Eight Miles of Line On Valdez Island.

Good Progress on Dominion Telegraph Extension — West Coast Wire Improvements.

Work on the extension and Dominion Government telephone and telegraph service on the coast is proceeding rapidly. During the last two weeks about eight miles of land line on Valdez Island have been strung, and it is anticipated that the new extension through the Gulf Islands, particulars ofwhich have already been published will be completed in a couple of months.

Several gangs of workmen are at present employed along the west coast telegraph line placing it in shape to resist the winter storms. Repoling, building and restoring bridges and relocation of the line in some of the bad places constitute the chief work in progress. It is anticipated that, with these improvements, the west coast wire will give uninterrupted service during the coming winter.

Firemen's Banquet

The Cumberland Firemen held a most successful banquet at the Waverly Hotel, on Monday evening, about forty, including the guests of the evening, sitting down to a bounteous spread provided by Mrs. Dallos. Mayor MacDonald made a most capable chairman.

After the inner man had been amply attended to, a long list of toasts was gone through, interspersed with songs, recitations and instrumental selections. Everybody seemed to enjoy themselves thoroughly and why not?—the fire boys being grand entertainers.

The banquet was brought to a close at 1 a. m.

Obituary.

Once again it is our sad duty to chronicle the death of another old familiar face which the grim reaper has taken from our midst, in the person of Mrs. Macdonald, beloved wife of Mr. George G. Macdonald, of Comox, who died on Saturday, August 6th. Mrs. Macdonald had been ill for quite a long time and everything medical aid could do was done to relieve her sufferings, but alas! she passed away on the above date. The deceased lady was well and favorably known throughout the district having resided in Comox for a great many years. She leaves a husband and six daughters to mourn her loss, viz: Mrs. John Baird and Mrs. Richard Ray, of this city; Mrs. Greenshields and Mrs. Fred. Richardson, of Vancouver; Mrs. Percy Smith, of Denman Island; and Miss Maude Macdonald, of Comox. The funeral takes place today. Tuesday, for interment in terment in the Presbyterian cemetery, Sandwick, where the remains will be laid by the side of her daughter, Mrs. Harry McClusky, who died just a few months ago.

Fatal Mine Accident

Joseph Bardoni was killed by a shot at No. 7 mine, on Saturday evening last. It appears that two shots were being fired at the same time in close proximity. The deceased hearing one go off and thinking that it was his, reentered the place he was working, and his shot going off was instantly killed. Mr. Bardoni, who was but a short time here leaves a wife and family in Italy, of which country he was a native. The funeral, which took place on Monday, was one of the largest ever seen in Cumberland, the most of his fellow miners attending. The funeral procession was headed by the Cumberland band. The interment took place at Cumberland Catholic cemetery, Rev. Father Mertens officiating.

His Courtship.

By HELEN R. MARTIN,

Author of "Tillie: A Mennonite Maid."

It was at 5 o'clock on Sunday afternoon that he presented himself at the home of Miss Wolcott. He sent in his card and waited on the piazza, which was furnished like a sitting room and shaded by screens from the hot summer sun. His suspense as to the outcome of the impending interview made him too uneasy to sit still, and he paced the long porch in his nervousness, wondering for the hundredth time how he could most convincingly relate his story and trying to school himself against too great bluntness in the delicate matter he had to handle. He rather took it out of the porch furniture before Miss Wolcott made her appearance, for in striding about he pushed things ruthlessly out of his way, nearly upsetting a spindle legged table holding a slender vase of roses and making a stool noisily collide with another table covered with books and magazines.

A sudden swish of skirts in the doorway made him turn about at the end of the porch and come back quickly to meet the uncomfortably stout little woman who walked forward to greet him.

Though Miss Wolcott was gowned in the thinnest of white material she looked overheated. Her complexion was distressingly florid, her movements were ungraceful and her voice had an unpleasant sharpness. Kinross felt his already faint hopes fall him entirely as he realized the general hardness of her aspect. He pinned his case upon what he believed he recognized in her countenance, in spite of its coldness—an uprightness of character that perhaps justified, somewhat, her pride of blood.

"It is good to see you again, Dr. Kinross," she began as they sat down together. "It is always a pleasure to me to meet old friends. Did you know," she continued volubly, "I had a call from your brother one day last winter, when he had run on to Washington from New York—it was on one of my at home days and of course he met a lot of his old friends—and he remarked as he was leaving how pleasant it had been to meet them. I told him he would never meet any but old acquaintances at my house. In our circle we don't meet the new people, fortunately."

This was a good beginning, certainly.

"But what a tragic deprivation to the new people!" he remarked, with a perfunctory smile intended to take the edge off his sarcasm.

"I am aware," she said stiffly, "that you do not share my strong feelings about such things."

"No," he said, "I'd associate with the devil if I found him interesting."

"Such bohemian views are unworthy of your blood," she said with grave reproachfulness. "I hope you don't go so far as to be willing to marry out of your rank?"

"No, I draw the line there. I'm not willing to marry out of my rank—nor yet in it. I'm quite unwilling to marry at all."

"You haven't been an easy prey," she admitted. "How have you managed to escape falling in love all these years?"

"But love hasn't anything to do with rank—if you'll pardon my platitudes."

"No one, man or woman, need permit himself to fall in love outside of his own station in life," she said dogmatically, "or if he is so weak let him conquer himself."

Kinross smiled and was silent. He would not argue.

Miss Wolcott abruptly changed the subject.

"Well, Peter, what is this 'important business matter' which gives me the pleasure of a call from you? Your telegram has made me very curious. I didn't know how to wait until you got here."

"But you must really wait a few moments longer. I must not be precipitate. That's the one thing I've been telling myself all the way here—not to be precipitate, but to break it to you gently, to lead up to it diplomatically, rhetorically, if possible. Unfortunately my style was ever a la cookbook—direct and to the point."

"Dear me! Well, do adhere to your customary style and spare me the rhetoric. I prefer to hear your news or whatever it is in your most concise form."

"The shock might be too great."

This was not at all as he had meant to steer his communication, for no one could have felt more earnestly the gravity of what he had come to communicate, and his chaffing was far from expressing his true mood, but he felt that his case was lost already, that rhetoric could not save it, and his tongue ran away with him.

"It's something 'shocking,' then?" inquired Miss Wolcott.

"That depends on how you look at it."

"Well? Do hurry, please."

"Miss Wolcott," he said solemnly, "I'm afraid what I have to tell you will not be welcome news."

She looked surprised at his sudden seriousness and waited, with what patience she could command, for him to go on.

He rose and walked the length of the piazza, then came back and stood before her.

"I am very stupid. I don't know how to begin it."

"Gracious, Peter, you're not thinking of proposing to me, are you?"

"It would require less daring than what I have to tell you."

"If you don't say it soon, I shall have hysterics!"

He cleared his throat, and his voice was not quite firm as he plunged in.

"Let me begin with a question. Tell me, were you perfectly convinced at the time of your brother's death that his little daughter was with him and died with him? Did you ever have any doubts about it?"

Her eyes opened wide in amazement. "Of course not!"

"Did you see the dead child who was identified as your niece?"

"No. I was in Florida at the time of the accident and did not get back in time for the funeral."

The woman had turned white and was looking dazed.

"The child was not with her father, Miss Wolcott."

Miss Wolcott sat upright, her hands clutching the sides of her chair.

"Well?" she half gasped.

"That child is living."

"Impossible!" she exclaimed sharply.

"She is alive," repeated Kinross.

"Alive! My brother's child! But it can't be true!"

"Did you ever receive, a few months after Mr. Wolcott's death, any communications telling you that your niece had been stolen from her home and would be returned to you—for a reward?"

"Never!"

Kinross looked at her uncertainly. Was she telling the truth? If she was not, she was a genius at acting, for her bewilderment seemed very genuine.

"Ah!" she suddenly exclaimed breathlessly, lifting her hand, "I remember something—some anonymous letters—that I received—one after another—shortly after my brother's death, telling me that if I would pay down a certain sum of money a matter of vital interest would be revealed to me. Who would dream of paying any attention to such communications? I tossed them into the wastebasket, of course, and never gave them a second thought."

"Did none of them mention Eunice?"

"Never. They were melodramatically cautious, I remember. Oh, what are you going to tell me?"

"The kidnapers defeated their own ends by their cowardice. If they had given you any hint that they held Eunice as a hostage"—

He paused questioningly.

"Well?" she asked excitedly.

"You would not have ignored their communications?"

"If I had had any least reason for believing them, of course not. What a question to ask!"

He took from his pocket a long envelope and drew from it a manuscript. It was the "confession."

"Perhaps, after all, this will be the best way to tell you."

He handed it to her.

"Read it, please, while I wait."

He rose and walked to the farthest end of the piazza—while she, with fingers that shook, unfolded the paper.

Kinross knew that he did an unbusiness-like thing in letting the paper

Miss Wolcott.

leave his own hands, but Miss Wolcott was an old family friend, and when it came to the point he found himself quite unable to offer her the discourtesy of handing her the copy of the original document which he had brought with him for that purpose.

CHAPTER XXI.

It seemed to him a very long time before he was summoned back to her.

She was white to the lips as they sat down again together, but she was a woman of strong will, and her voice was steady when she spoke to him.

"How in the world, Peter, did you come by this paper?" she began.

He told her briefly of his summer at the farm and of his investigation of the haunted room. He did not, however, mention his nightly seances with Eunice. Miss Wolcott was nothing if not conventional.

"You believe this story?" Her questions were abrupt and sharp.

"I do. Do you?"

"I am open to conviction. And you would tell me that this paper remained undiscovered all these years and that my niece has been kept by this farmer's family, knowing nothing of her origin? You say you met her at this farm?"

"Yes."

"The proof of her identity offered here?" she demanded.

He drew from his pocket a small box and handed it to her. She quickly opened it and took out the chain and locket.

Her face grew whiter as she handled them, and her voice was not steady when she spoke again.

"Oh! I—I remember this!—I remember clasping it about her little neck!"

She leaned her head on her hand for an instant. But she quickly rallied.

"And the other proof?" she questioned.

"It is there."

"The two little moles under her ear?"

"I saw them."

"Tell me of the girl."

Her tone was tense with anxiety. Was it the prospect of losing her wealth or her fear of hearing an unwelcome account of her niece that drew those deep lines about her strong mouth?

"She has been brought up in the farmer's family—not quite as a member of the family"—

"I should hope not!"

"But rather as their servant."

She sank back in her chair, looking as though he had struck her in the face.

"What do you mean?"

"She has done every sort of menial work to pay them for giving her a home. She has been a domestic drudge for them."

He felt that he was cruel, but he was speaking advisedly, and at least his purpose in putting the case so brutally was merciful—to both Eunice and her aunt.

"A servant! To a farmer's family! My niece!"

As she spoke Kinross had a sudden mental picture of Eunice transplanted into this house—her own house really. He saw the girl in all her exquisite delicacy of face and form, her grace, her thrilling voice, her natural dignity, in contrast to Miss Wolcott's funny, dumpy little figure, abrupt manner and almost coarse features.

"The girl would appear distinguished beside her," he thought.

"Then she is a crude, uneducated country girl, quite unfit for decent society?" she demanded.

"It depends upon what you mean by 'decent.'"

"Is she quite hopeless, or could something possibly be done for her?"

"Her blood ought to tell for something," he said, not without a touch of malice.

"Unless she has been ruined by her environment. And it would be too late now to make up for her lack of education. Of course they never sent her to school."

"Not after she was twelve years old."

"Gracious."

"She has never been away from the farm except," he stolcally added, "to go with her foster parents to town to market to sell vegetables, butter and eggs, smearcase, apple butter, ponhaus, suits and sauerkraut."

She gazed at him speechless.

"Let her have it!" he thought. "It will do her good. If she does the right thing, she will find out for herself what the child really is."

"What would the poor girl do with wealth?" she asked in a hollow voice. "You say she is utterly unfit to use it?"

"I have seen many rich people no better fitted."

His eyes were constantly drawn to the "confession," which she firmly held in her hand. He had an apprehension that at any moment he might see her tear it into shreds and defy him to do his worst. Yet an inborn instinct of courtesy, stronger than his vaunted cynicism, made it impossible for him to ask her for the paper until he had given her every chance to return it voluntarily.

Bulls In Parliament.

Lord Londonberry once threw the House of Lords into roars of laughter during the debate on the second reading of the Irish land bill by gravely declaring that "this is the reason why you have failed to settle the Irish land question in the future as you have done in the past."

In the course of the same speech he concluded a period with: "This is the keystone of the bill. Are you going to kill it?"

Better still was a sentence which he uttered in 1897 when speaking once more on the Irish land question—"That, your lordship will see," referring to a quotation he had just made, "indorses up to the hilt what I have said."—London Tatler.

A Colored Portrait.

He was of medium [illegible] whiskers were cropped close to his face, and "as a sign of his satanic spirit his forehead and upper forehead were bare. His evil temper has made his hair fall off, so that from a distance he might be taken for quite bald."

Downing Street, London.

Despite its shortness Downing street, London, contains not only the Prime Minister's residence, but also the Treasury, Foreign Office, Colonial Office, the office of the Chancellor of the Exchequer and that of the Privy Council. It was built on a swamp, and the ground under the big houses is sown thickly with age blackened wooden piles.

WORKMEN ARTISTS.

England Is Showing Some Quite Remarkable Work.

A short time ago the papers referred to a wonderful collection of pictures by German working men which had been collected by Dr. Adolf Levenstein, of Berlin. An article dealing with these pictures was published in The Strand Magazine, and the editor of that famous monthly invited working men of this country who had devoted their leisure to drawing and painting to send specimens of their work.

The result of the invitation was astonishing. Hundreds of paintings and drawings were forwarded by British working-men. Dozens of trades were represented, including such diverse occupations as gardener, house-painter, lighterman, paperhanger, compositor, railway porter, weaver, coal-miner, waiter, and many others.

A selection of these pictures is published in the May number of The Strand, and the general artistic merit is such as to cause one to marvel that so much talent lies hidden amongst men whose daily toil secures for them a wage averaging from $5 to $6 per week. The article published in The Strand commences with an initial picture-letter worthy of Walter Crane. It has been drawn by H. W. Ford, who for eight years worked as a bottle-washer to a firm of wine merchants, and whose weekly wage amounts to $5.50.

But this humble artist has higher thoughts than bottle-washing. "Whenever I discover a book like Burke's 'Sublime and Beautiful'," he says, "at the lending library, I reckon life's worth living. But you don't get much sympathy. Some people imagine that artistic cellarmen, bricklayers' laborers, etc., are simply wasting their time. Keeping pigeons or poultry, or canvassing for insurance companies in one's spare time, would, according to them, be much more sensible. But they are narrow-minded, that is all."

A shoemaker named Robert Mallett, earning $5.50 per week, has executed a beautiful landscape depicting the village of Costessey, near Norwich. He has never been taught painting. A sign-writer employed by the gas company at Beckton sent in a realistic study of a lion. "The Adoration of the Shepherds," a striking picture painted by Alfred Bonheur, a house painter of twenty-four, earning $7 a week, "deserves great praise," to quote the words of The Strand's art editor: "The composition and lighting show a sense of truth, as well as of the dramatic needs of the scene."

Kitchener Anecdotes.

During the South African War Lord Kitchener, who has returned to England after eight years' work abroad, entrusted a certain captain with an important commission. Unfortunately, the captain's horse cast a shoe. Hence a disastrous delay. "Very sorry," was the general's sarcastic comment, "but I cannot rest my plan of campaign on a horse's shoe or an officer's carelessness." Thus it is that "K. of K." impresses upon his officers the futility of excuses and the necessity of being prepared for anything and everything. No man, it is said, has a greater faculty of estimating a man's capabilities at a glance But he made a mistake on one occasion.

It was during the Boer War, at Vredefort Road Station, that he started fitting out extempore mounted infantry columns. He determined to equip and send them into the field at once. He went to the waiting-room to look for officers, and found a single man in occupation. He was smart and well-dressed, and pleased Lord K.'s critical eye. "You will command a corps of mounted infantry I have just raised," said the general. "Very good, sir. What will my duties be?" "Don't you know your duties?" "My own—yes, sir." "Then don't argue. What is your regiment?" "Blankshires, sir." "What rank?" "Master tailor, sir." Kitchener harriedly left.

Famous Miniatures Found.

A curious discovery of valuable miniatures has been made at West Haddon, near Rugby. For some years an elderly lady, Miss Fouquier, a descendant of a Huguenot family, had lived with a shepherd and his wife, and when she died a few weeks ago it was found she had bequeathed her belongings to the couple. The goods were not thought to be worth more than $100, but it is reported that when the cupboard of the ancient writing cabinet was opened a rare collection of miniatures was discovered, all of famous artists, as well as fine old prints and antique china pieces of rare value. They will bring in a decent fortune for the shepherd and his wife when they are put up for sale.

Wooed With Music.

Among the Yao Midos, one of the many Burmese-Tartar people, the young men woo their wives absolutely without words, but to the sound of music. On the first day of winter they have a great feast, at which all the marriageable girls gather and listen to the music made by the bachelors, who sit under the "desire tree," each playing his favorite instrument. As the maiden he loves passes him the youth plays louder and more [illegible] If the girl ignores him and passes on he knows that she will have none of him; if she steps up to him and lays a flower upon the instrument he jumps up, grasps her by the hand, taking care not to drop the flower, and [illegible] away together.

Distillery In Bath Room.

Raiding premises in a crowded neighborhood of Belfast, Ireland, the other day, the police found an illicit still in the bath-room in full working order, together with a quantity of spirits and a second still was found in another room. The front of the premises was fitted up as a grocer's shop. The gas used for the still was drawn direct from the main, and not through a meter. The amateur distillers were fined $500 each.

London Shop Clerks.

The London employer in hiring a shop clerk insists on an agreement that the latter shall not go into business for himself or enter the employ of another within a certain distance [illegible] and within a certain time limit after leaving his employer.

A MORAL CENSOR.

In That Role King Edward VII. Was Most Strict.

When King Edward ascended the English throne, the boon companions of the former Prince of Wales who thought that they would be able to clap the new King on the back and be hail fellow well met with him, as they were when he merely was the first subject, soon found out their mistake. The few who tried it were reminded speedily that familiarity with the King was quite a different thing from familiarity with a more or less irresponsible man of the world, who, by the very nature of his position, was condemned to a life of pleasure seeking. It soon became known that while King Edward was no less truly democratic than ever in his choice of friends, the men and women he wanted about him now were those who had done something, and who could be of use to him in his task of governing the greatest empire in the world. One of the friends whom he dropped then, was Richard Croker, once boss of New York. It was all right for the sporting Prince of Wales to meet and chat with Croker on a racetrack, but it would not look very well for the King of England to be on familiar terms with the man whose name stood for the personification of a certain kind of politics. At the same time, however, he made a friend of J. P. Morgan, whose skill as a financier, taste as an art collector and generosity as a patron of the church he much admired.

It was as a moral censor that King Edward caused most surprise, for no one expected that he would be strict in this particular. It soon became known at court, however, that no one against whose moral character there was the slightest breath of suspicion might expect to be received, and recently he had carried this form of censorship further by refusing to receive either party in a matrimonial quarrel, no matter how innocent one of them might be.

NEW ZEALAND'S GOVERNOR.

Sir John Dickson-Poynder Served In the Boer War.

The appointment just announced of Sir John Poynder Dickson-Poynder, Bart., to the governorship of New Zealand, in succession to Lord Plunkett promises to be a popular one.

It will be remembered that Sir John was one of the members of the royal commission to enquire into the trade relations between Canada and the

SIR JOHN POYNDER DICKSON-POYNDER.

West Indies which sat in Montreal and other Canadian centres last year. The commission recently returned to England from the West Indies, where they had been taking evidence. Lord Balfour of Burleigh was the chairman and Hon. Messrs. Fielding and Paterson represented Canada on the commission.

The new governor is the sixth holder of the baronetcy, which was created in 1802. He is a major of Yeomanry and served in the South African war in 1900, and besides becoming a D.S.O. received the Queen's medal with three clasps.

Sir John is a comparatively young man, having been born in 1866. He has, however, been in Parliament for seventeen years, having represented Chippenham since 1892.

Sport That Kills.

The raw natives of South Africa have not yet taken up football and cricket as national sports, so they still indulge in the sport of their forefathers.

Recently, in a mining town in the Orange River Colony, a sports day of rather huge proportions was held. It took the form of a fight between natives called Mxosas, who hail from Cape Colony, and Basutos, from the Orange River Colony and Natal borders. Both are really members of the Bantu race. Altogether, 1,200 "boys" took part in the sport. And, although it consisted principally of running after each other in approved London school-fight fashion, still, the opposing sides came to close quarters on several occasions. They were armed with weighty sticks, and it speaks well for the thickness of the native skull when I mention that only one death occurred. One native had thirteen scalp wounds and a broken jaw; but this did not rob him of his interest in life. Another warrior who was thrown over the side of a mine, a [illegible] drop of 100 feet on to the soft ground, said when I asked him how he felt, "Oh, all right; but my ribs ache a bit!"

Vegetable Cast Iron.

Official tests of the many valuable hardwoods native to Western Australia have made known the extraordinary properties of yate, believed to be the strongest of all known woods. Its average tensile strength is 24,000 pounds to the square inch, equalling that of good cast iron. But many specimens are much stronger, and one was tested up to 17-1-2 tons to the square inch, which is equal to the tensile strength of wrought iron. The sawn timber of yate is probably the strongest in the world. The tree grows to a maximum height of 100 feet, and has sometimes a diameter of 2 1-2 or even three feet.

AN ABHORRED PEOPLE

THE RODIYAS OF CEYLON ARE DESPISED BY OTHER CASTES.

They Have No Intercourse With the Rest of the Island People—Contact With Them Is Regarded as Contaminating by the Higher Classes—Their Origin Is Veiled In Mystery—Shameless and Brutalized.

Abhorred and degraded as is no other community of people under the sun, with the possible exception of the Indian pariahs, are the Rodiyas, of Ceylon. Dwelling in their own separate villages, writes an Englishman, they are remote from other habitations and have no intercourse with the rest of the island folk. They are forbidden by immemorial custom to hold a single rod of land as private property; they are not permitted to follow any recognized trade or occupation; they may not cross a ferry or draw water from a well; if they meet another native on the road, they must cower away to one side lest their proximity should pollute him.

They must not wear any garment other than a scanty cloth tied around the waist and reaching only to the knees, male and female alike; they must keep the upper part of the body bare, and if they are covered when they meet another native they must strip off their covering, for not to do so would be a deadly insult. They gain their livelihood, if they labor at all, by the most degrading of work, making ropes from the hides of cattle, an occupation abhorred from its ancient association with the hangman.

They also prepare the skins of monkeys for use in making the native drum or tomtom. They are paid for these in kind. They deposit their handiwork outside the houses of likely purchasers; if the ropes and skins are needed, they are taken in and boiled rice is left in their place.

Naturally this people, living for centuries under a system so insulting, is in every way shameless and brutalized. Most of them live as itinerant beggars. They creep warily to the back of a house, and standing at the lawful distance, call monotonously for alms. So deeply ingrained is the sense of the degradation of these people and the contamination of their contact that not even the lowest servant will go near to turn them away. It is told of a Cingalese police officer that when ordered to arrest a Rodiya murderer, he replied: "Impossible, but I can go near his hamlet and shoot him."

The Rodiya beggars attend all places of festival, and especially the harvest home, and never fail to extort a contribution by their shameless importunity. The men are often well made and not ill-favored, sometimes tall and of a pleasant, light brown complexion. The women are many of them among the finest specimens of womanhood in the east. They wander about the countryside giving displays of dancing and juggling. Their moral code is very low.

Of late years, under the British Government, this unhappy tribe has made some advance in material things, though the social stigma remains. Many of them have reclaimed pieces of waste land, raised grain and vegetables, and by selling their produce in the larger bazaars where European civilization has blunted the edge of old time prejudices have made enough money to buy a piece of good land from the crown—from the crown, be it noted, for no private person would degrade himself by having money transactions with these folks; nay, there has been much difficulty in many villages where the Rodiyas have bought land even from the crown, for the villagers have thought it an insult that a Rodiya should be a property owner among them and have harassed him in every way in the occupation and development of his purchase.

Fortunately in the courts of law the Rodiyas can gain an impartial hearing, though here too they are handicapped by the difficulty of obtaining witnesses to give evidence on their behalf. As regards education their condition is deplorable. They could not be tolerated in schools along with other children; their presence would be an abomination. Nor have they had any schools of their own until recent years, when a mission has started work among them. Under these circumstances they have had no chance of improvement; they have sunk lower generation after generation.

The origin of the Rodiyas is lost in obscurity. Popular tradition among the Cingalese says that they are the descendants of royal huntsmen who were banished and degraded for an abominable crime; they served up human flesh before the King on a day when they had been unsuccessful in the chase. There is no reason to think that this story is anything more than a myth having its source in a natural tendency to assume a terrible cause for so terrible an effect.

Brahminical influences must not be lost sight of. Among Orientals in whose philosophy life was all misery and death a happy escape, the extreme form of punishment would not be death, but a continuance of life under conditions which should add to its misery by every conceivable means. So the Rodiyas would be the descendants of people condemned for various crimes to this form of punishment, and their ranks would be added to from time to time. There are, moreover, authentic records of cases where offenders guilty of high treason and similar crimes were cast out by the Kings of Kandy to join the Rodiyas, their wives and families being cast out with them.

This would explain the fine physique of this people and the good looks of their women, for some of the best blood of Ceylon must flow in their veins, recruited as they have been from the ranks of treasonable nobles and fair but frail princesses.

It Costs $40.00 For Doctor's Visit

On Alberta's Prairies—DR. CHASE'S Medicine and Receipt Book Very Popular Out There.

The luxuries of city life are little known in the prairie homes of Western Canada. When sickness comes people find it necessary to depend on their own resources to a great extent on account of the difficulty and expense of a doctor's visit.

By reading the letter quoted here you will form some idea of how Dr Chase's Medicines and Receipt Book are appreciated in Alberta. This is not only due to the convenience of having these medicines on hand when occasion requires but is also owing to their wonderful reliability.

Where will you find such a restorative treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, to enrich the blood, strengthen the nerves and build up the run down system?

Mr. Geo. Clay, Oxville, Alberta, writes: "I have always been a great admirer of Dr. Chase's Medicines and have had his large Receipt Book for over twenty years. His medicines and book have saved me many doctor bills and have proven wonderfully effective. It costs $40.00 for a doctor to come out here, so it is rather expensive to get sick.

"I recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to a friend of mine for his wife He studied the symptoms in Dr Chase's Almanac and found she needed Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to restore her wornout nervous system. I gave him some of this medicine until he could get to town when he got two boxes more and these cured her entirely.

"For myself, I used Dr. Chase's Catarrh Powder with splendid results. For some time I was bad with catarrh and could not breath through my nose. Now I go to bed and never wake all night and breathe all the time through the nose."

Dr. Chase's Medicines are for sale by all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

A Boon for the Bilious.—The liver is a very sensitive organ and easily deranged. When this occurs there is undue secretion of bile and the acrid liquid flows into the stomach and sours it. It is a most distressing ailment, and many are prone to it. In this condition a man finds the best remedy in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which are warranted to speedily correct the disorder. There is no better medicine in the entire list of pill prescriptions.

SAVED IN HIS OLD AGE

Annapolis, N. S., May 14, 1909.—I am over eighty years of age and have suffered from Kidney and Bladder trouble for fifteen years. I took doctors' medicine but got no help. I want to thank you for sending me the sample box of Gin Pills, which helped me.

I have taken six boxes of Gin Pills altogether, but got relief before I had taken near that amount. I had to get up some nights every fifteen minutes and had to use an instrument before I could urinate. Now I can lie in bed four or five hours without getting up.

It can be got at small cost at any drug store or general dealer's, and it will afford relief before a doctor can be called.

An Always Ready Pill.—To those of regular habit medicine is of little concern, but the great majority of men are not of regular habit. The worry and cares of business prevent it, and out of the irregularity of life comes dyspepsia, indigestion, liver and kidney troubles as a protest. "Keep On Trying"

A little girl who had a live bantam presented to her was disappointed at the smallness of the first egg laid by the bird. Her ideal egg was that of the ostrich, a specimen of which was on the table in the drawing-room. One day the ostrich's egg was missing from its accustomed place. It was subsequently found near the spot where the bantam nested, and on it was stuck a piece of paper with the words: "Something like this, please. Keep on trying."

Wins Out In Australia

MONTREAL.—On May 22nd the S. S. "RAKAI" sailed from this port for Auckland, New Zealand, this being the first sailing of the recently subsidized C. P. R. line from Montreal to Australia and New Zealand.

Part of the "Rakai's" cargo consisted of 2 carloads of "2 in 1" Shoe Polish, made in Hamilton by F. F. Dalley Co. This is the third shipment of "2 in 1" sent to Australia by the Dalley people within the last year. The first, sent June 8th last, consisted of 1,000 gross, the second, sent Nov. 2nd contained 1,500 gross, while the shipment just sent amounted to 1,540 gross, or 221,760 boxes. This brings the total of "2 in 1" sent to Australia within the year up to 581,760 boxes.

It would be hard to find a stronger recommendation for "2 in 1" Shoe Polish than that it should thus force its way to the ends of the earth, past almost prohibitive tariffs, against the strongest kind of competition from British and other firms.

ORE IN THE FAR NORTH

PROF. MILLER THINKS THERE IS IMMENSE WEALTH.

He Declares That the District Around Hudson Bay Will Prove to Contain Great Areas of Valuable Minerals —Mining Has Tripled In the Past Two Years and Will Continue to Develop.

"The mineral industry of Canada stands second in order of the industries based on natural resources. The output of this country is at the rate of $12.50 per head of the population," said Professor Willett G. Miller at an Empire Club luncheon recently in Toronto.

"There is three times as much now as there was ten years ago," he stated. Of the four basic industries of the country, agriculture, forestry, fisheries, and the mineral industry, agriculture stands at the top. Next comes the mineral industry, which is equal," said Professor Miller, "to forestry and fisheries combined. Then comes forestry, and last of all, fisheries.

"Although Canada has a comparatively small population, the mining output is unique in that we lead the world in the production of nickel, cobalt, asbestos, and several other mineral products.

PROF. WILLETT G. MILLER.

"In the United States the minerals and mineral products are responsible for 65 per cent. of the freight carried by the railways. The output is considered to be $25 per head of the population.

"Of the 3,750,000 square miles of Canada about one-third is valuable for no other purpose than the production of minerals. There are railways now under construction which will double, and are doubling, the regions which are accessible to the prospector and miner.

"If the proposed railway to Fort Nelson on Hudson Bay is constructed, the enormous territory which is tributary to the coast line of the Bay will be rendered easily accessible to the prospector. From what we know already of the rocks surrounding this region there is great promise for it as a future mineral field.

"Another great territory which is very promising from a mineral point of view will be opened up by the road which is now under consideration, that from Edmonton to Fort McMurray.

"Since Cobalt has been going it has produced over $30,000,000 worth of minerals, of which over half has been distributed in profits. That means that it has already more than paid for the Government railway, which was constructed at a cost of $13,000,000.

"There are undoubtedly large exposures of gold bearing quartz in Porcupine, but owing to many discoveries having been made so late in the season little has been done in the way of thorough testing."

The Apes of Gibraltar.

Few visitors to Gibraltar ever see the famous apes that from time immemorial have been distinguished as the only wild simians in Europe. The apes live high on the big rock, and when they go venture down to the nearer gardens of the town to steal food it is not the visitor who knows of it. As a matter of fact, there have been fewer apes to be seen there in the recent years. For some reason or other the never-large number has been decreasing. Some think that the firing of the fortress guns drove them off, but if so, where did they go? Not across the "neutral ground" and up into Spain, the only alternative to swimming across the straits and going into Barbary whence their ancestors may have been brought centuries ago. The straits being wide, that alternative is out of the question. It was thought recently that the apes had commenced [illegible] those who asserted that the count should be only four or five — and all females at that. New blood from Africa seemed to be needed, and a pair of Barbary apes were sent over from Tetuan by the British consul. But a strange stroke of ill-luck befell the home, which, after suffering the tortures of seasickness and receiving anything but a friendly welcome from the resident simians, fell off a wall and died of concussion of the brain. To guard against any possible chance of an Adamless Eden, another pair was brought across the strait.

A Zoo of Diseases

Sir James Crichton-Browne, speaking at the annual dinner of the London School of Clinical Medicine, said that at the Seamen's Hospital, Greenwich, there was a seminary to which medical men of all ages could resort and acquaint themselves with all recent developments in medical science. That hospital was "a zoological garden of disease. Every foreign disease was assembled there, every all that black, white, red, or yellow flesh was heir to.

CAUGHT IN HIS OWN TRAP.

The Financial Man Totally Forgot His Little Snare.

Mr. Harry Scott, at one time financial editor on The Toronto Globe staff, and now Canadian Commissioner in New York, has many friends in Toronto. On one occasion, while he was on The Globe staff, occasion arose for editorial comment on the financial situation in the United States. In the nature of things, one should expect that Mr. Scott would have been assigned the job. But Mr. S. T. Wood received the instructions to write the articles instead.

Mr. Scott, being only human, felt some chagrin at this event, which became an impatience when Mr. Wood, in his leisurely fashion, strolled down to the financial editor's den every afternoon to seek enlightenment on his task and get the latest news from American centres. He habitually, and to the other's distaste, spread his huge limbs upon half the surface of the financial desk, genially disposed to launch into side issues. After several repetitions of the visit, Mr. Scott determined upon reprisals in self-defence, and the sight of the mucilage pot suggested their mischievous nature. One day, at the approach of the fatal hour, therefore, he seized his brush and with swift, remorseless strokes smeared that portion of his desk upon which the editorial interloper was wont to side-seat himself.

Mr. Wood arrived, and the plot deepened.

He walked in, was attracted momentarily to the window, and, all unconscious of what he was expected to do —ranged himself along the—radiator!

Fortune had so far befriended him.

His guilty host, however, refused to be frustrated in his design. Scott began manoeuvres to dislodge him and lead him into the snare. He entered with heat into the controversy, for Mr. Wood has the faculty of putting one's opinions into pillory. But there was too much heat. The interest heightened. Mr. Scott, engaged, wholly forgot, in the moment, the desk, and, presently seeking a base whence he might rear a fresh argument sat down on the spot so carefully prepared for the undoing of another.

"Something (ah! tell me what) there is
To cause that scathing tone.
I fear a thought has gone amiss,
Returning quite alone."

The New Conservative Whip.

The event predicted for weeks back has come to pass, and when the House of Commons assembles next autumn "Taylor of Leeds" will no longer be Whip of the Opposition and his duties will be performed by George H. Perley, M.P. for Argenteuil.

Mr. Perley is one of the best known citizens of Ottawa. The son of W. G. Perley, the head of the lumber firm of Perley & Pattee, who was himself member for Ottawa from 1887 to 1891, Mr. G. H. Perley was born at Lebanon, New Hampshire, in 1857, but came to Canada at an early age. He was educated at the Ottawa Grammar School, at St. Paul's School, Concord, N.H., and at Harvard University, where he took his degree of B.A. in 1878.

He has long been active in the life of the city of Ottawa. He was vice-president of the Canada Atlantic Railway; a director of the Bank of Ottawa; has been president of the Rideau Club; is an enthusiastic golfer and has been president of the Ottawa Golf Club; and was chairman of the relief committee which administered the funds for the relief of the sufferers by the great fire in Ottawa and Hull in 1900. His first essay at political honors was in 1900 when he contested Russell County against Mr. W. C. Edwards, but was defeated. His next attempt was at Argenteuil at a bye-election in 1902 upon the death of the late Dr. Christie, but there again he was defeated by 191 majority, but he had better luck in 1904 when he won out by 176 and was re-elected at the last general election. Mr. Perley has taken a prominent part in the affairs of the Church of England in the diocese of Ottawa.

Indian Relics.

The Ontario Education Department has obtained a curious and interesting collection of Indian relics. The collection was bought from Mrs. Rutherford, whose husband was in the British Civil Service in India, and spent many years in gathering the curios.

The collection is a large one. Chief among the relics is a river crocodile which had a known record of killing six Indian women, before Mr. Rutherford shot it. There are two mounted wild black boar heads and one glimpse of them makes the timid person glad that he is many miles from India.

The collection also contains the mounted heads of six black buck, four jackals, and a wolf; a fish-eating crocodile, and the skull and horns of two Indian bison. Some of the minor relics are: a fusee, which is like a heavy shot gun, and is used for shooting elephants; a hill-gun; a spear 10 feet long, made of solid bamboo, and used for hoar sticking; Indian gods, anointing bottles, pistols, sabres, breast plates, [illegible] taken from a temple, a holy bull which they worship, and five silver coins, some round, some square.

Mrs. Rutherford also sent an original copy of The London Times of [illegible] 22, 1815. This paper contains the first official report by Wellington himself, of the battle of Waterloo. The report is dated June 19, the fighting having continued from the 15th to the 18th.

Buys Regina Land.

Mark Hambourg, the distinguished pianist, during his recent visit to Regina, purchased four lots of land of two double corner sites. These lots, writes The Standard of Empire correspondent at Regina, are pleasantly situated in the Lake View annex, which adjoins the new Parliament building site. Mr. Hambourg said that this was the first property he had purchased in Canada, and he considered his investment a good one. He was thoroughly impressed by the wonderful growth of Regina since he last passed through the town some years ago.

TONIC TREATMENT FOR INDIGESTON

The Process of Digestion is Controlled by the Blood and Nerves.

If you have indigestion and you begin a course of treatment to make your stomach stronger, you are on the right track for a real cure. You can never cure yourself by eating pre-digested foods, or by taking purgative medicines. The stomach is not doing its own work under these treatments, and there can be no real cure until the stomach is strong enough to digest all the food necessary to maintain the body in normal health. The great aim of the tonic treatment for indigestion in all forms, is to strengthen the stomach to a point where all foods eaten will digest easily and nourish the body. A tonic that will strengthen the stomach is what is needed, as the process of digestion is controlled by the blood and nerves. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an ideal tonic. They actually make new, rich blood, and thus bring strength and tone to the stomach. This has been proved over and over again, and thousands of grateful people have not hesitated to say so. Here is an instance: —Miss Eva Tocher, Balmoral, Man., says:—"I am writing this letter on behalf of my mother who wishes you to know how much Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for her. For several years she had been greatly troubled with indigestion and notwithstanding the medicine she was taking the trouble was growing worse. Every meal was dreaded, and left behind it a feeling of nausea and severe pains. As this continued she began to lose strength and energy, and was hardly able to do any housework. Acting on the advice of a friend she began to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and soon began to feel better. She continued taking the Pills until she had used ten boxes, when her health was fully restored and she could take any kind of food without the least discomfort. Since that time she has not had the slightest return of the trouble."

Thousands of cured men and women speak from experience of the benefits derived from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of indigestion, anaemia, rheumatism, general weakness, pains in the back and side, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, and the troubles that afflict women and growing girls. These pills are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

When Mark Twain was a young and struggling newspaper writer in San Francisco, a lady of his acquaintance saw him on day with a cigar box under his arm, looking in at a shop window.

"Mr. Clemens," she said, "I always see you with a cigar box under your arm. I am afraid you are smoking too much."

"It isn't that," said Mark Twain "I'm moving again."

White horses are barred from the German army, it being claimed that they are too conspicuous when smokeless powder is used.

A merchant in Germany was recently heavily fined for using a Biblical quotation at the head of his advertisement.

Externally or Internally, it is Good —When applied externally by brisk rubbing, Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil opens the pores and penetrates the tissue, as few liniments do, touching the seat of the trouble and immediately affording relief. Administered internally, it will still the irritation in the throat which induces coughing and will cure affections of the bronchial tubes and respiratory organs. Try it and be convinced.

$100—REWARD—$100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

NOVA SCOTIA'S AWAKENING.

Maritime Province Is Again Coming Into Her Own.

Is it not possible that a country regarded with a slightly contemptuous pity by reason of its inactivity may be all the while merely strengthening its fibres for future action?

Such at all events has been the experience of Nova Scotia. Previous to confederation no province of Canada exhibited a greater commercial activity. From her great shipbuilding yards staunch vessels slipped into the water by the hundred and sailed away with the fruits of her industry to distant marts and returned as heavily laden. Small shopkeepers grew into prosperous merchants, prosperous merchants developed into merchant princes. Work and money were plentiful, and the flag of prosperity flew high.

The flag of prosperity descended with the hoisting of the Canadian National ensign in Nova Scotia. Confederation, that splendid achievement in the making of Canadian destiny, wrought havoc with the Nova Scotian shipping trade by strangling the arteries of traffic with iron tariff bonds. The shipbuilding industry in Nova Scotia led largely on foreign trade, and the sudden check placed on that trade killed the principal industry by a slow starvation. Isolated by her geographical position from the rest of Canada, cut off by artificial barriers from the outside world, the province was forced to rest content with a limited internal commerce. Yielding to the force of circumstances she rested from her labors, and so far as the outside world was concerned Nova Scotia slumbered.

It was a natural sleep, however, and not the coma that precedes death. The years of sleep were not wasted years. Slowly, but steadily, the province built up new tissue, strengthened its tendons and gathered fresh energy into its nerves for future endeavors. The public school system was developed and improved; increased facilities were provided for the encouragement of exact scholarship; and as a result Nova Scotia has given to the world perhaps more college professors and principals than any other province in Canada. The period of so-called slumber ripened the country and prepared it thoroughly for the present industrial advancement.

The exploitation of her rich coal measures by great moneyed interests finally aroused the province from her commercial lethargy. H. M. Whitney of Boston and his associates formed the Dominion Coal Company in 1893, took over vast areas of coal in the neighborhood of Glace Bay, Cape Breton, equipped splendid collieries with the most modern appliances for coal digging, and furnished fuel for Montreal furnaces. The energy exhibited by the Dominion Coal Company and the instantaneous success achieved, created a buoyant ozone throughout the commercial atmosphere. Other coal companies dug deeper and faster and shipped more swiftly. Coal measures in Cumberland, in Pictou, in Inverness and in Cape Breton counties were developed. Fully equipped collieries sprang up over the country. Submarine areas were exploited. Practically every known coal seam in the province was delved into by the modern magician who transmutes black diamonds into yellow gold.

The industrial impetus given the province by the coal interests was augmented by the establishment of the Dominion Steel works at Sydney. Eagle eyes had marked the south bank of Sydney harbor as an admirable location for the Steel industry, and the result was an expenditure of $25,000,000 which reared the mightiest steel making plant in Canada and transformed a straggling village into a hustling city. Other companies also found the smelting and refining of iron ore a profitable enterprise, and as a result the steel industry in Nova Scotia is on a thoroughly substantial footing and is assuming large proportions. These are only two of Nova Scotia's booming industries which will put her back in the forefront of the wealthy provinces.

Patents.

The Patent Office issued 6,395 patents in the fiscal year 1909. Of this number 903 were granted to Canadian citizens, and 72 per cent. of the whole issue to citizens of the United States. Besides those pictured, other provinces of the Dominion obtained the following patents: Saskatchewan 32, Alberta 28, Nova Scotia 24, New Brunswick 18, Yukon 4, and Prince Edward Island 3. The principal foreign countries to whose citizens patents were granted were: United States 4,602, Great Britain 346, Germany 215, France 59, Australia 58, Sweden 40, New Zealand 36, Austria 33, Transvaal 12. The ratio of population to each patent granted shows that Ontario secured one patent to every 4,769 residents; Quebec, one to every 8,575; British Columbia, one to every 5,695; Manitoba, one to every 5,535; while in New Brunswick the ratio was one to 18,746; Nova Scotia, one to 19,391, and Prince Edward Island, one to every 33,668. The total revenue of the Patent Office for the fiscal year was $[illegible].

Strong on Conversation.

The Winnipeg city fathers followed with the closest interest Jim Conmee's legislation at Ottawa and even had representatives at Parliament Hill to see that the city's power privileges on the Winnipeg River were not interfered with. When word came that the bill was killed, one of the City Council framed a telegram to be sent to Hon. Clifford Sifton, congratulating him on his stand. This particular member, while a good councillor, like a good many Western old-timers did not have educational opportunities in his youth. He had the telegram addressed, "Hon. Clifford Sitton, chairman of the conversation committee, Ottawa." A newspaperman, however, pointed out that there was a slight difference between "conversation" and "conservation," and the telegram was changed in time.

Symptoms are pains, shooting pains in side, chest and limbs, nervousness, insomnia, thinness and wasting, langour, shortness of breath, headaches, neurasthenia, melancholy, weakness, trembling, loss of appetite, etc. One may have any or all such symptoms and more. Here is a most wonderful tonic and vitalizer of the system:

Compound syrup of hypophosphites 5 ozs., tincture cadomene compound 1 oz. (not cardamom). Mix. Take a teaspoonful before meals and at bedtime.

Mrs. O. M.—The symptoms mentioned, such as pain in left side, heart palpitation, shortness of breath, bloating, belching, gas and wind, with fullness in stomach after eating, vomiting at times, weakness, etc., all indicate a dyspeptic condition. Avoid pork, pastries, doughy bread, etc., and have this filled: Essence of pepsin 3 ozs., comp. essence cardiol 1 oz., syrup of ginger 2 ozs. Mix. Shake well and take a teaspoonful after each meal. Increase dose if necessary.

Mix. Take a teaspoonful after each meal and one at bedtime. Drink lots of water between meals.

Mrs. X.:—The bedwetting "habit" is a disease of children and can be corrected and cured by the persistent use of compound fluid balmwort. Obtain one ounce, and give from 5 to 15 drops in water, after each meal, between meals and at bedtime. Symptoms may increase at first, but continue treatment 2 or 3 months. Keep the bowels regular always.

Maid:—Every lady should endeavor to improve the figure and I know of one formula which has proven very successful in developing bust, arms and neck. Tincture cadomene comp. 1 oz. Then wash with hot water and soap, dry thoroughly, and massage with olive oil or sheep tallow. Do this morning and night for several weeks or months if necessary.

Mrs. G.:—Use a half teacup of lard to which add a teaspoonful of sulphate of quinine. Mix, and thoroughly grease baby's chest, shoulders and abdomen. This will check and cure the cold. Apply morning and night.

Farmer:—For loss of appetite I know of nothing better than 15 drops tincture cadomene comp. in half glass of hot water, 15 minutes before mealtime. A powerful tonic for stomach and stomach nerves.

Fresh Air Exercise Is Best

FRESH air is one of the best tonics that I can recommend to my readers, and when moderate exercise at the right time be taken in the environment nature has given to us, the benefits are incalculable. No one has ever been harmed by too much fresh air; in fact, most ills are traceable to the lack of it. Many disorders are the result of the condition of the blood. Now my talk today is not a dissertation on the circulation of the blood, but suffice it for me to call to your mind that oxygen must be breathed into the lungs, must penetrate through the walls of the capillaries and be absorbed by the red corpuscles. This aeration of the blood is absolutely necessary for good health. Exercise increases respiration and perspiration is induced, thus ridding the body of impurities.

In the open air there is more oxygen than in the house, therefore there is greater benefit from exercise out of doors. Remember that no exercise should be taken immediately before or after meals, and too much exercise is just as harmful as too little.

Tennis has been prescribed by a famous specialist for the complexion. Every muscle of the body is brought into healthy play, and it is usual to see sensible garb on the tennis court. The flat-heeled shoes are conducive to easy movement. Do not overdo the matter, though. Be satisfied with "not quite enough."

Swimming is a wonderful outdoor exercise. The fresh air and the water have a salutary influence on the nerves and skin. Muscular power is developed and absolute comfort should be enjoyed. The tightly corseted figure is fit for a tailored gown, not the bathing suit. Never stay in the water until your lips or finger nails are blue or until you are uncomfortable. Gauge your own time, and do not foolishly undo the good of bathing or swimming by excess.

For women who require the development of the arm and trunk muscles rowing is recommended. It is delightful, in that the rower can stop at will, varying her exercise with short rests. There is no reason why a woman should not "feather" as capably as her brother.

The gardener is fortunate. Digging or mowing (with a lightweight lawn-mower) is walking with a little extra force thrown in. I cannot emphasize too strongly the good results of gardening for sufferers from indigestion.

Within every woman's reach, and standing high in the beneficial scale, is walking. Women in this country do not do enough of it. Their endurance powers are limited, but grow with practice. An easy walk with a camera for a companion, should you be in need of amusement, will bring fresh air to your lungs, a glow to your cheeks, an appreciation of nature and a renewed vigor for the resumption of indoor occupation.

Exercise in the fresh air! Take every opportunity to give nature's treatment to your body. Inhale the oxygen with long, deep breaths, filling every corner of your lungs. Give your body a chance to enjoy the healthy action that spells long life and happiness, which should be your natural endowment.

Beauty Query Answers

OWING to the great amount of mail received and the limited space given this department, it is absolutely impossible to answer letters in the Sunday issue following their receipt. The letters must be answered in turn, and this ofttimes requires three or four weeks.

All correspondents who desire an immediate answer must inclose a self-addressed stamped envelope for a reply. This rule must also be complied with in regard to personal letters.

Dry and Scaly Skin

Dear Mrs. Symes:

I wish to ask your advice in regard to my complexion; my face is thin and inclined to be a little scaly. I can't use much powder, as it shows very plainly. My skin seems to be tanned or yellow from some cause, and I have two or three spots that are very noticeable. I have a thick growth of hair on my face, and I have always been afraid to use creams. I have been using lemon and glycerine for the yellow complexion and brown spots, but a friend told me they would cause a growth of hair, so I stopped using the mixture. Would you advise me to use sulphur and cream of tartar tablets?

[illegible] give me a good tonic for my hair, something that contains castor oil. My hair is falling and is a little gray. [illegible]

I think you will find that after you have stopped using powder your skin will not be so dry and scaly. Continue to use the lemon juice and glycerine, for it will not cause the growth of hair. Too much soap will cause the skin to be dry, so I advise you to use as little as possible on your face. It is advisable to take the tablets at this time of year.

Castor oil alone will be very good for your hair. Apply a few drops once a day.

Skin Hard and Chapped

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Would you please give me some information about my hands? They are very hard and sometimes they are very badly chapped. Please do not give me anything that is very costly. WOUNDED.

It may be that you do not thoroughly wash [illegible]. In the majority of cases this is the cause of chapped hands. If you will make use of the following recipe the condition of your hands will be greatly improved:

Tincture benzoin	[illegible] drops
Glycerine	2 ounces
Roses otar	[illegible] drops

Rub this on the hands night and morning.

Measurements

Dear Mrs. Symes:

I am 20 years old and 5 feet 5 inches tall. My bust measure is 36 inches, hips, [illegible] waist 25 inches. I weigh 144 pounds. My [illegible] I want to [illegible] that I [illegible] can you tell me how I might reduce my flesh? Do you think the saying is true that if a person is to be stout she will remain so whether diet or exercise is tried?

2. Is there any hope for a turned-up nose at my age? Would massage be helpful?

3. I have tried many remedies for my hands. They are soft enough, but are very red. What can be done when the skin grows hard and soiled looking around the nails. One cannot cut it very well, it being so set in. THANKFUL.

1. I do not think you are too stout and advise you not to exercise. By persistent effort any one can reduce her flesh.

2. It is never too late to try. Massage has helped wonderfully in many cases, so I advise you to apply the treatment to your case.

3. Red hands are very often the result of tight clothing. The following may appeal to you:

To Make Cosmetic Gloves.

Use soft, large leather gloves, three or four sizes too large. Rip them open and spread the inside with the following preparation, then sew the ripped seam up.

Cosmetic Gloves Paste.

Ground barley, the white of an egg, a teaspoonful of glycerine and one ounce of honey.

To soften the cuticle around the nails soak the fingers in warm soapsuds to which the juice of a lemon has been added. Dry carefully and apply cold cream.

Vaucaire Recipe

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you kindly publish the recipe for the Vaucaire bust developer? ANXIOUS ONE.

Here is the recipe you desire:

Dr. Vaucaire's Remedy for the Bust

Liquid extract of galega (goatsrue)	3	fl. dr.
Lacto-phosphate of lime	154	grains
Tincture of fennel	10	grains
Simple syrup	13½	ounces

The dose is two soupspoonfuls with water before each meal.

Dr. Vaucaire also advises the drinking of malt extract during meals.

Vaseline on the Hair

Dear Mrs. Symes.

1. Does vaseline make the hair grow, and has it any effect on the nature or color of the hair?

2. What would you suggest to develop thin hands and a thin face?

3. What is the cause of a person's hair being so much lighter in front than in the back, and what will darken the light hair?

4. What will remove my wrinkles?

5. What will remove hair from the nose?

6. What is the cause of a greasy nose, and what will stop it from being so?

7. What causes the skin to be baggy and wrinkle under the eyes, and what is the cure for the condition?

8. What is a good fattening food? Mrs. P. O. R.

1. Vaseline is excellent for increasing the growth of the hair. It will not affect the nature and color of the hair.

2. Massage the hands and face with cocoa butter daily if you wish to develop them.

3. It may be that the hair on the front of the head has been exposed to the sun more than the back. The application of sage tea will darken it.

4. Massage with cocoa butter or olive oil will clear away all wrinkles.

5. The electric needle is the only thing which will remove superfluous hair permanently. A depilatory will remove it for a time, but the hairs will grow in again thicker and coarser.

6. Very often the eating of rich and greasy foods causes the nose to be greasy. Bathing it with water to which a little alcohol is added will prove helpful.

7. Wrinkles and bagginess under the eyes may be due to eyestrain, squinting or disordered kidneys. The first thing to do is to locate the cause and then try to overcome it.

8. Olive oil is splendid for increasing flesh; take a tablespoonful in lemon or orange juice before each meal.

Freckle Cure

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you please give me a remedy that will cure obstinate freckles and not grow hair on the face? SCHOOLGIRL.

I am sure you will find the following recipe very beneficial:

Obstinate Freckles.

Oxide of zinc	½ dram
Subnitrate of bismuth	½ dram
Glycerine	½ drams
Cucumber	[illegible] drams

Spread the paste upon the freckles at night before going to bed. In [illegible] use what remains with a little powdered borax and sweet oil.

Superfluous Hair

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you please give me some remedy for superfluous hair on my face and arms? I would like something which will remove it [illegible] but permanently. [illegible] affect electrolysis. STRONGHEART.

I cannot give you the recipe for a permanent cure for superfluous hair, [illegible] will remove the hairs for a time:

Sulphide of soda or calcium sulphide	[illegible] grains
Starch	[illegible] grains

Mix thoroughly and keep dry in a well-corked bottle until wanted for use. Take enough to make a paste and add warm water to it until the proper consistency is secured. Spread over the hairy surface and allow it to remain for from one to five minutes according to the nature of the growth. [illegible] then scrape off with a blunt blade a paper knife for example. It should be removed, [illegible] too long [illegible] and immediately after the hair has been removed [illegible] water and a cold cream or a mixture applied to prevent irritation.

Problems and Perplexities

A GARDEN PARTY

IF YOU decide to give a garden party, which, by the way, is a delightful way to entertain if you have attractive grounds, there must be made beforehand a few preparations that are conducive to the enjoyment and comfort of your guests. The invitations must suggest the boat or train to be taken, if you reside outside the city, and if provision has been made for meeting guests, the fact should be stated on the card.

Of course a garden party is held in open air. Even the refreshments may be served "al fresco"—on the lawn. The hostess of a garden party receives out of doors, wearing a light dress and a hat. Guests may enter the house, remove any coats and then be conducted to the part of the ground where the hostess is receiving. After the exchange of greetings, the guests are at liberty to wander in groups much as at a tea. Light refreshments (of course cold) can be served. Salads, sandwiches, cake, bonbons and ices are all that are necessary. Hot tea or coffee should be in the house for any who wish it.

Music is a valuable addition, and if some form of amusement can be given there will be small chance for failure. It is quite customary to have a short play or tableau to furnish a diversion.

Numbers of small tables upon which empty plates can be deposited should be provided, for a guest cannot be expected to hold an empty cup until a servant arrives.

Of course, it is the duty of a hostess to introduce people who are congenial, and, after all guests have arrived, to flit from group to group and to make every one feel comfortable. Forlorn strange ones should be tactfully brought into the nearest collection of people.

A watchful eye should be kept on the servants, and, indeed, the hostess should be everywhere.

There is an advantage in the garden party that possibly few of you have realized. In the first place, it offers a delightfully cool method of giving an afternoon tea, and then the grounds offer accommodation for many more guests than the usual country house. Besides, it is a little different from the formal "at home." You may rely upon a full attendance, which fact speaks decidedly in favor of this way of entertaining in the summer.

SOLUTIONS TO SOCIAL PROBLEMS

With a Tuxedo

DEAR Mrs. Adams:

1. Shall I proceed to win my wish?

2. Would you advise me to ask permission to call on her?

3. Is it right to wear a ready-tied dress cravat with a tuxedo? NO. 63.

1. Complying with your request, I shall keep the first part of your letter strictly confidential. My reply to your [illegible] necessary for you to receive a formal introduction to the young lady in question before proceeding further.

3. The ready-tied cravat is quite out of place with a tuxedo. The string tie is in better taste.

He is Jealous

Dear Mrs. Adams:

[illegible] 17 and am very much in love with a young man of 24. He treats me very friendly, but whenever he sees me with or hears me speak to another boy he gets very angry and leaves the room. Do you think he loves me? ROBERTA.

The young man becomes angry probably because he is jealous of you; but, my dear Roberta, do not feel that jealousy is always a sign of love. It more often indicates a selfish disposition in the jealous one. Jealousy and the sooner it is conquered the better for all concerned.

Wait for an Introduction

Dear Mrs. Adams,

1. I am very much interested in a young lady whom I have seen several times at [illegible] to her, but she speaks every time I see her. Would it be proper for me to ask for her company? If so, what should I say?

2. When a gentleman is introduced to a lady on the street, should he remove his hat? YOUNG MAN.

1. It would not be proper for you to ask such a privilege when you have not been introduced to her. You are both making a breach of etiquette by speaking to each other.

2. Yes.

Improper Terms

Dear Mrs. Adams:

1. Should a girl who has been going [illegible] a young man for a year ever refer to him as her "intended"?

2. Is it proper for a young man calling on a girl to refer to her father as "the old gent" or "the governor"? I maintain that it is all right.

3. My country uncle, when visiting me, insists on calling for with a [illegible]. Would it be better to remonstrate with him or say nothing? He is very sensitive.

4. Is it right for a young gentleman of 17 to call on a young lady of 16 more than four times a week? The girl thinks a great deal of him. ON THE FENCE.

1. It is an undignified and incorrect term.

2. It is quite disrespectful to refer to the father in such a way.

3. In a gentle way you might ask him if he wouldn't rather use his fork.

4. I think four times a week is too often, for such frequent visits take up too much of the girl's time.

Not Always Attentive

Dear Mrs. Adams:

Would you kindly tell me what to do? I met a young man three years ago and learned to love him very dearly. When we are alone he treats me [illegible] for me, but when we are among company he pays no attention to me. If anyone is the least attentive to him, I just hate the person. I am broken-hearted. G.

Jealousy has a strong hold on you, I fear, and if you don't conquer it, you will not be happy. When out in company, it is the duty of both to be attentive to the friends assembled. He, of course, must see that you are not neglected, but you must do your part toward making the evening a pleasant one.

Breaking Dates

Dear Mrs. Adams:

I telephoned to a girl friend the other day and made an engagement to call on her at 8 o'clock that evening. When I arrived at her home I was told that she went to the theatre with a girl. I did not know what to make of her actions. She says I am one of her best friends. When I say [illegible] she gave a feeble apology and ran short of excuses. This is the second time she has treated me in this manner. The first time I didn't pay any attention to it at all, but gave her the benefit of the doubt. Now, don't you think the proper way for me to do is to be kind and friendly and do her a good turn whenever I can, but never make any more dates with her? Please understand I am not in love; it is just sincere friendship, and we both understand it that way. DISPLEASED.

You have exactly the right idea of the course to pursue in the future with regard to the young girl. It would be very unwise to make any more engagements with her, only to have them broken; yet it would be unmanly to treat her in any other but a civil and courteous manner.

Leaving Cards

Dear Mrs. Adams:

Should a married woman leave her husband's card when calling on a single woman? A SINGLE GIRL.

Yes, if her call is made in return for any entertainment to which he has been asked, or if she acts as the head or hostess in the house in which she is living.

Establish Mining Town On Island

A new mining town to be known as Wednesbury will shortly spring up in the Comox district of Vancouver Island. The town will be built up in connection with the development work which the Canadian Collieries company is about to carry out. The company which recently took over the holdings of the Hon. James Dunsmuir is operating diamond drills in a number of places with a view to locating the best points for sinking new pits which will lead to the output of the collieries being largely increased. A large number of expert coal miners will be brought out through the Imperial Federation League.—Colonist.

A dearth of local news often leads to murmurs on thr part of those who prize local gossip above all else, and it is not all the fault of the publisher. Any live publisher will not fail to give all the local news worthy of note, therefore when the local department is short you should not rail at the editor, but remember you might have committed suicide, got married quarrelled with your neighbor, stole chickens, let your team run away, or done a hundred other things to make a local item.

If a newspaper should publish current street gossip, or the hints and allusions of the best society in any community it would be ostracized and the editor horsewhipped or burned at the stake. Think a minute of the mean and low things you say about your townsmen and your near neighbor and imagine how it would look in print. Don't criticise the newspapers for what they print, but give them great credit for what they don't print. A newspaper that contains one-half the nonsense current among the best citizens, would be considered unfit to read. Honest!

We would suggest that some other form of amusement be indulged in, beside sounding a fire alarm at 1 o'clock in the morning, thereby causing the citizens unnecessary alarm.

Ladysmith, Aug. 4.—A drowning accident was narrowly averted the other day, and again it was owing to the bravery and presence of mind of children that a fatality was averted. This time little Norman Harrup and Bobbie McBurnie, with a playmate, Thelma Dodds, are the heroes. Mrs. Hume with her baby, and her companion, Mrs. Bourne, were thrown into the water by the capsizing of a boat. No one was near with the exception of the three children mentioned. The brave lads sprang to the assistance of the drowning ladies and succeeded in grasping Mrs. Hume and the baby and holding them above water, their united strength being unequal to the task of lifting them from the water. Mrs. Bourne in the meantime had caught hold of the upturned boat, but would not have been able to sustain her hold on that for long had not the little Dodds girl by her cries, summoned help. Robt. Harrup, who was at work on the beach at some little distance away, heard her cries, and saw the danger. He at once ran to their assistance, and just in time, as the little fellows were almost exhausted. Mr Harrup rescued the ladies and helped them to the house close by, where restoratives were administered.—Ex.
