LEGAL ADVICE TO BE SOUGHT

A special meeting of the city council was held on Thursday evening to consider the decision of the city magistrate in ordering 76 names to be replaced on the voters' list.

His Woship the Mayor presided, and there were present Ald. Parnham, MacDonald, Maxwell, Banks and Mitchell.

The Mayor said that at the Court of Revision the names of 76 persons, who were holders of agreements of sale, were struck of the list. On the case being brought before the City Magistrate, the 76 names in question were ordered to be replaced on the voters' list. In the first place the Court of Revision, in considering these names, thought that the manner in which they had obtained the agreements of sale, that they were non-residents, and that they had not themselves paid for the said agreements of sale, they were not entitled to be on the list. The matter of holding property was a secondary consideration, the chief object being to get the vote. They had been placed on the list on a trivial pretence. The Act was never intended to be used in that manner. The council should get information and legal advice with pleading in a higher court as to whether the City Magistrate was justified in authorizing the said names to be replaced on the list. This council should not tolerate for a moment to allow such actions to continue. The reason the City Magistrate ordered the replacing of the names was that each of the persons held property to the amount of $100, and that the assessment had been paid.

Ald. MacDonald understood that the Court of Revision had considered the matter and that the council had nothing to do with it. He was not aware that the council had any legal authority.

Ald, Maxwell said that as far as the Court of Revision was concerned it did not consider that there was evidence to show that these people held agreements of sale. If the matter was allowed to go without protest it would create a precedence that would cause all kinds of trouble in the future. The Act was brought in for reasons that, in Victoria and Vancouver where property to the value of $50,000 and $100,000 was in question, the bona-fide holders of agreements of sale were not allowed to vote on money by-laws. If the matter was taken to a higher court he did not think it would hold water. The agreements were held only during the time of election. Names which were on agreements of sale last year were removed and others put in their places.

The Mayor said that according to some of the agreements of sale under discussion, the property had been sold to several people. When a piece of property was assessed at $1000, and agreements of sale made out for ten people, no man in his senses would believe that the ten persons really intended to buy the property. The franchise was never intended to be bought and sold in that manner. They would not be doing justice to the town if they did not contest the case. The we fare of the city demanded it. The Act was never intended to be used in that manner.

Ald. Maxwell said the Court of Revision held an adjourned sitting to consider the 76 names in question. Mr. Harrison, who appeared as agent, refused to submit evidence that the agreements of sale were bona-fide. It was a question that ought to be settled whether the City Magistrate had the authority to act in a case of that kind.

Ald. MacDonald: How far can the Court of Revision go?

The Mayor: They are helpless.

Ald. Maxwell said it was a matter whether it would be allowed purely for the sake of votes. If a man held valuable property and had any particular object in view he could make out agreements of sale to the value of $100 and practically control the city.

Ald. MacDonald did not consider it advisable to spend money.

Ald. Maxwell said it had nothing to do with election. He did not consider that anyone would be so small as to contest the result of an election. It was a case of whether it was right or wrong.

The Mayor considered that they ought to have the whole question stated and obtain legal advice. If they approached the Attorney-General he would refer them to the city solicitor. No doubt it would be a matter of small cost.

Ald. Banks advised putting the case before the Attorney-General and see what he had to say.

The Mayor, to show that the interpretation of the law was not infallible, stated that Mr. Harrison had appeared before the City Magistrate that evening on behalf of some corporations, asking that agents for the said corporations be placed on the voters' list. He (the Mayor) proved that the cases had not appeared before the Court of Revision and therefore were not entitled to be considered. Mr. Harrison acknowledged that he (the Mayor) was right. Consequently the names of the agents of these corporations were not allowed to be put on the list of voters.

Ald. Maxwell moved that the Mayor be empowered to secure advice, not necessarily to fight the case or appeal against the City Magistrate's decision, but for the satisfaction of the council.

Ald. Mitchell seconded.

Ald. MacDonald: What would be the cost?

The Mayor said on a previous occasion he had sought legal advice and the cost had been $10.

Ald. MacDonald said there were already two bills from lawyers that the council had not paid.

The City Clerk: One had been paid and one partly paid.

The Mayor said in connection with the school case the cost was $100, but in that case there was a lot of detail and a great deal of procedure. In the matter of obtaining an opinion it ought not to cost much.

Ald. Maxwell: It was not a matter of paying, it was a case of whether a man was for the motion or against it.

Ald. Parnham asked if the persons were legally entitled to be on the voters' list.

The Mayor: Legally, but not morally.

Ald. Parnham: Are you going to secure legal advice or moral advice?

The Mayor said it was a case of legal opinion,

The motion was put, Aldermen Maxwell and Mitchell voting for it. There was no vote against it. Aldermen Parnham, MacDonald and Banks abstaining from voting. The motion was thereupon declared carried.

The meeting adjourned.

TWO HEROES RECOMMENDED FOR THE VICTORIA CROSS.

No more heroic exploit has been chronicled in the annals of warfare than that of "L" Battery of the Royal Horse Artillery, of which these two men were members. Through an order to retire not reaching them, they were left to face ten German field guns and two maxims. Until all but three were killed or wounded they stuck to their guns and silenced the German fire. On the left is Gunner Derbyshire, and on the right Driver Osborne. They, with one comrade, came through the fight unscathed.

SCOUT SOCIAL

The Boys Scouts entertained their friends and members of the Association at a pleasant social last evening at their headquarters in the basement of the Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Wesley Willard. President of the Association, presided and gave an interesting address.

Other speakers were Revs. W. Elliott. James Hood and Arthur Bischlager, and Scout Master J. Brown.

The opening chorus of "Tipperary" was well rendered by the Scouts. The drills, flag signalling and knot tying were excellently done and reflects great credit upon Scout Master Brown and Assistant Scout Master J. Taylor.

In the semiphore competition Corporal H. McLean won; time 31 seconds.

Knot tying contest: 1st, Corporal Hood, 5 out of 5; 2nd, Patrol W. Mordy, 4 out of 5.

In the memorising competition the boys were allowed to look at 25 articles on a table for one minute and then to write down a list of the articles. The result of the contest was a tie between Scout H. Baldwin and Scout R. Robinson, who listed 23 out of a possible 25:

During the evening the boys served refreshments. Altogether the affair was voted a great success.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 2nd, 1915.

THE ADDRESS of the Prime Minister, Sir Robert Borden, before the Canadian Club, at Montreal, is well worth the careful study of every Canadian. Few men in the British Empire are better qualified to speak on the subject of this war of empires, apart from its purely military aspect, than is the Canadian Prime Minister. He possesses a very wide and intimate knowledge of both British and German constitutional history and literature, and his judgment of the causes and conditions leading up to the war is of exceptional value. Of equal value is his conclusion as to the probable effect of the war upon the relations of the Mother Country and the Overseas Dominions.

Premier Borden has played a great part in this war. As head of the Government of Canada he led the Overseas Dominions in a movement which has no parallel in history. a rallying of nations, a stupendous volunteer movement which put upon every ocean great fleets of ships bearing the armies of the daughter states, a never-ending stream of equipment and of food, an epoch-making demonstration of Imperial unity which belied and confounded the cherished belief of Germany. That belief, taught by Bernhardi, encouraged by false signs, such as the killing of the Naval Aid Bill in Canada, was accepted by German strategists and was of their counters in the game. The British Empire was to fall apart at the first shock from without. What happened was exactly contrary to this belief, and Canadians should be proud to remember that the first offer of aid from the Overseas Dominions went from Canada. What the German secret service told and taught the German Government, and how that Government expected to make war against a wrecked and disorganised Empire, was outlined by Premier Borden.

"The German Government," he said, "has a wonderful intelligence system and most interesting information was communicated to me two years ago as to its extensive methods of espionage in Great Britain. Apparently the German Secret Service acquired more information than its Government was able to digest. Ireland was to rise in revolt. The self-governing Dominions would stand aloof. There would be uprisings in India, and the British Islands must stand alone in the day of trial. The German Government evidently believed that the British race had become decadent, that the ancient valour and fighting spirit were of the past, that the reputed strength of the Empire was a sham, and that we must go down before her powerful attack because we were too selfish, too commercial and too cowardly to justify our continued existence. Do the plains of Belgium and the hills of France tell the story of decadence? The annals of the British army disclose no more heroic record. Have the self-governing Dominions stood aloof and has India risen in revolt? From every portion of this far flung Empire has come the same answer, and it will still come until this war is brought to an honourable and triumphant conclusion. On page 127 of the English translation of General Bernhardi's book, published in 1913, I find this reference to the self-governing Dominions: 'They can be completely ignored so far as concerns any European theatre of war.' I venture to predict that before this war closes, unless it reaches a conclusion sooner than we can reasonably expect, the German armies will find confronting them 250,000 men from those same self-governing Dominions; and these men, with the other forces of the Empire, will esteem it a honour to fight side by side with the valiant troops of France and of Belgium, whose courage and endurance under the most deadly trials have already aroused the admiration of the world.

"In the early days of the war, a letter from Sir Charles Tupper contained this pregnant sentence: 'The consolidation of the British Empire is already accomplished.' Step by step during the past hundred years the development of self-government has proceeded in the overseas Dominions. The enjoyment of these powers has not weakened but rather strengthened the bonds which hold together the Empire."

Paris, Jan. 2nd.---The report dealing with the loss of the British battleship Formidable, given to the public today, states she was torpedoed three miles off Portsmouth. The loss in lives is said to be 679.

Paris, Jan. 2nd.---There has been heavy fighting on the Franco-Belgian frontier from Lys to the sea. Gains were made on Wednesday and Thursday east of Nieuport and at Sonnebecke. Further gains at Steinbach by the French will jeopardise German communications at St. Mihiel.

CANADA'S RALLY TO THE EMPIRE.

The Greatest Event in Canada's History—the Talk of the Whole World.

When the great Armada of thirty-one big ships, carrying thirty-two thousand of Canada's sons, and escorted by nineteen great British battleships, weighed anchor and sailed down the St. Lawrence carrying our men to aid in fighting the Empire's battles, few people realised all it means to Canada. It has been the talk of the whole world. Statesmen and newspapers the world over commented on it and cried "Bravo, Canada." The Illustrated London News said the arrival was "an event unparalleled in since William the Conqueror." It was truly a magnificent spectacle to see this great fleet setting sail, a sight never before seen on Canadian shores. News of the departure was censored and kept so secret that few indeed were on the scene to see the big ships weigh anchor on the Gaspe coast. This would have been lost to the people of Canada had not The Family Herald and Star of Montreal had their staff of photographers there to reproduce it. Their photos of the great flotilla are the best piece of photographic work in the history of the art. They secured a panoramic view showing miles and miles of the great troopships and battleships as they swung into line on the way to the Atlantic. In this picture The Family Herald and Weekly Star certainly possess a treasure. It will be the greatest Canadian Souvenir of the War. It is 13 1-2 inches deep by 46 inches in length. It is reserved exclusively for Family Herald and Star subscribers, and all who become subscribers for 1915. The picture will be sent free to anyone sending one dollar for a year's subscription to that great paper. The demand is already enormous, and every home in Canada will want it. It will be Canada's great memento, and years hence, when neighbors are gathered discussing the great war, this picture will point the story. It will have a priceless value. It is truly magnificent, and full of patriotic inspiration. Those desiring a copy, should order The Family Herald and Weekly Star.
