Presentation.

Last Saturday night, No. 5 foot ball team held a smoking concert it was a roaring success financially and very entertaining. Songs, speeches, etc., but the event of the evening was the presentation of a magnificent Trophy Cup, by G. W. Clinton, Esq., who in a well worded speech handed the Cup over to No 5, champions for 1908. The Chairman thanked Mr. Clinton and congratulated the Boys on having such a public spirited man, they were promised a cup, but it was certainly a more elaborate affair than they expected.

Dr. Quinlan, of Prince Rupert arrived by Monday's boat.

Lost—One Solar bicycle lamp, between Cumberland Electric Co's power house and city. Finder will please return to this office.

Mrs. Swan was a passenger from Denman Island, by Wednesday's boat.

Note:—Sale of Work by Ladies' Guild of Trinity Church, about the end of November. Particulars later

FOOT BALL NOTES.

The Final for the Cumberland and District Cup took place on the Recreation Grounds on Saturday, between the Mixtures and No. 5. The game was witnessed by a large number of spectators and proved to be one of the most exciting games ever played in Cumberland. If the players lacked some of the finer points of the game, they certainly made up for it by hard work, and a draw was the most satisfactory result on the day's play. The replay comes off on Thanksgiving Day, the public may be assured of a good hard game. The Mixtures are determined to win and No. 5, are of the same opinion. The Association are endeavouring to give medals to the winning team, and they hope that the public will assist in the only way they can, by not forgetting the hat when it goes round.

On last Wednesday evening Cumberland Lodge A. F. & A. M., held a banquet in the Union Hotel. A most enjoyable evening was spent and the spread which was prepared by "mine host" S. O. Davis, was par excellence. Some of the Brethern from Courtenay attended the banquet.

P. Dunn, of Victoria, arrived by Monday's boat.

BIRTH—On Tuesday Oct 27th to the wife of Mr. F. Bradley a son.

Valley Notes.

We wonder what Hugh is doing with all the new furniture, that he is hauling these days?

Don't forget to call at the new store, at the upper part of the Valley, known as Bridgeville, keep an eye open for the sign.

The debate on Friday night last. Resolved: That art is more pleasing to the eye than nature. The decision was given in favor of art. So from now on we will have no use for nature handi-work.

We are all pleased to see that Dan McLeod is able to be around after his severe illness.

The C. T. & M. I. S. are giving an entertainment on the first Friday in December. All are welcome to come and see what the Temperance Society is doing through the Valley.

Arthur Mc Lean, who has been engaged at Hosmer Smith's saw mill, on the night shift met with while chopping, cutting his foot, but we hope to see him around in a few days.

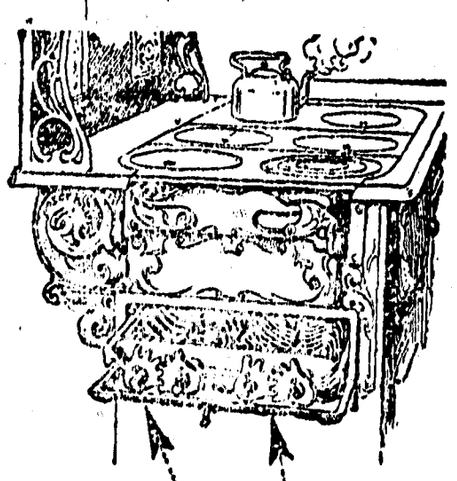
Westward Ho!

This magazine seems to know no limit to its powers of expansion and improvement, and the October issue is certainly its best. The fiction alone runs to nine short stories covering the sentimental, the tragic, the comic, the philanthropic, the sensational, and the amatory. Among them are "The Dalton case," by Arthur Davies, an author of already attained celebrity; "Beneath the Old Poke Bonnet," by Agnes Lockhart Hughes, whose works, both prose and verse, are always appreciative and sweet; "A Fifty Thousand Dollar Laugh," by Billee Glynn, whose name is synonymous with humour and pathos; "Black Hawk Hank," by Mrs. Ruth Everett; "The Dollar and the Cross," by J. DeQ. Donohoo; "The Measure of his Love," by Isabel B. Macdonald; "The Truth of Pretence," and others.

There are two excellent articles, one by Bonnycastle Dale on "The Opening of the Season," and one on the Alpine Club of Canada," by S. H. Mitchell. Under diversified articles we find "Simon Fraser," by E. O. S. Scholefield, Librarian of British Columbia, whose intimacy with the subject has enabled him to give to the public a splendid memoir of the celebrated explorer; "Prince Rupert," by Rosalind W. Young; "The Morals of Clothes," by Madame D'Alberta; "Mural Decorations," by Claude W. Gray, A. R. C. A., "B. T. A. Bell," by Wm. Blakemore.

There are also the usual features of Editorial, Poetry, etc., while the illustrations throughout are numerous and appropriate.

The oven does the baking, the fire-box controls the oven heat, and the grates hold the coal or wood that produces the heat, so THE GRATES are important.



Sask-alta Range

Double Duplex Grates

"Sask-alta" Double Duplex Grates are made in four pieces, each grate shaken separately. Ashes over one grate can be shaken without wasting good fuel over other grate. No poking necessary, thereby saving fuel. Dampers at both ends of fire-box secure perfect drafts. When grates are inverted for wood a patent clamp retains them in position. The easiest-working way is the surest-serving way—and that's "Sask-alta" way.

The Government And Zam-Buk

Survey out from Fort William Takes this Wonderful Balm.

Zam-Buk the favorite household balm is now adopted as 'The Doctor,' by leading parties in surveying various parts of the Dominion Lands.

Mr. Henry Hall writing from Fort William says:—"Having proved how beneficial Zam-Buk is in cases of cuts, skin injuries and diseases, I determined to keep a supply handy. Being engaged to go on a Survey I thought it would be a most useful thing to take along. I obtained a supply in Fort William, and very well it was I did so. I may say that pretty nearly every day it was called into requisition by one or other of the party for cuts, bruises, burns, or some injury or other. It is wonderful how quickly Zam-Buk takes the soreness out of cuts, burns, bruises and injuries, and on our survey it earned golden opinions from all who had occasion to try it. I have found it very fine for skin disease, and I can strongly recommend it as a household balm."

Mr. Lascelles Scott one of the leading Government analysts says:—I have no hesitation in certifying the entire purity of Zam-Buk which in my opinion is excellently adapted for skin injuries and diseases."

Zam-Buk cures cuts, scalds, burns, bruises, eczema, scalp sores, ringworm, ulcers abscesses, chapped places, cold sores, blood poisoning, chronic abscesses, etc. As an embrocation it relieves rheumatism neuralgia, and sciatica. All Druggist and Stores sell at 50c a box, or from Zam-Buk Co, Toronto, for price, 3 boxes for $1.25 Send 1 cent stamp for dainty sample box.

NOVA SCOTIA BLUENOSES.

No One Seems to Know Just Why They Are So Called.

Those who dwell in the Canadian province of Nova Scotia are called bluenoses. The name has stuck to them since time out of mind, but how they came to get it is a matter of conjecture. One thing is certain—they don't like it.

Nova Scotians pride themselves on their English ancestry, and some will offer the suggestion that the name is a token that the blue blood shows. When the French were driven out of Arcadia the fertile lands they vacated were taken up by English colonists, chiefly from Massachusetts.

The spirit of revolt was strong then in Boston and elsewhere in New England. Those who were loyal to the king and taxes found it a good opportunity to move, and from these loyalists Acadia was largely repeopled.

It may be that the blue blood shows and that the name is a badge of honor, but most Nova Scotians don't believe it, for they feel that it is a term of reproach.

"Why bluenose?" was the question put to one young woman whose home isn't far from Nova Scotia.

"Why, after the bluenose potatoes, of course," she said, "and I think it's mean to name people after potatoes."

Now, it's true that, next to apples, potatoes form the greatest product of the rich Nova Scotian soil. And it's also true that the bluenose is the bright particular star among the varieties of potatoes they raise in Nova Scotia.

But the potatoes were named for the people, not the people for the potatoes. It's a simple question of chronology.

You explain it carefully to the young woman, and she says, "How silly of me!" but you can see with half an eye that you haven't convinced her.

Here's another guess. Being the third and last, maybe it's the right one. At any rate, it's the one generally accepted in that part of the American world known as down east.

It is cold in Nova Scotia, mighty cold, for six months out of every twelve, and the Nova Scotian nose, peeking out from the furs and woolen mufflers, first gets red and then turns blue as the icy breath of the north nips it.

But, however it is, the easiest way to put the Nova Scotia nose out of joint is to dub it bluenose.

How Macaroni Is Made.

This is how macaroni is made: To very glutinous wheat flour is added a plentiful supply of dried eggs. Mixed with water, this becomes a dough, which is so thickly kneaded as to be difficult to impress with the fingers. Then it is carried to a round press perforated with holes, through which the dough is pressed by means of a heavy plate worked by a screw. The result is macaroni without holes in the sticks. Pipe macaroni is made through a similar press, with the difference that a round piece of metal makes the central hole. As it issues in long, snaky ropes from the bottom of the press they are violently fanned to prevent them from sticking together and are afterward taken out into the open and laid on long bamboo poles to dry. Two or three days' exposure in the warm, sunny air of Italy makes the dough pipes hard and brittle and fit to use for food.

Italian Hat Straw.

Few people know where the straw for making summer hats comes from. A great part of it is grown in Italy. To make suitable straw the wheat is sown as thickly as possible in order that the growth of the plant may be impoverished as well as to produce a slim stalk having toward the end from the last knot the lightest and longest straw. The wheat blooms at the beginning of June and is pulled up by the roots by hand when the grain is half developed. If allowed to remain in the ground a longer time the straw would become brittle. About five dozen uprooted branches, the size of the compass of two hands, are firmly tied together into little sheaves and stowed away in barns. Then the straw is again spread out to catch the heavy summer dews and to bleach in the sun. After additional bleaching the straw is put into small bundles and classified. Finally it is cut close above the first joint from the top and again tied up in small bundles containing about sixty stalks each.—London Chronicle.

THE DOGS OF WAR.

More Than a Mere Figure of Speech in Remote Times.

The "dogs of war" is not a mere figure of speech. In remote times dogs were used for war purposes. Plutarch and Pliny relate many instances—i. e., of Agesilaus at the siege of Mantinea, of Cambyses in his expedition to Egypt, of the king of the Geromantians in regaining his throne. Aeneas (400 B. C.) tells of dogs that carried letters in their collars; also the Cimbrians and Teutons kept dogs. These, however, were fighting dogs, justly dreaded by the Roman soldiers.

The Roman military author Vegetius reports that dogs were used in the fortified towers to make known by their barking the approach of the enemy and to keep the garrisons awake; also during the middle ages war dogs were used for guarding camps and bulwarks. Scotch bloodhounds were specially reputed for tracking escaped prisoners. They were also used for attacking the enemy's cavalry, mutilating the horses with the prongs and hooks of their coats of mail. To these coats firepots were attached, which set the camps on fire. In the days of Granson and Murten (1476) the battles started with a fight of Swiss dogs against Burgundian dogs, and at Murten the Burgundian dogs were dismembered by their adversaries from the Alps. It is said that after the discovery of America war dogs slaughtered not less than 2,000 Indians.

The employment of dogs for fighting purposes continued in modern times. Emperor Charles V. (1518-1550) received from England 4,000 dogs as subsidiary forces against France. At Valence French and Spanish dogs joined battle, in which the latter remained victors. As late as in the seventeenth century war dogs were used as scouts against the Turks. In 1822 an assault on the Acropolis of Athens by the Greeks was frustrated by dogs. The French employed dogs in Tunis against Arabian tribes. In Mexico in 1364 the dogs of the Zaccateca volunteer corps proved the most terrible adversaries of the Mexican guerrillas until they were got rid of by poison. In the last Turko-Russian war (1877-1878) the Russians employed war dogs both in Europe and in Asia. The Austrians and Hollanders also used trained dogs successfully to protect themselves against being surprised by the enemy and to find their adversaries in the impenetrable thickets.

Today the dog is no longer employed as a fighter. He is trained to carry ammunition to the battlefield, to guard the outposts, prevent skirmishers from stealing at too close range, forward letters and, finally, as a samaritan in finding the wounded after a battle.

For Value Received.

When Mr. Amasa Howe decided to turn the old Howe mansion on Todd's hill into a summer hotel there were persons who prophesied that he would make a success of it and others who were sure he would not, but at the end of two years it was evident to all that Mr. Howe's enterprise was a financial triumph. "And no wonder, when he charges for everything except air," said one of the dwellers in the village at the foot of the hill.

"What do you mean by that?" asked a visitor at one of the village homes. "He doesn't charge for water, I hope?"

"Some of it he does," said the resident, nodding. "All that comes from the north pasture spring he does—a cent a glass. I understand the folks can have the arty-arshetyan well water free, but they all take the other and pay the cent. Charges 'em for riding, boating—half a mile walk included—tenpins and the swimming tank.

"But the cap sheaf was the charge he made on the bill of a New Yorker. I heard tell that the man looked at it and looked at it, and finally he called Amasy, and says he, 'Look here, isn't there some mistake about this?'

"'I guess not,' Amasy told him, dry as chips. 'Your wife is so shortsighted she can't see up into the air, she tells me, and it's took my clerk or one o' the boys right away from their work night and morning to keep her posted on the wind.

"'You've been here a full month. I call one-fifty for the use o' weather vane pretty reasonable mysolf.'"

ECCENTRIC STAMPS.

Blunders That Bring Joy to the Hearts of Philatelists.

"The fascination of stamp collecting," said a postal official, "lies in the rare 'finds' which are continually made and the curious points which sometimes make a stamp of the face value of a few pence worth hundreds of pounds. For instance, the twopence blue Mauritius stamp which the Prince of Wales bought at a public auction for £1,450 was unique in one respect—the proper wording on it, 'Post Paid Mauritius,' had by a strange error been altered to 'Post Office Mauritius.'

"Another stamp which has been priced at several hundred pounds is valuable for the mere misspelling of a single word. It is a British Guiana issue worth just 1 cent, but it is sought after by all collectors because the word 'Patimusque' figures on it instead of 'Petimusque.'

"Again, a one penny Cape of Good Hope stamp changed hands the other day for nearly £200 simply because instead of being red, as are all the others of this issue, its color was blue.

"Some years ago in Western Australia a few stamps were printed with the figure of a swan upside down upon them. When the mistake was detected the issue was hastily destroyed. Several specimens had escaped, and one of them has been sold for £400."—London Tit-Bits.

THE SORROWFUL TREE.

Its Flowers Open at Night and Close With the Dawn of Day.

There is a tree in Persia to which the name "the sorrowful tree" is given, perhaps because it blossoms only in the evening. When the first star appears in the heavens the first bud of the sorrowful tree opens, and as the shades of night advance and the stars thickly stud the sky the buds continue gradually opening until the whole tree looks like one immense white flower. On the approach of dawn, when the brilliancy of the stars gradually fades in the light of day, the sorrowful tree closes its flowers, and ere the sun is fully risen not a single blossom is visible. A sheet of flower dust as white as snow covers the ground around the foot of the tree, which seems blighted and withered during the day, while, however, it is actively preparing for the next nocturnal festival. The fragrance of the blossoms is like that of the evening primrose.

If the tree is cut down close to the roots a new plant shoots up and attains maturity in an incredibly short time.

In the vicinity of this singular tree there usually grows another which is almost an exact counterpart of the sorrowful tree, but less beautiful, and, strange to say, it blooms only in the daytime.

PASTIMES OF MADMEN.

Cunning and Ingenuity Displayed by the Insane.

Some of the inventions of the insane are of scientific value. A patient at Villejuif invented a "pasification machine" by combining a bottle, a plank and small metallic tubes, to which he had fitted faucets. Having set up his machine, he produced loaves of bread the size of a man's head. The bread was good—so good that it was decided to make the machine known. One day when it was in action the doctor suggested taking a photograph of it. The inventor watched him as if petrified for a moment; then he fell upon the machine, wrenched it apart and trampled it underfoot. The invention, an exceedingly useful one, was lost, because no one had seen him make it, and no one dares speak of it to him. To allude to it is to bring on a furious attack.

Most lunatics, no matter how contented they may be, generally cherish a furtive longing to escape. They collect wax from the polished floors, take the impressions of locks and make keys (from empty sardine boxes, spoons handles or anything to be found. Dr. Marie's museum includes a collection of knives of strange and unheard of shapes. Some of them have blades made from pieces of glass or slate and set in handles of corset steels. Objects harmless in themselves become dangerous weapons through the ingenuity of madmen.

Insane sculptors are as common as insane painters. The insane sculptor hews out coarse statuettes, fantastic animals, ferocious little horned and grimacing devils. An ex-mechanic carves all his soup bones. That his old trade is still in his memory is shown by the little screws that he makes out of the smaller pieces of bone. He works all day at his senseless and ridiculous task. Another lunatic, who believes he is the incarnation of the spirit of Beelzebub, passes his time carving toy men out of wood. Each pair of his creations are joined together, now at the necks, now at the shoulders.—Helen F. Meyer in Harper's Weekly.

THE MUSIC HATER.

And the Great Things That He Misses in His Defect.

What a puzzle music must be to those unfortunate people, stricken with spiritual cecity, to whom the art is no more than so much sound and fury, signifying nothing! They know that to others it constitutes a whole world of experience, yet are themselves excluded from that world by an insuperable barrier. They must take it on faith, as the color blind must take the rainbow and the sunset.

If they are honest with themselves they will admit and lament this defect of sense, accepting the unavoidable, gazing wistfully at the walls that separate them from a realm of whose glories they know from trustworthy report, but into which they may not enter. Sometimes, says the Dial, they are not honest with themselves, averring the very existence of the realm to be a fable and those who claim its franchise to be self deluded, finding realities in what are but vain imaginings. They allow music to be sound more or less agreeable, but they stoutly deny, although in the face of an overwhelming mass of testimony, that it has any spiritual meaning.

The province of music is the entire emotional and spiritual life, and the intellect, although a necessary philosophical concept, is no more to be caught by itself than those equally necessary abstractions, the perfect pendulum and the economic man. Science comes nearest to being pure when it takes the mathematical form, but we cannot forget Kepler's spiritual exaltation in contemplation of his laws of planetary motion, and we may also recall what Abt Vogler thought about the whole matter—

> The rest may reason and welcome.
> 'Tis we musicians know.

What are "the substantials of life?" Science is certainly one of them, but there are at least three others—art, ethics and religion—and if we allow that the one is only here and there touched with emotion the other three are surely suffused with it through and through. And the relation of music to all three of them as surely needs no argument in its proof, for music is itself an art. It is a potent influence upon character, and it is of the very essence of religion.

But, being as much more than sound as poetry is more than words printed in black ink upon white paper, the character of music as an art is beyond cavil, and any likening of its effect to that of food upon the palate is supremely ridiculous. There are many, indeed, who would go so far as to call it the highest of the arts, holding with Pater that every art "constantly aspires toward the condition of music," which is "the true type or measure of perfected art."

If the philosophers are right when they urge that sympathy is the foundation of the moral life, what more remains to be said in behalf of music as an effective influence upon conduct? The great composer, beyond any other artist, takes us into his intimacy, imparts to us the contagion of his spirit.

What Gluten Is.

What is gluten? Well, spend ten minutes and find out—not all about it, but something about it. Obtain a heaping tablespoonful of white flour. Add a little water to it in a saucer and dough it into a compact ball. Turn on the tap in the sink and let the water drip from your hands as you roll the ball between your palms. The ball will grow less and less, and the water will be white with starch cells held in suspension. In ten minutes, more or less, the water will run clean and clear and you appear to have a nodule of yellow, firm, vegetable gum, which you are tempted to call "pure" gluten. Become a gum chewer for once and keep a-chewing for a couple of hours. At the end of this time the quantity of gluten is less than when you took it from the hydrant. What has happened? You have simply mechanically crushed and broken the gummy mass, exposing the infinitesimally fine starch cells to the moisture of the mouth and the washing out of the raw insoluble starch has continued, just an extension of the sink washing process, with greater mechanical elaboration to expose the entangled starch cell. Now take the piece of gluten to an analytic chemist. When his report comes in you read "starch 15 or 18 or maybe 20 per cent, gluten 65, 82 or 80 per cent." and begin to appreciate for the first time what real gluten is. — Scientific American.

Not Wanting a Job.

When Gladstone was chancellor of the exchequer, one day he was in the shipping department of the government office getting some information and figures for the coming budget. While thus engaged a Sunderland shipowner called to see Mr. Lindsey, the then member for Sunderland.

While waiting for Mr. Lindsey to come in the shipowner got his eye on Mr. Gladstone and was watching him closely. After doing so a little while he thus addressed him:

"Thou seemst a good writer and clever at figures. I'll give you £100 a year, and that's an offer thou'lt not get every day!"

Mr. Gladstone thanked him and said he would see Mr. Lindsey.

Just then Mr. Lindsey entered. Then Mr. Gladstone told Mr. Lindsey of the offer his friend had made him.

Mr. Lindsey said it was a very good offer, but he did not know if Mr. Gladstone could be spared. Anyway he had better introduce them. Turning to his friend, the shipowner, he said, "Allow me to introduce you to W. E. Gladstone, chancellor of the exchequer. Mr. Gladstone, Sunderland." The amazement of the shipowner cannot be described. The Grand Old Man laughed immoderately.—London Answers.

NATIONAL CONVENTIONS.

They Succeeded the System of Nomination by Caucus.

Conventions have not always nominated our presidents and vice presidents. For more than thirty years presidential candidates were named by a caucus made up of members of the house and the senate. This system died when in 1824 the caucus insisted upon by Martin Van Buren and other friends of William H. Crawford of Georgia defeated Crawford, which threw the election into the house on account of the scattering electoral vote caused by the entrance of Clay, Calhoun, Jackson and John Quincy Adams in the race. This fracas elected Adams.

The campaign of 1828 in consequence was somewhat demoralized, and in 1831 the Republicans followed the example the anti-Masonic party had set the year before and met in convention in Baltimore to nominate Henry Clay. The Democrats held their first national convention in the same city the following year, nominating Martin Van Buren for vice president. The dominating figure of the party, Andrew Jackson, needed no indorsement of his candidacy for the presidency.

The Democrats in 1835 and 1840 nominated Van Buren for the presidency in Baltimore, and the Whigs nominated Clay in the same place in 1844, when the Democrats named Polk.

In 1835 Romulus M. Saunders introduced the two-thirds rule to the Democratic convention, and it was adopted. The customs installed at these earlier conventions which succeeded the tyranny of the caucus chamber have been continued and added to from time to time, and the conventions today are merely the descendants of those that nominated Clay and Van Buren.—Charles Wadsworth Camp in Metropolitan Magazine.

Horizon.

A man calls it the horizon where the earth and the sky seem to meet, but a woman's notion of the horizon is the families she can see moving in from behind her front window curtains. If, further, they hang out their washing in a spirit of candor, they are, of course, all the more so. The horizon is caused by a number of things, chief among them the gregarious instinct. Only for this next door would mean as little as tariff revision or pure food or international arbitration. It takes a star of something of that sort to rise above the horizon, but a very ordinary woman may feel above it.—Life.

The Cult of the Hotel.

"Hotel" is a French word, but a thoroughly British institution. If its great hotels were suppressed London would no longer be London—that is to say, the London of society, the theater, literature, politics, art and fashion. The hotel is one of the essential factors of London life—Milan Corriere Della Serra.

A Comparison.

Mrs. Giles (anxiously asking after rector's health)—Well, sir, I 'ope you says you be well, but there—you be one of these "bad doers," as I calls 'em (ale 'em the best o' vittels, and it don't do 'em no good)—there be pigs like that!—London Punch.

First Necessity.

"How would you define a 'crying need?'" asked the teacher of the rhetoric class.

"A handkerchief," replied the solemn young man with the wicked eye.

The great and the little have need of each other.—Blackwood.

Triumph of Mind.

Victim of Delusion—Doctor, I'm awfully afraid I'm going to have brain fever. Doctor—Pooh! pooh, my dear friend! That is all an illusion of the senses. There is no such thing as fever. You have no fever; you have no br—h'm—no material substance upon which such a wholly imaginary and [illegible] could [illegible] any base of operation. Victim—Oh, doctor, what a load you have taken from my—from my—I have a mind, haven't I, doctor?

Pulling That Hair.

"What makes me really mad," said the woman, "is to spend minutes, may be hours, trying to get hold of a white hair which shows up on my head like a dancing light, yet which is tantalizingly elusive when I try to catch it, and then when I do finally separate it from the brown hair and give it a vigorous pull to find that I have snatched out a good brown hair for all, and left the white one still shining."

A New Case For Him.

"The climate here is salubrious, isn't it?" remarked the tourist.

"Say, friend," replied the native, "just write that down fur me, will yer? I git tired o' swearin' at this climate in the same old way. That's a new one."

APPLICATION FOR HOTEL LICENCE.

Take notice, that one month after date I intend to apply to the Superintendent of Provincial Police, under the provisions of the Liquor Licence Act 1900, and amendments thereto, for a Hotel Licence to sell intoxicating liquors by retail in the premises known as the Lorne Hotel, situate at Comox district, British Columbia.
