ENGLISH MINERS RETURN TO WORK.

At the Old Rate of Wages—Foreign Powers Will Prevent Interference With Commerce at Rio—Powderleys Defence—He atempts a Federation of All Labor Organizations—U. S. Action on the Hawaiian Situation will be Purely Diplomatic—Bourke Cochrane Expresses Himself on the New Tax.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—A conference between the Mine-owners' Association and delegates from the Miners' Federation was held to-day at the foreign office under the chairmanship of Lord Rosebery. The question of ending the strike was discussed in all its bearings. It is reported that the conference finally agreed to submit the question at issue to Lord Resebery and accept the latter's decision.

English Miners Will Resume Work at Old Wages.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—It is announced this evening that it was settled by the miners' conference that the miners should resume work at the old wages on Monday. They will work for these wages until February, when a conciliation board will be formed.

Will Fix Rate of Miners Wages.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The board of conciliation will hold its first meeting on Dec. 13. It will be continued for a year. If at the first meeting the members fail to elect a chairman the speaker of the House of Commons will nominate one. The board will be empowered to determine the rate of miners wages.

Received With Joy.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The news that work would be resumed in the mines on Monday at the old wages was received with demonstrations of great joy in all the mining centres of the Midlands. The leaders of the miners read the despatches aloud in the streets and the waiting crowds of strikers cheered themselves hoarse. Church bells were rung in all the mining towns this evening and thanksgiving services will be held to-morrow in the Dissenters chapel.

Will Prevent Interference With Commerce.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 16.—A cipher telegram received by the Navy Department this evening from Captain Picking, under to day's date, from Rio Janiero, is looked upon as significant and possibly indicating a weakening of the strength of the insurgent fleet under Admiral Mello. The translation of the despatch was as follows: Navy representatives of eight Nations, including your Nation, have decided not to permit munitions of war to be landed at Rio Santos, being still in possession of the Brazilian government and connected with Rio Janeiro by railway. Munitions of war for Rio Janeiro can be landed at Santos. Yesterday the insurgents dressed ship. The Brazilian government forces fired a national salute in honor of the anniversary of the establishment of the Republic. The only interpretation to be put upon this despatch is that the naval representatives at Rio have decided that there shall be no interference with commerce, and have formally notified the insurgent admiral they will prevent it. The probabilities are, that this is the view taken by Government officials here. This transaction will weaken Mello very much for if he cannot close the ports of Rio and bring that city into subjection, it cannot be conjectured how he can make his rebellion successful. It looks to naval officers very much as if Mello had been badly crippled. This action is in line with that indicated in previous despatches from Captain Picking to the effect that the foreign representatives had, after conference notified Mello, that he must respect the nationality of any lighter engaged in unloading vessels and flying the flag at its bow indicating its nationality. It appears that a strong effort has been made to give Mello ne a single excuse to fire upon the city. An agreement was made some time ago that there should be no firing between the forces of Rio and the insurgents in the bay. This was violated in each occasion though no damage resulted. To-day's despatches indicate that the naval officers on duty there in the protection of foreign interests had determined on this agreement which is the result of the concerted action on the part of the allied powers to prevent any firing upon the city or damage to commerce by either side. The restriction thus imposed as to the landing of munitions of war treats both sides alike, but advantage is with the existing Government by reason of its connection with Santos. This act is construed by officials here to indicate that Mello does not think the present, at least, is the proper time to espouse the cause of a Monarchy, for had he done so, he would have run up the imperial ensign in defiance at the salute from the guns of the Loyal fort. The most tenable construction placed upon this incident is that the insurgent admiral believes the Republic to be the popular side. In view of this edict of the naval representatives, Admiral Mello will have to get his supplies by water, if the vessels carrying them can successfully pass the Government forts down the bay. The occasion was a fete day, and celebrated as the anniversary of the establishment of the Republic, and in decorating their vessels it would look as if the insurgents, if they were honest, were endeavoring to outdo the loyal forts in evidence of loyalty. It is interesting to know what will become of the El Cid and her fellowers, when they shall arrive. It is said here that the action cannot prevent a meeting between the insurgent and the loyal warships. This fighting would take place in the bay with the probability only of a stray shot reaching the city. It is probable then that when El Cid and her consorts arrive a naval battle will take place and the warships now at Rio will permit the engagement to go on so long as commerce and the city are not molested. Should Mello be able to organize an effective resistance and land his force and attack the city in that way, the conditions would be materially changed but that contingency does not at present appear likely.

Powderley's Defence.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 17.—General Master Workman Powderley made a spirited address at this morning's session of the Knights of Labor General Assembly and it is believed that it was in reply to the charge made against himself and a John Devlin, of the executive board, by Secretary-Treasurer Hayes. The Master Workman was on the floor when the noon adjournment was taken and he resumed this afternoon. He refused to be interviewed. The finance committee has not yet completed its investigation of the charges preferred by the secretary-treasurer and it was stated to-day that the work will probably not be finished until Monday.

The initial step in the project of Grand Master Workman Powderly for the amalgamation of all the labor bodies was taken to-night, when a dozen representatives of several labor organizations held a secret conference on the subject. Who the conferees were and where the conference was held was not divulged, but it was stated late to-night that the plan met with favor and that it would be first brought before the present session of the Knights of Labor general assembly. Should the Knights adjourn without naming a time and place for the next meeting, as is the hope of the projectors, the movement in a measure would be consummated, for the executive board would then agree with the committees of other labor orders upon a gathering place next year. A labor congress would result, it is believed, and amalgamation would follow. It is said that the conferees to-night represented 75,000 members of organized labor. To-night's meeting was practically taken up by Mr. Powderly, who resumed his address in which he denied the charges of Grand Secretary-Treasurer Hayes. The grand master workman prefaced his remarks by a denunciation of the unknown delegate who is charged with making the proceedings public.

Gladstone Suffered Defeat.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The debate on the Parish Councils or local Government Bill occupied all the time in the House of Commons this evening. Walter McLaren, Radical member for the Crewe division of Cheshire, and a pronounced woman's suffragist, moved that the Committee be instructed to insert in the bill a provision enfranchising women who would be entitled if they were men to vote in the local government and parliamentary elections. Henry Fowler, President of the Local Government Board opposed for the Ministry, Mr. McLaren's motion. Women already possessing the right to vote on local affairs, he said would have also the right to vote for Parish Councillors. The multiplication of amendments threatened to prolong the debate indefinetly and to suffocate the bill. The House then divided on Mr. McLaren's motion, which was carried by a vote of 147 to 126. The announcement that the Government had been defeated by a majority of 21 was greeted with ironical cheers from the Unionists, and shouts of "resign." Among the House voting against the Government were Sir Chas. Dilke, advanced Radical; Jas. Stansfield, Radical and former president of the Local Government Board; Justin McCarthy, leader of the anti-Parnellites; John Long, advanced Liberal; John Burns, the labor agitator: Edward Blake, the Irish Nationalist from Canada; and Wm. O'Brien, anti-Parnellite.

The Protest Against the Tax.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 17.—L. W. Habercombe, Attorney for the United States Brewers' Association to-day presented to Chairman Wilson, of the ways and means committee a protest signed by the great breweries of the country, against an increase of the International Revenue Tax on fermented liquors. The protest vigorously assails the arguments of Mr. David A. Wells, in favor of the increased imposition. They draw a distinction between the beer tax and the whiskey tax and say "Unbiased economists especially those who take into account the moral and social aspects of this question in conjunction with the present drinking habits of the people, will surely disagree with Mr. Wells, in so far at least as regards his attempts to confound the mild fermented beverages which serve as an article of diet and are, therefore, a quasi necessity of life. with a luxury pure and simple, such as distilled spirits. All well informed persons agree that the morvellous progress of the temperance cause is due almost exclusively to the present revenue system, and the effects it produced and continues to produce upon the drinking habits of the people, by enhancing the price of ardent spirits and encouraging the consumption of malt liquors."

Heavy Gales in England.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—A heavy gale set in yesterday on the western southern coasts of Great Britain and it is thought that maritime casualities will be great. Tremendously heavy seas sprang up in the English Channel and Irish Sea. Many vessels experienced much difficulty in reaching port. The schooner Favorite of Ilpracombe was seen last night staggering along under short canvass off Bristol, and soon after she disappeared in a black squal.

It has been learned that the belief that the steamer Boileau was lost in the storm is erroneous. She put back to Barrack, where she arrived this morning. The four men who were said to have been saved from her left her in a small boat for the purpose of rendering assistance to a vessel near by that was flying a signal of distress. After they pulled a short distance from the steamer a squall came up and the steamer was lost sight of. As she was not afterwards seen by the men who had left her, they supposed she had foundered.

Bourke Cochrane Expresses Himself.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 17—Mr. Bourke Cochrane, of New York, spoke his mind with characteristic bluntness to-day to his fellow members of the Ways and Means Committee, regarding the proposed income tax. Mr. Cochrane came down from New York this morning. He was at the Capital bright and early, but the anticipated committee meeting was again postponed. It may occur to-morrow or there may be another delay until Monday. Meantime Mr. Cochrane employed his leisure moments delivering his mind on the proposition to tax incomes. He referred to a statement that the new imposition of such a tax would be gratifying to the populists and added sarcastically that when Democrats began chasing populists some one always gets "Left" and that one is usually the Democratic party. Such a tax he imformed a little cotrie of his committee was pernicious in principle. It was class legislation of the worst character. In this case it would array the rich against the poor and in such struggles the rich always came out ahead. It would relive laboring men of responsibility in maintaining the Government and in the end it would exclude him from participation in it. If such a tax should be levied it ought then, in his judgment to apply equally to everybody so that the man who earns two dollars a day might pay his tax of four cents and thus preserve his rights and duties as a self-respecting citizen just the same as the man whose income was forty dollars a day. Politically he thought it would be fatal to the Democratic party. One result would be to make New York city now the Democratic Gibraltar a Republican centre far an indefinite term of years. The extended hearing which the committee gave yesterday to the Alabama and Virginia delegates delayed work on the bill, which was all but completed with the exception of certain matters of detail. The internal revenue schedule is in so advanced a state that the sub-committees recommendations may be made to the bill in committee within thirty minutes after they shall have been committed. Whether there be any increase of whiskey, tobacco, beer or similar products will depend upon the deficit made by the bill and whether that deficit be offset in whole or in part by an income tax. With this knowledge in their possession the sub committee can immediately report. There is a disposition on the part of some of the members of the committee to increase the tax on whiskey from 90 cents to one dollar a gallon, thus increasing the revenues trouble is apprehended on that Nearly every maritime nation in Europe was invited to join an international agreement to protect the seals from pelagic destruction and they declined on the ground that they were not sufficiently interested to warrant them in entering into such a compact. Now, as an original proposition, it might be conceivable that Germany for instance, should license her vessels to search for seals but it is not conceivable that after declaring she had no interest in the business and after the nations which are interested had made an agreement to protect the seals, that she should lend her flag to vessels bent on nullifying that agreement. In the event, however, of any nation lending its flag to such an undertaking it would find itself under such a load of condemnation that it would soon withdraw from that position."

Important Decisions.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The inter State Commerce Commission to-day in an opinion by Commissioner Clements, announced its decision in the cases of Blanton Duncan, against the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe System, and against the Southern Pacific Company, and the Louisville and Nashville Co. The decision contains important rulings on rates on household goods and immigrants moveables. Under the western classification there are two west bound car load rates from Mississipi river points to Pacific coast terminals on good termed "immigrants moveables," one general class rate and the other designated a "commodity rate," and less than general rate. The latter rate is published as being open to "intending settlers only," but in practice it is given to shippers indiscriminately. The commission holds that there is no necessity for retaining the two rates and that the west bound rate on "immigrants' movables" from Louisville to Los Angeles should not be in excess of the amount of the commodity rate thereon.

New York's Great Horse Show.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—The horse show at the Madison Square Garden continues to be the craze with New York's society people, and even the spacious garden has been unable to hold the vast throngs that have attended the show daily. The assemblage to-day was as large as usual and an interesting programme was witnessed. The great four-year-old Directum arrived this morning from Boston and will be exhibited at the show to-morrow. The black colt was accompanied by quite a court of distinguished horses. Nine horses in all arrived, but the champion son of Directum and Stemwinder, with his trotting record of 2:05¼, is king.

Retires This Time for Good.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Jack McAuliffe, the pugilist, has made up his mind to retire, and he says this time it is for good. "I have been light-weight champion long enough," said he, "and it is time to let someone else have a chance. I will never even box again, because I don't think I'll need to. I am going to San Francisco to-morrow afternoon and expect to remain there until next May. I will engage in business there."

Will Send Horses Too.

OTTAWA, Ont. Nov. 17.—The ladies committee having in charge the presentation to the Princess May find that after providing for the sleigh, robes and harness which were originally designed to constitute a wedding gift, from the women of Canada there still remains a considerable surplus. This sum is to be devoted to the purchase of a pair of Canadian carriage horses to acompany the sleigh.

Former Prince of Bulgaria Dead.

VIENNA, Nov. 17.—Prince Alexander of Battenberg, formerly Prince of Bulgaria, died at noon to-day at Gratz.

Robbery of Treasurer Dake.

CHICAGO Nov. 17.—Detective are wo king on the $21,000 robbery of treasurer John A. Drake, arrested in a gambling house, but after being examined by Inspector Shea, he was let go. The police say he has a penchant for getting hold of other peoples money, when they go wrong and on this theory he was taken in. "We are all at sea in this case said Inspector Shea, but we are giving it all the attention possible. The case bears all the ear marks of a robbery, and I never said Drake was not robbed."

Will be Purely Diplomatic.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—A Washington special to the Press says: Senator Morgan, of Foreign Relations Committee in the Senate, was closeted all yesterday afternoon with Secretary Gresham, and that the Secretary said there was no intention of any resort to arms in Hawaii; that Minister Willis would not under any circumstances call upon the United States marines and bue jackets to assist the Queen. The attitude of the United States would be purely diplomatic and would content itself with a disavowal of former steps taken by the United States Minister Stevens and United States naval forces in assisting in the establishment of the present Provisional Government. He permitted Senator Morgan to infer that if the Queen was not strong enough to establish her rights under these auspicious circumstances, Willis would not order troops or sailors from the men-of-war to assist her.

Northern Pacific Bondholders Meet.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Holders of about $15,000,000 of the $28,000,000 bonds of the Chicago & Northern Pacific Railroad met at the office of the United States Trust Co. and appointed a committee with President J. Edward Simmons, of the Fourth National Bank as chairman to look after their interest. The Philadelphia committee, consisting of George M. Troutman, Henry W. Brown and Evans R. Dick, announced that they will support any plan that contemplates maintaining the integrity of the bonds as used and avoiding the process of re-organization. They gave notice that a second meeting of the holders will be called shortly and as soon as the names of all those desirous of participating are received, they will consider the expediency of adding to the number of their committee and of removing its headquarters to this city.

Protecting American Interests.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The Cruiser San Francisco reached port from Lemon, Costa Rica yesterday and a despatch reporting her arrival there was received at the Navy Department this morning. When the Corvette Kearsage has completed her duty in connection with the trial of the cruiser Columbia, she will sail southward to cooperate with the San Francisco in looking after American interests in Cuba and Hayti. This new assignment of naval vessels is in accordance with the present policy of the Navy Department to keep warships near places were American interests are sufficiently large to warrent a show of force for their protection in the event of a revolutionary disturbance and with the two vessels named in the Atlantic and the Alliance on the west coast of South America there is less likelihood than recently existed of a disregard for the rights of citizens of the United States. The San Francisco will cruise up and down the east coast of Central America, while the Kearsage will look after affairs in Hayti and Western India waters. At this time the duty of the Kearsage is particularly important in view of the endeavors to be made by the United States of securing Saint Nicholas Mole for a coaling station but care will be taken not to make the serious error of Admiral Gherardi in appearing in the harbor of Port Au Prince and causing an end to the negotiations then nearing conclusion, for the cession of the Mole to this Government by the presence of his fleet. The Haytian Government was induced to believe that Admiral Gherardi intended to force it into an agreement transferring the use of the Mole to the United States and on this ground refused to treat further.

Another Crank.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 16.—The machinations of a crank, which might have resulted in a tragedy, were foiled by Governor Mathews to-day, when Hiram Collins, a demented citizen of White county, was landed in the Logansport insane asylum. On November 3rd the Governor received the first of a number of threatening letters from Collins, in which he blamed the executive for the hard times, demanded immediate relief and said there would be "Hell" in the near future if a prompt answer was not made. An investigation which was kept secret until to-day was begun and it developed that Collins was a desperate crank. The govenors anxiety was finally worked to a serious pitch by the receipt of a telegram demanding to know if the petitions were being considered. The Logansport authorities arrested Collins Wednesday and placed him in the asylum It now comes to light that he had purchased a revolver and was about to leave for the Capitol to execute his threat. He has also been sending threatening letters to President Cleveland.

A Swindler on Trial.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 16.—In the case of Rev. Frederick Howard. on trial in the Federal court at Jacksonville, Tenn., some very interesting evidence was brought out this morning. The defendent is charged with using the mails for fraudulent purposes. His scheme, was to lead people in various parts of the United States. to believe that they had inherited fortunes in England and to pay him fees to secure the alleged inheritance. The evidence adduced by the Government goes to show that Wm. Lordmoore. of London, Joseph Ledger, and the Rev. Frederick Howard are one and the same person and furthermore that considerable sums have actually been collected under these for disbursement amongst heirs. There have been witnesses in abundance on the case from London and various parts of the country, including people who have been duped by Howard, and clerks from the New York Post Office. Howard forme ly had charge of a Baptist church in Jacksonville but was deposed after a long and sensational trial, in which he was proved to be an imposter, it having been established that he was a young Englishman of bad repute, living in Georgia and calling himself Howell. He was arrested in Chicago a short time ago, but escaped from custody. He afterwards turned up at Jacksonville where he surrendered himself to the authorities. The case will probably consume a weeks more time.

THE DIVORCE PROBLEM.

How it Will Finally Be Settled for the Best Interests of Mismated Couples.

Magazines, periodicals, and even daily newspapers have of late been discussing a subject of great importance, says Rabbi Solomon Schindler in the May Arena. Efforts are being made to bring about the issue of a national, uniform law which shall regulate divorces, and in anticipation of this coming event the matter has been taken up and discussed by the ablest writers of this and other countries. How did the stir come about?

Some thoughtful people had observed that the dockets in the divorce courts have for years been kept full to overflowing, and that no matter how many cases were disposed of still new cases kept on coming. These people formed, therefore, a league or a society with the intention of stopping what they considered an evil, and being of a rational turn of mind made it their first business to obtain statistics. "Figures don't lie," they thought, and they set at once to work with earnestness and diligence to collect figures. When they had them together, neatly rubricated and carefully added up, they found what? That within twenty years, from 1867 to 1887, the number of cases in which it was found necessary to entirely sever marital unions had trebled, not alone in the United States of America, but all over the world. These were bad signs—as they believed—symptoms of a widespread corruption of morals.

The proposed legislation, whatever the wording will be, can be either affirmative or negative. Either divorces are to be entirely prohibited, divorced persons are to be prohibited to remarry, the consummation of marriages is to be submitted to a great deal of red-tape, or the right of divorce is to be granted as heretofore with perhaps only a few restrictions which then, of course, are to be the same all over the United States. There is no third way. The question necessarily turns around the pivotal points—is divorce the right and just thing, or is it wrong and productive of evil?

This very question has courted discussion of late from all possible points of view, from the religious standpoint, from the standpoint of the statesman, from the standpoint of the national economist, and finally from the standpoint of the moralist, and yet no conclusion whatsoever seem to have been reached.

It seems to me, however, that profound conscientious, and well-meaning as the writers of the different articles have been, they have all started from wrong premises, and if I take courage to add my opinions to the list of those expressed by the ablest writers in the land I do so because I shall start from an entirely different point of view.

A crook at the Kansas state fair picked a woman's pocket and found in her purse three samples of dress goods, a recipe for making angel food, a hairpin, two bread tickets, a package of court plaster and a nickel with a hole in it.

Dr. Charcot, the eminent scientist at the head of the Saltpetriere Hospital, Paris, has finished a long series of experiments in hypnotism, and gives it as his opinion that not more than one person in 100,000 is subject to the influence.

Forests occupy 39 per cent of the total area of Sweden, 36 per cent of Russia, 32 of Austria, 28 of Hungary, 25 of Germany, 24 of Norway, 19 of Belgium, 17 of France, 18 of Switzerland, 17 of Spain, 12 of Italy, 4 of Great Britain and Ireland and 19 of the United States.

The most expensive thermometer in this country is in use at the Johns Hopkins University; it is known as Prof. Rowland's thermometer, and is valued at $10,000; it is an absolutely perfect instrument, and the graduations on the glass are so fine that it is necessary to use a microscope to read them.

Not many years ago the abandoned timber lands in Aroostook County, Maine, away up near the British province, were almost worthless for agricultural purposes. Later on Swedes and other industrious foreigners moved in, and now Aroostook County is the greatest potato growing county in New England.

Kansas crops having failed, it becomes necessary to stimulate emigration thither by some new device, and the following has been hit upon: "A Kansas man sunk a shaft on his farm the other day, and in going down 100 feet, it is said, struck two five-foot veins of mineral paint, a ten-foot stratum of brick clay, a twenty-inch vein of coal and a five foot stratum of marble."

A large plum tree growing in a garden in Santa Barbara, Cal., sent a root into an old disused sewer and followed it for some distance. Finally it came to where the sewer was cut off by a stone wall. The root here paused for some time, then went up the wall a foot from the ground, passed through a hole down the other side, where it re-entered the sewer and continued its course.

When people say "calculate" they use a word which goes back to the very infancy of our race and the very beginning of the science of arithmetic. It comes from the Latin calculus, a pebble. When men first began to reckon and to compare numbers they could think of no better way than to lay pebbles along side of one another on the ground, and hence the word for counting.

The Barley Crop.

Barley has been grown heretofore solely for malting for the brewers; and its feeding qualities have been wholly ignored. Yet some years ago this grain was the common food for horses, and when ground into meal was used with waste milk and boiled potatoes for feeding pigs, and made the very best pork. The prejudice against the culture of barley, common among farmers, is, no doubt, due to the necessity for the thorough cultivation, which takes the head and hands more than is agreeable to them. But the times demand a great shaking up of dry bones, and one must put his hand to the plow in earnest if he will succeed in making the farm pay just now, and barley is a good crop to grow for feeding, if not for sale. Good barley brings sixty to seventy cents per bushel in New York, which is fifty per cent more than corn. Fifty bushels per acre may be grown with the right cultivation. The tillage of the land is the main point. Weeds and clods will not do. Clean land, thoroughly mellowed, and in good heart, will produce a full crop, and this is best for the land, as well as for the crop. We need better tillage, and, as there must be an incentive for every good act, so we should choose those crops which force us to till the soil perfectly.

SPORTING BULLETINS.

HOW THE INTELLIGENCE IS ELECTRICALLY TRANSMITTED.

A Machine Free from Complications Which Seems to Fill the Bill—What It Looks Like in Giving the Details of the Game.

A simple method for the automatic bulletining of electrically transmitted intelligence is a problem long sought for by inventors. Instruments have been proposed, and efforts made to apply them commercially, which, in practice, have been found too complicated for practical purposes, too expensive for general adoption, or, from their fine adjustments and other deficiencies, liable to derange them and error in working. The ideal bulletin or indicator system must be reduced to the simplest electrical and mechanical organization. The electrical formula, so to speak, must be reduced to the lowest terms, approaching, as far as possible, the Morse telegraph. It should be free from complications and delicate adjustments, capable of being relayed and repeated over any length of line within a single circuit. We illustrate a system having these qualities to a marked degree. It is the invention of Mr. S. D. Mott, of Passaic, N. J., who has reduced it to practice in an interesting and popular way by the construction of instruments for the indication of races and national games.

The annexed illustration shows a bulletin for the popular game of baseball. On the instrument, or in proximity thereto, is a programme of the day's game; the contestants—in this case Chicago and New York—are printed in columns, say red and blue, here indicated in hatched lines, with corresponding colors indicated upon the dial and through the openings in the dial face.

Two of a Kind.

It was on a Madison avenue car, New York. Three women were standing up, while the six men who had seats were reading their papers or looking into vacancy and pretending not to see the state of affairs. Suddenly the man next to the door looked into the face of one of the females and half rose and said:

"Permit me, madam."

"By no means, sir."

"But I insist."

"But I had rather stand. Indeed, I am stronger than you are. I am the museum girl who lifts 400 pounds with her toes."

"Indeed! But I am the sideshow man who lifts three fat men and a chair."

"And you insist?"

"I do."

She dropped into the seat with a bow of acknowledgment, and he grandly waved his hand and felt for a strap.

NEW SPRING FASHIONS.

AS CONNED DEVOUTLY BY FAIR LENTEN DEVOTEES.

Prayer Book in Hand, We Gaze at the Bright Shop Windows, Where Flowery Hats and Airy Ginghams Bloom Under Glass and Are Not Frost Bitten.

In Lent we say our prayers and buy our cotton gowns. Sometimes, reversing the proceeding, we buy our gowns and pray—the dressmaker to be good to us and them. If you were with us on our quiet little shopping expeditions you would see that we are laying in a store of:

Rough wools very hairy of surface;

Very light-colored peach and apricot cloths, smooth, unpatterned, supple and fine;

White or mignonette wools, sheer enough to pull through finger rings, strewn with tulips or crocuses;

Fine twilled wools plaided in grey and violet.

White India silks, gay with buttercups and violets;

Lavender India silks, dainty with pink cyclamens;

Polka dotted India silks: thousands and hundreds of thousands of them;

Black India silks with small brilliant Pompadour garlands;

Pale blue India pongees, patterned with straggling stems of clover;

White pongees with jonquils starting up from the hem as if one walked in a garden of spring posies;

Cream-colored pongees all adroop with hanging sprays of yellow acacia bloom;

Crinkled crepes vividly alive with the flowers, birds, bees or butterflies of Japan;

Silvery or white challies over which creep vines of purple-blossomed wisteria;

Scotch ginghams with mist-like, dusky grounds, out of which peer dust-colored flowers in low tones as if seen at twilight;

Tartan ginghams and big fancy plaids in pale heliotrope and pink, or pale blue and cream;

Quaint and pretty silk-striped ginghams, at all silk prices.

Jaccard ginghams in old rose or China blue with Marie Antoinette flower patterns;

Sheer white batistes with deep borders of briar roses, hand-worked above hemstitched hems;

Pale gold batistes with borders of valley lilies in white and shaded greens;

Black batistes powdered with scarlet maple keys shading into pinkish greens;

Black batistes with broad inserted stripes of open work embroidery in wheels and flower designs in black and purple.

We are going to catch our summer clouds of drapery with lengths of broad velvet ribbons.

We are going to wear a vast deal of the brilliant dome blue out of doors.

We are going to wear our street skirts long enough to cover up all but the merest suggestion of toe in front, and as much longer than that as our common sense or lack of it, will allow on the fan breadths behind.

We are going, those of us who dare, to wear jackets of glowing, glorious yellow to greet the spring sun in kind.

We are going to wear other jackets of white velvet and polish coats of Roman red and "Moorish tailor coats" and French and Spanish jackets of grey ladies' cloth with many coquetries of silver buttons and red or blue silk linings.

We are going to wear cavalier capes, full and straight with immense collars and high shoulders, these in heliotrope cashmere lined with silk, and with gold and silver cords hanging from the tops of the armholes down over the seams.

We are going to put upon our heads toy toques that are nothing but handfuls of bright flowers.

We are going to plait rushes of lace about the flat hats for brims, and sometimes when we take three crimson roses for a crown, we are going to hide them as we did two years ago under a puff of gauze.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1893.

THE STRIKE ENDED.

The great English strike has reached an end and the men have returned to work at the old rate of wages. Our despatches announce great rejoicing on the part of the miners in consequence of the new phase of the great struggle which has been kept up so long. While the present arrangement is announced as only temporary there is every reason for the hope that it will be permanent. the board of conciliation just organized will begin its duties almost at once and will continue for a year. It is empowered, when necessary to fix the rate of miners wages. This means that in future instead of a resort to strife between the miners and their employers the matters in dispute will be submitted to the board of conciliation when an investigation into the merits of the case will follow. The board will determine what is fair and just for both parties and their decision will have to be accepted. This is what we want in this Province and it is to be hoped that at the next session of the Legislature the Government will introduce a bill which will be capable of being put to practical use.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Mr. W. T. Stead describes what he saw from the car windows on his way to Chicago as follows:—"We passed through a flat, rolling country, whose houses were of frame, whose roads were of ruts, with the wagons now on one side then on the other. No good roadways, save when frozen in winter, and the cattle were scrawny like those in Russia. There were not the houses of stone and the smooth well kept roads of England and continental Europe."

A French physician who has studied the habit of nail-biting carefully and scientifically for some years, announces that the practice, which he dignifies with the name of onychophagy, prevails to a deplorable extent among the school children of Paris. More than one-forth of the boy pupils in the public schools are confirmed nail-biters, among the girls the percentage is larger. The habit, the doctor said, is due to nervousness, and he proposed to cure it by means of hypnotic "suggestions."

Montreal Witness:—In a world where all beneficent forces are at work, there is no room for an idle man. The tendency of the best thought of the time points to a day when Carlyle's daring prophecy will be fulfilled that there will be no place for an idle man on God's earth, and that the human race will agree that the man who does not live by industry lives by stealing. That time is steadily drawing near. The more incessant the emphasis on the nobility of all true work, whether of brain or of hand, the more quickly will dawn the day when toil will come to the universal crown which is its right.

The Rev. Sir John Warren Hayes, of Bearwood, Berkshire, is supposed to be the oldest Freemason in England. The reverend baronet was initiated in 1819, the year the Queen and the Duke of Cambridge were born, and consequently he has been 74 years a member of the Masonic Order. He was made a Grand Chaplain by the late Earl of Zetland in 1844. There are only two brethren living of senior standing as Grand Officers, namely, the Moolvie Mahomed Ismael Khan, who was Senior Grand Warden in 1836, and the Chevalier Bernard Hebeler, who filled the same office in 1839.

The Hyogo (Japan) News of a recent date says: The Tajima life buoy was tested near the American Hatoba on Tuesday afternoon, commencing at 1:30 p.m. The operations of three persons who went into the water in three different ways resulted very successfully. One had a coat and the two other experimenters wore belt-buoys and cushion buoys, carrying an umbrella and a long pole to show the buoyancy of the new apparatus. They all remained in the water for a long while without any effort to float. One of the men carried an umbrella, unfolded it in the water to shade himself from the sun and enjoyed smoking a cigarette; while another one partook of refreshments, lying tranquilly on the water. Afterwards, a scene supposed to represent a shipwreck, was exhibited with success amid the applause of the many foreigners and Japanese who were looking on. We believe that the new buoy invented by Mr. Tajima will be appreciated. It is very portable and the cost moderate.

Mr. Edison is experimenting with a view to reducing the friction between the sides of ships and water. "A ship drags a lot of water with her," he says; for instance, with a vessel going 20 miles an hour, "two feet from her side the water is going 10 miles an hour; four feet away five miles an hour, eight feet away two miles an hour, nine feet away one mile an hour, and so on in diminishing ratio. All this water the vessel is dragging with her. That is what the engine has got to do—not force the ship through the water, but carry the water along." This comes, he tells us, from the fact that the water sticks to the sides of the ship, and Mr. Edison wants to do away with this "sticking." By experiment he has sought "to produce hydrogen by electricity along the sides of the ship, eliminating the salt in the water." He succeeded in a tank and "using acurrent through the sides of the ship, reduced the friction of the water to a minimum." This promised to be "one of the biggest things of the century," but when he tried genuine sea-water instead of salt in fresh water, the invention would not work, "because the ocean contains other things than salt." He claims that if he were able to apply his invention successfully to the Campania, "she could cross easily in four days." In the meantime, he suggests "forcing some cheap oil through the pores of the sides of the ship under the water-line. She would then slip across the ocean on a bed of oil like greased lightning."

Railway Accident.

A cow broke down one of the gates which open from some contiguous property onto the track of the E. & N. R. R. and got out upon the road. A passing train struck the unfortunate animal and threw her into the ditch breaking one of her hind legs. nn the matter being reported to the E. & N. R. R. Co, instructions were at once issued to make every effort to ascertain the owner of the animal so as to have it removed. In the meantime the officials are seeing that the suffering animal is supplied with necessary food and water and otherwise made comfortable which action is very creditable to the Company. People who have animals pasturing in fields whose gates open on the right of way of the road should see that all the fastenings are secure for not only is there danger of killing the animal or animals which might stray upon the track but there is also the more serious chance of wrecking a passenger train and causing the loss of many valuable lives. Very trifling obstacles even small pieces of stones have wrecked trains before this and the exercise of a little caution will do good not harm.

The Poultry Show.

Matters in connection with the show have assumed a definite shape and arrangements have been made to hold it on the 20th, 21st and 22nd December. There has been a general wish on the part of the public, expressed in many ways, to cooperate and make the show a success and credit to the city. One fact may be mentioned and that is the most influential poultry fanciers of Washington and Oregon assured the Nanaimo exhibitors last year that they were anxious that a change of locality should be made and should Nanaimo be chosen they would be only too happy to come in full force and well armed with poultry to meet in friendly rivalry and if possible carry off the honors

The public must understand the Victoria Poultry Club which has been throwing in objections to the annual show being held in Nanaimo is an embryo society of limited members. The B. C. P. D. & P. S. Association is a different club altogether. Those who have thorough-bred fowl in this neighborhood even if they think them faulty would do well to enter them and get them scored and by that means obtain valuable information in selecting stock.

BUSINESS REVIEW OF THE WEEK.

Nanaimo Markets.

Business generally throughout the past week has been steady. While some merchants complain that money is tight and collections difficult others say that their experience is that money is beginning to circulate again and that the commercial aspect is of the most hopeful kind. The prospect of steady mork in the V. C. Companys Works for at least six months namely the winter ones (the most trying in every way of the year) has had no doubt some weight in influencing opinion. With the resumption of work business is expected to pick up strength and set money circulating.

During the past week seven vessels have been entered inwards for cargoes of Wellington and Vancouver Coal Co.'s coal. During the same time five outgoing vessels cleared for San Francisco with 8130 tons of coal consigned as follows:—

FOR SAN FRANCISCO.

Nov. 15th, Hawaiian ss. Montserrat, 849, Blackburn, 1500 tons coal, to J. Rosenfeld & Sons.

Am. ship America, 1,952, Harding, 3,100 tons of coal to Dunsmuir & Sons.

Br. ss. Wellington, 1,267, Salmond, 2,600 tons of coal to Dunsmuir & Sons.

Am. ss. Empire, 526, Jessen, 930 tons of coal to R. D. Chandler.

FOR HONOLULU.

Am. bk. Colusa, 1,129, Backus, 1,800 tons of coal on account of N.V.C. Co.

Besides these shipments the tugs entered with the vessels took away 276 tons for consumption in their towage operations. The following vessels have left San Francisco for Departure Bay, B. F. Cheney, D. F. Sargent, J. E. Potter and Oriole and the Margaret for Union, Comox.

All of the vessels at present under the shutes at the wharves of either company are being despatched as rapidly as the coal can brought on the wharves and dumped into their holds. While, this despatch would to the stranger unacquainted with the trade suggest a good market, such is really not the case. We cannot report any improvement in prices—the receipts of coal in San Francisco being, if anything, greater than the demand. Merchants in that city are looking for wet and cold weather to make a turn in the demand and re-establish fuel to its old market value.

While we have no failures to chronicle nor fresh business enterprises to report of any moment, it is with the most profound regret that we have heard of the permanent shutting down of the East Wellington colliery, the property of R. D. Chandler and associates, of San Francisco. From enquiries made we have learned that on account of unsatisfactory returns from the Colliery for two or three years past the managing owner was equally indifferent as to whether the mine was further worked or shut down. When therefore differences arose between the company and the men the owners immediately telegrafted instructions to close it down. Merchants have nothing but kind words to say of this company. In collection and payment of their debts they were prompt and business like and nothing was so irritating to them than to call for any statement of account and then not have it ready.

As an indication of winter trade we may mention that Mr. W. H. S. Perkins who successfully built up a large business in this city under the partnership of Spencer & Perkins has bought out Mr. A. A. Richardson's interest in the dry goods business and is opening out a well selected stock on the west side of Commercial street in one of Johnston & Co.'s new stores. The knowledge which Mr. Perkins has gained in Nanaimo business circles must be very great and his launching out in the enterprising way in which he is doing must herald better times.

Mrs. M. R. Counter, also a shrewd, clever and level-headed merchant, displays his faith in what is to come by importing and opening out some 15 to 20 cases of fancy goods and platedware for the Xmas holidays. "Yes," said Mr. Counter yesterday, "I feel confident that business will have so far improved in a short time as to enable me to dispose of the largest importation of plated and other fancy goods that has ever entered Nanaimo.

Mr. T. L. Browne, of the Box, contemplates removing his salerooms to the premises lately occupied by A. A. Richardson. This removal is caused by want of room. Mr. Browne is another who, although confessing that there was considerable stringency in the money market, hoped for better times.

Quite a few buildings are being hastened in the finishing in anticipation of winter. Among which may be mentioned Mr. Haslan's new residence on the corner of Wallace street and Comax road, the Presbyterian Church which is much advanced and private residences for Messrs. Pleace, Young, Stanton and Holdenell. Two neat dwellings one for Mr. Irvine on Comox road and another for Mrs. Robinson on Kennedy street are well forward while the building for Wm Bray is finished. The Provincial Jail is about three quarters finished and has just been reofed with slates, while the walls of the Salvation Army Barracks a handsome brick structure almost reached the level of the ceiling of the main hall.

The demand for lumber is dropping off—that for sashes, doors, etc., is better, due to the finishing of many buildings.

Bradstreets Weekly Review.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Bradstreets tomorrow will say: Exports of wheat (flour included) from the U. S. and Canada, both coasts, this week equal 2,645,000 bushels compared with 2,813,000 bushels last week, 3,943,000 bushels in the second week of November 1892 and 5,383,000 bushels in that week of 1891. General trade in Ontario is quiet, and without features, notwithstonding colder weather, which has caused a better feeling in dry goods. Buckwheat is being shipped to the United States freely. In the Province of Quebec, country roads are reported good and farmers are busy with fall plowing. The outlook for retail trade points to improvement although well informed merchants expect heavy stocks at the close of the year will be the rule. The outlook for colder weather in Nova Scotia has stimulated the demand for dry goods, furs and fuel. Collections at Halifax are only fair and the catch during the fishing season has been moderate. Bank clearings at Toronto, Hamilton, Montreal, and Halifax amount to $19,847,000 this week 8 per cent. less than last week and 22 per cent. less than in the same week a year ago.

Dun & Co.'s Weekly Report.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: The decrease in the volume of business through the clearing houses continues about the same and for the past week was 18 per cent. The failures for the week have been 324 in the United States against 205 last year and 36 in Canada against 35 last year. Besides one bank in Ohio and the Thurber failure, there were four of liabilities over $100,000 and sixty-eight other over $5,000. The volume of indebtedness of firms failing in the previous week was $3,727,467, against $3,467,346, the week before, being larger east and south.

A Victorian Lawyer in an Uncomfortable Predicament.

VICTORIA, B.C., Nov. 17.—The office of Barrister Perry Mills was this morning the scene of excitement seldom witnessed in the sacred precincts of Court House square. Robert Morrison, a Cowichan farmer who was recently the defendant in the sensational case of Morrison vs. Morrison for separation and marriage portion under contract, was the aggressive party, Mills as the legal representative of Mrs. Morrison having put the sheriff in possession of Morrison's farm to secure payment of the judgment debt. At the trial Morrison was proved guilty of the most atrocious cruelty and was well roasted therefor by lawyer Mills. In return he challenged Mills to fight and came near being committed for comtempt. This morning he was in a rage over the sheriff's appearance and determined to take it out of Mills. For this purpose he came armed with a whip and chased Mills round and round his office while the frightened clerk wrestled with "Central" over the telephone in an endeavor to secure police assistance. Morrison has also threatened Mills in letters and the latter has concluded patience ceased to be a virtue and will take action immediately.

Walter Sangster Gets Twelve Years.

VANCOUVER, Nov. 17.—Walter Sangster came here some months ago from the eastern states. He was unable to find work, and in a fit of despondency drank heavily. He became crazed with liquor and ran through Chinatown, firing at everyone he met with a revolver. He wounded several Chinamen and killed an Indiad named Tom, deliberately firing a bullet through his head. Sangster pleaded guilty before Mr. Justice Drake to-day, and on account of his youth and previous good behavior was sentenced to 12 years in the penitentiary. The sentence is thought extremely light here.

The Theatre.

The Alvin Joslyn company appeared in the Nanaimo Theatre to a large audience last evening and were well received.

The Bishop in Northfield.

Bishop Perrin will arrive by the noon train to-day and in the course of the afternoon visit Northfield where a reception will be accorded him and an address presented to him by Dr. Walkem on the part of the members of the Church of England in Northfield and East Wellington. Recitations, songs and an address by the Bishop will comprise the evenings entertainment. Tea, coffee, cake and other refreshments will be served as well.

Epworth League.

The Epworth League of Wallace street church will give a social entertainment in the Y. M. C. A. rooms on Thanksgiving hight. Watch for further notice.

Str. Ina.

The Str. Ina cleared for the Fraser river yesterday where she will during the fishing season be used for the purpose of towing boats for the cannery owned by the purchaser Mr. Hinchcliffe.

The First Slating.

The slating of the roof of the New Nanaimo jail is completed. This is the first structure in this vicinity which has had a roof slating. It is said that the Hamilton Powder Works contemplate covering their buildings with the same material.

A Good Idea.

Mr. Dignen, of Gabriola Island, has purchased the steam launch Cecilia from Messrs. Campbell & Foreman. This investment will be of great assistance to the investor as it will enable him to carry his produce to the Nanaimo market. In former times Campbell & Foreman ran a ferry every Friday between Gabriola Island and this city but the traffic was so small that the returns for ferriage did not pay running expenses. Of course the settlers missed the ferry steamer very much but in the face of a direct loss it could not be expected that the owners of the ferry could carry it on.

New Government Buildings.

There are rumors in official quarters that the Provincial Government contemplate placing a sum of money in the estimates at the next session of the Legislature to erect Government Buildings to meet the increasing needs of this important District. These buildings will be fitted up so as to embrace the Courts of Justice and Government offices. Those at present in use by Mr. Bray are far to small for the carrying on of the business of the district and moreover it is especially inconvenient for the Registrar of the Court to have to pack public and legal documents backwards and forwerds from the Government office to the Court Room and back again.

Caledonian Grounds.

Nanaimo having hitherto been sadly in want of a ground on which sports and picnics might be held the Caledonian Club thinking that the venture as a financial scheme would be a success determined upon putting their grounds situated in the Millstream Valley near Haslam's mill, but above the E. and N. R. R. bridge, in a proper condition to allow of their being used for that purpose. Tenders were called for according to certain specifications furnished to the applicant but on these tenders being opened the society considered the bids to be "too high" to justify them in letting out any contract, but they are still determined to carry out their intentions. Thinking what was needed might be much more cheaply constructed by day labor, the society at once put a gang of men to work grading and draining their property. It is now sometime since the work has started and the next week will probably see the completion of the work. The grading of a good cinder bicycle track is being laid out and drains to surround the northern and western portions of the ground put in. These with two cross drains, will it is believed, carry off all the current and surface water. It is the intention of the society to put the grounds in first class order, so that in future any sports in connection with any event or society may be carried out on a well ordered ground instead of in the public streets as herstofore.

Posters—large or small—at THE DAILY TELEGRAM.

Positively Deny the Rumor.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 18.—A London stock exchange rumor that the United States had sent over an agent to negotiate a gold loan is regarded as simply an echo of the inaccurate statements recently published in New York that Sub-Treasurer Jordan has gone abroad for that purpose. Treasury officials assert positively that no agent has been sent abroad by the United States to enter upon a negotiation for a gold loan. No such arrangement, even if contemplated, could be carried to completion before a meeting of Congress which will be in regular session on December 4th.

The Behring Sea Case.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 17.—Senator Morgan, who was one of the arbitrators on the part of the United States in the Behring Sea matters, is utilizing the congressional recess to put the findings which were promulgated last summer, together with the decisions of the several arbitrators, and which will be printed in Paris and distributed thence by agents of the Governments of the United States and Great Britain on the 1st of January next. In connection with this matter, naturally Senator Morgan has been in conference with Secretary Gresham, and yesterday was with him at the State Department from 4 o'clock till 5. It was this interview which gave rise to the reports printed today, that while the Department of State in Washington is arranging to secure the formal acceptance by the governments of Russia, China, Japan and Korea of the terms of the findings of the tribunal so far as the position of these countries is concerned, with a view to making the regulations as effective as possible, the regulations may be enforced either by executive order or legislation. The latter method will probably be adopted. In the meantime, however, a proclamation by the President and of the British consul may be made to arry out the proposals of the tribunal. The modus vivendi last agreed upon between the U. S. and Great Britain, remains in force until the Secretary has requested the senator to call and consult about the Hawaiin matter. As a matter of fact Hawaii was not referred to except in the most casual and incidental way. No questions of the President's policy or of the instructions given in Hawaiian matters was raised Negotiations are progressing between the two governments with a view to putting into effect the regulations governing the protection and killing of seals, recommended by the tribunal of arbitration Mr. Bayard's labors with Lord Roseberry, on this point in London, terminated by a joint action of parties, but it applies only to the Behring Sea, and while waiting for concurrent legislative actions, its provisions it is thought might properly be extended to the surface over which a closed period is to be maintained by executive order, part of the year, by the terms of the decision of the tribunal.

Saw a Train Coming.

The train was passing over a high trestle work, on an Ohio railroad, when a man who had been smoking his cigar in silence suddenly observed:

"Ah! gentlemen, but I have cause to remember this spot all my life."

"Anything happen to you here?" asked one of the quartet.

"Indeed, something happened. It was two years ago this month. I was visiting my aunt in that hamlet at the other end. One day I wanted to come over to the big stone quarry, a quarter of a mile further on. It was a near cut to take the track, and so I took it."

"And met a train!" exclaimed a voice.

"Yes, I had reached the centre of the trestle, which is ninety-five feet above the cruel rocks, when I heard the whistle of a locomotive, and a moment later caught sight of a freight train rounding the curve. There was only one possible way of escape."

"And you—you——"

"I seized it. Though considerably rattled I did not lose my presence of mind. Dropping down between the crosspieces I swung clear with my feet and hung on with my hands. You can judge of a man's feelings with almost a hundred feet of space between his feet and a great mass of jagged rock."

"Great Scots! How long did you hang there?"

"About ten minutes."

"But did it take the train that long to pass over you?"

"Oh, no."

"Then how was it?"

"Why the train side-tracked at the other end, you see, and I hung on until one of the brakesmen walked out to me and said if I wasn't in the circus business to stay I'd better get out of that."

"But I don't exactly see."

"Oh, there is nothing to see. I got off the bridge all right, with three hours to spare before another train came along. I was very much obliged to the brakesman—very much I might have hung there all day, you know."

A Practical Astronomy Lesson.

One chilly evening the sitting-room in which my pupils and I sat was warmed by a grate fire. Shaking out some small live coals, I bade the boy, observe which of them turned black soonest. They were quick to see that the smallest did, but they were unable to tell why. They were reminded of the rule they had committed to paper, but to no purpose, until I broke a large glowing coal into a score of fragments which became black almost at once. Then one of them cried, "Why, smashing that coal gave it more surface." This young fellow was studying the elements af astronomy at school, so I had him give us some account of how the planets differ from one another in size; how the moon compares with the earth in mass, and how vastly larger than any of its worlds in the sun. Explaining to him the theory of the solar system's fiery origin. I shall not soon forget his keen delight—in which the others presently shared—when it burst upon him that because the moon is much smaller than the earth it must be much colder; that, indeed, it is like a small cinder compared with a large one. It is easy to advance from this to understanding why Jupiter, with eleven times the diameter of the earth, still glows faintly in the sky; and then to note that the sun pours out its wealth of heat and light because the immensity of its bulk has, comparatively speaking, so little surface to radiate from. —George Iles, in Popular Science Monthly.

An Electrical Street Sign.

A most useful electrical street sign, says the Sun, has come into use in England. A light brass framework is fitted with opaque glass bearing the signs desired, the name of a firm, a railway station, or a theatre, as the case may be. These tablets are visible by day as well as by night, and as the obstruction to light is inappreciable, they are becoming as popular as effective.

She Ran Away In a Dragoon's Dress.

A young woman created a sensation in the Rue de la Galete, Paris, the other night by appearing in the uniform of an officer of dragoons. She went into a restaurant and ordered a dish of crayfish, but a wary policeman, who watched her movements, followed her as she was leaving the refreshment establishment and arrested her. In the meantime, the officer whose uniform the gay girl had donned dressed himself in mufti and went out to look for his missing female friend who had been helping him to keep his birthday. He found her in the police station, whence she was only released this morning after having relinquished previously her military habiliments and resumed her own costume.

Only a Seeming Extravagance: Wife—I've just found a receipted hatter's bill in your pocket. I thought you said you didn't feel able to buy yourself a new silk hat this fall? Husband—No indeed; that was one I bought to pay a bet with.—Time.

TO be frightened to death not instantly, but by long hours of terrible suspense—the blood freezing, the brain maddening, the heart stopping—can man or demon devise a death more horrible?

Lou and Nora Mix, aged 16 and 18, respectively, in their home on Michigan avenue, at 11 o'clock Friday evening, hastily undressed without a light and went to bed. For five minutes they talked merrily. But suddenly conversation was hushed. They lay shuddering in each other's arms, their heads buried in the blankets, their hearts fluttering, their teeth chattering. Protruding from under the bed had appeared a man's boot.

By and by the girls could whisper faintly.

"See if the window is open," panted Nora.

"I can't!" gasped Lou.

Nora peered out just enough to see that the window was partly raised. This only confirmed their fears. The man under the bed was a burglar, waiting for them to sleep. They dared not scream, lest he murder them. Their parents, sleeping down-stairs, if aroused might be killed. The girls' only hope was to let the burglar know they were awake, yet not inform him they suspected his presence.

"Revolver under your pillow?" asked Nora.

"Yes."

"So is mine."

This, said aloud, was for the burglar. They had no firearms. At sight of a pistol the girls would have fainted.

"Chloroform!" whispered Lou. Both thought they detected the odor of that drug. Was he thus to make them insensible, murder them? They had read of such deaths. The fatal influence was coming over them, a trembling, a numbness, with noises like drum beats in the air.

The clock struck 12. The man under the bed moved.

Then Lou in a husky whisper said:

"Quick! Let him know we are awake."

Uncovering her head, Nora in trembling tones hummed a song learned in childhood. The burglar became silent. The odor of chloroform seemed abating.

The girls again whispered, but the more they talked the more frightened they became. They recalled the story of the kissing burglar, who, finding a young woman alone in bed, had deliberately kissed her. They remembered Mrs. Malone, who was so frightened by a burglar that in the one hour of terror her hair turned white. Madly now rushed such thoughts as come to the dying. Worthless, odious seemed their gay life. All of a sudden Nora stealthily reached to the dresser at the head of the bed, put a book under her pillow, and tore a card into fragments. The book was the bible; the card an invitation to a fashionable ball. Then came half an hour of silence dreadful, appalling.

The clock struck 1. The man under the bed moved.

It was Lou's turn to silence him. Throwing the blankets from her head, she with great difficulty quoted a verse of scripture. She fancied her heart throbs shook the bed.

The whispering was resumed. Nora unwisely mentioned an old murder of which she had read. The crime, or rather series of crimes, had been committed in the far west. In a tavern a bed had been so constructed that in it one could lie comfortably only on one's left side. Concealed under the bed was the murderer. The unfortunate traveler asleep, there was thrust up through the bed and into his heart a long, slender needle. A groan and all was over. The small wound escaped notice. Not until many had become victims was murder suspected. The weird, blood-curdling story nearly made the girls frantic. They imagined such needles piercing their bed. Not for the world would they lie on the left side. Their arms tightened around each other's necks.

The clock struck 2. The man under the bed moved.

At this instant they were startled by a noise in a room above. It was their father descending the stairs. He would be killed. They recalled the Snell murder. If they warned him they might all be killed. Fortunately the father had no light. He approached the sitting-room stove, opened the door, put in some coal, then, looking toward the girls' room, said:

"Asleep?"

The sisters had been holding their breath, expecting every instant a bullet from under the bed would begin the butchery by killing the father. Lou's hands were pressed to her ears to deaden the report of the pistol. But Nora, her tongue parched, stammered in reply one word:

"Almost."

He slowly returned to bed, they daring to give him no hint of the danger. Then came again the oppressive silence.

All of a sudden slow, measured footsteps a block away were heard. It was a patrolman approaching. He saw the open window, came up, rapped lightly.

"What is it?" asked Nora.

"Window up. Anything wrong?"

The man under the bed moved. Even then the girls were afraid to betray the intruder lest he shoot them before he could be overpowered.

"No," replied Nora, "we want fresh air."

The officer walked away. All hope seemed gone. They again whispered. Suddenly Nora said:

"I can not sleep without luncheon."

"Nor I," said Lou.

They stood on the bed. Desperate, frenzied, they would risk it. Through the partly opened window came a ray of moonlight resting for an instant on their mother's portrait on the wall. Then all was darkness. Under the bed a revolver clicked. Dreadful was the suspense, wondering where the little piece of lead would strike, stinging, cutting, tearing through vein and nerve, tissue and bone. Too late, however, to change their plans. Holding the draperies close to their trembling forms, they bounded from bed, out of the room, closing the door. Lou fainted.

There was a noise at the open window. The clock struck 3. The man under the bed had moved.—Chicago Times.

The Modern Version.

Crosse (wrathfully)—I wonder who could have sent me this abominable valentine.

Blackwell—A friend; most likely.

Crosse—Why a friend?

Blackwell—Because "a friend should bare a friend's infirmities."

A Dubious Compliment.

She—I'm so glad you have come!

He—Are you really?

She—Yes; for if you had not, there would have been thirteen at the table.

A new, delicious, and durable scent—a boquet of odors-retailed at $2 an ounce. Alas for the poor but refined public.

There is a plethora of governesses, special instructors and teachers among us whose badges bear this melancholy inscription: "Not Wanted."

A thirty-minute walk in the open air every day will do more for physical beauty and bodily health than a score of doctors and an army of complexion artists.

Blue is the Chinese mourning color. When you see a Chinaman wearing a blue coat or with blue braid plaited in his queue, you may take for granted that some relative or dear friend is dead.

Black velvet ribbon strings an inch or more in width are set at the back of round hats and toque bonnets and are crossed under the chin, then tied or hooked at the back of the neck in a small bow with short ends.

It will brighten a gloomy room and make the bath very inviting to paint the inside of the tub white. As a precaution against blistering turn on the cold water before filling for a hot bath. Dark hallways and staircases may be brightened in the same way. If carpeted paint the woodwork and a margin of the floor white.

Mrs. Augusta C. Rosenbaum, who keeps a little delicatessen shop in Essex street, has the proud distinction of being the best sausage maker in the State of New York. She can make a bologna chain of three hundred links any day in the week or every day in the week, if there is a tournament, conclave or picnicing party in town.

Miss Blanche Best, of Meadville, Conn., who won the Harvard University prize in the Sargent class, as the most perfect type of physical beauty in the country, is addicted to decollete gowns, long sleeved gloves and bangs. She wears tights instead of petticoats and her ideal gown is the demi-trained princess. Miss Best is twenty-two years old, weighs 130, and stands 5 feet in her stockings.

Mrs. Frank Leslie is going on a lecture tour. Her course is planned, the "talks" are prettily typed and bound in vellum and pink and silver cords, and she has a new frock and gloves and aigrette for each subject. The 17th of this month she will open the lecture course in Englewood, Ill., for the Rev. Florence E. Kellock's Acorn Club, with "The Queens of Society." Woman's Worth," "Self Help," social, ethical, and physical culture are among her themes.

The preparations of cocoa and chocolate made in France are more numerous than those usually made in England or the United States: they comprise vanilla chocolate, milk chocolate, chocolate bonbons, chocolate papiliotes, chocolate crackers, chocolate pastilles, chocolate with taraxacum or with sarsaparilla, chocolate with tar—in short, there is no end to the list; for once admit the principle of mixing cocoa with vegetable infusions, or decoctions, or essences, and the variety becomes interminable.

Mme. Maria Tschebrivoka, whose recent letter to the Czar caused her banishment to Siberia, is fifty years of age. Her life has been more important than conspicuous. Twenty-two years ago she published a book on Roman history and literature, but before the letter in question she had not published a line which even the Russian censors would object to. She was not a revolutionist, nor is she now. With anarchism, nihilism, "red" politics of any sort, she neither had nor has any sympathy whatever. What has got Maria Tschebrivoka into trouble is not politics, but her candid, outspoken warnings to the Czar, her assertion that in "educated and official society the adoration of the Czar has died out," and that "the government which rules over one hundred millions is afraid even of children." This is an allusion to the frequent imprisonment of children of fourteen or fifteen years of age. The heroines of the French revolution read Plutarch. the unique heroine of modern Russia derived much of her inspiration from her studies of the characters of the American revolution. Mme. Tschebrivoka knows English literature and American history thoroughly.

Fashion Notes.

Later on in the season we shall meet with more than one pretty white throat encircled by a ruff of full-blown roses in every shade known in the rose kingdom, and a good many that are not. With this coming pretty fancy we find the boa and collarette of poppies introduction. These are charming rivals. At a little distance away they look not unlike the ostrich feather boas, being made of soft, silken petals and closely sewed together. For the walking costume black or a tone to harmonize with the gown will be used, and for evening wear amber, blush pink, or cream white will be the correct thing. As velvet or satin petals form the roses and the thinnest silk the poppies the effect is signally soft and becoming to the face which they frame.

The celebrated Russian jacket is becoming to every one, hence its legitimate success. It is particularly tapering in effect, for the jacket itself is of dark velvet, usually mousse, and the yoke, sleeves, and facing—down in front—are of heavy damask ton sur ton. No trimming is required, and either a plume or fur boa is suitable. White or chamois cloth will be used for jackets, tight-fitting behind and straight and double-breasted in front. Either is hemmed with astrakhan, with collar of the same, and heavy black passementerie bandebourgs.

The new sealskin jacket is in Medici shape, the flaring collar extending high enough up at the back thoroughly to cover the nape of the neck. The sleeves are high and puffed on the shoulders. It is fitted close to the figure at the back and cut quite short, while the loose front is quite long and is sloped gradually on the edge to meet the back. All fur jackets this coming season are to be extremely plain without trimmings or visible buttons of any kind, but, as heretofore, buttoned under a fly.

Real dreadnaught coats for rough wear and weather are made of Harris cloth, with its peaty odor and plaited weave. Nothing turns a sea mist as they do, and the only effect the dampness has on them is to bring out yet more plainly their peculiar odor, suggestive of the land of heather and grouse. It is plaited in tans and browns, or a mixture in which pale blue, excellent fawn, and dull, rich red appears, and wears as only homespun can be made to wear.

What is a Pacer;

What is the pacer? is the question that just now is being dicussed freely by many writers in the columns of the American sporting press. Hank Comstock, who discusses intelligently every subject he tackles, is evidently not very clear in his own mind on the subject. He alludes to a statement made by Mr. L. Broadhead, of Woodburn Farm, to the effect that in time the breeding of trotter upon trotter was in danger of converting trotting stock into pacing stock unless some counteracting influence was used, and he suggested that crossing in thoroughbred blood would be likely to check the pacing tendency. We will now direct Mr. Comstock's attention to a sire in whose progeny the pacing instinct seems to be about as strong as the trotting one. The horse we allude to is Old Clear Grit, new dead, and his breeding certainly does not bear out Mr. Broadhead's suggestion to use thoroughbred blood to check the pacing tendency. Clear Grit was by imp Lapidist, thoroughbred, out of a mare said to be by Cock of the Rock, that was also half thoroughbred, and of the six of his representatives in the 30 list three of them are pacers.

Milk For Fowls.

Since milk is the only article of food known to contain within itself all the elements necessary to the prefection of growth and vigor in an animal, it is not strange that it should be found to be one of the very best egg producing materials that can be supplied to poultry. Given two flocks of fowls, and treatment, location and original stock being equal in all respects save one, says The Poultry World, and it will be found that those having skimmed milk as a portion of their daily food or drink will give more eggs weekly and for a longer term of weeks than those whose treatment is exactly the same with this single exception.

Paid Off in His Own Coin.

A remarkable case of "diamond cut diamond" occurred in Boston recently, not far from the Providence railroad station. A druggist had fitted up a neat corner store and had established at once a fine trade. One day another druggist entered his store and said: "I want to buy you out. How much will you take?" "I do not want to sell," was the reply. "I expected that answer," said the encroaching person. "and I am prepared for it. Now, if you don't sell out to me I will open a drug store in opposition on the opposite corners. How much will you take?" The druggist, offended at this species of browbeating, said he would sleep on it and report the next morning. At the appointed hour the aspirant was in the store and a large price was named. The bargain was bound. The druggist who had been thus ousted from a corner which he had fitted up with a view to years of peace and profit, sought the owners of the opposite corner which had been held out to him as a threat, secured from them a long lease, worked night and day and now has a drug store in which any community might take satisfaction and repose confidence. What is more, he is doing a better business than he did in the former locality.—[Boston Saturday Evening Gazette.

Knew Him Well.

Miss Van Dash—Ha you met Count Eusterbee?

De Blank—Ah, yes; he was my butler for some time.—Munsey's Weekly.

Twice-Told Tales.

A gentleman possessed of a luxurian growth of bright red hair met one day Deacon——of Lynn, Mass., who had lost nearly all the natural covering of his head but who made up in quicknesss of retort for his physical deficiency. It was a warm day and as the deacon, in conversation with his acquaintance, removed his hat to wipe his bald and perspiring head, the red-headed man asked: "Where were you, deacon, when the hair was given out?" "Oh, I was on hand," quickly retorted the deacon, "and they offered me that red hair, but I wouldn't take it."

* * *

One day an unmarried lady of Sharon, Conn., called at the house of a friend and was asked by the latter's inquisitive little son if she had any little girls. "No," was of course the answer.

"Any little boys?" the child continued.

"No, dear," the lady replied.

The boy eyed the blushing lady for a moment and exclaimed: "Well, what are yours then?"

A Sentimental Whale.

A letter from Adelaide, Australia, to the Pall Mall Gazette, says that July 17 while Capt. Hepworth, R. N. R., of the steamship Port Adelaide, was taking his sights, he noticed a large sperm whale alongside, so close that his spouting wet the deck. The creature had evidently lost his "school," and mistaken the ship for one of his own species. He remained with it for four days and nights, and traveled 890 nautical or 1023 statue miles without a rest, and as far as one could tell, without food. He was never more than 79 yards away, and for the most part close against the ship, under quarter, where the draught made swimming easier for him. The length of the animal was about 47 feet. The first day he was very lively, diving frequently beneath the ship's bottom, on one occasion scratching himself severely. After that he kept close alongside like a tired Newfoundland dog.

A Michigan hunter attempted to use his gun for a cane. He will neither hunt nor walk for some time to come, although the doctors expect to save his life.

An Actress' Ideas.

Madeline Merli will be seen in Nanaimo on next Friday evening in a new play entitled "The Story of a Kiss." It is an adaptation from the French of Emile Zola, and will afford Miss Merli an opportunity for really good acting. It is an entirely different play from "Frou-Frou," which Miss Merli presented here last season. It is intensely interesting and a novelty, being decidedly on the realistic order. It is a bit of real life vividly portrayed, the aim being not to preduce stage effect, but to produce life, nature and truth. Miss Merli was almost afraid to carry out her ideas last season, regarding realism, thinking that only id the largest cities of America were they educated to that point, but she claims that she has met with as much intelligence in the smaller cities among the better classes as in the larger ones, and that they are just as quick to recognile truth and nature when portrayed in public as in some of the greatest cities. This has led Miss Merli to produce Emile Zola's play in her one night stands instead of reserving it for her city dates as was at first intended.

Will Lecture.

S. H. Davis will give a temperance lecture in the Good Templars' Hall this evening at 8 o'clock. 8-11-1t

Skating.

The weather far the past few days has been cold and the thermometer ranging down about the freezing point. In the Mountain district yesterday ice formed within the shade. Where the sun was shining a moisture collected upon the already formed ice. The swamp near East Wellington is in splendid order to take should the weather prove cold enough, and enjoyable skating would be the result.

Katie Putnum.

Will appear at the Opera House Tuesday Nov. 21st supported by her excellent company in her now play, "The Little Maverick." The play is a western satire on the prejudices of caste and is well calculated to please a western audience. The hardy freshness and border nobility of Texas are aptly contrasted with the aristocracy of Europe. When a titled lady, for instrnce, suggests that an American girl is unworthy of her son's hand, because the girl is not sufficiently cultured, and because the son is the "product of centuries," the Little Maverick responds that "we grow fatter in America." The plot is a catchy one and the scenes skip from New York to Ireland and from shere back to a Texas ranche. The play has plenty of comedy to offset the pathos and the audience is dismissed in the best of humor.
