INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION

When old enough to enter upon some permanent employment seriously, the boys find they have lost through misuse much of what they learned at school, and in most cases have acquired a habit of irregular application that greatly impedes their progress. Truly the most dangerous point in the lives of school children in an elementary school is the moment at which they leave it. To counteract this danger prevocational classes have been formed and into these classes all students who are of leaving age and who do not desire to go to high school, are induced to enter.

The lessons are centered round hand work; the course of work being of an industrial nature. Every endeavor is made to give the boys and girls an opportunity to feel their particular bent and to find out where their interest lies, so that they may select a trade for which they are suited, and in which they may reasonably be expected to take delight and be successful.

In Vancouver city the school trustees enrolled 145 pupils for such a class last August. The boys have constructed their own benches for carpentry, made cup boards, drafting tables, stools, and a roll top desk for the instructor. They are now busy drawing up plans and specifications for a manual training centre the erection of which the school trustees are going to entrust them.

The girls go out purchasing and examining goods at first hand with their instructor, and study cooking, dressmaking, millinery, and household economics.

If at the age of 14 years the boys or girls must go to work, night schools are established at which they can continue their education. This many thousands have done, greatly to their credit and profit. Progressive countries, however, have long since gone beyond the voluntary stage, and now these classes are compulsory; the work being carried on before the hour of seven in the evening and the employers being compelled to allow the students off duty to attend.

Technical classes are arranged for most trades, and a workman can attend a three, four or five years' course, supplementing his workshop experience with theory. Complete knowledge of work is the aim. Recognition of the dignity and sacredness of Carlyle's gospel, "To know thy work and do it," for in the words of the sage "All true work is sacred; in all true work be it but true hand labour there is something divine."

Evidently having in mind that when God made Adam he immediately set him to work. "He put him to work in the garden to dress and to keep it." The highest reward that God gives us for good work is ability to do better work. Rest means rust.

Nor is the subject of citizenship overlooked. Instruction in civics, in social rights and responsibilities are given. It is believed one half the troubles between employers and employees, between capital and labour, will disappear when the workmen have the education to which they are entitled, and better understand what their rights are and how to secure them; what their obligations are and how to observe them. It is recognized that with every citizen fast coming to feel and assert his equal powers, every citizen must be well informed; that he must give and take in reason and in understanding; that it is not enough to have good workers, but that there must also be everywhere a high and intelligent standard of citizenship. A man's life is a million times more important than a man's work, and one of the greatest reasons why education is good is because it enlarges the vision; because it constructs new worlds in which to live, multiplies the possibility of usefulness, and infallibly creates the conditions which make for the realization of joy and satisfaction in life.

After all, visions are most worth. Wealth is a good thing, but the man who strives for it alone, thinks about, lives simply to create it, is the man who degrades his soul and who puts a barrier in the pathway of his real life. The intellect is no better than a pick or shovel if it is nothing more than an instrument to procure food to eat, a house in which to live and bonds to put in a deposit vault. He, therefore, who would fill a large place, rejoice daily in living and secure the best possible education. Cultivate those habits which will lead to the larger life.

The result of this work is seen clearly in the way a man spends his leisure time. With the perfecting of machinery the hours of labour may be looked upon to decrease even more than they have done during the past fifty years. How is the increased leisure time going to be employed, and with what is the mind going to be occupied? It is going to be a tug-of-war between selfish exciting pleasures which debase; and activities which raise and elevate not only the individual but the whole community.

The costliness of all this work does not deter the educational authorities, for they realize that in developing human capital, the

The Pythian Sisters of this city will give a social dance in the Ilo Ilo Hall on Tuesday, December 22nd. Refreshments will be served by the ladies during the evening. The ladies are leaving no stone unturned to make this dance a huge success.

On Wednesday, December 2nd, the marriage took place of Miss Lily Piercy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Piercy, and Harold Watkinson. The wedding ceremony was performed at the residence of the bride's parents, Sandwick, B.C., Rev. Menzies officiating. Mr. and Mr. Watkinson will make their home in Sandwick.

It is reported that the supply of beer will be considerably reduced, if not entirely cut off, in Germany, as the barley, from which it is manufactured, is imported principally from Russia. This will impose great hardship on the beer-loving German, but, nevertheless, Berlin will always remain on the "Spree."

According to an advertisement appearing in today's issue of the Islander, the Belgian government through their consul are making an appeal to all Belgians living in this country who are physically fit, and between the ages of 18 and 30 years, to enlist in the Belgian army. Free transportation is provided to the headquarters of the army in Belgium.

On Thursday afternoon at 12.30 Mr. Mumford, in the grocery department of Campbell's store, while soliciting orders in Bevan on horseback, had the misfortune to fall off, sustaining two fractured ribs and other minor bruises. The accident occurred while Mr. Mumford was in the act of mounting his horse, his foot becoming entangled in a snag, and he was thrown heavily to the ground. He was brought into town at six o'clock, and was subsequently moved to the local hospital.

BELGIANS, ATTENTION!

FREE TRANSPORTATION FOR VOLUNTEERS AND RESERVISTS.

The Belgian Government has now concluded arrangements whereby former soldiers and volunteers will be given free transportation to the headquarters of the Belgian army. The Government has just issued, in the name of the King and the Nation, a solemn appeal to all able Belgians, and chiefly those between the ages of 18 and 30 years, to join the army as volunteers for the duration of the war.

There are abroad numerous Belgians who are fit for military service. Spontaneously, thousands of volunteers have joined the army, and it is important that all those who are in a position to do so should follow this example immediately.

To all those to whom this applies, the Belgian Government requires that you present yourselves forthwith at the Consulate, 705 Fort Street, Victoria, B.C., there to receive instructions regarding medical examinations, rations, accomodations and transportation.

W. S. TERRY,
Consul for Belgium,

An account of $68.45 from the Electric Lighting Company was rendered and ordered paid if found correct.

Two-reel instalments of this stupendous production will be shown every Saturday for twenty weeks.

THROUGH TRAFFIC FROM VICTORIA

A deputation from the Cumberland Board of Trade, consisting of John N. McLeod and Edward W. Bickle, left for Victoria on Monday morning. They were instructed to make application to the Dominion Railway Commission for a siding, station and interchange of track at Royston, between the Wellington Colliery Railway and the Esquimalt & Nanaimo Railway, making it possible that passenger trains may leave Victoria and come right through to Cumberland without changing cars; also that local merchants may have car loads of freight shipped direct to this city without being handled the second time. Messrs. McLeod and Bickle put up a strong argument in support of the Board of Trade's application for the interchange of tracks. At the conclusion of the conference the railway commissioners decided to reserve their decision until they returned to Ottawa, and to visit Royston by special train and see for themselves the needs and requirements of the residents of this city in railway matters insofar as it affected the E. & N. railway.

T. D. McLean, the local jeweler, is much improved in health and is expected home tomorrow.

A public meeting of all who are interested in a reading room, and debating society in connection therewith, will be held on Monday evening at 8 o'clock in the basement of St. George's Presbyterian Church. The young men of the city are specially invited to the meeting.

Rev. J. S. Henderson, B.A., secretary of the social and moral reform movement of the Presbyterian Church in the province, will be in this city for one week, commencing December 10th. Mr, Henderson will conduct special services in St. George's Presbyterian Church on Thursday and Friday evenings of next week. On Sunday, December 13th, he will conduct both services in the same church, and also special services on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of the following week. To all of these meetings the public are cordially invited. The meetings will be evangelistic in character.

COVERT CRITICISM OF GOVERNMENT.

THE LAURIER newspapers continue to indulge n more or less covert criticism of the Government, fter shouting loudly for a truce and hotly declar- ng that anyone that broke the said solemn truce vould be a criminal. That is the old, old Liberal ame. They begged for a party truce in order hat they might be saved from the consequences f their own policy. Nothing in the nature of a ormal truce was forthcoming, but the Government ave the Opposition a chance to do the right thing. or a while the Opposition behaved well—in Par- iament. They promised to support all Govern- nent legislation without criticism, and only broke he promise once or twice. Since then the Grit ress has been busily engaged in "sneaking in" ittle nastinesses, while calling out "truce" and laiming protection under it. Here is a sample rom the Montreal Herald, of which Hon. George P. Graham is president:

"We hope the public have duly appreciated the eassuring announcement from Ottawa this week, ollowing upon the story of German activity in the acific. The fear had been expressed that the erman corsairs might make a raid upon the acific coast, but Ottawa tells us that there is no eed to worry on that score as two powerful Jap- anese cruisers are attached to the Esquimalt station, n addition to H. M. C. S. Rainbow and the two anadian submarines hastily purchased by Canada t the outbreak of the war. Japan's loyal and hole-hearted support of Great Britain shows how onourably and faithfully she interprets the terms f her alliance, and shows, too, that she knows ow to be grateful for the invaluable support that ritain has rendered her in the most crucial periods f her national career. She is now placing Canada nder a special obligation to her, and we are sure anadians will not readily forget the protection she s now affording. In the meantime Conservative oliticians in Canada, who surely could have never nticipated that the time would come when Ottawa vould inform the Canadian public that Canada has othing to fear on the Pacific because the Japanese re guarding the coast will doubtless do some urious thinking in regard to Canada's naval policy."

This furious thinking may well be anticipated. here has been a lot of furious thinking already y Canadians ever since the Liberal determination hold out against any share in Imperial naval efence became manifest. The writer of the Herald editorial conveniently forgets that when the Ad- miralty, in 1909, suggested a strong force on the acific, to be provided by Canada, Australia and ew Zealand, with the co-operation of the Mother ountry, Canada, in the person of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, refused to have anything to do with such a scheme. The Admiralty suggested a fleet unit each from Canada and Australia. Australia ac- cepted the proposal and Laurier refused.

Even when the little Laurier navy was pro- posed under the Naval Service Act of 1910, provid- ing for less than the Admiralty experts suggested, something might have been done. But the Laurier Government did not even carry out their own policy, and they went of office in the latter part of 1911 without having let the contract for a single ship. Furious thinking? Well, rather.

CONSERVATION OF CANADIAN NICKEL.

THE WAR has shown the importance of Can- ada's great nickel industry. This country produces over eighty per cent of the world's nickel, a very necessary component in the construction of war- ships. The only other known nickel deposits are in New Caledonia, French territory, and they are of minor importance in comparison with the great Canadian mines at Sudbury, Ontario.

While it is probable that Germany has accu- mulated a large surplus supply of nickel, yet there must be a limit to its resources of this kind, and when that is reached its naval development must cease. No substitute has been discovered for nickel steel as defensive armament, and the exhaustion of the German supply will seriously affect the naval defence and offence of that country.

It is unfortunate that Canada has not yet fully developed plants for the complete treatment of nickel ore. The greater part of our nickel leaves this country to be refined elsewhere, and so the labour is lost to our people and control of supply to a certain extent to our authorities. Of the 650,000 tons of nickel ore produced in Canada last year over ninety per cent had to be shipped to the United States and Great Britain to be refined.

The Canadian authorities have officially taken steps to prevent our enemies receiving any further supply of Canadian nickel. Before official action was taken the authorities had made arrangements so that no nickel was shipped to Germany and Austria. Since the outbreak of hostilities the Canadian Government has controlled the ship- ments of all nickel produced from Canadian ore.

A complete embargo on the export of nickel is impossible. By so doing we would be simply adding to the unemployed and depriving Great Britain of supplies, as well as the friendly republic to the south. Until the refining industry is devel- oped here such action is impossible. All that the Government could do was to control the disposition of the refined nickel, and this has been done. As in all its war measures, the Canadian Government, in its policy regarding nickel has taken prompt action—action to aid our Allies and embarrass our enemies.

BOTH ARE ONE IN THIS.

THE AMERICANS in the West are heart and soul with the Government in this war. They re- alize that it is a struggle between democracy and autocracy with Great Britain as the great cham- pion of democratic institutions. German militar- ism is opposed to the genius of American life, for which reason it is quite unnecessary to employ arguments to enlist the sympathy of the American settler. If other arguments were needed to con- vince them of the justice of the Allies' cause they are to be found in the violation by Germany of Belgium's neutrality, and the wanton destruction of Belgian cities with their priceless architectural treasures. This, of itself, has decided many a waverer. The issue between humanity and in- humanity is clear cut and the American realizes it.

Throughout the West the Americans have responded splendidly to the Patriotic Fund. Indeed some of the communities, in which they are largely represented, have been among the most liberal contributors. And this has come about through a ready recognition that Great Britain is fighting, not her own fight so much as a fight for Anglo- Saxon civilization. In such a fight Americans and Canadians are one.

INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION.

character, brains and muscles of the people, they are doing an infinitely greater work than merely attending to the physical resources of the country They are aware that the future developments of their industries call for such a step. The creation of high-grade productive enterprises which pay good wages and demand efficient workers call for the training of large masses such as the public schools alone can reach.

To complete the scheme of vocational training industrial bureaus have been established, with directors and vocational advisors in charge. Here is the centre of information on trade and commerce. The record cards for each boy and girl goes to the bureau. On that card is tabulated the qualities and aptitude of the person; what trade the person wishes to work at, and what trade they seem specially fitted for.

Employers of labour are in touch with this department, and the director undertakes the work of introducing as many boys and girls to the work of their choice as it is possible to do.

Moreover, they learn full particulars of each trade before they go, and each workshop and factory is carefully inspected.

Where the work and conditions are poor and not favourable, the young people are warned. The youthful though expensively trained products of the day school are not allowed to run amuck and get into the hands of unscrupulous people who take advantage of their fellowmen in order to gain profits. Thus a haphazard system has given way to a well-organized course, which is without doubt working out in a most successful manner.
