What's Doing by the Natives on the Cool Grassy Banks of the Sleepy Soft-Flowing Spallumcheen

The night-key will never unlock the door to success.

Seeds of kindness will grow with every flower you cultivate.

The Methodist Ladies' Aid gave a very pleasant lawn social Wednesday afternoon and evening on Mr. Peter Greyell's lawn.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Woods moved into their handsome cottage nome, corner of Russell and George streets, the past week.

J. S. Johnstone is finishing at his cement works, the casting of the blocks to be used in the construction of his new home soon to be erected.

The bachelors of Enderby will give a shirt-waist blowout in K. P. Hall tomorrow night, and they promise a very happy time to everybody attending.

Mrs. W. H. Duncan and family, of Austin, Man., are spending a few weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler on their return home from a visit to the coast.

W. J. Fenton has decided to put his money into thoroughbred stock, and is making a start with Red Polled cattle, purchased from H. E. Waby's herd.

Geo. Flack, who fell while at work painting for F. T. Turner last week, and fractured his knee-cap, is slowly recovering, but it will be some weeks before he is able to be at work again.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Lemke entertained a large party of friends in their spacious new home on George street, Wednesday evening. Mrs. Lavar, who is visiting her mother, Mrs. Layton, from Louisiana, was guest of the evening.

Bob Bailey took a bath the other day and almost died. In an overheated condition, he jumped into the bathtub half filled with water cold from the tap. As a result he underwent a serious attack of inflammation of the bowels.

Dominion land experts are making an examination of the Mabel Lake Valley with a view of reporting to the Dominion Land Department regarding the nature of the land suitable for homesteading, and it is expected that the Department will make known some time in October whether the homesteads in this locality will be 40 acres or 160 acres.

The Canadian steamship, Princess May, on the way from Skagway to Vancouver, struck the north reef of Sentinel Island, early in the morning of the 5th of August, and immediately filled with water. All the passengers and their luggage were taken to the light house on Sentinel Island, and were later taken to Juneau by steamers sent to their relief.

A meeting of the Library Board was held Monday evening and the work of erecting library shelves of the regulation public library type, was undertaken. Manager Stevens of the A. R. Rogers Lumber Co., has contributed the shelving lumber, and A. Fulton the material for the tin partitions for each book's stall. The books are now being catalogued.

The game of football played last Saturday evening on the recreation grounds between the Enderby and Armstrong teams, was witnessed by an enthusiastic crowd. The game was evenly contested throughout, the teams being well balanced. In the first half the ball went from end to end with the regularity of clockwork but neither side could score. In the last half the Armstrong boys scored one goal, and thus the game ended.

Market reports from the Northwest, so far as lumber is concerned, are not as favorable as was promised at the opening of the season. The small crop in most districts has had a serious affect upon the market, but the feeling is prevalent that there will be no serious slump, excepting, perhaps, in Southern Alberta, where it is said, there will not be a binder turned over this season.

The Enderby Trading Co. is contemplating some important changes upon the completion of the Bell-block annex, now being erected. The business of these merchants has increased to such an extent that they find their present quarters too small to permit the proper handling of their stock, and they purpose placing their dress goods and clothing separate and apart from the other departments.

The piece of road constructed by Mr. Hancock opening up Lawes street is one of the best in the district, considering the small amount of money spent on it. It shows how comparatively easy it is going to be to open up this and the Barnes' residential additions. A correspondent on another page takes this paper to task for stating the road cost $200. The mistake is ours. The amount stated by "An Onlooker" is correct.

Major Bott and Capt. Mutrie were in Enderby this week in connection with the organization of two troops of mounted cavalry here. The initial steps were taken, and the necessary petition to the Department of Militia and Defence was prepared for signature, asking permission for the formation of the troops. Roy Wheeler is in charge of the matter, and will be pleased to give all necessary information to any young man wishing to join.

AT RIFLE RANGE

Only nine members turned out at the final government shoot of the season, last Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Wheeler and Mr. Taylor were in the lead for the silver plate, given by the government to the winner of the highest grand aggregate. Mr. Wheeler was leading by three points up to the 500 yards, but here Mr. Taylor overtook him and won out. Mr. Taylor also won the second-prize gold button. Mr. Bell won first and Mr. Wheeler third. Following is the score at the three ranges last week:

	200	500	600
Wheeler	29	22	28
Crane	22	19
Evans	26	25
Bell	29	23	29
Marwood	12	21
Taylor	28	28	27
Massey	22	25	25
Honey	29	31	26
Mack	18	17	11

Since the government shoot was held, a communication from the Department has been received, calling attention to a rule in the regulations which debars all special peep-sights in open range competitions. This ruling will have important bearing on the awarding of the prizes, as both Mr. Taylor and Mr. Bell were using specially equipped rifles, and Mr. Wheeler the regulation sights supplied by the Department.

MARA NEWS NOTES

Robt. Waddell cut a heavy crop of oats for hay.

The roads are again receiving attention, Chas. W. Little having a force of men at work.

The school trustees have engaged the services of Miss Lever, of Armstrong, for the coming year.

On Monday Geo. Weir had a bad run-away from Mara station, where they were delivering baled hay.

Geo. Weir and Wm. Owen are finishing their crop. Oats and peas in their section are a heavy crop.

J. Stanley Richardson and Miss Mary Moser obtained certificates as a result of the recent examinations.

L. B. Massey has a field of oats and peas which make an extra good showing. His root crop is also fine.

A party of our citizens paid a visit to Worthington's Point, on Mara Lake, on Sunday last, and spent a most delightful day.

The fierce heat of the past few days has threatened dire results to the growing crops. Fortunately haying operations are nearly closed.

John Moser's new house near the school house, presents a very attractive appearance since passing through the hands of the painter. So tempting does it look that Mr. Moser has already had an offer for it. A man will sell almost anything, providing the price is high enough, but Mr. Moser declines to sell his new home.

Thomas Gray and Rupert Davy have started the hay press to work. The demand for hay has set in early. The Rogers Lumber Co. has been making offers to local men. The price is said to be considerably over the twenty-dollar mark. The drought on the prairies will cut off Alberta as a source of supply for B. C. camps and the price of the home-grown article is sure to rule high. Short supply and increased demand.

The organization meeting of the Mara District Farmers' Institute was held in the school house on Saturday last, and resulted in the election of Chas. W. Little, president; Robt. Waddell, vice-president; Wm. B. Kellett, secretary-treasurer. The directors are: Wm. Ahier, Wm. Owen and H. J. Johnson, of Mara; and Wm. Monk and G. S. Salt, of North Enderby. The auditors are: H. G. Davies and H. J. Blurton. The attendance of local members was very good, considering the busy season, and the meeting passed off most harmoniously.

THE FRUIT MARKETS

If there is one thing in Commissioner Metcalfe's reports that commends them above another, it is the intense earnestness of the man, and in his loyalty, his determination to point out to the fruit men what they are up against, and what they have to do to meet the conditions. His last report comes too late for us to use in toto, but we feel that we cannot miss a paragraph here and there, and his concluding recommendations.

Calgary—The report is current today that the Royal Fruit Co., Edmonton has bought the fruit output of Salmon Arm, B. C.

Regina—Cherries from the Okanagan Valley and Kootenay arriving in excellent condition. Are in great demand at high prices.

Brandon—The manager of the Pioneer Fruit Co., here gave me the following quotations as being quoted them at present date by Washington shippers f. o. b. point of shipment: Peaches, per case, 40c; apples, no grade, mixed varieties, 4 & 4½ tiers, 90c; plums, 45; Bartlett pears, $1.25 to $1.50. The manager of the MacPherson Fruit Co. here stated he was buying California and Washington peaches to supply his trade for the purpose of protecting himself against other jobbers filling the markets before ours came in. He further stated he was very doubtful if we had any such crop as we anticipated in B. C. of the different varieties of fruit as estimated. He had been disappointed so often in B. C. fruit, and instanced an experience with one firm in respect to strawberries this season. The firm stated they could supply five or six carloads as quoted. He closed with them at price and arranged with them to ship cars three days apart, and never got but one carload. He further stated he could not obtain cherries after their sending out and his receiving quotations and quantities to be shipped by the foregoing firm this season.

It is quite evident that prices will not rule high for certain varieties of fruit on these markets, and it will be necessary for our shippers to get in touch with these markets and the jobbers and retailers at once, and although they may not buy heavily at the present date for future shipment, they are buying for immediate shipment and delivery a certain number of cars per week to supply their trade. B. C. shippers should use every effort to make sales for future shipment, and get their connections delivery, and also for immediate for the later and heavier shipments to follow. By this means they will prevent, in a measure, the American shipper getting his connection with the jobber here. Another reason is to stop as far as possible, consignments which are being done to some extent at the present time, but will be largely increased, no doubt, later in the season. But if jobbers have bought and markets should be glutted later on by consignments, they will push sales and maintain prices on the purchased product, whilst they may be obliged to sacrifice the consignment to get sale for it.

I hope growers and shippers ! ve perfected all their arrangements for handling promptly as to labor, packages, and transportation, and make every endeavor to put up a high-class product in every respect of the different varieties of fruits they may have to ship. We are doing considerable amount of advertising everywhere we go, and are giving interviews to wholesalers and retailers, as well as to the press. In addition to this we are spending, by the advice of your Government, a certain amount for advertising in leading papers at the principal points. for the purpose of inducing jobbers, retailers and consumers everywhere to hold off and buy B. C. fruits in preference to the American product; and further, in addition to this you have the Government fruit exhibits being made at the different fairs, now being held throughout the provinces. The efforts being made by the Commissioner, Mr. Bullock Webster, and his assistant, Mr. Brandrith, along this line will assist very materially in advertising B. C. fruit this season

LAWN TENNIS TOURNAMENT

A very interesting tournament is being held this week on the Enderby court. Members are taking active interest in the events, and quite a crowd of spectators have been present to view the games. Prizes will be awarded in the following events: Ladies' singles, ladies' doubles, mixed doubles, men's singles and men's doubles. The following events have been played:

Men's Singles—Geo. Schmidt (receive ½ 15) vs. V. C. Brimacombe, (owe 30). Score 4-6, 6-1, 7-5. Brimacombe got the first set, Schmidt won 2nd set. Third set stood at 5 games all. It was an exciting finish. Schmidt managed to get the next two games by narrow margins, thus winning the match.

Taylor (receive ½ 15) vs. H. Greyell (receive ½ 15). Taylor won somewhat easily; srore, 6-4, 6-2.

Mixed Doubles—Miss George and R. E. T. Forster (owe 15) vs. Mr. and Mrs. Waddell (receive 15). Mr. and Mrs. Waddell won first set. Miss George and Mr. Forster the next two in a most exciting finish. Score, 5-7, 6-4, 7-5.

Men's Doubles—Lemke & Schmidt (receive 15) vs. Forster & Proctor, (owe 30). Forster & Proctor won 1st set, and Lemke & Schmidt the next two. The play was very even, more so than the score would indicate. The heavy handicap forced Forster & Proctor to play their best. The score was, 1-6, 6-0, 6-2.

Some exciting games are being as we go to press, an account of which will be given next week.

The tournament committee are trying to bring the matches to a close on Saturday, Aug. 20th, when the finals in each event will be played and the prizes distributed. The committee has placed the handicap on the good players in such a way as to make each event exciting and closely contested.

IN THE POLICE COURT

On Monday, before Magistrate Rosoman, N. L. Marris was charged by Provincial Constable Price with having set out, or caused to be set out, a fire contrary to the Bush Fires Act. Messrs. F. Waby, A. M. Baird and J. McKay were called to give evidence. As a result of the enquiry the Court was satisfied that the fire had been of accidental origin, having been caused by ashes thrown out of a camp stove, and that the fire had not been out of control. The case was dismissed.

GREDEL'S RESOLVE;

Or, THE RAISING OF ZWEIDORF.

Unprincipled scoundrel as he was, yet the captain prided himself upon his family descent as much as if sans reproche could be still truthfully inscribed upon his banner.

Herr Sydow was as keen and shrewd a man of business as ever trod the streets of Zweidorf. He would not have raised the "Golden Eagle" to its present proud position of leading hostelrie in the city if he had been otherwise, but he was undoubtedly a little soft-hearted on the subject of his daughter. He loved the girl very dearly, and she deserved it. But like many another affectionate father, he was all for making her happy in his way, regardless of her own feelings and had decided that to marry her above her station was to achieve that desirable end. When Gredel would remind him of her betrothal, he fumed, fidgeted, and affected to look upon it as a piece of childish folly. A thing to laugh at, a case of children calling each other man and wife. Albeit when the children had been respectively sixteen and twenty-two, it could hardly be regarded in that light He gave scant welcome to Caspar Zimmermann now-a-days, and lost no opportunity of showing him that his presence was not deemed desirable at the "Golden Eagle," by the proprietor at all events. If Caspar attempted to allude to his betrothal, Papa Sydow would laugh it off, or suggest that it was really getting time to let that old jest drop. But as for being brought to any serious conversation on the subject, the wily old inn-keeper knew better than that, and the young carpenter, spite of the many times he had vowed to bring his proposed father-in-law to the point, had never as yet succeeded.

Herr Sydow is sitting in his own little business parlor abutting on the courtyard, upon which indeed the window looks out, thereby enabling him to keep an eye to some extent upon the arrival and departure of his guests. "The Golden Eagle" stands, as before said, in one of the principal streets of Zweidorf, which street debouches from the market-place and runs in nearly a straight line to one of the city gates. For Zweidorf is a walled town, as was common in those troublous times, and drops her bars and turns her keys at nightfall. The inn is entered from the street only by a broad archway, the massive doors of which are folded back by day, but closed at sundown. The sole other entrance to the house is a small wicket at the opposite side of the courtyard, opening on a labyrinth of narrow alleys and barely large enough to allow the passage of a man on horseback. This is made but little use of. The house runs over the archway, and it is through that the guests of the "Golden Eagle," come and go.

A comfortable little snuggery is this of Papa Sydow's, with the morning sun streaming in at its flower-decked windows; for Gredel takes jealous care that her father's window-sill shall be always gaily adorned in the summer months. A big china-bowled pipe hangs over the mantel-piece, from behind which—the pipe, not the mantel-piece—Herr Sydow gives vent to much oracular discourse in the evening times.

A few rough prints and one or two fairish pictures of the Dutch school ornament the walls, while a big wooden arm-chair comfortably cushioned stands opposite a huge wooden desk garnished with an upright back, which towers above it filled with numberless pigeon-holes and ledgers. In one corner stands a rude iron safe furnished with much complication of locks and bars; a table in the centre of the room and a few heavy chairs complete the furniture of the chamber.

Herr Sydow seated in the big arm-chair is leisurely posting up his books. A stout florid man with keen grey eyes, rather heavy brows and a trifle under-jawed. He is habited in a plum-colored cloth suit with steel buttons, somewhat voluminous breeches, stout lamb's-wool hose rolled up below the knee, the whole terminating in strong silver-buckled shoes. His employment is apparently satisfactory. He chuckles occasionally as he tots up the columns, and now and again pauses to rub his hands with palpable gratification. A spectator would have argued that the "Golden Eagle" was doing well if the proprietor's looks might be depended upon.

A dark face peered for a moment through the casement, and the keen black eyes in their rapid survey arrived promptly at that conclusion. Another moment and a sharp authoritative knock broke the thread of Papa Sydow's calculations.

"Come in," he replied, and in obedience to the response Captain von Hompesch lounged leisurely into the room.

"Good-morning, Herr Hauptmann!" exclaimed the innkeeper as he rose to welcome his guest. "To what am I indebted for so early a visit? Nothing to discontent you, I would hope, in the service of the 'Golden Eagle.'"

"No," replied Von Hompesch, as he threw himself into a chair. "I come to speak to you of more serious matters than corked flasks or the burning of a brandered fowl. You may remember, my worthy host, that not long since I expressed a warm admiration for your daughter."

"You did, you did!" exclaimed Sydow hastily, "and I felt much flattered at the thoughts that such conversation gave rise to. She's a good girl, and I hoped that you might overlook her want of birth in consideration of her coming to you by no means empty-handed."

"Yes, Papa Sydow, and I on my side felt disposed to make a lady of her. But, my friend Sydow, you have not been open with me. It perhaps escaped your mind that Gredel meditates throwing herself away upon a mere carpenter of this city—sacrificing her beauty to a paltry board splitter——"

"A mere childish fancy, Herr Hauptmann," cried the innkeeper eagerly. "I pray you to lend no credence to the idle gossips of the town. What should a child know of such things? Gredel did fancy herself at one time engaged to the playmate of her girlhood, but that has all gone by. A man of your experience, Herr Baron, should judge lightly of a young girl's whimsies."

"Yes," retorted Von Hompesch slowly, as he stroked his moustache, "but when a young woman persists in carrying on her childhood's whimsies——"

"But she don't, she don't," interrupted Papa Sydow, rising from his seat in his excitement, and beginning to pace the room.

"But she does," said the captain coolly.

"It's impossible; the girl must be demented. Besides, she scarce ever sees him now."

"Which, being interpreted, Papa Sydow, means that she don't see him in your presence."

"But it's absurd, it's ridiculous. I'll never consent to such folly. I'll tell her——"

"Never mind telling her," interrupted the captain quietly, "tell him that you'll have him at the 'Golden Eagle' no more, and that your pretty Gredel mates not with a fellow of his kind. I presume she understands clearly that I have your authority to pay my addresses."

"Yes, yes," stammered Herr Sydow, considerably discomposed by this direct question. "I told her that you did her the honor to—to seek her in marriage." And the worthy innkeeper recalled, with dire misgivings, a conversation he had had some ten days back with his daughter upon this subject, in which she had made him clearly understand that she held stoutly to her "childish folly" at all events, and was not one whit inclined to discard Caspar Zimmermann in favor of Captain von Hompesch.

The captain eyed his host narrowly for a few seconds, which rather increased the latter's discomposure. At last he said with a short laugh, "Pouf! Papa Sydow, it is but a little affair after all. You send this carpenter about his business. You exert your paternal authority while I make myself agreeable, pay those little attentions which women prize, make those little presents which women love. A few weeks and the bells of Zweidorf will ring for the wedding. It is a very simple matter," continued the captain, rising. "Only see you play your part in it at once, and I will answer for its satisfactory conclusion. It is a bargain? May I depend upon you?"

"There's my hand on it," cried the delighted innkeeper, completely carried away by his visitor's confident tone, and the two men clasped palms.

Papa Sydow was conscious, as he sat thinking over the conversation after the captain's departure, that the light way in which Von Hompesch spoke of winning Gredel could hardly be thought satisfactory by a father sincerely anxious for his daughter's happiness. It had not escaped him, and jarred upon his mind as he recalled it. Still he was so blinded at the idea of wedding his daughter to a man of rank, that he sought to stifle the feeling which that flippancy had aroused—a feeling which, had it been excited by a wooer of her own class, would have given birth to suspicions, led to inquiries into such wooer's past life, etc. Herr Sydow was in total ignorance of Von Hompesch's real character and antecedents. He dearly loved his daughter, and had he had the slightest conception of what an unscrupulous scoundrel his proposed son-in-law actually was, would have shuddered at the bare idea of giving her to him. But dazzled by the title, he forgot his accustomed caution, and made no effort to ascertain what was the nature and previous life of this stranger to whom he was about to surrender through the town; while the walks his child. It was a pitiable weakness, but on one point the understanding of the shrewd trader was warped. He was mad to see his pearl—his daughter—a lady.

CHAPTER IV.

Zweidorf was laid out somewhat in the form of an isosceles triangle. If you can conceive the base slightly curved and the extreme apex cut off diagonally, that represents Zweidorf as near as I can describe it to you. The two principal gates of the city stood at the angles of the base of the triangle, and a straight road bordered with a double avenue of lime trees led from the one to the other. The centre roadway was, of course, for wheeled and other traffic, running under the trees were plentifully garnished with seats, and constituted the principal promenade of the city. The market-place stood about the centre of the triangle, and the main streets diverging right and left respectively from the gates ran into it. At the obtuse angle of the apex was the third and by far the least important gate of the city. Further, if I say that all the better part of the town lay to the south or base side of the triangle, and that the apex or north side was the poorer quarter, I trust you may have some general idea of Zweidorf. The two principal gates, I may add, took their names from the points of the compass, and were known as the West Thor and Ost Thor respectively. The third gate had acquired the name of Hinterpforte, or the back door, for so it was deemed by all the frequenters or inhabitants of Zweidorf. It was little used except by the country people who lived upon that side of the city.

It is a lovely summer night, and the townsfolk young and old are sitting or sauntering under the lime trees in considerable numbers.

There was a part of the Linden which, thrown rather more in shade than the rest of the promenade by the immediate vicinity of the city wall, was much affected by lovers. A pair are strolling there now engaged in earnest conversation, who are worth looking at. As the girl turns her face to the moonlight, one can mark the rich masses of chestnut hair coiled deftly into a knot at the back of the head and surmounted by a little coquettish cap of scarlet broidered with gold, something such as is worn by a hussar. Clear, deep, earnest blue eyes, a delicately cut nose and chin, a riante mouth, the pouting lips of which fail utterly to conceal the pearly teeth behind them—make up as pretty a face as ever falls to man's lot to look down upon. Her black silk bodice open in front displays an elaborately worked chemisette, and, fitting close to her form, exhibits her superb bust to perfection; a scarlet petticoat, French grey stockings, and buckled shoes complete her costume, and many an eye is turned admiringly to note the slender ankle and well-arched instep of Papa Sydow's daughter. She is of medium height, and has to look up to her companion in her talk, an advantage which he seems disposed to make the most of.

DRINK PLENTY OF WATER.

Those who are growing too stout are frequently advised to drink little liquid of any kind. This is dangerous advice, as three pints of liquid, at least, is necessary in the twenty-four hours. You may cut out coffee and tea, but do not cut down your supply of water; rather increase it. The fatter one is the more a thorough flushing of the system with pure water is imperative. Do not drink water with meals and do not gulp it down by the cupful at any time, but drink two quarts of water a day, without fail.

McKenzie Mine at Elk Lake Has Started Bagging Ore

Successful Operations at the Mine Which Make the Property a Coming Shipper.

ELK CITY, May 4.—With the opening of navigation, which is now in full swing, the greatest of activity prevails at the various mines and prospects in this vicinity and the city is rapidly recovering from the recent fires.

The district is likely to become another Cobalt and the veins run to depth with values. Among the shippers and properties bagging ore are the Lucky Godfrey, the Borland-Thompson, the Devlin and the Moose Horn mines.

The Moose Horn mine put in a new plant this spring and are now sinking a winze at the 125-foot level on a vein which has shown values from the surface.

In the midst of the mines is the McKenzie, a group of five properties on which work was begun last January. They have been fortunate from the start and soon hope to rank with the shippers.

The engineer in charge, Mr. Harry McMaster, reports that the vein on location 846 of the company's group at a depth of 50 feet continued steadily the whole distance and showed free silver all the way with the exception of four feet. Several hundred feet of stripping has already been done, resulting in the discovery of two additional veins, one of which is 7 inches wide, cutting at an angle of six degrees. It is the intention to continue this shaft to the 75 or 100 foot level, then drift to the McKenzie vein, where the new 7 inch vein crosses. Mr. McMaster states that in his opinion this week will result in the placing of the value of the mine beyond question. The necessary buildings have now all been erected, including bunk house, cooking camp, manager's dwelling, blacksmith shop, powder house, and the necessary machinery is being installed. A good wagon road has been built from the main road which parallels the road from Elk Lake.

The McKenzie company are in a very fortunate position, owning a group of five properties which have been thoroughly tested. Six assays made from the veins on which the company are now working have shown results of from 400 ounces of silver up as high as 15,000 ounces to the ton.

This company is under good management, and it is the opinion of the engineer in charge and those who have seen the property that it should be brought to the shipping stage in a very short time, 600 pounds of good ore having been bagged by May 1, and the work in this regard being pushed rapidly from day to day.

Cook in Comfort

You no longer need wear yourself out with the weakening heat of an intensely hot kitchen. You can cook in comfort.

Here is a stove that gives no outside heat. All its heat is concentrated at the burners. An intense blue flame (hotter than either white or red) is thrown upwards but not around. All the heat is utilized in cooking — none in outside heating.

New Perfection WICK BLUE FLAME Oil Cook-stove

entirely removes the discomfort of cooking. Apply a match and immediately the stove is ready. Instantly an intense heat is projected upwards against the pot, pan, kettle or boiler, and yet there is no surrounding heat — no smell — no smoke.

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New Perfection."

Why? Because The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is scientifically and practically perfect. You cannot use too much wick—it is automatically controlled. You get the maximum heat—no smoke. The burner is simple. One wipe with a cloth cleans it—consequently there is no smell.

The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is wonderful for year-round use, but especially in summer. Its heat operates upward to pan, pot, or kettle, but not beyond or around. It is useless for heating a room.

It has a Cabinet Top with shelf for keeping plates and food hot.

It has long turquoise-blue enamel chimneys. The nickel finish, with the bright blue of the chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

FORCING YOURSELF TO TAKE FOOD

The Tortures of Indigestion Banished by the Tonic Powers of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Victims of indigestion have small choice between two evils—on the one hand a starvation diet, which means great weakness and depression of spirits, and on the other hand forcing themselves to take nourishment in spite of the acute suffering inflicted by each meal.

In the search for a cure they find common medicines upset the stomach and render the food more difficult to digest. Laxatives are violent and weakening, and so-called "pre-digested foods" merely evade the cause of the trouble and the stomach steadily grows weaker.

The common sense way of curing indigestion is the Dr. Williams' way—the making of new, rich blood by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that gives tone to the weakened system and invigorates the distressed digestive organs. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured thousands of the worst cases of indigestion through their simple tonic treatment and one excellent example of these cures is the case of Miss M. Y. C. Roberge, Sorel, Que., who says: "For upwards of nine years I suffered almost continuously the tortures of indigestion. At times I had no appetite; at others there was a craving for food, but whatever I took caused me the greatest pangs. As the result of the trouble I suffered from violent headaches, and I grew pale and weak. I tried many different medicines; some gave me a little relief, but none gave me any permanent benefit until I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had only taken these a few weeks when I found such help as I had not found before. The pains after eating gradually disappeared, my appetite grew better, and after using the Pills for a couple of months I found myself completely cured, and have not since had a twinge of the trouble. I gratefully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all who suffer from any form of indigestion."

Through their action on the blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure such troubles as anaemia, indigestion, sick headaches, rheumatism and all forms of nervous troubles such as neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, and partial paralysis. These Pills are especially valuable to growing girls and women and cure the headaches, sideaches and other pains known only to them. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CURTAINS.

To Prevent Curtains Sagging.—When the lace curtains are ready to be washed, baste a narrow strip of muslin along each outer edge and let it remain until the washing and drying process is completed and you will find your curtains are straight and do not sag.

Curtain Hints.—On a nice warm day take your curtains that will not stand for stretching, wash and starch them, then while wet put them on their curtain rods and hang them in sunny windows; then stretch them down and sideways enough to smooth them out a little; then raise the windows top and bottom to let the air or wind move them to and fro, and in no time your curtains will be dry and look as ni e as when stretched. Think of the time you save. In the summer time this is an easy method.

Rolls may be re-warmed and made crisp and good if placed in a paper bag in a hot oven.

A large apron for covering the skirt to be used for bedmaking can be made from half a discarded sheet.

When cleaning house a convenience is a stick with a notch in the end to lift picture cords from hooks.

If the sides are sewed together and the sheets cut through the center it will be given a new lease of life.

The flat taste of boiled water may be removed by pouring from one pitcher to another in the open air.

Lumbago is greatly relieved by bandaging with a flannel bag filled with very hot salt where the pain is felt.

Pans greased with butter will make the bottom crust of pies soft and flaky and prevent them from being soggy.

HOME.

SEASONABLE RECIPES.

Chopped Apples and Nuts. — Wash, core and chop nice apples, fill the dishes, sprinkle with chopped nuts, and serve with cream.

Spinach and Eggs.—Boil half peck of spinach until tender, drain and chop fine. Add a little flour and milk and a pinch of sugar, salt, and nutmeg. And lay in a buttered baking dish. Beat five eggs just enough to break the yolks and pour over the spinach, add a pinch of salt to the eggs. Bake ten minutes in the oven. The same recipe can be used for asparagus. Cut off the tender ends and season well with pepper and salt and a piece of butter.

Grapefruit Marmalade. — One grapefruit, two oranges, one lemon. Cut both peel and pulp fine, cover with as much water as there is fruit, and let stand over night. In the morning boil briskly ten minutes, then set aside for twenty-four hours. At the end of this time add four pounds of sugar and cook slowly until it jells. This makes twelve glasses and is inexpensive and delicious.

Cream Asparagus.—To cream asparagus, have it all tender but the tips not "mushy," and to use every bit of the tender part, prepare in the following manner: Wash and break off the tips and keep separate. Break the remainder in small pieces, stopping as soon as it ceases to snap brittlely. Then peel the outer skin of the remaining pieces and break in pieces, stopping as soon as it ceases to be tender. Throw all but the tips in boiling, salted water and boil gently for about ten minutes, then add the tips. This saves them from being overcooked while you are endeavoring to cook the tougher portions until tender. Cook until all are done, drain, and pour over them a sauce made of flour, butter, and milk that has been cooked and stirred until smooth. Just before serving pour cream over the whole preparation, which will make it as rich as though the sauce has been made with cream and is less expensive. Several who have eaten this pronounce it better than the whole tips with drawn butter.

STRAWBERRIES.

Strawberry Pyramid.—One pint of hot boiled rice. Place a layer of it, well seasoned with butter, on a round plate; decorate edge if possible with small strawberry leaves. Cover rice with strawberries well sugared, then a layer of rice, and so on, forming the pile into the shape of a pyramid. Finish top with a spray of berries. Serve cold with sweetened whipped cream.

Strawberry Pie.—Cream three-fourths of a cupful of butter with a cupful of granulated sugar, then add the well beaten yolks of three eggs and half a cupful of cold water. Sift together two cupfuls of flour and two level teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Beat the butter smooth and lightly fold in the stiffly whipped whites of the eggs. Divide the batter in two portions and bake in layer cake tins. If specks of butter are placed between the layers they may be both baked in one tin. Make a filling of one cupful of strawberries, crushed, and half a cupful of blanched, chopped almonds and the whites of two eggs sweetened with half a cupful of sugar as you beat them stiff. Ornament top of the cake with a few fine berries dusted with powdered sugar and serve hot or cold with cream whipped.

Strawberry Divinity Pie.—Make a rich pie paste and line a deep pie pan and bake in a brisk oven. If your berries are large cut them in two and place in the baked shell and cover berries with sugar as for shortcake. Have ready a custard, cooled, made as follows: One tablespoonful of cornstarch, one pint of milk, two eggs, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt, and small piece of butter. Heat milk to near boiling, then add the eggs, well beaten, with two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Let it boil up once or twice, stirring all the time; take off and flavor to suit your taste. Pour this custard over the strawberries and over this put a meringue made as follows: Beaten whites of two eggs, six tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar, added one spoonful at a time. Flavor same as custard. Place in the oven only long enough to brown the meringue.

SMALL CAKES.

Plain Cookies.—One-half cupful of butter, one-half cupful of lard, two cupfuls of sugar, two eggs, three-fourths cupful of sour cream, one teaspoonful soda, one pinch salt, nutmeg, and vanilla flavoring. Flour, not too stiff.

Fruit Rolls.—Three cupfuls of flour, six tablespoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful f salt, one-third cupful of butter, one cup milk, two tablespoonfuls sugar, and one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon. Mix and sift the dry ingredients, rub in the butter with the tips of the fingers, add the milk gradually, cutting with a knife to a soft dough. Turn the dough on a floured board, and roll into a rectangular sheet about one-third inch in thickness. Brush over the sheet of dough with melted butter, then sprinkle with the cinnamon and chopped raisins. Roll up the dough compactly and cut the roll in pieces an inch in thickness. These are delicious.

Johnny Cake.—One cupful flour, one-half cupful cornmeal, one tablespoonful sugar, one teaspoonful salt, one-half teaspoonful baking soda. Sift all together, then add one and one-fourth cupfuls sour milk or buttermilk, beat until smooth, pour into a greased pan, and bake for about twenty minutes in a quick oven.

USEFUL HINTS.

In wiping the kitchen range use a small bag as a glove.

Paper bags, which accumulate so fast, may be put to good use in the kitchen.

If your wash boiler suddenly "springs a leak," throw in a handful of corn meal.

Cutting onions, turnips and carrots across the fibre makes them more tender when cooked.

To brown pie crust: Wash over top crust with a little milk. Makes it a nice light brown.

When soaking mackerel or other salt fish see that the skin side is placed uppermost.

Keep doughnuts and cookies in a covered crock and they will remain moist much longer.

MAPLEINE

A flavoring used the same as lemon or vanilla. By dissolving granulated sugar in water and adding Mapleine, a delicious syrup is made and a syrup better than maple. Mapleine is sold by grocers. If not send 50c for 2 oz. bottle and recipe book. Crescent Mfg. Co., Seattle, Wa.

RETURNS FROM NORTHWEST

Walter Robinson returned this week from an extensive trip throughout the Northwest and eastern British Columbia. Mr. Robinsoo reports a highly successful trip, and after investigating crop conditions in the Okanagan, will return to the market points of the Northwest. He is highly pleased with the Okanagan when he compares it with the districts he has travelled over, and declares that many of us do not realize what we have here.

No Canadian magazine is showing more rapid growth than that excellent periodical published by W. J. Taylor, at Woodstock, Ont. Rod and Gun is doing a great work, and in a most fascinating manner, showing the great possibilities of Canada as the sportsman's paradise of North America. Each month, there is some particular feature in Rod and Gun which makes that number attractive, and distinct from any other number. The August number, just out, is unusually attractive.

THE FERNIE SPIRIT

Monday will be the second anniversary of the fire that burned the visible Fernie off the map. The stranger coming into the city today would never guess that there had been a fire here. He would probably decide that the visible Fernie represented 25 years of growth and prosperity.

When the wood and paint and other inflamable material went up the valley, and the stone and brick and iron crumpled in smoking masses on the townsite, we thought that the town had been destroyed. A month afterward we feared that the town had received a severe setback. Two months after we thought that the town had passed through a severe ordeal. Six months after we decided that the fire had been quite an experience. A year after we had a banquet in memory of the occasion, and two years after we know that the fire was the best thing that could have happened to Fernie.—Fernie Free Press.

Westward Ho is no more. That promising magazine has been succeeded by the more promising magazine Man to Man. The latter publication is one of splendid proportions, considering its field, and we are pleased to see on it the earmarks of old and tried magazine builders, who are transforming it into a periodical that the Canadian West might be proud of.

HARD KNOCKS

Getting some hard knocks from fate are you? Well, what of it? It's making a man or woman of you. Thought you were one before, did you? Well, perhaps you were according to your own ideas, but some of us are "seeing through a glass darkly" at present.

Just look in the mirror of spirit and find whether you see reflected there the man or woman St. Paul had in mind when he wrote these words: "Hopeth all things, believeth all things, endureth all things." If you don't see that sort of reflection, you need all these hard knocks, don't you?

The Indian youth is taught by a course of agonizing tortures to be indifferent to pain, and some of the Arctic fathers throw their babies into the cold snow to toughen them. I often think the Lord tries something the same sort of treatment in His children. Cannot we grown-ups be as good stoics as the little Indian boys? The truth is, many of us would be leaners one way or another if we could; clinging vines, running wild and hanging hold of every crooked, rotten stick of circumstance or opinion that we could reach. The Lord pulls the rotten stick away and down we tumble. If we are going to be clinging vines, the Lord wants us to fasten our tendrils upon Him. But before he gets through with us, we have to grow a good stout stalk of our own and stand upright, whether we will or no.—Jessie L. Bronson, in August Nautilus.

There are fewer drunkards among farmers than in any other profession, unless it may be that of preachers. The man who lives in the open, and is in love and charity with his neighbors, seldom feels the craving for strong drink—or anything else that would break down his manhood.

CONCEIT AND SELF-RELIANCE

There is a vast difference between self-reliance and conceit. Conceit believes that it can, but it really cannot. Self-reliance believes that it can and the results demonstrate the truth of it. It is sometimes difficult to determine whether a seemingly confident person is conceited or self-reliant until the result of his effort is seen. We have men in business whose conceit is so great that they believe that they can do everything that the best men in business can do, or have done; yet there never has been a single time when they have demonstrated by their works that they had the ability to carry out what their conceit prompted them to say they could carry out. The man who believes he can do a thing and DOES it, is self-reliant—not conceited. The conceited man is the man whose head is too weak to hold his tongue.

The business of a promoter, be he of the religious type or of mining and oil stock, is to persuade your money into his pocket.

Interesting Memoirs Told of Queen Victoria and Gladstone

In a delightful series of memoirs now running in The Strand Magazine John Hare, the eminent English actor, tells some stories of Queen Victoria and Mr. Gladstone as he knew them.

It was during the run of "A Pair of Spectacles," says Mr. Hare, "that Mr. Gladstone, accompanied by Lord Rosebery, paid his first visit to my theatre. I saw him after the play, when he expressed his great delight with the performance, and at the same time displayed his keen critical judgment by detecting a flaw which had escaped all the more experienced theatrical critics. "I have only one fault to find," he said, "with the construction of the play, which is, that the shoemaker does not have the chance of reappearing at the end and rehabilitating himself like all the other characters." As a matter of fact, in the original the shoemaker did so, but, the play being a little too long, I persuaded Mr. Grundy to let me cut out his last entrance, thinking that nobody would notice his absence, although the author was not of my opinion.

Another incident in connection with Mr. Gladstone occurred shortly afterwards, when we were dining at the house of a mutual friend. After asking his hostess the names of those he had not met before, he looked inquiringly in my direction. On learning my name and vocation, I was told afterwards that he had replied: "Oh, yes! I know his father, the manager of the Garrick Theatre!". He had only hitherto seen me in the guise of a comparative patriarch. Later in the evening he laughed heartily over his mistake.

The production of "Diplomacy" before Her Majesty at Balmoral will be ever memorable to me for the great kindness and consideration shown us by Queen Victoria, and the care she took to make our visit enjoyable in every way. It was rendered doubly interesting by the presence of the Empress Eugenie, this being the first theatrical performance she had witnessed since her departure from France in 1871. I still retain in my mind the picturesque and pathetic sight of the two widowed Queens entering the royal room together, and the charming and courtly manner in which they curtsied to each other before taking their respective chairs.

After the performance the late Queen received us with her other guests in the drawing-room, while the Empress who was evidently inspired by her recollections of the theatre in days gone by, went from one actor to another plying them with questions and showing her reviving interest in an art which she had encouraged and loved so much in the past. After a little conversation the Queen, who was not then in very good health, went to bed and we sat down to supper with Prince and Princess Henry of Battenberg presiding. At the conclusion Prince Henry paid me the honor of proposing my health in a most charming speech while the Queen showed that her interest in our welfare had not abated by sending down several times to ask how we were enjoying ourselves and expressed a wish to know "how Mr. Hare liked Prince Henry's speech."

When Broiling Chicken.

To broil chicken so that it is cooked through, yet not burned, is an art few cooks seem to possess. The reason is usually that the fire is too hot and the chicken too close to it.

The perfection of broiling requires a clear bed of coals and the broiler far enough away for its contents to cook slowly. This latter requirement is met by having several bricks on which the broiler can be set to raise it above the flame, instead of allowing it to rest directly on the surface of the range, as is the usual way.

Should the fire be too hot insert another layer of bricks for a short time, removing them later.

A medium sized pair of chickens require twenty-five minutes to be broiled in this way. At the end put into a baking pan, covered with butter, pepper and salt, until a nice gravy is drawn.

In putting the chicken on the broiler turn the inside toward the fire first and later turn over on the back.

Few Suicides In Canada.

The feature of the session of the vital statistics section of the American Public Health Association, which met in Winnipeg recently, was an address by Dr. Hodgetts, Toronto, upon mortality statistics for Canada during the last decade. He created almost a sensation by quoting figures to show that suicides in Canada were remarkably few—147 in a population of 5,000,000. Many of the delegates could scarcely credit the reliability of the statistics, but Dr. Hodgetts showed that they were taken from Government returns, and proved that the people of Canada were adverse to self-destruction. One delegate observed that in the city of 200,000 from which he came there were 112 suicides last year.

Unloading Their Children.

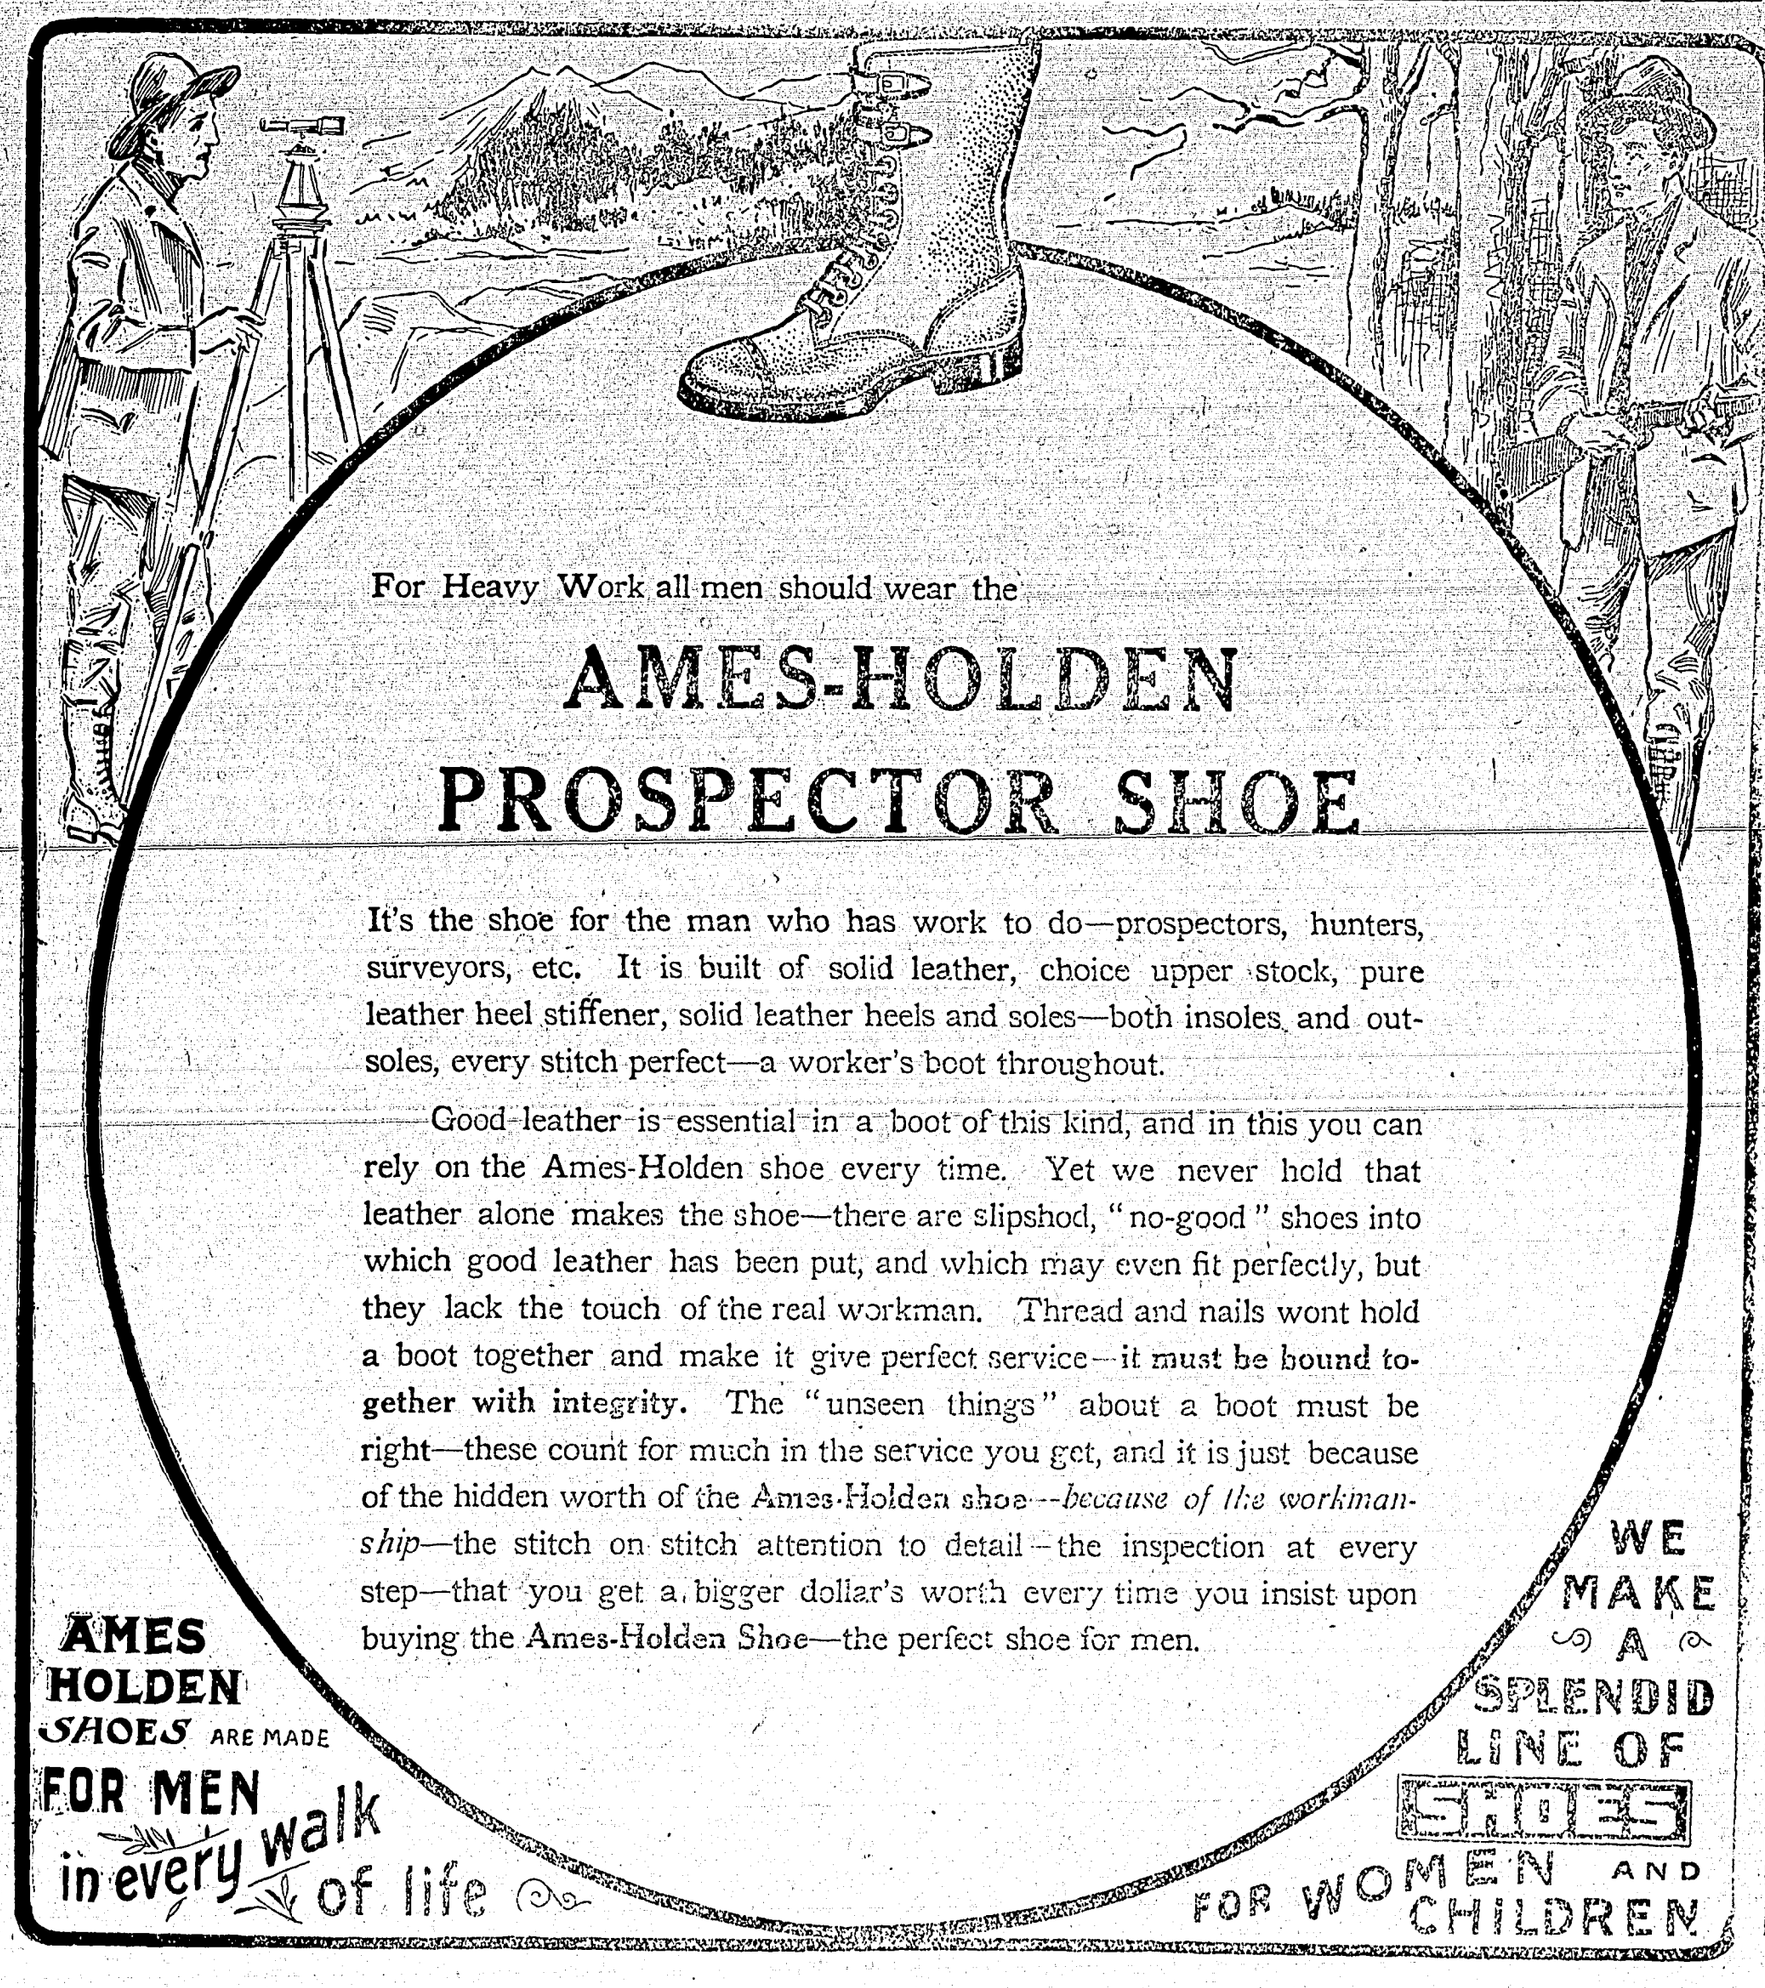
"Hardly a day passes that someone does not come along wanting to get children into institutions," remarked J. J. Kelso, superintendent of the Toronto Children's Aid, recently. "They are mostly new arrivals, and seem to think there should be no difficulty in unloading their offspring upon the community. One person who already had three children in charitable institutions was quite indignant because there was some obstacle in the way of disposing of two others. Charity, too, lavishly administered is apt to be a hindrance rather than a help in the social life of the community."

The Only One of Its Kind.

The Shawnee Alfalfa club is the only one of its kind on earth, according to the Kansas Farmer. It holds monthly meetings on the afternoon of the last Saturday in each month and discusses appropriate topics—as, for instance, "Alfalfa Pests."

Feet of the Colts.

Keep the feet of colts even or unsoundness may result. Do not allow the toes to grow too long. Ringbones are often caused by long toes. Keep the colts' stalls well littered. One slip on a wet floor may ruin a valuable colt.



Another Drowning Accident in the Soft-Flowing Spallumcheen

The sleeping, soft-flowing Spallumcheen river has claimed another victim. This time a bright young Italian, who came here but a few days ago, is the victim. Nick Franzillo is his name. With Antone Branbury, Franzillo had taken up a homestead in the Mabel Lake Valley, ten miles of Enderby. The accident occurred at the Cooke Meadows, six miles up the river from Enderby, Sunday afternoon. John Dale, Antone Branbury, Heynk Vanturu and Branbury's two children, were bathing in the river with Franzillo. Mr. Branbury was the only member of the party who could swim well. When Franzillo first went under Branbury was some distance away with his little girl. Franzillo waded in where the water was shallow but suddenly stepped off into water beyond his depth. The current swept him out into the stream. The warning was given and Branbury made a gallant fight to save the young man, who could not swim a stroke. Thrice he dived and grappled him by the back, but each time the current swept the drowning man out of his grasp, the man having nothing on him by which Branbury could hold him. The last was made to the bottom in 16 feet of water. Franzillo was clinging with a death-grip to the river bed, and it was impossible to break his grip.

He was finally brought to the surface by the aid of a long pole, and his companions labored over him for some hours in an effort to bring back life.

Early Monday morning the body was brought to town, and on Tuesday interment took place, under Mr. Holtby.

Franzillo was a young man who in the few days that he had been about in the district, had won many friends by his open, genial disposition. He was 22 years of age, and has two brothers at Cranbrook.

Coroner Morris was notified, but decided that an inquest was not necessary.

NEW DENVER NEWS NOTES

Born—On Monday, Aug. 1, to Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Thompson, a son.

The Silverton Townsite Company have disposed of a number of lots in town during the past week.

Eight men are working at the Molly Hughes mine, and ore is being stoped from a 13-inch vein.

It is rumored that the C. P. R. will run a spur this fall from Three Forks to Bear Lake and next year build through to Kaslo, thus capturing all the tonnage of the Slocan and Kaslo districts. It is not probable that the narrow guage will ever be repaired.

W. Zwicky of the Rambler-Cariboo and W. English of the Whitewater, are in town getting supplies ready to resume work on their respective mines. Tony Becker of the Lucky Jim passed through town yesterday on his way to the mine. Yesterday four tons of freight went through to Three Forks for the mines at Bear Lake.—Slocan Record.

CONCESSION TO HOMESTEADERS

W. C. Cowell, agent of Dominion Lands, Kamloops, has received instructions from the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, that, owing to the demand for railway laborers throughout the Western Provinces, protection will be granted to all homesteaders until the 1st of April next, upon application being made to him, and on his being satisfied that the entry has been perfected.

LADY WILFRID LAURIER
The Wife of Canada's Prime Minister

Lady Laurier, wife of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Prime Minister of the Dominion, is one of the best-known and most esteemed women in Canada. High social position does not create fineness of fibre, and nobility of character; it merely affords a broader field for their manifestation. The grace, ease, kindness of heart, simplicity and charm that distinguish Lady Laurier to-day are but the flowering of the natural characteristics that made her beloved, when, in 1868, she married Wilfrid Laurier, the "silver-tongued" young lawyer, struggling for recognition.

The daughter of G. N. R. Lafontaine, Lady Laurier, was born in Montreal, and educated at the school of the Bon Pasteur and the Convent of the Sacred Heart, and there became proficient in music. Her love of music has made her a patron under whose kindly sympathy and substantial support a number of her protégés are winning laurels in the world of music to-day. Losing her mother at an early age, Lady Laurier was thrown into the society of her future husband under romantic circumstances, which led to their marriage. Then followed days of discouragement, watching and waiting, and of hope deferred in their home at Arthabaskaville, where the future Premier, then in delicate health, was working hard for recognition with the untiring sympathy, companionship and inspiration of his wife.

Lady Laurier has always accompanied her husband to Ottawa during the Parliamentary sessions, as she does now in all his travels, for, "life is too short," she says, "to be separated long." Her acquaintance with the great public men of the world is large, for in the hospitable home of the Prime Minister the leaders in all lines of activity are always welcome. Her days are busy ones, filled to the brim with social duties and her charitable and philanthropic work. She is one of the Vice-Presidents of the National Council of Women of Canada, and Honorary Vice-President of the Victorian Order of Nurses, besides being active in personal charities.

In her home, at Ottawa, Lady Laurier has a superb collection of gifts and souvenirs presented by royalty and others—the coronation medal from Queen Victoria, a gold snuff-box set with diamonds, a medal from Pope Pius X., a curious cup from the Chinese Prince-Regent, a golden key from Liverpool, autograph letters and portraits and a host of other treasures—but she cherishes most the magnificent tiara of one hundred and seventy-five diamonds presented by members of the Senate of Canada.

PRO BONO PUBLICO

(Correspondents will please be brief and avoid personalities. The Editor reserves the right to reject any correspondence or part of correspondence that does not bear on the question at issue, or treats the subject in a personal interest rather than in the interest of the public. Be brief

Editor The Enderby Press:

Dear Sir: In your last issue you make a statement which I am sure is an error, and I wish you would correct it. You state that the city has expended $200 on the road hurridly constructed to permit lumber to be placed upon the lot owned by Miss Cobb in the Lawes addition. I think if you will look into the matter and consult the records in the City office you will find that the cost of that road was not one-half of two hundred dollars. To be correct, the city did not spend $80 on the work.

I heard a story the other day, told to illustrate what is known as "the Seattle spirit." I do not think the illustration is a good one, but it goes to show what some people believe is the Seattle spirit.

One night the person who was telling the story was in Seattle, and was stupidly wending his way to the hotel, when he got into conversation with the watchman of one of the paper stalls on the street. Every place but the all-night houses was closed, and the newsy watchman was half asleep, seated on a mat in a doorway. He invited the man with the story to share his mat with him, and he did so. They went to sleep. Before dropping off to sleep the newsy complained of a tight pair of new shoes. When they awakened from sleep, it was daylight. The newsy looked down at his feet. His new shoes had disappeared, and his feet were laced in a pair of old shoes out at the heel and toes. The change had been made while he slept, and nobody knew how or by whom it was made.

This may afford to illustrate one phase of Seattle life, but it does not illustrate the spirit that is back of the marvelous growth of Seattle.

I want to tell you a story to illustrate the Enderby spirit. The illustration may not be any better than that told to illustrate the Seattle spirit but it shows a phase of the spirit prevailing in certain quarters here, and from which we cannot turn away. Your article above referred to makes my story necessary, otherwise I should not burden you with it and request that it be published.

To begin with, I want to ask one question: What is there back of the apparent determination of the men in control of the city funds, year in and year out, to delay, obstruct and discourage the development of these hill properties of Messrs. Lawes, Barnes, Moffet, and others who have for three years been endeavoring to get them opened up by a wagon road. I have been endeavoring to answer this question honestly to myself for three years, but have not reached a satisfactory conclusion. It is evident that the men in control prefer to collect taxes from the property on an acreage basis without being required to put anything back into it in the way of roads and streets, rather than permit it to be opened up and developed by the owners.

Can it be a case of sour grapes? Have we a "Naboth's vineyard" at our gate? and is the public service to suffer as it undoubtedly did suffer in the time of the great king?

We all know the self-sacrificing lives of our public men, and appreciate it to the full, but only so long as their public acts are for the advancement and the good of the public. When it deteriorates to a matter of private advancement, first, last and all the time, then we, the public crowd, object strenuously.

But let's to our story: Four years ago the city graded away the only natural approach to the property as then laid out, on High street and carried the dirt to fill in the depression on Maud street, at the Bell block. Finally when the demand became so strong for a road to open up the addition and give owners of lots access to their property that the men in control could not longer ignore it, they began to make a move towards giving the property owners what they have so long asked for. Last year Mr. Lawes was promised if he would find a road over the property at a 10 per cent grade, the city would build it. Surveyor Williams found the road and surveyed it; but it was temporarily jockeyed off the map as being too steep, impossible, impracticable, and the matter was pushed over another year.

When the spring just passed opened, the owners of lots were still insisting for a road onto the property. The road surveyed last year was again gone over, and again the impossibilities of it pointed out; but eventually it was agreed that the road would be built if it did not cost too much, and the right of way would be given by the property owners. The property owners gave the right of way. Tenders were called for, and it was found that the road could be built for less than one-half the amount the city feared. The tender was accepted, and the road was to have been finished by the 15th of August. The property owners entered into an agreement with the city and the papers were signed and delivered, granting the right of way over the property. After all this: the granting of the right of way by the property owners and the acceptance of the tender for the construction of the road, the council at its next meeting rescinded its action, and all the work of the spring months fell to the ground. The development of the properties was blocked for another season. But a contract had been let for a cottage on Lawes street, and the contractor demanded a way onto the property. The worst part of the proposed road had to be built to give access to Lawes street, but rather than face legal proceedings the city entered up on the impossible feat of constructing the road. The half mile of road was built, and the impossible accomplished, and it didn't cost $80 to do the work. It really cost so little that Alderman Blanchard, I see by your report of the Council proceedings, attempted to induce the men in control to finish the road to the point they had agreed upon with the property owners when the right of way was granted. The report states that the men in control concluded that the work could not be done until the fall rains. Let us suppose the men in control are in earnest this time, don't you see it is going to tie the development of the property up for still another season.

Undoubtedly, Mr. Editor, the men in control will denounce me for this letter, but did it ever occur to them that if they would do the things as they agree to do them, and as public servants should be expected to do them, without so much quibbling, side-stepping and messing about, there would not be any room for criticism.

CAUSE OF KING'S DEATH

AN OFFICIAL RECORD OF HIS LAST ILLNESS.

Medical Journal Declares That Edward VII. Died a Martyr to Duty.

The authoritative medical history of King Edward's illness and death, contained in the British Medical Journal, is as follows:

"King Edward VII. may be said, with perfect truth, to have died a martyr to his sense of duty as a sovereign. Throughout his reign he has insisted on performing his public duties without regard to his personal convenience. It was only within a day or two of his death that he could be prevailed upon to keep within doors, and even in the last throes of the distressing and dangerous complaint which was so quickly to cut short his valuable life he refused to take to his bed until his flagging powers could no longer be spurred into activity by his resolute will.

"From a medical point of view the case was perfectly simple, and the stopping of the machinery of life was due to causes about which there is nothing doubtful or mysterious. We think it necessary to point out this since the appearance on the bulletins of a leading laryngologist gave rise to a revival of unfounded rumors which were current even before the deceased monarch came to the throne. Professor St. Clair Thomson had, however, attended him on several occasions during the last 18 months. Before that time Sir Felix Semon had often been called on to advise the King about his throat. It may be added that more than 20 years ago he had been seen by the late Sir Morell Mackenzie.

SMOKER'S HEART.

"For years the King has suffered from emphysema and a tendency to more or less acute bronchitis, with the usual symptoms of distressing and ineffective cough and difficulty of breathing. There was crepitation at the base of both lungs, indicating a chronic impediment to the free passage of air in the smaller bronchial tubes. He was subject to attacks of laryngitis, producing a slight spasm of the vocal chords, but except for some inflammatory thickening at the hinder part of the glottis and chronic catarrh of the throat there was, we are in a position to state, no trace of disease in the upper air passages.

"The King, in short, had what is known as a 'smoker's throat,' and this and the congestion and thickening due to this cause, combined with the loss of elasticity in the lungs, made it increasingly difficult for him to clear his chest. The strain thrown upon the heart by obstruction to the passage of blood through the lungs caused by the collection of secretions in the bronchial tubes had its natural sequel in dilation of the right ventricle, and the actual cause of death was heart failure due to the increasing difficulty in the pulmonary circulation.

"It was, in short, a case of a type seen every day in thousands of elderly persons. The cause of death in such persons is purely mechanical, the action of the overladen heart being gradually stopped by increasing resistance in the lungs. Could the King have been induced to spare himself more he would probably have lived many years longer. His Majesty had, indeed, suffered from glycosuria of varying degree for a long time, but this did not, so far as can be judged, tend to the shortening of his life. Another condition which must have caused considerable discomfort at times was a certain weakness in the abdominal wall at the site of the operation for appendicitis, which was performed in 1902.

OFTEN OPPOSED DOCTORS.

"We only mention these infirmities as the knowledge of what he had had to endure must increase the admiration which all Britons feel for the high courage and resolution of the sovereign whom they have lost. The state of his health would have been a reasonable excuse for some degree of valetudinarianism. Of this weakness the late King showed no trace. A notice able feature in him was the pluck with which he bore himself not only in the illnesses which have been mentioned but during the painful period when he was recovering from a fractured patella. Although he always listened to the advice of his physicians with respect he did not always follow it if it seemed to him to stand in the way of the discharge of his duty. It should be a comfort to his subjects that he passed away peacefully before he had reached the stage of invalidism which is the frequent fate of sufferers from bronchial asthma.

BAD HEALTH FOR A YEAR.

"Except for the conditions which have been referred to, the King had until lately been a remarkably healthy man. But more than a year ago the strain began to tell on his robust constitution. He was ill when he went to Berlin in the early part of the year; he was ill again in the autumn, and it was noticed by many of those who saw him at the opening of Parliament that he looked very weary and unwell. On his way through France he caught a fresh chill, and during the early days of his stay at Biarritz his condition causes serious anxiety. The skill and the care of his nurse, combined with the favorable influence of the climate, enabled him to shake off the enemy for a time.

"Had he been a private citizen he might have extended his stay at Biarritz, which was proving beneficial. He felt obliged, however, to return to his post to be ready to play his part in a great constitutional crisis. He returned from Biarritz without stopping. This hurried journey would have taxed his strength even had he been in perfect health. Suffering as he was from the effects of recent illness, the King might fairly have been excused from facing the risk of returning from the south to the cloudy skies and the cold winds and showers of a treacherous English spring. The result might almost have been foretold. Though the end came with startling suddenness to his people, it was clear to those about him that the end was imminent before any whisper of alarm had found its way outside the palace.

"The first bulletin issued revealed the real nature of the situation to those who could read between the lines. During the last night the state of the heart made the august patient very restless, but the next day he was able to transact business for a short time. Gradually he became unconscious, reviving once or twice sufficiently to recognize the Queen and some of the others about him, but the unconsciousness deepened into coma, and the royal sufferer passed away so quietly that his life seemed 'to cease upon the midnight with no pain.'"

TOO MUCH FOR JOURNALIST.

Enterprising Newspaper Man Locked Up for Lunatic.

Growing suspicious of the administration of insane asylums in Italy Tomaso Giloni, a well-known journalist, set to find out about conditions in Rome. Ordinary methods failed to extract what he wanted, so he determined to get in as a patient. Now he confesses he wishes he had been less enterprising.

Banging the knocker of the door at the Cimarosa asylum, he demanded that the astonished porter should secure for him an audience with the King of Italy. The porter merely told him he was drunk and turned him out.

So he strolled down the street and performed such antics that the police locked him up. After an interview with the police surgeon he found himself inside. Soon after he was admitted the doctors declared he was over-excited and needed immediate treatment. So they administered an emetic, gave him an Arctic shower bath and vaccinated him.

Then they held a consultation on his condition and decided he had cancer on the brain. Nothing could save him, they agreed, but prompt trepanning. That sent Tomaso Giloni's enterprise fizzling out with a rush. He confessed, and the asylum authorities sent him along to the magistrate.

Stifling his laughter over the evidence the magistrate said the journalist had been sufficiently punished already, so he would be released Whereupon the doctors announced that they had seen the lay of Tomaso's little game all along and had acted accordingly.

SOCIALIST ONCE SOLDIER

BLATCHFORD'S EARLY DAYS IN THE ARMY.

Served in Ranks Thirty Years Ago —Recommends It to All Young Englishmen.

Companion Robert Blatchford was once a Tommy Atkins. So far from seeking to "palliate or deny the atrocious crime," this heretical Socialist has put his military experience at the disposal of his country. "My Life in the Army" invites young men to take up the profession of arms. Blatchford's book expresses his opinion that the necessary military training would prove to most young men a physical, mental and moral benefit, and even an agreeable experience.

It is many years since he "went for a soldier," but recently he followed some manoeuvres in England, and found that the appearance and strength of the men were better than in his own day, and he remarks:

PROUD OF THE REGIMENT.

"Also I have to say, emphatically, that a training which produces such results is good for any youth, and that the nation would be richer materially and morally, if every English boy could be so trained. My colleagues and I were greatly cheered and delighted at the sight of the splendid young manhood of that brigade. We would have gone hundreds of miles to see it. We felt ten years younger for the sight. And we deplored the lot of the multitude of young men cooped up in smoky towns, tied to a dull round of labor at desk, or bench, or loom, or counter; growing old before their time."

SOLDIERS NOT FIRE EATERS.

Mr. Blatchford does not believe that military training creates a thirst for blood:

"As bearing on the question of Tommy Atkins' jingoism, I will say a few words about the men who in 1878 were expecting to be sent to fight the Russians. We did not know but that we might have to start any day. And I used to talk to the men about it. They came from many regiments, being reserve men. Nobody wanted to go; nobody expressed any serious reluctance to go. I think the general feeling was almost a feeling of indifference. Soldiers are not easily excited, except about such important matters as pay, rations, and tobacco."

Mr. Blatchford saw service in an old "John Company" regiment just returned from India. The men were a loose lot, they had lots of money and were looking about how to spend it. They were the sort who wanted adventure spiced with danger.

CALL OF THE DRUM.

Mr. Blatchford was asked by his first cot-mate why he had enlisted. He could not say. But his cot-mate could tell him. "I suppose it's in the blood. You heard the drum, eh?" Mr. Blatchford did not understand. The other explained: "When a man hears the drum calling he has to go." One is reminded of the summer in Arcola, of the "Drums of the Fore and Aft," and of Bret Harte's drum, which resolved the doubts of the agriculturist who pleaded that he must stay away from the war to gather his harvest:

"But the drum
Echoed come.
Death shall reap the braver harvest, said the Solemn-sounding drum."

The drill sergeant in Blatchford's soldier days was not the Sergeant Whatsisname who gets credit from Kipling for saving modern Egypt. He was a different bird altogether. The renowned Socialist gives a picturesque sample.

HOW THEY USED TO DRILL.

"He was a tall man, over six feet high, and of a spare and angular figure. His chest was so outrageously padded that it gave him the appearance of a pouter pigeon. He had high shoulders and long legs. He had a comic face, with a red bristly moustache. In the deepest, harshest bass voice that ever spoke, and with his cheek bulged out by a quid of tobacco, this remarkable warrior at once began to address us. First of all he stalked up very close to the line and glared down at us as though he thought of drawing our teeth. Then he growled in a sepulchral manner: 'You miserable devils; you "miserable" devils.' And we all stood motionless, and with an uncomfortable feeling that we deserved the description thoroughly. 'Now, pay attention to me. You are raw recruits; raw and green. I'm here to dress you and drill you, and frizzle you and grill you, and pepper you and salt you till you're done to a turn; and by whiskers I shall "do" it. Don't grin at me, that man with the muffin face. I'll soon sweat the smiles off you. And look to your front, you poor, unsaved sinners, and learn wisdom.'

DRESS UP, EYES FRONT.

"Here the sergeant made a rush at a man near the flank and roared out, "What's your name?"—"Firwood, sir"—"Don't 'sir' me; call me sergeant. "What's your father?" —"A tailor, sergeant."—"A tailor! If he doesn't make better coats than soldiers he ought to be hanged for a botch. Go to centre, Firwood, and turn out your toes, you —"miserable" dev-il.' The sergeant stepped backwards again. "Now," he went on, "when I say 'Eyes front' look straight to your front, or as straight as you can, and forget your past sins and listen to me. I shall make men of you. I shall be your father and your mother and your Uncle Tom from Devizes, and you'll live to bless me in the coming years—if I don't murder you in the process. Eyes front!"

ARMY IS GOOD SCHOOL.

Most extraordinary uncivil and one-sided conversation this, but Blatchford thought it was all right, and the army was all right, though it is much better now. There's little or no rum trouble now-a-days, cigarettes is the worst difficulty. But even in the last generation, when the soldiers did "swill orful," it is Mr. Blatchford's belief the service was on the whole good for a young fellow.

The change wrought by the army life among the recruits was astonishing. In four months louts became soldiers; boys were transformed into men. In June there tramped through the Parkhurst gate a mob of pale-faced, weedy ragamuffins. In September those ragamuffins with town stoop and the town slouch had become clean, well-groomed, alert, upstanding young soldiers, with bronzed faces, muscular limbs, and bright eyes.

PUDDINGS.

Suet Pudding.—One cupful chopped suet, one cupful of chopped raisins, one cupful sweet milk, one cupful of molasses, with one teaspoonful soda, three and one-half cupfuls of flour. Mix flour, milk, and molasses, then suet, raisins, one-half grated nutmeg. Steam two and one-half hours. Serve with hard sauce.

Ginger Rice Pudding.—Whip two cupfuls of thick cream, then add one-third cupful sugar, flavor with vanilla and sherry wine, add one heaping tablespoonful of rice that has been cooked in one cupful of milk until tender, then cool; add half a cupful of chopped preserved ginger.

ENCOURAGING BIRD LIFE.

Building Houses for Bluebirds and Swallows.

What may be done in the encouragement of naturally migratory song birds to remain North during the Winter has been demonstrated at the farm house of George E. Hoxsie during the last Winter, where a colony of eleven bluebirds have contentedly lived and apparently enjoyed their quarters in the bird houses, where they were reared last Summer, says the Westerly Sun. It is quite interesting to watch their modes of living, as their habits of procuring food have to be entirely different from what they are in Summer.

Every fairly pleasant morning by the time it is light they fly away and are not seen again until near sunset, when they return individually and go into the bird houses, several occupying one house, and all in the same building.

Mr. Hoxsie is a great lover of birds and has about his place twenty-two bird houses, all of which were occupied last season, there being two nests of bluebirds and twenty nests of stump swallows. Besides these there were raised about the buildings four nests of barn swallows, one nest of chimney swallows and seven nests of eave swallows. As these would average four young birds to each nest, the number raised, with the old ones added, would make approximately 200 birds. Then there were within 500 feet of the house ten robin nests, one oriole, one waxwing, one house wren, two chippins, two ground sparrows and one king bird, making in all eighteen nests, and these young and old added would make a total of 300 insect destroying songsters that were not only a continual joy but a source of rare profit in the great number of gnats, flies, bugs and worms daily consumed.

Mr. Hoxsie attributes a big yield of apples last season to the destruction by birds of the insect pest that infects the apples from bloom to finish, having sold last Fall twenty-three barrels of fine fruit from a fifteen-year-old orchard of eighteen trees, and this without spraying. If every farmer would put up a few suitable bird houses it would soon make a vast difference to the raising of farm products.

CAKES.

Prune Cake.—One cupful of sugar, three-quarters of a cupful of butter, three eggs, three tablespoonfuls of sour cream, one level teaspoonful of soda, two cupfuls of flour, sifted twice before measuring; one teaspoonful each of cinnamon, allspice and nutmeg, and last, one cupful of cooked, chopped prunes or any fruit not too wet. Filling.—One egg, one-half cupful of sugar, one-third cupful of sour cream, one-half cupful of raisins, butter size of an egg. Cook all together for a few minutes and add flavoring and nuts if desired.

Nut and Date Cake.—Chop fine two cups of dates and two of walnuts, add two cupfuls of sugar, four eggs, and mix two teaspoonfuls of baking powder with eight teaspoonfuls of flour. Bake in a medium oven and serve with whipped cream.

Killarney Cakes.—Cream half cupful of butter, one cupful of fine sugar, one cupful of milk, two and one-half cupfuls of flour sifted with four level teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of vanilla, three drops of almond extract. Beat thoroughly whites of three eggs. Frost, and flavor frosting with a little vanilla and two drops of almond extract.

WOULDN'T INJURE IT.

On one occasion a judge gave an exhaustive decision in a case, after which the lawyer for the plaintiff rose and questioned it.

"Pardon me," said his lordship, "I cannot allow you to reopen this case after I have given my final decision. I may be wrong, but that is my opinion."

The lawyer replied:—

"Then, m'lud, I know it is no use my knocking my head against a brick wall. I suppose I must sit down?"

The judge, adjusting his eyeglasses and looking sarcastically at the lawyer, said:—

"Sir, I know it is of no use for you to knock your head against a brick wall; but, I may add, I know no one else who could perform such an operation with less injury to himself than you."

THROW AWAY ALL YOUR FEARS

BACKACHE, GRAVEL AND RHEUMATISM VANISH BEFORE DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Proved Once Again in the Case of Mrs. Fred. Krieger, Who Suffered From the Worst Forms of Kidney Disease.

Palmer Rapids, Ont., June 6 — (Special)—The thousands of Canadians who live in daily terror of those terrible forms of Kidney Disease known as Backache, Gravel and Rheumatism, will be deeply interested in the story of Mrs. Fred Krieger, of this place.

"I was for years a great sufferer from Kidney Disease, Gravel, Rheumatism and Backache," Mrs. Krieger states. "It all started through a cold, but I got so my head ached, I was nervous, my limbs were heavy, I had a dragging sensation across my loins, and I was totally unfit to do anything.

"Reading about wonderful cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills led me to buy some. After using a few I found they were doing me good and this encouraged me to continue their use. Eight boxes made me well.

"I have been able to do my own work ever since and to-day I am completely cured. Dodd's Kidney Pills gave me health and I feel like a new woman."

If you keep your Kidneys strong and healthy you can never have Backache. Rheumatism or Gravel. Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to make the Kidneys strong and well.

MAKING AN IMPRESSION.

"Madam, if you had a child to weep over," suggested the lawyer, "the alimony might be bigger."

"But I have none."

"At least you have a dog?"

"Alas no."

"Then there's nothing else to do. We'll have to take the rubber plant into court."

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is compounded specially to combat dysentery, cholera morbus and all inflammatory disorders that change of food or water may set up in the stomach and intestines. These complaints are more common in summer than in winter, but they are not confined to the warm months, as undue laxness of the bowels may seize a man at any time. Such a sufferer will find speedy relief in this Cordial.

"We've been having a regular clearance at home," explained Jones at his office, "throwing all sorts of old things away. I put one of my wedding presents on the fire this morning." "Did you, really?" asked a colleague. "What was it?" "A copper kettle!" replied Jones.

ENGLAND GROWS RICHER.

Trade, Income, Ships, All Increased in Edward's Reign.

The story of England's material progress during King Edward's brief reign is told in colossal figures. The imports of the Kingdom, which, at the close of last century stood at $2,600,000,000, last year totalled $3,100,000,000, or an increase of 20 per cent. Exports in the same time gained $430,000,000, or nearly thirty per cent., and the total foreign trade of the kingdom increased from $4,380,000,000 to $5,450,000,000, or twenty-five per cent. Comparing the April just passed with the April of ten years ago, that month this year shows a total trade of $530,000,000, compared with $350,000,000 in the same month of the last year of the last century, an increase of 50 per cent.

There are 18,400,000 tons of shipping registered in the United Kingdom. Ten years ago there were only 14,000,000. The increase in steam tonnage has been even greater than that, but sailing vessels have decreased.

Perhaps the most easily obtained test of trade within the country is the bank clearings, and the figures these present are almost too large to be grasped. The clearings last year were 68 billion (thousand millions) dollars. It would take a thousand years to count that sum, counting two a second. This was an increase during King Edward's reign of 23 billion dollars.

The assessment of income from trade, professions, etc., excluding those who earn $800 a year or less, is now $5,500,000,000, an increase in the nine years of 1,160 million. This income is received by a little over a million people.

YOUR SUMMER OUTING.

If you are fond of fishing, canoeing, camping or the study of wild animals look up the Algonquin National Park of Ontario for your summer outing. A fish and game preserve of 2,000,000 acres interspersed with 1,200 lakes and rivers is awaiting you, offering all the attractions that Nature can bestow. Magnificent canoe trips. Altitude 2,000 feet above sea level. Pure and exhilarating atmosphere. Just the place to put in your summer holidays. Good hotel accommodation. An interesting and profusely illustrated descriptive publication telling you all about it sent free on application to Mr. J. D. McDonald, District Passenger Agent, Union Station, Toronto, Ont.

She—"Charlie, why are you so very much opposed to piano duets?" He—"From principle. I think it's cowardly for two persons to attack one piece of music."

Clean Stomach, Clean Mind. — The stomach is the workshop of the vital functions and when it gets out of order the whole system clogs in sympathy. The spirits flag, the mind droops and work becomes impossible. The first care should be to restore healthful action of the stomach and the best preparation for that purpose is Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. General use for years has won them a leading place in medicine. A trial will attest their value.

TOO MUCH TO EXPECT.

Against an old Georgia negro, charged with stealing a pig, the evidence was absolutely conclusive, and the judge, who knew the old darky well, said reproachfully:

"Now, uncle, why did you steal this pig?"

"Because mah poor family wuz starvin', yo' honor," whispered the old man.

"Family starving!" cried the judge. "But they told me you keep five dogs. How is that, uncle?"

"Why, yo' honor," said uncle, reprovingly, "yo wouldn't 'spect mah family to eat dem dogs!"

AN EXCELLENT REMEDY FOR ALL BABIES

Baby's Own Tablets are an excellent remedy for babies of all ages. They cure all stomach and bowel troubles; make teething easy; dispel worms; and make baby fat, good-natured and healthy. "He was in this neighborhood about four or five years ago. His name was Williamson." "Williamson—kind of a goody-goody chap?" "Yes, that's the man!" "Guess I did know him. He committed suicide three years ago." "What! My brother committed suicide? Why, he was the last man in the world to have done such a thing! Was he ill, or in trouble, or what?" "He called me a liar, stranger!"

Salmon Arm Road Question Not to be Easily Settled

The question as to who shall lose the 33 feet of land to make the Salmon Arm road the required legal width where it touches the Moffet-Teece properties, has not been settled and does not appear to be nearing settlement. Mr. Moffet has fenced in his property and i[illegible] the work of [illegible] meeting the [illegible] Mr. Moffet [illegible] regret t[illegible] Williams [illegible] the previ[illegible] Burnyeat, [illegible] line are still [illegible] the city took over [illegible] Government where they (the city) found it, which means that the legal highway takes 33 feet from the centre of the travelled road, on each side, according to the Highways Act; and that if there is any loss of land there it is Mr. Lawes' loss, and not his (Mr. Moffet's), as Mr. Burnyeat's line is the northerly line of the acreage which he(Mr. Moffet) purchased."

The above is an excerpt from the minutes of the Council, and shows the position the City has finally taken.

The Burnyeat survey allows for a 33-foot roadway from the Lawes' property line to the Lambly-Wright-Teece property line, and if there is any discrepancy between Mr. Burnyeat's survey and Mr. Williams' sur[illegible] surveyor's quarrel and [illegible] The decis[illegible] 33 feet on [illegible] "where [illegible] be a [illegible]ral or [illegible] as it [illegible] position [illegible]dent Lang. [illegible] ter asking for information regarding the road in question, Mr. Lang wrote the Council as follows: "I would inform you that the road in question was constructed by the Government, and became a public highway by occupation. It was not gazetted. It ran apparently northwesterly through both properties mentioned. Subsequently the line fence of the Lambly-Wright property was moved out upon this road a distance of 30 feet."

PRO BONO PUBLICO

Editor The Enderby Press:

Dear Sir: Having noticed in your paper the letter of a member of the B. C. Fire Chiefs' Association, and also your comments on same, I may say that I agree with you both, that there should be an organized fire brigade in Enderby, to prevent it being fire-swept as other places have been.

We have a fire bell, hung in the tower of the City Hall, but I'll venture to say that the vast majority of the citizens do not know where to find the rope with which to pull in an alarm.

I would suggest that a number of cards be printed in heavy type, and placed in the different parts of the city. The directions on the cards to read something like this: "The person first discovering a fire should go as quickly as possible to the City Hall, open the double doors at the side of the Hall and pull the bell, giving it as quick, heavy strokes as possible, and continue ringing the bell until a sufficient number of men have gathered to get the first hose reel started to the fire." And also our hook and ladder wagon—when it arrives. Yes, certainly; money wiselyspent by a City Council on fire protection is well spent and no one should question the spending of it.

All places throughout the country with a population of 500 or more are organizing fire brigades, so let us not lag behind the times. It would be well to notice what happened to the city of Campbellton, N. B., a few weeks ago. Only four houses left standing after the fire, and 4,000 people homeless. Why? Because they were not prepared.

A number of the young men of the city have expressed their willingness to join a brigade if organized.

Therefore, if Chief English calls a meeting for the purpose of forming a fire company, he should have a ready response from the able-bodied men of the city. We don't need any "butterflies" in a fire brigade, and, remember, "a good fireman never kicks the bucket."

Yours truly,
AMICUS.

The Damper Lever of a MAGNET Wood Furnace is where it ought to be—at the front, readily reached without groping in the dark or taking unnecessary steps. A turn of the lever instantly changes the draft so the fire is quickened or checked, at will. Turned on, McClary's Magnet Wood Furnace produces the strongest heat in a few minutes; and the nickelled steel tubes radiate this heat for hours after the draft is shut off. Because of this stored heat McClary's Magnet Wood Furnace is economical and a continuous roaring fire is unnecessary. The heat that goes up the smoke pipe of ordinary wood furnaces, goes into the register pipes of the Magnet. Like the position of the damper, the Magnet Wood Furnace is right all through. Right in principle, right in construction; right in materials. See the Magnet at the McClary agent's in the nearest town. Write to nearest McClary branch for booklet, giving a detailed description.
