and community life.

Sondwiched in with the toasts was a solo by Mrs. Frank Baker of Lister, a resitation by Mrs. Geo. Jacks, Lister; and a quartette by Mr. and Mrs. Kolthammer and Mrs. F. Knott and Miss Murriel Knott of Canyon, which gave a much appreciated variety to the evening's proceedings.

Radio Broadcasting In Canada

The Canadian Government recently appointed a Royal Commission to study and make report on the whole subject of radio broadcasting in Canada. That Commission, headed by Sir John Aird, is at present in Europe studying the methods employed in Great Britain and some of the continental countries. It proposes to also study the methods followed in the United States, and, later, will hold public sittings throughout Canada with a view to obtaining the opinions of Canadian citizens.

The importance of this Commission's work can hardly be overstated. Radio has, in a few short years, come to occupy a vital position in the lives of the people, while the future possibilities of this newest form of entertainment, and its importance as a means of publicity, are such that the national interests demand that a well defined policy in the interests of all concerned, but more particularly in the interests of the Dominion itself, be developed with the least possible delay.

The question that naturally arises in the minds of patriotic Canadians is whether or not the radio in Canada is to be dominated by wealthy and powerful private interests in the United States, just as the moving picture business has been, or whether Canada will itself develop an acceptable system of national broadcasting.

It has to be recognized and accepted as a fact that the great United States moving picture corporations control the situation in Canada, if not through actual ownership and management of Canadian moving picture theatres, at least through the making and distribution of the films that are shown in this country. There can be no successful denial of the assertion that because of this control of films it is possible for United States ideas, sentiments, enterprises, modes of living, and general propaganda of all kinds, to be insiduously injected into the lives and thoughts of the Canadian people. In a word, one of the most powerful agencies for the dissemination of ideas throughout Canada is in the hands of private and wealthy corporations in a foreign country.

To a large extent the same situation has developed through the enormous circulation which United States magazines and periodicals of all kinds have secured in Canada. Apart from the effect which the reading matter in these periodicals has upon Canadian thought, the advertising matter constitutes a powerful agency attracting millions of Canadian dollars across the line for the purchase of United States products.

In Great Britain radio broadcasting is under the direction of the Government through the medium of a national broadcasting organization. Owners of receiving sets pay a license fee, and the money thus realized is expended in providing worthwhile programmes. In the United States, on the other hand, broadcasting is in the hands of private interests. Good programmes are nationally broadcasted, but they are paid for through advertising sandwiched in at intervals throughout the programmes. All this material, specially prepared for United States consumption and to meet the requirements and promote the interests of United States business, is carried through the air into hundreds of thousands of Canadian homes every day in the year.

It is not necessary to be anti-American, or in the slightest degree unfriendly to the United States, to nevertheless realize that this is not a good thing for Canada in a national sense. Our Canadian broadcasting stations are widely scattered over the Dominion. They have not the broadcasting power of the big U.S. stations. Nor have they the resources to finance the same type of high class and expensive programmes offered in the United States. Canadian national advertisers have not the same large market to appeal to, and consequently cannot afford to spend tens of thousands of dollars in radio advertising.

Furthermore, do the Canadian people prefer private control of radio broadcasting, financed on the basis of advertising, to the system which finds favor in Great Britain of national broadcasting financed through the payment of a reasonable annual license fee by owners of receiving sets who are the real beneficiaries of the broadcasts?

The influence of radio must be admitted. It already occupies a position along with the newspaper and the moving picture as a medium of information and a source of education and entertainment. It is here, and here to stay, to grow, to develop as perhaps few even now imagine. It will be a power for tremendous good or evil. It is essential that Canada, not neglecting the opportunity it presents, should adopt a wise policy in regard thereto.

Acid Stomach

Excess acid is the common cause of indigestion. It results in pain and sourness about two hours after eating. The quick corrective is an alkali which neutralizes acid. The best corrective is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia neutralizes instantly many times its volume in acid. It is harmless and tasteless and its action is quick. You will never rely on crude methods, never continue to suffer, when you learn how quickly, how pleasantly this premier method acts. Please let it show you—now.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions - any drugstore.

Papered With Postage Stamps

Inn Near Bognor, England, is Known As Stamp House

Near Bognor, where the King has been removed for his convalescence, there is an inn known as Stamp House. Its walls and ceilings are completely papered with old postage stamps, and festoons of them are looped from one side of a room to the other. The "collection" was started many years ago by a former host of the place, who had a passion for stamps, and papered his first room with them, it is believed as a result of a wager. Under the mellow varnish there must now be hundreds of thousands; and report has it that many in semi-hidden corners are rare and valuable.

BABY NOT GAINING? LOOK TO HIS DIGESTION

Babies can't gain when souring waste in a clogged digestive tract is forming gas, making them colicky, constipated and miserable. Just try the method doctors endorse, and millions of mothers know, and see how your baby improves. A few drops of purely-vegetable, harmless Fletcher's Castoria makes the most fretful, feverish baby or child comfortable in a jiffy. A few doses and he's digesting perfectly and gaining as he should. To get genuine Castoria, look for the Fletcher signature on the wrapper.

Strain Of City Life

The stress of living in the cities is today a more potent factor in causing insanity than the loneliness of the isolated farm and settlement on which emphasis has been so frequently laid in the past in Canada, according to Dr. W. M. English, medical superintendent of the Ontario Hospital, Brockville, with over 800 patients. On the other hand, telephones, motorcars and radios have broken down the isolation of the farmer and settler and insanity through loneliness is no longer found in the degree formerly known.

Heavy Oil Production

Growing Importance Of Alberta's Oil and Gas Fields

The steadily growing importance of Alberta's oil and gas fields is shown in recently published figures. The production of Alberta wells for 1928, is placed at 489,531 barrels as compared with 321,154 barrels in 1927. Of the 1928 production the Turner Valley field, in Southern Alberta, contributed 410,623 barrels of naphtha, and 70,734 barrels of crude oil, the remaining 8,174 barrels coming from the Wainwright field. The total production of natural gas for the province in 1928 is placed at 14,198,959 million cubic feet as compared with 12,933,801 million cubic feet in the previous year.

Where Nobody Is Young

Nobody is young in the little village of Bursledon, Hampshire. The inhabitants boast that their aggregate age, in proportion to the population, is the highest in the country. There are twenty-seven old folk whose years total 2,115—an average of seventy-eight each. Once Bursledon was a thriving community, but now strawberry growing is the only industry. All the young people have left for more fruitful fields.

The Value Of Birds

Only Protection Country Has Against Insect Enemies

It is estimated that 10,000 caterpillars could destroy every blade of grass on one acre of cultivated land. An insect-infested tree may contain 12,000,000 aphides. The bird population of the country has been estimated at from 700 to 1,000 per square mile, and these birds, few enough in number, are our best protection against the insect enemies which they were intended to destroy. The man who kills these insectivorous birds is helping to destroy his own country.

Internally and Externally It Is Good.—The crowning property of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is that it can be used internally for many complaints as well as externally. For sore throat, croup, whooping cough, pains in the chest, colic and many kindred ailments it has qualities that are unsurpassed. A bottle of it costs little and there is no loss in always having it at hand.

STORMY WEATHER HARD ON BABY

The stormy, blustery weather which Canadians experience during February and March is extremely hard on babies and young children. Conditions make it necessary for the mother to keep them confined to the house, whose rooms may be overheated or badly ventilated. The little ones catch cold and their whole system becomes racked. To guard against this a box of Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in the home and an occasional dose given the baby to keep him fit, or if a cold suddenly grips him to restore him to health again and keep him in good condition till the brighter, warmer days come along again.

Baby's Own Tablets are just what the mother needs for her little ones. They are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach; break up colds and simple fevers; banish constipation and indigestion and make the cutting of teeth easy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c. a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PREMIER KING ON THE QUESTION OF RESOURCES

Ottawa.—The whole vexed question of the return of the natural resources to the western provinces was ventilated in the House of Commons recently. In a lengthy speech, Premier Mackenzie King reviewed the history of the natural resources problem and outlined the position today.

In brief, the situation at present, as dealt with by the prime minister, is as follows:

The province of Alberta is now considering an offer from the Dominion government of the return of its natural resources coupled with the payment to it of a subsidy amounting to $562,000 annually for all time.

Saskatchewan has refused an offer of the transfer of its lands "without any strings attached," and the payment of the present subsidy.

Agreement has been reached to transfer to British Columbia lands in the Peace River block and the railway belt. At present officers of the departments concerned are working on the necessary accounting having to do with the transfer.

With respect to Manitoba, a commission is now engaged on matters concerned with the handing over to that province of its lawful resources.

The Prime Minister made only passing reference to the Seven Sisters Falls lease to the Winnipeg Electric Company. The leader of the opposition had been critical of the haste which Mr. Bennett claimed prompted the government in its return of the natural resources to Manitoba.

Earlier in the session, the Premier continued, the same gentleman had condemned the government in its delay in dealing with this matter. Mr. King remarked, amid laughter, that "the whole reason of the haste was to avoid delay."

For Educational Purposes

Brandon, Man.—That the Manitoba government set aside one-eighteenth of all the natural resources that came under provincial control for educational purposes will be urged as a result of a resolution passed unanimously by the annual convention of the Manitoba School Trustees Association.

Britain Will Adhere To Locarno Treaty

Has Not Considered Any Other Agreement With Foreign Powers

London, Eng.—Godfrey Locker-Lampson, under secretary of state for foreign affairs, assured the House of Commons that Great Britain would enter into no military agreement with other powers that would in any way be contrary to her obligations to Germany under the Locarno security pact.

He made this statement in answering one of the many questions propounded as a result of recent publication in Holland, of an alleged military pact between France and Belgium, the particular question being:

"Can assurance be given that no military discussion will be held with France or Belgium which would not include Germany, in order strictly to maintain British obligations under the Locarno pact?"

The reply was: "The member may be quite sure that we will do nothing contrary to the Locarno pact."

Volleys of questions regarding the alleged Franco-Belgian military agreement, and reports that Great Britain had some connection with it, were fired at the government in the House. Godfrey Locker-Lampson made categorical denial of the rumors, saying:

"Apart from the treaty of Locarno no agreement involving a military commitment has been concluded since the war between this government and Belgium, nor is any military agreement or understanding in existence between the British general staff and that of any foreign country."

Famous Flyer In Accident

Col. Lindberg and His Fiancee, Miss Morrow, Meet With Mishap

Mexico City.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's flying skill saved the life of his fiancee, Miss Anne Morrow, when their 'plane capsized on landing at Valbeta Field.

The colonel is confined to bed in the American embassy residence with what embassy attaches describe as a "slightly dislocated shoulder blade." Miss Morrow was badly frightened, but not injured.

Colonel Lindberg was returning from an air trip of several hours with the girl whom he will marry. The aeroplane, a four-passenger monoplane named the "City of Wichita," had been crippled by the loss of a landing wheel and the colonel faced a situation of unusual danger with the chances favoring a crash.

He brought the 'plane safely to earth and taxied for thirty yards on one wheel with the axle of the missing wheel dragging on the ground. Suddenly the 'plane pitched forward and turned completely over.

Later, Colonel Lindberg declared "this is nothing at all. It is not an accident; it is simply a mishap."

No Divorce Court For Ontario

Ottawa.—Defeat in the House of Commons of the bill to establish divorce courts in Ontario saw party lines badly broken on the division. Introduced as a private member's measure by J. S. Woodsworth (Labor, Winnipeg North Centre), the bill was defeated by 99 to 68. Premier Mackenzie King and Hon. Guthrie, acting Conservative leader, were not present for the division.

Application Is Dropped

Canadian Northeastern Not Building Railway Into Peace River Country

Victoria, B.C. — The Canadian Northeastern railway dropped its application for right to build into the Peace River country and will not conflict with any plans which may be made in that direction for the Pacific Great Eastern, the provincially-owned line. With its part of its original application dropped, approval of the private bills committee of the legislature was given to the company's request for right to build a line for 285 miles from Stewart, a tidewater port in northern British Columbia, to Fort Graham, in the central northern part of the province.

The Northeastern also dropped its request for right to build a branch up the Finlay river from Fort Graham for 100 miles, pending decision of the future of the government line.

Will Search For Italia Crew

Rome.—Italians who believe that it is still possible to find some trace of and perhaps even to rescue the six men who drifted away with the balloon part of the Nobile dirigible Italia are attempting to raise funds for a new Arctic expedition next summer. They would lease an ice-breaker and expect the loan of a seaplane from the Italian Government.

Piloted Two Zeppelins

Berlin.—Walter Scherz, a veteran helmsman of the air who stood at the wheel of two Zeppelins when they crossed the Atlantic to the United States, died here from balloon gas poisoning.

Employment Situation Shows Improvement

Better In Canada Than In Any February On Record

Ottawa.—Employment in Canada on February 1, was in better condition than on that date in any year on record, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Reports from 6,391 firms showed a total of 933,943 employees as compared with 921,404 on January 1.

The contraction on the prairie provinces was less than on February 1, 1928. The situation continued better than on the same date in any year on record. Manufacturing and logging advanced, while there was a shrinkage in trade, construction, transportation and communications.

The situation was also better in British Columbia as compared with the same date last year. There was substantial improvement in mining but logging, manufacturing and transportation were slacker.

Dynamite Plot Failed

Explosive Is Found In Office Of Premier Taschereau, Of Quebec

Quebec.—Questioned as to a rumour that an attempt had been made his life, Premier Taschereau stated that when he went to his office in the parliament buildings at 10.45 p.m. he found a stick of dynamite on the floor with a half-burned fuse attached. The fuse had been extinguished by some agency after burning a few inches.

Premier Taschereau had been attending a committee meeting in the parliament buildings and at its conclusion returned to his office.

Switching on the lights at once he noted the dynamite lying on the floor.

Premier Taschereau had the explosive removed by police and it was discovered to be dynamite of the most powerful type.

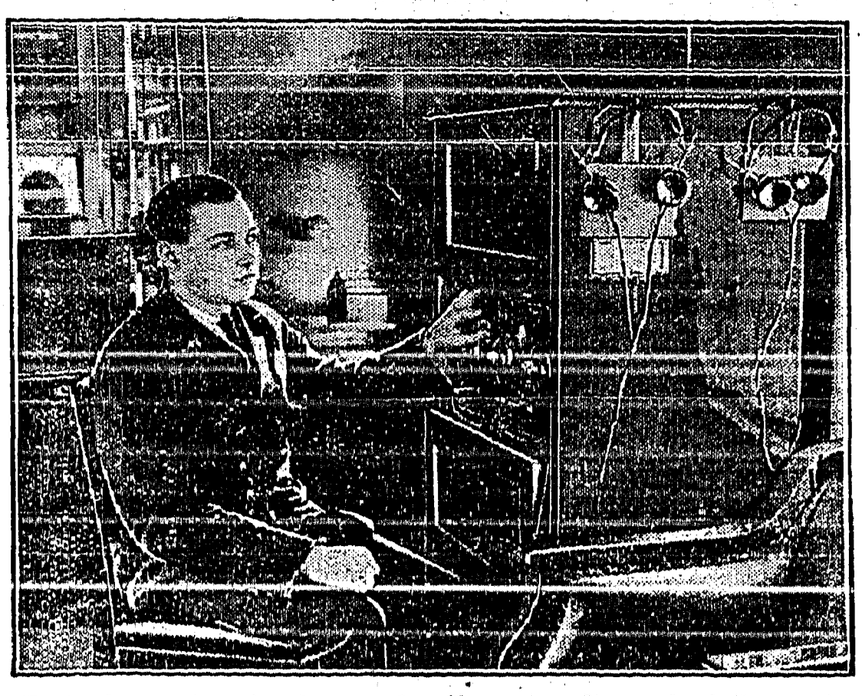
Pioneer Lake Captain Dead

John Cousens Saw First Steamship To Sail Lake Superior

Port Arthur, Ont.—Marine Captain John Cousens is dead here aged 82 years. At Sault Ste. Marie he saw the passing of the Rescue, the first steamship to sail Lake Superior. He sailed on the Chicora, famous blockade runner.

In 1871 before the advent of the Canadian Pacific Railway, he carried mail over the ice route between Duluth and Port Arthur. He served with the Queen's Own in the Fenian Raid and was one of the guard of honor at the reading of the proclamation of Confederation in Toronto, in 1867. Later he served with Wolseley in the Northwest.

Radio Operator Has Travel Record



Trained operators in charge of radio-equipped cars in daily service on the Canadian National Railways travelled a total of 6,134,726 miles during 1928, and the most travelled operator during the twelve months was R. K. Anderson, who may well lay claim to a world's record for his performance. Mr. Anderson covered 153,050 miles on duty, a distance which represents the circumnavigation of the globe several times. This operator is usually on duty on board the International Limited, the fast daily train operating between Montreal and Chicago. Trains on eight runs on the National System carry radio equipped cars, the Canadian National Railways being the first in the world to offer radio as part of the service provided for passengers.

TESTIMONY GIVEN ON MANITOBA POWER DEAL

Winnipeg.—Negotiations between the Winnipeg Electric Company and the Bracken Government regarding the Seven Sisters Power site were not affected by any advance knowledge of the Hogg report conveyed to the private firm, Edward Anderson, K.C., president, stated recently Before the Royal Commission investigating charges made by Colonel F. G. Taylor against the Bracken government, Mr. Anderson testified that the agreement was made after "real, genuine, honest, bona-fide negotiations."

The Winnipeg Electric Company would not have made the bargain as it resulted had they known the nature of the Hogg report, Mr. Anderson stated, but would have "held out" for better arrangements. The report submitted by Dr. T. H. Hogg, consulting engineer for the Ontario Hydro Commission, has been regarded as the influence leading the Bracken government toward leasing the Seven Sisters site to the Winnipeg Electric Company.

That negotiations with the Bracken government almost "blew up" owing to the fact that A. W. McLimont, at that time president of the Winnipeg Electric Company, considered the government was "driving too hard a bargain," was stated by Mr. Anderson.

Counsel appearing before the Royal Commission have intended no imputations whatever against the character, integrity or sincerity of Dr. T. H. Hogg, who submitted an expert report to the Bracken government, it was announced by Chief Justice MacDonald, after an examination of documents.

A telegram had been received from Dr. Hogg referring to "insinuations" reflecting on his integrity and made at yesterday's session of the commission. It was not stated whether he would be called to appear, though his telegram had mentioned that he wished to be heard as soon as possible.

Forced To Swallow Knife

Toronto Thugs Use Inhuman Method On Victim

Toronto.—Angered at the small amount of money they found on his person, two thugs forced Angelo Avgusta, 35, Toronto, to swallow a jack knife, more than four inches in length.

Angelo is now in hospital where doctors hope to save his life.

According to the victim one of his assailants attempted to make him swallow the knife with the blade open but his accomplice interfered and the blade was closed.

Women Refused Franchise

Quebec.—By a vote of 50 to 16, the Quebec legislative assembly killed the bill introduced by Willia Tremblay, Conservative M.L.A., for Maisonneuve, to give the women of Quebec the vote in provincial elections. This is a gain of five votes for the cause of suffrage as compared with last year.

Commercial Suicide

Following the meeting of the Sales Service Limited in Vernon a short time ago The Vernon News approached R. B. Staples, Manager, and requested that he prepare an article setting forth his views on the proposal to create a central selling agency for the Okanagan fruit crop. In response to this request the following article is presented.

The term "One Central Selling Agency" is used to describe the idea of forcing by compulsory legislation all fruit and vegetable products grown in British Columbia through one single marketing channel. There is nothing new about the idea itself as it aims to bring about by compulsion one hundred per cent. co-operative marketing and the proper term to describe the present movement is "Compulsory Co-operation."

During the past six years an attempt has been made to secure one hundred per cent. co-operation in the marketing of fruit and vegetables by voluntary means. This movement started out in the Spring of 1923 with 85 per cent. of the tonnage signed under contract, but in spite of being strongly supported by both growers and business men throughout the province, the movement has not been successful in increasing the tonnage being marketed co-operatively, and in fact co-operative tonnage has steadily decreased. It is due to the failure to bring 100 per cent. of the tonnage under the control of voluntary co-operation that we have the idea of compulsory co-operation advocated. Apparently no one has stopped to give consideration to the idea that possibly compulsory co-operation might fail for the same reasons that have brought about the failure of voluntary co-operation.

Just at this point we want to make it quite clear that when we speak of the failure of co-operation we are referring entirely to the failure of co-operation to secure the objective aimed at by its advocates. The co-operative business which has been built up in connection with the co-operative movement is far from being a failure. The credit for the efficiency of this selling organization must, however, be given to the men forming its business executive and not to the fact that the marketing of our products can be successfully handled through province wide co-operation. In other words, it seems probable that the co-operative selling organization is effective not because of co-operation, but in spite of co-operation.

Unity of Interests Essential

There is one point in connection with the principle of co-operation on which all are agreed, namely that successful co-operation is possible only where complete unity of interest exists. Not only is this statement reasonable in theory, but it will be found that in actual practise no co-operative movement has been successful where it was not based on the existence of common interest as between the different units comprising the movement.

It is conceivable, for instance, that the milk producers of the Fraser Valley might make a success of co-operative marketing due to the fact that there would appear to be no reason why the producers of a product such as milk should not have a common marketing interest. In like manner it is conceivable that co-operation would be successful as a means of marketing the wheat crop of Western Canada.

We Fail to Recognize

What we have failed to recognize, is that no complete unity of interest exists as a basis for co-operation as between the various districts growing fruits and vegetables, nor is it possible to establish a common interest as between the growers of the various varieties which we have to market. For instance: Wealthy apples would be profitable were it not for the fact that their marketing period conflicts with the marketing period of McIntosh. McIntosh apples would be tremendously more profitable if it were not for the fact that this variety is forced to meet competition from such varieties as Jonathans and Wealthies. The Jonathan apple is unprofitable due to the fact that the McIntosh has forced Jonathans to be sold at prices below the cost of production. The interests of the Wealthy grower in Salmon Arm are directly opposed to the interests of the McIntosh grower in Penticton. The grower of late McIntosh in the Kootenays has absolutely nothing in common, from a marketing point of view, with the grower of Jonathans in the Kelowna district.

Undoubtedly we have been attempting to make a success of co-operation where no possible basis for successful co-operation existed, and without the necessary common marketing interest existing as between the various units compulsory co-operation would be even more of a failure than would voluntary co-operation. In fact, in view of the conditions which exist compulsory co-operation, as a means of correcting the evils supposed to be existent in the fruit and vegetable industry, would not only be doomed to failure but would be something worse than a foolish experiment due to the fact that it would tend to perpetuate the losses which are the burden of our industry today.

A Wrong Conception

It is interesting to note that the advocates of compulsory co-operation advance as the principle argument in favor of their theory the fact that under this system of marketing "Losses would be evenly distributed" over the entire industry. Possibly no stronger argument could be advanced against the principle of compulsory marketing through one central channel than the fact that its primary aim is an equitable distribution of loss. That such a proposition should be given any consideration whatever is due in the first place to competition as between the various selling organizations; and in the second place to the fact that the belief exists, among a considerable percentage of those interested, that much of the loss existing in the fruit and vegetable business today is due to an element of unfairness in this competition.

Competition Is Between Varieties

The administration of the Produce Marketing Act, by the Committee of Direction, has gone a long way towards eliminating this unfair competition, but during this long crop year of 1928 prices set by the Committee of Direction have failed to make growers' returns profitable for our apple crop which is the most important single unit of production. When we consider that in the neighborhood of 1,000 cars of apples moved to our domestic markets, priced by the Committee at a figure which was below the cost of production, it is not surprising that the aggregate results were unsatisfactory. When we are told that these 1,000 cars were made up of varieties which had to be priced at this low figure in order to sell in competition with so-called better varieties was in turn reduced by the sale of cheap apples, we are forced to the conclusion that the cause of our losses is not competition as between the various selling agencies but it undoubtedly is competition as between the varieties now being produced.

Would Industry Be Better Off?

Compulsory co-operation would undoubtedly eliminate competition as between the selling agencies by the very simple process of eliminating the selling agencies, but by so-doing it would leave the industry in no better position to place a profitable price on unprofitable varieties, and our losses would be just as great as ever. In fact, if it is intended that the McIntosh variety, for instance, shall be saddled with Jonathan or Wealthy losses then all we can possibly gain by compulsory co-operation would be the perpetuation of our troubles.

Compulsory co-operation, in our opinion, offers nothing whatever towards solving the problem of making the industry profitable, and in addition has objectionable features from a marketing point of view.

Create Sales Resistance

The formation of one central selling agency for all of our products will undoubtedly be looked upon as a combine, and the natural result of forcing purchasers to secure their supplies from one source will be to create sales resistance that will affect our distribution. Sales resistance due to such a situation would undoubtedly take the form of directing the attention of buyers towards sources of supply other than British Columbia.

Tends to Lessen Distribution

Compulsory co-operation would also lessen distribution by eliminating the effective sales pressure which inevitably follows as a result of competitive selling efforts. J. A. Grant, Markets Commissioner, in addressing the Penticton convention this year expressed the opinion that maximum distribution was being approximated in the sales of B. C. apples on the prairies. For this desirable marketing situation credit must be given to competitive selling effort on the part of all shippers, including the smaller concerns who solicit sales from buyers who would not be approached by larger organizations. One central selling agency handling our entire output would be forced to ignore certain avenues of distribution now being reached by smaller shippers with the results that distribution of our products would be materially less than under the present system of competitive selling.

Difficulties In Merchandising

It must be kept in mind also that the administration of an Act of Parliament which would make compulsory co-operation possible presents certain serious difficulties from a merchandising point of view. The advocates of compulsory co-operation have said very little about the practical working of their plan. We take it, however, that since the whole idea is based on the confiscation by act of parliament of products which ordinarily are the private property of individuals, that this confiscation of property must necessarily carry with it the assumption by the Government of responsibility for the disposal of the product and for accounting to the grower. Evidently responsibility would have to rest somewhere, and it seems more than likely that the marketing of our fruit and vegetable products would become a department of government. This would be a calamity both to the government and to the industry.

Politics and business are an impossible combination, for the simple reason that business executives working under government control have always been able to get the tax payer to cover up their mistakes. Moreover, government control of business seems to tend towards the increasing of overhead expense in all departments, and particularly in the increase of employees, to such an extent that no industry can possibly bear the burden.

Prices Set By Committee

The 1928 season gave to British Columbia the largest crop in its history, and it now seems certain that the existing marketing agencies, co-operative and independent, will be successful in completing the marketing of this big crop. Prices will be unsatisfactory, but the prices at which the 1928 crop was sold were supplied the marketing agencies by a Government constituted committee of direction. The marketing agencies were not responsible for these prices, nor were they responsible for the conditions which appeared to make these prices necessary. In view of these conditions, and of the very large distribution obtained, it must be admitted that we have in existence today efficient marketing agencies which have succeeded in effectively accomplishing the distribution of our biggest crop.

Commercial Suicide

The advocates of "One Central Selling Agency," or compulsory co-operation, give the idea its correct name, would do away with these marketing agencies, both independent and co-operative; agencies which have taken years to develop to their present efficiency.

Without guaranteeing to lessen in any way the burden of the industry; without even recognizing what is really wrong, compulsory co-operation is unsound in principle and would be found unworkable commercially. Compulsory co-operation is nothing more nor less than an attempt at commercial suicide.

Explanations and Comments

Christ's Commission To Baptize All the Nations, Matthew 28.19, 20.—Upon a mountain in Galilee after the resurrection of Jesus, the eleven disciples saw Him and worshiped Him. He told them of His universal dominion ("All authority hath been given me in heaven and on earth"), and gave them His world-wide commission to make His power a reality: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all nations."

"Remember, fellow Christians, how wide was the horizon of Jesus. Our horizon widens from cradle to home, school, city, country, and, with some, perhaps, to the last man. But to Jesus the outside rim of the earth was the first horizon that He saw, and the last. When He was born, good tidings came unto whom—the Jews? 'Unto all people'; 'among all nations'; 'throughout the whole world'; 'to every creature'; 'to the uttermost part of the earth'; are Christ's words. 'Go ye into all the world' is his limitless command, his boundless expectation."—Malthie D. Babcock.

Jesus directed His followers to baptize disciples into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever He commanded them. "Baptism is (1) into the name of the Father, as our Creator, Preserver, and Benefactor, who rules us, as free agents, by His love. It is (2) into the name of the Son; in baptism we assent, as Peter did, 'Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God,' and consent, as Thomas did, 'My Lord, and my God.' We give ourselves to be taught, and saved, and ruled, by Christ. It is (3) into the name of the Holy Spirit. We give ourselves to His guidance, as our Sanctifier, Teacher, Guide and Comforter."

And then Jesus gave His wonderful words of comfort and encouragement and cheer; "Lo, I am with you always" (not will be, but am), "even unto the end of the world!"

"Our responsibility for missionary work is patent in the command of Christ; our power for that work is perfect in this great promise of Christ.

What "It" Is

Perhaps this can be applied generally to all husbands, but a woman in the Willesden police court recently defined the word "It" as used by a famous woman novelist. The clerk pointed to a man in court and said "Is that your husband" She replied, "Yes, sir, that's it."

LIFE WAS A BURDEN

Health Restored Through the Use Of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

"I am writing to express my gratitude for what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me," says Mrs. W. J. Dowling, Tottenham, Ont., and further says: "I was so badly run down that I felt that life was a burden. The doctor said my trouble was due to poor blood, but his medicine did not help me. My face was sallow, my lips bloodless and at the least exertion my heart would palpitate so violently that I would have to lie down. My feet and legs would swell and cramp, and all my friends thought I was in a decline. In this condition I was urged by a friend to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I got three boxes, and to my delight, by the time I had used them I began to feel better. I got a further supply and kept on taking them. Daily I felt myself growing stronger. The color returned to my cheeks and lips and I felt a new interest in life. To sum up I can now say that I am feeling fine, for which I give the credit to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which I strongly recommend to all weak girls and women."

For a moment Connie was silent. "When—when my dreams come true," she responded with an embarrassed smile.

Then he told her of the city and its ways and the things people did She listened, not with amazement, but with a contented smile, as though what he told her was confirmation of her dreams. But when he told her of the grand opera, the music, the costumes and the singing, her grey eyes wide with longing, she sighed deeply.

Donald's voice trailed to a drowsy close; his chest rose and fell regularly, his features relaxed. He felt as though he were floating, exquisitely floating, on a sea of fleecy clouds that was bearing him softly away. A delicious langour enthralled him—an enchantment drowsy and dim. He felt himself drifting, drifting . . . He was asleep.

The willows at the lower end of the meadow were pushed cautiously aside, and Hand's head appeared in the opening. For two days he had lain hidden awaiting an opportunity to waylay Donald. The day after the fight he had boarded the train for the coast, but had slipped from the car at the station below.

His face—unprepossessing at its best—was now a horrible sight. The thick lips were swollen and cracked, the eyes discoloured and puffed, and the broken teeth bared in a snarl as he saw Donald lying by the stream. Every hour since the fight Hand's hatred for Donald had grown blacker. He would show him that he, Ole Hand, deserved his reputation as a fighter. He would hold this crippled man helpless while he showered blows on his unprotected face, make him cry out for mercy on bended knees; perhaps kill him. His hatred grew hotter and deeped as he watched him lying peacefully beside the girl who had been the caush of the fight in which he had been ignominiously whipped.

Connie sat gazing down on the sleeper. A sudden thought seized her, bringing a warm flush to her cheeks Why not? No one would ever know. Would she dare? She glanced timorously about her, then leaned slowly over, her curls falling about her face, and touched her soft lips to Donald's cheek.

A bluejay screamed derisively Connie came to her feet, her face crimson. Donald stirred, opened his eyes, and painfully raised himself.

"I'm sorry, Connie," he apologized "it was very rude of me to go to sleep."

A moment later he walked down the hill. Connie accompanied him a short distance, then turned up a steep path, and from a high, rocky ridge she watched his retreating figure as he turned toward the dam.

A huge bucket on a cable, that had been used during construction for carrying men and material across the roaring chasm below the falls, still hung above the boiling waters.

For Donald there was a certain thrill, a keen exhilaration, in swinging in mid-air in this crude conveyance. He stepped into the bucket and with his one good arm pulled it along the rusty cable.

The Breed, hidden near the trail saw Donald as he walked toward the dam. The venomous look in his eyes gave place to one of strained interest as he saw the two men skulking menacingly after the unsuspecting man. With a feeling of malignant exultation, as he sensed disaster to the man he hated, he hobbled to the trail and furtively followed.

From the heights above Connie saw the sneaking figures as they crouched low against the edge of the dark spruces and at once divined their murderous object. For an instant she was paralyzed with terror Her lips refused to move and her limbs grew numb.

The men moved cautiously as they approached their intended victim, fearing that he might be armed. As Hand saw Donald suspended over the river a look of fiendish elation crossed his features. Here was a chance to dispose of his enemy with no trace of the crime. He tore a fire-axe from the wall of the tool house and ran to the swaying cable

"Joe! Joe! Stop them. Stop them!"

Screaming again, she plunged straight down the hillside in a mad race to reach the scene of action. Running like a deer, stumbling and falling, her breath coming in short gasps, she ran wildly on. Snarls of the thorny crabapple tore at her, devil's-club lacerated her face and hands, but she felt no pain "O God," she prayed aloud, "help me to save him! Help me save him!"

Donald's face blanched at the sound of the axe as it bit into the heavy cable. He looked down at the jagged rocks and seething waters below. Then with closed eyes and a prayer on his lips he tore in mad frenzy at the rope. Desperately he tugged with both hands, although the pain from his broken wrist sent a wave of torment up his arm that sickened him.

No man can measure the speed of thought in a crisis; even the sluggish brain of the Breed functioned rapidly. Connie was not for him. Her happiness was bound up in the man working feverishly at the haul-back There was not one chance in a million that he would gain the safety of the cliff before the strands parted to plunge him to eternity. As he heard the crashing of Connie's slender body as she tore down the hill, a softness crept into his eyes. With a speed incredible in one with his pitiful deformity, he ran in a series of bounding steps to the edge of the bluff. The noise of tumbling waters drowned the sound of his approach. Just as Hand raised his axe for the final blow, the muscular arms of the Breed were flung about him. Emitting a startled curse, the big man turned and with a twist of his powful shoulders flung his dusky assailant to the ground. As he rose Hand swung viciously at him with the axe

With a quick movement the Breed dodged, and the weapon flashed over his head, flew from the big man's hands, and struck his confederate a glancing blow on the shoulder that brought from him a howl of pain. Again the Breed's arms closed about his adversary's waist. Mad with the pain in his shoulder, the foreigner drew a long, keen knife, circled warily about the two wrestling men until he found an opening, then plunged the knife to the hilt in the Breed's left side. The strickcen man slithered from his opponent's arms and fell a crumpled heap to the ground.

Sick and giddy, Donald stumbled from the bucket, seized the axe and advanced weakly toward Hand. Hand's accomplice, taking one look at the prostrate body, turned and fled terror-stricken to the woods. Hand hesitated for a moment, then followed heavily after.

At this moment, Connie, with clothes torn and hair dishevelled, broke from the woods, and with a cry of pity flung herself to the ground by the Breed's side and placed his head on her lap. The eyes of the wounded man flickered slowly open. He tried to speak, but a strong convulsion shook his frame from head to foot and he writhed in desperate agony.

Connie's face as she lifted it to Donald was drawn with grief. "Get me some water please," she said brokenly.

The dying man's lips moved. Connie leaned closer.

"I—I—love you," he whispered faintly, "I—saved him—for you."

A ghastly pallor spread over his features and his lips were widely parted in a struggle for breath. Again his lips moved in a fluttering whisper. "Connie—will—you—kiss me?"

As Connie pressed her tear-wet face to his the pain-contorted features relaxed in a smile of wonderful peace and his eyes closed.

When Donald returned Connie's head was bowed and she was weeping softly.

"How is he, Connie?" he questioned gently.

"He's dead."

Donald removed his hat and knelt with bowed head.

"He died for me," he choked.

"And for me," she whispered inaudibly.

CHAPTER XVI.

Lest we tire of monotony, Nature gives us a change of colour for each of the flowering seasons. Flowers of every hue may be found through the different months. Pink for May, red for June, blue and pink for July, and during August royal robes of gold and purple clothe the hills and valleys.

The last week of August brought to Summit Lake a pageantry of colour that the Coast region is denied owing to the persistent rains that retard the ripening of the leaf. The deciduous trees were already withdrawing their life-giving fluid from the leaves to store it in their roots until spring. The willow, vine maple, birch and alder along the creeks and lake-shore held touches of autumnal colouring; while on the hills the yellowed leaves of the cottonwood were brilliant in their setting of sober dark green conifers.

A gaudy red were the vine maples, but there was a leafy beauty greater than theirs. The flowering dogwood blazed from every nook and cranny. The ripening of the dogwood gives to its leaves a flame that burns with a fierce glow; a glow that further ripening deepens until its crimson flush becomes the loveliest hue of the British Columbia woods.

The fireweed, or willow herb, that in July gives to the open spaces a gorgeous tint of bluey pink, were now loosing a flock of seeds to float away like tiny parachutes. Each small bit of fluff held a minute germ of life that would build a plant as large as its parent when, dropped by the friendly wind, it reaches a fertile spot. The stately cottonwood were sending out a life-fluff as tiny as that from the smaller plants. Thistles, cat-tails and asters hurried to join the silken clouds until the air was misty with these germ balloons, seeking their winter's rest. The red elderberry and its magenta neighbour, the thimble berry, with its truculent Scotch cap, gave to the woods a material flame.

A curious timidity had come over the birds; not only were they quiet, but they were no longer to be found in their usual haunts. In some retired spot they were moulting. While the weather was at its best, and food was the most plentiful, they were dressing themselves in a new set of feathers for their long flight to the south. The tops of the tall pines were filled with sweet twitterings, of flutterings out and in, wing trails and quick short flights. A flock of waxwings had gathered for the migration. They would not leave for some time yet, but the change had come. Birds from the north had arrived, creeping south by easy stages, taking plenty of time in their journey—the freest creatures that live, staying or going as they feel inclined.

To Check "FLU," Grippe

Fights the Germs in the Throat Before They Invade Other Parts of the Body.

EFFECTIVE PREVENTIVE MEASURES EXPLAINED

Simple precautions taken now will enable you to fight dreaded "Flu" which is sweeping rapidly through the whole country. The germs of Influenza gain access to the body through the mouth and throat. Keep the throat healthy and you go a long way towards stopping the trouble. An effective means of prevention is to garble the throat three or four times daily with Nerviline. Half a teaspoonful of Nerviline in water makes a most efficient gargle. The germ-killing properties of Nerviline quickly destroy any bacteria in the mouth or throat. If the chest is sore, if the throat is hoarse, if you have a cough—be sure, to rub the neck and chest with Nerviline. Every drop of it will rub in, and out will come the congestion.

Of course it is absolutely necessary to house-clean the system with Dr. Hamilton's Pills which stimulate the eliminating organs, and rid the system of disease-breeding wastes. This combination treatment of Nerviline and Dr. Hamilton's Pills will give prompt and entirely satisfactory results.

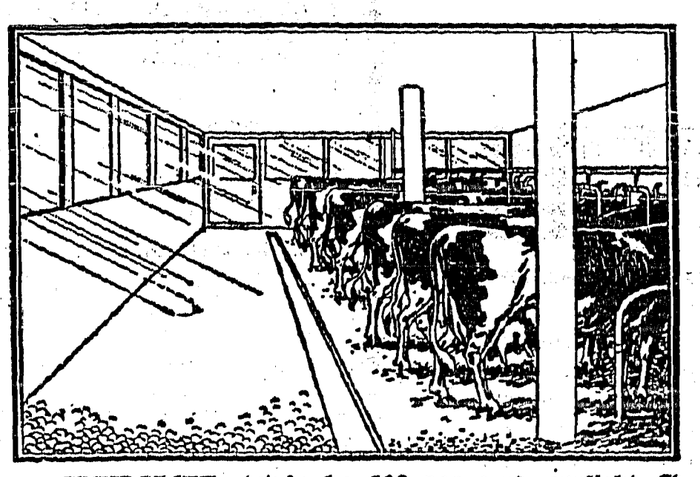
WINDOLITE
The Improved Glass Substitute
MADE IN ENGLAND
COMES WITH A MESSAGE OF HEALTH



THE sun is the all-powerful life producer, Nature's universal disinfectant and germ destroyer, as well as stimulant and tonic. WINDOLITE is the sun's most important ally.

Medical research has definitely proved that from the point of view of Health and Hygiene, the most effective among the sun's rays are the Ultra-Violet rays, which possess the greatest power for the prevention and cure of disease and debility.

Science has further established that ordinary window glass does not allow the passage of Ultra-Violet rays, so that by using glass we are artificially excluding these vital health-giving rays. Therefore, the invention of WINDOLITE has completely satisfied the long-felt want. Exhaustive experiments have conclusively proved that it is a most effective substitute for glass, that it freely admits the Ultra-Violet rays, and that its use has a most beneficial effect on the growth and development of plants and chickens and on the well-being of cattle, enabled for the first time to have healthy light instead of darkness in their sheds.

Indeed, the discovery of WINDOLITE has during the last six years completely revolutionized gardening, given a new stimulus to poultry breeding, increasing the egg-laying capacity and fertility of chickens, has greatly improved the health of cattle and is now being used in domestic and household requirements.

WINDOLITE stands for 100 per cent. sunlight. It makes light but strong windows for cattle sheds, dairy stables, poultry houses, brooders and all out buildings. It is economical, unbreakable, flexible and is easy to cut and fit. It is now being successfully used for sunrooms, verandahs, schools, factories, hospitals, sanitariums, hot beds, plant coverings and greenhouses. It keeps out cold—will not crack or chip,—cuts with an ordinary pair of scissors and is easy to fit. WINDOLITE is supplied in rolls any length but in one width of 36 inches only. A square yard of WINDOLITE weighs about 14 ozs., while a square yard of glass of ordinary thickness, weighs about 135 to 190 ozs. The improved WINDOLITE requires no varnish. WINDOLITE is made in England.

Price $1.50 Per Square Yard, f.o.b., Toronto.
