HOSPITAL BENEFIT CONCERT.

Notwithstanding the fact that so many entertainments have taken place during the past week, the concert given in aid of the Cumberland Hospital fund was largely patronized. A number of the young performers who appeared for the first time created a very favorable impression, though naturally being slightly nervous. His Worship the Mayor, occupied the chair, and in a neat little speech, made an eloquent appeal to the town to aid the hospital in its present difficulty. Mr Montez' trombone sole, Tosti's "La Serenata," was warmly received. This gentleman is a decided acquisition to musical circles and his services will be much in demand. In the selection from "Norma" the duet accompanied by Mr Murdock on the cornet was unthusiastically received. The appearance of Mrs H. P. Collis was the signal for much applause. Her recitation, "Lady Bird's Race," in which her fine dramatic power was fully evinced, and with her graceful appearance, elicited a well merited encore, in which she graciously responded with "No Kiss." Again we had the pleasure of listening to Mrs Hill's sweet voice, the rendering of both her songs revealing the richness, flexibility and compass of her voice. This lady received encores to which she generously responded. Master H. McLean, who possesses a decidedly sweet voice, sang "The Railway Guard," in character, and was encored. The closing number, "The Japanese Singing Girls," represented by Misses Murdock, Hill and Dowdell, was executed in a very graceful manner. These young ladies were costumed with the best of taste, and the audience showed its appreciation in a most enthusiastic manner. The dance between the verses was prettily played by little Miss Collis. Miss Bate's song "Shells of the Ocean," was excellently sung, and received much applause. Miss Collis and Master A. Anderson performed a selection from "Lucrezia Bergia," on violins, and although their talents are in an embryonic state foretell a promising future. Of the children who performed on the piano we will refrain from criticising, it would be superfluous to individualize each detail, but judging from the hearty applause and the reception accorded to Master Letvinoff and his sisters, with the Misses Short, Mounce, Collis, McLean, and Masters Bennie and McLean, these young people have established an indisputable claim to popular recognition.

The committee of the Hospital concert fund desire to express their thanks to Messrs Waller, Collis, Leiser & Co., Murdock and Fraser, for articles lent for use, also to Mr Clinton for his generosity in running a train to Union Wharf, and the I.O.O.F. for decorations left in the hall.

Mr Gosnell, secretary to the Immigration Department, has a number of applications from persons seeking employment as farm hands and would like to have those in need of such help to send their names and addresses, with kind of labor to be performed, and the wages paid. A number of those making applications are from Great Britain and have had experience as practical farmers and can be recommended as such.

Telegraphic News.

Nanaimo, May 2—The Labour Commission to enquire into the labour troubles on the Island are now in Victoria and have made arrangements with the two Commissioners appointed by the Dominion Government to hold their first session in Ladysmith on Monday next. No definite schedule of sitting has been arranged, but it is decided that evidence will be taken in Ladysmith, Nanaimo, Victoria, Vancouver, Rossland and Fernie, and the Commission hopes by keeping at the work continually to finish about the end of May, after which they will at once submit to parliament.

Victoria.—The seven boys, all under 15 years of age, who were accused of causing the wounding of a Chinaman who had his leg amputated as a result of injuries received from being run over by a car, after a scuffle with the boys, have been committed for trial.

Rumor is current here today that the Governor will refuse his assent to the Ratification Bill, and that dissolution is imminent.

The str. Victoria which formerly carried coal from Ladysmith to San Francisco is a hopeless wreck on Bamboo Island off the China coast.

Wm. Pearce, supt. of mines, has wired from Frank that the dead now number 83 killed. The rock slide was four thousand feet long, and there is no trace of the river for one mile but the water is now going through the rocks. It is though that there will not be any further slides. There was no earthquake nor volcanic eruption as first reported. All working in the mine, except two, escaped.

Ottawa, May 2—The budget passed in the House yesterday by a vote of 108 to 54. Mr Tarte voted with the Opposition.

Ladysmith, May 4.—A meeting was held here on Saturday. It developed the fact that there is a decided difference among the men regarding the present labor trouble. The business of the meeting is secret, but the men talk more or less. It has transpired that the whole relief question was discussed. I is openly said that freedom of expression is not allowed in the Union and the proposal to call a public mass meeting next week to fully consider all phases of the problem is under way. This does not, however, involve any wavering on the part of the men to the principle of organization. They are as firm on that question as ever; but they regard the matter in a great many of its phases, as a public one requiring a public statement, and the claim that a public discussion might clear up many of the difficulties now in the way. One story of the meeting today says:—that a motion endorsing action of the Federation in the distribution of relief funds was passed by a good majority. The news that the Cumberland men had come out caused no surprise here, the general opinion being that they had no other course under the circumstances.

Victoria, May 4.—Mr Dunsmuir says he has heard that 196 men are on strike. He does not expect but what a large number of the remaining 200 miners will remain, can supplement them with Chinamen of whom a large number are good miners. He does not think the Chinamen will strike. If all go on strike he will close the mines. He cannot help it and does not care.

MINERS' STRIKE

The long expected strike was declared last Saturday evening, after a meeting of the W.F.M., and a ballot taken through the day. A little after 9 p.m. three delegates sought Mr Little, the General Superintendent, and informed him of the result of the meeting and of the ballot, the question balloted on being that of demanding recognition. Afterwards, the men spent the evening quietly, and dispersed for home at the usual time. Monday, the tools were all turned into the store keeper. The mines are working—a number of Chinese and a few Whites carrying on the work. The Company have posted notices at the different pitheads warning trespassers, and have placed watchmen to guard against any accident. It is understood the tenants of the Company houses have been notified to vacate.

The vote taken is said to have been, 196 or, 12 against, 3 spoilt ballots.

ODDFELLOWS' CONCERT.

A more successful function than the concert and dance held by the I.O.O.F. lodge on Monday, 27th, has never been given by the Order in Cumberland. U.S. Consul Clinton occupied the chair, and a large number of the Order were present. Musical selections were given by orchestra, also on the mouth organ by Mr Potter which was much appreciated. The duo on cornet and trombone by Messrs Montez and Murdock, was exquisitely played. Mrs Hill who has already won the hearts of music lovers, sang "Waiting." This lady was in excellent voice, and in response to a rapturous encore sang "The Banks of Allan Water." Mr J. Denton's song "The Wolf," was well received, also the numbers given by Mrs Banks, Mr Hutchinson, and Misses Bennie, Halcrow, Denton, Abrams and Cameron. A large number remained for the dance which was thoroughly enjoyed, music being provided by Messrs Roy and Vater, after which refreshments were served which was not the least pleasing feature of the exercises.

The 26th of April was the 84th anniversary of the institution of Oddfellowship in America. The Lodge attended divine service on that day at Grace Methodist Church where an appropriate sermon was preached by Rev Mr Wilkinson, the Order attending in large numbers in full regalia.

MY HEART'S DARLING

BY W. HEIMBURG.

CHAPTER IX.

And every hour she had spent with her from that first dreadful one till to-day passed before her memory. It is wonderful that one can grow so fond of a person one hardly knew a few weeks before, and one so entirely opposite from one's self. Hortense had roused her out of her thoughtless life, had awakened in her her slumbering desire for everything that was beautiful in life; she had now a dawning conception of what life might be. She drew the curtains, lighted a lamp, fetched her portfolio from the bureau, and began to write to her sister.

"Dear Mathilda,—Forgive me for not letting you hear from me for so long: I have had very little time; my future mother-in-law keeps me so busy about the house, and in the afternoon expects me to make visits with her; and when I have time to myself I go to see Hortense. Dear Mathilda, if it were not for her I should die of homesickness for you and the children. Alfred is—"

Here she stopped abruptly. She remembered with terror that she had not said good-night to Frau Counselor. She hastily shut the portfolio, put it back in the drawer, and went to find the old lady. A narrow ray of light streamed from under Alfred's door on the dark floor without, and his mother's sharp voice struck on her ear.

"You may be grown up, Alfred, but do not be angry with me; you are still the same—" She stopped.

"Silly youth," said he, finishing for her. "Is that what you wanted to say? Perhaps you are right."

"I have warned you often enough; but if ever there was any one who would not hear, it is you! And you have not even the courage to say: 'This running to Frau von Lowen must stop, and at once.'"

"It is a weakness in me. You are right again," sounded from his voice at the moment when Lucie shut her door again.

She stood with her lips tightly pressed in the little room, her hands clinched together. Let them only try, only dare to quench the only light in this cold, horrid, dry life!

She threw herself on the bed and stared into the darkness.

"I wish I had never seen him. I wish I were dead!" she cried to herself. And she lay down in a tearless, speechless rage until day-break.

The next morning Lucie was standing pale and exhausted in the kitchen ironing her future mother-in-law's caps and laces. Tante Dettchen sat at the kitchen table shelling pease. Nothing was to be heard but the light sound of the iron being pushed backward and forward, and occasionally a sigh from Tante Dettchen. The window stood open, a dazzling light streamed in, and that, with the heat from the coal fire, made the young girl's headache unbearable.

The Frau Counselor was in the sitting-room mending the wash. Alfred was off, busy with his patients.

Tante Dettchen had something on her mind. Various subjects which she began were droped again without finding the right turn; so at last she asked directly: "Have you and Alfred had any differences?"

"No," said Lucie, and pushed a fresh steel into the iron.

"You are a very curious engaged pair," said the elderly maiden, in a complaining voice, "one here, the other there. I thought it would be so different. Your future mother-in-law is quite hurt about it; she thinks you neglect her for Frau von Lowen. I think it is the other way. 'Just notice,' said I, 'he is not attentive enough: he kisses her so seldom.' 'Oh, well, it is all right; Alfred has other things to do, just in the beginning of his practice;' but it seems to me you have been hurt about it. It is so, child?"

Lucie blushed deeply.

"But, aunt, I beg you—" she said, much embarrassed.

"Well, now, no harm meant," said the stout little lady taking a couple of peas with her lips from the palm of her hand. "He is so much absorbed and so much away; and when one is young one thinks so much of one's engagement. But, child—" and suddenly the tears welled up in the kindly eyes—"he always was so quiet and undemonstrative; you must not take it ill of him. He is the soul of goodness; you will only know him thoroughly when you have lived long beside him. I have carried him in my arms — he is a jewel, believe me!"

Lucie did not look up from her ironing. "I do not take it ill of him," she said, faintly.

At this moment there was a knock at the door, and upon Tante Dettchen's saying, "Come in," the Herr von Meerfeldt's old servant appeared with a magnificent bouquet of roses, and a little note, and under his arm the Russia-leather box with Hortense's mementoes of her travels.

"With Frau von Lowen's compliments."

It was as if the hues of the roses suddenly dyed the young girl's cheeks, the color came so quickly. She read the note hastily and said, smilingly:

"Many thanks; and I will come."

The old man set down the little chest on the kitchen table and disappeared.

(To be Continued.)

Many claims have been made on behalf of the modern newspaper. It is now held forward as the only reasonable cure both for cold and poverty. If you stretch it over you at night it is better than a warming pan, better than an eiderdown quilt. If you roll it up into wet balls and put it on the fire it does instead of coals.

MANY CHILDREN OUT OF SCHOOL

With Coughs and Colds, and Parents Everywhere are Proving the Wonderful Curative Powers of

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine

When grown people neglect their ailments and allow them to develop into serious diseases, they have no one to blame but themselves.

With children it is different, because they do not realize the seriousness of a neglected cold nor the means of obtaining a cure, and many a child, as he grows older and finds himself a victim of pneumonia, consumption, bronchitis, asthma or throat trouble, cannot but see that his parents were responsible for neglecting treatment when his ailment began in the form of a cold.

Today the schools have many a vacant seat on account of coughs and colds, and many children who are there should be at home. What treatment are these children getting? Do their parents realize the seriousness of neglecting to cure a cold? Have they proved the merits of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine as a cure for coughs and colds, bronchitis, croup, whooping cough, and all kindred ills?

Very many have, for there is no preparation for throat and lung diseases that has anything like the sale of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

Be careful when you buy to see that the portrait and signature of Dr. Chase is on the wrapper. If you send the children to the store, warn them not to accept any imitation or substitution. Children like to take Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and there is no remedy so prompt and effective. 25 cents a bottle; family size, three times as much, 60 cents; at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

ONLY A SLIGHT COLD.

Yet It May Lead to Consumption and an Early Grave.

If your blood is poor or watery, a touch of cold or influenza will settle in your lungs, and the slight cough of today may turn to the racking consumptive's cough of tomorrow.

Weak lungs are caused by weak blood; weak blood is an open invitation for consumption to lay upon you the hand of death.

Stop that cough by enriching your blood and strengthening your lungs with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They make new, rich, red blood. They add a resisting power to the lungs. They have saved hundreds from a consumptive's grave. Here is a positive proof that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure where other medicines fail. Miss Katie Henry, Charlottetown, P. E. I., says: "Some months ago I got caught in a rain storm, and the wetting was followed by a cold. At first I paid but little attention to it, but as the cold clung to me and finally developed into a hacking cough, I became alarmed and consulted a doctor, who gave me a bottle of medicine. Unfortunately, it did not help me, and I began to grow pale, lost in weight and my appetite completely left me. I was now regularly under the care of the doctor, who told me my lungs were affected, and that I was threatened with consumption. The doctor's treatment did not seem to benefit me in the least. I grew steadily weaker, and finally was compelled to remain in bed. At this time a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and even brought me three boxes before I finally consented to take them. I have reason now to bless my friend's persistence, because I felt better before the pills were all gone, and I gladly continued the treatment, and was soon able to be out of bed and take a walk every day. I am now in the best of health and weigh ten pounds more than I did before I took sick. I feel that I owe my life to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and hope my experience will benefit some other sufferer."

All diseases which come from poor blood or weak nerves can be driven from the system by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which may be had from any dealer in medicine, or will be sent post paid at 50c per box, or six boxes for $2.50, by writing direct to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. Remember that substitutes and medicines said to be just as good do not cure.

Oliver Rogers, a scarian, adopted a peculiar method of ending his life at Southampton, Eng. He put three pennies into a slot gas machine, and then fixed a long piece of rubber tubing to a burner. Turning on the gas he placed a pillow slip over his head, into which he put the end of the tube. Then, lying on the bed, he slowly suffocated. He was dead when discovered.

Impure blood is the breeding place for innumerable illnesses. When we see anybody suffering from rheumatism, limping on crutches, or find on our way a person covered with sores, we feel tempted to call out to them, as well as to those suffering from anaemia, scrofula: "Poor man the help is within your reach, and you still continue to suffer!" We have the right to say that, since we have known the history of this popular medicine, hardly any other medicine has succeeded in achieving such remarkable and thorough cures as Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Drops. Facts are eloquent. Thousands of testimonials bring news of cures by these "life-drops" as a grateful patient named them, and every day the list of them is increasing. It must be further said in praise of Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Drops that they are prepared from plants and roots without any admixture of mineral substances, such as mercury, zinc, etc., and therefore do not have the unpleasant after-effects resulting from the use of other so-called blood purifiers and purgatives, which often remove small ills and cause much greater ones. We are often asked: "When should the system be purified?" This must be left to personal judgment, and we can only reply: When nature demands it. The spring is generally considered the proper time for purifying the system. We do not want to upset that theory, but we must point out that blood should be purified also at other times, when there are signs that it is not clean and wants regulating.

The road to success is open to all, but too many want to get there without the trouble of going.

The older a girl gets the more respect she has for the wisdom of her mother.

If there is any petty meanness about a woman it is sure to crop out at a euchre party.

CROSS BABIES.

How to Make Them Bright, Good-Natured and Well.

A crying baby is an unwell baby. The little chap is not cross for the fun of it. He cries because that is the only way he has of expressing the fact that he is either in pain or discomfort. Most of his little troubles are due to some disorder of the stomach or bowels and if Baby's Own Tablets are given both the trouble and resulting crossness will disappear. You can take a mother's word for it, and Mrs. John T. Sutherland, of Blissfield, N. B., says: "I think Baby's Own Tablets the best medicine in the world for little ones. My baby was very cross and used to keep me awake half the night before I got the Tablets. Now she sleeps soundly, is good natured and is growing splendidly." You can give these Tablets with perfect safety to a new born babe. They are guaranteed to contain no opiate or poisonous sleepy stuff, and are a sure cure for all the minor ailments from which little ones suffer. Sold by medicine dealers or sent postpaid at 25 cents a box by writing direct to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

There never was and never will be a universal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir—the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated diseases rooted in the system of the patient—what would relieve one ill in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtainable in sound, unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grevious ills. By its gradual and judicious use the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength by the influence which Quinine exerts on nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life is a disease and by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses through the veins, strengthening the healthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance—result, improved appetite. Northrup & Lyman, of Toronto, have given to the public their Superior Quinine Wine at the usual rate, and, gauged by the opinions of scientists, this wine approaches nearest perfection of any on the market. All druggists sell it.

As a result of the introduction of the Bertillion system by the Zurich police the town has practically cleared out all its bad characters. Even tramps give the town a wide berth, for as soon as a person is arrested he is photographed and his measurements taken, even if the charge is not serious. Of late the police have had so little to do that there is talk of reducing the number of the force. So few crimes are committed in the town that Zurich is considered to be the most moral town in Switzerland.

For a Happy Day

By M. M'C. WILLIAMS

Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure Company

Out in the garden Philomena sang so sweet and high it was like the scent of the clove pinks. They stretched in a matted mass all up and down the old fashioned borders. The garden was big, and a wide, weathered gray house brooded beside it. Time was when the Tryon house had been the finest and most hospitable in all the countryside. In the day of broken fortunes it still kept an aroma of cheery good will.

Lusty hundred leaf roses grew behind the bordering pinks. Philomena was snipping them ruthlessly, cutting them without stems and dropping them in her apron. It bulged ridiculously with the mass of bloom, but she kept crowding in clipped pinky white petals, pretending to be conscious of nothing but her work.

Somebody had come up behind her, a tall, young fellow, supple and merry eyed. He undid the apron strings delicately, gathered the band in his hands, stretching daring arms about her waist, and said: "Stop slaying your thousands, Phil! One rose ought to love her sisters too well for wholesale murder."

Philomena slid from his clasp, dexterously leaving the huddled apron within his hands. "If I were a rose, I had rather be clipped for potpourri than be left to waste and wither," she said with a delicious upward tilt of the chin.

"Being interpreted, that means you have not given up a stage career," Arthur Wayne said, catching her hand. "Phil, Phil," he went on, "you must give it up. I cannot bear to think of my rose, my rose of all the world, withering, fading, in the glare of the footlights."

"Stop! We have gone over all that!" Philomena said imperiously. "I tell you, I must go. It is past bearing, the way things are now. Oh, I know my aunts would not starve. They've a roof over their heads, and Uncle John—but I cannot speak of him. What I cannot bear longer is to see them pinched, unhappy, lacking the little comforts that mean so much in age, feeling themselves dependent."

Phil gave him a reproachful look. "You won't understand," she said. "All their lives they have been somebody, gentlewomen, able to hold up their heads. Gentlewomen hate charity. They risked money and lost it, against uncle's advice, for my sake. Now, when I am told I have a fortune in my throat, I must take care of them, even if it breaks my heart."

The last word was under breath. Wayne made to draw her to him, but a brisk, bustling voice behind them said: "So ho! Very pretty! Upon my word, very pretty! Are we rehearsing for Strephon and Chloe?" Then without waiting answer the newcomer ran on: "Miss Tryon, be ready for the early train tomorrow. I've a letter from Franzoni. He will try your voice, provided you come to him by 10 o'clock in the morning."

"I shall go with you," Arthur said, openly taking Phil in his arms. "I said you must choose, dear. Let me take it back. If go you will, let me follow—everywhere."

"No, no! I will not let you spoil your life!" Phil protested, but he held her fast, saying, as he looked Music Master Graham square in the eye: "Philomena is my promised wife and not by a fair weather promise. Wherever you may take her I shall go too."

Graham's eyes were quizzical, yet not unkind. "That's as you please, young man," he said, waving his hand up and down. "But if you'll heed a friendly word, stay behind, at least at first. You see, you'd be so patently, so palpably romantic you'd be set down, not as a fact, but a press agent's fake. The voice there," nodding toward Philomena, "is so pure, so golden, so rarely true it needs to be kept high, not vulgarized. I give you my word the roaring lions supposed to haunt stage doors are really no more than yelping curly poodles. They tag after and fawn upon you for an encouraging look or word, come to the whistle and tumble over themselves to follow a finger even half lifted. But as for danger, my friend, even an unconscious look scares them. Miss Tryon has only to be herself in order to be always and everywhere perfectly safe."

"Notwithstanding I shall go," Arthur said obstinately.

Graham shrugged his shoulders. Miss Tryon, the elder of the aunts, came tripping between the borders, her delicately wrinkled face exhaling a spiritual fragrance like the scent of dried rose leaves. "Come in, all of you," she said eagerly. "There's a peddler on the piazza, an elderly man, and he looks so tired, carrying that heavy pack. Such lovely things! Yes," deprecatingly to Philomena, "Martha and I let him show them, but indeed it was after we had told him we could not buy. I thought, though, maybe, Arthur—only his mother gets so much in the city. But really there is the loveliest length of brocade, almost exactly like my grandmother's second day's silk"—

As she spoke she had huddled the other three in front of her toward the house, much as she would have marshaled fowls a trifle unruly.

At the piazza steps Philomena sat down, but the men both fell to examining the peddler's wares. Graham, indeed, almost instantly caught up the length of brocade, crying as he threw it over Philomena's shoulder: "Here's exactly what is wanted for your first opera costume."

In spite of herself Phil gave a little delighted cry, the silvery satin ground was so rich and lustrous, the apple bloom strewn over it so perfect in line and color. She was sorry when the peddler said respectfully:

"That, sir, is an ordered bit, so not for sale."

"Get another piece for your order; I'm bound to have this one," said Graham good humoredly.

The peddler shook his head. "There is not another piece like it," he said. "This was specially woven for a happy day gown."

"Who is to wear it?" Philomena asked softly, stifling a sigh. Somehow she found herself trembling, all her courage oozing away. She wished as she had never wished before that she had somebody of her very own to lean on. Her mother had died when she was born. Her father had gone away, disappeared, leaving her only a clouded name for heritage. She had never known until the trouble came; then Uncle John had spoken harsh truth. It was that, as much as love for the two dear old ladies, which kept her steadfast to the thought of going into the world and winning its applause.

She had never been curious or envious, but somehow there swelled in her a sense of passionate injury against the unknown who was to wear this happy day gown, ordered no doubt by a father's loving pride. She crushed the rich fabric between her fingers and fixed a long look upon the peddler's face.

"A girl is to wear it—that is, if she chooses," the peddler said, moving a step nearer.

Then she saw that he was more travel worn and weary than aged. Dimly, uncertainly, she saw, too, a likeness that drew her electrically to her feet. Through the open hall door her father's portrait showed in the bloom and strength of young manhood. She glanced from it to the peddler and back again, then stood white as death, facing him, too shaken to speak. His eyes followed hers and grew misty as he cried:

"Sisters! Daughter! So I have really kept my place! Philomena, my baby, the happy day gown was brought for you."

Greedy Animals.

It may be doubted whether those of us who are able to obtain sufficient food without difficulty can appreciate the craving for sustenance experienced by sea birds and other animals which have often by the force of circumstances to fast for long periods. Gulls will eat until they cannot fly and when they find pilchards on board a boat will continue their feast until they can only lie down and gasp. A superfluity of food comes at such long intervals that when it does come the avian intellect reels at the prospect, and what seems a horn of plenty brings dire disaster. Seeing that gulls and gannets know no better, we are not surprised to hear of a John Dory, stuffed to the very mouth, floating helplessly on the surface of the water, unable to escape from a flock of sea birds which have deprived it of its eyesight and will quickly take away its life.

A snake which thrusts its head through the palings to seize an unwary frog and finds itself unable to draw back again with the frog in its throat has wit enough to disgorge the amphibian and to deftly draw it through by the leg so as to swallow it on the safe side of the palings. But probably a snake which happened to be on the wrong side, in company with a frog, would consume it on the premises and so render itself incapable of wriggling through the bars.—Longman's.

Modest Charity.

They were discussing charity in the drawing room, and one of the gentlemen was inveighing with some sarcasm against benevolent folk who make donations and have their names published in the papers.

"Nearly all charitable acts," he said eloquently, "have pride or vanity as their motive. For my part I hate ostentation. I remember once when I was traveling through a part of the country where I was not known I came upon a lonely little station, where in the waiting room there was fastened to the wall a contribution box for the benefit of the sufferers through recent inundations.

"There was not a soul there, not a person in the neighborhood knew of my presence or was acquainted with my name, and I went and dropped a goldpiece into the box and slipped away unseen. Now, sir, what I contend is that my secret offering was a more meritorious one than if it had been made on a public subscription list with a loud flourish of trumpets."

"You are right," said a listener. "That was genuine modest charity, and I don't wonder you brag of it."

The Motion of a Swimming Fish.

One of the most recent applications of chrono photography—by which is meant photography applied by means of a series of short and rapid exposures to the representation of moving objects in successive positions—has been devised in France for the study of the swimming motions of fish. A trout was chosen as the subject of investigation, and the successive photographs were taken at intervals of one-tenth of a second. They show completely the movement of the fins, and present a similarity to the photographs that have been obtained of the motions of the wings of a flying bird.

The swimming action begins with a lifting of the front part of the fin. This lifting motion runs rapidly backward along the fin, the front part being in the meantime depressed once more and just before the motion ceases at the tail the movement recommences at the front end of the fin.

Is 100 Years Old.

Saturday, Dec. 27, 1902, being the 100th birthday of Mrs. Walter Watkins of Forestville, her relatives and friends met at her home to commemorate that event with a surprise party. In all, there were 101 persons present. Of these there were 11 over 60, 6 over 70, and Mrs. Griffin over 80 years of age, all of whom live within a few miles of one another. They assembled to honor the sole surviving pioneer of the township of Charlotteville, who was born Dec. 27, 1802, at the village of Cats ill near a creek of the same name, but known to the inhabitants of that time as North River, in the State of New York. Jane Frayer came to Canada with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Frayer, one brother and one sister, and arrived at the Long Point settlement in November, 1807. She married Walter Watkins in 1823 and has lived in the neighborhood and almost in sight of her father's farm all her life time.

Reason for His Nickname.

Wealth of Honduras.

The principal wealth of Honduras lies undoubtedly in its mineral deposits. There are but few sections that do not show veins of silver and many that carry gold as well.

One of the best pieces of advice for a safe journey through life I saw on a sign at a railroad crossing. The sign read: "Stop! Look! Listen!"—Baltimore American.

MEDICINE HAT.

Editor Writes That All the Bad Weather Does Not Originate There.

Fred G. Forster, editor of The Medicine Hat News, has written a somewhat long letter to The Chicago Tribune, defending his town against the aspersion that all the bad weather comes from that place. He says: "Medicine Hat is a town of 2,500 people, delightfully situated in the valley of the South Saskatchewan River. We are 1,000 miles west of Lake Superior, 200 miles east of the Rockies, and 70 miles north of the Montana boundary between Canada and the United States. To be more exact, our latitude is 50 degrees 1 minute north, our longitude 110 degrees 37 minutes west, and our elevation above sea level, 2,161 feet. We are in the centre of that district of Western America which is swept by chinook winds. These winds are the bright influence of our 'Banana Belt' winters." Continuing, Mr. Forster remarks that: "There is a district around Medicine Hat about 200 miles in diameter where the winters are short and the temperatures moderate. The district comprises what is the stock grazing country of the Northwest—which district is attracting attention from stockmen from every stock state in the country to the south of us. The town is a growing, progressive place, a railroad centre, has coal mines, and is a great stock shipping point. The town enjoys the advantages of up to date commercial and business facilities. The town owns its waterworks plant and supplies citizens with good water at a moderate rate. The town owns its natural gas system and gives citizens gas for fuel and light at less than 20 cents per 1,000 cubic feet. The Canadian Pacific Railway has a yearly pay roll of $250,000, and this year the stock business brought into the ranches $800,000. We have five churches, two schools, two hospitals, three chartered banks, all lines of mercantile business represented, and are, in fact, a unique community. The citizens know how to enjoy life as they find it here, and life on the prairier and in the prairie towns has an enticing fascination. There is an unaccountable charm about the free, open Western life."

SOME GREAT PEOPLE

"MEN AND WOMEN I HAVE MET," BY THE HON. J. W. LONGLEY.

Attorney-General of Nova Scotia Gives Some Interesting Personal Sketches of Prominent People to a Canadian Club Audience in Toronto—The King, Joseph Chamberlain, Marie Corelli, Joseph Howe and Others.

There is probably no characteristic of human nature more general or more highly developed than that which reaches out after knowledge of Great People or Great Places. The world worships a hero. The man who climbs to pre-eminent prominence by the ladder of politics, of literature or of war, the place which comes before the public as the scene of some great achievement is the man or place upon whom or upon which all eyes are cast. Such is the power of personality. Through their words or works the personality of an author or statesman so impresses itself upon the public that he becomes, as it were, one of the personal friends of the individual. Thus the address of the Hon. J. W. Longley recently on "Men and Women I Have Met" to two hundred members of the Canadian Club in Toronto interests everyone who reads or thinks, containing as it did interesting sketches of the King, Joseph Chamberlain, Marie Corelli, Grover Cleveland, William McKinley, Joseph Howe and others about whom all have heard. A politician, lawyer and litterateur Mr. Longley is well-known in Ontario, a couple of his claims to undying fame being the authorship of a work on "Love," and the authorship of what any waiting politician would call a sublime but stern truism, being the statement that "Too long in office is not good for one party."

An Intellectual Centre.

The test of a politician as well as the gracefulness of a litterateur and the shrewdness of a lawyer were combined in Mr. Longley's opening sentences, in which he expressed his pleasure at having an opportunity of holding communion with so many of the leading men of "this intellectual centre (Toronto)," by which of course he would have them know that they were not the least important men he had met. This sentiment he afterwards made clearer by assuring them that if he did not mention their names individually among his list of distinguished men it was because of his respect for their modesty and because of no lack of appreciation of their merits. This sentiment was popular, and Mr Longley was already regarded as a man of large and quick discretion.

A Crisis at a Dull Time.

Launching into his theme, Mr. Longley took his hearers in thought and imagination back over a little journey of his in 1895, when for the first time he visited the British House of Commons, which stands in sublime grandeur on the banks of the Thames. Sketching little incidents illustrative of the difficulty of securing admission to the charmed and solemn precincts thereof, he told of the session then in progress—dull, monotonous, routine. It was in the precarious days of the Rosebery Government, which struggled along on a majority of eighteen or so—a majority which Mr. Longley seemed to scorn as paltry. However, at this particular time they went into committee of supply on the war estimates, and Mr. St. John Brodrick moved a reduction of £100 in the Minister's salary, the point being of course want of confidence. Sir William Harcourt was out in the smoking room, remarking in his own English way that "it was awfully dull and monotonous to have a day without a crisis," when the division bell rang, and Mr. Harcourt's crisis arrived in the shape of a defeat for the Government which he led by 132 to 127. And Mr. Longley thought it was worthy of comment that a crisis involving a change of Government, with its consequences so far-reaching, should have been accomplished under circumstances so dull and monotonous.

Strongest and Ablest Man.

Mr. Longley admitted he was not greatly impressed by British oratory and then went on to unbosom his great admiration for his friend Joe. Chamberlain, whom he described as being "by all means and by every test the strongest and ablest man in public life." He then enunciated the principle that rarely is the strongest man selected for leadership. A colorless, steady, won't-set-the-world-on-fire sort of man was generally the choice and just here it might be mentioned that Mr. Longley is not leader of his party in Nova Scotia. In his humble opinion, however, Joe Chamberlain, while not Prime Minister had exerted more influence in shaping the policy of the Empire than any other six men. A man who never slumbered or slept, possessed of colossal nervous energy, his department overshadowed all others, and he had a complete grasp of everything which pertains to any matter in connection with any part of the Empire. Such was Joseph Chamberlain.

Meeting the King.

Intending, of course, no reflection, Mr. Longley spoke of the King, the then Prince of Wales, next. This was in pursuance of his trip and not in righteous regard for the laws of precedence. It was at a big banquet in London, and in addition to Mr. Longley there were many distinguished men present. These included Lord Herschell, Sir Richard Webster, Sir Frank Lockwood, the only man who could make an afternoon speech, Lord Chas. Russell, Cardinal Vaughan, Lord Roberts. In paying his humble compliments to the Prince, Mr. Longley declared that never in his life had he met a man who so untiringly and so faithfully laid himself out to be urbane and agreeable to all than the Prince of Wales. He had a joke for each and a greeting for all and Mr. Longley was of opinion that while the duties of the office were circumscribed in looking around the great nations of the world it would be difficult to find one better equipped with grace and efficiency, tact and judiciousness for the high position of King than he who now rules this great Empire.

Kings of Literature.

While a politician and a lawyer, as has already been pointed out, Mr. Longley aspires after other books than blue books, however instructive, or works of law, however luminous and edifying. He even goes so far as to place literature of the broader kind higher in the scale of importance, and he went on to tell of the mighty minds he met at a five o'clock tea given by Mrs. Louise Chandler Moulton, of Boston, in London. This talented lady, it was pointed out, was one of the exceptions to the rule that authorship and poverty go sweetly and serenely hand-in-hand, but lest he should lead any aspiring writers astray the speaker hastened to explain that she married a man with money. Hence she could flourish five o'clock teas, and at one of these Mr Longley met Israel Zangwill, who wrote a book with its scene in Nova Scotia, but who had never been in Nova Scotia, and showed no desire to compare notes with one who had; Mrs. Frances Hodgson, she of the soft, dreamy eyes, who wrote "Little Lord Fauntleroy;" Mrs Alexander, novelist and woman of earnestness; Jerome K. Jerome, one of the funniest little creatures imaginable, always bubbling with humor, and the curves of whose mouth seemed to suggest the scenes and situations of his books; Mrs. Custer, the most interesting author of "Boots and Saddles." Later he met Mr. Grant Allen, who resented the insult of being classed with Canadians. Last, but not least, he met and spent an evening with Marie Corelli.

Marie Corelli's Mission.

And thereby hangs a tale. Mr. Longley likes Marie with the passionate fondness of a chivalrous man, and in telling about his visit to her home he launched out into a eulogy of her ladyship and her works. It was his opinion that few writers of the present day possess the genius and the power of the same much-maligned Marie, and he loved her for the enemies she had made. She was an earnest woman, seeking to do something worth while, and she was sneered at and abused because she does not conform to the tame, worldly and materialistic spirit of the age. "Looking abroad at the present time," declared the speaker, "she thinks, as I think, that the twentieth century is opening up the most absolutely materialistic age the world has ever seen, with a hideous disregard for anything higher than elevators, electric roads steamboats or stocks." Even the churches were tainted, and you could turn a crank and run off half the worships of the present times, the devout souls being worrying over Dominion Steel stocks all the while. It was because Marie had sought to draw attention from these things and raise men to a higher level that she had got herself disliked, and yet he predicted her triumph would come and her name and fame would live long, after the narrow wretches who criticized her were silent and forgotten.

Even at Washington.

Mr. Longley does not pose as a humorist, and yet he sprung a little joke when he said, "there were men worth meeting, even at Washington."

He told this story of the late President McKinley's urbanity, who, although William McKinley, a man of great charm of manner, was at that time just introducing the famous McKinley Bill.

"I want to tell you how much I appreciate your friendship and your kindness to me. At the same time I must say I have nothing but contempt for your bill." This is what Mr. Longley said in parting.

"My dear sir, it is such opinions from such men as you which gives me faith in my bill." This is what Mr. McKinley most graciously said in reply.

Thomas B. Reed was described as the strongest intellectual man of his age.

A Great Canadian.

Mr. Longley did not wish to trespass on the dangerous ground of expressing opinions about great Canadians, and besides he hadn't time, but he tarried long enough to tell of the qualities which made Nova Scotia's own Joseph Howe one of the most unique and wonderful characters of Canadian life, a greater than Macdonald, Blake, Cartier or Mackenzie, and so endeared him to his own people that when he died tens of thousands cried as though at the loss of a friend. While others were playing the political game he was planning great plans. Hence he won.

His Oversight.

He—Why didn't you answer my letter asking you to marry me?

She—You didn't inclose a stamp.

MUNICIPALITY OF
THE CITY OF CUMBERLAND.

THE POUND BY-LAW.

The Municipal Council of the Corporation of the City of Cumberland, enacts as follows:—

1. At such place or places as shall be designated by the Council from time to time a City Pound may be established and shall be maintained as such by the Corporation of the City of Cumberland.

2. The Council may from time to time appoint a Pound-keeper at such salary or remuneration as it may decide and appropriate out of the annual revenue.

3. The City Treasurer shall furnish the Pound-keeper with a book in which the Pound-keeper shall enter a description of every animal impounded by him, with the name of the person who took or sent the same to be impounded, the day and hour on which the animal came into his charge as Pound-keeper, the day and hour on which the same was redeemed, discharged, or otherwise dealt with or disposed of, the name of the person and the amount paid by the person redeeming the animal, or, if sold, the name of the purchaser, the amount that was paid for the animal, and the amount of the expense thereon, and the balance, if any, remaining over the above, the penalty allowance and expenses, and to whom the same has been paid, which balance, if any, shall, prior to making the return to the auditor, be paid over to the City Treasurer.

4. The Pound-keeper shall at the end of the month make a return to the City Clerk, in writing, comprising the above information and any other information he or the clerk may deem necessary, which return shall, if required, be verified by statutory declaration of the Pound-keeper.

5. The Pound-keeper shall pay over to the City Treasurer all money received by him once in every month, or oftener, if instructed so to do, and shall at all times produce his books for the inspection of any member of the Council, or the Auditor or the Treasurer, when requested to do so.

6. No horse, ass, mule, ox, bull, cow, cattle, swine, hog, sheep, goat or dog (except dogs registered as hereinafter mentioned) shall be permitted to run at large or trespass in the city at any time, or to graze, brouse, or feed upon any of the streets, squares, lanes, parks, alleys, or public places of the City, or upon any unfenced lots or unfenced land within the city limits, under the following penalties against the owners, or keepers, or persons having charge of the same, viz:—

For each ox, horse, mule, ass, bull, cow, or other cattle.....	$3 00
For each swine, hog, sheep, or goat or other animal.....	1 00
For each dog.....	0 50

7. If any of the animals mentioned in section 6 of this By-law (except dogs registered as hereinafter mentioned) are found at large or trespassing within the limits of the City of Cumberland, or grazing, brousing, or feeding upon any of the streets, squares, lanes, parks, alleys, or public places of the said City, or upon any unfenced lots or land within the City limits, it shall be taken by the Pound-keeper or his assistant and driven, led, or carried to the City Pound and be there impounded, and it shall be the duty of the Pound-keeper so to impound such animals.

8. Any person or persons who find any of the animals mentioned in section 6 of this By law, running at large or trespassing within the City limits in contravention of this By-Law may drive, lead, or carry the animal to the said Pound, and it shall be the duty of the Pound keeper to receive and impound the same, and pay for—

Horse, mule, bull, cow, or other cattle.....	$2 50
Each swine, hog, sheep, goat, or other animal.....	50
Each dog.....	50

9. It shall be the duty of all officers and constables of the police force of the said city, whenever they see or meet any of the animals mentioned within section 6 of this By-Law running at large or trespassing within the city limits in contravention of this By-Law or whenever their attention is directed by any person to any such animal running at large or trespassing as aforesaid, to immediately take charge of such animal, and drive, lead, or carry, or cause the same to be driven, led, or carried to the Pound.

10. The Pound-keeper shall daily furnish all animals impounded in the City Pound with good and sufficient food, water, shelter, and attendance and for so doing shall demand and receive from the respective owners of such animals or from the keepers or persons in whose charge the animals ought to be, for the use of the Corporation, the following allowance over and above the fees for impounding, namely:—

For each horse, ass, mule, bull, cow or other cattle, $1.00 per day.
For each swine, hog, sheep, or goat, or other animal, 50cts. per day.
For each dog 25cts. per day.

11. If the owner of any animal impounded, or any other person entitled to redeem the same, shall appear and claim such animal at any time before the sale thereof, it shall be the duty of the Pound-keeper or his assistant, to deliver up the same on receiving the amount in full of the penalty, and the allowance and the expenses chargeable for each and every animal, and in addition thereto if the animal redeemed is a dog, the annual tax therefor.

12. When the Pound-keeper is aware of the name and address of the owner of any animal impounded he shall, within 24 hours of the impounding, cause a letter or post card to be sent to such owner with a notification of such impounding.

13. It shall be the duty of the Pound-keeper, or his Assistant, before making delivery of any animal so impounded, before sale, or on payment of surplus money after sale, to obtain from the person or persons claiming the same, his, her or their name or names and residence, and to enter the same in a book, together with the date when such animal was impounded, and the date when the same was sold or redeemed as the case may be.

14. If no person shall appear to claim such animals or animal so impounded, within three days after the same may have been impounded, or if the person claiming such animal shall refuse or neglect to pay the penalty and the allowance and expenses chargeable thereon, it shall be the duty of the Pound-keeper to give at least five days notice of the sale thereof.

15. Such notice shall contain a general description of the animal or animals impounded, and shall be posted up in some conspicuous place at the Pound, where the same shall have been impounded, and also at the City Hall.

16. If at the expiration of the time specified in the said notice, no person shall appear to claim the animal or animals therein specified and referred to, or if any person shall appear to claim the same, but shall refuse or neglect to pay the penalty and the allowance, and the expenses accrued and charged on such animal or animals; it shall be lawful to sell the same, and the animal or animals shall be offered to public competition and sold to the highest bidder by the Pound-keeper at the City Pound.

17. If the animal be a horse, ass, mule, ox, bull, cow, or other cattle, it shall be advertised in a newspaper at least three days before such sale.

18. If, after the sale of any animal as aforesaid, the purchaser does not immediately pay the price thereof, the Pound-keeper may forthwith cause the animal to be resold, and so continue to do until the price is paid.

19. In case of the sale of any impounded animal or animals, the said Pound-keeper shall retain out of the proceeds of the sale sufficient to pay the amount of the penalty and the allowance and all expenses chargeable by him on account of the said animal or animals.

20. No person or persons shall break open, or in any manner directly or indirectly aid or assist in breaking open the Pound, or shall take or let any animal or animals thereout, without the consent of the Pound-keeper. Each and every person who shall hinder, delay or obstruct any person or persons engaged in driving, leading, or carrying to the Pound any animal or animals liable to be impounded under the provisions of this By-law shall, for each and every offence, be liable to the penalty hereinafter mentioned.

21. If any dog impounded as aforesaid is not redeemed within seven days after such impounding it shall be lawful for the Pound keeper to kill it in some merciful manner.

22. Every person who pays the annual tax for a dog as mentioned in the Revenue By-law, shall thereupon be entitled to have such dog registered, numbered, and described in a book to be kept for this purpose at the office of the City Treasurer, and to receive a metal badge or tag stamped with the year for which the tax is paid, and the number of the registration, and in case any dog shall be found at large within the Municipality at any time without such a badge or tag as aforesaid such dog shall be deemed to be at large within the meaning of Clause 6 of this By-law.

23. In the event of a dog being impounded and the owner proving to the satisfaction of the Pound-keeper or the City Treasurer that the annual tax had been paid and the metal badge or tag had been removed before the impounding of the dog, it shall be lawful for the Pound-keeper to release such dog from the Pound at once and enter the particulars in his book.

24. It shall be lawful for the Pound-keeper, or his assistant, or other persons as aforesaid, to impound any dog running at large in the City and not wearing a metal badge or tag in accordance with the last preceding section of this By-law.

25. No person shall keep or harbor any dog or other animal which habitually disturbs the quiet of any person, or any dog or other animal which endangers the safety of any person by biting or otherwise.

26. No horse or horses shall be left untied within the city limits, unless under the control of the owner or person in charge.

27. Every person convicted of an infraction of any provision of this By-law shall forfeit and pay therefore a penalty not exceeding fifty dollars.

28. A dog shall be deemed to be at large within the meaning of the provisions of this By-law when not accompanied by or under the control of the owner or person in charge.

29. This By-law may be cited as the City Pound By-law, 1902, to come into effect the 1st day of March, 1903.

OVER AN UMBRELLA

By C. B. LEWIS

Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure Company

Mrs. Josiah Peabody, wife of Deacon Peabody of the village of Glenville, had a remarkable umbrella. It had witnessed the struggle for American independence and had taken many journeys by land and water. The ribs had been bent or stove in on numerous occasions and the handle broken and glued together half a dozen times. It had attended funerals, camp meetings, quilting bees, husking frolics and town meetings without number and at the age of 120 years was still doing business at the old stand and holding its own against all competition.

Mrs. Levi Cantwell, wife of Deacon Cantwell of the same village and living right across the way from Mrs. Peabody, was a remarkable woman, and what more natural than that a remarkable woman and a remarkable umbrella should adventure together? Mrs. Cantwell was remarkable in so much that she would never stir out of her house without an umbrella. She dreaded rain like a cat and, no matter how clear the day, was always looking for a sudden downpour. She had an umbrella of her own, and it was large enough to shelter her, but now and then she was forced to lend it or send it to the shop to be repaired.

The day she started to drive over to Rawsonville in the deacon's one horse wagon was one of the occasions when her umbrella was "not at home." It was a beautiful June morning, with no rain in sight for a week, but Mrs. Cantwell didn't propose to run any chances. After trying in vain at three or four houses she called upon Mrs. Peabody to lend her that remarkable old colonial.

Her request fairly stunned the owner of the sacred relic and was at first peremptorily refused, but after considerable discussion, remembering that Mrs. Cantwell had the reputation of being careful handed and tender hearted, Mrs. Peabody yielded.

"You know what store I set on it and what store the deacon sets on it," she said as she brought out the blue covered umbrella and dusted it off.

"I do," was the reply, "and you needn't worry one single bit. You must know what a careful woman I am when you remember that I've made one set of cups and sassers last me fourteen years."

Mrs. Cantwell might have driven away with the umbrella raised over her head, but as she needed both hands to manage the lines the deacon carefully stowed it away under the seat.

Arriving at Rawsonville, the old horse was hitched to a post in front of a store, and Mrs. Cantwell entered to do some "trading." She was an hour or so about it, and during this interval a stray cow came down the street hunting for something better than burdocks to eat. She found it when she looked over the tailboard of the wagon and espied the sacred umbrella. She had never seen the like of it before, and the taste was novel and palatable. The more she ate the more she wanted, and she never stopped until the last inch of cover had been swallowed and a vigorous but unsuccessful effort made to devour handle and ribs.

Mrs. Cantwell drove home without having looked under the seat and realized what a wreck accompanied her. It was only as she reached her own door and Mrs. Peabody came across the road that the tragedy was discovered. Excuses and apologies and offers to make repairs didn't go. With the wreck hugged to her bosom Mrs. Peabody retired to her own house, and good will to men flew out of the back door as she entered the front.

A quarrel over a broken flatiron may be confined to two neighbors, but a difference of opinion over a remarkable umbrella is a different thing. No one charged Mrs. Cantwell with deliberately bringing about the wreck, but she was blamed for not keeping one eye on hungry cows outside the store while she had the other on seven cent calico inside. She knew the associations and sentiments surrounding that relic, and sooner than submit it to peril she should have hired a boy to watch it. The pros and cons were discussed at every fireside in the village, and of course a feeling of bitterness was engendered. In less than a week neighbors who had always borrowed sugar and tea of each other were refusing to lend, and back gates were being nailed up.

Deacon Peabody was a good man. So was Deacon Cantwell. Together they had passed the contribution boxes in church and counted up the receipts after the sermon. They had worked out their road tax side by side and had stood elbow to elbow in temperance crusades and town improvements. That long friendship was now broken. After looking at the dilapidated umbrella for the fiftieth time Deacon Peabody had said to his neighbor:

"Deacon Cantwell, I never dunned a man in my life, but you owe me 50 cents."

"I do, and here it is," replied Deacon Cantwell, "and I'm free to say I think you are a mean man."

"I don't want any words with you."

"Nor I with you."

"You'll take your hoss out of my pasture!"

"And you'll keep your hogs outer my garden!"

The minister naturally heard of the rise and fall of the remarkable umbrella, and, although he refused to become an adherent of either side, he felt it his duty to touch upon the affair from his pulpit. He didn't mention the umbrella by name, nor was he too hard upon the hungry cow. He didn't hint that Mrs. Cantwell was careless or Mrs. Peabody impetuous, and the meeting between the deacons was passed over entirely. He simply found a Biblical parallel and worked it up for the benefit of both sides, and the result almost wrecked the church. For the next three months there was more backbiting in the village than should have been heard of in ten counties, and there were no signs of a let up when incident stepped in to restore peace.

One day Deacon Peabody's wife went up into the garret to overhaul an old trunk. The place needed airing, and she raised a window. A hand organ was playing down the street, and she held up the sash with one hand and leaned out to see and to hear. Next thing she knew she was hanging head downward on the outside of the house, while the sash rested on her ankles and held her fast.

Deacon Cantwell's wife was sewing carpet rags in her sitting room when a series of shrieks lifted her out of her chair and propelled her to the front door. For a few seconds she was overcome by the sight opposite. Then she made a run for it, and two minutes later she was in the Peabody garret. Colonial umbrellas, hungry cows and the tongue of gossip were forgotten as she tugged and pulled at the hanging burden. When it was finally drawn back over the window sill, both women fainted away and tangled up with each other, and Silas Goodheart, who had heard the last shrieks and come running, stood over them with uplifted hands and said:

"Now let the heathen rage, for umbrellas is nowhar, and peace is restored to Glenville forevermore!"

Modern Manners.

Somebody has discovered that the decadence in modern manners does not necessarily denote our increased brutality or absolute indifference to the feelings and needs of other people. It is balm to the soul to be assured of this fact, says the Atlanta Journal.

We have admitted to ourselves for some time past that our manners have not the repose which should mark the caste of Vere de Vere and that we are indeed frankly discourteous to each other. We also know that many men are no longer particular how they act or what they say in the presence of women and do not even observe the small courtesies of life where members of the opposite sex are concerned. Men no longer hesitate to let a woman wait on them or to push her aside in a crowd or to smoke in her face unapologetically, as if that were their natural right. We certainly are less polished and ceremonious than were our forefathers.

Facing this fact, it is pleasing to be assured that the change is not due to selfishness, but is simply the expression of our desire to be honest, to avoid shams. Therefore if we sometimes overstep the limit and cultivate unpleasant freedom of speech and action, manifest unrestrained rudeness, we are to be excused on the ground of our excessive frankness and honesty.

Tried to Improve His Name.

The old lady who admired her pastor because he said "Mesopotamia" so beautifully has been outdone by a Broadway office boy.

He was not pleased with the surname of Mulligan, to which he was condemned, and so when he applied for a new position in another office he decided to give himself a new name, and for this purpose borrowed what he thought was a name from the financial statements which he had to sort and file in the office in which he was last employed.

"What is your name?" inquired the clerk to whom he made application for work.

"William Recapitulation," replied the boy.

"That's a funny name," said the clerk after he had the boy repeat it several times.

"Don't you know General Recapitulation?" asked the boy in surprise.

"Never heard of him."

She Got Up a Blush.

A contributor to a Boston paper says that he always thought until recently that the blushing cheeks of a bride were a certain indication of either her embarrassment or her abounding health. He was disabused of this opinion by what he saw at a wedding the other day. The wedding party was in the vestibule, all ready to proceed to the altar, awaiting the wedding march. He noticed that the bride was very pale, and the bridesmaid noticed it about the same time and proceeded to take the bride's cheeks between her thumbs and fingers and give them a good, hard pinching. Under this process they soon showed a good color, whereupon the bridesmaid carefully performed the same operation on herself, and they proceeded with glowing cheeks to the altar.

Selling a Wife.

"To Be Sold.—For 5 shillings, my wife, Jane Heeband. She is stoutly built, stands firm and is sound, wind and limb.

"She can sow and reap, hold a plow and drive a team and would answer any stout, able man that can hold a tight rein, for she is hard mouthed and headstrong, but if properly managed would either lead or drive as tame as a rabbit.

"Her husband parts with her because she is too much for him. Inquire of the printer.

The foregoing is an advertisement of over a century ago and was first published in Virginia.

The Zoo Race.

The animals thought they would have a race;
The monkey was referee;
The bull was stakeholder, for, as he said,
It was his nature to be.
The camel got a hump on himself;
The lion ran with might and mane;
The tiger stood off, for a beast of his stripe
Was not let to enter again.
The elephant took his trunk along
In case he won the prize;
The peacock was starter and missed no one,
For, you see, he was all eyes.
Some spotted the leopard for winner sure;
The old ones chose the gnu,
While those who leap to conclusions quick
Bet on the kangaroo.
The ostrich plumed himself on his speed;
All tried the record to wreck;
The hippopotamus blew his own horn,
But the giraffe he won by a neck.
—Baltimore American.

Jersey Lily's Turn at Criticism.

Mrs. Langtry was discussing the other day the recent marriage of the octogenarian Marquis of Donegal with a young Canadian girl. She said it reminded her of an incident in the life of her father. Her father was a clergyman, and there came to him to be married one day a man of 70 and a girl of 18. The minister whispered, when this ill-assorted couple came and stood before him:

"The font is at the other end of the church."

"What do we want with the font? We are here to be married," said the old man.

"Oh, I beg your pardon," the clergyman rejoined. "I thought you had brought this young girl here to be christened."

Unanimous.

Customer—I'd like to see something nice in checks.

Tailor—So would I.—Chicago American.

Red Hair.

The modern Persians have a strong aversion to red hair. The Turks, on the contrary, are warm admirers of it.

A Curious Royal Custom.

When any Spanish sovereign dies, the body is at once submitted to the process of fossilization, nor can it be placed in the royal pantheon until the body has been absolutely turned into stone. Curiously enough, the period required for fossilization varies considerably. Some royal bodies have become solidified in a very short period, while others have taken years before the fossilization took place. It took exactly thirteen years to convert the body of the father of Alfonso XIII. of Spain into stone.

An Effective "Attachment."

Attaching a man's property for debt is supposed to be a legal process, but an incident which occurred years ago in the city of Natchez, as related by Davy Crockett in his "Life and Adventures," shows that there are other "attachments" which sometimes accomplish a beneficent purpose.

An odd affair occurred when I was last at Natchez, says Mr. Crockett. A steamboat stopped at the landing, and one of the crew went ashore to purchase provisions. He went into a saloon on the way, and the adroit inmates contrived to rob him of all his money. The captain of the boat, a determined fellow, went ashore in the hope of persuading them to refund, but they declined.

Without further ceremony, the captain, assisted by his crew and passengers, some 300 or 400 in number, made fast an immense cable to the frame building where the theft had been committed. Then he allowed fifteen minutes for the money to be forthcoming, vowing that if it were not produced within that time he would put steam to his boat and drag the house into the river.

The thieves knew that he would keep his word, and the money was promptly produced.

Simplicity.

The Countess of Malmesbury, discoursing on beauty, says that many women would be handsome with at least the good looks of healthy animals if they did not disfigure themselves with oddly devised and ill assorted adornments.

A simple dress of one plain color, fashioned in an easy, flowing style, short if for outdoor wear, long if for the house, the bodice loose and drawn in lightly by a belt, would adorn a slim shape and conceal a stout one far more than the most complicated production which the most celebrated man milliner ever foisted on a vain and foolish customer.

Wrinkled Cloth Gowns.

If cloth dresses are wrinkled through packing, draw the bathtub full of hot water and hang the dress above it to steam. The wrinkles will soon disappear. This also freshens lace and chiffon gowns. In packing always stuff sleeves with a little torn paper, laying the waists flat.

Keep the Pig Growing.

The pig should be kept growing continually, says Professor J. W. Sanborn. It requires a certain amount of food for maintenance. If there are no growth and no gain, this maintenance food is actual loss. About twenty-five to thirty years ago good hogs were marketed usually at eighteen to twenty-four months of age, and the general average of weights was not more than is made now at eight to ten months, showing the great improvement in the present methods and the great loss of feed by the old plan of long maturing.

Self Feeders For Sheep.

Self feeders for sheep have proved an expensive saving. They save the labor of regular attendance, but increase the amount of food consumed to produce a given gain. This, owing to the varying appetites of the sheep and the love of change in food not being regarded, causes a sluggish action of the stomach and consequent decreased assimilation.

Feeding Grain to Sheep.

Sheep make the best use of grain when it is fed in its original whole, dry condition. Masticating their food thoroughly, the finest weed seeds are totally fined and destroyed. Finely ground grain forms a sticky mass in the mouth and seems distasteful to the sheep.

A Pointer For Stock Raisers.

Never before did the markets make such a wide difference in the price being paid for good cattle and inferior ones. Referring to this The Live Stock World says, "Prices being realized for good cattle and the low figures being paid for low grade cattle leave little doubt in the minds of experienced feeders and stockmen about what should be done."

Potted Plants.

The reason some people "never have any luck with plants" is sometimes because the drainage is defective. A plant will not live in a heavy, sour, soggy soil, such as fills a pot when the drainage is not complete. This is especially true of palms, to which the stagnant moisture is sure death, but it holds true of any pot grown plant.

Singleton—Never.

Mrs. Wederly—Well, I don't wonder at that. As a rule, women are hard to please

NESTING WOOD DUCKS.

The Courtship Period Is Followed by a Very Prosaic Married Life.

When a pair of wood ducks find water and a hollow tree to suit, little time is lost in preparing the nest. This task and the covering of the eggs are performed by the female, for, to the best of my knowledge, the male does little more than sit around on handy limbs and look pretty. During the period of nest building and while the duck is laying he is the beau ideal of a handsome and loving cavalier, ever attentive and seemingly most anxious as to her whereabouts should she happen to get out of his sight. But with the waning of the honeymoon he seems to feel rather bored with the whole business, and gradually he gets clubby—i. e., wanders from his own fireside and hunts up another drake or two to help him loaf away the summer. The busy little duck keeps her own counsel and "sits tight" on the dozen or more highly polished ivorylike eggs crowded together in a bed of soft decayed wood and down from her breast.

Quite frequently the nest is at the bottom of a hollow several feet deep, and no doubt the strong, hooked claws of the wood duck are a special provision for the oft repeated climbing out of the hollow.—Edwyn Sandys in Outing.

A Vacuum Pressure Experiment.

Chemical science has taught us how to overcome the dreaded diseases that have swept away whole cities in the past. It has taught us the manufacture of explosives and munitions of war and has made possible the greatly improved modes of travel, and it may be truly said that to chemistry we owe the most material progress the world has made.

While this little experiment will not deal with the hidden secrets that live in the famous laboratories, or treat upon the mystic powers of viscosity and relegation, it will show what power the absence of air has in attracting movable substances into the place that has been vacated by the air. Few think when they breathe the atmosphere that surrounds them that it has a pressure of fifteen pounds to the square inch or that it can attract even a piece of iron into the space which it leaves.

For an example of the strength of air take any tumbler, fill it about half full of tissue paper, set fire to the paper, turn over the glass in a basin containing water about one half inch deep and then watch the water ascend the interior of the glass.

Didn't Know His Own Child.

At Antietam, just after the artillery had been sharply engaged, the Rockbridge (Va.) battery was standing waiting orders. General Lee rode by and stopped a moment. A dirty faced driver about seventeen said to him:

"General, are you going to put us in again?"

Think of such a question from such a source to the general of the army, especially when that general's name was Lee!

"Yes, my boy," the stately officer kindly answered, "I have to put you in again. But what is your name? Your face seems familiar somehow."

"I don't wonder you didn't know me, sir," laughed the lad, "I'm so dirty. But I'm Bob."

It was the general's youngest son, whom he had thought safe at the Virginia Military Institute. "God bless you, my son; do your duty," and the general rode on.

Spoke Too Soon.

Alexandre Dumas was one day the guest of Dr. Gistal, a leading practitioner in Marseilles. After dinner, while the coffee was being handed round, the host requested the great novelist to enrich his album with one of his witty improvisations.

"Certainly," replied Dumas, with a smile, and, drawing out a pencil, he wrote under the eyes of his entertainer the following lines:

Since Dr. Gistal came to our town
To cure diseases casual and hereditary
The hospital has been pulled down—

"You flatterer!" here exclaimed the doctor, mightily pleased; but the poet went on:

And we have made a larger cemetery.

A cranberry jam that will keep a long time is made by cooking the berries with one-quarter their measure of water until soft. Squeeze through a cheesecloth, leaving nothing but the pulp and seeds. Add an equal amount of sugar, cook five minutes and seal in tumblers.

St. Sophia's Treasure.

Among the wonderful mosaics of the ancient Church of St. Sophia is a gigantic figure of the Saviour. Mohammedan desecration has covered it with whitewash and paint, but through it all the original picture can be easily identified.

STILL ANOTHER TRIUMPH — Mr. Thomas S. I have also been subject to Quincy for over forty years but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the Piles nor Quincy have troubled me since."

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

Free—Gratis—For Nothing

YOU CANNOT LONG FOOL A WOMAN.

When the white man wants the black man's land he approaches the innocent black with "presents" of beads, colored cloths, ribbons, and other useless trinkets that catch the eye of the poor black—but that are no earthly use to him. These are all "gifts—free—gratis—for nothing! ! !" We all know who soon owns the black man's land.

Yet this system of conciliating the innocent is not practiced alone on the negro. How many women read that they can get a "certain "present" with a certain purchase and forthwith they make the purchase to get the "present"—free—gratis—for nothing! ! ! The present may or may not be useful—but in this twentieth century are there those who believe they have not in the purchase paid for and often dearly paid for the "present"?

When you want a horse you cannot buy his teeth at ten cents a tooth, and get the horse thrown into the bargain.

When you buy a dress you do not buy the buttons, and have the dress thrown in.

And no more than you can thus get the present of a horse or a dress can you get a "present"—free—gratis—for nothing—of diamonds, gold, jewellery, and cutlery, with the purchase of a bar of common soap.

When you buy Sunlight Soap you are presented with pure quality in the soap itself. You do not pay for loading refuse at the price of soap. You don't wear out your clothes in half the time, and ruin your hands with Sunlight Soap, as with common soap.

If you want soap, buy Sunlight Soap—Octagon Bar—and you have paid for nothing but pure soap. If you want something else than soap, buy it independently of the soap, and you know what it has cost you.

"You may fool some people all the time;
You may fool all the people some of the time.
You cannot fool all the people all the time;"
You cannot long fool a woman. 615

A writer in London Nature describes a white marble slab, two inches thick and 35x70 inches, which is supported on stone posts and sags in the middle three inches out of level. It furnishes evidence that marble is in reality a fluid of enormous viscosity. This has some bearing on the question of the frigidity of the rocks composing the crust of the arth and the gradual adjustment of the earth's contour under gravity. The slab was placed in its present position in 1853.

MARKET REVIEW.

Compiled from The Commercial.

WHEAT—The speculative market has got into a rut, which it has stuck in during the week, and there has been the slowest kind of a market and the narrowest range in price fluctuations that have been seen for months. The bearish sentiment does not seem to have increased any at least, it has not become so aggressive as to lead to much short selling. At the same time there has been nothing definite to encourage the buying side, and between the two speculating traders have stood still, awaiting for something to develop which would show with some clearness what might be expected of the future. The export trade for Europe has lately been extremely backward. They bought heavily last fall, and in the meantime these purchases have to be absorbed, and as the general situation the last four weeks has not seemed so strong as previously, the foreign trade is also holding off awaiting developments. Should any serious damage happen in America or Europe, or both, to the winter wheat crop, prices will easily advance. In the meantime there is not much new to report as to crop prospects. Generally speaking they are not as good as last year, but it will still be some weeks before definite estimates can be formed as to the prospects. Argentina is now shipping freely, the quantity this week exported being 2,336,000 bushels.

Manitoba wheat has been very quiet all week. There has been very little demand and at the same time no pressure of offers to sell. Prices on the week may be quoted ¼c higher for spot, and ¼c lower for May. There is no feature to the trade, which is practically a waiting one. We quote values for spot or early delivery at 74¼c 1 hard, 72¼c 1 northern, 70¼c 2 northern, and 68c 3 nothern; and for May delivery, 76½c 1 hard, 74½c 1 northern, 73c 2 northern; and 70½c 3 northern; all in store Fort William, Port Arthur or Duluth.

OATS—The market for oats has firmed up a little and sellers are now asking ¼ to ½c more than last week. Receipts are light, and as there are some demand for shipment east holders are not disposed to accept the prices offered here. Enquiries for seed oats are beginning to come in freely. No. 1 white in carlots on track are today worth 30½ to 31c per bushel; No. 2 white, 28½c to 29c and feed grades, 27 to 27½c. Farmers' loads on the street are bringing 28c, and at country points, 25c. Brokers are asking 25 to 26c for carlots in the country.

BARLEY—The market is firm and the movement light. Dealers are paying 31 to 32c per bushel for feed grades on the street here.

FLAXSEED—Farmers have been delivering some flax this week for which the price has been $1 per bushel here.

SPELTZ—The market is steady at 32c per bushel of 50 pounds, delivered here. Demand is good.

POTATOES—40 to 45c per bushel.

BUTTER—Dairy—The market is but poorly supplied with dairy butter. At times rolls and bricks come in rather plentifully but these receipts are spasmodic and the stock is not always good. Shippers still stick to their old and foolish practice of using soap boxes, shoe boxes and any other old receptacles which happen to be handy for packing the butter in, consequently when it arrives here it is only worth abokt the price of soap. Nice, clean, well packed butter, in rolls, is worth in a jobbing way 21 to 22c per pound net with inferior qualities ranging down as low as 10 and 12c. Tub butter will bring at jobbing houses as high as 18c per pound if fresh and well packed, with a range of from 14 to 18c for the various qualities offering.

HIDES—Frozen hides, 5 to 5¼c per lb., less 5 lbs. tare; city butchers', 6¼c per lb. for No. 1s; 5¼c for No. 2s, and 4¼c for No. 3s. Sheepskins, 30 to 50c each.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE—The market is gradually becoming firmer, and 4½c is now the regular quotation for prime beef cattle delivered here. Several lots of western range cattle have been brought in to supply the select trade, and these realized top prices. They were in splendid shape for the season and made good beef. Those who have been out to the ranges say that they have never seen the cattle looking better in February than they do now. Most of them are quite fat, and in splendid condition to stand the spring storms. Stockers are beginning to move freely now and are firm in price. We quote: Best steers, 4 to 4½c; butchers' ordinary, 3½ to 4c, and from that figure quotations run down to 2½c, according to quality. Stockers, yearlings, $17, two-year-olds, $22 each.

SHEEP — A few lots have been brought in for the better class of trade, but there is really no market for sheep, and prices are nominal.

HOGS—Receipts have increased to much larger proportions than has been the case for some time, and the market is easier at 5½ to 6c for choice weights, ranging from 150 to 250 lbs., off cars here. Heavy hogs and light fats, 4½ to 5c, according to quality.

Oil In Your Mitts And Gloves

Oil in leather makes cold mitts or gloves, because oil is a "good conductor" of cold. That's why Indian tanned buckskin is warmer than common oil tanned leathers.

But buckskin is porous, and lets in the wind and absorbs wet. Now "Pinto Shell" Cordovan is tanned without oil or minerals, and it is absolutely wind, water, boil, scorch and cold proof—it is the toughest glove and mitt leather tanned. It can be had only in H.B.K. mitts and gloves.

Will not crack or harden, always flexible, warm and dry.

Sold by all dealers. See this trade mark. If your dealer has not got them write us and send his name. Every pair stamped "Pinto Shell" Cordovan by H.B.K.

Many church people of to-day, the world over, seem to have an uneasy feeling that spiritual prosperity is not keeping pace with material advancement. At no time has the interest in church or religious topics been so keen as it is to-day. Out of this feeling wide discussion has arisen in the endeavor to discover some method by which churches may be inspired with greater energy for winning souls. We would suggest if Sunday schools are to exist, let the good work commence there. If teachers in Sunday schools were compelled, as in day schools, to pass examinations in the subjects which they profess to teach perhaps then the young mind —which is ever eager to listen to, and retain the knowledge, ideas and opinions hitherto conveyed by, alas, too often partial, illiterate and egotistical teachers--would be stirred to not only think individually, but act, and the foundation of a true christian life would be laid. Such teachings as should be observed in our Sunday schools are extremly delicate, requiring the best sanctified tact. The real danger lies where zeal may out-run knowledge in people who feel the call but cannot wait to ascertain their fitness. It seems that in the past religion has been too much an affair of one day in the week, and if true religion, which is charity towards our neighbor, unselfishness and the golden rule, which requires us to do unto all as we would have others to do unto us, was made part of our every day life. The relying on the religious enthusiasm of one day in the week why that method should be adandoned for one that must be its complement but cannot be its substitute. We judge our work by results, so also by results must the influence and teachings of teachers be judged. E.

Mr J. R. Anderson, deputy minister of agriculture, informs us that a sale of 300 head of pure bred short horns, Herefords, Aberdeen Angus, Galloways, Holstein, Friesians and Ayrshires, is to take place at the spring show of pure bred cattle at Calgary, on May 13, and 14, under the auspices of the Territorial Pure Bred Cattle Breeders Association. This will be a grand opportunity for our breeders to supply themselves with acclimatized range and other bulls. It is announced that all animals purchased will be delivered for $2 per head to purchaser's nearest railway station in the Territories west of Moose Jaw, and to points in British Columbia, and east of Moose Jaw at proportionate cost. Mr Anderson will be pleased to furnish any further information in his power.

Frank, N.W.T., May 4.—This town is almost entirely deserted. The mountain has been carefully surveyed and watched. It is thought another slide is likely to take place any moment.

Tacoma, May 5.—The most destructive flood in history of the Klondike region is now sweeping down Bonanza Creek in Klondike, flooding cuts open for summer work, creeping into piles of pay dirt heaped up from the winter's work, and spreading for miles, expensive machinery costing thousands of dollars has been destroyed. Flood is caused by fast melting snow and ice. Grand Forks is under water, and the flood is creeping into stores and houses of town. People are moving to higher ground. Dumps containing an aggregate of two million dollars in gold, piled on the ice, have been washed away.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

A very interesting case came before Magistrate Abrams on Monday. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals prosecuted Mrs Milligan for mutilating certain heifers by cutting half their ears off. Mr South, the general secretary for the B.C.S.P.C.A., prosecuted and pointed out to the farmers present that under the law of this country as well as that of Great Britain, mutilating of cattle, dehorning, dubbing cocks, and the like, was cruelty. Mr South warned the public that on account of the fact that the defendant was a widow and had been advised for years to mark her cattle by the system of mutilation complained of, and that she had pleaded guilty, he would not press for a fine but that in future every case would be taken upon its merits and the offenders prosecuted.
