WILLIAM AND BISMARCK

THE EMPEROR RETURNS BISMARCK'S VISIT.

William Extends His Hand—Bismarck Kisses the Imperial Digits The Emperor Embraces Bismarck and Kisses Him Twice They Dine Together and Toast Each Other Evans the Outlaw Finally Captured—Americans Battling in Central America—The Home Secretary Speaks on Anarchy in London.

BERLIN, Feb. 19.—Emperor William today returned the visit Bismarck made His Majesty at Berlin. He was accompanied by a suite of five officers, when he proceeded to the Lehrte railway station where the imperial train was in waiting to convey them to Friedrichsrhue. On the way to the station the people who knew the Emperor's destination cheered him heartily. At Friedrichsruhe extensive preparations had been made to welcome the Emperor. The members of several veteran societies had volunteered their services as a guard of honor and to guard the approaches to the station. Special trains ran from Hamburg and other places to accommodate the crowds that desired to be present at Friedrichsrhue, when the Emperor arrived. By the time the Imperial train had started from Berlin, thousands of persons were in the vicinity of the Friedrichsruhe station, all congratulating themselves and the country upon the reconciliation between the Emperor and the old ex chancellor. The crowd was not allowed to approach too close to the station, the guards keeping a wide space open around it Prince Bismarck, Dr. Schweninger and Dr. Chrysander awaited at the station the coming of the Emperor. When the Imperial train stopped, His Majesty, who was attired in a naval uniform, sprang from the platform. Prince Bismarck, taking the hand of the Emperor extended to him, bowed and kissed it. The party immediately proceeded to the Prince's residence where Princess Bismarck, who was in the main hall, warmly welcomed his majesty Neither Count Herbert, nor Count William Bismarck was present. Emperor William was in high spirits, when he reached Friedrichsrhue. He stood in one of the windows of the train as it entered the station and stepped out quickly to receive the greetings of the prince's party. After Bismarck kissed his hand, the Emperor embraced him and kissed him twice. Bismarck looked cheerful and fairly strong. He expressed his disapproval of the police efforts to push back the crowd, and remarked to two or three of the zealous officers, "if these persons wish to see, let them see as much as possible."

The dinner in Prince Bismarck's castle at Freidrichsrhue was informal. After the eleven courses had been served the Prince proposed the toast to the Emperor, who responded cordially. Each spoke only a few words. The park round the castle was illuminated. One device of colored gas lamps, showed "Wilhelm and Bismarck." His majesty was so much pleased with this combination of names, that he called Bismarck to the window to direct his attention to it. All the public buildings at Freirichsruhe are decorated with flags and colored lights. The railway station and postoffice are hung with fancy lanterns and colors. Throughout the Emperor's stay at the castle, two Grenadiers, whom he took with him from Berlin, were posted at the park gate as a guard of honor to the Prince. After dinner the Emperor called them to the dining room, and explained to Bismarck the improvement he had made recently in their uniforms. The Imperial party, accompanied by Bismarck, left the castle at 9:30 o'clock. A cheering crowd awaited them near the station. The firemen, who had been drawn up to keep back the spectators, were unable to hold them back. The people broke through the lines and thronged the roadway close to the carriage. The Emperor and Chancellor smiled repeatedly in response to the constant cheering. The Imperial train arrived in Hamburg an hour later. Thousands filled the streets near the station and all the houses in the neighborhood were ablaze with electric lights. The train stopped but a few minutes and nobody alighted. While it was at the station the crowd cheered incessantly for the Emperor and Bismarck.

Asquith on Anarchists.

LONDON, Feb. 19.—In the House of Commons to-day, Mr. Herbert Asquith, the Home Secretary, in reply to questions on the subject of anarchists, said that in most European nations their executive possessed power to expel persons, that was not given under the constitution of England. The government had no reason to change the law of Great Britain, which was sufficient for her own protection, and for the due performance of her duties. The government, Mr. Asquith further said, was anxious to cooperate in practical measures dealing with anarchists and all similar societies. International efforts may be most effectively taken through the extension of the power of experts and more constant interchange of information and combined action between the government and police authorities of the different nations. Mr. Asquith's remarks were greeted with cheers.

Evans, the Outlaw, Captured.

VISALIA, Cal., Feb. 19.—Evans and Morrell were surrounded in their house. Their capture is now only a question of a few hours. Men have been there since daylight. Since that time the house has been completely surrounded and escape is impossible. At 9:15 a.m. a messenger was sent to the house with a note from the sheriff advising them to surrender, to save life, as their capture was a certainty. They have detained the messenger as hostage. After waiting one hour for the messenger who was sent in with the note to Evans and Morrell asking for their surrender, it became evident that he was held as a hostage and the posse closed up again waiting for further developments. At 10 o'clock Evans sent a messenger with a note to Sheriff Kay asking him to come into the house for conversation.

[Later.] About 1 o'clock this afternoon, Kay waited for the appearance of Beeson who went into the cabin with the message. He came out at last with a note which reads as follows: "Sheriff come to the house without guns and we will be without arms. Want to talk with you." Signed to Sheriff from Evans. After an exchange of notes between Evans and Sheriff Kay, the captives finally agreed to come out, if the officers would be instructed not to shoot. At 1:45 p.m. the door of Evan's cabin opened and Morrell appeared on the porch and held up his hand followed after a few words, by Evans, without arms. The sheriff and guard then advanced and shook hands with Evans. They were then driven into the jail. When the messenger rapped at the door of the cabin, Evans appeared with a gun in his hand and jerked him into the cabin, immediately slamming and locking the door. Beeson told him the whole country was armed and hundreds of men were hunting for him, being concealed behind fences and so forth. He told Evans that it was impossible to escape. Finally Evans concluded it would be impossible to escape and making a virtue of necessity, surrendered. Evans looks very thin and pale, as though he had exerienced a severe spell of sickness. There is a great deal of rejoicing here over the capture, as many persons had reasons to fear his vengance. There was a fear that some valuable lives would have been lost before he was captured. He is now however lodged in jail, and it is safe to say will not be given an opportunity to escape again. The bandits were evidently more afraid of the crowd than the officers. They feared the neighbors but violence was not even hinted at.

LATER.—When Sheriff Kay and Undersheriff Hall walked up to Evans' front gate, leaving their Winchesters behind, Evans at once stepped out with Morrell. Evans spoke quite pleasantly to them and invited them in. Chris was bareheaded, but Morrell had on a cowboy hat. Kay at once stepped up to the porch and shook hands with Evans. Chris then looked across the street and noticed some of his old friends, Marshal Gard among them, and laughingly called out: "What are you doing out there, boys, with your guns? Come in." Evans was the coolest man in the crowd. Not a nerve twitched, not a quiver of his voice could be noticed. They were searched. Evans kissed his little boys good-bye and told them to come to the jail and see him. A dense crowd had gathered at the front gate by this time, and the officers had difficulty in making their way to the delivery wagon which was passing. They were put aboard it and safely lodged in jail. Evans in an interview with an agent of the United Press says they arrived last night utterly fagged out, having been on the move almost continuously and exposed to stormy weather. He is very reticent as to their location since the discovery of their camp near Camp Badger and their unceremonious exit from it. He says that during last night he several times thought he heard parties creeping among weeds around his house, but they were only a few and he did not care much. However, at daybreak this morning he saw that he was completely surrounded and the country alive with deputy sheriffs. He then concluded that it was impossible to escape. He states that during the last few weeks he could have killed several deputies, but some had been old friends and he did not want to kill them, so long as he could avoid it. He laughs and jokes with visitors and seems the least concerned of any one.

Americans on the Battle Field.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—The steamship Miranda, arrived here to day from Blue Fields, Greytown and other Central American ports and brings further warlike news from Nicaragua. Mr. James Rankine, agent of the Miranda was a passenger on the vessel and spoke of the events down there. He said several battles had recently occurred between the troops of Honduras and Nicaragua. Two days before the steamer left Greytown, Mr. Rankine, heard of a battle that took place at Cape Gracias on the river Wauko that divides the two countries. He did not know the number of troops engaged, but the battle was said to be a hot one for a Central American fight. "Only four were killed," he added, but one of the killed was Lieut. Strong, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who was fighting for the Nicaraguans. He was leading a company in a charge against an ambushed body of Hondurain soldiers when shot down. Mr. Rankine said there was quite a number of Americans among the Nicaraguan troops and they were noted for their energy and dash. The Miranda carried 170 Nicaraguan soldiers from Greytown to Blue Fields, the Capitol of the Musquito country. He did not know the Government's object in ordering troops there, but understood that Great Britain had withdrawn from the protectorate a short time ago. The soldiers carried by the Miranda were under command of a colonel and several captains. They were mostly boys and were poorly armed. In the battle at Cape Gracias, the Hondurians were defeated and driven into the interior.

Sent to the Reichstag.

BERLIN, Feb. 19.—The Bundesrath sent the Russian commercial treaty to the Reichstag to-day.

THE CITY COUNCIL.

At the City Council last night the following members were present: Mayor Quennell, presiding, Aldermen Nightingale, Cocking, Wilkes, Morrison, Craig, Churchill, Wilson, Pleace and Dobeson.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted as read.

Mayor Quennell read to the Council a rule in connection with the privileges accorded to members regarding the order of speaking, and the necessity of getting, in certain cases, permission from the Council to proceed with particular matters.

Ald. Nightingale moved that every member of the Council should have a copy. They were accordingly distributed to the Council by the city clerk.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A letter was read from Mr. Mainwaring and others in connection with a sidewalk on the Victoria road, to come up for discussion.

A letter from Mr. R. Muir and others in connection with a sidewalk on the Victoria road. Deferred for discussion.

A letter in connection with a crossing on Commercial street from Messrs. Simpson & and Sehl. They offered to pay for lumber for same. Considerable discussion arose on this communication and after the offer and its object had been explained it was moved as received. Crossing to be laid.

Communication from A. R. Johnston and others asking for a sidewalk onChapel street. Received and moved that a 4 inch plank sidewalk be laid to Fosters.

Ald. Cocking moved an amendment, that the matter be referred to the Street Committee for report.

Ald. Wilson seconded the amendment. The original motion was carried, to put the sidewalk down.

Accounts read from A. Haslam for $141.-64. Received. Referred to Financial Committee to be paid if found correct. Carried.

Ald. Nightingale spoke in connection with work done and suggested that a committee be appointed to interview Mr. Robins as regards his intentions in connection with what course he would follow when the filling in of the ravine had reached the Commercial bridge. The bridge at the present time was really unsafe.

Ald Morrison said if Mr. Robins intended to fill the bottom up it could be temporarily propped as before, but otherwise a new bridge was required. At present portions of the supports were rotting.

Ald. Nightingale suggested that the bridge be repaired with four inch planks and other really needful alterations be made.

The Street Committee's report was received and deferred for discussion.

The road foreman's report was read. The work reported being sidewalk building, hauling logs, teaming, grading, etc. Received and filed.

NEW BUSINESS.

The Victoria road communications were re-discussed, the argument used by the first petition being that there were three houses on the upper side to one on the lower side.

Ald. Nightingale spoke in favor of a sidewalk on the upper side with crossings to church and schools. He moved that the question be decided by the vote of the majority of property holders on the two sides.

Ald. Cocking moved that the sidewalk be laid on the lower side of Victoria road.

Ald. Craig seconded.

Ald. Nightingale moved as an amendment that the sidewalk be laid on the upper side.

Ald. Wilson seconded.

Ald. Cocking judged from the petitions that the property holders were about equal on both sides. He gave his reasons for favoring the lower side as the best location for the proposed sidewalk.

Ald. Wilson was sorry to have to disagree with Ald. Cocking in this matter, and he deprecated ward politics being introduced in the meeting. He hoped that eventually the city would elect the members and there would be no separate wards. He knew there were not as many residents on the lower side of Victoria road as on the upper side and he believed that several of the signers of the petition were not holders of property on the street at all. Ald. Wilson gave detailed explanation of how the houses were supplied with sidewalks. There were 5 or 7 houses on Hecate street, which if there was a sidewalk placed on the upper side would benefit, besides the 25 on Victoria road. He believed no attention should be paid to the application for sidewalks passing vacant lots.

Ald. Craig did not agree with Ald. Wilson, and considered that as taxes were paid for vacant lots, the taxpayers should receive as much attenion to their property as others. He knew that some of the residents on the upper side did not wish the sidewalk on that side, and believed that a pedestrian preferred not having to cross a road too much when walking in any particular direction.

Ald. Dobeson argued in favor of the sidewalk being on the high side of the street.

Ald Nightingale also spoke in favor of a sidewalk on the high side as the other side would require stilts and be a great expense in constructed.

Motion: That the sidewalk be laid on the lower side of Victoria road.—For, 5; against, 3. Motion carried.

Ald Wilson drew attention to Milton street requiring a sidewalk between Victoria street and some distance up to the rock. He had heard a great many complaints on the matter from pedestrians, and asked that it be referred to the street committee to examine and report.

Ald. Nightingale referred to the actions of the old Council and work recommended by them. He advised that the work be attended to in connection with filling up in front of the Salvation Army barracks, and the placing of a sidewalk in front of the building. Seconded.

Ald. Dobeson moved as an amendment that an approximate estimate be given of the expense necessary. Seconded. Carried.

Ald. Wilson asked a question regarding the grades of certain parties' land not being given, as they had been paid for.

Ald. Wilkes referred to the complaints of some property holders of not having pegs to their lots.

Ald. Nightingale explained that he had seen Mr. Heyland, and that he had agreed to accompany the committee around and show them the new landmarks.

Council adjourned till 7:30 next Monday evening.

TELEGRAPHIC SUMMARY.

Ernest Camillesinar, a distinguished Italian violinist, died at Genoa yesterday.

Emperor William returned the visit recently made to his majesty at Berlin by Prince Bismark, yesterday.

Among the anarchists arrested in Paris is Sebastien Fouro, who was appointed by Vaillant guardian of his daughter Sidoni.

Passengers of the steamer Paris were transferred at Queenstown yesterday to the steamer Berlin, which will convey them to New York.

The police throughout France are engaged in making extensive raids upon the haunts of anarchists. A large number of arrests have been made.

Emperor William has ordered the victims of the explosion on the cruiser Brandenburg at Kiel, to be buried with all the honors that attend the burial of men killed in battle

Saturday afternoon a cyclone destroyed a number of dwellings, barns and other buildings a few miles to the southwest of Warren, Ark. No person was killed by a number injured.

Mr. McFarland of Glasgow says: "Lord Dunraven's ship is not being fitted out with new copper, more ballast and increased sail for the mere purpose of cruising about Long Island Sound. She will again be a competitor for the American cup."

Home Secretary Asquith has written a letter in which he declares the Government will insist upon the passage by the House of Lords of the Employers Liability Bill in the exact form which it was originally passed by the House of Commons.

McKane, the Gravesend boss, was sentenced to six years in Sing Sing at Brooklyn yesterday. The sentence fell like a thunderbolt. It was not thought in the face of the recommendation to mercy that it would be so severe, McKane's face paled when he heard it and with eyes closed and head bowed he staggered to his seat. Subsequently he was removed to the jail.

In the House of Commons yesterday, Mr. Asquith, Home Secretary, in referring to anarchists, stated that the executive of most of the European nations possessed power to expel obnoxious persons. These powers are not given under England's constitution. He did not think it necessary to change the laws of Great Britain, which he declared sufficient for her own protection.

Mr. Henry Labouchere, the Radical M.P. publishes a letter announcing his intention to offer an amendment to the reply to the Queen's speech at the opening of the next Parliament declaring that the power of the House of Lords to reject or alter bills passed by the House of Commons should cease. He says if the amendment is adopted a bill should be passed abolishing the House of Lords.

It is stated in Ottawa on good authority that before next week is over Connolly and McGreevy will be free men. Petitions working for their release will be considered by the Cabinet next week, and it is said that the Minister of Justice has prepared, or is preparing, a report which will recommend pardon on the grounds that the prisoners have already suffered sufficiently to satisfy the ends of justice. Until such time as the case was finally concluded in the Court the Government did not wish to interfere.

Propaganda of the Fourth Estate.

The Edmonton, N. W. T. Bulletin has a very ably written article on the mission and business of a newspaper. In the course of its remarks it says: The newspaper of a town is its outward manifestation. It is what those who have not seen the place will judge it by and will form their impression of it from. If it is bright, newsy, and vigorous, it will create a favorable impression and outsiders may size up the town and country as better than they look and will have confidence in them accordingly.

Its value to subscribers need not be dwelt upon, as that is to a great extent self-evident. Every person wants to hear the news. It is to his interest that he should know what is going on around him. The man who reads and keeps posted has a great advantage over the man who does not,

The value of an advertisement varies with circumstances. But it may be taken as a general principle that a business announcement is of like value to the putting up of a prominent sign, the erection of attractive premises or the occupation of a good stand. It would not pay a peanut dealer to occupy premises or a situation such as would be necessary for the dry goods merchant; and just so one line of business will not get as good a return from extensive advertising as another; or an amount of advertising that would be good business for one firm would be extravagance on the part of another. It must be evident, however, that if it is an assistance to business to hang out a sign, to have suitable premises, or to occupy a good position, it cannot be less an assistance to keep the business prominently before the eyes of present or prospective customers by means of an advertisement in the newspaper. Of course the value of the newspaper as an advertising medium depends greatly upon the number of readers Given the favorable side of the conditions mentioned and there cannot be any other means of bringing the business to the favorable attention of the public equal to the newspaper, for the money which it costs. The days when every one else, and people knew more about each other's business than they did about their own, are gone, and the business man is compelled either to advertise through the newspaper or take some more expensive means of keeping his business in the public eye. The value of newspaper advertising depends upon the value of the medium used.

We once asked Mr. Holloway how he made his vast wealth? His answer was: "By advertising."

THE NANAIMO COAL gives a large percentage of gas, a high illuminating power, unequalled by any other Bituminous Gas Coals in the world, and a superiorquality of Coke.

THE SOUTHFIELD COAL is now used by all the leading steamship lines on the Pacific.

THE NEW WELLINGTON COAL, which was recently introduced, has already become the favorite fuel for all kinds of domestic purposes. It is a clean, hard coal, makes a bright and cheerful fire, and its asting qualities make it the most economical fuel in the market.

A HANDY ARTICLE.

The Various Uses to Which Men Can Put the Safety Pin.

"Well, I never!" This exclamation fell from the lips of a young and inexperienced salesgirl in a large dry goods store while a New Orleans Times-Democrat man was present. The cause had been the approach of a tall, well dressed gentleman, who, in a low tone of voice and with a perceptible blush, asked for a box of safety pins. "To think," continued the girl, "that a woman would be mean enough to send her husband to buy safety pins for the baby!"

"Baby, nonsense!" cried an older girl at the same counter. "You're green enough to make a salad of. Why, that man bought those safety pins for his own use. Men use them in many ways. First they put one through the top of their trousers and catch the band of their flannels to hold them up snugly—sometimes one on each side. Then men with sloping shoulders put safety pins through their suspenders so as to hold them from slipping off. Other men, who do a great deal of writing, use a small safety pin to hold the cuffs of their shirt sleeves from falling over their hands. They simply make a tuck above the elbow and set the safety there. Some men, too, use safety pins to hold their socks up. My mother keeps a boarding-house, and there isn't a man among the boarders who doesn't have safety pins lying about his room. If a button comes off and he's in a hurry, a safety pin holds things together for the time being. If that man had been married and buying for the baby he wouldn't have blushed; he would have been used to women; but he's an old bachelor, and that's the reason he got red in the face."

The young and inexperienced salesgirl was speechless; she could only look her admiration of such wisdom and her thanks for having it imparted unto her.

AN "ELECTRICAL" SPRING.

Shrewd Device by Which the "Greenies" Were Gulled Successfully.

The Electrical Review publishes the following about a wonderful "electric spring." It was but a plain mineral spring, but the cups that the patients drank from were fastened by a brass chain to an iron bar which inclosed the mouth of the bubbling spring. You were prevented from coming too close by another circular iron railing about eight feet across. The ground around the spring was naturally moist, and it was either this ground or the iron which was one of the ends of an open electrical circuit. The cup held by the chain was the other end. The person drinking simply completed the circuit through the body, and when he had finished the attendant kindly and immediately removed the cup from his hand. The drinkers always felt that "delightful tingling sensation," and rejoiced that they had found the fountain of youth. Some imagined they even felt the new blood coursing through their veins. A small induction coil ingeniously concealed and connected with the cup and railing was a cheap method for producing that "invigorating feeling."

At the beginning of the eighteenth century all European armies had pontoon trains.

In all the wars in which England has taken part she has won 82 per cent of the battles.

A British navy gun will fire a 100 pound projectile four miles with such rapidity that four of them will be in the air at the same time.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1894.

THE REDISTRIBUTION BILL AND ITS CRITICS.

The organs of the Opposition and so-called Independents of the Brown-Cotton stripe are evidently at a loss what to say about the Redistribution bill. They cannot find in their hearts to praise it, and they cannot find much in the bill itself to object to. The bill is evidently a puzzler for these gentlemen. They are compelled to fall back to their old resource of snarling and finding fault on the flimsiest pretences. They cannot of course be prevented from doing that, nor is it the least worth any one's while to try to answer their complaints in detail; it would simply be a waste of time and space to attempt to do so.

On Saturday for example the News-Advertiser of Vancouver, which is edited by a croaker, who is even more virulent if possible than Mr. Beaven, started out in his career of misrepresentation of the bill and abuse of the Government for introducing it, with a short article headed "Another Gerrymander;" but although we have read the screed with more attention than its merits warrant we have totally failed to find in it a little of evidence in proof of the writer's sweeping assertions. The News-Advertiser tells its readers that the bill is in fact a piece of elaborate gerrymandering, on the lines of sheer sectionalism. "The Island constituencies in general," it says, "receive under the bill considerably larger proportional representation than those of the Mainland." This is simply downright falsehood, neither more nor less. Under the bill the Mainland will have 19 representatives and the Island 14, which gives one representative for every 1,963 white persons on the Mainland, and one for every 1,999 whites on the Island. Therefore the direct opposite of what the News-Advertiser asserts is the case. The Mainland receives a larger proportional representation than the Island, but the difference is not so great as to be of any real moment. However, such difference as there is, is in favor of the Mainland constituencies, and not those of the Island, as the News-Advertiser falsely asserts. In its Sunday issue our Vancouver city contemporary lets itself down gently, and is much more subdued in the tone of its article on this subject. It makes no attempt whatever to prove its assertions of Saturday; it has just sense enough not to repeat them. "The best indication of the popular opinion of the Redistribution Bill," it says, "is afforded by the almost absolute indifference with which the announcement of the details of the measure have been received." This is a lamentable confession of failure by the leading organ of the Opposition-Independents, for what has it been doing for a year past but trying to lash the public into a rage because the Redistribution Bill was not introduced last session, and if the bill which is now at length brought down were so unfair and defective as the News-Advertiser represents it, the public could not fail to be filled with indignation over it if that paper exercised any influence at all. But the public are not excited over the matter because men of sense have long ago estimated at their proper value the heavy and verbose diatribes of the organ of the Independent Oppositionists on this and most other political subjects—set them down, in fact, as no better than a farago of ill-natured and stupid nonsense, the ravings of a disappointed man. The people are not agitated, because in the main they are satisfied with the bill, and despise and do not believe the wild and foolish talk of the Government's opponents, especially of the so-called Independent branch of them.

The objections made to the bill by the Victoria Times, the leading organ of the old Opposition, are equally feeble. It says that there are not wanting indications of the gerrymander process, and the best proof it is able to give of the truth of the assertion is that some of the districts are divided into ridings, and some not. It would be really better for the Opposition organ candidly to admit that the bill considered as a whole is fairly satisfactory than to publish such feeble twaddle as this about it. The Government is to be congratulated over the bill, when the most virulent and eager of their opponents can find nothing more or worse to say against it than the stupid falsehoods of the News-Advertiser, and silly nothings of the Times. The bill was not drafted to satisfy people whom every one knew could not be satisfied, who are bound to find fault right or wrong, but to satisfy moderate and intelligent men in the electorate at large, and there is reason to think that this has been happily accomplished.

BRITISH COLUMBIA'S CROAKERS AND TRAITORS.

In a lecture delivered at Birmingham not long since by Sir Edwin Arnold, he contended that it is for human beings a more dignified and healthy occupation to be "singing with the lark in the sky than croaking with the frog in the swamp." Such is not the opinion apparently of the leader of the Opposition in the Provincial Assembly of British Columbia. Hon. Mr. Beaven prefers the role of the frog in the swamp, and very loud and dolorous indeed are his croakings. On Friday evening last, on resuming his address on the Budget, Mr. Beaven is reported to have argued at great length that the Province is in a totally bankrupt condition, and that it was useless for the House to go into committee of supply on the estimates because there is not going to be any money with which to pay the sums that may be voted. This particular croak was greeted with general laughter, as it deserved to be. The remark of the Provincial Treasurer was that the hon. member must be mad to make such a statement. Hon. Mr. Beaven thought these words ought to be taken down, and then proceeded to utter some more croaks on the subject of the payments made to the Provincial health officer, who in the summer of 1892 by the wise and energetic measures which he took succeeded in stopping the plague of smallpox which threatened to devastate Victoria, and, indeed, the Province at large. It is probable that Mr. Beaven's idea of what the Provincial health officer should have done was to retire to some convenient swamp, and extending himself prone upon his stomach, to croak loud and long, leaving the plague to do its worst. But this was not Dr. Davie's plan. He adopted proper sanitary measures instead, and in a very short time succeeded in arresting the plague. Such an unheard of proceeding, and especially that Dr. Davie should have been paid for it, deeply excites the wrath and disgust of the Opposition croaker and all his tribe.

Hon. Colonel Baker, in replying to Mr. Beaven's extraordinary speech, said that when he listened to the hon. leader of the Opposition he was forcibly reminded of Esopi's fly, which settled on a chariot wheel and exclaimed, "what a dust I do kick up!" No doubt the leader of the Opposition and his followers and allies, especially the Independent Oppositionists, are just now kicking up a tremendous dust, or trying hard to do it, with a view to obsure the political horizon and mislead the voters at the next general election in the province. Col. Baker gave a special instance of what these gentlemen of the Opposition and their Independent allies are capable of doing, in order to promote their political ends and disparage the Government. Colonel Baker went when in London to the office of the High Commissioner for this province, and there met the secretary, Mr. Colman, who expressed surprise and regret at the position of affairs in British Columbia. Col. Baker asked the secretary what he meant. Mr. Coleman replied with the story of bankruptcy of the province, which Hon. Mr. Beaven has just now been repeating for the edification of the Legislature, and the enlightenment of British Columbia's enemies. On being asked who had told him all this, Mr. Colman said that he had it from a gentleman who had just left, viz, Major General Twigg. This gentleman, as well known, was the secretary of the so-called constitutional league, who sent a petition to the Governor-General, asking that the bill authorizing the construction of the new parliament buildings in Victoria be disallowed, or, if not that the mainland be permitted to secede from the Island of Vancouver and set up a government for itself. A few days later a letter appeared in London Truth repeating all these scandalous statements. On enquiry Col. Baker ascertained that the writer was Mr. A. Maitland-Stenhouse, who had once been a member of the Legislature of British Columbia, and a supporter of the leader of the Opposition, but who had since gone to the Northwest to establish a Mormon colony there.

Such are the tactics of the Opposition. They send agents to England to publish slanderous statements about British Columbia in the London press, and to do all they can by both public and private means to damage the credit of the province and discredit its Government. Such men, as Hon. Mr. Turner said in his budget speech, are traitors. In point of fact they are no better, and deserve to be pointed at as public enemies. The leader of the Opposition ought to be ashamed to make himself the companion and tool of such men, and to deliver in the Legislature a croaking speech which can readily be used to the disadvantage of British Columbia by its enemies.

Arrest of Two Tacoma Embezzlers—They Will be Taken Back.

VICTORIA, Feb. 19.—[Special]—Frank D. McCain, deputy city clerk of Tacoma, was arrested as he was leaving the ss. City of Kingston here yesterday morning, charged with forgery and embezzlement. His brother, John McCain, who accompanied him, was also taken into custody as an accomplice. The arrests were made on a despatch received by acting chief Walker. The two men fled from Tacoma Friday night, and spent Saturday in Seattle, and got away from the latter place on Saturday night. The local officers had been advised that the McCains had got out of Washington on Saturday, so on Saturday night Sergeant Levin and a constable were on hand on the arrival of the Kingston, and learned that the men they wanted were aboard and secluded in a stateroom. The officers did not board the ship, but simply waited. The McCains came off about 7 a.m., and were immediately arrested. They protested strongly that it was a case of mistaken identity, and gave the names of Doane and James. They were taken to the barracks and locked up separately, declining to make any statement. One is a tall man, slightly grey, but evidently not over 30 years of age, and the other of medium height and probably 25 years of age. They are both well known residents of Tacoma and prominent in Masonic circles. Sergeant Walker wired the Tacoma chief yesterday that he had the men in custody and received a reply stating that the chief would come here to-day. The McCain's will go back to Tacoma without any trouble of extradition. In fact they are anxious to go and will likely be passengers on the boat to-morrow morning. They have not been booked at the city jail, but simply held.

American Minister Criticised.

RIO JANEIRO, Feb. 19.—The dynamite cruiser Nictheroy left this harbor at an early hour last night. As she passed out she exchanged signals with Forts Santa Cruz and San Joao, at the entrance of the bay. Before she reached the forts she was compelled to pass Fort Villegignon, which is held by the insurgents. The gunners at this fort fired two shots at the cruiser, but their aim was bad and they did not succeed in hitting her. The Nictheroy had on board 300 regular troops. It is supposed that her destination is Santos. Strong hopes are entertained of an early and decisive action between the government forces and the insurgents. The course of the Hon. Thomas L. Thompson, the American minister, is still the subject of adverse comment in some quarters. It is charged by some of the Americans and others here that he is taking to himself the credit for the protection of American merchantmen given by Rear-Admiral Benham. It is still a subject for comment that Mr. Thompson lives at Petropolis, the summer resort 25 miles north of Rio Janeiro, while the British and other ministers continue to reside in the city. His residence in Petropolis, however, is easily explainable on the theory that he does not want to run the risk of contracting yellow fever, which is epidemic in Janeiro. Petropolis is always free of this scourge. There is some inconvenience arising from his residence there, however, American interests in this city being left in the hands of a young man in the office of the consul-general.

Boodling in Ottawa.

MONTREAL, Feb. 19.—The Patrie, a French paper of this city, says that serious charges of boodling against one of the Ottawa ministers have been submitted to the Governor-General and that the latter has demanded an explanation from the Government.

Arrest of a French Spy.

TURIN, Feb. 19.—A despatch from Pine Rolo, two miles from this city, announces there the arrest of a Captain Gastaing, who is suspected of being a French spy. The prisoner says that he was sent out by the Canadian Government. He had 7,000 francs in paper and gold in his possession. Before he was taken into custody, he was watched for some time prowling about the fortress of Fenestrolle and engaging in conversation with the soldiers there.

Bomb Fiends Universal.

ANGEL'S CAMP, Cal., Feb. 19.—An Austrian boarding house, owned by M. Magud, situated opposite Stickel's mine was blown to atoms by a bomb of twenty pounds of giant powder at 2 o'clock this morning. Magud and child were quite seriously hurt. Mrs. Magud escaped uninjured. Most of the lodgers were at work on the night shift at the time or there would have been more injured and probably some killed. Officers are at work on the case, although no clue has yet been found to identify the perpetrators of the deed. They are believed to be some malicious Austrians having a grudge against Magud.

Snow Storm in the Sierra Nevada.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Feb. 19.—A terrible storm raged on the Sierra Nevada last night. The wind rushed and howled in regular hurricane order all night and there has been no abatement in its fury to-day. According to reports received at the railroad offices in this city, the snow came down in great flakes, drifted and filled the railroad cuts. In places snow banks are as high as the tops of the cars. Superintendent Wright has ordered all freight trains out of the snow belt, in order to avoid the possible blockade of trains. It is expected, however, with the present time that passenger trains will be enabled to get through with the assistance of the snow plows. A serious accident happened this forenoon at Coldstream, a station in the mountains between Truckee and tunnel 13. A heavy push plow backed by seven large engines, all running at a high rate of speed, jumped the track and plunged into a snow bank about 50 feet from the rail. Three men are missing, and it is not known whether they were hurled into the snow, where there is a bare possibility of finding them, or whether they were buried under the snow plow. The missing men are conductor E. D. Higgins and engineers L. E. Graham and D. W. Terrill. Engineer Lovelace was very seriously injured in the accident. All the men were riding on the snow plow. Superintendent Wright left for the scene of the accident this forenoon. He was accompanied by a number of doctors and a railroad wrecking crew, with a hope of finding the missing men. At the same time a wrecking crew and a number of physicians left Truckee upon the same mission. Owing to the terrific storm the telegraph wires are down in several places. A very heavy snow storm has been raging in Siskiou mountains but all trains are running on time.

The Prompter Passes.

Apropos to the passing away of stage prompters, the San Francisco Chronicle has the following:

Fred Williams, the veteran stage manager of the Lyceum theatre, recalled an interesting anecdote about the late Edwin Booth's experience with a nervous prompter. Booth was playing "Richard III," and had reached the end of the fourth act, where the flying messengers enter and inform Richard of the state of Buckingham's army. The book reads thus:

First Messenger—My gracious sovereign, now in Devonshire.
As I by friends am well advertised.
Sir Edward Courtney and the haughty prelate
Bishop of Exeter, his elder brother,
With many more confederates are in arms.
Enter Second Messenger.
Second Messenger. In Kent, my liege, the Guilfords are in arms;
And every hour more competitors
Flock to the rebels, and their power grows strong.
Enter Third Messenger.
Third Messenger. My Lord, the army of great Buckingham—
K. Rich. Out od ye, owls! Nothing but songs of death? (He strikes him.)
There take thou that, till thou bring better news.
Third Messenger. The news I have to tell your majesty
Is—that, by sudden floods and fall of waters.
Buckingham's army is dispersed and scatter'd,
And he himself wander'd away alone,
No man knows whither.
K. Rich. I cry thee mercy:
There is my purse to cure that blow of thine.
Hath any well-advised friend proclaim'd
Reward to him that brings the traitor in?
Third Messenger. Such proclamation hath been made, my liege.

The prompter, whose duty it was to send the messengers flying on the stage, in his nervousness got them mixed up, and No. 3 was sent on first. Booth discovered the mistake as soon as the messenger opened his mouth with "My lord, the army of great Buckingham," and, grabbing him by the shoulders, shoved him back, saying: "Not yet, you fool!" The prompter collared him and sent on No. 1, who went through all right. Then the prompter, having lost his head, started No. 3 again before No. 2. Booth was wild, and hustled the messenger back into the wings. No. 2 went on, and finally it really became No. 3's turn to enter. The poor fellow was desperate, and when he got on and saw Booth's menacing countenance he exclaimed:

"My lord, the army of Great Buckingham is dispersed this time, by God."

The audience, which had suffered the mistakes without a break, now burst into prolonged laughter. There came near being a real tragedy afterward behind the scenes.

LOCAL NEWS.

Not Intentional.

Doctor Praeger has written to this office in reference to an item which appeared in THE TELEGRAM of Sunday last, copied from the Vancouver World. The item in question was inadvertently clipped out with some others and found its way into the columns of this paper by mistake. We can assure Doctors Praeger and McKechnie that we have no desire to give publicity to anything reflecting on them either in a personal or professional way, and do not believe they would resort to such methods of advertising as attributed to them by our Vancouver contemporary.

Two Years—Hard.

J. Hanlon, alias Kelly, one of the Grand Hotel burglars, who preferred a speedy trial and pleaded guilty, was yesterday sentenced to two years' imprisonment with hard labor. Judge Harrison said that the full penalty of the offence warranted a sentence of 14 years' imprisonment, but in consideration of the prisoner's admittance of guilt, he was dealt leniently with. The convicted man thanked the court for its mercy, promising to profit by his honor's advice, when liberated, and exonerated Clarke, his comrade, from any participation in the robbery.

Mr. H. A. Simpson has been retained to defend Clarke at the next Assizes.

School of Penmanship.

The young man with a bad handwriting who seeks employment among business men finds there is no demand for his awkwardness at any price. Everyone who uses a pen should write legibly and attractively. There is no excuse in these days for a young person to write in a slovenly manner. This should be left to those of a past generation, who were educated before the days of business training schools. Here all of ordinary intelligence and application can acquire a good business handwriting, the value of which is not easy to compute.

The Nanaimo Business College has a special department of penmanship, at the head of which is Mr. J. R. Denneny, who is acknowledged to be not only one of the finest penman in the world, but one of the best teachers and developers of good penmanship in others.

"It is no sacrifice, sister mine. I have not seen Fairy since—that day" (Grenville had bought the horse at Mr. Newton's sale and presented it to Rose) "and do not wish to."

"Well, my Rosie, you shall leave to-morrow, and our God will have you in his holy keeping."

Mr. Newton had no difficulty in securing a nurse's position for his daughter or of obtaining permission for her to locate near her brother's station.

There was great rejoicing in Dunbar's camp when these unexpected guests arrived and appeared before the brothers. They said Rose was just the one needed. There were many then in the hospital sick and pining for a kind word that could cheer their hearts.

A comfortable apartment was procured for Rose in a cottage near to her chosen labor, and then Mr. Newton reluctantly bade his children farewell and hastened back to the anxious friends at home and the increasing labors of the farm.

The planting was accomplished, fruit trees blossomed and set, promising an abundant harvest, and the strawberries already showed bright, ruby fruit in rich profusion. At a suggestion from some horticultural friends Mr. Newton early in the spring made very satisfactory arrangements for the prompt sale of all the fruit he wished to dispose of, and that encouraging and remunerative beginning dispelled all fears for the success of the new enterprise in which they had embarked.

The war and the absence of their children were the only shadows over their household, and but for that Mrs. Newton and Lillian often said they should have been too happy. They were naturally enthusiastic lovers of the country, and their freedom from the shackles of fashionable life and the change to the useful and common sense occupation of their present position were so much more congenial that they looked to the past with no cravings or regrets.

So sped on the days at the farm. Active labor by day for all (for Lillian insisted on bearing her full share as strictly as before her marriage had given her competence if not wealth); at night books and papers for the men and the busy needle for the women.

The papers and news from the army were the first chosen and tidings from the loved ones eagerly looked for. The expected battle, which had so excited our friends, was still delayed, to the great disgust and vexation of those who had given up home and its comforts to work for their country.

In a letter home Rose wrote:

"My life is as different from your own, my sister, as one can well imagine, so unlike anything I have ever experienced that I scarcely realize that I am an inhabitant of the same world I once lived in.

"Many a poor fellow committed to my inexperienced care would be so much comforted if there was some one here to speak to him from a mother's heart. To see a fair, young boy—for many are but boys—with a broad, white brow that a mother's lips have often kissed, and the bright brown curls clustering around it that some fond sister has fondly played with, as I used to with Ralph's—sick, wounded or dying, and hear him when his mind wanders or the death film closes his eye, call, 'Mother! mother!' Then I am so powerless. My voice but mocks his longing! Such scenes I, who never saw death before, have witnessed often within the last month, and at times my heart is full of agony.

"Ah, Lillian, my sister, you do not yet know what a noble husband God has given you. He is the idol of his regiment. Most deservedly so. I wish you could see his camp. It is the admiration of all beholders. George and Ralph are great favorites here. Ah, father, you may well be proud of such sons.

"In a few days, or I greatly mistake the signs, there will be a stout battle here. I am not revealing any secret. It is freely spoken of, as it has been often before, and nothing came of it. But this time there can be no mistake. Everything indicates such an event more clearly than ever before, and our men are full of enthusiasm in consequence. But be not overanxious, my beloved ones; we know that our cause is the right one."

Thus wrote Rose, and the tone of this and other letters gave comfort and confidence to the family at home. Even her mother acknowledged that her daughter had done wisely in entering on such duties and felt she could in no way have risen so bravely above the shock Grenville's treason had given her as by laboring for those who were true to their country.

"Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," and Mr. and Mrs. Newton, while they were accumulating riches for their children, had also sown good seed in their hearts and watered and nurtured it with their prayers. The wealth had vanished, but the fruit of the spirit was ripening into an abundant harvest. They had put their "trust in the Lord, and verily they had not been disappointed."

CHAPTER XII.

And now there came frequent tidings of one battle after another, but always followed speedily by telegrams from Rose to assure the anxious home friends that, although the first in the conflict and the last to leave the field, her brothers thus far had been mercifully preserved unharmed. Dunbar's horse had once been shot under him, but he escaped without injury. His brave men, however, had suffered terribly. More than 20 of George's gallant 100 had fallen, and 12 more were now in the hospital, watched over by their gallant captain's sister with a tenderness and hearty sympathy that made her like an angel in their midst.

Then came another pause, during which the regiments had leisure to fill up their broken ranks, recruit their exhausted strength and restore order again in their camps. But it was only the quiet of the tempest while it gathers force to burst again upon the earth with fury and desolation.

Our friends at the farm had enjoyed one of those quiet, delightful Sabbaths that July sometimes bestows after a severe thunderstorm. Toward evening all were on the veranda watching the shadows falling over the clover fields, while the sun edged the grand old hills with fire as he slowly sunk to rest behind the dark mountains that overlooked the placid lake.

Just then a horse's hoofs were heard, and the next moment a horse and rider were seen rapidly approaching the house. It was an uncommon occurrence on the Sabbath, and every face betokened alarm. As the rider halted at the steps Mr. Newton rose and received a dispatch. The boy lingered one moment and then rode quickly away. To how many does the sight of a telegram bring fear and forebodings of evil, even when from business necessities they are of frequent occurrence, and how one not accustomed to receiving them shrinks from the first glance of the contents! Thus stood Mr. Newton, while every eye turned anxiously toward him. His own face was very pale and his hand trembled when at last he opened it. As his eyes took in the message a heavy groan burst from his lips, but he instantly controlled himself as his wife and daughter exclaimed:

"Oh, my boys!" "My husband!"

"Be brave, my dear ones. It is from Rose. A fearful battle at Bull Run. We are shamefully beaten. Eustace slightly wounded, but George and Ralph are missing. Come—come to me quickly!"

Ah, was not this a bitter cup? How will they bear it? The noble father, the tender mother, the loving bride and sister and the dear younger brother! Their faith and trust in God must be strong indeed to carry them safely through these deep waters!

Lillian was the first to speak.

"We must go at once, dear father. Eustace will be well cared for, but Rose needs counsel and support immediately."

"Yes, my darling. But there is no train that we can reach till early Monday morning.

"My dear wife, you are not well. I dread this rapid and exciting journey for you. Will you not remain at home, leaving Lillian and myself to do what we can for our children, yet keeping you informed by daily telegrams?"

In the early morning Alfred returned.

"Good news. I telegraphed to Rose as soon as I reached the city and received this answer not 10 minutes before I was obliged to leave," handing the dispatch to his father.

"George safe with us. Eustace doing well, but Ralph is a prisoner. Let Alfred come with Lillian. Father and mother can do nothing toward Ralph's release."

Great was the joy at this release from part of their fears, but it was with difficulty that the mother could be persuaded to relinquish the idea of going herself. She at last consented on one condition—that her husband should accompany Lillian, leaving Alfred to supply his father's place at home.

Mr. Newton and his daughter reached the camp without any delay, sending back by the magic wires an immediate report of their safe arrival and the comfort their presence gave the anxious children.

At noon the next day came the following:

"Ralph is safely with us. Expect a letter the next mail."

The letter came in due time, as follows:

"Dunbar's wound in the left arm, from a bayonet thrust, was slight, and would not have kept him from his work a day, but at the same time he was knocked from his horse, rescued by his men and carried from the field.

"George and Ralph have been wonderfully preserved. Their regiment was among the most fearless and daring."

In a letter to his wife Mr. Newton thus describes how Ralph appeared in the Union lines:

"Yesterday afternoon as we were seated in Eustace's tent a loud shout from his men outside brought us all upon the grounds. Great excitement was manifested by all, and repeated cheers from the front sounded strangely out of place where all but a moment before had been quiet, moody or despondent. As the men saw the colonel leave his tent they made way for us to pass toward the front, and in the distance we saw that a horseman riding furiously was the occasion of the excitement. The instant Dunbar espied him he exclaimed: 'Look! Surely I cannot be mistaken. That is Prince, but such a uniform—who can the rider be?' It was their colonel's well known

THE ART OF SHOPPING

The art of shopping is not necessarily to make at all times a good bargain, but to secure a fair equivalent of the money spent, and to be able to do this with the least expenditure of time and trouble.

A GOOD BARGAIN

Is distinguished from a cheap bargain, but in these days of bargains and bargain-days, when from one end of Canada to the other—yea, and the United States, too—the newspapers are crying bargains—and we read about bargains in this thing, and bargains in that thing, when bargains are by many more to be sought after than wisdom, and when every dealer in the country from the "peanut vendor" to the "merchant prince" calls everything a bargain—in these days it is not so easy to distinguish a good bargain from the cheap one.

THE RESULT OF SHOPPING

Should be a feeling of satisfaction with the goods purchased. A sense of having accomplished what you set out to do, and that in a reasonable and sensible manner. Not a tired-to-death feeling, and an uncertainty as to whether that forty nine cent article was worth fifty cents after all.

WE SAY THAT THE WOMAN

Who desires to make an art of shopping will fasten her faith to the store that proposes to give her always the cash value for her money. It is for the trade of all who desire good bargains, as we distinguish them, that we work.

The Willing Workers of St. Alban's meet to night in St. Alban's rooms.

Two cents per pound will be paid for clean cotten rags at this office.

The Council last night carried a motion to place a sidewalk on the lower side of Victoria road.

The marriage of Mr. Joe Hirst is the only matter of interest that has taken place lately in the French Creek district.

When you visit Vancouver do not forget to register at the Delmonico. Emerson leads all others as a caterer. 8-11 tf

Raper & Co. have in their store windows specimens of rock from Alberni, also gravel from that district, showing auriferous deposits.

The new Salvation Army barracks is now all but completed, there only being a little more painting required to have everything finished.

Several shooting parties have been out from town lately, most of the sportsmen bagging good luck, mallards, butter-balls, etc., being pretty plentiful.

To-morrow night the spelling bee at St. Alban's hall takes place under the auspices of the Church of England Temperance Society. A very interesting evening is expected and friends are cordially invited to attend.

An interesting fistic encounter occurred last evening in one of the hotels in town. No particular damage was done and the interested parties made an amicable ending to their bout. A little lin-t and cotton soon repaired the damage.

The postoffice, in the course of its alterations, has been considerably changed. The space between the wickets and the entrance door has contracted considerably. Interest is manifested as to whether the roof will come down a foot or two to correspond.

Inquiries are being made in different directions as to the truth of there being a bodyguard organized in Vancouver to protect the interests of the Queen of the Hawaiian islands. It is understood that there is very little, if any, truth in the rumor.

It is understood that the road outside the new Salvation Army barracks will be graded this year. This, when done, will raise the sidewalk up to the stonework of the new building. It will also necessitate the raising of the Botanical Drug Store, opposite, considerably.

To-night a debate takes place in the Wallace street Methodist church between members of the Vancouver and Nanaimo Epworth Leagues. Mr. Proctor and Mr. Aitken will represent Nanaimo. Refreshments will be served during the course of the evening, and a collection will be made at the door.

A grand masquerade ball is to be given in the Co-operative hall on Thursday evening next. A cash prize will be awarded to the wearer of the best costume.

It is no news that the sidewalks are slippery now, though a novel idea has struck the residents of a certain house. They pour water on the snow with the presumed intention of washing it away. The result being that every passer-by goes in for peculiar and acrobatic performances at that spot. In a good many cases the involuntary performers find it necessary to sit down.

A trip is under contemplation and is shortly to be entered on by two gentlemen from this neighborhood. The explorers and prospectors referred to, it is believed, will in the first place, make for Nelson Island, and eventually, after examining the adjacent country, will go up Knight's Inlet, intending, if possible, to journey up to the head of the Inlet and through the passes at its head into the prairie country beyond.

The Highest Authority in America.

Printers Ink, the highest newspaper authority in America, speaks thus of THE DAILY TELEGRAM:

"Did you ever hear of a place called Nanaimo? It is on the Island of Vancouver and 75 miles from Victoria. If you live in what you consider an enterprising city and believe that your local daily paper is first-class, write to the publisher of THE DAILY TELEGRAM, Nanaimo, British Columbia, and ask for a sample copy of his paper, and when you obtain it compare it with your home production. Go down and talk with the publisher about it afterwards, and ask him why it is that he can't print as good a paper, or obtain as good a local patronage, or have his paper as free from dead-head or objectionable advertisements? A useful lesson may be learned from Nanaimo."

You want office stationery and we know it. We have provided for your wants accordingly and can supply you with anything in the way of bill heads, envelopes, letter heads, posters, etc., etc., on the shortest notice, at reasonable prices. Don't forget the place—THE DAILY TELEGRAM.
