Locals.

A number of lads were tried before Magistrate Abrams on Friday evening last, for the destruction of property, on the evening of October 31st. The boys were ordered to pay for damage done and costs. Another lot of boys in addition to those who appeared on Friday evening, were summoned to appear on Monday evening, but failed to show up. If they fail to toe the mark on Tuesday evening, warrants will be issued.

The engine and compressor houses at No. 7 mine, were totally destroyed by fire, early on Saturday morning. The cause of the fire is unknown, but is supposed to of accidental origin.

Mr. H. Stewart of the Royal Bank, is confined to his home with scarlet fever. Mr. W. Hudson's son Walter is down with the same malady.

Dr. Kerr the dentist, is at the Cumberland Hotel.

Mr. W. Wall left for Vancouver on Sunday, where he will shortly be joined by his family.

In another column will be seen the advertisement of Messrs. Kent, Hawes & Sherwood, real estate, commission and forwarding agents. We are informed this firm includes in the commission anything from buying a packet of pins to selling carloads or produce. Also persons living here could have relatives met at the train in Vancouver and forwarded to their destination at a nominal cost. At present this is quite a costly proceeding, counting the loss of days' pay and the expenses of trip, and hotel fare in Vancouver. It frequently occurs that residents having business that would not warrant a trip, which could be safely entrusted to this firm, and we are pleased to know that this necessity has been met.

Rev. T. Menzies, of Sandwick, very kindly presented us on Monday, last with a generous sample of honey from his apiary, which upon being tested was not found wanting.

TWELFTH NIGHT.

The performance of Shakespeare's 'Twelfth Night' by the Yule and Eddy Company of players on the evening of Saturday last, was in every way a great success, both from a dramatic point of view and financially. The scenes in the play were rearranged to some extent and many minor portions were omitted. However, all the essential points of the story were reproduced so that we were able to appreciate this most famous comedy

The plot briefly was as follows: Viola masquerades as a page and is sent by Orsino, Duke of Illyria, to plead his cause with the Countess Olivia. She, however, falls in love with his page. Sebastion, the twin brother of Viola teen comes on the scene, and in the end is married to Olivia, who at first thinks that he and the page are one person. Viola is discovered to be his sister and is married to the Duke.

Where the whole was so pleasing it is difficult to criticize, but the characters of Olivia, Sir Toby Belch and Malvolio were very well sustained.

Great credit is due to the Ladies of the Maccabee Society, who took charge of the performance, which was in aid of our local hospital, and we are sure that their further efforts to help that institution will be crowned with success.

MASS MEETING.

A mass meeting of the employees of the Canadian Collieries Dunsmuir Ltd.) will be held in the Cumberland Hall on Sunday, November 20, 1910, at 2:30 p.m., the business being to receive and consider a proposition received from Superintendent Stewart, of Canadian Collieries (Dunsmuir Ltd.)

JOSEPH HORBURY,
Chairman Medical Board.

Nanaimo, Nov. 15.—For the first time in its history the output of the Pacific Coast Coal Company's mines at South Wellington yesterday exceeded the 1000 ton mark, the amount of coal hoisted to the surface being 1003 tons, exceeding the previous high water mark by 142 tons. The management of the company has long looked for the 1000 ton mark, but now that has been reached, higher totals are in view and with the development now in progress it is expected that ere long the daily output of these mines tributary to Nanaimo will reach 1500 tons per day.

Miss Gray, of the Electric theatre, left on Sunday for her home in Portland, Ore., where she will spend Thanksgiving Day with her parents. Miss Gray will remain away some two or three weeks visiting friends, when she will return to again resume her duties at that most entertaining resort.

Manager Curtis is showing some grand pictures this week. Don't miss seeing them.

E. H. Davis, of Comox, is in the Nanaimo hospital suffering from typhoid fever.

Another proof that there is great development in business in the various cities on Vancouver Island is furnished in the announcement made by H E Beasley, superintendent of the E & N R R, that in order to meet the demands of traffic on that line the company is taking up the work of laying heavier rails on the entire section between Victoria and Wellington. The traffic has increased to such an extent that it has been found necessary to improve the trackage to permit of heavier trains being hauled, and to this end better rails are to be laid and the character of the road bed improved generally. At present there is a force of 100 men on this work which will be rushed to completion.

The Canada Western Lumber Company, of Courtenay, were closed down on Friday and Saturday of last week, owing to boiler inspection.

Mrs. T. Bickle and Mrs. L. Mounce left by Sunday's boat for Vancouver.

A new restaurannt has been opened up in Courtenay.

Mrs. Nolan and Phyllis re-entered the drawing room, and Brand became the especial object of their attentions.

The mother desired to have him print the list of her invited guests who had never attended the reception. Phyllis requested him to print a story about the violinist and was vastly annoyed when Brand informed her that the subject was a matter for the musical editor to attend to.

"And there's something else, Mr. Brand." A look of despair came into Brand's face. "Phyllis went to Miss Bartelmy's musicale the other day, and you didn't even include her name among those present," the mother said.

"Why, I'm sorry. That was an oversight, I assure you. I suppose they made up the usual list in the office."

"I hope it won't happen again," remarked Phyllis indignantly.

"Yes, and the way it's handling this Loris divorce case is all wrong," snapped Mrs. Nolan. "I know Mrs. Loris. She is no better than she should be, and people who live in icehouses shouldn't throw hot water."

"We have no policy in the Loris case," remarked Brand in defense. "We merely print the facts."

"Facts!" Mrs. Nolan cried. "That paper upsets me for the whole day every morning."

"There now, mother; I guess the paper's all right," ventured Nolan soothingly.

"You've got another guess, Michael. Nobody reads it but shopgirls, who spend a penny for the Advance and another for a stick of gum and hang on to a strap with one hand and the Advance with the other while they're waggling their jaws all the way down to work. That's all that reads it!" She paused for breath, then went on, "And I must say I think it's scandalous the way you attack Judge Bartelmy every little while."

"Yes," contributed Phyllis, "and his daughter's one of the most exclusive and sought after girls in New York. She's the only one of her set who has been at all nice to me. Isn't that so, mamma?"

"Yes, and why the paper should go for her father just as it does for every other prominent man in town I can't see. She must think it's very funny that such things should appear in the Advance after what she's done for us."

"Oh," suggested Brand, thinking to soothe his employer's wife, "she probably knows that you have absolutely nothing to do with the policy of the Advance."

"Is that so?" ejaculated Mrs. Nolan indignantly. "They certainly are very kind hearted people to act the way they do in the face of that paper."

"Judge Bartelmy is first and last a politician," explained Brand.

[illegible] intently. The conversation had now reached a point where he realized an issue of vital importance to himself and to the Advance had been touched on.

"Well, I suppose he has been coddling up to us a little," he began, then paused.

Brand drew a deep breath, stood upright in the middle of the drawing room and dartingly explained the situation to the owner of the paper.

"Bartelmy handles people better than any man in town," he declared. "He has studied the Advance, dissected its position and I will be frank with you—discovered its weaknesses. He knows he can't reach you through your cupidity or political ambition because you lack those qualities. He now realizes that his only hope of influencing us lies in an appeal to—" He hesitated.

"Well?" asked Mrs. Nolan ominously.

Brand found the courage to complete the sentence.

"His only hope lies in an appeal—to your family's social desires"—Phyllis rose from her seat, her cheeks red with anger—"and that's the only reason he has for taking you up."

Mrs. Nolan gave a scream of wrath. Nolan himself, regretting that the unpleasant scene had occurred, rose from the settee and advanced to calm the ruffled waters, but his face was clouded. Its serious expression indicated that he was deeply concerned over the frank statements of his managing editor, and one could instinctively feel that he was convinced that Brand had spoken the truth.

CHAPTER VI.

NOLAN faced Brand.

"Come, come, Wheeler," he said. "Let's drop the subject now."

"Mr. Brand, you are forgetting your place," contributed Phyllis.

"Michael," insisted Mrs. Nolan, "are you going to let this young man ruin the whole of us? I, for one, am glad Judge Bartelmy has taken us up, and if it wasn't for the way Mr Brand runs wild with that paper"—her voice broke—"others might." She crossed to the door at the left. "Here we've squandered money right and left and nobody would have anything to do with us. I declare I was happier poor. At least when I asked anybody to eat then they came. Look at that table in there"—she pointed—"groaning with good things to eat, and there's $100 for hothouse grapes, and nobody's touched 'em!" She picked up a bunch of grapes from a stand and began to eat them.

"Mother," laughed the husband good naturedly, "I've seen you get away with three bunches all by yourself."

"Well, I felt it was my duty not to let them go to waste." She burst into tears. "Come on, Phyllis," she managed to say, and the heartbroken mother and daughter went from the room.

"You mustn't mind what mother says," Nolan said to Brand. "She's been kind o' lonely since she came back to New York."

The editor's heart swelled with sympathy for the woman whose ambitions for herself and her daughter had caused the bitterest pain that injured pride can give. He saw that it would be difficult for her to learn that social position in a big city can be won only by skillful maneuvering, the ability to do which Mrs. Nolan apparently did not possess.

"Oh, I understand!" he answered feelingly.

Brand and Nolan went into the library to smoke. Hardly had they disappeared when Pitcher entered the drawing room as an escort for Judge Bartelmy and his daughter Judith. Brand had not erred a few minutes previous when in the same room he had pronounced the judge to be the best "handler of people" in the city. The conversation which ensued between the jurist and his daughter as they awaited their hostess well illustrated his reasons for accepting, with his daughter, Mrs. Nolan's invitation. When Pitcher had gone in search of Mrs. Nolan it was the girl who first spoke.

"Father," she said, "I want you to know that I've been to five teas this afternoon. I'm doing you a great favor to come to this one."

"This doesn't come under the head of social duties."

"Yes, my dear; I appreciate it, but social duties"—

The girl laughed shortly.

"Now, this doesn't come under the head of social duties."

"Oh, yes," the judge answered quickly, "if you view society in its broader sense. Beyond your little world is a larger one where caste is of [illegible] and where all men should be of service to each other."

"But the Nolans they certainly haven't been of service to you?" questioned the girl.

He glanced sharply at Judith.

"But I wish them to be, and were getting on—were getting on."

"Their paper keeps going for you just as much as ever, father. I don't suppose one ought to mind it, but I do."

"Judith, Nolans have lived in every age in every country," pronounced the jurist. "He is a composite of anarchist and autocrat. Eventually the autocrat in him will triumph. Just now he's bombing old institutions. I, for instance, represent to him the monetary, and he attacks me. No consequence whatever, but I'm here in defense of the United States bench. My cause is the cause of my colleagues. I tell you Judith, I know the breed. I know how to get the venom out of his fangs. Diplomacy, my dear—diplomacy!"

Judith became enthusiastic.

"Father, I believe you would have been a great prime minister in the old days!"

The judge straightened up, smiling pleasedly at his daughter's complimentary estimate of him. "Hardly that, hardly that," he protested. He became reflective. "They were feeble old men, for a thousand years courteously moving kings and their armies like pawns on a chessboard. They were always very tactful, Judith, those princes of the past."

"Oh," she admitted, "you never fail to illustrate your point, whatever it is!"

"Just imagine," said her father, "what one of those old fellows would do in this case."

"Yes, I suppose you're right, and in the end you'll make these people see how wrong they've been about you."

"Oh, yes!" he went on confidently. "As they become accustomed to their prosperity you will find that the demogogism of their paper will be modified and ultimately vanish." He seated himself near his daughter.

"That would be a terrible blow for Wheeler, wouldn't it?" she suddenly asked.

"Wheeler! Oh, Wheeler! He's an entirely different type—the idealist, the fanatical idealist. I'm sorry. I always liked the boy. His heart's all right, but his head's all wrong, and I hope he's merely passing through a phase."

"I don't think you quite understand Wheeler, father," responded Judith, rising.

He took hold of the girl's hands.

"Oh, yes, I do! Just now he has lost himself in a labyrinth, and it will take an Ariadne to lead him out. I believe the right woman might bring him to reason." He paused significantly. Judith lowered her eyes from his. "I forgive him any annoyance he may have caused me, and I hope you will forgive him too. I want you and Wheeler to be friends again and, like the princess in the fairy stories, live happily ever after." He patted her fondly on the shoulder.

WELCOME CRIMINALS.

"Politicals" Get Sanctuary When They Reach Foreign Soil.

When a man commits an ordinary crime and then flies to another country, the Government of that country is, as a general rule, only too glad to hand him over on demand, and cry "Good riddance to bad rubbish."

When, however, the crime happens to be a political one, the case is altogether different. In such an event it not infrequently welcomes him with open arms. In any case it almost invariably refuses to surrender him.

This is in accordance with both the written and unwritten law of nations, which decrees "right of sanctuary" to political offenders, and for this reason a good deal more is likely to be heard in the near future of the "Savarkar incident," as it is now beginning to be called.

Savarkar, it will be remembered, was the Hindoo student who was arrested in London for carrying on a seditious propaganda in India, and was deported to that country for trial. On the way out there, however, the steamer that was conveying him put into the harbor of Marseilles, and Sarvarkar seized the opportunity to jump overboard and swim ashore.

A French policeman arrested him as he clambered up the quay side, and handed him over to the crew of the ship's boat that was sent to fetch him back, in ignorance of the fact that he was a political offender. But he was one, in fact. He had set foot on French soil; and he had thereby entitled himself to his "right of sanctuary." As a consequence, the French Government, as soon as it learned the truth of the matter, started to make "friendly representations" to the British Government, and these are still in progress. What the result will be remains to be seen.

Nor are other nations much less tender of the rights of "politicals," as this class of offender is generally designed for short. Switzerland, for instance, refused to give up the notorious Vera Zassoulich, who shot Gen. Trepoff, the chief of police, at St. Petersburg. Stepniak, the famous Nihilist, lived in France, Germany, and Italy before finally taking refuge in England, and by each of these three nations in turn was his extradition refused.

Gold Leaf.

A twenty dollar gold piece if beaten into gold leaf would make 2,500 leaves, each 3⅜ by 3⅜ inches, having an area of 16.6 square yards.

Oriental Coffee Grinders.

In oriental countries very small brass coffee grinders are used. They have the appearance of a cylinder about as thick as a man's wrist and fourteen inches long.

Blue.

At a very early period blue was the universal wear of serving men. It was then the cheapest of dyes. Sir Walter Scott in his well known poem "Marmion" talks of "an old, blue coated serving man."

Telephones in Spain.

Spanish telephone companies adjust their rates according to the occupation of the patron. Social clubs have to pay the highest rate.

Pleasant For Tobias.

Mrs. Henpeck (to her husband, who has returned home late)—Is that you, Tobias? Tobias—It is, my dear; don't be alarmed. Mrs. Henpeck—Don't be alarmed, indeed! You gave me quite a turn. I thought there was a mouse in the house!

IN FATHER'S FOOTSTEPS.

Sons Who Have Been as Celebrated as Their Parents.

"Doesn't he take after his father!" is the compliment invariably paid to every boy during his first few years. And it is interesting to find how many sons of great men have actually followed in their father's footsteps.

"Nearly every one of the great men of history was the child of obscure and commonplace parents," said a speaker in the House of Commons recently. He was immediately reminded of the fact that two of England's greatest statesmen were father and son. William Pitt, Earl of Chatham, who was responsible for the policy which, in 1759-60, made Canada a British colony, was followed by his son, William Pitt the younger, who became, in 1782, Chancellor of the Exchequer, at the age of 23, and Premier a year later.

The political world furnishes many instances of the truth of the adage, "Like father, like son." To go no further than the present House, there is the Home Secretary, Mr. Winston Churchill, whose career brings back to the minds of old Parliamentarians the days when Lord Randolph Churchill played his part in the drama at Westminster; while on the other side is Mr. Austen Chamberlain, who, in the last Unionist Government, was a member of the Cabinet at the same time as his famous father.

Among actors of to-day, Mr. H. B. Irving occupies a distinguished place, following in the footsteps of his father, Sir Henry Irving, one of the greatest actors England ever had.

"At one time," said Mendelssohn—the unknown Mendelssohn—"I used to be known as the son of my father. Now people refer to me as the father of my son." His distinguished father was the celebrated philosophical writer, while the name of the son is known all over the world as the great musical composer. The "unknown" Mendelssohn was not lacking in ability, however, for it was he who, in 1811, founded the Mendelssohn banking business of Berlin.

The father of Charles Darwin, the great naturalist, and author of "Voyage of the Beagle" and "Origin of Species," filled a similar gap between two generations. Dr. Erasmus Darwin, grandfather of Charles, was an eminent scientist, whose talent was, apparently, transmitted to his grandchildren, for, in addition to Charles Darwin, another grandson is Sir Francis Galton, the distinguished scientist who was knighted last year. While the son of Charles Darwin, Francis Darwin, was his father's assistant until 1882, when he became lecturer and reader in botany at Cambridge.

Funerals In the Bush.

In some of the mining districts of South Australia there is a great scarcity of wood. Consequently, if you are so foolish as to die there, you must not expect to have a coffin, but must be content to be wrapped in a sack before being deposited in mother earth.

However, when a certain very prominent resident of a mining camp died the other people of the settlement—by the way, it was called Tarcooler, though coolness was unknown, and Tarhotter would have been a more suitable name—determined that he should be buried in style. So they set about getting a coffin. They made one of a sort, placed a lid on it, and laid it (with the deceased inside) in an empty tent for the night.

Next morning the lid of the coffin was missing. It was afterwards found that it had been stolen to make the tail board of a butcher's cart!

However, in spite of this trifling loss, the funeral was conducted with great solemnity. The coffin was much admired. It had been made out of the boxes in which the dynamite was sent to the mines. Some people might have considered that the obsequies were marred by the fact that the coffin bore in large letters, on one side the legend "Keep dry," and on the other "Stow away from boilers." But that did not trouble the simple minds of the Tarcool-'uns.

Novelist and Minister.

The resignation from the ministry of the well-known novelist, Rev. Joseph Hocking, has caused much regret. He is, however, but following the example of his brother, Rev. Silas Hocking, who too has attained fame as a novelist, and who quitted the ministry some years ago. Rev. Joseph Hocking has had a somewhat varied career. As a boy he exhibited an exceptional fondness for reading, and would walk to the nearest town, seven miles away, when twelve years old, in order to spend a few coppers on a cheap reprint of some valuable book. He had read nearly all Sir Walter Scott's books at twelve years of age, and at fourteen he had completed a three-volume novel. He became land surveyor at sixteen, and continued surveying until twenty. When he was twenty-seven he spent some time in eastern travel, and on his return he wrote "Jabez Easterbrook," a religious novel. This he disposed of for next to nothing, but it sold by the thousand. One of his best stories is "The Romance of One Michael Trevail."

Feet Pictures.

The Grand Duke of Hesse, a cousin of the King, is a noted dead shot and a pianist of more than ordinary merit. He has composed several sonatas, ballads, and waltzes. When the Grand Duke went out to the Delhi Durbar in 1903 he made friends with Mr. Mortimer Menpes, the well-known painter, etcher, raconteur, and rifle shot, on the boat. The duke taught Mr. Menpes to sketch on the soles of his feet, as Orientals do, and the other passengers often used to gather round to see them sitting cross-legged on deck, endeavoring to do the thing properly.

New Zealand Paternalism.

They have a most paternal government in New Zealand. In the budget, presented to Parliament recently, it is proposed to introduce a scheme to contribute a share of the cost of maternity expenses of wives of low-waged workers and the poorer small settlers.

HANDSOME DWARFS.

A Striking Race Has Been Found In New Guinea.

Details of the discovery by British explorers in New Guinea of a new pigmy race are contained in reports which have reached London from the expedition. The party, under Mr. Goodfellow, the noted ornithologist, is exploring the largest unknown area on the world's surface.

The men of the new race were first seen by Captain C. G. Rawling. The meeting is described as follows:

"Captain Rawling was making a short trip into the mountains. While proceeding with his Papuans the leading men gave a yell and dashed ahead. There were visions of pig, but the quarry turned out to be two hillmen who, after a long chase through the jungle were caught. They were dreadfully frightened, but their faces assumed a more or less calm expression when their bags and spears had been returned to them and they were presented with some beads. Captain Rawling then offered them a cigarette, but nothing would induce them to smoke it. Doubtless they thought it was poisoned. They were naked except for a grass helmet, a bag and a tiny strip round the waist. They were four feet three inches and four feet six inches in height respectively.

"A few days after, when entering the hills, Captain Rawling 'spotted' two more fording the river below and a quarter of a mile away. The men accompanying the explorer crouched like cats and taking to the torrent gave chase. The river made too much noise for the hillmen to hear their pursuers until they were cut off. The dwarfs fought valiantly nevertheless, but were at last dragged to the shore. On being measured they were found to be 4 feet 2 inches and 4 feet 4 inches, so it looks as if all these people actually belong to a tribe of dwarfs similar to those of Central Africa, but good-looking and well proportioned."

One of the explorers says that it is difficult to make out whether the Papuans are cannibals or not. Heads of the enemy slain in battle are kept strung from the ceiling of their houses, but it is impossible to say whether the bodies have been devoured!

Dr. Eric Marshall describes a remarkable native festival, including a war dance and a pig sacrifice. Two full-grown boars, on each of which a man sat astride, were led to the altar, while the women plastered in wet mud from head to foot, kept up a tremendous wailing. Amid shouting and "tom-toming" the boars were clubbed to death. The women then cut the carcasses free and threw themselves on the dead bodies, wailing loudly in ecstasies of grief.

Afterwards there was innocent play the women and girls, many of them quite pretty, chasing the men up to the riverside and into the water. "This is one of the few ceremonies," Dr. Marshall says, "when the women are allowed to beat the men, the latter not being permitted to retaliate. The damsels finally became so bold that they stormed the camp."

Of the natives at Wakatimi, where a base camp was formed, one of the explorers writes: "They have collected in thousands, and at present all are friendly and all hideously ugly. Dress they don't boast much of—except a tiny strip of cloth. With the exception of one or two of the young girls the women, too, are hideous, but a few of the children are quite nice."

Within a week of landing Mr. Wilfred Stalker, one of the explorers, lost his life. He left camp alone to go shooting, and losing himself, either became delirious with fever or went mad. His body was found in a creek the scratches on his face and body indicating that he had been rushing through the undergrowth.

Reads Only the Best.

Prince Henry, the fourth child of King George, who has gone to Scotland with his parents, is being educated at St. Peter's Court, Broadstairs, where there are about sixty boarders between the ages of ten and fourteen who are being prepared chiefly for Eton and Harrow. The young prince is allowed no special privileges, and, apparently, his pocket money is limited, for he confessed to a companion at a local "tuck" shop a short time ago that he had spent his weekly allowance of 1s. That he knows a good thing when he sees it, however, is evident from the fact that while waiting on the station at Broadstairs, prior to his departure for the Highlands, he bought a copy of one of the best magazines, and was seen deep in one of the thrilling adventure stories as the train steamed out of the station.

African Railroad Profitable.

The last section from the north—viz., from Khartoum to Wad Medani, a distance of about 100 miles on the Cape to Cairo Railway, has now been opened to public traffic for six months. It was opened on January 1, and the traffic carried during this first half-year's working has surpassed all expectations. The amount of produce which this new section has tapped has, in fact, been a revelation to everyone. The takings for the first month's working were $50,000.

He Wouldn't Stay Bought.

A guest was expected for dinner, and Bobby had received 5 cents as [illegible] his silence during the meal. He was as quiet as a mouse until, discovering that his favorite dessert was being served, he could no longer curb his enthusiasm. He drew the coin from his pocket and, rolling it across the table, exclaimed: "Here's your nickel, mamma. I'd rather talk."

Girl Rescues Aged Invalid.

An exciting incident occurred at a fire in Ballarat, Victoria, lately, when the residence of an old invalid lady named Mrs. Kelly was totally burnt down, following the upsetting of a kerosene lamp in a bedroom. The old woman was gallantly rescued by an eleven-year-old girl who ran into the burning room and dragged Mrs. Kelly out just as the flames reached the door.

IS A YOUTHFUL BISHOP

A. U. DE PENCIER IS A PROGRESSIVE CLERGYMAN.

The New Occupant of the Episcopal Chair of the Diocese of New Westminster Graduated From Trinity University Fifteen Years Ago and His Rise In the Anglican Clergy Has Been Rapid.

Probably the youngest bishop in Canada is Bishop A. U. de Pencier—not pronounced phonetically—who was lately put at the head of the diocese of New Westminster, that famous lacrosse city twelve miles from Vancouver. Adam Urias de Pencier was then rector of St. Paul's Church in Vancouver. He is a remarkably successful man, who had he devoted his brains to other business than clerics might have been a captain of industry.

Bishop de Pencier was born in Burritt's Rapids, down in Grenville County, Ontario, about forty years ago. From Kemptville High School he went to Trinity University, from which he graduated in arts and theology in 1895. His first charge was the parish of Marion, near Ottawa. He soon got up to Toronto as curate of St. Alban's—which is the real cathedral of Toronto, and now engaged in a huge financial effort to finish up a $300,000 edifice, begun over twenty years ago. Next rector of Uxbridge—famous for organs—he was shifted back to Toronto, where he became senior curate of St. James', which is only the alleged cathedral of Toronto; since members of St. James' have family inheritance and burial ground under the cathedral and cathedral seat holdings must of necessity be free.

Out to Brandon was Rev. Mr. de Pencier's next move. Here he became rector of St. Matthew's and rural dean. In 1908 he left Brandon for Vancouver. Now he is Bishop of New Westminster. Which is swift progress!

He Emulated Martyr.

A curious story of how a 12-year-old boy was accidentally hanged whilst endeavoring to bind himself in the way depicted in the drawing, "The Christian Martyr," was told at a West Ham inquest. The mother of the lad said that she and her husband went out one evening, leaving the boy sketching. Asked what he was sketching, the woman replied, "The Christian Martyr." "I have got it here," she said, and she handed it to the coroner. It was executed in blue crayon, and portrayed a young girl, bound with ropes to a stake in the river, and with a dagger driven through her heart. The mother added that when she returned with her husband she found the lad hanging on the bedroom door. A handkerchief was tied tightly around his neck, and slipped under it was a rope, fastened over the door to the bedpost.

Clever Daughter of Clever Parents.

Miss Neilson-Terry, who has been making such a hit in "Priscilla Runaway" at the Haymarket Theatre in London, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Terry, who have played together in so many successes all over England. Mr. Terry, who, curiously enough, first walked on the stage at the opening of the Haymarket Theatre under the Bancroft regime in 1880 at the age of fifteen, first met his wife when she was acting in "The Dancing Girl."

One day Mr. Tree came to her and said, "I have engaged Mr. Fred. Terry to play 'lover' to you, because he is tall." Miss Neilson was distinctly pleased, because in "The Yellow Dwarf" she had already experienced the indignity of being rescued by a short hero. Very soon her lover in play became her lover in earnest, and, as Mr. Fred. Terry himself expresses it, "Miss Neilson took pity on me and became my wife."

King Remembers Clown.

The King has sent a gift of $15 to Mr. James Doughty, the oldest public entertainer in the kingdom and once a favorite with London children as pantomime clown. Mr. Doughty wrote to the King stating that he was the oldest member of his craft still before the public. To the old man's intense delight he received a reply from Sir William Carrington, who stated that he had been commanded by the King to send him a postoffice order for $15. With his troupe of performing dogs Mr. Doughty has been a notable figure on the sands at Brighton for over thirty years. He is preparing to celebrate his ninety-second birthday by a benefit performance.

An Ancient Lady.

At the Egyptian Exploration Fund's Exhibition in London there is the skeleton of a pre-Dynastic lady, found in one of the countless tombs of Abydos. Scientists say there is no doubt that this lady lived at least 6,000 years ago. A humorous paper says that the lady would probably deny it if she could still speak.

GOOD HEALTH FOR BABY AT VERY LITTLE COST

Baby's Own Tablets only cost 25 cents a box. A box bought now may save baby's life. Summer complaints come suddenly, and carry away thousands of little ones every year. If the stomach and bowels are kept in order there is little danger from these troubles. Baby's Own Tablets is the best medicine in the world for preventing and curing stomach and bowel troubles. They can be given with perfect safety to the new-born babe or to the well grown child. An occasional dose of the tablets will regulate the stomach and bowels and prevent summer complaints. The mother who keeps these Tablets on hand may feel assured her little ones are safe. If you have not got a box of the Tablets get one without delay. Do not wait until trouble comes; it may then be too late. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HELPING HUMANITY.

Father and Son Viewed Conditions From Opposite Standpoints.

Twenty years ago, says the Chicago Advance, a discouraged young doctor in a large city was visited once by his old father, who came up from a rural district to look after his boy.

"Well, son," he said, "how are you getting along?"

"I'm not getting along at all," was the disheartened reply. "I'm not doing a thing."

The old man's countenance fell, but he spoke of courage and patience and perseverance. Later in the day he went with his son to the free dispensary, where the young doctor had an unsalaried position and where he spent an hour or more every day. The father sat by, a silent but intensely interested spectator, while twenty-five poor unfortunates received help. The doctor forgot his visitor while he bent his skilled energies to the task, but hardly had the door closed on the last patient when the old man burst forth:

"I thought you told me that you were not doing anything! Why, if I had helped twenty-five people in a month as much as you have in one morning I would thank God my life counted for something."

"There isn't any money in it, though," explained the son, somewhat abashed. "Money!" the old man shouted, still scornfully. "Money! What is money in comparison with being of use to your fellow men? Never mind about money. You go right along at this work every day. I'll go back to the farm and gladly earn money enough to support you as long as I live—yes, and sleep sound every night with the thought that I have helped you to help your fellow men."

SHREWD VICTOR HUGO.

Quiet Way In Which He Bullied the Theatrical Managers.

Here are the methods which Dumas the elder and Victor Hugo employed when they had a new play to offer to the theater. Dumas would write to the director of the Porte St. Martin:

My Dear Friend—I shall bring you on Monday a play in five acts. I shall need Mlle. Georges, Mme. Dorval, Bocage, Lockroy, Provost and five new scenes.

This extravagance would alarm the director, who would put off the production of the play till better days.

Then Victor Hugo would appear and shyly draw a manuscript out of his pocket. He would agree to everything. The stock company would play his piece admirably, since all he wanted was a good ensemble; no new decorations would be needed nor any change at all.

So the piece would be read, and as the roles were distributed Hugo would say musingly, "Dieu, how fine Frederick would be in that part!" "That is true," Horel would murmur, and a few days after he would announce that Frederick was engaged. Hugo would then remonstrate that this destroyed the equipoise of the cast, and Raucourt, Laferriere and Mlle. Georges would be engaged. Then Hugo would attack the stage setting. Old scenes that the public had tired of were almost an insult to these great artists. If Horel showed reluctance at this, Hugo would threaten to withdraw his piece. And so the game would go on till, little by little, Hugo had obtained everything he wanted, even to the changing of the paper hangings in the stage boxes.

Australia's Stony Desert.

The great stony desert of north Australia was discovered by Captain Sturt, an Australian explorer, in 1845-6. It is north of the river Darling and is about 300 miles long and 100 broad, consisting of sandy dunes or ridges. Its want of trees, except along the creeks, gives the country a sterile appearance. These ridges were probably formed by the joint effect of winds and a gradually retiring sea. According to Captain Sturt, these waters were gradually lost by evaporation or carried to some undiscovered sea. The only vegetation, growing scantily, is prickly acacias in full bloom, all of stunted growth. Water is scarce except in the creeks which are sheltered, and this is generally brackish. Few travelers care to traverse this inhospitable desert.

The Aftermath.

Mrs. DuPuy—I was so surprised to hear that Edith and Mr. Sissingham were married. You know they always used to claim their attachment was merely platonic. Mrs. Kokkrames—Yes, I remember. But now, I fear, they wouldn't claim it was even that.—Lippincott's.

HOW SKIN-TROUBLES HAVE BEEN CURED

A Remarkable Record of Itching, Burning, Disfiguring Eruptions Successfully Treated.

That those who have suffered long and hopelessly from eczema and other torturing, disfiguring eruptions of the skin and scalp and who have lost faith in all manner of treatment, may learn that there is one way to find immediate relief, the following remarkable series of condensed testimonials is published:

W. H. White, 312 E. Cabot St., Philadelphia: Knee to ankle a mass of eruption. Suffering simply indescribable for six long years. Had to scratch till blood ran and health was undermined from lack of sleep. Cuticura Remedies cured it without a mark.

Mrs. M. C. Maitland, Jasper, Ont.: Itchy rash on her baby's head when but three months old. It spread over entire body. Put mittens on him to prevent tearing skin. Reduced to a skeleton. One bath with Cuticura Soap and application of Cuticura Ointment soothed him to sleep. A single set cured him. Thinks child would have died but for Cuticura Remedies.

Mrs. Wm. Hunt, 259 Fairmount Ave., Newark, N. J.: Whole body a mass of raw, torturing eczema. Agony was beyond words. Hair all fell out and ears seemed ready to drop off. Clothing would stick to bleeding flesh. Hoped death would soon end fearful suffering. Cuticura Remedies cooled the itching, bleeding flesh at once and soon cured her.

Mme. J. B. Renaud, 277, Mentana St., Montreal: Treated by doctors 25 years for bad eczema on leg. It peeled from knee down; foot like raw flesh. Doctor advised cutting leg off. Decided to try Cuticura Remedies first. In two months' use of Cuticura Remedies she was cured.

Mrs. Nora Emmott, 26, Lena Gardens, Brook Green, London: Two little girls had dreadful scalp trouble that doctors called ringworm. Cried with intense itching. Hospital treatment gave frightful pain but did no good. Suffered three years, cured by three sets of Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

H. A. Krutskoff, 5714 Wabash Ave., Chicago: Itching eruption spread from hands to body. Literally tore his skin off in shreds. Doctors and remedies did no good. Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills stopped itching quickly and cured disease in three weeks.

Frank Gridley, 325 E. 43rd St., New York: In twenty-four hours he became raw from head to foot with a dreadful burning itch. Suffered agonies and could not lie down or sit up. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment cured him in a single day.

Mrs. Kate Brougham, 200 Dewey St., Bennington, Vt.: Rash came on her baby and soon turned to watery, crusted eczema over face, head and body. He was a fearful sight and all attempts at cure were fruitless. Vastly improved in a week by use of Cuticura Remedies and soon skin was clear and healthy.

G. J. Dance, 27, New Road, Brentford, England: Tortured for five years with bad skin disease. Attended hospital five months without success. Covered with eruption. No sleep nor rest. Felt like tearing himself to pieces with terrible itching. With first application of Cuticura Ointment was relieved and got good night's sleep. In a fortnight Cuticura Ointment cured him as if by magic.

Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, Cuticura Resolvent and Cuticura Pills are sold by druggists everywhere. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Boston, Mass., for free 32-page Cuticura Book on skin diseases.

His Reverence at the Barber's

"Drink," said the irrepressible joker, beckoning to the waiter, "is a great evil. Both my father confessor and my barber agree on that.

"Father Ambrose went in the other day to get a shave. He observed that the barber was suffering from a recent night out, but decided to take a chance. In a few moments the barber's razor had nicked the father's cheek.

"'There, Pat, you have cut me,' said the priest, as he raised his hand and caressed the wound.

"'Yis, y'r riv'rance,' answered the barber.

"'That shows you,' continued the priest, in a tone of censure, 'what the use of liquor will do.'

"'Yis, y'r riv'rance,' replied the barber, humbly; 'it makes the skin tinder.'"

HIRED APPLAUSE.

The Great Rachel Made the Claque Earn Its Money.

Speaking of applause in theaters, a theatrical man relates the following concerning the great actress Rachel:

"It seems that upon a certain opening night Rachel received enthusiastic applause, but on the second night it was so noticeably slim that the actress felt deeply grieved and bitterly complained that the claque was not doing its duty. The leader of the hired 'applause makers' on hearing of her displeasure wrote her a letter in which he endeavored to excuse himself from any blame.

"'Mademoiselle—I cannot remain under the obloquy of a reproach from such lips as yours,' he began. 'The following is an authentic statement of what really took place: At the first representation I led the attack in person not less than thirty-three times. We had three acclamations, four hilarities, two thrilling movements, four renewals of applause and two indefinite explosions. In fact, to such an extent did we carry our applause that the occupants of the stalls were scandalized and cried out a la porte!

"'My men were positively exhausted with fatigue and even intimated to me that they could not again go through such an evening. Seeing such to be the case, I applied for the manuscript, and after having profoundly studied the piece I was obliged to make up my mind for the second representation to certain curtailments in the service of my men.'

"The writer thus goes on at some length to assure the actress he will try to make future amends and requests her to believe in his profound admiration."—Exchange.

TALKING IN FIGURES.

Significance of Certain Numbers In the Telegraphers' Code.

"In the telegraphers' code numbers have special significance of which the general public is not aware," remarked a veteran key night the other day. "Most everybody knows that 30 means 'good night,' or the end of a story, but few outside the profession know that 31 is also a code sign. Railroad operators, however, know that this call is a signal to the operator at the other end to come back and repeat train signals to the sending operator. It also has another meaning, 'Train order to be signed by conductor and engine driver.' Nineteen, on the other hand, means that the train order is not to be signed by conductor or engine driver. Twenty-four has also the latter significance on some roads.

"Five is simply an interrogation point and in the vernacular could be translated 'Anything doing?' Thirteen signifies 'Do you understand?' Twenty-five means 'busy,' but nobody seems to know how it came to have that significance unless perhaps it means that the operator is still in the midst of his work, being some distance away from 30.

"Seventy-three means 'best regards,' and newspaper men and operators employ this expression constantly. Of course 23 has come to mean in this numerical language just what it does in ordinary parlance, 'skiddoo,' 'vamoose' or 'butt out' or any of the thousand and one other equivalents."—New York Herald.

The Governor's Quick Wit.

While talking to a former governor of Illinois, who was noted for the quickness of his wit, an English tourist spoke with special fervor of a sight he had seen in another state.

"I attended a Sunday service for the inmates of the state prison," he said, "and I learned that of the 208 persons now confined there all but twelve voluntarily attend religious services held in the prison chapel twice each Sunday."

"Most extraordinary," said the governor musingly. "I am sorry to say it is not so with us. But then," he added soberly, "in Illinois, you see, most of the respectable people do not come to prison."—Lippincott's.

Sign Language.

Brown and Jones were having their usual stroll and had just had a few minutes' conversation with Robinson, who was accompanied by his wife. After they had gone on some little distance Brown said to Jones:

"Did you notice that Mrs. Robinson never said a word?"

"Oh, yes," said Jones. "You see, she's deaf and dumb."

"Lucky chap is Robinson. But I suppose she can talk with her fingers?" asked Brown.

"I think so," replied Jones, "for Robinson hasn't a dozen hairs left on his head."

MONTREAL'S CAVERNS

LITTLE KNOWN SEPULCHRES WHERE CLERGY LIE BURIED.

Beneath the Roar of the Great City's Life Are to Be Found Hundreds of Tombs Where Rest the Earthly Remains of Men Who Served the Altars Above—They Range From Archbishops to Humblest Priests.

"Far from the roar of life, the dead sleep their long sleep behind the mountain; but not all who die in Montreal are sepultured in the quiet "city of the dead."

The dust of many is beneath the streets over which modern life moves with feverish activity.

Pious custom in the Roman Catholic Church, has decreed that those who serve altars shall sleep beneath them when labor is ended; and in a city so distinctively Roman Catholic as Montreal, the number of such sepulchres might be expected to be large.

Archbishops, bishops, hundreds of priests, rest beneath the sanctuaries of the various Roman Catholic churches in Montreal.

A various and eager life passes over their heads, but "cannot break their sleep."

In a past day, they were influential. They filled their sacred position with ability, and with zeal. They spoke the living word.

They delivered their solemn message, and now they rest from their labors beneath those altars which are served by others.

One can see their graves in the darkness of subterranean depths.

By the flickering light, you can see the coffin-shaped mounds, made of concrete, which tells of sepulchre beneath; decipher the Latin inscriptions on the walls, which set forth the vanity of all things mortal, and the tragedy of human mutation.

"Vanitas; vanitatum."

The little army of priests of the Sulpician Order, which was founded in Paris in 1641 by Monsieur Jean Jacques Oliver, and a branch of which was set up in Montreal in 1657, and who labored in the young colony under hardships of the most poignant nature, sleep under the vaults in the great Notre Dame Church which is shortly to be the scene of unequalled splendors in connection with the Eucharistic Congress.

All told, there are 135 buried under the sanctuary in Notre Dame.

Their names are kept in the registers of the Grand Seminary.

"Come I will show you," said Cure Troie, of the great parish church, in that gentle voice of his.

Down the long flight of steps, deep down into the bowels of the earth, and one sees, by the aid of the electric flash, a great stone wall, stretching across the width of the church.

"So this, then, is the door which leads to the catacombs?"

"No, you are mistaken. This door leads to the vault in which we keep the ornaments of the church."

"Ornaments? Souvenirs?"

"Yes; souvenirs of the past; gifts, relics, things of value from their age and the associations linked with them.

"But here you see the vault which contains the dead. At least, you cannot see it actually, for you see it is sealed up.

"This vault, which contains the remains of the Sulpician priests, has been sealed up since 1875. Since that date none have been buried at Notre Dame. This church was built in 1829. We took over from the crypt of the old parish church all the bodies that were there, and deposited them in this vault. We have gone on burying in this church from that date until 1875, since which all the burials have taken place in the Grand Seminary vaults on Sherbrooke street.

"Well, when the burials ceased, we closed up the vault. We placed this marble slab against it. And above the slab you see this picture, which tells of prayer in the presence of death."

"Now, if one could break down this wall, what would one see?"

"You would see a large cross in the centre of a level space. That is all."

"The coffins have not been placed in tiers?"

"Oh, no. They have been placed in the earth, side by side, and, of course, one on top of the other; but not ranged in the shelf-like way which you will see in the catacombs of Rome."

"There is nothing visible, then?"

"Nothing. There is simply the level earth beneath which the remains rest."

"How many would you say?"

"Well, the list of names is carefully kept by the Grand Seminary on Sherbrooke street; but there is probably over one hundred priests buried there, [illegible] the Sulpician Order priests who served the young colony long before the Cession, and who were sent out to this country from France."

"And bishops?"

"One bishop—Mgr. Ponbriand. The rest are all priests. Now, since 1875, all the priests are buried in the vaults on Sherbrooke street."

"Now, since that date, this vault has never been opened?"

"Never."

"And there is no thought of opening it?"

"To what end? The remains are dust. We have the register. We know each name."

At St. Anne's Church, in Griffintown, the priests of the Redemptorist Order are buried in vaults which are arranged on the successive tier plan. The coffins are placed along the walls, layer upon layer, until the ceiling is reached.

Each coffin is, of course, covered in with brick, and a brick lining separates each coffin, but the principle is that of the catacombs.

A similar principle is carried out at the Hotel Dieu, with respect to the burial of the cloistered nuns.

HARDINGE AS SPORTSMAN.

New Viceroy of India Is Keenly Interested In Polo.

Sir Charles Hardinge, the new viceroy of India, has taken the name of Lord Penshurst on his elevation to the peerage, from his country place at Penshurst, near Tonbridge, in Kent. Much has been written of Sir Charles' cleverness as a diplomat, of his absolute freedom from political partisanship, which is a matter of such importance in a permanent servant of the state, of his broad statesmanship and of his exceptional knowledge of court etiquette and ceremonial. But nowhere have I seen any mention made of his qualities as a sportsman, says a recent writer in a London paper. Yet sportsmanship is important in India, where no one can hope to achieve success in any high office who is not a sportsman. Charles Hardinge, or rather, as I should call him now, Lord Penshurst, is a particularly adept and enthusiastic polo player, extremely fond of hunting, an excellent shot, and, of course skillful in court tennis and in the royal game of golf. A statesman who can lead in all these sports acquires a far greater prestige and influence among the semi-independent princes and petty native rulers of India than the administrator who is content to endeavor to rule from his desk. In fact, the most successful Viceroy and governors of India have always been those who excelled in sport.

Lord Penshurst has appointed as his private secretary J. Houssemayne Du Boulay, a son of the well-known head master of Winchester College and one of the many brilliant men who have graduated from Balliol, Oxford. He was private secretary to two successive governors of Bombay — namely, Lord Northcote and Lord Lamington, spending seven years in that capacity, and greatly distinguished himself by his pluck and administrative ability as a special commissioner of the Government during the plague, receiving for his services as such the Order of the Indian Empire. Before becoming private secretary to Lord Northcote he was for several years a magistrate in India, and his knowledge, therefore, of the Anglo-Indian administration of India and of native life in that great dependency is quite exceptional.

The private secretary to the Viceroy is one of the most important factors in the administration of England's great Oriental empire. In fact, so great is his influence and power that he has often been described as the Deputy Viceroy. Every document, every letter, every appeal, and even every dignitary, reaches the Viceroy through him, and he is also the communicator of the Governor-General's commands, views and wishes. He is in every sense of the word the right hand of the Viceroy, a far more important personage, indeed, than the latter's Cabinet Ministers. It depends largely upon his cleverness, his judgment and his tact whether the viceroyalty of his chief is a success or a failure, and the fact that Lord Penshurst has chosen so admittedly capable a man as Du Boulay for the post has created a most favorable impression throughout India, in English as well as in native circles.

Nearly all the private secretaries of Viceroys have been men of distinction, and among the ones whose names occur to me at the present moment are Lord Northcote's private secretary, Sir Evelyn Baring, who afterward ruled over Egypt, for nearly a quarter of a century as Lord Cromer; Sir Donald Mackenzie Wallace, who was private secretary to Lord Dufferin, and Sir Walter Lawrence, who was private secretary to Lord Curzon, and has received a baronetcy, as well as a number of orders of knighthood, for his services.

A Record.

It is rather remarkable that the present British Government should contain no fewer than three Jews among its members, Sir Rufus Isaacs, the Solicitor-General, being the [illegible]. This must be something in the way of a record. Of course, Lord Beaconsfield will always remain the most famous Jew numbered among the governors of Great Britain; but Lord Beaconsfield did not retain the Jewish faith, and since his death there has been no conspicuous Jewish Minister until the present time.

It is interesting that the Permanent Secretary of the Postoffice now presided over by Herbert Samuel, is a fellow Jew—Sir Matthew Nathan. Lord Swaythling is one of the four Jewish members of the House of Lords, the others being Lords Michelham, Rothschild, and Wandsworth. There are also four Jewish Privy Councillors—Lord Rothschild, Mr. Samuel, Sir Edgar Speyer, and Mr. Arthur Cohen, K.C.

Tribute to Late King.

A striking individual tribute to the late King was paid by a veteran splitter, working alone in the forest at Toolangi, Victoria. On the day of his Majesty's funeral W. H. Luly, crown lands bailiff, was walking through the dense forest just about 2 o'clock. Everything was still save for the rustling of the leaves of an eve. Suddenly the strokes ceased, and as they were not resumed in a minute or so he looked through the vista of trees and there saw the splitter standing stock-still, like a soldier on parade, with his hat off. The man remained in that position for five minutes. This was the veteran's tribute to the dead King. He had read somewhere that at two o'clock there would be a cessation of work for a minute or two throughout the Empire.

Too Much Burns.

One can sympathize with the piety of the Tam o' Shanter Burns Club, says a Glasgow paper, in restoring the tombstone which marks the resting-place of Mary Morison, who died 199 years ago, at the age of 20. But even the most enthusiastic Burns worshippers must think that the limit has been reached in the addition to the Alloway Museum of the old stone trough which was in use at the Tam o' Shanter Inn, Ayr, in the poet's lifetime. From what we know of Burns there is not the slightest probability that he ever drank out of it.

MARK TWAIN'S CLOTHES.

The Great Humorist Always Had a Relish For Personal Effect.

At the time of our first meeting Mark Twain was wearing a sealskin coat, with the fur out, in the satisfaction of a caprice or the love of strong effect which he was apt to indulge through life. Fields, the publisher, was present.

I do not know what droll comment was in Fields' mind with respect to this garment, but probably he felt that here was an original who was not to be brought to any Bostonian book in the judgment of his vivid qualities. With his crest of dense red hair and the wide sweep of his flaming mustache Clemens was not discordantly clothed in that sealskin coat, which afterward, in spite of his own warmth in it, sent the cold chills through me when I once accompanied it down Broadway, and shared the immense publicity it won him.

Clemens had always a relish for personal effect; which expressed itself in the white suit of complete serge which he wore in his last years and in the Oxford gown which he put on for every possible occasion and said he would like to wear all the time. That was not vanity in him, but a keen feeling for costume which the severity of our modern tailoring forbids men, though it flatters women to every excess in it.—W. D. Howells in Harper's Magazine.

HIS BLACK EYE.

How He Got It and the Worst That Was Yet to Come.

"Gracious! That's a peach of a black eye. Where did you get it?"

"Got it on the left side of my nose. Where did you think I got it—over the ankle bone?"

"Don't get heated. How did it all happen?"

"That's different. It was all a piece of my confounded luck. I was up on the Blue Cliff road looking at a piece of real estate when along came a coatless and bareheaded fellow running for dear life with a lot of panting pursuers stretching in a long line behind him. I joined in the chase. Being fresh, I rapidly overhauled the fugitive. I had nearly collared him when a big ruffian grabbed me and profanely told me to clear out. I spoke rudely to him and kept on running, and he suddenly reached out a fist like a ham and knocked me into a ditch. And what do you suppose it all was?"

"Give it up."

"It was a rehearsal for a moving picture film, and now my portrait will go all over the country and be seen in thousands of theaters as a bruised and battered butter-in who got just what was coming to him!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Cow Decided.

A peasant living in the village of Predeal, near the Hungarian frontier, lost his cow. About two months ago he happened to be standing at the railroad station watching a train load of cattle about to be sent across the frontier. Suddenly he gave a shout. "That's my cow!" he cried, running toward one of the cars.

The trainmen only laughed at him, and he went before the magistrate. This good man listened to the peasant's story patiently. Then he pronounced this judgment: "The cow shall be taken to the public square of Predeal and milked. Then if it goes of its own accord to the plaintiff's stable it shall belong to him."

The order of the court was carried out, and the cow, in spite of its ten months' absence, took without hesitation the lane which led it a few minutes later into the peasant's stable.—Chicago News.

A Tribute of Affection.

Something of the sympathetic kindliness of nature of the late Frederick Greenwood came out in a little speech made by J. M. Barrie on the occasion of Mr. Greenwood's seventy-fifth birthday, when the men who had worked under him on the St. James' and the Pall Mall Gazette met to do him honor. In the course of his remarks Mr. Barrie confessed that he had bought his first silk hat "to impress" the veteran editor. Then he added impulsively:

"Oh, Greenwood, it is for your kindness to us boys in our first silk hats that we love you!"

A Bad Condition of Liver and Stomach

Chronic indigestion and bowel trouble which is overcome quickly by Dr. CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS

To the person with liver and stomach troubles everything looks blue and life is scarcely worth living.

How different he feels even after the first dose of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. There is no treatment obtainable which so quickly and thoroughly awakens sluggish liver and sets the bowels in healthful and regular action.

There is no question that this condition is the real cause of trouble and that any medicine which falls short of regulating these organs can at most only afford temporary relief.

What tired, languid feelings after meals, when the process of digestion is going on. What annoyance from belching wind, pressure of gas on the heart and consequent smothering sensations. What a miserable depressing feeling comes over mind and body.

And yet how easy it is to change all this by use of this medicine of well-known and decidedly remarkable value.

You are not making any experiment when you use Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills for liver, stomach and bowel disorders. You can be sure before you use them that the results will be satisfactory. You will not wonder then why some people are so enthusiastic when they talk about Dr. Chase's medicines.

Mrs. James Lawrence, West L'Ardoise, C. B., writes: "I have great confidence in Dr. Chase's medicines and believe that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills saved my life. I was a great sufferer from chronic dyspepsia and entirely unable to do anything. Two boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cured me and I have recommended them to many people.

"My husband was cured of liver complaint by using these pills and we would not think of being without them in the house."

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Do You Realize the Advantages of Concrete?

THE rising price of lumber has compelled the farmer to look for a suitable substitute.

Concrete, because of its cheapness, durability and the readiness with which it can be used for every farm purpose, has proven itself to be cheaper than lumber and far more durable. Our Free Book—shows the farmer how he can do his own work without the aid of skilled mechanics. It demonstrates the economy of Concrete construction as compared with lumber, brick or stone.

"What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete"

This Book Tells How Concrete Aids Farmers.

It shows how Concrete can be used to advantage on the farm in the construction of almost every practical utility.

Send for this book to-day. You'll find it intensely interesting, even if you don't intend to build for a while. It contains much useful information that will put you in the way of saving money. Among the subjects treated are: Barns, Dairies, Fence Posts, Feeding Floors, Hitching Posts, Root Cellars, Silos, Stables, Stairs, Stalls, Troughs, Walks, Well Curbs, and so forth.

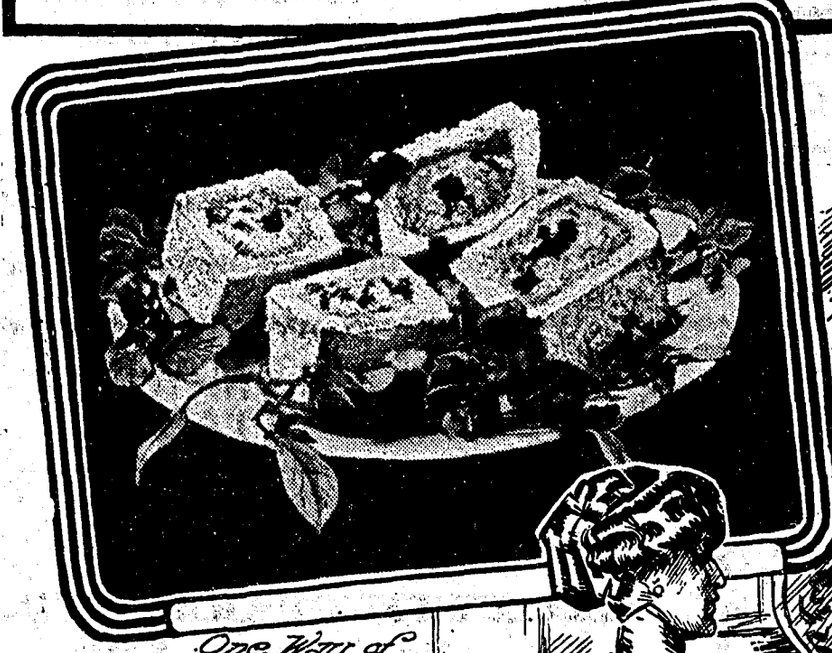
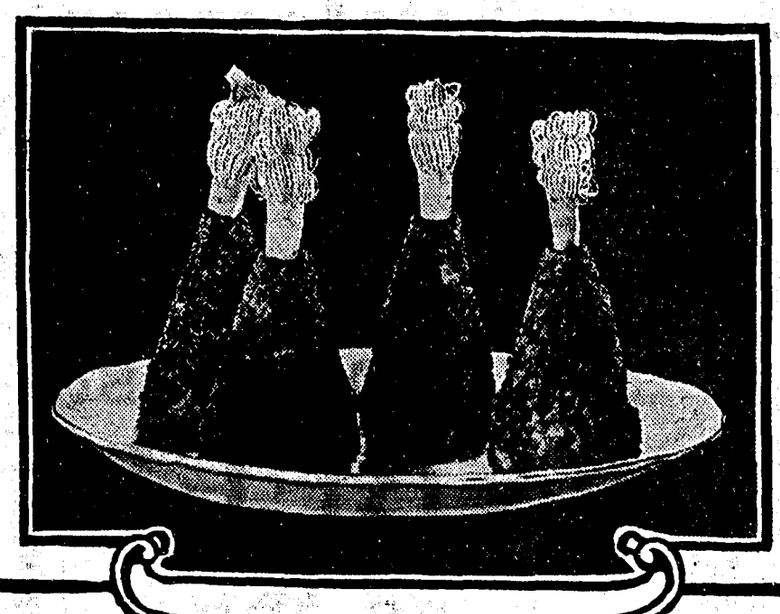
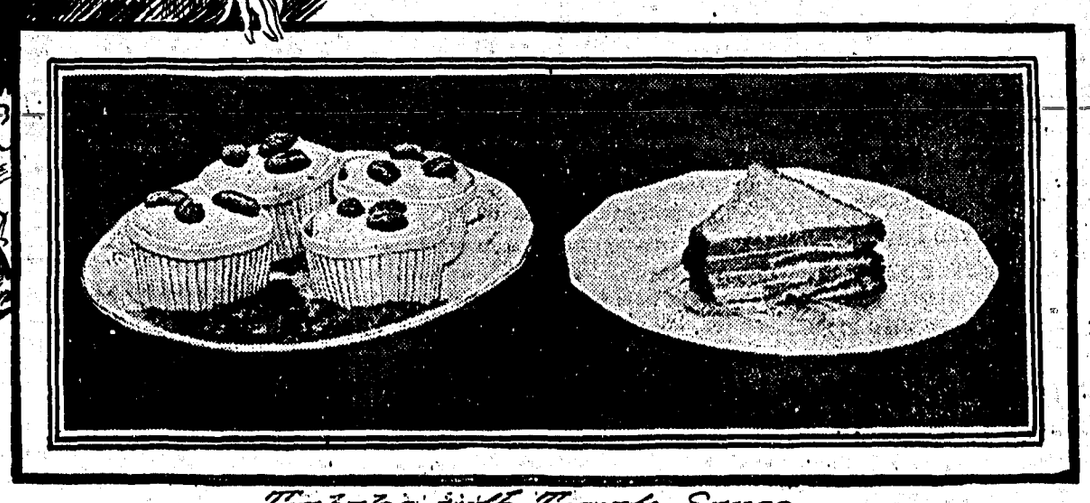
THE SIMPLE ENTRÈE



One Way of Serving Grated Cheese



Cape Cod Croquettes Tipped with Paper



Timbales with Tomato Sauce

IT IS well to preface the word by the adjective "simple." It stands to the timid housewife as a finger-post inscribed, "No danger."

Our manual of kitchen French defines "entree" as "A small made dish served between courses at dinner." Our foremothers called it "a side dish," in a day when meats were carved by the master at the foot of the table, and two rows of vegetables and side dishes led the eye and imagination to another leading dish—usually of meat—at the head of the board.

My grandmother told me of a still earlier day when meat, vegetables and pudding were all set upon the table at the same time. On the highest of holidays the side dishes were scalloped oysters and chicken pie. Croquettes, pates, roulades and vol-au-vents were as far in the distant future as the magnetic telegraph and trolley car. A ragout was a "stew," and a "mince" just plain "hash."

Our topic today is the simple entree oftener than otherwise an economical way of utilizing a left-over, or several left-overs, from a former meal. Should the housekeeper, enlightened by the explanation, cavil at the foreign name, I leave it to her to invent a better.

A young housewife, whose mother has been her teacher in cookery and the general management of the home, told me, laughingly, yesterday, of the naive admiration of her cook, when instructed what use to make of the contents of refrigerator and pantry, brought out for the mistress' inspection after breakfast. These were a pound or so of cold roast veal, a cupful of stewed tomatoes, the same quantity of cold peas, half as much boiled rice, perhaps a cupful of lima beans and half a head of lettuce that had not been used in making last night's salad.

A LESSON IN ECONOMY

The housewife of today told how the veal, minced and blended with the rice, seasoned well and moistened with a little stock, would appear with honor as croquettes; how the tomatoes, heated, strained, slightly thickened with a little flour rolled in butter, would be passed as sauce with the croquettes, while the peas, beans and lettuce would be wrought into a tempting macedoine salad by the addition of mayonnaise dressing.

"And as there will be but two of us to luncheon today—Mr. Blank and myself—we will get along nicely if you will bake a few potatoes. We will have crackers heated and pass with cheese along with the salad. I poured off the tea from the leaves while we were at breakfast, not to let it get bitter by standing on them. We will ice it for luncheon. And for dessert there is a dish of fruit on the sideboard. We shall do famously, you see."

Then up spoke the amazed maid: "And it was meself that was wondering whatever could be done with them scraps! If you hadn't told me better, I should have put the meat on cold and warmed up them little dabs of vegetables separate and sent them in in three saucers. As for the rice, that would have gone into the garbage pail, I guess. 'Twas too little to do anything else with."

NOTHING TOO SMALL

"Of course," commented my friend, "I improved the occasion by saying that no left-over was ever too small to be used, but I doubt if she took in the lesson. The price of economical living is eternal vigilance on the part of the mistress (by courtesy), but Maggie has in her the making of a good cook and is willing to learn. The entree is a new idea to her. Yet she has lived with one rich family for five years. I suppose it made no difference to her former 'madam' how many 'dibs' went into the garbage pail."

"Yet I warrant that the husband of her madam let not so much as a postage stamp go into the office wastebasket," I rejoined. "Will the rank and file of women ever learn and practice 'business methods'?"

If I harp somewhat too persistently upon this string, it is because I am driven to it by the ceaseless clamor of certain reformers for rights and responsibilities for which they contend we are [illegible]

Returning to our simple entree, I observe that it is not my purpose to treat it as a "filler" between more dignified dishes, but as an important part of the family meal. To illustrate again from everyday experience: It was my happiness to be a welcome guest last week at the "bungalow" of another young housekeeper. The summer home, of [illegible] time this season, is a mile away from the nearest grocery, and the butcher calls three times a week. On that particular day one of the numerous ills to which country butchers' carts are liable had delayed his coming. Luncheon time found the hostess with four guests in the house and never a sign of steak, chop or roast. Country folk call these in a large, general way "butcher's meat."

We knew nothing of the disaster until later in the afternoon, when the tardy arrival of the vender gave the well-bred woman an opportunity to explain and laugh over the complication at which she had never hinted until then.

"Our first course was cream-of-tomato soup in cups, mantled by whipped cream. Next, we had kippered herring accompanied by delicious stuffed potatoes. Then came a cheese souffle that was a miracle of flavor and fluffiness accompanied by tomato sauce. Cucumber salad followed, with crackers and cheese. Homemade ice cream and cake, with iced tea a la Russe, completed the menu. The table was daintily laid and a great bowl of roses held the place of honor in the center.

"The little hostess is the daughter of my dear friend, and I had a brief confidential chat with her after the rest of the party had gone.

"'We live simply at all times,' she said, frankly. 'Harry has his way to make in the world, and we are paying for this little lodge in the wilderness that promises health and happiness to our boys. I did mean, however, to give you a more luxurious repast than I set before you today. That luckless butcher promised to bring me by 10 o'clock this morning a dozen soft-shell crabs and a pair of broiling chickens. When he telephoned from a house six miles away that he could not get here before 4 o'clock my heart sank woefully. I could do nothing but countermand my orders and get up an impromptu luncheon of such things as my 'emergency shelf' afforded. I didn't apologize, of course. My mother told me years ago that 'an apology is the least acceptable sauce one can set before a guest.' After the poor man appeared at the gate, I told the story as a joke upon myself.'

I thought, and I said, that she proved her breeding, her good sense and her excellent housewifery by the manner in which she met the mishap. And I laid away the tale for the very occasion upon which I am now using it. Had her mother's teaching not embraced the art of tossing up entrees, her luncheon would have been a wretched failure instead of the palatable repast all of us acknowledged it to be.

Cheese Souffle

Make a roux of two tablespoonfuls of butter and the same of flour, cooked together to a smooth cream. This done, add a cupful of milk into which you have stirred a bit of baking soda to prevent curdling. A bit the size of a green pea is enough. Stir gently until thoroughly incorporated with the roux, then add gradually eight tablespoonfuls of grated dry cheese, a liberal pinch of paprika and half a teaspoonful of salt. Have at hand three eggs, whites and yolks beaten separately. Lift the saucepan containing the cheese mixture from the range to the table and stir in slowly the beaten yolks, then fold in lightly the stiffened whites. Pour into a buttered and heated bake dish and bake, covered, ten minutes. Then increase the heat and uncover. It should puff high and be of a golden russet color. Send at once to the table, and have hot plates ready for it. It falls quickly.

Cheese Cups

Cut stale bread into slices over an inch thick, and pare off the crust. With a tin cake cutter, press hard upon each slice, taking care not to have the edges ragged. The cutter should be larger than those used for cookies. With a smaller, cut half through each round and dig out the crumb, leaving enough to make a bottom for the "cup." Butter the rounds inside and out and set in the oven to dry. When they begin to color ever so slightly, fill each—full—with this mixture:

Stir together in a saucepan three tablespoonfuls of cream, in which put a bit of soda, a tablespoonful of butter, as much salt as will lie upon a dime, and half as much paprika. When it heats, stir in five tablespoonfuls of dry cheese, grated fine—Parmesan is the best, if you have it. Arrange in a covered baker and set in a quick oven for five minutes. Uncover and brown lightly and very quickly.

Cheese Timbales

Heat two cups of milk to scalding, adding a bit of baking soda. Have ready five eggs beaten very light, without separating yolks and whites, and five tablespoonfuls of grated cheese—Parmesan, if you have it. Pour the hot milk upon the eggs gradually, beating all the time, then mix in the cheese and a saltspoonful each of salt and paprika. Pour into well-buttered "nappies" or timbale cases and set in a pan of boiling water in the oven. Cover the pan. As soon as the timbales are fairly "set," or firm, turn out carefully upon a hot flat dish and serve with hot tomato sauce. Serve at once, passing thin slices of buttered whole wheat or graham bread with them.

The merits of quick cheese entrees are too little known to American cooks. These are but a few of the many that may take the place of meat dishes at luncheons.

Calf's Brain Croquettes

Wash the brains in ice-cold water, clearing them of bloody fibers. Now put them into a saucepan and cover deep with boiling water. Cook for three minutes; drain and lay in iced water. When they are cold all through, wipe and lay on ice for half an hour to stiffen. Now beat to a smooth paste. Have at hand a good drawn butter and beat the paste into this until it is stiff enough to handle; add a tablespoonful of sifted flour, or enough to stiffen it well; next, the beaten yolk of an egg to bind the mixture; season with pepper and salt and a very little finely minced parsley. Make the paste into croquettes, flouring your hands well; dip in beaten egg, then in cracker dust and set on the ice for several hours. All night will not be too long in hot weather. Fry in deep fat. They are very nice.

Cape Cod Croquettes

Pick cold boiled cod or other firm fish into fine bits with a fork. Have ready half the quantity of cold mashed potato worked to a smooth cream with drawn butter. Season to taste with salt and pepper, and, if you like, with a dash of catsup or Worcestershire sauce. Form into croquettes, roll in beaten egg, then in fine crumbs; set on the ice until very cold and stiff, and fry in deep lard.

Vegetarian Croquettes

Blanch nut kernels by scalding and stripping off the skins. Set on the ice until crisp. Then pound or run through your vegetable press. Prepare an equal quantity of mashed potatoes; mix with the pounded nuts; work in melted butter and a few spoonfuls of cream, with pepper and salt to taste. Now beat in the yolk of an egg to bind the paste. Form into croquettes; roll in egg and cracker crumbs, and set on ice until stiff

Fry in deep dripping or other fat, and drain in hot colander from every drop of fat. Serve immediately.

Chicken and Spaghetti Croquettes

Mince cold cooked chicken fine and mix with an equal quantity of cooked and cold spaghetti, also chopped. Season with salt and paprika. Have over the fire in a saucepan a cupful of white sauce (drawn butter), stir in chicken and spaghetti and cook to a boil. Add the beaten yolk of a raw egg and, if you like, a teaspoonful of onion juice with a little finely minced parsley. Turn out upon a platter and, when cold and firm, make into croquettes. Dip into beaten raw egg, then into cracker-dust; set on the ice until stiff, and fry in deep fat.

You may substitute veal for the chicken, or lamb. In the latter case, use cold boiled rice instead of spaghetti or macaroni.

Serve tomato sauce with any of these croquettes.

Ragout of Beef's Tongue

Cut into dice an inch long the remains of a fresh tongue which has been boiled or braised or roasted Cover with a mixture of salad oil and one-third as much lemon juice. Leave in this for two hours. Turn into a saucepan; season to taste with salt, paprika, onion juice and minced parsley, three or four chopped olives, and half a dozen French mushrooms cut into quarters. Simmer slowly for five minutes—just long enough to heat the ragout through; add half a glass of sherry and a tablespoonful of lemon juice, with a few tablespoonfuls of brown stock and a teaspoonful of kitchen bouquet. Cover closely and simmer slowly three minutes longer.

If followed exactly, this recipe will produce a savory ragout, foreign as it may seem.

With a dish of macaroni seasoned with cheese, it makes a nice luncheon.

Entrees based upon left-overs contribute so much to the palatableness of family fare, and especially, when tastefully garnished, impart such an air of elegance to the table, that no housemother, with a just appreciation of the influence of environment upon character and behavior, can afford to disregard the study of possibilities and combinations.

Nothing that adds beauty to everyday life, and brings brightness into the home, is a trifle.

Dignify work and it ceases to be drudgery. Beautify the commonplace and you will find yourself interested in it.

THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

IMPORTANT NOTICE

BECAUSE of the enormous number of letters sent to the Exchange, I must ask contributors to limit their communications to 100 words, except in cases of formulas or recipes which require greater space. I want all my correspondents to have a showing in the Corner, and if my request in this respect is complied with, it will be possible to print many more letters.

Buttermilk Soup

I HAVE had so many helps from your Exchange that I gladly reciprocate by sending the recipe for buttermilk soup asked for by "M. V. K."

For eight persons make the following quantity:

One-quarter of a cup of rice, half a pound of prunes, two quarts of fresh buttermilk, brown sugar and salt to taste, a little flour for thickening. Cover the rice and prunes with cold water and boil until they are tender. Pour in the buttermilk then and bring to a boil. Add the sugar and salt. Some like it sweeter than others. Thicken to the consistency of broth with flour or cornstarch. Boil for a minute and serve. This soup may be eaten either warm or cold, and it may be made without the prunes if desired. It is very wholesome for invalids. "Buttermilk pop" is the same thing as this, I am sure

(MRS. OSCAR HANSPERGER, Oregon, Wash.)

Did not I prophesy that our German housemothers would justify my faith in their ability and good will toward others of the guild? I have two more recipes for buttermilk soup (pop), which will appear in good time. It may seem an odd compound to those who have never tasted it. I am assured by those familiar with it that it is quite as palatable as koumiss and as wholesome.

Casserole Cookery

I should be very grateful for some recipes for casserole dishes and a good formula for caramel icing.

(Mrs. V. V. (Detroit, Mich.).

The rules for cooking in the casserole are so nearly the same in most cases that a few general directions are all you need. I subjoin one recipe that should be a faithful guide with a dozen others.

Mutton Chops en Casserole

Trim away every bit of fat from the chops. Mutton tallow is not palatable. Sear the chops in a little butter in a frying pan, turning them, that every part may be cicatrized. Lift the meat from the fat and put into the heated casserole. Cover closely and set in boiling water while you fry in the same fat a sliced onion and a carrot cut into dice. Drain and lay these among the chops. Now add a cupful of good stock. If you have no other, strain a 10-cent can of mutton broth and use. Cover and set the casserole in the oven for forty-five minutes. Add then a dozen potato marbles cut with a gouge and parboiled, and half a dozen white button onions that have been parboiled. Cover and cook again for twenty minutes or more, until the meat is very tender. Drain away the gravy from the chops, keeping the latter covered and hot while you prepare the gravy.

Put the liquor from the casserole into a saucepan; thicken with browned flour, adding a teaspoonful of kitchen bouquet and a tablespoonful of tomato catsup. Boil up once, pour over the meat, put back the casserole, covered, into an open oven and let it stand five minutes before it goes to the table.

Chicken, veal and liver may be cooked in this way. All will be savory and tender.

Rice and Liver en Casserole

Boil a cupful of rice until tender. Work into it a tablespoonful of butter and season with salt and paprika. Grease the casserole well and [illegible] the rice, like a thick lining of the inside. Set away until perfectly cold. Meantime, boil a lamb's liver; drain and chop fine. Heat in a saucepan a large cupful of stock. If you have not enough, eke it out with the salted liquor in which the liver was cooked. Thicken with browned flour; season with tomato catsup or sauce and kitchen bouquet; pour the gravy upon the minced liver, stir well and fill the hollowed center of the rice lining with it. Strew breadcrumbs thickly on the surface; cover and cook half an hour, or until bubbling hot.

A cheap and a savory dish.

Caramel Icing

Stir into a half cupful of cream a pinch of soda to prevent curdling, half a cupful of sugar and a tablespoonful of butter. Cook until it "ropes," take from the fire and stir into it four tablespoonfuls of boiled local (caramel) and vanilla to taste. Cook again one short minute and cool suddenly. When quite cold, frost the cake with it. Set in the hot sun to dry.

Peach Shortcake

May I contribute something to make your mouth water?

Sift 2 cupfuls of flour into a basin three times, with 3 teaspoonfuls of baking powder and ½ teaspoonful of salt. Work into this 3 tablespoonfuls of butter and the same of lard. (I don't use as much shortening.) When these ingredients are well incorporated, wet with a cupful of sweet milk. Divide the dough into two parts. Put half into one round cake pan, the rest into another. The pans must be well buttered. Bake covered ten minutes, then brown.

Split each cake carefully into halves, using a fork, not to tear the cakes. Butter each lower half and cover with sliced and sweetened peaches. Prepare these while the cake is in baking. Replace the upper parts of the split cakes, as with other layer cakes, and serve with whipped cream. PERCY (Louisville, Ky.).

A Lonely Lover of Books

I see that "Ida A.," of Philadelphia, offers books to the readers of the Exchange, or to such as "would value them." I certainly would and should be glad indeed to have them. I live out in the country, six miles from our county town and twelve miles from a railroad, and often get very lonely. My greatest enjoyment is reading. I have been trying anxiously to get some new books—that is, new to me—but I cannot afford to buy them. I would gladly pay freight charges to Owenton, [illegible] ville Railway. A. D. (Owenton, Ky.).

We [illegible] with sanguine expectations of passing it over to dozens of other bookloverS. Sydney Smith wrote a charming essay upon the life of one who lived "Twelve Miles From a Lemon." Your "twelve miles from a railway and six from town" has a flavor of our Corner. You must have your books.

A Rose Pillow

Kindly let me know through the Exchange how to make a rose pillow.

H. B. L. (Harrisburg, Pa.).

Pick the rose petals on a dry day, or at least when the dew is off. Spread upon papers in a window where the dry air can play freely over them, but not in the sun, which would shrivel them into scentlessness. Turn them often during the day. Leave them in the house and in a dry place at night. When they are quite dry, scatter a little rose powder [illegible] as much powdered orris root among them, [illegible] if you can afford to get as much as a teaspoonful of genuine attar of roses you have fragrance which is virtually imperishable. It is very expensive but delicious, and a few drops will perfume the whole mass of petals. Be sure the petals are fully desiccated before you inclose them in the cover. If they are at all humid, they become offensive in time.

Coloring Raffia

Can you or any of our members give me a recipe for coloring raffia a soft yellowish green? I want some of the lovely shades our grandmothers used to get from the materials at their command. The books upon "basketry" give sundry formulas, but they require two impossible conditions, viz, the country and summer. I use commercial dyes; but while they are convenient, they are eminently unsatisfactory.

E. N. (Memphis, Tenn.).

The query is passed along to the workers in the popular art of raffia weaving. Some of them must have overcome the difficulty that confronts our Tennessee member. I shall be glad to help her along this line.

Wanted—Recipes for Conserves

In May or June of last year there appeared in the Exchange an excellent recipe for strawberry and cherry conserve. I used it and thought it fine and put it away so carefully that I am unable to find it again. Would it be practicable for you to send it to me in the inclosed envelope?

S. L. V. Z. (Harrisburg, Pa.).

We cannot engage to send recipes by mail, even to our best correspondents. Also on this occasion is joined, in your case, the fact that we have no data to guide us in a search through hundreds of papers beyond your impression that the recipe was published a year ago in May or June. The best we can do is to print your request, with the hope that some careful soul secured the formula [illegible] but well. As it is too late in the season for you to use it this year, we allow plenty of time for the search. You may be [illegible] it ready for the berry and cherry season of 1911.

Bar-le-Duc

That you are not the only housewife who puts things away too safely for her own comfort, we have evidence in the next letter:

Please send me the recipe for bar-le-duc. [illegible] the [illegible] some and I have lost the [illegible]

M. E. L. (Lynchburg, Va.).

Again I am confused. [illegible] been informed by letter. It is a matter of lost time and labor to look up recipes to be sent by mail. And an hour's search of papers containing the Exchange notices of last winter have proved unsatisfactory. Will the woman who cuts out and keeps (where they may be found) recipes from our Corner be merciful and copy out this one for us? It is too late for this year, but "M. E. L." will not let it slip through her fingers again.

Churnless Butter

Several of our readers have asked questions as to making butter without a churn. I think I can tell of a very simple way:

I put my cream into an earthen pot and stir it with a tablespoon until it "comes butter." It generally takes three-quarters of an hour, sometimes less and sometimes longer. I have also made it by putting it into a quart jar and shaking it. The butter "comes" in about twenty minutes.

Mrs. W. C. L. (Tamaqua, Pa.).

My good "Marie" used to make what is sold in American markets as "sweet butter" that is saltless, in a glass syllabub churn. Some of us prefer this to salted butter. But this was veritable churning. So is your process of beating the cream with a spoon and shaking it in a jar. I think that our inquiring friends are on the lookout for a way of "bringing" the butter without agitating the cream at all. One wrote of burying it in a thick box in the earth for a day. Did you read her letter?

Gets a Home

[illegible] respectable independent young woman desiring [illegible] health, who would like company for me at home and go out with me sometimes. Perhaps "X" [illegible] Norristown, Pa., would like to come to me. My husband works at night and I am all alone. The thought has come to me that some one with work in view might be [illegible] by the arrangement and the [illegible]

Mrs. J. D. W. (Flagstaff, Ariz.).

The arrangement might be eminently convenient for both parties if references were exchanged, and the result of a correspondence mutually agreeable. But careful inquiry on the part of each should precede a decision.

Special Notice

Such an [illegible] pertaining to the other side of the maid and mistress question has been brought to my desk that I am convinced we hold a special [illegible] upon this important matter. If there be a bright side to the shield, let us look at it. If not, we [illegible] our best to furnish the dull side.

COMMUNICATIONS

Department of Agricultural, at Victoria, B.C., Nov. 7th, 1910.

M. B. Ball, Esq., Secretary Comox Agricultural Association.

Dear Sir;—I am planning to hold several short courses on Live Stock throughout the province this coming winter. I am making arrangements for the holding of a short course in Comox district for December 19th and 20th, which I think are quite suitable dates. Boat connections between Nanaimo and Comox make it rather awkward for us, but if we leave here on Thursday and reach Comox on Friday afternoon we will have Saturday to get the different classes of stock together at the Fair Grounds, Courtenay, or some other suitable place, and will have the judging on Monday and Tuesday, the 19th and 20th. These short courses will be principally Live Stock Judging with practical addresses on types and method of breeding and improvement of all classes of live stock, principally dairy cattle, sheep and swine, as well as heavy and light horses.

We hope to have a good representative type of a few breeds of these different classes of stock, together, and will go over them discussing the proper types and methods of breeding as well as other important questions.

Then at night we expect to hold public meetings where addresses will be delivered by various authorities. If you think it wise I would be glad to arrange for a tuberculin demonstration to be given by one of our veterinary inspectors.

Since I have come to this province one thing in particular has struck me and that is, that there has been too many institute and other theoretical meetings where addresses have been delivered on theory alone, and what we need now is to get down to good practical work, to do something for our stockmen and farmers of a practical nature.

Thanking you in anticipation for any suggestions or comments, I remain,

Yours very truly,
M. A. Jull,
Live Stock Commissioner.

We received the above letter from Mr. Carter, the new secretary of the Comox Agricultural Association, with a request for publication.

Editor News:— Kindly allow me space to acknowledge how I appreciate the answers to questions asked by me in your last issue and replied to by Editor of the Islander. To question

No. 1. His reply was not an answer to the question, but simply an insulting insinuation against the writer which is beneath contempt.

No. 2. Any child could say "Ask a policeman", but it is a fact that only he and a few others were invited to the meeting at which nominations were made made.

No. 3. Was short but truthful.

No. 4. He says if a man breaks the law and pays his fine (or possibly served a time in jail) he is a fit person to have charge of the city's finances. How about that, electors?

No. 5. He says any fool can ask questions. I know that, and I also know he dared not answer it truthfully.

No. 6. May be truthful, but his writing and editorials do not prove it.

No. 7. Facts do not prove this answer truthful.

No. 8. Possibly correct.

No. 9. He says "Rats, McCarthy!" Does he mean wharf rats?

No. 10. He squeals about insinuations under a nom de plume. Look in his own edition. I have seen more base insinuations in its columns than in any other paper I have read for many years, and they were even defended by the editor at that.

In summing up his answers I would advise the citizens of our town to nominate their own candidates for the coming election and to nominate men fit to look after the city's finances.

Thanking you I am still hoping for STRAIGHTFORWARD, HONEST, LAW ABIDING REPRESENTATIVES FOR THE CITY.

Editor News:—Sometime ago a Citizens' League was formed in this city. At that time it was thought the League would be a good thing in general to advance the welfare of the town. But, alas, what do we find to-day? Some of the promoters are becoming so active that it would seem that they had a pet scheme up their sleeve when the league was organized. The last meeting of the League, which, by the way, was only a special meeting, and they went so far as to nominate a mayor and council for the year 1911, and furthermore, if reports are correct, there were only five or six members of the League present; the others being outsiders, some from Courtenay and so not even residents of the city. And the president allowed them to vote and make motions, and take part in the nomination of candidates, which I contend is out of order. Why charge some 50c to join and have them voted into membership if you are going to allow outsiders who come along to take part in the meetings. It is up to the citizens of Cumberland to call a public meeting and choose a mayor and council for the year 1911, and not allow a hole-in-the-corner meeting to run the town for next year by putting up candidates for mayor and aldermen.

Just a few questions for the president of the League to answer. Why did not the secretary notify each member of the special meeting and the object? If he had done so the citizens of Cumberland would have no grounds for complaint. But it seems that some of your members want things all their own way, and if all the League members were present they would not be able to carry things their way If the president wants the League to go ahead he will have to keep politics out of it.

Thanking you for the hospitality of your columns, I am

Yours on behalf of the citizens of Cumberland.

FOR SALE,—8 milch cows, all tuberculosis tested. Government yearly records of each cow given, also 2 colts and 1 aged mare, one colt partly broken.

BAYSIDE, [Carter's Ranch] Union Bay Road.

"Mr. C. S. Campbell, formerly chief of provincial police in this city, and now provincial license inspector, has returned from a trip of inspection through the Kootenays", says the Vancouver News-Advertiser. "He finds that the new provincial liquor act is working out well, and is effecting improvement in the handling of the liquor traffic and in the standard of accommodations provided by licensed houses. One thing noticeable is that there has been a great deal more 'slewashing' in country districts, and this has worked out to the benefit of the communities that have been able to get rid of their barroom loafers. Generally, Inspector Campbell found hotel-keepers quite willing to comply with the conditions of the new act and to co-operate with the officials in enforcing its observance."

Fechner's opera house at Courtenay was opened for the first time to the public, on Friday night. It puts Cumberland in the shade.
