Register! Register!!

Once more would we appeal to those who have not already done so, and who possess the requisite qualification, to have their names at once placed upon the list of voters. The qualifications are, briefly, one year's residence in the Province, and two months' residence in the Electoral District. As was stated in a previous article, you cannot vote until your name has been two months on the list, and there is a very great probability of a general election—two general elections—taking place in this Province in two or three months. There never was a time in the history of the country when it was of greater importance than the present that every elector should exercise well and wisely his political functions as a voter. A new House must be elected. A new House must be elected out of which a new Government shall be formed. The duty, therefore, now devolves upon the electors of sending to the new House suitable material out of which to form a good Government. The whole country feels, painfully feels, that there must be a radical change—that the present Government has outlasted its usefulness, and that there is not the material in the old House out of which to form a good strong governing party. In such an emergency it is of supreme importance that the whole body of electors shall step forward and do their duty to themselves and to their country. Looking at the subject in a more local light, there never was a period in its history when it was more important New Westminster District should, so to speak, put her best foot forward. It has been seen in the recent struggle for the rights of the District how much importance is attached to the number of voters. New Westminster must have justice. How much more easily will it be obtained if the full voting power is put forth to send the strongest men to the new House—men who will neither be bamboozled nor put down, men who can and will insist upon justice being done to their District. All eyes are now turned to this District. Already it is the most important; and railway operations will add enormously to its importance within the next year or two. Under these circumstances it is surely the duty of every qualified person to register; and it is equally the duty of every registered person to exercise the right of voting, and to do so with an intelligent apprehension of the consequences of his act. Let some active, leading spirit in each locality throughout the District and throughout the Province, make it his immediate business to see that any unregistered persons shall have their application papers filled and sent in to the Collectors.

Tilton Interviewed.

While in Portland the other day, Mr. Tilton, Chief Engineer for Mr. Onderdonk, was interviewed by a representative of the Oregonian, and the result was a column of interesting reading, from which the following is taken:

Grading on the section between Emory and Port Moody will begin about the 25th of this month. Arrangements have been made for the importation of 8,000 Chinese to arrive within sixty days. Two vessels with 1,200 coolies arrived last month and the men are now at work. Five thousand men will be put on the line between Port Moody and Emory and a like number on the Fraser river.

The work thus far on the Fraser river has resulted in the completion of 23 miles of track, under the contract secured in 1880, northeast from Emory. Above these 23 miles 1,200 men have been at work for 18 months, and the grade from the 60th to the 70th mile is nearly completed. The work from Emory to Thompson river, a distance of 60 miles, is probably the most difficut and expensive on the North American continent. Fraser river is bordered with rugged mountains of solid granite from 6,000 to 8,000 feet high. In the first 17 miles there are 13 tunnels—4 in one mile and 6 in another 2 miles. Mr. Onderdonk's contracts include, in addition to the new one above mentioned, the line from Emory to Kamloops Lake, a distance of 127 miles, which was originally divided into four contracts. The total number of tunnels is 27, and the longest is 1,500 feet. Six Ingersoll drills, operated by compressed air, were used at each end, and 6 feet advance was made every 24 hours. On the division above Emory there are no less than 600 trestles and bridges, and in the last 85 miles more than 100. The embankments at formation level are 17 feet wide and cuts 22 feet. Tunnels are 22 feet wide and 21 feet high. None other than 58-pound steel rails are used.

In the upper section of the work there are 10,000,000 cubic yards of earth excavation, 3,000,000 cubic yards of rock, exclusive of tunnels, and 2,000,000 cubic yards of loose rock and cemented gravel excavation. Between 30,000,000 and 40,000,000 feet of timber, board measure, are required for structures over the entire contracts. The rock is of the hardest compact granite, in which often occur wide and extremely hard quartz veins. For miles the road is literally hewn out of the sides of the cliffs. The approaches to many of the tunnels are "galleried," i. e., the cliffs are left overhanging the roadway, unsupported by any outer wall. At the eastern approach to tunnel No. 7 for over 100 feet, the bluff is galleried and overhangs the roadbed, below which is an almost perpendicular precipice of 200 feet. The Fraser river rises in many places 100 feet. At Hell Gate, which closely resembles the Dalles of the Columbia, the river is but 120 feet wide. The first tunnel is at the north end of Yale, and the first four happen within a mile and a half of the town. It required 18 months to build the first two miles, working tunnels night and day. From one point six tunnels are visible at a glance. Grades and curves are moderate, the heaviest grade being 50 feet to the mile. The company have constructed a pack trail along ten miles of the line at a cost of $6,000. Transportation by other means than the backs of men and mules over this distance was impossible. Although several hundred tons of powder have been used, few lives were lost. Deaths from violence numbered twenty-two. The health of the men is now excellent.

To carry on the work required the investment of $750,000 on the "plant" alone. For massiveness and grandeur the scenery is unrivalled in North America, and the cloud effects are beautiful beyond comparison.

The line follows the west bank of the Fraser to a point 8 miles below Lytton, where Thompson river empties into the Fraser. Here the latter river will be crossed by an iron and steel bridge to cost $300,000. The line will then follow the south bank of the Thompson to Kamloops Lake. The contractors expect to have completed, by the end of this year, 120 miles of grade, and have 50 miles of track in operation. The first two miles north from Emory cost a trifle over $200,000 per mile, and eleven miles, from the 18th to the 29th, cost $175,000 per mile. The average cost per mile of the upper division (along Fraser and Thompson rivers) will be over $75,000 per mile. This does not include cost of rails and fastenings, which are furnished by the government. The 212 miles from Port Moody to Kamloops lake will be, exclusive of rails, $12,000,000. The company have at Yale their own nitro-glycerine and powder works, with a capacity of 4,000 lbs. per day, car and machine shops and all supply departments. They have employed since the beginning of the work from 3,000 to 3,500 men. A considerable portion of their supplies are landed from ocean crafts at New Westminster, and conveyed by steamers ninety miles to Emory, the base of operations, where the company have an incline to the steamboat landing. A steamer is under construction and will be launched in a few days, for navigation of the upper Fraser, between Boston Bar and mouth of Thompson river. Capt. Nat Lane will be in command. The boat is intended for transportation of supplies, and will be the first to ascend above Boston Bar.

M. Blavier attributes the disappearance of the sardine from the coast of Brittany, where it was once the source of a large revenue, to a change in the direction of the Gulf Stream. The question was deemed so important by the Paris Academy of Sciences that a special committee has been appointed to investigate the matter.

A remarkable cloud, observed in Guatemala during eight consecutive days of last February, was found to consist of seeds floating in the air. The stream of particles resembled snowflakes in appearance, and was only visible when between the observer and the sun.

Salmon.

There is a very interesting article before us upon the salmon fisheries of the Columbia river, embracing a sketch showing the progressive development of this industry from 1866 to 1881 inclusive. In 1866 the total pack was 4,000 cases; the price paid per fish was 15 cts. and the price obtained per case was $16.00. In 15 years the industry grew, until, in 1881, the pack was 550,000 cases. The price paid for the fish was 60 cts. each, and the export value $5.00 per case. William Hume had the river and the business all to himself in 1866 and a big thing he made of it—buying his fish at 15 cts. apiece and selling at $16 a case. Now there are 35 canneries on the river, representing an aggregate capital of over two million dollars, and employing, during the fishing season, about 7,500 men, of whom 4,000 are Chinese. William Hume, the pioneer, is still in the business, at the head of it, too, and he sticks to white labor on principle. He has demonstrated by actual results that white labor is the best. Hume's splendid establishment stands at Eagle Cliff, and represents a capital of $150,000. Until quite recently the market for canned salmon was almost exclusively confined to Europe, but now the New York market promises to become an important one for Columbia river salmon. It is expected that New York will take 150,000 cases this year, and a ship will be loaded at Astoria for that port. Canners on the Columbia river are looking eagerly forward to the time, near at hand now, when they shall be able to ship direct by rail to the Eastern States, feeling confident that a large eastern trade will then grow up, and that it will no longer be necessary to cross seas for a market. All this is very interesting to our own canners. Should the bulk of the Columbia river output be diverted into new markets in the eastern States, it will leave all the more room for ours in the markets of the Old Country. The consumption of canned food would appear to be rapidly increasing in Great Britain. Referring to this subject, the U. S. Consul at Leith writes: "Canned goods are being more generally used by the British public, though, curiously enough, the upper classes are extremely ignorant regarding them. The principal consumers are the laboring classes; and it is not uncommon to see a laborer buy a tin can of salmon for his dinner and eat it out of the tin. It is expected that the consumption of salmon will be much larger this year than in any previous one, owing to the good state of trade generally and also to the scarcity and increased demand for compressed beef. When it is considered that most of the nourishment has been expressed from this beef, it is not extraordinary that the difference between the value of the two articles begins to be appreciated." Thus it is re-assuring to mark indications of increased consumption and extending markets for this article of food, constituting so important an industry in this Province. As yet salmon canning is but in its infancy in British Columbia. With judicious oversight and an efficient system of breeding, and with direct railway communication with the East, there would appear to be every reason for anticipating a steady growth of this important industry in these waters. But there is one change that all true friends of the country must desire to see brought about; and that is the substitution of white, and, if you like, red, labor for Mongolian.

Editorial Notes.

Up to the date of the assassination it was on the cards that Lord Dufferin would, in August next, succeed Earl Spencer as Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. How far the policy which the Government had marked out for itself will be affected by what transpired in Phœnix Park on the 6th, it is impossible at present to determine; but it would be a pity if the plan of placing Lord Dufferin at the head of Ireland should have to be abandoned. There is good reason for believing that the appointment would be well received in Ireland, his Lordship being exceedingly popular with every section of the people; and his rare diplomatic and administrative ability could not possibly be better employed.

Is Chinese labor really economical? No. To the superficial observer it appears to be cheap. But if one looks all over and under and around the subject, and more especially if consequential conditions be taken into account, it is found that Chinese labor, in the general sense at least, is the very reverse of economic. Can we get on without it? Yes. An intelligent gentleman writing from Nevada county, says:—"Here there are scarcely any Chinamen left, for about ten months ago they were thrown out of work in the claims and their places have been filled by whites. People are very well satisfied and the work is better done. The Superintendents always predicted that we could not do without the Chinese help, and now it turns out that we are much better off without the Chinese work."

The resolution passed by the City Council on Monday night, aiming at the incorporation of that now important area bounded by Fraser river, Pitt river, Burrard Inlet and the Gulf of Georgia, is well deserving of serious attention. Within that area there is a very large extent of land paying the wild land tax. There are also large communities, with an immediate prospect of much larger ones, the affairs of which would, or at least should, be much better managed under incorporation; and there would be the basis for quite a respectable revenue. But while agreeing with the resolution in the main, we have some doubt as to the wisdom or practicability of including the whole area within a single municipality. Would it not be better to make two of it, letting the Douglas-street road be the dividing line? Of course all our Council can do in the matter is to suggest. It is for the people more directly concerned to determine.

On Friday nine hundred Chinamen, minus nine, were brought from Victoria by the steamer Princess Louise. They were penned on Pioneer wharf over night like so many cattle. On Saturday morning they were run on board the steamer William Irving and taken up to Emory. Early on Saturday morning an exciting scene was presented on the wharf. Some casus belli having arisen, the nine hundred drew off in two armies of about equal numerical strength, jabbering and shaking their bamboo sticks at each other in a very hostile manner. Actual collision was, however, averted by the timely interposition of their overseers. It it from no mawkish sentimentality that we protest against the treatment these people are subjected to. There are in most civilized countries laws in existence which would forbid the treatment of sheep or cattle or even hogs in a certain way. It is under the impression that Chinamen are human beings that we think they should be treated at least as well as the lower animals. We have no love for the Chinese as immigrants. It is with extreme regret that we see them coming amongst us, as we thoroughly believe they will prove a curse to the country. But that constitutes no good reason for improperly treating them. It is not their fault that they are swarming in upon us. It is the fault of the Government that allows this yellow wave to roll over the country.

The condition of the roads in the interior of the Mainland is described as simply disgraceful! The main trunk road from Clinton, indeed from Cache Creek, to Cariboo is almost impassable. That portion of the great arterial highway of the country appears to be completely neglected by the Government, notwithstanding the heavy tolls collected on it. The road leading from Kamloops to the great Okanagon country is in an equally wretched condition, while that between Clinton and Lillooet is no better. Every successive year during the present regime the efforts t maintain the great road system which cost so much, have been growing less efficient, until now they have become too feeble to be described by the word effort. This is a serious matter. There never was a period in the history of the country when it was more important that the trunk roads should be maintained in a state of efficiency and a vigorous policy of branch road making carried out, so as to enable the food products to reach the centres of consumption being created by railway operations. But, instead of that, the hands of the Executive hang idle; the treasury is emptied into the insatiable maw of the great "Jumbo" at Esquimalt, and the most essential public works of the country are rapidly falling into a hopeless condition of ruin and decay. A more unfortunate state of affairs could not well be imagined. The long looked-for railway construction has come. But it has found the country ill-prepared to grasp the advantages of the vast expenditures consequent thereon There are not the workers; and the feeders are paralized through the culpable neglect and wrong-doing of the Government.

Real estate is looking up all along the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway in the valley of the Lower Fraser.

The Nanaimo programme for the celebration on the 24th is an attractive and complete one. It is posted about town.

In place of a leading article in Saturday's Colonist, appeared a communication which would have been much better unpublished.

The steamer Princess Louise, Capt. Lewis, arrived from Victoria last night with a number of passengers and a full cargo of freight.

The section of the hull of the steamer Elizabeth J. Irving was towed over and deposited upon the beach at Brownville on Monday.

Miss Anna Parnell is writing most indiscreet letters to newspapers. She lacks the good sense displayed by her brother since his incarceration.

The steamer Reliance, Capt. Odin, returned from Yale on Monday night, bringing a number of passengers and the up-country mails and express.

It would appear from Mr. Homer's letter (published with the Council proceedings) that Walkem is still pursuing the suicidal policy of "fighting Canada."

Contractors will note that tenders for the new church at Chilliwhack must be in the hands of Mr. Ashwell by Saturday next, otherwise they cannot be entertained.

A very fine team of farm horses arrived for Messrs. Robson & Smith, Kulu island, from the upper country the other day. They are from the Express Co.'s stock.

The weather continues unseasonably cold and backward. The "boom" in vegetation a fortnight ago has been widely checked, and small fruit is likely to suffer more or less.

Eleven ships, large ships, are in our outer harbor of Burrard Inlet just now. We hope they may all secure cargoes, but the difficulty in procuring hands for logging is sadly hampering our mills.

In the Grocer's Gazette (London) for April our salmon is quoted at 6s. 6d. to 6s. 7½d. per doz. for 1-lb. tins—the "Maple Leaf" (Delta) brand being the highest. Columbia river salmon is quoted at 6s. 9d.

Parties sending postoffice money orders to this office will please make them payable to Robson Bros. Sometimes they are made payable to the ALEMBIAN, which is contrary to Departmental rules.

We regret to learn that the lumber interests, in common with others, are suffering severely from lack of labor. Anything like a sufficient number of loggers can be got although $60, and even $75, are offered.

A few weeks ago the Port Blakely Mill, Puget Sound, in twelve hours sawed out 190,000 feet merchantable lumber. During the week ending on that day the mill cut a little less than 1,000,000 feet lumber.

At a large meeting of Irishmen held in San Francisco resolutions were adopted denouncing the Dublin assassination. Money was subscribed towards reward for arrest of assassins.

The Ladies' Land League of Ireland sent Lady Cavendish a telegram expressing the hope she did not believe the Irish people were sunk so low as to murder one who had brought a peace offering to Ireland.

A late Ottawa exchange says it is understood that the Princess Louise will return to Canada about the beginning of June. In September it is probable that H. R. H. will accompany Lord Lorne on a visit to British Columbia.

The Coal Harbor fish oil and guano manufacturing company have been trying the experiment of catching oolachans with a sein in the river opposite this city, but they have not met with much success—three barrels at two hauls being the greatest take.

The keel of a new steamer has just been laid in the ship-yard at the lower end of the city. It is being built for Capt. Meyer and Mr. Ewen of this city, and will be used in collecting fish during the season, and for general work—making weekly trips to the North Arm settlements. It will be nearly as large as the Reliance, and is calculated to make 12 knots an hour. It will be a valuable addition to the river fleet, and is expected to be ready for work by the 1st July.

AT LAST!—Tenders for the new school house in this city are advertised for. They will be received till noon on the 29th inst.

FROM VICTORIA.—The steamer Cariboo-Fly arrived from Victoria at 6 o'clock last evening, having achieved the wonderful feat of making 65 knots in 11 hours! Who shall set bounds to steam speed?

JUDICIAL.—A court of assize, &c., &c., is announced to be held here on on 21st June; at Yale, Friday, 30th June; Lytton, Friday, 7th July; Clinton, Thursday, 13th July; Kamloops, Thursday, 20th July; Barkerville, Monday, 24th July.

PICKING UP.—An Ontario exchange says Mr. DeCosmos appears to have picked up a few points, and his bill of expenses to the British Columbia Government in connection with the recent mission to England reached the modest sum of $5,500.

BRANCHING.—Mr. Geo. R. Ashwell, the successful Chilliwhack merchant, has recently established a branch store at Harrison river, near where the Canadian Pacific Railway crosses that stream. The business is managed by Mr. Robert Erwin, formerly of Burrard Inlet.

THE STEAM FERRY.—It would be interesting to know what "power behind the throne" prevents Walkem giving the universally prayed for and long promised steam ferry across the river at this city. It is now painfully obvious that another season is to be lost in this matter. The perversity of the present administration is wonderful.

HEAVY DAMAGES.—Kilbourne was employed during the Shepherd administration of the District of Columbia in a confidential capacity. During the Congressional investigation into the affairs of the District in 1876 he refused to show his real estate books, which were demanded. For this refusal he was placed in custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms and was restrained of his liberty for 45 days. He brought suit to recover damages, and a jury has brought in a verdict giving him $100,000.

THE NEXT PARLIAMENT.—The Mail says the composition of the Dominion Parliament will be as follows under the Redistribution Bill; Ontario, 92; Quebec, 65; Nova Scotia, 21; New Brunswick, 16; Manitoba, 5; British Columbia, 6; Prince Edward Island, 6. Total for the Dominion, 211. The problem of finding the additional representatives seats in the provinces has not been an easy one; but the problem of finding them seats and desks in the House of Commons will be almost impossible of solution.

NORTH ARM MAIL SERVICE.—The programme arranged by the Department does not answer well at all If the mail came up on Tuesday and went down on Wednesday it would be a great improvement. But the rapidly expanding interests in that important settlement already demand a more frequent service. A weekly service, especially as arranged at present, cannot possibly meet the requirements of such an establishment as the Richmond cannery. There should be a semi-weekly service established at once.

THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.—A week from to-day the citizens of New Westminster will be afforded the opportunity of celebrating the Queen's Birthday in a very rational and pleasant way. A delightful sail on a comfortable and safe steamer and an opportunity to participate in the sports and games and festivities of our sister city of Nanaimo. There will be abundant accommodation for all, and all will be welcomed with that hearty hospitality for which our friends beyond the gulf are famous. Prepare your lunch-baskets and secure your tickets in time.

FRENCH DOMINATION.—A discussion arose in the Canadian House of Commons the other day about French domination in the public service. Speaking on behalf of the Scotch, Mr. Ross (Middlesex) made some humorous remarks. He said—"Go into any one of the departments and ask parley vous francais? and somebody will be found to answer oui, but ask in the language of Old Scotland, caimur hash an' dhu? and no person could be found to reply in the same language." It may be true that there are not many Scotchmen to be found in public servitude; but they are not wanting in positions of authority.

H. S. OTTAWA.—We cannot advise you to buy the Brandon lots you write about; they are in the Dundas property, across the river, and a great way from the centre of the city, if anybody knows where the centre of Brandon is. Section 23, or "Old Brandon" as it is called, is good property even at present prices, but enough around it has been surveyed and sold by speculators to make a city of 100,000 inhabitants, and if the "boom" lasts there six months longer, Brandon will be bounded on the north by the Arctic Ocean, on the south by the United States, on the east by Lake Superior and on the west by the Rocky Mountains.—Monitoba Real Estate Review.

COMMUNICATION WITH PORT MOODY.—Mr. Armstrong, M. P. P., for this city telegraphs from Victoria to the effect that the Government Agent will be instructed to have the road between this city and Port Moody immediately repaired. Whatever difference of opinion may exist as to the permanency of Port Moody as a terminal town, there can be none respecting the advisability of improving existing means of communication. A considerable amount of work is going on there now, with the prospect of early expansion, and there is a good deal of traffic between the two points—carried on under great difficulties as things are now. We hope, therefore, that there may be no delay about doing what little is to be done.

A SQUATTER'S TRIALS.—The Brandon Sun tells this yarn:—"It is told of a young man who went west not long ago to speculate in town sites at Qu'Appelle, that he built his house, not on the sand, but on a sleigh, and duly took possession of a choice quarter section. Feeling that his bonanza was a certainty, and that he would, in the near future, be numbered among the bloated capitalists, he retired at night and fell into a deep and peaceful slumber. But who can imagine his horror when on getting up next morning he found some rival had quietly hauled sleigh, house and inhabitant off the ground, and had built on the same spot, but on a more solid foundation, a house of his own and was snugly settled down to stay. The disconsolate squatter vows that when he next appoints himself lord of the soil he will have an anchor attached to his premises.

NEWS ITEMS IN BRIEF. — Senator Macdonald and Mr. Bunster from Ottawa, and Mr. B. W. Pearse and family from England, will leave San Francisco for Victoria on Saturday.—Dr. Walkem and family returned by the Dakota on Sunday.—The Colonist says that the Dominion Government have surrendered the Island railway belt and washed their hands of all responsibility to build the Island line.—Two hundred Chinese direct from Hong Kong for Fraser river canneries are about due.—Mrs. John Crowthers of Victoria died on Monday.—Mr. Thornton Fell has been called to the Bar.—Winnipeg has had another extensive fire.—The Scott Act has gone into operation in Hamilton.—The annual examination of teachers will commence at Victoria on 5th July.—H. M. gunboat Rocket is about to be put permanently out of commission.—The fire at Esquimalt on Friday destroyed a large quantity of dry-dock cement!—It is expected that the new evening paper will make its appearance in Victoria towards the end of this week.—The Colonist says McNamee will pay off all liabilities of sub-contractors and finish the dock himself.—It is announced that Deputy Minister of Marine Smith will be superannuated.—On the 4th inst. two inches of snow fell at Ottawa.—It is rumored that Dr. Schultz will be appointed the new Senator from Manitoba.—The Dublin authorities are sanguine of ultimate success in their efforts to capture the murderers.—Hamilton, secretary to the admiralty, has gone to Ireland to take Burke's place for six months.—An Irishman from America was arrested at Castle Billingham, and two others are under remand at Monaghan.

The Dockyard.

Nothing definite has been decided about the Esquimalt dockyard site or will be until the report of the Imperial Commissioners, who are now in China, shall have been submitted. In the meantime, orders have been received to erect no new buildings. It is believed that the present site will be condemned and a location further up Esquimalt harbor selected for the site of an arsenal and more extensive dockyard buildings than those on Duntze Point; that the future guardship will be a turret ship, and that a complete system of torpedo defence will be provided in place of expensive land fortifications, which would require a garrison to hold.—Colonist.

Port Moody.

The work of driving piles for the railway wharf commenced in good earnest on Saturday. The steam "driver" is a snorter. It sends its great hammer weighing 3,300 lbs. thundering down on the pile six raps a minute. The average drive is about 40 piles per diem. A second and improved pile-driver will be at work before long. The contractor is, like every employer of labor in the country, experiencing great difficulty in getting men. He hopes to receive a reinforcement from California by the next trip of the steamship Victoria. House building goes on apace and the real estate "boom' continues. On Monday Mr. Wm. Burr, senr., was offered and refused $10,000 for one-half of his property. He asks $250,000. The "Port Moody Hotel" was opened to the public on Friday, and, under Mr. Benson's management, is sure to become a favorite resort.

City Council.

Council met on Monday evening. Present—His Worship the Mayor, and Councillors Johnston, Curtis, Edmonds, and Cunningham.

The customary formalities connected with the introduction of new members having been complied with, a number of communications were read, amongst them one from Mr. Homer respecting the resolution of the Council applying to the Dominion Government for the Park on this side of the Lunatic Asylum. Following is copy of letter:

Ottawa, April 19, 1882.

SIR,—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 25th ult., asking me to urge upon the Dominion Government to transfer the Park, as per plan, to the Corporation of New Westminster.

I have placed the matter before the Government, but I fear that owing to the land question between the two governments being yet unsettled, the Dominion Government will not be enabled to make the transfer at present.

Yours, &c., &c.,
J. A. R. HOMER.

On motion of Councillor Edmonds, seconded by Councillor Cunningham, it was resolved, that in the opinion of this Council it is desirable that some effort should be made to induce the residents of that portion of the New Westminster District lying between Fraser river, Pitt river, Burrard Inlet and the Gulf of Georgia to form themselves into a Municipality, and, therefore, that a Committee consisting of of the Mayor and Councillors Edmonds and Cunningham be appointed to enquire into the subject and report thereon.

On motion, it was resolved that the Collector proceed at once to collect Road Tax, and to issue receipts for the same.

Council adjourned until first Saturday in June.

The stage of a western theatre took fire recently, but a panic and rush for the door was averted by the manager, who, with great presence of mind, slipped to the front and said: "Ladies and gentlemen, we have prepared a little surprise for you. An immense kettle of whisky punch is now being heated, and in a few moments waiters will pass through the audience and distribute it." After that the audience had to be pulled out one by one.

A city chap who had escorted a country girl to the theatre, thinking to please her, went out and bought some apples. When he placed them in her lap she spoke up loud enough to be heard all about, "What do you take me for—a cider mill?" City chap collapsed; he couldn't stand the press.

Langley Council.

Council met at the usual place on Saturday, May 6, at 1 p.m.

Present—Reeve (J. Jolly), and Councillors Johnstone, McKee, and Houston.

A communication was received from J. Mundell in reference to a disputed road between Messrs. Wark and Coulthard. Clerk was instructed to apply to the Attorney-General for a copy of last notice gazetting said road.

An eminent scientist says that when a lady cannot sit down without her nose becoming red, it shows that there is imperfect circulation of the blood, caused by tight lacing. Same with gentlemen. A red nose is sure sign of tightness somewhere.

An ignorant housemaid who had to call a gentleman to dinner, found him engaged in using a tooth-brush. "Well, is he coming?" said the lady of the house, when the servant returned. "Yes, ma'am, directly; he's just sharpening his teeth."

Our Story.

KITH AND KIN.

"I quite agree with you, Mr. Whaley;" she said, in a trembling voice. She could not in the least conceal her great agitation. Mr. Whaley turned to Bernard, who was standing, dark, erect, and observant, by the table. He was grave, now, of course, but he was perfectly cheerful. To have curved his features to any pretense of emotion or of lamentation—to subdue his voice to the tones of a sorrow which he did not feel, were things which it was not *in his nature to do. The frequent sar*castic smile which decorated his lips was absent, but his spirit of cool and rather bitter cynicism shone in double strength from his eyes. He looked cold, hard and indifferent—exactly what he felt, as he confronted Mrs. Conisbrough, for he had always understood in a vague way that she had created mischief at the time of his father's marriage. Judith Conisbrough, measuring him with her calm and considerate eyes, clearly read his expression and admitted it in her inmost heart—"He looks a hard, contemptuous, pitiless man," she decided.

"Before I begin to read," said Mr. Whaley, "let me present to you the only near relation of yourselves and the late Mr. Aglionby—his grandson, Bernard Aglionby."

Mrs. Conisbrough gave a quick look at him, with nervously distended eyes and twitching lips. She inclined her head a little, and her lips moved, but *no sound came from them; they seem*ed dry and parched. Bernard merely bowed, in profound silence, and Judith did not repeat her original acknowledgment. Then Aglionby sat down, and while Mr. Whaley broke the seal of the will, there was perfect stillness broken only by the rustle of Mrs. Conisbrough's dress, as she nervously moved now and then.

Bernard, sitting in the window, could see the head of the lake; he looked at it, his elbow resting on the back of his chair, his eyes shaded a little by his hand. And Mr. Whaley proceeded to read the will.

When Mrs. Conisbrough heard the date, October 7th, 18—, she started violently. It was the date of Tuesday last, the day on which he had been to see her, and on which he had so cruelly and remorselessly tormented her. A cold perspiration broke out upon her face and her lips trembled.

It was a very concise, unelaborate will; it provided for some legacies to servants and old friends, and one or two very distant relatives or connections. Then the testator left the whole of his real and personal estate, without fetter or condition of any kind, to his grandson, Bernard Aglionby, to dispose of during his lifetime, to give, bequeath, or devise in whatsoever manner seemed good to him.

There was no more; not another word, beyond the necessary little formula, and the signature of the testator and the witnesses. Mrs. Conisbrough's name, and the names of her daughters were not even mentioned.

Mr. Whaley's voice ceased. There was a momentary pause. Bernard leaned forward, and looked around the room, with a strange, bewildered sensation; a very strange sensation, as utterly devoid of triumph, or jubilation, or delight, as any sensation he had ever experienced. Rejoicing might come later; he supposed it would, for this was great news, it must be. At present the rejoicing was conspicuous by its absence.

Mrs. Conisbrough had now risen. She advanced from the sofa on which she had been sitting beside her daughter, to the table, and supported herself against it with a trembling hand. Indeed, she was trembling all over.

"Is that all, Mr. Whaley?" she enquired, in a fluttering voice.

"I am sorry to say, madam, that that is all, every word."

"And you consider that a just will?"

"Pardon me, Mrs. Conisbrough, I do not, and I even went so far as to expostulate with Mr. Aglionby when he desired me to draw it up. I speak plainly, Mr. Bernard Aglionby."

"Yes, you are right to do so."

"Pooh! Expostulating? What is that?" she exclaimed, speaking vehemently, and with strong, passionate excitement. "I tell you, it is mon*strous; it is wicked, it is mad.* He knew what he had promised, he knew what he had led me to expect—how I had yielded to his wishes many a time, on the tacit understanding that my self-sacrifice was to be made good to me and my daughters at his death. This is a freak, a folly, a frenzy—I shall dispute the will."

"My dear madam, do nothing of the kind, I implore you. You would cut your own throat. No court would find for you, and you would simply ruin yourself.

"I shall dispute the will. And you, sir (turning with passionate fierceness to Bernard, who had risen, and stood gravely listening to and looking at her)—"you, I warn. I warn you not to take possession of this house and property, or to spend the incomes belonging to them, for you shall make restitution of every penny you disburse. No jury of Englishmen will dispute the base injustice of this will. I should wish to be fair, it is what I have always intended; I would not grasp everything and give you nothing, but before the sight of heaven it is no upstart stranger who——"

"Beware, Mrs. Conisbrough!" said Mr. Whaley warningly. "The upstart stranger you speak of is an Aglionby, and so far as descent goes, the direct male heir to every penny his grandfather left behind him, and to every stick and stone on the estate."

"No doubt, sir, it will be to your interest to support the strongest."

"Mother! mother!" exclaimed Judith, rising, and putting her hand on her mother's arm. But Mrs. Conisbrough was no longer mistress of herself.

"But might is not always right," she went on, "and occasionally the innocent win their cause against the guilty."

"Shall we not discuss the matter some other time when you are more composed?" said Bernard, with profound courtesy of tone and manner, as he too bent over the table, and looking with grave enquiry directly into her eyes.

Their faces were very near together. As she met this direct, serious gaze, Mrs. Conisbrough's high color suddenly faded; she gave a kind of gasp or sob, and shrank away, averting his gaze.

"Dear mother, let us go away now,' said Judith soothingly.

"Not until I have told these men who are in league against us, once again that I defy them, and that they had better beware what——"

She stopped suddenly, put her hand to her side, a common gesture with her, for her heart was weak, and strong excitement usually brought on an attack of illness. She sank down upon the sofa now, livid and unconscious. Judith sprang to her, unfastened her bonnet-strings, loosened her mantle, and bent over her anxiously. Aglionby walked up to her, and asked in a low voice, and one which he evidently constrained, to repress some kind of emotion:

"Can I assist you in any way?"

"No, I thank you," replied the young lady lifting her eyes to his face, with a look of such deep and mournful sadness, that Aglionby, feeling as if he had rashly intruded upon some sacred precinct, said humbly, "I beg your pardon," and retired again to Mr. Whaley's side.

For a short time there was an uncomfortable, brooding kind of silence. Then, at last, Judith turned round, her face disturbed, despite its set expression, her voice faltering a little.

"I am very sorry," she said, but my mother has had these attacks before, and she—I am afraid—I know she must remain here just at present."

"On the sofa for an hour or two," said Mr. Whaley almost briskly. I am sure Mr. Aglionby——"

"For a day or two at least, I grieve to say. I must send for the doctor—at least," she added hastily, and look-at Bernard with a deep flush of embarrassment, "it is as much as her life is worth to remove her at present."

"Mr. Aglionby," said Mr. Whaley, looking at him, "you are master here now. What are these ladies to do?"

"I beg them to make use of the house and everything there is in it, as long as it suits their convenience to do so," he replied, still in the same courteous, almost gentle tone, and looking earnestly at Judith.

"I thank you," said the latter. "Then may I ring for Mrs. Aveson, and order a boy to be sent for Dr. Lowther?"

"You know the ways of the place, I imagine, better than I do; will you please take all authority in the matter into your own hands? Pray oblige me by ordering exactly what is convenient to you," said Bernard. "Shall I ring the bell for you?" He put his hand upon the rope, and turning to Mr. Whaley, added in a lower voice, "Shall we not leave the ladies at present, and I will inquire later if they have all they want?"

With that he pulled the bell, and then, saying to Judith, "I trust Mrs. Conisbrough will soon recover," he followed Mr. Whaley from the room.

As they closed the door after them, and found themselves in the house-place, they met Mrs. Aveson, going to answer the summons. Aglionby paused. "Do not leave it to Miss Conisbrough to tell her," he said. And Mr. Whaley, stopping the woman, said:

"Mrs. Aveson, let me present to you your new master, and the old squire's successor."

"Sir! I thought the young ladies—Mrs. Conisbrough——" She was paralyzed with astonishment and dismay.

"*Not at all. Mr. Aglionby's pro*perty goes to his grandson. And I think the ladies want you. Mrs. Conisbrough is ill."

She made a hasty step toward the parlor. Bernard interposed.

"Listen!" he said. "Will you please attend to Miss Conisbrough's orders as if they were my own. Find out everything that she can possibly want, and see that it is got for her, and——"

"Sir!" exclaimed Mrs. Aveson. "You may be master here, or not, but I need no orders to attend to those ladies that are in there;" and without condescending to give him another look, she swept onward.

"Good!" remarked Aglionby with a saturnine smile. "I like that woman. She's honest. I hope she will stay here."

Mrs. Aveson, closing the parlor door, bent over Mr. Conisbrough. "Eh, but she's very bad, Miss Judith, this bout. Something's upset her, I guess."

"Yes, indeed!" said Judith abstractedly. She was forced to withdraw her attention from her mother for a moment, while she wrote with flying pen to Delphine:

"Very bad news. All is left to uncle's grandson, Bernard Aglionby, of whose existence we hardly knew till to-day. I have seen him before. Not one of our names are mentioned. Mamma has taken it to heart, made an awful scene, and had one of her attacks in consequence. She is unconscious now, and cannot be moved. Prepare some things for us, and I will instruct Toby to call for them as he returns from the doctor's. Mr. A. is very courteous and gentle, despite the terrible things mother has said to him. He has placed the house at our disposal. If the doctor thinks you ought to come, I will get him to call and tell you on his way back.

"Yours, sorrowfully, Judith."

"Now, Mrs. Aveson, will you give this to Toby, and tell him to make all speed with it to Yoresett House first, then on to the doctor's; then he must return to Yoresett House and wait for a parcel. Let him go as fast as he can."

Mrs. Aveson, took the note, and very soon Toby rode out of the yard, on a stout brown cob, which he astonished by his liberal use of a tough switch. Mrs Aveson returned to the parlor, where Mrs. Conisbrough still lay unconscious. Sometimes these attacks lasted two hours, or rather, once she had one that lasted so long, and this seemed likely to be as tedious. In vain they applied all the restoratives they could think of, or knew of; she lay rigid, and with a livid, deathly hue upon her face.
