Knights of Columbus

Held Special Session in Cranbrook for Exemplification of their Degrees --- Banquet at Hotel Cranbrook

The hotels filled to their capacity on last Sunday evening with a great number of interested strangers from many points in the States and the surrounding districts. For once in a while the Opera house opened for a Sunday performance by the National Opera company of Michael Balfe's masterpiece, "The Bohemian Girl," so that the many visitors, as well as the lads of the Gonzaga College baseball team had an excellent entertainment wherewith to pass an otherwise inevitably dull evening. Next morning we knew that the Knights of Columbus, the great Catholic order, held the center of the stage for their convention of exemplification of their degrees.

It may not be generally known that Roman Catholics cease to belong to their church the moment they join any secret order bound by oath and having a ritual of its own. In the old times of the early part of the nineteenth century, or perhaps to the middle of that century, the popes, cardinals and bishops frequently were members of the Masonic order, but some time in the sixties the edict came from Rome prohibiting all active participation in oath bound societies, On this account certain influential people living at New Haven, Conn., seeing the necessity for the existence of some social and beneficial order in close affiliation with the Catholic church, founded the Knights of Columbus, in which the obligations are all strictly on honor and not on oath. Its relations with the church are essentially and cordially intimate to the end that young members may be made better citizens and more loyal subjects. Many of the clergymen of the Eastern States and of Eastern Canada are members, while the vast majority of those in the west belong to the order, the certified membership of which now exceeds 237,000. Large though the membership is, it is growing with a rapidity which speaks in no uncertain voice of its tremendous vitality. The creation of this order was necessary. The extent of its membership, the speed of its advance and the rapidity of its ramifications into every corner of the States and Canada constitute the measure of the necessity which gave it birth. It is today a force to be seriously reckoned with in the social, and very particularly in the moral progress of the places where its councils exist, since it insists on its members being practical Catholics and not such by name merely. It adds to its force by minding its own affairs, by going its own way and carefully keeping out of anything that in the slightest degree savors of politics and in this manner antagonizes no one.

The members of the order and the candidates for initiation assembled at the Knights of Columbus' hall on Baker street a little before eight on Monday morning and proceeded, some seventy-five of them, to mass at the parish church, Rev. Louis Choinel, P.P., officiating. At one p.m the regular council work began at the Opera house, which had been specially arranged for the occasion. The celebrated Spokane council degree team, consisting of District Deputy Frank J. Dorsey, as commander-in-chief, Robert E. Lee, Philip Dunne, T. V. Brown, P. H. Murphy, Joseph T. Skerrett, Lister P. Edge, T. T. Schiblin (Colfax), Dr. P. J. Gallagher, and W. R. Orendorff had charge of the work in which they were assisted by Joseph Ryan, Grand Knight, and W. E. Cline, Past Grand Knight, of the local council. The Spokane contingent is a most redoubtable band of able persuaders, eloquent preachers, profound and versatile actors—an aggregation pledged to compel any mother's son who ever wore a hat to think twice and a half times before he lets his breath slip over his tongue in speech. The business of the first degree began at 1.30 p.m. and the entire session of the three degrees was finished, down to the minutest detail, by 8 p.m. To those who know anything of the matter this shows the perfection of training and skilled organization attained by the Spokane team and suggests both comments and contrasts, if there were any useful object to be served by exploring the obvious. Their work at all points and in every regard was as equally beyond criticism as it was beyond praise. It could not be bettered.

During the day every train had been bringing in contingents of delegates and visitors so that before 9.30—the hour set for the banquet at the Cranbrook hotel—there were friends from Spokane, Coeur d'Alene City, Colfax, Moyie, Fernie, Nelson, Creston, Fort Steele, Hosmer, New Michel, Coleman, Bellevue and Lethbridge.

Cranbrook is famous for its hospitality and the Knights of Columbus are certainly doing their share, and that in no niggardly fashion or manner, to maintain the reputation of the city in this regard. Close on a hundred of their guests sat down to what may be called a very swagger spread, indeed. The tables were beautifully set and most lavishly decorated with cut flowers. There was that indescribable feminine touch of perfect taste about the whole thing. The viands and the attendance were in exact keeping with the decorations. The Cranbrook hotel has scored another success in the big banquet line.

There were "lashins" of fun at the function which, from start to finish, went with a verve and a rush of genuine hilarity and good fellowship needing no artificial stimulus under the hearty presidency of the Past Grand Knight, W. E. Cline.

The following was the toast list: "The Church," Rev. Father Choinel; "The King," Rev. Father Beck, the Mission; "Welcome to our Guests," Judge Joseph Ryan, Grand Knight; "Our Spokane Friends," Frank J. Dorsey, District Deputy; "Sunny Alberta, where the wind doth never blow," John E. Kennedy and Rev. Father Rosenthal, Lethbridge; "Think Twice Before You Speak," Rev. Father Purcell, Coeur d'Alene City, Idaho; "Be In Earnest," Philip Dunne, Spokane; "Hands Across the will ever remember them as marking the Spokane bar.

The speeches, taken all round, were away beyond the average and some were sufficiently notable to warrant the prediction that those who had the intense pleasure to hear them Boundary Line," Lister P. Edge, of a great occasion. The District Deputy, Frank J. Dorsey, is a splendid public speaker and was heard at his best as he taught the younger members never to be ashamed or afraid to publicly live up to the principles of the order, that is, to conduct themselves always as Catholic gentlemen. He showed, too, the warm grip of the heart and the kindly friendship which exists between Spokane and Cranbrook and wound up by telling a story of Judge Ryan, who, he said, once attended a private funeral with him down in Washington. It is customary to speak a few words for memory's sake of the deceased on those sad occasions. "I had not the honor," said the judge, "of the acquaintance of the antiquated gentleman we have placed, with due ceremonial, in permanent cold storage, but I shall improve the opportunity by telling you something of Cranbrook, the fairest spot that nestles neath the mighty Rockies, where there is more sunlight to the square yard——" The audience roared at the joke on the judge.

Father Purcell fairly electrified his hearers. He is a natural, born orator, a really great man and a power for good in his country. He told in beautifully simple language how, seven and twenty years ago, he worked as a laborer on the construction gang of the first railway which was run through the desert of Idaho, and yet, out of the rough nettle of his bitter experiences, he plucked the jewel of many a humorous situation and the means whereby he won his way to the priesthood whereof he is a renowned and honored member. He told of an old Irish woman at Bonner's Ferry, who, having had her little home expropriated by the railway, then under construction, for the sum of $450, was offered $180 by whoever had charge of the paying department. 'An' what would you do, Father," said she to him—he was a priest at this time—"if you were treated like that?" "I'd go after them with a gun," he answered. The following morning the old lady was seen on the street staggering under the weight of an old Springfield rifle some seven feet long and with the caliber of a stove pipe. Down she bore on the railway office and brought her old arquebus into action. Drawing a bead on the skull of the hold-up artist she said: "Hand over that $450 o' mine, or I'll make a coroner's corpse out o' ye. I'll count three. Wan! ——" She got her money there and then. "I never thought she would take the advice," commented Father Purcell. "It was one of the occasions when I failed to think twice before I spoke." His speech was a blend of humor, pathos, sound advice and a splendid tribute to manly pluck, perseverance, fair dealing and clean manliness. He will come to Cranbrook again.

Lister P. Edge, one of the youngest and most successful lawyers in Spokane, a partner in the firm of McCarthy and Edge, is a brilliant speaker. His address was as interesting as it was eloquent. He is Canadian born and the terms of the toast were most ably handled by him.

Joseph Skerrett gave a capital and pathetic recital of the famous "Surgeon's Story." Miss Mable Wellman most kindly contributed a most artistic accompaniment to Judge Ryan's song "The Heart Bowed Down," which he sang in his very best style and voice. About midnight "God Save the King," closed a memorable day and a markedly successful series of functions.

The following is a complete list of the candidates initiated:

Leon Joseph Wood, John Caufield, John J. Harrington, Clifton Riel, Louis A. Lanthier, James McCool, Andrew Kennedy, Joseph Wagner, Robert Aubertin, Charles Mooney, John Strong, Alex. F. McDonald, Alex. McDonald, John Elmer, George L. Holland, Augustin J. Sutherland, Robert J. McAuley, Daniel A. Gillis, Daniel McDougall, Patrick Cunningham, Thos. Lacey, Jerry M Donovan, D. R. Chisholm, John Edward Walsh, Bernard Leahy, Thomas Kearney, J. N. C. Potvin, C. H. Martin, Joseph Walsh, Fort Steele; and Joseph Kennedy. A few of the foregoing had put in their applications for membership, but owing to the exigencies of business or for other causes, were unable to attend.

CRANBROOK KNIGHTS ON OFFICIAL TOUR OF COAST CITIES.

The Knights of Columbus, embracing a membership of over 237,000 in the States and Canada, are rapidly advancing in numbers and influence in British Columbia which has been promoted to the dignity of one of the "States" of the order.

On Sunday, 12th inst., some fifty-eight candidates were admitted to membership at Vancouver, the degree work being in charge of the Victoria and Lewiston, Idaho, Councils. They acquitted themselves splendidly. Amongst those present were Judge Ryan, W. E. Cline, Archie Gillis, Frank McConnell, Jack McKenzie, all of Cranbrook. At the banquet, a very swell affair, the Knights had for their guest of honor the Most Rev. Dr. McNeil, Archbishop of Vancouver, who has come out from the east but recently to take charge of his new episcopate.

On Monday, 13th inst., a convention of the present and past Grand Knights of the Order and the other chief officials, was held at O'Brien's hall for the purpose of forming a State Council for British Columbia. The Cranbrook delegation, consisting of Joseph Ryan and W. E. Cline, were officially present. The result of the ballotting for the State Council resulted in James D. Bryne being elected as State Deputy.

H. E. Sehl, of Victoria, State Secretary.

W. A. Bryne, of Burnaby, State Treasurer.

Joseph Ryan, State Advocate.

Joseph Power, State Warden.

Amongst those present was Thos. J. Gorman, of Seattle, who founded the Vancouver Council and was until quite recently State Deputy for Washington. He is one of the brothers of M. J. Gorman, K.C., of Ottawa, president of the Ottawa Bar association and master of the fourth degree of the Knights of Columbus in that jurisdiction. Four other brothers, all prominent in the great business affairs of Canada and the States, are also members of the K. of C.

Magistrate Ryan states that he and Mr. W. E. Cline were most enjoyably entertained by the Vancouver Council, and especially by the State De-

REMINISCENT

C. HUNGERFORD POLLEN TALKS OF EARLY K.C.R. EXPERIENCES.

Now that the Kootenay Central railway has assumed practical form, in that construction work is now practically under way, and at least a considerable stretch of the road will be constructed this year, the Herald deemed that it would be of inserest to its readers to secure from Mr. C. Hungerford Pollen some brief review of his long connection with the undertaking. In the course of an interesting chat over various incidents in connection with the promotion of this scheme, Mr. Pollen said:

"It would have been inconsistent with western precedent had the Kootenay Central gone through its promotion in a course of easy stages. It has had its share of obstacles.

"My own experience of it dates from a certain day when I was chopping my cordwood in the street before my business place on Fort Steele, for we lived then in agreeable freedom from conventions. A shadow fell across the chunk of wood and before the poised axe fell again, the current of my activities had been diverted. It was Mr. Harvey who was the messenger of fate. Mr. Harvey's laconic phrases commanded attention, and before he left me I was the official champion of the Kootenay Central. Much might be written dealing with the subsequent adventures of this enterprise, the people in England, Canada, the United States, and in other countries who became connected in some way with it, the situations, political and financial, that influenced its destinies, the "mise en scene" of the social and imdustrial surroundings. Over twenty separate acts and regulations, with here and there a stray order-in-council, have punctured its career, in the Dominion and provincial houses. Throughout there proceedings it has been my privilege to act for the company. Although one may be taunted with being a lobbyist, it is none the less a necessity to be on hand. The printing and advertising of the bill and petition, the handing in of the copies of the bill with the advertisements, dated and in good order, the subsequent reprinting of the bill after it reaches a stage through the house, are matters that in the provincial house must be personally superintended. The appearances before the private bills and railway committees are also proceedings that must be carefully watched. As for its passage through the house, imagination may be exhausted in suggesting its possible difficulties. Woe betide the bill that becomes a party matter, a mere missle to throw across the benches. Better to withdraw and quietly bury it, than let its remains taint the air any more. We were singularly fortunate in the Kootenay Central legislation, meeting with the greatest courtesy and attention at Ottawa from high and low, at no stage did it ever become tinged with party interests. It was my privilege to receive kindness from many of the most prominent persons of international importance. This was due to the important section of country in which the railway was situated and to the character of my associates in the venture who are well known men of affairs in Europe. It was to Lord Strathcona, that veteran Canadian patriot, that I owed my first meeting with Sir Wilfrid Laurier. It was in his suite at the Savoy hotel that Sir Wilfrid first heard of the Kootenay Central, and gave it, one might say, its first official recognition, and he has since always betrayed the keenest interest in the developments of this section of the country. Sir Charles Fitz-Patrick, Senator Templeman, Mr. Galliher and all our B. C. members, and many officials of all departments gave even more than the assistance their official duties might have required them to give.

"Although nobody would suspect me of it I am in reality an Englishman. Instead of finding this any bar to receiving kindness in eastern Canada, my experiences were the exact contray. The admirable clubs of Montreal, and Ottawa were at all times thrown open to me, and kindness and hospitable invitations too numerous to take advantage of were continually offered. I had in this way the pleasure of seeing the inside of many famous homes in Canada, including that of the governor-general during successive administrations, and of watching youthful Canada at play. Many famous business men, including the C.P.R. officials have had cheering suggestions to make when I was thrown into their company.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, especially, has been a most dependable friend to the enterprise, without whose interest it would have languished. Sir Thomas has a keen sense of humor

R. W. Bro. J. J. Miller, Southern Cross, No. 4, D.D.G.M., District No. 2.

After the customary opening ceremonies, Mayor Fink, himself a member of Cranbrook lodge, A.F. & A.M. extended a cordial civic welcome to Grand Lodge. In the course of his words of welcome, the mayor said:

Most Worshipful Grand Master and Members of the Grand Lodge of A.F. & A.M. of British Columbia:

"It affords me a great deal of pleasure to greet you here today, and to welcome you to our city. I wish to assure you that we feel very grateful to you and that you have, indeed, done us a very great honor in assembling the thirty-ninth annual convention of the Grand Lodge of A. F. & A. M. of British Columbia in our city this year.

"I am sure that every member, and I am glad to say that I am one of Cranbrook Lodge No. 34, today has three excellent reasons for feeling pleased, the first is of being a Mason, the second is being able to complete this beautiful temple in specified time for the opening of Grand Lodge, and the third in being honored by the presence of the Grand Lodge officials and their assistance in the dedication ceremonies.

"The Mason ic order, of which our late Sovereign, King Edward the VII, was the head, is known in every country under the sun and has done much in civilizing the nations of the earth, and in the bettering of conditions for mankind. It is an order that, if it's teachings are obeyed, will be a safeguard for every member and his family.

"The man who wears the badge of a Mason should consider that he wears the badge of honor and is entitled to the respect—not only of brother Masons—but of every person.

"Cranbrook has prospered—so has Cranbrook Lodge No. 34. Cranbrook in her prosperity has enabled the lodge to erect this beautiful building, I am told one of the best in British Columbia.

"The lodge in her prosperity has increased her membership and has assisted in giving to Cranbrook better citizens.

"I presume that there are those present who have never before visited this portion of our great province and I trust that, as mayor of Cranbrook, you will pardon me if I say a few words regarding Cranbrook and East Kootenay. Thirteen years ago Cranbrook had about a half dozen buildings on her main streets and the same number of dwellings scattered over what is now known as Baker Hill. Today her population numbers about four thousand, and, I believe, her school, her hospitals, her homes, her hotels, her churches, her banks, her hotels, her stores, her electric, telephone and water systems will compare very favorably with other towns of Western Canada, having the same population.

year has been a successful one for the tell you of the twenty or twenty-two saw and planing mills, within a radius of thirty-five miles of Cranbrook, and the millions of feet of lumber manufactured every year, with the positive assurance that this industry will continue for twenty-five years more. I could tell you of the numerous ranches which dot the hillsides, where a few years ago dense forest stood; and of the C.P.R. shops, the excellent train service and the big pay roll. I could tell you of the miles of nice drives and the good fishing places, I could talk to you about Moyie and her beautiful lakes, her many mines, among which is the St. Eugene, the largest silver-lead mine on earth, I could tell you of Perry Creek from which hundreds of thousands in placer gold have been taken and of Old Town where, years ago, a trading post of the Hudson Bay company was located, and of the beautiful falls and unlimited power on Bull River.

"If I had the time I could tell you about the beautiful valleys of the Kootenay and Columbia rivers which were, years ago, connected by a canal, of miles of the very finest timber and the many ranches which occupy the bench lands along either side of the valleys.

"I could tell you of Fort Steele, the mother town of this district, situated on the Kootenay river at the mouth of the famous Wild Horse Creek, and right at the foot of the mighty Rockies, one of the most beautiful places in the whole province. This famous Wild Horse Creek was discovered in 1862 and since that time over $50,000,000 in gold have been mined. I could tell you of the days when all supplies were packed from Walla Walla, Wash., and our good friend, Bro. Galbraith, who conducted a store at Galbraith's Ferry, now Fort Steele, sold needles at 25c. each on account of the enormous freight. I would never tire of talking of this great province of ours, but, Most Worshipful Sir, I fear that I have already occupied too much of your time, as I know you came here for business and not for speechmaking.

"In closing I wish, again, on behalf of the citizens of Cranbrook, to express our great appreciation of your visit with us, and hope that your meeting will be successful and your deliberations will result in much good for the order, and in leaving us you will carry away as many pleasant recollections of us as we will retain of you."

GRAND MASTER'S ADDRESS.

The Grand Master's address was, in part, as follows:

"Brethren of the Grand Lodge:

"Gratefully raising out hearts to the Great Architect of the Universe, who has given us life, and who has blessed and guided us to walk in the light, we are met today, in this our 39th annual communication, and it is my pleasure to greet and welcome you, trusting that all may participate in a profitable and enjoyable session.

"These annual communications give us an opportunity of meeting together to help one another forward in a cheery fashion in the work of the future. We must not have a low estimate of ourselves and of what we can do. If we feel that we have been given something to do and the power to do it, and if we believe in our own power, there is no doubt every one of us can do something for the good of mankind. We must realize our own importance and that we have a place in the world.

"I like to see the lodges have a good opinion of themselves and feel that they are doing something which affects the welfare of the community in which they are established. Have the courage of your convictions and realize that you are placed here to do a great and permanent service to the community. To do this service cherish our strong and powerful truths in your hearts and lean on our good and influential principles. Then, in the name of the Great Architect of the Universe, conquer and dare anything. Let every member be proud of the lodge to which he belongs and of the grand opportunities of the period, remembering that you are living in the greatest age the world has ever known, and that it will be to your discredit if you do not make use of the advantages at your command.

"I am pleased to report that the craft and that during my visits amongst the brethren I find Masonry increasing in interest, in charity and in efficiency, and if while I have held this office, I have assisted in increasing the hopefulness and confidence of the brethren in themselves and in one another, I shall hand over the jurisdiction to my successor with thanksgiving to the Great Architect and satisfaction to myself."

The Grand Master then gave a detailed statement of the visits he had paid to lodges within the jurisdiction, dispensations and new lodges, etc. Concluding, he said:

"I have not language at my command to give expression of thanks for kindnesses received at each visit paid. I wish to record that during my travels (of over 8,500 miles) in the jurisdiction, wherever I visited, I was entertained and received in a most cordial manner. The appreciation of the craft was so readily bestowed that its sincerity was undoubted, and was more than ample compensation for any sacrifice on my part. I have derived intense satisfaction from the honor of occupying the Grand Mastership, and whilst thanking you for the honor conferred, I hope no single action of mine has given any of you cause to regret that you so honored me, and I trust you will not judge the depth of my gratitude by the brevity of this, my acknowledgment.

"I regret that it was not possible for me to meet the brethren of Dawson, White Horse, Atlin, Hedley, Trout Lake or Cariboo.

"On the 7th of May, on hearing of the death of His Most Gracious Majesty King Edward the Seventh, Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of England, the sincere regrets of our Grand Lodge were cabled to the Grand Lodge of England, and I ordered all lodges in this jurisdiction to be draped as a mark of respect for our Most Worshipful Brother, whose health as Protector of the Craft we have so often toasted, whose influence for peace and goodwill amongst men was the admiration of mankind, who lived in close relationship with his subjects, nourishing the welfare of the people, relieving the necessities of the poor and whose life doings may be summarized in the word "Humanity" in its widest sense.

"During my visit to Kamloops, in company with several brethren, I was taken to the sanatorium at Tranquille and conducted over the institution. I found two of our brethren there, and from conversation with them and with other patients, I was most pleased to find all cared for in a most perfect manner, happy and contented. I am satisfied we have here one of the best institutions for the relief of suffering mankind and one that is deserving of all the support we can bestow upon it. And I now ask the finance committee, if funds are available, to make another grant in aid of the good work being done by that institution.

"From what I saw when visiting Tsimpsean lodge, U. D., at Prince Rupert, I have very much pleasure in recommending that a charter be granted to them at this communication.

"The districts covered by the District Deputy Grand Masters again require adjustment. The Vancouver City lodges, North Vancouver and Prince Rupert should be a separate district, a new district formed of the New Westminster City lodges, Chilliwack, Mission and possibly Nicola, which latter can be more readily served from the coast than the interior.

"Matters in connection with Similkameen lodge, U.D., not being satisfactory to me, I withdrew the dispensation. All the books and papers belonging to that lodge are now in the care of the Grand Secretary and the regalia is being cared for by one of the brethren at Princeton.

"Brethren, my duties as your Grand Master will in a few hours be finished, and I will lay aside my regalia with regret that a pleasant year of office has ended and with hopes that the many friendships made and the confidences received may continue to mature and extend, and that it may be my good fortune for many years to come, to labor amongst you and with you for the advancement of the principles of our order."

Collector of Customs Henderson wife and child, of Fernie, were in Gateway on Wednesday between trains. He came to give Mr. Joule H.M.C. a chance to swear allegiance to George V.

Mr. Charlie Johnston was a Gateway visitor during the past week. He and his sister left for Kalispell on Thursday.

The celebration committee are hard at work preparing for the 4th. Two new items have been added to the programme, in the shape of trap shooting and a baby show. Surely all tastes will be suited and a large crowd is expected.

A wagon load of disciples of Isaac Walton left Gateway, B. C., on Sunday for Gold Creek. A large catch of fine fish rewarded their efforts.

The baseball game on the 4th will be between teams composed solely of Glen Lake and local players. No imported men will be used by either team.

Mr. Vincent, of the Royal hotel, was a Fernie visitor last week.

Mr. B. B. McCannon, our popular young station agent, is all smiles having heard of the birth of twin sons to the wife of his brother, Conductor John McCannon, of Whitefish, Mont.

Trainmaster "Teddy" Van, who is a patient in the Fernie hospital, is now convalescent.

Local strawberries are now on the market.

We are very sorry to report the illness of Master Fred Hayward and hope he will soon be around again.

A very fast game of ball was played on Sunday afternoon last between the Galloway and Wardner teams, resulting in a score of 14—5, in favor of the home team. We congratulate our boys on their playing as they have only organized quite recently.

The anniversary services were held in St. Andrew's church on Sunday last. Rev. C. O. Main, of Cranbrook, preached an excellent sermon to a fairly good congregation, the threatening rain causing a falling off in the attendance. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion by some of the ladies of the congregation, and the choir furnished good music. A duet was sung by Mr. Godwin and Mrs. Geo. Sinclair and solos by Mr. Fern and Mrs. Sinclair. A social was held on Monday evening following in the Library hall, the proceeds amounting to about $65.

MOYIE

(From the Leader.)

Ed. Nordman, shiftboss at the St. Eugene, has been given a promotion. The Consolidated company has put him in charge of the Eureka at Sandon. He will move his family to Sandon about July 1st.

Wm. Bird and family left last Saturday for their old home in Dunville, Newfoundland, where they will probably remain. Mr. and Mrs. Bird were old residents here and leave a host of friends behind them.

As soon as the attention of Superintendent Uren of this division of the C. P. R. was called to the submerged pile heads under the new bridge on the Upper Moyie river he lost no time in having the obstructions removed. These piles were a source of danger to boats and launches, so that the prompt action of the divisional superintendent is duly appreciated.

L. W. Haws, of Newport, Wash., is here doing assessment work on the Rock Hill property, which is located just north of the mouth of Lamb creek and not far from Moyie lake. Mr. Haws has six men employed and is sinking an incline shaft on the vein. He will have one year's assessment work done now, but will return in the fall and continue the work. It is a galena proposition.

Special attention will be devoted to the water sports on Dominion day. The committee in charge have decided on the following events, subject to slight revision: Log rolling contest, double canoe race, single canoe race, double sculling race, single sculls, ladies' single scull race, handicap race for motor boats, scratch race for motor boats, slow race for motor boats, tilting contest in canoes, swimming race, high diving contest, tub race, and prizes will be given for the best decorated launches. It is expected that there will be a spectacular display of fireworks on the lake in the evening.

WALDO

(Special correspondence.)

Mr. Hugh Gilmour and Mr. Waterous, of the Waterous Engine Works, were Waldo visitors last week.

C. D. McNab returned from Cranbrook on Saturday.

Mrs. Alfred Lewis arrived from Victoria on Saturday and will make her home in Waldo for some time.

On Wednesday last a charming luncheon was given by Mrs. Hart, of Baynes, in honor of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Tormey. Quite a number of Waldo people attended and all had a delightful time.

Dr. Maher arrived today to take charge of the practice of Dr. Saunders, who will be absent for a short time.

TO THE SOUTH POLE

CAPTAIN SCOTT'S SHIP SAILS FROM ENGLAND ON ITS LONG VOYAGE.

The Terra Nova, which is to carry Capt. Scott and his party as near as may be to the South Pole, started on her long voyage last week from the West India docks.

But six months will elapse ere the famous old whaling vessel begins the really interesting part of her journey, for not until then will she leave New Zealand to land the wintering party in the Antartic.

Calls are to be made at Madeira, Ascension and St. Helena. Probably a visit will be paid to St. Paul's Rocks on the chance of finding castaways, while Tristan d'Acunha is another out-of-the-way place which may be startled by the apparition of the White Ensign. Capetown will be reached at the end of July. After a saunter through the South Indian Ocean, New Zealand is to be made two months later.

The Terra Nova is, perhaps, the most efficiently-equipped vessel ever employed in Polar work. She is twice the size of the little craft in which Sir Ernest Shackleton made his adventure, and her accommodation, if not so roomy as the men of the navy who sail her are accustomed to, is at least adequate. As she swung out from her berth the old Dundee whaler looked remarkably smart and workmanlike.

The hoisting of the white ensign was made the occasion of a little ceremony, Lady Bridgeman, wife of Admiral Sir Francis Bridgeman, a naval lord of the admiralty, breaking out the flag at the masthead. Sir Clements Markham was an interested spectator, and Lady Markham signalized the occasion by presenting Mrs. Scott with a bouquet.

Capt. Scott himself, wearing a straw hat as a sign of detachment—he does not join the vessel until she reaches New Zealand—was engaged in showing visitors over the ship.

Some of the stores were still on deck, including cases containing parlor games, which have been presented for the entertainment of the members of the expedition.

When the whistle blew for the last time and the miscellaneous crowd of visitors descended the gangway, the Terra Nova, under her own steam, and with the assistance of a tug, started for the open river. Lieut. Evans, who is to sail her southwards, was on the bridge, and the barque executed a series of smart manoeuvres in order to pass through a narrow avenue of other vessels. All these craft were dressed rainbow fashion. The quayside was crowded with people, who cheered the departing vessel.

There was much hooting of sirens as the vessel made her way slowly to and through the dock gates. There are several of them, and at the last the assembled crowds on either side were able to shake hands with the crew.

"I am not leaving England for another six weeks," said Capt. Scott, just before the ship sailed, "my main object in remaining being to see that the financial affairs of the expedition are in order. The only support we have hitherto received outside this country has been from New Zealand, whose government has contributed £1,000. I am hopeful, however, that when I visit South Africa and Australia I shall be able to interest their peoples in my cause. Failing this, the reserve certainly will not suffice to complete the work of the expedition."

Among those who bade farewell to the Terra Nova at the docks was Capt. Bartlett, who accompanied Commander Peary on his last Polar expedition. He said "There can be no reasonable doubt that, barring accidents, Capt. Scott will get to the Pole, for with his experience and pluck he is bound to succeed.

TEN YEARS' IMMIGRATION.

According to statistics contained in a hand-book issued by the immigration department, immigration to Canada during the last ten years totals 1,445,288. The fiscal year recently closed eclipsed all others in the volume of immigration the arrivals numbering 208,794.

Of the grand total for the decade about 565,000 came from the British Isles, 344,000 from the continent and 197,000 from the United States. The Americans coming across the border are therefore within 68,000 of the total British immigration. Of the immigration from the British Isles about 418,000 came from England and Wales, 108,987 from Scotland and 34,124 from Ireland.

Grand Trunk Station, Yards, and Shops

The Hour of Your Opportunity Has Struck

Our Golden Rose Park Addition is now ready for the public. DON'T WAIT ! !

Indications are strongly pointing to an Unprecedented rise of values in Golden Rose lots. WHY ?

Because this beautiful sub-division lies right between the site selected by the Grand Trunk Railroad, and the city.

Think what it means to own property in close proximity to a Station, Yards, Railroad Shops, etc.

Street Cars and other conveniences will be a necessity in the near future, which will be passing by Golden Rose Park.

The location of the Grand Trunk shops, 4 miles from the cities of Winnipeg and Edmonton, caused no small excitement in those cities and property values went up by leaps and bounds accordingly, in the vicinity of the railroad works.

GOLDEN ROSE PARK LOTS ARE SIMILARLY SITUATED

Similar lots in Winnipeg and Edmonton, which sold for $75 each BEFORE the locating of the Railroad Works, are NOW commanding from $300 to $800 a lot. As you can plainly see it is just a simple question of "BEFORE" and "AFTER."

History repeats itself. Do not wait till it is "AFTER."

The successful man always got in "BEFORE."

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

To the Editor:

I would like to sound a note of protest against a practice common among the ranchers in this district which is detrimental to the best interests of both dry farmer and irrigator, but especially of the latter.

Lest I be accused of assuming the air of a "know-all" in agriculture, I will say at the commencement I am here giving not my own experience, except in a very limited way, but the results of experiments and observations of men who have studied this problem for years and worked it out thoroughly.

The practice I refer to is that of planking or rolling grain and potato fields as the last operation of the work of seeding. I would like to point out that the first problem of the dry farmer is conserving the moisture supplied by nature, that of the irrigator to prevent the rise of alkali. We will first consider the case of the dry farmer. In his case all leading agriculturists today say, pack the soil first, then break up the top by harrow or other means and keep it loose by repeating this after rains, thus preventing the crust that facilitates loss of moisture from the lower soil.

If we hand-sow and harrow in our crop or drill it in and then go over the land with the smoother or roller, leaving it in this condition, what are we doing but forming an artificial crust at once? through which capillary action immediately commences to act, carrying to the surface the moisture so much needed below to be borne away by the wind and sun. Also the smooth surface permits the wind to shave and wither tender shoots, which would otherwise be protected by the slight undulations left by drill or harrow, till they had hardened. There is no doubt the packing is much needed by the dry farmer, but it should be early in the game, say after once over the plowing with the harrow and on bench lands pack for all you are worth, but do not leave it in this condition for a single day. Once packed break up the upper smoothness with the harrow or by drilling in the seed at once and let this be the finishing operation. Don't argue as one man did with me this spring, that the harrowing is the operation that does the drying out; be assured of this, that inch or so of loose soil is just the thing that chokes the passages by which water is trying to come out of the soil to moisten the air above, that is so thirstily striving to draw it up. More than this, if you are fortunate enough to have drilled your grain, go over the ground again with the harrow and break up the crust and incidentally kill a lot of weeds at the same time. The results of this method are not theory but actual tests of moisture content in areas side by side for comparison the season through.

Now we come to the irrigation farmer. This man does not have to be so economical of moisture and for this reason often uses too much. Anyway, it is an axiom with students of irrigation that the less can be used, providing the crop does not suffer, the better. We all know here, where there is never enough rainfall, to wet the soil for more than four or five feet at the very most, that for this reason those salts and other elements in the soil, commonly spoken of as alkalies, are never washed down out of reach of capillary action as in moist climates, but remain in practically their original strength in the surface soil, which, if not added to by natural seepage or overflow, is not likely to be too much for vegetable growth. We know also that most of the water used for crops carries, more or less, of these same alkalies. Then the condition is, we will say, soil and sub-soil up to four or five feet deep with enough alkali in that part reached by crop roots and as much more in each like depth on down as far as moisture is likely to penetrate. If the soil contains sufficient of these salts for the needs of the crop in say the first foot or so, it is evident from what we know of the effect of these when too abundant—that more than this will injuriously affect the crop, therefore, our greatest precautions should be taken to avoid adding to this original amount of these elements.

How then is there the greatest likelihood of adding to this supply? In irrigation by wetting the soil below necessary depths by too plentiful use of water, for as far down as the water goes it dissolves the alkalies and carries them in solution and when the water returns to the surface by capillary action and passes off, the alkali is deposited on the surface, thus increasing an already sufficient supply there of a substance that is harmless, when in the soil, but becomes injurious at the surface in too great quantities. This action being repeated frequently enough the soil becomes in many cases utterly useless and in any case less satisfactory and productive.

FOR ALL SUMMER SORES.

The only preventive is to preserve the natural moisture as much as possible by keeping a loose, harrowed soil mulch on top and avoid irrigation as long as possible, and if grain is drilled never use the smoother or roller after drilling and harrow at intervals as long as grain is short enough to permit; after rains and irrigating for the less water used the less salts dissolved and unless dissolved they are unable to move to the surface. There are many marked instances of injury from too abundant water. One came to my notice in a report the other day where below a certain ditch everyone in time past had plenty of water and used too much, above this ditch was fed by another where water was scarce and had to be sparingly used. Today the lands under the lower ditch are abandoned, being ruined by alkali, while under the upper they promise to go on indefinitely producing in abundance.

To sum up the whole matter, by use of plank or roller the dry farmer is lessening his crop for the season, but the irrigator is by degrees ruining his for all time if he goes on long enough, unless both study the proper time to use these tools.

A. B. Smith.

The following letter from the Deputy Minister of Agriculture to the secretary of the Cranbrook board of trade is self explanatory and should receive the careful attention of every farmer in this district:

Sir: I wish to secure a comprehensive selection of all the grains, grasses and fodder plants grown by farmers in your district for display in the botanical chambers of this department. I am approaching you as a board of trade, in this connection, to ask your assistance and co-operation. I might point out that a good collection from your district would prove a strong advertisement as to the agricultural possibilities you possess. Thousands of people who are looking for districts in which to settle, visit our department in the course of the year, and the advantage of a permanent exhibit of this description can hardly be overestimated. Is would convince intending settlers as to the advantages you possess better than any amount of literature. I should like to secure grain in the straw and also threshed, and bunches of the different grasses and fodder plants grown in your neighborhood. The plan hitherto adopted in securing those exhibits for the use of the department, has been to apply to individual farmers direct. This has not proved as satisfactory as it might be, and I think that you, as a board of trade, would be able to take the question up in a more businesslike way, and secure for us an exhibit which would be a credit to your district. I should esteem it a favor if you can fall in with my suggestion.

I have the honor to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,
Wm. E. Scott,
Deputy Minister of Agriculture

HAY GROWERS ORGANIZE.

A company of hay growers has been organized in Pincher Creek, Alta., for the purpose of handling their own hay and farm produce and placing it on the market in better shape than heretofore. The company propose to make strict grading rules and guarantee all their products, and this will no doubt be an advantage both to the consumer and the company, and do away with a great deal of dissatisfaction that has been experienced in the past, especially regarding hay.

They have styled themselves The South Alberta Hay Growers, Ltd., with head office in Pincher Creek and have elected Mr. Jno. Kennies president, A. Pelletier vice president and E. G. Ambrose secretary-treasurer.

CANADA'S CENTURY.

It was no vain boast on the part of Canada when she proclaimed that this was to be her century. Like a drilled army, every province and every industry is stepping out, strongly intent upon progress, and more progress than ever before. It is a Canadian article of commercial faith that records are fine things, but they exist only for the purpose of being broken. The columns of the "Standard of Emfiire" devoted to real estate news contain from week to week striking evidence of this national determination which thrills through the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The final official figures of the building progress in the Dominion during 1909 have just been issued, and they have a very remarkable story to tell. In the industrial centres alone the buildings erected were worth $17,026,600, which represents a solid 50 per cent advance on the previous year's record. At the present moment building was never more active in all sections of Canada. The vigorous young cities of the prairies are spreading out and succeeding to the dignity of suburbs, and factories are going up. But these are not the only centres of activity. Grown-up Montreal is reported to have building ventures under way to the value of $12,000,000, more than half of which is accounted for by operations of the Canadian Pacific railway. It requires no argument to show what such development means for the country. Big cities of themselves do not bespeak the soundest prosperity; but in Canada cities only become big when the needs of the agricultural and manufacturing industries make them so. The city-ward trend is not ont of the great Dominion's failings. Canada is today the living example of the success of optimism and grit and determination. There is really no one to dispute the century with her.—The Standard of Empire.

THE CRANBROOK HERALD

2.00 A YEAR | THE PAPER THAT IS READ BY THE PEOPLE | JUNE 23, 1910

CRANBROOK HERALD

By the Herald Publishing Company, F. J. Deane, Managing Editor.

EDITORIAL NOTES

In view of the controversy over the Dominion government's naval policy it is of interest to have the views of a practical seaman, a commodore of the British navy. There recently arrived in Victoria, en route to China, Commodore C. J. Eyres, direct from London, England. Interviewed on this question Commodore Eyres said:

"Naval and military men in England generally approve the action of the Canadian government in undertaking to form a navy of their own.

"If it was a matter of getting the best possible results within a set term of years," continued the commodore, "it might have been better to have handed over a lump sum of money and have it expended in the Old Country, where the problems of a navy have been thoroughly studied for so many years. That, however, is not now generally considered the best way to work out the salvation of the empire. Canada, Australia, and the other Dominions would hardly have risen to a full sense of their responsibilities in any other way than that now being taken. The people must learn to take an active interest in the navy by not only paying for it, but by controlling it. In this way they become more intimately associated with the difficulties which have to be overcome.

"After all, the making of a navy or the building of an empire does not depend upon the number of ships which are built, but upon the imperial spirit of the people. In order to develop this spirit Canada has taken the best possible means at hand. Naval people in England are generally agreed that it is better for Canada not only to build her own ships but to have the control of them after they are built. In this way they will come to take a more personal interest in the navy. It is necessary for them to know what it means for a ship to go ashore, and to overcome the hundred-and-one difficulties which always present themselves. There will be failures, no doubt—everyone expects that—but the end which will be attained will well repay the outlay.

"This subject which I am discussing is, I know, a very delicate one, and I am not doing it from a political point of view in any way. It is simply an expression of what I know to be the opinion of the majority of the military men with whom I have come in contact."

As has been heralded throughout the country, R. L. Borden, leader of the Conservative party, is at present engaged in a political tour of Ontario. In such circumstances one might very naturally look for some clear cut declaration of policy, indicating a practical grasp of Canadian political requirements at this stage of the country's development. As a matter of fact the Conservative papers, that give special prominence to Mr. Borden's speeches contain no reference to any discussion of policy, or statesmanlike consideration of the great problems confronting this growing country. Instead we find announcements of this character: "Borden denounces Ottawa's reign of graft and humbug." "The main feature of Mr. Borden's address was his criticism of the business incapacity of the Laurier government, which has shown itself unable to cope in an intelligent manner with the problems facing the country at the present time. Mr. Borden expressed confidence that the time was not far distant when the bulk of the Canadian people would again entrust the destinies of Canada to the Conservative party."

It is entirely probable that the time is not far distant when the Canadian people will again place the administration of affairs in the hands of the Conservative party, but we cannot conceive that that day will be hastened by such addresses as the party leader is now delivering throughout Ontario. The Canadian people are not utterly dead to their own interests. They know what has been accomplished under a Liberal régime, and whilst there may be room for criticism in certain directions, and of improvement in others, it appears to us to be the height of folly to imagine for one moment that the great bulk of the Canadiaa people can be stampeded from their present allegiance by a campaign of slander and abuse. Mr. Borden appears to have formed an entirely erroneous impression of Canadian sentiment, and, for that matter, of Canadian common sense. Canada has prospered under Liberal rule as few other countries have prospered during the same period and it will require something more than mere abuse to influence the Canadian electorate "to swap horses" at this juncture.

Some anxiety is expressed in certain quarters as to the annual agricultural exhibition. Careful enquiry justifies us in assuring any and all, who may be dubious as to the successful carrying out of this year's exhibition, that there is really no occasion for alarm. It is true that definite action has not yet been taken to fix the date of the exhibition, but a great deal of preparatory work is underway, and, we are informed, action will shortly be taken in the matter of fixing the date. A committee is busily engaged in canvassing for subscriptions and is meeting with encouraging success. Correspondence from the surrounding districts, that is coming in to the secretary, all points to greater interest than ever before in the exhibition and gives promise of a really comprehensive exhibit of the products of the district. The sooner the management can definitely decide upon a date for the exhibition, the better it will be, but in the meantime the interests of the exhibition are not being lost sight of.

We made reference last week to the Dominion government's annuity system in connection with some comments there anent of the Toronto Globe. That paper continues its useful campaign of education on this subject and in a recent issue emphasizes the fact that this system established by the Dominion government provides the strongest possible incentive to frugality and thrift, thus promoting a proper regard for safety against want in old age, and at the same time promoting an increase in the supply of capital necessary for this country's development. The system provides absolute safety for the savings of the frugal working man or working woman. It relieves the depositors or annuitants of all cost of management and gives them four per cent compound interest on their money. Some who live long to enjoy their annuities will draw much more than this, while those who die earlier will restore and sustain the average of returns. The primary object is security against want or the fear of want in old age, and this is provided whether an annuitant's time of inactivity be long or short. The payments are based on the average expectation of life, and begin at the age of fifty-five years or later if desired. In case of inability to make payments there is no forfeiture. If the payments already made provide for an annuity of $50 a year or more at the age of fifty-five it is paid till death. If not the money is returned when that age is reached, with three per cent compound interest. In case of death before the annuity age the payments are returned to the heirs, with three per cent.

Citizens generally will heartily concur in the words of welcome extended to the Masonic Grand Lodge by Mayor Fink. It is a fitting recognition of the growing importance of Cranbrook that the Grand Lodge A.F. & A.M. should hold a communication within its limits. The advantages that Cranbrook has to offer as a meeting place of large fraternal organizations is now becoming more fully appreciated. Within the past few days a great gathering of the Knights of Columbus was most successfully held in this city. At the present moment the Grand Lodge, A. F. & A.M. of British Columbia is in session within our midst. Next year the Grand Lodge of the I.O.O.F. is to assemble here. What Cranbrook lacks in the way of hotel accommodation for these large gatherings is hospitably made good by private individuals, who cheerfully welcome to their homes delegates to the various Grand Lodges. From the expressions heard on every hand we can confidently assert that the visiting Masons very greatly appreciate the opportunity thus afforded of seeing something of the great East Kootenay district and of forming some intimate acquaintance with the city and citizens of Cranbrook.

DOMINION PUBLIC BUILDING

The Herald is advised that tenders will be called for at an early date for the construction of the proposed Dominion public building. The Epworth League spent a very pleasant evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Racklyeft on Bald Hill on Tuesday evening last. Over forty members of the league took advantage of this pleasant outing, and spent the longest day of the year in true mid-summer night fashion. The spacious verandah afforded a delightful place to view the mountains, and singing and music added to the enjoyment of the merry gathering. The host amused his visitors by shewing them bananas growing in the garden, and a fine specimen of Germanicus Sausagebus, also fully ripened, caused great fun, this being enhanced by "Pat" the dog, who purloined two of these delicacies and hid them in the earth until a more coavenient season. A further surprise was given when the host was conducting the party through the ravine; a black bear was seen, and two shots were promptly fired, bringing the animal down. Amid fear and laughter it was found to be stuffed with paper!

Votes of thanks were accorded to host and hostess for the very pleasant social evening, to which Mr. Racklyeft suitably replied.

MASONIC GRAND LODGE

Neither time nor space will permit of anything like a full enumeration of the large number of delegates in attendance at Grand Lodge. Suffice it to say that every section of the province is represented and that among the many visitors are several who are paying their first visit to Cranbrook. From the trend of conversation among these visitors, it is readily gleaned that Cranbrook has impressed them very favorably. The weather, the scenery and the evident enterprise of Cranbrook citizens have all impressed themselves forcibly upon the attention of our guests.

Whilst it is impossible to publish a complete list of the hundred odd Grand Lodge officials and Master Masons now in our midst, a short list of some of the better known among them, in addition to the Grand Lodge officers, follows:

A. S. Goodeve, M.P., Rossland; Jim Schofield, M.P.P., Trail; W. R. Ross, M.P.P., Fernie; Mayor Lee, New Westminster; E. E. Chapman, Kaslo; Mayor Power, Kaslo; J. S. Clute, New Westminster; W. Henderson, Victoria; H. Giegerich, Kaslo; Dr. Sibree Clarke, P.G.M., Kamloops; R. Galbraith, Fort Steele; A. Fisher, Fernie; S. Towgood, Sandon; P. Lund, Wardner; D. Stephenson, Nanaimo; A. Goodman, Vancouver; John M. Rudd and John Shaw, Nanaimo; A. H. Skey, Kamloops; Thos. Long, Rossland; F. M. McLaine, Greenwood; P. McNaughton, New Westminster; Lambert Bond, Vancouver; Cranbrook lodge is well represented, as are also Fort Steele and Moyie lodges.

Last evening, preceding the formal assembly of Grand Lodge, the ceremony of dedicating the handsome new Masonic hall, erected by Cranbrook lodge, was performed with due and ancient ceremony by the Grand Lodge officers. This ceremony brought together a very large gathering of Masons. Cranbrook lodge was well represented, as were also Moyie and Fort Steele lodges, in addition to the visitors from all parts of the province.

The Grand Lodge officers and visitors assembled at the old lodge rooms at 8 o'clock, whence they marched to the new temple on Norbury avenue. There the dedicatory ceremony was performed, R. W. Bro. E. B. Paul, Deputy Grand Master delivering the dedicatory address. The Grand Master, R. W. Bro. H. N. Rich, warmly eulogized Cranbrook members of the craft on their enterprise and fraternal enthusiasm, so splendidly emphasized in the handsome building. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the brethren returned to the old lodge room, for the formal closing.

A little later in the evening the Grand Lodge officers and all the visitors were the guests of Cranbrook lodge at a conversazione in the new hall. Dancing and musical selections helped pass a very enjoyable evening. Refreshments were served by a committee of ladies.

CITY COUNCIL

H. Y. PARKER APPOINTED CITY ENGINEER—TEMPORARY LOAN BYLAW PUT THROUGH.

The principal business transacted at the special meeting of the city council Tuesday evening was the appointment of H. Y. Parker to the position of city engineer, at a salary of $150 per month.

There were present Mayor Fink and Aldermen Hunt, Jackson, Patmore, Campbell and Johnson.

A petition from residents on Cranbrook and Van Horne streets re water supply was received and filed and the action of the water committee in the premises confirmed.

The mayor's action in arranging for the funeral of J. Moss' little child and in providing railway fare for Mrs. Burns to Minot, Dakota, was approved by the council.

A discussion ensued as to the use of the fire team on the street sprinkling. The matter was ultimately referred to the fire and police committee with power to act.

The question of the appointment of a permanent city engineer next came up for consideration. After careful consideration had been given to various pros and cons, it was unanimously resolved that Mr. H. Y. Parker be appointed as from June 1st, at a salary of $150 per month, subject to the bylaw defining his duties, now in course of preparation by the city solicitor.

Bylaw No. 79, entitled "Temporary Bylaw, 1910, No. 2," was put through its several stages. This bylaw provides for a temporary loan of $4270.

The city clerk was instructed to call for tenders for the removal of the fire hall to the new site on Norbury avenue.

Instructions were given the city clerk to notify R. Baldwin, works superintendent, of the appointment of Mr. H. Y. Parker as city engineer, from whom in future he would receive his orders.

It was decided that hereafter the full fee of $20 per diem shall be charged all visiting circuses.

Bylaw No. 78, dealing with real estate agents' licenses, was reconsidered and finally adopted.

Council then adjourned.

H. Y. Parker, who has been appointed city engineer, is too well known to all Herald readers to call for any extended notice. Mr. Parker was born in New York State and migrated to Canada some six years ago, first taking up residence at Calgary, where he filled the position of resident C.P.R. engineer. After spending a year at that point, Mr. Parker was transferred to Cranbrook, where he acted in a similar capacity for a period of 18 months. Leaving the C.P.R. employ he has since been engaged in a general engineering business, devoting a great deal of his time to city work, with such general satisfaction as was displayed in his unanimous choice on Tuesday evening for the position of city engineer. Mr. Parker has proved a faithful servant of the city in the past and the council have doubtless done a good stroke of business for the city in securing Mr. Parker's services continuously, subject, of course, to satisfactory performance of the various duties entrusted to him.

NOT CREDITED AT OTTAWA.

Little credence is placed at Ottawa in the report from Edmonton that Hon. Frank Oliver is to resign as minister of the interior in order to become a member of the railway commission. It is regarded as unlikely that he would be going to the Yukon in the interests of the interior department if he intended resigning that portfolio.

The Young People's Union of the Baptist church, enjoyed an evening outing at Bower Dell, or just a few rods therefrom, on Monday last. The evening was spent in ball and other games, with music and refreshments around a camp fire at the close of the evening's programme. There were some thirty present and everybody had a good time. The bower was regarded as a little too damp for the part of the programme as planned for; so the young people spent the whole evening on the other side of St. Joseph's Creek, crossing a neatly constructed rustic bridge thereto, provided by the committee.

The East Kootenay Produce and Provision company, Norbury avenue, have a legitimate grievance against the city council. They have expended a good deal of money in fitting up commodious premises and in putting down a sidewalk in front thereof, but owing to the state of the road in front of their premises they find themselves at a grave disadvantage. The efforts of enterprising business men should not be handicapped by carelessness in regard to the maintenance of the public highways. At small expenditure Norbury avenue could be put in a passable condition so far as this firm is concerned. The work should receive immediate attention.

HALF PRICE.—31 pairs handpainted china, Friday and Saturday, half price.—C. C. S.

Mrs. von Gersewalde wishes to notify her patrons and the public generally that her hairdressing parlors will be closed from Friday, June 24th, and that she will re-open at her new premises on Armstrong avenue, on Friday, July 4th.

Between Cranbrook and Fort Steele, about six miles from Cranbrook, the bridge over Isadore canyon has been burnt out. The government gang is now repairing the bridge. J. S. Dennis, C.P.R. land commissioner, and party enjoyed a very pleasant motor trip to Wasa, Windermere and Wilmer last week end. Mr. Dennis will be back in Cranbrook again shortly with a party from Minneapolis, whose mission it is to prepare a special set of views descriptive of lumbering, mining and farming scenes in Southern British Columbia. The party will include some score or more of trained artists who will enact the scenes at suitable situations, which are to be caught by the camera for reproduction in upwards of 90,000 Edison theatres on the American side. This is a form of advertising that should tell strongly in favor of East Kootenay, where the scenery is hard to beat and where unrivalled views of the great industries of mining, lumbering and ranching can be secured in abundance.

The Presbyterian church is steadily climbing up, its latest total being 13,211. The Church of England remains stationery with 3704 votes, the B. of L. F. and E., 2218, the public school, 1046, Baptist church, 600.

HALF PRICE.—31 pairs handpainted china, Friday and Saturday, half price.—C. C. S.

G. J. Bury, general manager of western lines of the C.P.R., passed through town last Friday, accompanied by Supt. Price, of Calgary, and other railway officials. In speaking of the re-organization of the divisions of the C.P.R. west of the great lakes, involving the creation of another division on the prairies, Mr. Bury stated that there would be no change in the present boundaries of the Pacific division—the only change would be in its name; after July 1 it will be known as the British Columbia division. At present the C.P.R. lines west of Fort William are divided into three grand divisions, the Central, Western and Pacific. Under the new order of things there will be the British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba divisions. The last mentioned will extend eastward into the province of Ontario as far as Fort William.

The production of "The Bohemian Girl" given at the Opera house last Sunday evening by the National Opera company, proved very enjoyable. There was a large and a very appreciative audience. The company as a whole gave an admirable rendition of this most popular of Balfe's operas. Miss Aida Hemmi, as Arline, delighted the audience with her interpretation of that part. She sang throughout with grace and ease and gave a most charming rendition of "I Dreamt That I Dwelt in Marble Halls." Miss Hemmi was ably supported by Mr. James Steven, as Count Arnheim and Mr. Chas. Couture, as Thaddeus. On the whole the performance proved a great treat to music lovers and a return visit from this company will be most heartily welcomed.

A meeting of the city license commissioners took place on Saturday afternoon, there being present Mayor Fink and Messrs. J. H. Casfake and Jos. Jackson. The chief inspector of licenses reported that he had inspected all licensed premises and found that they all complied with the requirements of the Liquor License Act. The clerk reported that all license fees had been paid to date. The mayor's action in granting a temporary license to J. H. McDonald, of the Wentworth hotel, was ratified and the transfer of the license from V. Hyde Baker to J. H. Macdonald was authorized. All renewals applied for were granted.

An executive meeting of the Cranbrook board of trade took place on Monday afternoon, when several matters of importance were disposed of. Chief among these was the question of advertising in outside papers. It was pointed out that a fair measure of success had attended the insertion of advertisements in some 400 American weeklies and it was resolved to repeat the experiment. It was also resolved to insert an advertisement in one of the leading Scottish weeklies. These advertisements simply call attention to the resources and openings for agriculturists in the Cranbrook district and invite correspondence with Secretary Benedict, of the board of trade. Accounts due the Herald, for printing constitution and bylaws, and to the City Livery for hire of team, during Mr. Middleton's recent visit, were ordered paid. A discussion as to participation in the forthcoming Dry Farming Congress at Spokane ensued, the general opinion being that Cranbrook district should spare no pains to get together an exhibit worthy of the resources and potentialities of the district. This matter will receive the attention of an early meeting of the Associated Boards of East Kootenay and will be taken up actively by the various boards interested in due course. Secretary Benedict was instructed to write the department of agriculture at Victoria to ascertain why Cranbrook district had been omitted from the lecture list recently issued, it being the opinion of the board that Cranbrook district was entitled to the advantage of any lecturers the provincial government may be sending round the country.

The monthly tea given by the ladies of the Presbyterian church will be held at the home of Mrs. C. Stevens, Fenwick avenue, Tuesday 28th June. A cooking sale in connection with the tea from 3.30 till 6. 16-2t which has at times been exercised at our expense. I can recall no more amusing example of this than on the occasion when we applied for the charter for the "Kootenay Caribou and Pacific Railway Co." The object of the extension to the Kootenay Central route was to finally connect with the great waterways of the Fraser, at any rate with the Yellow Head Pass, a scheme we still think would have been for the advantage of the country to have encouraged. But our charter to appear more attractive was shewn to connect with Port Simpson on the Pacific. A map has to be hung in the railway committee room, shewing the route in a legible manner. Large round circles in red marked the important places to be connected. Space did not allow the indication of other towns than those concerned. It chanced that Sir Thomas himself entered the railway room just as I had finished the hanging of this map and was adjusting it with some pride. He looked at the map very carefully, and then at myself, and then asked very quietly if I did not think it rather an ambitious scheme. But the humor of the situation began then to dawn upon him. For myself the grotesqueness of it has only now become fully developed.

"Now that the Kootenay valley is to be opened up and settled with a new population, it is interesting to recall the great changes that have come about within the lifetime of our old timers. It is as though a man should survive from the stone-hatchet age to see all the modern improvements. The country is one of intensely romantic history, and dramatic association. It was to the gold seekers of the '49 excitement in California that the discovery of the Wild Horse placers was due. So that readers of Brete Hart may link up East Kootenay with picturesque scenes and characters. Personally I have long ago settled upon a little old cabin near Victoria Gulch on Wild Horse where the "Partners" might well have lived. It will be remembered that they were reconciled after many years of bitter and unaccountable animosity, on the death bed of one of them, and the dying man turning to his partner said: "There was Saleratus in that bread!" And "Jack Hamblin" I am sure used to play cards at "Old Town" on Perry Creek. I imagine his name among the scores that used to be posted on the walls. In these accounts, many for trifling household commodities, was the invariable addition of a certain number of bottles of whiskey. Cololel "Starbottle" may have presided at convivial meetings there.

"I don't know how others are affected, but for myself I never look at one of these old cabins without intense interest. Ancient cities, such as Rome or Pompeii, may have their suggestions to give, but how much more of human interest is there concentrated in these humble ruins. Dwellings whose owners are not yet a generation separated from us. The hearth stone is barely cold. The broken shovel, the old cans and bottles, the bullet marks in the near by tree, the pieces of "float" ore, upon a stump. What a story of human and domestic interest there tell. The old snowshoes or broken runners of the sled, old skins of deer. What days of wandering on the summits or through the untrodden forest, cracking at quartz veins, with quick upward glances to see if the echo has not disturbed a bear among the blue berry bushes, or an elk upon the slides. What patient panning along the creek with the excitement of reaching bed-rock after putting down the carefully timbered shaft. Who has done any of these things and does not live them again at sight of the old cabin?

"Some years ago I employed an old "expert" to examine some abandoned diggings. I admired his robust vigor the more after I had carried him a few times across the creek on my back like Sinbad, the Sailor. For he had now got to a time when wet feet became a menace to existence. There upon the ground with our pans and shovels, the old man's reminiscences and vocabulary, his talk of bed rock flumes, of wing dams, gutters and rimrocks, of riffles and sluices, filled me with delight. And when the report was to be written, the old man was for waiting till his "neuvy" was by to do the handicraft, and it was with misgivings that he finally gave it up. To me those badly spelled words, and laborious writing, added immensely to the sound sense of the conclusions he had set down. They gave one a sense of the simplicity and sincerity of the writer and of the rugged way he had earned his experience.

"Those who ride on Pullman cars on the Kootenay Central in years to come will have little thought of their predecessors over the route, plodding on the ill-marked trails, or of the many great characters who lived in this valley, and have ended careers, that although never in the limelight of publicity earn for them a place in the forerank of the great silent army of pioneers. These lie in quiet, unmarked graves, or in no graves at all, under slides on the mountain sides, or in the deep eddies of rasty river currents."

GREAT FORTUNES IN CALIFORNIA OIL

More Men Have Amassed Wealth from Oil Investments than from Any Other Securities

This advertising announcement will appear in this publication but once. It contains a message for men who have money to invest, in small or large amounts, in a proposition which at the same time, embraces the maximum amount of security for the money invested, and promises greater profit than any other form of investment in the Western field.

If you will take the time to review the history of oil fields, both in the Eastern and Western portions of this Continent, you will find that the men who have amassed fortunes are the men who invested originally very small sums of money in oil shares.

Do you know that $100 invested at the inception of many an oil company, frequently multiplied in profits and actual worth until the holding today represents from $[illegible],000 to $15,000.

Take, for instance, if you had invested $100 in the following companies, on the following basis, you would have made:

Silver Tip	$ 600
W. K.	1,000
Sterling	1,000
Premier	1,100
Monte Christo	1,120
Record	2,000
S. F. & McK.	2,400
Sauer Dough	4,166
Lucile	5,000
San Joaquin	5,700
Peerless	6,350
Kern River	9,500
Central Oil	15,000

"Pinal" shares sold at 25 cents, are now selling at $25, and paying monthly dividends of 15 per cent., an income of $60 per month on an investment of $100. When the "Silver Tip" came in, the stock jumped over night from 66 cents to $4 and has been paying monthly dividends of 10 per cent ever since.

Similar opportunities are open to you, but you must think for yourself, have the courage of your convictions and ACT.

Coalinga is a district situated in the State of California, which is now so generally known as the greatest producer of high-grade petroleum that it is unnecessary for us to take up much space in describing the geographical construction of the field, or the actual results of operations of the many companies who control property in Coalinga.

This Company, the Coalinga-Eureka Oil Company, Inc., is a limited liability corporation, the shares of which are non-assessable, and have a par value of $1.

As development progresses, the price of stock will naturally advance. Even now trading in Coalinga-Eureka shares is very active. The limited block to be sold at 25 cents per share should, we estimate, be taken up on or before July 16th. We have therefore set this as the closing-out date for the unsold shares in this Company at 25 cents each.

This means that it will be impossible for you to buy a share in this Company at 25 cents after July 15th, 1910, and we give this notice that the price of stock will be advanced to at least 50 cents on the morning of July 16th. Should there then remain any portion of the block at 25 cents, the same will be immediately withdrawn from the market.

Stock may be advanced any day

The Company reserves the right to advance the price of shares at any time prior to July 16th, should the block of 100,000 shares at 25 cents be taken up in the interim.

We have recommended our most intimate friends to reserve their stock by wire, and not delay in writing by mail. On receipt of the reserve order, we will immediately set aside such stock, allowing the applicant the necessary time for the remittance to reach this office by mail.

The very fact that the stock of this Company will be sold for 50 cents on July 16th, should warrant the reader in reserving by wire as many shares as possible forthwith.

You will readily see if you purchase a block of 500 shares today, on easy terms, at the present price, 25 cents per share, you could sell one-half of your holdings when the price advances to 50 cents and thus have the other half free of cost to yourself.

The trading in the stock of this Company will naturally be more active when the price is 50 cents than at the original price, 25 cents.

There is every indication of the stock being worth and selling for $1 in 90 days' time. Do not delay in making your application.

No application received for less than 200 shares.

The stock may be purchased on an all-cash basis, in which case certificates are issued at once, or on an easy payment plan, as per schedule herewith:

What Your Money Will Buy.--Cash Plan 5 per cent Deducted

$ 47.50 will buy 200 shares.... par value 200
$118.75 will buy 500 shares.... par value 500
$237.50 will buy 1,000 shares.... par value 1,000

Instalment Plan

$20.00 cash and $15.00 a month for 2 months buys 200 shares
30.00 cash and 22.50 a month for 2 months buys 300 shares

$ 50.00 cash and $37.00 a month for 2 months buys 500 shares

MORAL REFORM REVIEW.

DOES IT PAY?

Bankers, other business men—and still others, might just look at this, sit up and think. Kansas City, Kansas, with a population of about 90,000, and opposite another wide open town across the river, put Local Option into force in 1906. In the general closing of "business" that followed, the lid was clapped down tight on some 200 gambling hells and sixty houses of ill-fame. Prominent citizens protested that such action would spell ruin to the city's business interests. So it did—to some; and so it always does. But at the end of the first year, the president of one of the largest banks in the city, a man who had opposed this law on the ground that its enforcement would hurt trade, found that at the end of the first year his bank deposits had increased by $1,700,000, and 72 per cent of the deposits were from men who had never saved a cent before, and 42 per cent had come from men who had never had a dollar in the bank until they had this chance to save. Others, who had objected to the moneyup from a business standpoint, found that there was an increase of 209 per cent in building operations, and that there were three times as many people building homes of their own as before. Another significant change was the cutting down of police court business to the tune of $25,000 for the first year—and the consequent cutting down of the tax rate. Then the proposed jail enlargement was postponed and, so far, there is scarcely anybody to lock up, except an occasional "pig." Kansas City has just appropriated $200,000 for a new school and the bonded indebtedness was reduced last year by $245,000 without the old blood money revenue. Besides all this, people are coming over to live in Kansas in preference to the other place, over 11,000 having been added to the population. In two years the bank deposits increased by $3,930,000. Does it pay?

What is good for Kansas is good for Cranbrook. Just let us have the law properly enforced. A wide-awake police force and a law-abiding people in Canada will pay larger dividends to the business and other interests than most anywhere under the stars. Let us see to it.

SUNDAY LAW OBSERVANCE.

The discussion in the recent Bay of Quinty conference on moving picture shows indicates that these concerns in Ontario, so potent in forming public sentiment, are strict observers of the one-day-in-seven rest day law. This conference passed a strong resolution asking the government to appoint an inspector for moving pictures that a higher moral tone may be secured in this class of educative entertainment, so growingly popular.

Toronto police force are seeking the co-operation of hotel men for a strict Sunday bar closing. To help against the temptation to yield to persistent law-breakers, all bars must now be cleaned on Saturday and kept absolutely locked up on Sunday. Bartenders found violating this law will forfeit their licenses.

A recent communication from Attorney-General Bowser to the Cranbrook Moral and Social Reform Council sanctions the prosecution, under the Lord's Day Act, of Sunday open pool rooms, violation of the rest day law.

WOMEN'S BEAUTY

IT CAN NEVER BE PERFECT WITHOUT LUXURIANT HAIR.

A head of luxuriant hair is sure to be attractive. But nature has not crowned every woman with glorious hair. Some very loveable women she has treated rather scantily in this respect.

For instance, there are tens of thousands of women in Canada today, who have harsh, faded and lusterless hair, who are unattractive simply because they do not know that nowadays even the whims of nature can be overruled by the genius of science.

If you are a woman without beautiful hair, do not permit your attractions to be hidden because of this slight misfortune.

Go today to The Beattie-Murphy Co. and buy a large bottle of Parisian Sage for 50 cents, use it each night, and you will notice the harsh, repulsive hair disappear, and in its place will come soft, silky, bright and luxuriant hair.

Parisian Sage is guaranteed by The Beattie-Murphy Co. to cure dandruff, itching of the scalp, and stop falling hair in two weeks, or money back.

BALACLAVA HEROES

DEATH OF TWO SURVIVORS OF HISTORIC CHARGE RECORDED.

With the death recently at Portsmouth of Troop-Sergt.-Major Lincoln another gap is made in the ranks of the survivors of the famous charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclava. Lincoln, a fine old man, standing over six feet, was born at Cambridge ninety-five years ago, and served through the Crimean campaign in the 13th Light Dragoons (now the 13th Hussars), but which he called the "Bangalore Gallopers."

He led his troop in the famous charge. His horse was shot under him, but he captured a riderless one—that of Capt. Nolan, who brought the fatal order and was shot down early in the charge. Lincoln soon lost his second horse, which was shot under him, and, without a scratch, he fell sprawling among the dead and dying.

Before he could get on his feet he was gripped by some Russians, frog-marched to Var, and questioned about the English forces; but he refused to give any information, though threatened with the knout. Lincoln spent a year in Russia, and used to declare that he had been in every Russian prison. He afterwards reached England through an exchange of prisoners.

On leaving the army in 1869, Lincoln had a chequered career as a drill-instructor and insurance-agent, and, finally, being unable to take care of himself, agreed to enter the workhouse, where he was one of the honored veterans. Then an ex-inspector of the Portsmouth police discovered his whereabouts, became a Good Samaritan, and gave him a home until he passed away.

Lincoln enjoyed good health to the last, but was mentally feeble.

The death occurred recently of General Sir Roger Palmer, fifth baronet, at his seat, Cefn Park, Wrexham, North Wales. He was seventy-eight, and one of the three officers surviving who rode in the historic charge of the Light Brigade. The other two are Viscount Tredegar and Sir Geo. Wombwell.

It is related of him that on the night before Balaclava he found a sentry sleeping, but, instead of putting him under arrest, reprimanded him. Next day, during the historic charge, the sentry saved his life by cleaving the skull of a Russian who was just about to run his sword into Lieut. Palmer's body.

From 1857 to 1865 he was M. P. for County Mayo.

PILLS AND GRAND OPERA

FAMOUS MANUFACTURER'S SON TO GIVE LONDON FINEST OPERA HOUSE IN WORLD.

Thanks to the popularity and enormous sales of a certain kind of liver pills, the people of London are to receive a musical education, and this city is to possess the largest and finest opera house in the world. Thomas Beecham, son of the famous pill manufacturer, has decided to spend $2,500,000 of his father's money in building an opera house, far superior in every way to the old Covent Garden.

"Opera is not popular in London," said Mr. Beecham in a recent interview. "It is supported because it is a social function, and without that help would be as unprofitable as concert-giving. I want to make people realize that if they go to hear opera they will get something first-class—something that will satisfy them—something that is worth the enormous expense attached to its presentation.

"The short season I promoted at Covent Garden last winter gave me a personal experience of what it costs to present grand opera. At His Majesty's we have an orchestra of sixty-five instrumentalists, a chorus of sixty, and numerous first-class principals. The only way to conduct a season of opera is to do it well, but I do not anticipate being able to keep my losses on this summer season much under $50,000, and they might easily run to double that amount.

"All the same, I think our public can be encouraged to support it, just as the public on the continent do. To that end I want, and am prepared to build, an opera house in London. I am only waiting until I can find a site in a good position at a fair valuation.

"This is not merely a commercial scheme. The making of money is not the object. To do everything in the best possible manner for the encouragement of opera, to attract the great public to hear the works of the greatest masters, will be its purpose, and if that can be done we are prepared to carry it on even if there should be some pecuniary losses attached to the working of it."

According to the annual report of the board of trade on the passenger movement between the United Kingdom and places abroad, of the 474,378 passengers who left for non-European countries in 1909, 194,897, or 41 per cent., contracted to land at ports within the British empire, 113,318 went to British North America, 24,649 to British South Africa, 38,350 to Australia and New Zealand, 9420 to India and Ceylon, and 9160 to other British Colonies and possessions. As compared with 1908 these figures show an increase of 17,890 in the number of passengers to British North America.

A situation of great seriousness has arisen in connection with the meat trade. The shortage of supplies has reached such a stage that the National Federation of Meat Traders has issued an official notice warning the public that an all-round rise in retail prices has become absolutely inevitable. The probable increase will average at least 2½d. a pound according to a leading London butcher. The main cause of the extraordinary shortage is to be found in the stringent embargoes which have been placed on the importation of live cattle from certain ports in the U.S.A. and Canada. While the embargoes have in view the prevention of disease, their effect on the meat market is simply disastrous.

Twenty thousand tons of salmon, which a few weeks ago were swimming about 600 miles north of Vancouver, are now in London. They are known as spring salmon, and are the very best of the seven kinds caught in British Columbia, equaling in flavor the finest Scottish fish. Spring salmon have nevet been imported direct into England before—indeed, they are only known here through small quantities of smoked fish sent by way of America to Germany, and thence to England. It is anticipated that the present enterprise, engineered by the Fishing Syndicate of British Columbia (Limited) will create something of a revolution in the salmon trade.

May 1910 will, it is hoped, see the completion of the Palace of French Industries on which work is shortly to be begun on the long vacant site between Aldwych and the Strand. The site comprises 124,000 square feet, and the building, which will have an imposing frontage on the Strand, will cost between £600,000 and £700,000. A number of shops are provided for in the plans, which will include a theatre seating 800, a restaurant, and open-air courts and gardens. It is intended to found a French club in connection with the Palace, so that it will become a convenient centre for the French colony in London. A big company with a capital of £1,000,000 will be floated shortly to carry the scheme out.

The exhibition of pictures by Canadian artists, which was to have been an especial feature of the Festival of Empire at the Crystal Palace, will be on view at the Walker Art Gallery, Liverpool, for three weeks in July. The exhibition will consist of 120 pictures and a number of pieces of sculpture, selected by the Royal Canadian Academy of Arts, and representing in addition the Canada Art Club of Toronto and the Ontario Society of Artists. Mr. Edmond Dyonnet, the commissioner from the Canadian Academy, had sailed for England with the pictures when the death of King Edward occurred. He had almost despaired of showing the works when the directors of the Walker gallery offered hospitality.

The London tradesmen are very grateful indeed to the king, the queen, and the queen-mother for permitting the period of full mourning to end this month. This decision is a god-send to a large number of shopkeepers, and has saved them from serious disaster; for if mourning had to be worn right through the season all the stocks of summer goods would have accumulated unsold upon the retailers' shelves, and would have been faded or out of fashion, and so unsaleable next spring. As it is, colors will again be worn during July and the latter part of June, and plenty of orders are being taken. The season, in fact, will be a good deal less subdued in its later stages than seemed likely to be the case three weeks ago. Ascot and Goodwood will retain much of their customary social lustre, though probably the display of frocks, especially at the former meeting, will be less irdescent than usual. And the military tournament and the horse show and the white city will attract great crowds of well-dressed people. The Americans alone would almost suffice to keep things moving. There will be some sixty or eighty thousand transatlantic visitors passing through London during the next few weeks, and these will want to go somewhere. In fact, they usually contrive to go everywhere.

The Policy of Pleasing Customers

As you go through the various retail stores and note their offerings on counters and in windows, it will strike you that for the same quality of goods, prices everywhere are just about the same. "Why, then," you say, "have certain stores developed into such wonderful institutions? What factor has lifted them from the mediocre class and made them distinctly successful?" You will find that it is not mere price, important as economy may be to the buyer. It is not only quality, essential as that may be to the holding of trade. But it is something more. It is their deliberate, definitely planned policy of pleasing customers and of course primarily acting in an honorable, fair manner.

At the very beginning let me say that good values must be given to the public as the foundation of any lasting success. As advertising is one of the chief means of coming into contact with the public, every advertisement that goes out should truly represent the house and should be backed up fully by the goods it advertises. And when special values are advertised, the purchaser should know beyond the shadow of a doubt that he is getting extra value for his money.

But over and beyond the merchandise, its mechanical manipulation and the advertising of it, is the problem of handling the public and pleasing it. The true test of courtesy on the store's part comes not so much at the time goods are sold as in the handling of complaints and the affording of little points in service. Every store meets buyers with a smile and gracious treatment—at least it should. But when you have occasion to return or exchange goods, to make a complaint regarding quality, or in some way to try to obtain satisfaction for a real or fancied grievance—how does the store receive you? With the same gracious desire to please or with long face and multiple objections? It is the treatment received at this time that classifies the store in the estimation of the customer.

Human beings are not like merchandise, nor are they to be handled like merchandise. Dealing with the purchasing public is a problem in personality, and it is through the point of contact, wherever it may be: at the counter, through correspondence or wherever service may be rendered, that the favorable impressions are created which ultimately constitute one of the firm's greatest assets.

When a purchase is made the buyer will be either satisfied or dissatisfied with his purchase and the treatment he receives. The article taken away may give satisfaction, while the treatment given the customer before he finally makes his purchase may drive his future trade away. The impression which coalesce into a firm's reputation, like those which make up reputation of an individual, are formed by what may seem the merest trifles.

At the very least a policy should be adopted which more than meets the public half way. To begin with, the attitude of inviting and encouraging the public to make known any dissatisfaction with either treatment or goods, goes a long way in inspiring confidence. Once a dissatisfied customer makes his grievance known, he offers opportunity for the merchant to make a lasting impression as to his fairness and squareness. Of course no merchant can afford to give the purchaser in every instance all he asks for, but he can afford to show liberality to such a degree that his store will have an atmosphere of cheerfulness, courtesy and service.

When the public has learned through experience that the name of a house is synonymous with the treatment that gives satisfaction, even though a clerk does fall down occasionally the house is not blamed. Rather the clerk is blamed for being out of harmony with the house and the incident does not cause the customer to feel any permanent resentment.

The wisest policy is for the merchant to put the basis of settlement up to the customer and to approach as nearly as possible the buyer's idea of what a fair settlement would be. After all, this is but a matter of reciprocation; the merchant must show as much confidence in the public as he expects the public to have in him. He is virtually putting himself in the customer's place and getting the customer's viewpoint. He is putting himself in a position to treat the customer as he would like to be treated under the same conditions.

Lastly, it is well to consider that however excessive and unreasonable the demands of a customer may seem, in the vast majority of cases, he is perfectly sincere in his complaint, and any concessation that can rationally be made, even if the house suffers a loss on that individual *sale, is in the long run sound business policy, a factor to*ward ultimate success. A pleased customer is always an advertisement. It is the narrow minded merchant who objects, as he thinks, to being imposed upon by a customer who demands some remuneration from a supposedly unsatisfactory purchase, but the broad, liberal and successful merchant looks beyond and sees what a benefit to him it is to do a favor for a customer and even if he is imposed on by two persons and the third one gets what he is entitled to because he did not get the values he expected to, then I say, rather be imposed upon by the two customers, but be sure the third one is a pleased and satisfied patron, and he advertises your house far and wide.

Henry C. Lytton.

Proprietor of a great retail establishment in Chicago and one of the largest single line stores in the world, Mr. Lytton's merchandizing experience has been gained in mercantile business of large and small cities the country over. The breath of his experience has familiarized him with merchandizing problems in all their phases; his conclusion is that holding customers is the prime factor in making a business permanent—that the organization, policy and methods of a business should be directed toward this end.

puty, James D. Bryne, who, though suffering from a very severe cold, put himself to no end of inconvenience to render their visit a memorable and pleasant one. He certainly succeeded. The time at their disposal was fully occupied with official work, but all the same, they had eyes to note the wonderful progress of the city during the last three years, the time of their last visit. There is a sound of rush, rustle, bustle and progress everywhere. One catches it in the grinding lurch of the cars round the curves at the street corners and in the whine of their motors as they climb the hills. You see it in the blaze of light when the city turns the electrics on. Also in the crowds of Cranbrook people you meet—George T. Rogers, Sam. Mighton, VanDecar, Jack McKenzie, Jimmy McNeill, Vic. Rollins and Tom Caven, M.P.P.

The air over Victoria holds the hush of a holy Sabbath as compared with her big brother on the mainland. Victoria is a dainty lady of high degree and exclusive culture, with all the dignity of an assured position, abounding wealth and great intellectual attainment—a young Athens, in fact. Vancouver is a big, raw-boned, broad shouldered boy with all the soul of a young god in his daring eyes that strain, prophetically, across the Pacific to the dreaming Orient.

The Princess Charlotte ripped the waters of the Sound at a twenty-five mile an hour clip on her flying trip to Seattle. It is a wonderful city. The geological fault in the strata under San Francisco which tripped the foot of progress in that city and flung her headlong in riotous ruin, was a blessing for Seattle, which, seeing its opportunity and knowing its advantages of position on the Sound and as a great terminal, leaped in and gathered to itself the trade of half the Pacific and all the trade to Alaska. Within eye shot of the Union depot are the huge warehouses and magazines of the Armours, the Gormans, Cuddahys, Swifts, Standard Oil and a dozen others, trusts, kings of salmon, kings of oil, kings of beef, pork and kings of lesser things. And you don't want to indulge in the bucolic amusement of rubber-necking the skyscrapers unless you wish to lose your life under the wheels of a street car or an automobile.

Mr. T. J. Gorman met our Cranbrook friends at the depot with a 60 horse power Winton, put them up for temporary membership at the Arctic club, a truly palatial house of ease, where they encountered familiar names like Kane, Carmody, Lawler, Gorman, men at the very head of law and business and the leaders of the destinies of this great city, which has a population of about a quarter of a million—nearly as much as all B. C., with its 345,000 square miles of area. Afterwards they were treated to a run over roads which twisted and curved like asphalt snakes in order to lower the grades along the hillsides above that exquisite sheet of water, Lake Washington. This is the residential quarter, where the flowers of every kind and hue seem to wanton in the luxury of life and sunshine. Along the water front you only see the material side—the money-getting side—of the character of the people. Up there you see the esthetic, the beauty loving side of their extraordinary mental makeup. Seattle is a wonderful city. It is an education in progress and directness of action to meet with some of its prominent men.

FOOTBALL

The boys travelled to Fernie on Saturday last to play the team of that town. In the first half Cranbrook had all the play, but as usual were unlucky near goal. W. Henderson who was playing very cleverly, was hurt and had to go off the field for a period. Fernie during this half very seldom crossed the half way line, Jim Clark at back kicking a nice length. T. McEwan almost scored with a lovely shot. Half time whistle sounded with Cranbrook pressing.

In the second half the same thing happened, continued pressure by Cranbrook but no goal. A burst away by Fernie almost resulted in a goal, very clever play by T. Clark, saving the situation. S. Watson almost scored with a rocket shot, Wallace followed with a dandy the goal keeper making a good save. Wallace immediately afterwards scored, but was given offside. Jim Clark at the last minute in clearing received a bad kick in the leg and had to be carried off. Fernie have got a *nicely balanced team, their goal*keeper saved from defeat by many clever clearances. Their forwards could make nothing of Cranbrook's halves. For Cranbrook T. Clark in goal was very safe. J. Clark and Bartholomew played very soundly. The McEwan brothers and Torrance were brilliant, all three tackling and placing very cleverly. Forward R. W. Watson played best and was easy the pick. Wallace on account of sore hand played more cautiously than usual. Henderson played great in the first half, but slackened down during the second. Harrison has played better.

TENNIS

Cranbrook tennis players journeyed to Moyie on Saturday and tried conclusions with some of the local racket wielders.

Results were as follows:

Doubles—Beale and Wallinger vs. Kamm and Blaylock, 6—2, 6—2, in favor of Moyie.

Garrett and Taylor vs Evans and Evans, in favor of Cranbrook, 6—3, 7—5.

Singles—Beale vs. Kamm, favor of Beale, 6—2, 6—3.

Wallinger vs. Blaylock, favor of Wallinger, 6—3, 6—1.

Garrett vs. Evans, favor of Evans, 6—3, 6—2.

Taylor vs. Murray, favor of Murray, 11—9, 6—3.

The visitors found the Moyie courts somewhat faster than their own, and having a much greater glare, made the balls harder to see.

BASEBALL

GONZAGAS TWICE DEFEAT LOCAL TEAM IN WELL CONTESTED GAMES.

Baseball enthusiasts have enjoyed two excellent games this week. The Gonzagas, of Spokane, gave two very fine exhibitions of skilful team play. On Monday evening the score stood 8 to 2 in favor of the visitors. The game was clean and fast throughout and was witnessed by a record number of spectators.

Tuesday evening's game was, if anything, more exciting. The home players put up a determined resistance and had it not been for weakness in the early part of the game, victory might have rested with Cranbrook. However, the visitors got in their deadly work in the second innings, scoring six runs. Cranbrook did its best to repeat, but only succeeded in running up a score of 3. Thereafter, despite much brilliant play, neither side scored again.

Two really excellent exhibition games were provided, games that must have taught our local players a few things. The Cranbrook players have nothing to be ashamed of in their defeat. They went up against a strong combination, boys who have been playing together constantly and who are quite familiar with each others' peculiarities.

The visit of the Gonzagas has given baseball quite a little boost and from now on we may look for better team play on the part of Cranbrook's nine and keener interest on the part of the ball-loving public.
