Every one will perceive that the Alberni Canal scheme does not affect the mainland terminus of the railway; but the local opposition organ does not concern itself about facts when its purpose is to slander those whom it hates. Its hatred of the provincial secretary is cordial and implacable. This has been shown unmistakably throughout the whole period of its history, and it sticks out with undiminished plainness in the extract we have quoted. Since assuming the management of the COLUMBIAN we have purposely refrained from entering into any controversy with it, because we have had experience enough to know that where there is a total absence of principle such controversies are generally fruitless. But when a member for this district is so grossly misrepresented and his utterances are distorted for political purposes it becomes our duty to put the public in possession of the facts.

Cream of the Dispatches.

NEW YORK, March 18.—A cable special from London of the 17th says: The sight of the inexpressible havoc wrought by Thursday night's explosion is doing vastly more to create uneasiness in the public mind than could be done by all the newspaper reports that could possibly be written. Great efforts are being made to prevent any future attempts of the same sort. Most of the clubs have put on night watchmen, and at the Bank of England the nightly military picket, already of quite formidable numbers, has been doubled. Fears are entertained in London that the destruction may be attempted of some of the most precious of our national buildings, and especially Westminster Abbey. In short, there is a good deal of panic prevalent in the British metropolis at this present moment. As is always the case with a panic, there is mingled no little fury, and the popular feeling is certainly rising against the Irish. The crowds that flock to parliament street hourly manifestly go away very angry, and any repetition of Thursday night's business might lead to dreadful scenes in many large towns of England by way of rough retaliation. A London cable special to the Sun says: All day yesterday the greatest excitement prevailed in every part of London, and hundreds of thousands of people flocked to the scene of the explosion. The Prince of Wales, the Duke of Cambridge, Mr. Gladstone and nearly all the members of the cabinet visited Charles street and inspected the ruins. Parliament street, wide as it is, was an impassable block of carriages, and Rotten Row was deserted for Westminster. Workmen were busy repairing the different offices, some of which will have to be closed for over a week, and an official investigation of a thoroughly fruitless character occupied the entire day. Dynamite is not to the English taste from any point of view, and the feeling which has been engendered by this latest outrage is of the bitterest kind. The degree of public exasperation has been uprecedented during many years of Irish agitation.

Chicago, March 21.—Instructions have been forwarded to the Commissioner of the Department of Dakota for the removal of Sitting Bull and immediate followers now under military surveillance to Fort Randall, to Standing Rock Agency, where other of the Sieux reservation Indians are now stationed. The savages will leave Randan under guard on April 15th. Provisions will be issued to the Indians until they have an opportunity to provide for themselves. This is in accordance with the request of Sitting Bull to become a reservation Indian, which the chieftan has hitherto declared he would never be. He was taken to Fort Randall early last Fall, together with a number of warlike young bucks, and then separated from others of his band, the Uncapapas, owing to the ugly demeanor of himself and his followers. It is expected he will be given an opportunity to raise stock and provide for himself and his people.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 21. — Two dynamite depots were discovered here to-day, and four persons arrested. The week's arrests number 200, including the pupils of military schools and railway officials. The government is resolved to expel all Italians without permanent occupation.

LONDON, March 22.—The condition of Queen Victoria's limb, which was injured by her fall Saturday last, continues not unsatisfactory. Her majesty keeps her room, in accordance with the advice of her physicians. The swelling of her knee is subsiding, and it is hoped by the physicians in attendance that it will disappear entirely in a few days. There have at no time been any grounds for the excitement over the matter which seems to have been created in New York, and which has not prevailed here. The matter creates very little comment in London.

LONDON, March 22.—The police are in possession of a clue to the explosion. At the office of the local government board a woman observed and fully described a man who was apparently placing an infernal machine against the building. It is expected that an arrest will soon be made.

A correspondent of the Colonist says that Col. Hawkins has aroused great enthusiasm on the temperance question at Nanaimo. His meetings have been remarkably successful. Prof. Francis has been adding to the interest of the meetings by playing selections on his violin.

Mr. Howison offers a reward of $100 for the capture of the Maple Ridge thief.

The flagstaff on the new post-office has been put up. It stands about 80 feet high.

On her last trip the steamship Elder brought 700 tons of freight for British Columbia.

MR. H. W. HUGHES has now plenty of Frank Siddall's Soap on hand for the ladies.

The customs dues paid at Nanaimo for the year ending 30th June last amounted to $24,331.

The Manitoba legislature has been summoned for the dispatch of business on the 19th of April.

Joe Smith, the son of the founder of the Mormon faith, still professes to receive revelations from heaven.

The contract for painting the court house has been awarded to Messrs. Wilcox & Johnston, of this city.

The ship Duke of Abercorn has taken on 250 tons of ballast, and the rails have been nearly all discharged.

Cetewayo is now disposed to settle his differences with John Dunn, and take him back again as his chief adviser.

One hundred and eighty Canadians on their way to this province were reported snow-bound in Michigan last week.

The steamer Princess Louise is expected to arrive here from Victoria to-day. She will probably return in the afternoon.

The str. R. P. Rithet went up to Port Haney on Monday, having in tow a barge with the locomotive Savona and tender.

The str. Evangel was seized at Victoria last Thursday for an alleged infraction of the revenue laws, but was released on Saturday.

There are rumors that "B." battery will soon be removed to British Columbia, and be replaced at Kingston by a new organization.

The steamer Enterprise, Capt. Gardiner, arrived from Victoria shortly after 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon with about 50 passengers.

There are over 10,000 rum shops in New York, while the shops for the sale of bread, meat and groceries do not number much over 7,000.

A letter from Mr. Dawson, relating to the Maple Ridge license court, was received last night, too late for this issue. It will appear on Saturday.

Patton, the brakeman on the Southern Pacific train that was wrecked at Tehachapi pass, tried on a charge of criminal negligence, was acquitted.

Leprosy is assuming frightful proportions in Honolulu. It is said whites only catch the disease through cohabitation with natives or by vaccination.

It is reported that the steamship Victoria has been detained at San Francisco until next Saturday when she will sail for this port with about 200 Canadian immigrants.

Rev. Dr. Cuyler of Brooklyn, says that the late W. E. Dodge, the philanthropic merchant prince of New York, spent the first hour of every morning in reading the Bible and in praying.

The Nanaimo Free Press is beginning to exercise itself already about the Queen's Birthday. It proposes to invite the people of New Westminster and Victoria to spend the day at the city of coals.

In our legislative assembly report last Saturday it was made to appear that Mr. Drake moved the second reading of the county courts bill. It should have been the attorney-general, Hon. Mr. Davie.

One of the bridges between Hastings and Granville is reported in a very dangerous condition, and should be attended to without delay. It could be fixed temporarily at an expense of perhaps less than $20.

The steamer Reliance, Capt. Insley, came down from Yale on Sunday afternoon and left again at 10 o'clock with a full load of passengers. She returned yesterday and goes up the river again this morning.

Arabi Pasha and the other exiles have expressed themselves highly satisfied with Ceylon, and, further, a wish to have their sons admitted at once as boarders in a Government college there. This will be done.

The Colonist says it is reported that an extensive and valuable discovery of gold and silver bearing quartz has been made at the northern end of Vancouver Island. Specimens were brought to Victoria on Saturday.

The steamer Enterprise made a special trip to this port on Sunday morning, bringing about 100 passengers. Although she lay here all Sunday we are glad to say that she did not discharge her freight until Monday morning.

The steamer Idaho left San Francisco last Saturday for Victoria with passengers and freight. The quantity of freight and the number of passengers booked for British Columbia are more than the regular mail steamers can carry and it is expected these extra trips wil be frequent.

A meeting of the Blue Ribbon Club will be held in the temperance hall at 4 o'clock this afternoon, when all friends of temperance, especially the young, are invited to be present. We believe it is proposed to divide the society into two sections, one composed of adults and the other of young people. This matter will be discussed this afternoon.

Among the passengers who arrived by the last mail steamer from San Francisco were 84 men direct from Winnipeg. These men must have been struck with the contrast in the climate of the prairie and Pacific provinces. At Winnipeg the ice was 4 feet thick, and the thermometer away below zero: here no signs of ice could be found, and flowers and foliage were everywhere to be seen as witnesses to the beauty of our climate.

The Globe says: Rumor has it that some members of the Ministry have become dissatisfied at some of the suspicious operations of Lieut. Governor Dewdney, and will endeavor to secure his removal as soon as possible. The Lieut. Governor's land speculations seem to be the most objectionable feature of his North-West administration, and some Conservative organs have received instructions to write him down in order that the Ministry may have an excuse for dismissing him.

HORSES FOR MANITOBA.—Mr. F. S. Barnard has gone to Okanagon to start 200 head of horses for the North-west. The horses are expected to reach Fort McLeod about the 1st of June. The demand for horseflesh in Manitoba and the North-west is greatly in excess of the supply, and if the means of crossing the mountains were improved, British Columbia might do an extensive trade in this line.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—Last Friday a serious accident happened to Mr. Oliver Fury, at Daggett's logging camp. While attempting to escape from a falling tree, his foot caught and he tripped. The tree fell on him, breaking his leg in two places, lacerating his thigh and severely injuring his head. He was brought to this city, and placed under the care of Dr. Sivewright. We are glad to hear that he is doing well.

COAL HARBOR BACHELORS. — The Coal Harbor Bachelors gave a social dance in the new hall at Granville on Monday night. There were about 100 present, and the affair is pronounced a very decided success. Dancing began at 9 o'clock, and was kept up until about 3 yesterday morning. A very excellent supper was provided in the hall, under the superintendence of a distinguished artist, whose praises (and pastry) were in the mouths of the whole company. The hall was very tastefully decorated.

SAD AFFAIR.—Yesterday afternoon three ladies entered a carriage and were driven toward Esquimalt. One of the ladies expected her husband to arrive on the steamer and wished to meet him on the wharf. Before starting for the drive an English newspaper was placed in the carriage. In glancing over it casually the lady whose husband was due read a paragraph which almost froze her heart. The paragraph stated that her husband had eloped with a young girl in England. The screams of the poor woman rent the air and she was driven home in a prostrated condition.—Colonist.

AGGRAVATED ASSAULT.—At Maple Ridge last Monday morning one of the Chinese laborers made a murderous attack on Mr. James Nevins, the Chinese overseer. Nevins was struck on the head with a spade, and had his skull badly fractured. The assault was witnessed by Mr. Hamilton and another man who happened to be passing in a boat at the time. They hurried ashore and arrested the Chinaman. Nevins was brought to this city at once and placed in the hospital. We understand that there are hopes of his recovery. The Chinaman was taken before a magistrate at Maple Ridge and committed for trial. He is now in jail.

A CONTRAST.—Some time ago the people of Chilliwhack forwarded a memorial to the provincial government respecting the proposed dyking scheme at that settlement. Letters were promptly received acknowledging the receipt of the documents and stating that the matter should receive the government's earliest attention. The people are very much gratified at the promptness exhibited by the new government, and we have been requested to make a note of it. Under the administration of Mr. Beaven things were different, and petitions from municipal corporations were frequently permitted to lie undisturbed in pigeonholes until it was hoped they were utterly forgotten.

A TOUCHING INCIDENT.—On Saturday night Ella Digby, a grand-daughter of Sergt. McMurphy, died in this city at the age of 8 years and 7 mos. Her little brother died on the 11th inst., at 8:40 p.m., and Ella died at 8:45. Just before her death she was sitting on her mother's knee, knowing that the hours of her life were numbered. Looking up to the sorrowful face which was bent over her she whispered encouragingly: "Ma, I am so happy. Jesus and the angels are with me, and they are singing for me." Five minutes afterwards little Ella passed peacefully away, and her happy spirit took its flight among that angel band which came to cheer the last moments of the little sufferer.

THE FIRE COMPANY.—In a letter published elsewhere Mr. McColl takes exception to some remarks which appeared in the last issue of the COLUMBIAN relative to the Hyack Fire Co's. Good Friday practice. The remarks were the result of our own observation. It may be true that water was thrown 2¼ minutes after leaving the hall, but any person watching the movements of the firemen could not fail to notice that there was room for improvement in the manner of handling the hose. Nothing but careful practice will give the desired efficiency. Mr. McColl claims that the result was creditable, "considering it to be our first practice of the season." This we shall not attempt to dispute. But we were not aware that it was the first practice of the season.

CITY COUNCIL. -- Council met on Monday night. Present, His Worship the Mayor and Councillors Brown, Curtis, Ferris, Johnston, and Elliott. A number of communications were received, among them one from the provincial secretary respecting water frontages. The Board of Works reported that they could not accept the work on Clinton st. until it had been approved by Mr. Holmes, the superintendent; also, that certain streets had been cut for water-pipes and obstructed without permission of the council. The Board of Health reported certain irregularities requiring attention, and that the public cemetery needed repairs. The Mayor stated that there was a balance of cemetery funds on hand amounting to $50, which was at the committee's disposal. A communication was received from the police magistrate stating that his reason for not taking action in the Bailey murder case was that his jurisdiction had been questioned by the government agent. A resolution was passed forbidding the opening or obstructing of any street without permission. After the transaction of other business the council adjourned till the 9th April.

BURGLARIES —On Friday night a double burglary was committed on the premises of Mr. Robt. Dickinson. The burglars first went to Mr. Dickinson's residence, which they entered. They went up to the room in which he was sleeping, found his trousers and took from the pocket about $10 in money and the keys of the safe. There was a light burning in Mr. Dickinson's bedroom at the time, and although there were pieces of jewelry and other valuables lying about the room nothing appears to have been taken but the contents of the trousers. The burglars then went to Mr. Dickinson's shop on Columbia st., opened the safe with the keys, and robbed it of about $210. Of this sum there was a $100 note on the Bank of British Columbia and an endorsed cheque on the same bank for $32.90, made by VanVolkenburg & Co. in favor of Jas. Wise. The cheque, of course, will be useless to the burglars. Mr. Dickinson has not the faintest idea as to who the burglars are, but it is fair to presume that this is not their first job. On the same night the office of the Royal City Planing Mills was entered, and $10 taken from the drawer. In view of these burglaries, and the great influx of strangers, it seems to us some steps should be taken to provide for the safety of property in this city. One night watchman is utterly insufficient for the service.

From the North.

The str. Princess Louise arrived at Victoria on Saturday, 24th inst., from Fort Simpson, and brings the following news which we summarize from the Colonist: Hostilities have not quite ceased at Metlakatla, although there has been no collision for some time past. The opposing forces have almost come to the conclusion to let one another severely alone. Mr. Duncan's people are as enthusiastic as ever. They have removed everything from the land claimed by Bishop Ridley, and are now carrying on business on their new location as though nothing had happened to disturb their trading arrangements. Hereafter by tacit agreement the Jews will have no dealings with the Samaritans." At the mouth of the Skeena three new canneries are approaching completion. These establishments belong to Messrs. Lord, White, and Cuthbert respectively, and are all built on a large scale. Great activity prevails not only at the new canneries but at the old ones also. Many of them are enlarging, and all are hard at work making preparations for the reception of the spring catch of salmon. On the Naas, Alert Bay and elsewhere all is life and animation. Blackett & Donaldson have been prospecting in the vicinity of Cape Scott. They brought down about half a ton of good-looking ore, in some pieces of which silver can be seen very plainly.

PROGRESS OF RAILWAY WORK.

(By Telegraph to the Columbian.)

YALE, March 27.—At the slide above the big tunnel work is being carried on night and day. There are about 100 white men there and it is expected that the slide will be all moved by the 20th of April. From there to Skuzzy, 7 miles farther up, the grading is all done and bridges alone have to be built to complete the work. At Camp 19, Boston Bar, there are 70 whites all timber men, making bridges and building the trestle along Boston Bar bluff. From there to Camp 21 4 miles above the grade is completed. There are at this camp 40 timber men and 8 gangs of Chinese who work from there up. Camp 22 is closed for the present. At Camp 23 opposite the 23 mile post there are 70 white men and 16 gangs of Chinese. 4 heavy structures are being put up near this point. At Camp 24½ miles beyond there are 40 white men making timber and putting up trestling. Just above this point the largest bridge so far built on the C. P. R. in B. C. has just been completed. It is 126 feet high built in four stories and is about 350 feet long. At Camp 25, Salmon River, there are 4 gangs of Chinese, 25 whites and a number of Indians taking out foundations and framing Salmon River bridge. At this point the Company has a sawmill run by contract by D. Smith. At Camp 27, opposite the 42 mile post, there are 65 white men making timber and 22 gangs of Chinese grading. From Skowash Creek to Tisco flat H. T. Keefer's sub-contract there are 800 Chinese grading and 40 whites working in the tunnels. From Tisco flat to Fraser Crossing work is all done with the exception of a little finishing required on McBride's tunnel sub-contract. At the crossing where the iron bridge built in England will be placed gangs of men, about 60 in all, are getting out stone for the piers. The pier on the wagon road side will be commenced in a few days. From the crossing to Lytton there are 350 Chinese grading and a gang of 28 carpenters putting up trestling near Lytton. The Company are running a sawmill at Houtles Station where 20 white men are employed. Above Lytton 2 gangs of Chinese are filling in behind cribwharfing. From this time on as work gets finished on the lower portion of the road the men will be put at work between Lytton and Spences Bridge. 5 gangs of men leave for that section to-morrow. It is anticipated that if the season is favorable the line will be completed to Fraser River Crossing by the coming winter. Weather to-day cold and raw. A snow storm evidently pending.

EXCLUSIVE DESPATCHES TO THE COLUMBIAN.

LONDON, Mar. 25.—A reaction has set in relative to the attack on Lady Florence Dixie. Her friends believe that the attack was really made on her, but that the object was to frighten her. She is furious at the doubts cast upon her veracity, and outraged at the conduct of the Commons. As the elaborate preparations for the Czar's coronation progress, activity among the Nihilists increases. Hundreds of arrests have been made, and the greatest apprehension prevails in official and public circles. It is believed that nothing but superhuman efforts will protect the Czar and his visitors. During service in St. Paul's cathedral a well-dressed man ran up the altar steps with his hat on and dashed the cross, candlesticks, vases and flowers to the floor. He was arrested. The Queen's knee is still a little swollen, but her health is good. 2,000 infantry are protecting public buildings in London. The Coldstream guards are posted in the parliament buildings and Buckingham Palace. The dynamite excitement is subsiding. The persons who planned the Westminster explosion had no idea of the storm of indignation and uncompromising hostility which it would produce.

TORONTO, Mar. 24.—A heavy snow storm prevails throughout Canada and the provinces. 30,000 Canadians returned from the United States last year.

PROVINCIAL LEGISLATURE.

FIRST SESSION OF THE FOURTH PARLIAMENT.

TUESDAY.

Mr. Dunsmuir presented a report from the civil service committee recommending a general increase of salaries in all departments of the civil service, and that the heads of departments receive sessional allowance.

Mr. McLeese moved an address to the Lieutenant Governor asking him to request the establishment of a monthly mail service in winter between Barkerville, Snow Shoe, Keithley, Harvey, and Forks of Quesnelle, and a semi-monthly service in summer. Also, asking that a geological survey party be sent to explore the Cariboo district. The motion was seconded by Mr. Wilson, and carried.

Mr. McTavish moved for an address asking the Dominion Government to provide for the introduction of various kinds of fish into the waters of British Columbia, and for the establishment of hatcheries. In support of the motion he said he was sure the house would agree with him that our fisheries were and would continue a great source of wealth. The sooner however that hatcheries were established the better. Not only a salmon hatchery but other varieties of fish that were unknown here should be introduced. British Columbia so far had had nothing voted by the Dominion government, while the other provinces had annually received large appropriations for fish hatcheries. This province should certainly get its share, and two or three hatcheries should be established. New varieties such as lobsters, eastern oysters, etc., would do well here, and soon become a great source of profit. Statistics were quoted to show that hatcheries were very successful in the east. —Hon. Mr. Robson, in seconding the motion, complimented the honorable the mover for the interest and erudition displayed in placing the subject before the house. He (Mr. Robson) congratulated the house upon the infusion of new blood—vigorous young men, able and willing to study up and deal with such questions. Some wise man had said that "He who makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew before, is entitled to be regarded as a benefactor of his race." If that be so, how much more shall he be entitled to be regarded as a benefactor of his own race who makes two food fish grow where only one grew before. (Laughter.) Every year the Dominion government expended large sums upon fish culture, in the older provinces. Indeed, in this important respect Canada stands amongst the foremost nations, and even the great republic took lessons from her. But here is a province which, for the extent, variety and possibilities of its fish farm, so to speak, is unequalled by any province in the Dominion, or state of the Union, and it was most reasonable that we should expect to share in these fish breeding operations. With our incomparable sea and inland systems, it is difficult to overestimate the importance of our great sea farms, the product of which would not only greatly swell our exports but constitute a most important food supply for our own people. But it is not only in an economic sense that our fisheries are valuable. The honorable member for Victoria District very properly contemplates the stocking of our inland waters wit fish for sportsmen, thus rendering the country additionally attractive. He (Mr. Robson) hoped to see fish culture established in this province, on a broad and permanent basis, with an agent experienced in the art to superintend the work.—Mr. Semlin complimented the mover on bringing forward the resolution. He wished to point out, however, that the great lakes of the interior, such as Shuswap and others, were the natural breeding grounds of many kinds of fish. Hatcheries could not be confined to the Fraser or the lower country. Mr. Grant thought there was no other country in the world so adapted to fish culture as this province.—Resolution passed unanimously.

In reply to Mr. John, the provincial secretary stated that the Government had under consideration the establishment, at some central place, of an office for making analytical assays of minerals, but it would not probably be undertaken this season.

The South Wellington Railway bill and the Quesnelle Dam Amendment act were discussed and advanced a stage.

WEDNESDAY.

Mr. Wilson presented a majority report from the Public Accounts' Committee. In the debate which followed it came out that the report was endorsed by only a part of the committee, while others strongly opposed it. Hon. Mr. Smithe denounced the report as an attempt to whitewash the late Government.

The Wellington Colliery bill was discussed at some length.

Mr. Orr offered a resolution to the effect that a registry office be established at once at New Westminster.—Hon Mr. Smithe said the Government intended to establish such an office, but the work envolved would be too great to bring down a measure this season.

After discussing a number of other measures, the New Westminster Southern Railway bill came up Hon. Mr. Davie attacked the bill, which was supported by Mr. Beacon and Mr. McTavish. Messrs. Dunsmuir and Galbraith and Hon. Mr. Robson supported the bill.

THURSDAY.

This day's sitting was occupied with the New Westminster Southern Railway bill, which was completed and the County Courts bill. The house then adjourned till Thursday next.

The Fire Practice.

EDITOR COLUMBIAN.—With your permission I would like to say a few words in regard to your notice of the Hyack practice last Friday, and which appeared in the issue of Saturday, 24th inst. You commence—"If it was intended to get the hose and engine in working order with the greatest possible despatch upon leaving the hall, the company can hardly be congratulated upon the result." You are right in surmising our intention and I contend with all due deference to you that the result was satisfactory. The first stream was thrown in 2¼ minutes after leaving the hall and a second train of hose was laid up Mary street and along Clarkson street to the rear of Colonial Hotel and ready for work in 3½ minutes from hall. This I say was creditable, considering it to be our first practice of the season. The hose from Clarkson street threw water clean over the hotel into Columbia street. You are right about the hose bursting, but this is an accident likely to occur in the best regulated fire department. You continue—"The force on the breaks was manifestly unequal to sustain a steady stream for any length of time." In answer to this I might say that at fires we largely depend upon the assistance we get from the outside. Last Friday, owing to the early hour, no doubt (9 a. m.), very few people were about and you must remember that men do not care to exert themselves at practice as much as at an actual fire. I take this opportunity to thank those gentlemen who so kindly gave us their assistance to test our engine and hose, and who, with one exception treated us with civility and seemed anxious to render all help in their power. Your closing remarks we fully endorse, viz.—"If we are to have an efficient fire organization it should have the active support of substantial citizens." Now, Mr. Editor set a good example, sign our roll, and contribute to our support not only with your money but your muscle.—Yours respectfully,

WM. MCCOLL.

CHAPTER XXIX.

"I was not aware that Bennett had so many friends. I only know him, of course, as a man promoted from the ranks—a good fellow in his way, no doubt," said he, coolly, taking up the Punch that he had laid aside.

"Come, Hardwicke," said Sir Duncan; and in a wonderfully short time the room was cleared, and not one of the gentlemen, in leaving, thought it necessary to bid the captain good-morning, with the exception of the laird, who had not heard before about Doodles. He alone said a word to him as he passed, and Badger answered him affably; but as the door closed he sprang to his feet, and, throwing Punch on the table, swore a loud oath.

He was beginning to take a personal interest in this matter of Mrs. Jenkins. This morning he had not cared about it more than about a dozen other affairs of the same kind of which he had early information; but now, if he were to be bullied and slighted on that fellow Bennett's account, he would take some trouble about it, and if he were to exert himself he might turn the tables yet, and prove all these speech-making gentry here to be in the wrong.

He took a turn or two up and down the room and reflected; and the result of his cogitations was the dispatch of an anonymous letter by the next post to Mr. Jenkins, suggesting that he should search in Stirling and Tillybodle for the accomplice of his wife's flight. He wrote the note in a fine, sloping hand, and with one or two faults of spelling—that would, he thought, make it appear the work of an uneducated woman; and having posted it, he returned to the castle with a good appetite for his dinner.

"Jenkins will probably write. If he's the fellow I take him for he'll care very little about his wife; but if he should be in a hurry, and come out to the office, Allen will send up for me—and I can easily manage him; but I must be at hand for a day or two," thought he.

Sir Duncan did not on this occasion ask Hardwicke to accompany him home. He did not feel as yet desirous of talking this new statement of Badger's over with him, for he was troubled as well as annoyed. He knew that, however thoroughly this sort of story may be refuted, it always leaves an unpleasant trail behind it. People remember that "there was something once about So-and-so," and they forgot that the something turned out to be a slanderous fiction—an empty nothing. It was certainly most unfortunate that such a coincidence of dates should have occurred; and the newspaper into which he had looked confirmed Badger's assertion on that head. All his friends had agreed, as they went out of the club, in condemning the man, his manner, and his talk; yet he would be sure to make himself heard—he would in all probability let the rumor find its way to Laura Hardwicke's ears, and thence it was but a little way to the manse. If Mr. Bennett were to hear a whisper of it there would not only be sore trouble in store for his poor wife, but for Ronald himself; for his father was one who could rarely distinguish between gossip that might be true and gossip that should at once be scouted and trodden under foot.

Thinking of these things, kind Sir Duncan went home with a troubled mind, and debated whether he could in any way ascertain the truth, or whether it would be better to allow matters to take their own course. He had begged Hardwicke to say nothing about the affair, and he had promised to be silent; so perhaps on the whole it would be wisest to take no farther notice at present, and content himself with watching for any elucidation of what was likely to be widely known as "The Piershill Mystery."

It was extraordinary, however, that in the next day or two the papers should have made so much of what in reality was a trifling incident. As soon as it became clear that no accident had occurred the thing might surely have been allowed to drop. But, far from this being the case, there was now almost always an allusion, perhaps only a couple of lines long, to the matter.

Even Miss Forbes began to notice it, and was particularly struck with one short paragraph, which ran as follows: "A new light has been thrown on the fate of Mrs. Jenkins by the discovery of an envelope, the post-mark on which attracts attention to the village of T—e, not a hundred miles from Stirling. It is believed that the pursuit will be carried on to London."

"Dear me, Duncan, where can this be? T—e! It might be Tillybodle," said Miss Forbes. "I trust no one hereabouts has had anything to do with Mrs. Jenkins—it would be so very unpleasant. Just fancy such a trifle as an envelope being of use as evidence! I hope T—e is not Tillybodle."

"I hope so too; though, even if they have found some envelope sent from Tillybodle, there may have been no harm in the letter," replied Sir Duncan.

"No, I suppose not; but one's curiosity is excited when a thing comes near one in this way."

"Alicia! I wish you did not jump at conclusions so readily. There are other villages not a hundred miles from Stirling to which the phrase might equally apply—Tillywhortle and Tynside, for example. Besides, the whole thing may be a blunder; and in any case I cannot understand such a fuss being made about it. It is detestable. Why should people be so anxious to inquire into unpleasant stories?" said Sir Duncan, tartly.

Miss Forbes looked up in extreme surprise, and said no more; but by-and-by she remarked, softly, to Muriel, "My dear, I hope your dear father is not unwell; he spoke quite shortly to me this morning, and without the slightest cause;" and after this the two ladies watched Sir Duncan for the next twelve hours with eyes full of care, till they were forced to admit that there was nothing the matter.

CHAPTER XXX.

ON THE TRACK.

Meantime, at Piershill, Mr. Jenkins had gone through a good deal of mental excitement. When he returned home about two in the morning, in a not very clear-headed condition, he accepted the servant's statement with surprise and some annoyance, but without any doubts, and tumbled into bed to sleep off the effects of his evening.

Next morning, however, when he awoke and found his wife had not returned, he became seriously angry. He had intented to give her a "rowing," as he termed it, for venturing out at all without his permission, especially as he had no idea where she could have gone; but that she should stay out and leave him to dress and breakfast without the many attentions which he always expected, was an unheard-of-crime.

Still, it did not occur to him that she could have left him. She had been careful, even when her temper flashed up under repeated insults, never to breathe a word that should lead him to suspect her of such an intention; and he did not give her credit for force of character to form, or even courage to carry out, any connected scheme. Very possibly, had Ronald not been there to assist her, Ellen would have justified his opinion of her weakness.

By the time he had breakfasted on Wednesday Jenkins grew seriously uneasy, and consulted the adjutant, and by his advice the police. Provincial police are not celebrated for speed or great detective power, and the rest of the morning and part of that afternoon were consumed in a search through all the dimly lighted and lonely roads in the vicinity. Then at last it occurred to a genius in the force that the information furnished by Mr. Jenkins might be defective, and that the lady might have intended to run away. He put the question to Jenkins delicately, as one feeling the way, and anxious not to give needless offence.

"Run away!" repeated Jenkins, in extreme amazement; "oh, she'd never manage that. And where could she go? She knew no more than a baby about places."

"Has she taken any money with her, or clothes? It would be advisable to make a careful inspection," said the policeman. Decidedly he was an acquisition to the corps.

"By jingo, I never thought of that! What a blockhead I was not to look!" quoth Jenkins, understanding the situation rightly. And he went with all speed to his wife's room, and hastily flung open the door of a wardrobe and pulled out the drawers, turning her poor little garments on to the floor.

Then he was at fault again. He didn't know what she had, seldom noticed or remembered her dresses, and could not in the least tell whether things were missing or not. Certainly, if she had taken anything, she had left what seemed to his masculine eyes a good deal behind her. He bethought him of the servant, and summoned her hastily.

"Here, Janet—has the missis taken any of her clothes away? I want to know—seems to me, she's left the whole of her trash here," said he, garnishing his words, as usual, with expletives in plenty.

The woman glanced over the heaps on the floor, and then into the wardrobe, and one rapid survey satisfied her.

"My! Sir, there's an awfu' lot o' things awa'! Whaur's her black-silk goun, and her bonnet?"

"She may have gone out in them," said Jenkins.

"Na, she didna. I saw her, and she had her auld brown wincey on, that I was to have had come term-day," said Janet, indignantly. "There's her Indian shawl too, that she's prood o'—that's awa', and a wheen o' her white claes, and buits tae. My word! she's gotten plenty wi' her for ae nicht's veesit," she concluded, with a sour smile.

"Her old gown on, you say, and her things taken? Oh ho, my lady!" muttered Jenkins, "we'll see now how the money stands."

He went to the little Indian box—a birthday gift from her father—in which Ellen had been wont to keep the sums he gave her for the house expenses. It was locked (Ellen's tears had fallen on its painted lid as she turned the key in it for the last time), after emptying it of its contents). With a knife and the poker Jenkins broke it open, and examined its divisions hurriedly.

"Every penny gone, and she's got near twenty-four hours' start of me!" he cried, and flung the broken box into the grate, and hastened down to the sitting-room, where the adjutant and colonel had now joined the policeman.

"We're all on the wrong track," said he, an angry flush burning on his sullen face, "and that pale-faced little chit has outwitted me. She's taken her best clothes, and every penny she could lay her hands on. She's run away, and hasn't left a single thing to trace her by."

The two officers endeavored to say what was fitting under the circumstances; but though Jenkins accepted their condolences, and tried to look as though he believed them, he guessed truly enough the purport of their thoughts, and it was this more than anything that stirred his anger. When the next proceedings had been discussed, and such advice as policeman "A" could offer had been tendered and received, Jenkins was left alone to think over the state of affairs, and come, if possible, to some decision.

"Well done, Mis. Jenkins!" exclaimed the adjutant, the moment they were outside the house.

"Serve him right, the scoundrel!" added the colonel; "though I wouldn't have expected it of her—would you?"

"No; I confess I didn't give her credit for so much pluck, and that's where the shoe will pinch Jenkins. To have tyrannized over the poor little soul, and then to be done so neatly! It's the best thing I've heard for a long time."

"It is, if she's gone alone," returned the colonel.

"Whew!" The adjutant paused a minute, and then said, slowly, "Well I believe she has. She was a good little woman in her way.

"Yes, I'm inclined to think so too."
