FORMED EXCHANGE

Ranchers of Valley Organize to Secure Better and Wider Markets

Will Grade and Guarantee All Products Shipped From Valley

The meeting held in the Miners' Union hall on Tuesday evening, for the purpose of taking the initiatory steps in the organization of a farmers' exchange, was the best attended gathering of ranchers that has ever assembled in the city. Nearly every plantation in the valley was represented, over a hundred farmers being present.

W. A. Cooper was elected temporary chairman, and Mr. Baker was the unanimous choice of the meeting for secretary-treasurer.

Chas. Hesse, who was the leading spirit in originating the movement, explained the object for which the meeting had been called. A farmers' co-operative union, or a farmers' exchange, he said, was an imperative necessity in the city. It was more important to sell the products of the farm than it was to grow it. There would be 200 carloads of fruit and vegetables grown in the valley, and it was essential to find a market for it. Farmers' exchanges were successfully operated in the Okanagan and Kootenay districts, and we could have a similar organization here second to none in the province.

C. A. S. Atwood expressed similar views as the above. For the best interests of the community, it was necessary to have a selling association. All fruit and farm products should be graded, well packed and guaranteed. The Riverside Nurseries had nothing to sell through the proposed organization, but he would donate $50 to it for the good of the cause.

Nearly all the prominent ranchers in the room expressed themselves as being in favor of the formation of a farmers' co-operative union or a farmers' exchange.

The chairman read extracts from the provincial act governing the formation of agricultural and horticultural societies.

On motion of J T. Lawrence and Chas. Hesse, the meeting unanimously decided to organize a Farmers' Exchange.

None of those present had very clear ideas regarding the best method to pursue in perfecting organization, or how to conduct it after the formation of the exchange, and on motion of J. T. Lawrence and Thos. Powers, it was decided to extend an invitation to Mr. Bullman, of the Kelowna Farmers' Union, to address the members of the new organization at a meeting to be held in the Miners' Union hall next Tuesday evening, August 20.

W. E. Hadden addressed the meeting at length on co-operative associations in general.

On motion of Messrs. Hadden and Lawrence, a committee of five was appointed to devise ways and means of completing organization. The chair appointed Messrs. Hesse, Heaven, Markell, Hadden and Baker.

Messrs. W. E. Hadden and Alf. Cooper pointed out that some funds would be required to pay the expenses of the exchange until it arrives at the smooth running stage. The chairman passed his hat around the hall. The result was: Cash on hand, $11.20.

The secretary-treasurer was instructed to pay all current expenses.

After a vote of thanks had been tendered to Mr. Hesse for his work in taking the initiative in proposing the organization, the meeting adjourned until next Tuesday night.

WANT PRICE RAISED

Reservoir Contractor Asks for More Money for Removing Hardpan

At the council meeting on Monday night it was decided to hold a sale of city property next month for unpaid taxes. Wm. Shannon addressed the council on behalf of E. Crawford, who has the contract to do he excavating work for the new city reservoir. Mr. Shannon asked for an increase in the contract price for removing 200 yards of hardpan from the bottom of the reservoir. He stated that the city engineer had told him that in Spokane $5 a yard —a modest price!—was charged for removing this kind of material. Final action was postponed until the next meeting. F. M. Kerby addressed the board on the subject of street grades, but no action was taken.

NEWS OF THE CITY IN BRIEF

The Greenwood Ledge is still camping on the trail of the real estate sharks. If these gentlemen would confine their representations to facts they would be less obnoxtous.

The Ledge says that big Andy Johnson, of Phoenix, has started a zoological garden at the Central hotel. He has two young bears in a wire-fenced corral, and already they understand some words in Swedish. Andy expects to teach them how to dance. Owing to their hugging qualities they ought to shine in a two-step waltz.

Everybody in the city except the police commissioners appear to think that Grand Forks is a wide-open town.

Frache Bros. offer investors an opportunity to make profitable investments. Read their advertisement on the fourth page in this issue.

Miss Eunice Henniger, of Spokane, arrived in the city this week, and is visiting at the home of her uncle, E. C. Henniger.

Col. Lowery, editor and financier of Greenwood's principal excitement, is in the city today. There are no poker games in Greenwood at present.

STOCKS WILL RISE

Boston Authority Predicts That Granby Will Be Higher Than in 1906

Five Million Tons of Ore Blocked Out at Hidden Creek

Geo. L. Walker, in the Boston Commercial, says that the Granby company has recently been making a net profit of $135,000 a month. This is at the rate of about $10.50 a share. The profits arising from one year's operations, with copper at its present price, will be nearly sufficient to pay for the new smelter and other construction at its Hidden Creek property.

It is estimated that five million tons of ore, which will average better than 2 per cent copper, has been blocked out at Hidden Creek already. The No. 2 ore body, which was supposed to be lower grade than No. 1, is developing much better than was expected. What is known as the lower tuunel, 145 feet under the upper tunnel, has crosscut the No. 2 ore body recently, showing it to have a width of over 120 feet. It averages better than 2 per cent copper throughout.

It is officially stated that all of the openings in the mine, tunnels, drifts, crosscuts and raises are in ore the grade of which exceeds 2 per cent. The importance of this will be appreciated when it is recalled that Granby's big mine at Phoenix averages less than 1½ per cent copper, and carries about the same gold and silver values that are found in the Hidden Creek ores. All tests and calculations lead the management to believe that operating costs per ton of ore will be lower and recoveries of values higher at Hidden Creek than at Phoenix and Grand Forks.

Construction work at Hidden Creek is progressing rapidly. Docks and houses are being built, the railroad right of way and smelter site are being cleared and the power line graded. All the plans will be completed soon and then contracts for foundations and other construction work will be let. The new smelter should go into commission some time next year.

Readers of these letters will recall that I strongly advised the purchase of Granby stock when it was selling between $20 and $30 a share. I was confident that the management could be depended upon to pull the company out of its difficulties. Through the purchase, development and equipment of the Hidden Creek property Granby is coming into possession of greater and more valuable assets than it ever had before; and there is every prospect that its stock may sell even higher in the future than it did in the boom days of 1906.

Newman Erb, president of the British Columbia Copper company, says that the company's production of copper in July exceeded one million pounds. This represents a substantial increase over the month of June.

HALF THE GAME GOOD

What Promised to Be a Glorious Victory Ends in a Winter's Tale

The Nelson-Grand Forks baseball game Wednesday afternoon was a series of smiles and tears to the local fans. Up to the end of the fifth inning the home team played professional baseball, and the sporting editor of The Sun wore his Panama on the right ear at an angle of forty-five degrees towards some easy money. The score was 3 to 0 in favor of Grand Forks.

In the sixth, however, the Nelson batters began to catch on to Pitcher Barrett's curves, and from that time until the end of the game the outfielders of the home club were bombarded with baseballs. The final score was terrible to contemplate—17 to 3 in Nelson's favor. The procession to the city after the game was of a funereal nature, with hats well drawn over the eyes to hide the tears.

CITY NEWS IN BRIEF

A Montreal minister says there is no hell. It is The Sun's opinion that the reverend gentleman was too hasty in arriving at this conclusion. Had he attended the Nelson-Grand Forks baseball game on Wednesday he would probably have amended his views on this subject.

Becker, the New York police officer who is charged with the murder of the gambler Rosenthal, is said to be worth a million dollars. How a policeman earning $2 day for fifteen years can be worth $1,000,000 is a thing which only a policeman could explain.

J. C. Crowe, of Dalhousie, N.S., aas been appointed principal of the Greenwood public school. Miss Elsie Mansfield, of Granite Siding, and Miss Isabella Montgomery, of Nelson, will be his assistants.

The sports committee of Grand Forks' annual fair have had $525 placed at their disposal for prize money.

David McBride recently bonded over 700 acres of land near Bridesville for $20,000. He received a payment upon it last Saturday, and will receive another in ninety days.

Mrs. Angus Graham died in the Greenwood hospital last Tuesday. She was a native of Pictou, N.S. A husband and one daughter survive her.

NEW WAGE SCALE

BritishColumbiaCopper Company Grants Its Employees an Increase

Wages Are Now Dependent Upon the Price of Copper

A new wage scale was signed this week between the British Columbia Columbia Copper company and the Greenwood Miners union. It is a sliding scale, dependent upon the price of copper. When copper is selling below 16 cents a pound the scale will be paid that existed up to the end of July, with the exception of the $2.50 men at the smelter, and there wages in future will never be lower than $2.75. This month the lowest wages at the smelter is $3 a day. When copper is between 16 and 18 cents all men above and below ground at the Lone Star and Mother Lode mines and Greenwood smelter will get an advance of 25 cents a day over the low scale. When copper is 18 cents or more the wages will again be raised 25 cents all around. The new scale became effective on the 1st of August.

Snakes and Sense

Ever since the serpent in the Garden of Eden double-crossed Eve, the sons of men have been swatting the snake.

But now appears Prof. H. D. Bailey of Muhlenberg College in Pennsylvania with a word directed especially to farmers. He urges farmers to desist from indiscriminate snake swatting. What is more the professor wants to put some of the snakes into the song-bird class, which is to say, he wants them protected by legislation because of their co-operation with mankind in warfare on pests detrimental to man's agricultural purposes.

Here is a list of the professor's special privilege snake family; king snake, milk snake, bull snake, fox snake, indigo snake, corn snake, and common garter snake. We have the professor's word for it, that these snakes are harmless to mankind, and are really benefactors because they destroy rodents and many insects.

As a matter of actual scientific fact, there are very few venomous snakes in North America, but there is a terrific aversion and prejudice among normal persons against the whole snake kingdom. What Prof. Bailey says is doubtless very well founded on commonsense. It may be practical absurdity to swat a friend, even if it be a snake. Nevertheless we doubt very much whether legislation would be successful in removing so universal a prejudice.

When it comes to legislating in the snake's behalf his snakeship is amenable to the oldest law in the world according to which he has no business eating gophers and bugs anyhow. According to Genesis all the snake has any right to eat is dust, and if he had been following orders he wouldn't be here now.

The Chief Requisite

David Belasco, in an interview in New York, condemned a certain ultra modern type of society woman.

This type, which luckily isn't numerous, he said, lives on notoriety. To a woman of this type a lawyer said one day.

Yes, madam, I can get you the divorce you desire. For $500 I can get you a divorce—and get it without publicity, too.

She wrinkled her smooth, white, well-powdered forehead in a frown; she bit her rouged and over-red lip in annoyance.

But what would it cost, she asked with publicity?

Hadn't Taken the House

Ghosts and weird apparitions which were said to appear in an empty house were not inducements to possible tenants, so the agent had it elaborately done up and decorated and, by way of tempting bait, had some expensive gas fittings put in the house. The next week he heard that some bold, bad man had been after the house. His heart leaped with hope and expectation, and he rushed off in frantic excitement to the housekeeper of the haunted grange.

This is splendid, he gasped. Someone has taken the house, hasn't he?

I don't know sir, I'm sure. Perhaps he'll come back for the house, but he's taken all the gas fittings.—San-Francisco Star.

THIRTY YEARS OF DISFIGURING ECZEMA CURED

"Ever since I was a little girl, thirty years ago, I had suffered tortures from eczema in one of its worst forms. The disease runs in my family, and mine was of a scaly and most disfiguring kind. The eczema formed in round rings, and then scales all over my face and limbs. I have been smothered from head to foot. I was born in Leamington, which is famous for its sulphur baths and pump waters, and one would think that after taking the treatment there regularly as I did, the disease would long ago have been cured, but it was not. I attended the ——— Hospital for years and years, so you will see I gave it a fair trial. Everyone in the town knew of my case. My face was disfigured very badly. A doctor told me that I should never get rid of it. I spent pounds in doctors' bills, and I attended several hospitals but nothing did any good.

"Then one day an uncle of mine recommended the Cuticura Remedies. I took his advice, and commenced to use the Cuticura Soap. To my astonishment an improvement at once set in, and my hair, which had been a complete mass of scales and scurf, soon began to look in splendid condition. Then I bought a box of Cuticura Ointment, and this cleared my skin wonderfully. In a few weeks' time all traces of the scaly eruptions had completely disappeared. Now my skin is clear and healthy, and thanks to the Cuticura Remedies I am completely cured of eczema. All my neighbours were astounded. The Cuticura Remedies are worth their weight in gold, and one tablet of Cuticura Soap goes further than four cakes of cheaper soaps. It has brought happiness into my home." (Signed) Mrs. Butler, 17, Francis Rd., The Cotterridge, King's Norton, Birmingham, Eng., July 28, 1910.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, but those who wish to try them without charge may do so by sending to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., 82 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A., for a liberal sample of each, post-free, with 32-p. skin book.

Motorcycles

A motorcycle is a bicycle with a pandemonium attachment.

The motorcycle is equipped with a motor small enough to be put in a large pocket and loud enough to fill a colliseum comfortably. This motor is connected with the rear wheel of the bicycle, and when it is in the mood will revolve the wheel with tremendous speed, thus causing the bicycle to proceed from hither to yon over buggies, pedestrians, fences and small outbuildings.

A motorcycle is really a miniature automobile with full sized noise, smell and dirt output. It is not started by cranking, however, but by pedaling the whole machine along the road until the motor emerges from its coma and gets on the job. An automobilist can be detected by his vast overhanging shoulders and calloused hands. A motorcyclist, however, may have arms like pipestems, but his legs are seven sizes too large for him.

A motorcycle is not as comfortable as a camel or a lumber wagon, but it is very swift, and there is nothing that feels more like flying than to ride a large barytone motorcycle over the country roads at fifty miles an hour, leaping lightly from bump to bump—except to leave the machine when it has struck a rock and to soar swiftly through the unstable atmosphere until some jagged section of the hemisphere interferes with further progress.

Motorcycles are very useful and have almost annihilated distance and cheap clothes. They should be ridden in costume, except by very wealthy and careless men. A pair of leather pants with asbestos lining and a two bushel hip pocket for tools a padded vest, heavy gloves, a pair of goggles and nose and shin guards make a tasty and useful rig for the cyclist. Dressed in this fashion the enthusiast can enjoy himself to the full as he caroms from tree to tree and gorges himself with dust, oil and excitement.

Motorcycles should be treated with respect at all times and should not be interfered with when in a hurry.

A Smile Worth While

When days were dark, you might have made them fairer
By changing all my life with just one smile,
Fair days were rare, you chose to make them rarer;
Was it worth while?
You chose one day, to break my heart
by frowning,
When all my life hung on one tender smile,
You crushed my hopes all eager for your crowning
Was that worth while?
Now, I am dying; could you, your frown forsaking,
Just for one moment lean o'er me
now and smile,
I could forget the life you filled with aching,
Is that worth while?

SEVERE NEURALGIA

Cured Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

There is an excellent reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured the most severe cases of neuralgia, sciatica and other complaints in the group known as disorders of the nerves. This group also includes St. Vitus Dance, partial paralysis and the common state of extreme nervousness and excitability. Each of these complaints exist because there is something the matter with the nervous system. If the nerves have tone and are strong and healthy you will not have any of these complaints. The reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure nervous disorders is, that they restore weak, run down nerves to their proper state of tone. They act both directly upon the blood supply and the nerves. The highest medical authorities have noted that nervous troubles generally attack people who are bloodless and that the nerves are toned when the blood is renewed. It is thus seen that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure nervous disorders by curing the cause of the trouble. The following is an instance. Miss Annie Jones, London, Ont., says:—"For over a year I was an intense sufferer from neuralgia, which located in my face and head. The pain at times was so intense that I could scarcely keep from screaming, and nothing I was doing for the trouble seemed to help me. As time went on my whole nervous system was affected. At last when I felt that my case was almost hopeless I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The result of this treatment was that I am now enjoying such comfort as I had not known for years, and only those who have suffered from neuralgic pains can realize what a blessing the Pills have been to me."

If you are suffering from any blood or nervous disorder begin to cure yourself to-day with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which you can get from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DUBIOUS

About What Her Husband Would Say

A Mich., woman tried Postum because coffee disagreed with her and her husband. Tea is just as harmful as coffee because it contains caffeine —the same drug found in coffee. She writes:

"My husband was sick for three years with catarrh of the bladder, and palpitation of the heart, caused by coffee. Was unable to work at all and in bed part of the time.

I had stomach trouble, was weak and fretful so I could not attend to *my housework—both of us using cof*fee all the time and not realizing it was harmful.

One morning the grocer's wife said she believed coffee was the cause of our trouble and advised Postum. I took it home rather dubious what my husband would say—he was fond of coffee.

"But I took coffee right off the table and we haven't used a cup of it since. You should have seen the change in us, and now my husband never complains of heart palpitation any more. My stomach trouble went away in two weeks after I began Postum. My children love it and it does them good, which can't be said of coffee.

"A lady visited us who was usually half sick. I told her I'd make her a cup of Postum.' She said it was tasteless stuff, but she watched me make it, boiling it thoroughly for 15 minutes, and when done she said it was splendid. Long boiling brings out the flavour and food quality." POISON IN SWEETS

Arsenic as Widely Used in India as in Ancient Rome

Arsenic is commonly employed by the professional poisoner in India, who will poison a whole family to make sure of one victim. The reports of the Bombay Government analyst throws some light on the methods. The poison is usually given in sweetmeats, and generally by a strange woman who has been met in the street, and who mysteriously disappears. This strange woman is found in every analyst's report for the last twenty years, and in circumstances so identical that it would al*most seem to be the same person.* Will this elusive person ever be captured by the Indian police?

Arsenic has, perhaps, been more frequently used that any other poison for criminal purposes. It has been proved identical with the wonder elixir of the seventeenth century, when secret poisoning became so frequent in Italy that the clergy, despite the rules of the confessional, acquainted Pope Alexander VII in 1868 with the extent of the practice.

It was found that young widows were abundant in Rome, and that most of the unhappy marriages were speedily dissolved by the death of the husband. A secret society of young matrons was discovered, which met at the house of La Spara, a reputed witch, who supplied them with a slow, tasteless, colorless poison, carefully calculated to kill a husband in just the time that suited the purchaser. La Spara and thirteen of her companions were hanged, a large number of the culprits were whipped, half-naked, through the streets of Rome, while others of the highest rank escaped with heavy fines and banishment.—London Chronicle.

Digging for His Own Money

A young man recently got married and took a cottage, determined to grow enough vegetables to keep the household going. He started to dig up the garden, and, after half an hour's hard work, was astonished to find a sovereign at his feet. Then he dug with renewed ardor. Several pennies, a six pence and a half crown rewarded his efforts.

Blow! If this ain't a bloomin' gold mine! he said digging away for all he was worth. I wonder what I'll find next.

His arms ached, little beads of perspiration trickled down his nose, and his neck felt as though it was breaking. He could stick to it no longer. He straightened his back at last with a groan of pain, and at the same instant felt something cold sliding down his leg. In a moment he grasped the truth. There was a hole in his trousers pocket.

PSORIASIS WAS CURED

After Five Years of Suffering—Three Doctors Failed and Said Case Was Incurable

Itching and Burning Was Terrible Until Relief and Cure Was Effected by

Psoriasis is another name for chronic eczema. It is the worst form of this dreadful itching skin disease. Once eczema has reached this stage it is usually considered incurable.

But here is a case which proves again the wonderful healing power of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Not only does relief come quickly, but the resulting benefits are thorough and lasting.

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Consecon, Ont., writes:—"I thought it my duty to write you telling you the great benefit I received from using Dr. Chase's Ointment. For five years I suffered with what three doctors told if any one offered to guarantee me a cure for $50.00 to keep my money in my pocket, as I could not be cured.

"The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head. The itching and burning was hard to bear. At last my brother read in the paper about Dr. Chase's Ointment as a healer. I used 8 boxes, and I am glad to say I am entirely cured, not a sign of a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise the ointment enough, and you are at liberty to use my testimony, as I hope thereby to induce other sufferers to try the same."

THE BLESSING OF MOTHERHOOD

Healthy Mothers and Children Make Happy Homes

Motherhood is woman's highest sphere in life. It is the fruition of her dearest hopes and greatest desires; yet thousands of noble women through some derangement have been denied this blessing.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong. This is evidenced by the following letters which are genuine and truthful:

London, Ont.—"I wish to thank you for the benefit I received by taking your famous medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before my baby was born I was so ill I could not stand long or walk any distance. I had to lie down nearly all the time. After I took your medicine I felt like a new woman. I could work from morning till night and was happy and well. I certainly think it relieves pain at childbirth and recommend it to every woman who is pregnant. You may use this testimonial if you like. It may help some other woman."—Mrs. Frank Corbin, 132 Adelaide St., London, Ont.

Brooklyn, N.Y.—"I was ailing all the time and did not know what the matter was. I wanted a baby but my health would not permit it. I was nervous, my side ached and I was all run down. I heard that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was good and took the medicine. I have now a beautiful baby and your Compound has helped me in every way."—Mrs. J. J. 50,000 Unclaimed War Medals

In two large strong rooms at Woolwich Dockyard, Woolwich, Eng., are stored nearly 50,000 unclaimed South African medals. Each is engraved with the name of the man to whom it was awarded. These men are not now with the colors, but a staff of clerks and a department armed with medal lists and regimental records are endeavoring to trace them.

Many of this lost legion are Irregulars who flocked to the British colors when war broke out, but who have since become scattered all over the world. One young man, for instance after the war, went prospecting in the interior. He turned up recently in Capetown after an absence of nearly ten years and asked for his medal. It was given him. Similar demands from all parts of the British Empire are received nearly every week.

Hundreds of medals have been reposing in regimental safes since 1904. At the end of ten years, according to the King's regulations, those still unclaimed will be broken up and the silver debited to the mint. Many men have refused the medal on the ground that it is 'too cheap.' Three-quarters of a million of the medals were struck—a fact which may have been lightly regarded.

But these South African awards are not the only medals at Woolwich awaiting claimants. There are 4,000 medals (with names engraved) for the Zulu campaign of 1878-79, and also seven medals presented by the British South African Company for the Matabele campaign. Claims for the Crimean and Indian Mutiny medals are still made. On an average the India office give away twelve Mutiny medals a year, while the war office bestows one Crimean medal a year and replaces about ten lost medals.

Contents of a Man

An average man of 150 pounds contains the constituents found in 1,200 eggs. There is enough gas in him to fill a gasometre of 3,649 cubic feet. The iron in him would make four tenpenny nails. His fat would make 75 candles and a good-sized cake of soap. His phosphate contents would make 8,064 boxes of matches. There is enough hydrogen in him in combination to fill a balloon and carry him above the clouds. The remaining constituents would yield six teaspoonsful of salt, a bowl of sugar, and ten gallons of water. The foregoing analysis is made by the Practical Druggist, which adds that a man has 500 muscles, about 1,000,000 cells, 200 bones, 4 gallons arteries and veins, more than 25 feet of intestines, and millions of pores. His heart weighs from 8 to 12 ounces; its capacity is from 4 to 6 ounces in each ventricle, and its size is 5 by 3 1-2 by 2 1-2 inches; it pumps 22 1-2 pounds of blood every minute, 16 tons in every 24 hours, about 5,840 tons a year; in a fully developed, healthy adult it beats about 72 times a minute.

The change of dietary that comes with spring and summer has the effect in weak stomachs of setting up inflammation, resulting in dysentery and cholera morbus. The abnormal condition will continue if not attended to and will cause an exhaustive drain on the system. The best available medicine is Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. It clears the stomach and bowels of irritants, counteracts the inflamation and restores the organs to healthy action.

Manager Wives

A well known doctor, who claims that Canadian motherhood is the highest type in the world, was asked if this was not partly due to the unusual amount of responsibility the Canadian husband allows his wife in family affairs.

Quite true, the doctor replied. The confidence her husband places in her makes the Canadian mother capable and self-reliant. The mother's share in a family's success or failure is a large one—much larger, indeed, than most men will acknowledge.

I see by the papers, a friend once said to me, that Footlights is traveling under his wife's management.

So do most men, I replied, but they don't advertise it.

PROGRESS OF CREMATION

Over Four Hundred Cremations at Montreal

The British Medical journal in a recent article on the progress of cremation gives figures showing the growth of this method of disposing of the dead in Europe.

The total number of cremations in Great Britain during 1911 was 1,023, which shows an increase of 177 as compared with 1910. Since the opening of the Working Crematorium in 1885, there have been 9,984 cremations in Great Britain. At the present time there are 13 crematoriums in Germany, six of which started operations last year. A law has been recently passed permitting cremations in Prussia.

In Switzerland there are now ten crematoriums, three of which belong to the municipalities of Basel, Geneva and Zurich. There were 1,210 cremations in Switzerland in 1910.

There are about forty crematoriums in the United States, twenty-eight in Italy, five in France, four in Sweden and Norway, two in Russia, one in Denmark, and one in Montreal, Canada.

The beautiful crematorium in Mount Royal cemetery at Montreal was opened in 1902 and up to the close of 1911, 401 cremations took place there.

Pretty Smart Work

Residents in rival cities, Jones and Brown were bragging hard about the excellences of their respective homes.

Take our fire brigade, said Jones, after an hour's heated discussion. Do you know, the other day a fire broke out in our town, and within three minutes the engine came along, but it was going so fast that the driver couldn't pull up till he was a mile past the burning house?

Brown smiled in a superior fashion.

My dear fellow, that's nothing, he said. One day two men were working on a church steeple in my city, and suddenly one of them slipped. A terrible death would have been his, only fortunately, a spectator had the presence of mind to call the fire brigade on the telephone, and they came just in time to catch him in a blanket.

Extermination of Rats and Mice

If it were generally know that there is no trouble to rid a house, barn or any building of rats and mice by the use of Gillett's Lye, it is doubtful if the article could be made as fast as it would be used for this purpose alone. The process connected with using it is very simple, the plan being to sprinkle a little of the article in and around the holes made by these pests in floors, partitions, etc. In addition to this it is well to use a thin piece of board about a foot square, or even smaller, and make a complete circle of the Lye on the board about a quarter of an inch deep, and inside of the circle place some meat or cheese. In endeavoring to get at the bait the feet of the rats and mice will be burned and the whole colony, whether large or small will immediately disappear from the premises.

The plan is worth trying, but the good kind—Gillett's Lye—should be procured. Refuse the many cheap imitations and substitutes.

The Wedding Gift

The bachelor community of a certain suburb were greatly scared by the advent amongst them of a fearsome type of the desperate, husband hunting spinster. After throwing each of the bachelors into a state of terror, lest he should be the recipient of her attentions, the lady finally captured the curate.

Local bachelordom was so intensely relieved at its escape that it united in presenting the curate with a splendid wedding present in the shape of a costly table-service. The curate was over-whelmed. "Such a magnificent gift!" he gasped.

Well, you see, my boy! exclaimed the chief of the local bachelors, it is really our thanksgiving service.

HOW BLOOD IS MADE.

The liquids and the digested foods in the alimentary canal pass through the wall of the canal into the blood. This process is called absorption and takes place chiefly from the small intestine. After absorption the blood carries the food through the body, and each cell takes from the blood the food it needs. A pure glyceric extract made from bloodroot, meadrake, stone, queen's root and golden seal and sold by druggists for the past forty years under the name of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, gives uniformly excellent results as a tonic to help in the assimilation of the food and in the absorption by the blood of the food it requires. Eradicate the poisons from the blood with this alterative extract which does not shrink the white blood corpuscles, because containing no alcohol or other injurious ingredients. Thus the body can be built up — strong to resist disease. This is a tonic taken from Nature's garden that builds up those weakened by disease.

Dr. Pierce, founder of the Invalids' Hotel at Buffalo, N.Y., has received many letters similar to the following:

F. R. Munro, Esq.

Mr. Fred R. Munro, of Paradise, N. S., writes: "I take great pleasure in writing you as regards my case and its cure. In September I was taken with Typhoid Fever, which put me in a dreadful condition. I was weak, run down, nervous and was reduced to a mere skeleton. I had tried most everything I could get but nothing did me any good until, at last, I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and 'Pleasant Pellets,' which I did. Before I had used one bottle I saw a great improvement and when I had used this treatment two months, using only a few vials of 'Pleasant Pellets,' I returned to perfect health. I cannot find words to express my thankfulness for this wonderful medicine. I advise all sufferers to write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, as he cures when others fail."

NEXT Thursday a vote of rate payers will be taken on the agreement between the Canadian Pacific and Kettle Valley Railway companies and the city of Grand Forks. There is no question as to which way the citizens will vote. The agreement is in no danger, but it might be as well for all voters to cast their ballots, even if they feel certain that by doing so the final result will not be altered, in order to show the railway companies that they are alive to their own welfare.

Newspaper Law

1. A postmaster is required to give notice by letter (returning the paper does not answer the law) when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the postoffice, and state the reason for its not being taken Any neglect to do so makes the postmaster responsible to the publisher for payments.

2. If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publishers may continue to send it until payments are made, and collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until payment is made.

3. Any person who takes a paper out of the post office, whether directed to his name or not, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the pay.

4. If a subscriber orders his paper stopped and the publisher continues to send it, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the post office. This proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.

THE NOBLEST ARCH

Women Will Erect a Memorial to the Victims of the Titanic

The women of the United States are collecting half a million dollars with which they will erect a monument to the men who periahed on the Titanic that women and children might be saved. They plan the noblest arch the world has ever seen, to be erected in Washington, a monument that will become not less famous than the Washington monument, and that will proclaim to the world the gratitude of womankind that men, in a great crisis, proved that he had not degenerated in the course of the centuries that removed him from that age when he had to fight for his womenfolk, and for the lives of his childreen. There are few great arches of any kind in the world today, and those that there are have nothiug to do with the heroism of peace, but mark the triumph of some conqueror of a foreign foe. The Titanic arch will mark the greatest victory of all, the triumph of a man's soul over his flesh. It will bear in imperishable marble the story of one of the world's greatest calamities, one of mankind's greatest victories.

The movement to commemorate in some striking way the heroism of the men who went down with the Titanic began almost as soon as the survivors touched shore on the Carpathia. Who thought of it first is not known. It must be that thousands of women thought of it at the same time. Probably a dozen little circles worked simultaneously until their widening operations brought them into contact. Then they merged, and finding among them Mrs. John Hays Hammond, a woman with a reputation for executive ability, they made her the secretary of the Women's Titanic Memorial association. Other prominent women were prompt to volunteer their services as soon as they learned of what was going on, and a notable committee was formed. Mrs. John Hay, widow of the famous secretary of state, was made president, and Mrs. W. H. Taft, wife of the president, was honored by being permitted to subscribe the first dollar. Other women who have taken an active part in the work are Mrs Grover Cleveland, Mrs. Champ Clark, Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, Mrs. Oscar Underwood, Mrs. Samuel Gompers, Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Mrs Alexander Graham Bell, Mrs. Harrison Grey Fiske and Mrs. Leonard Wood.

As soon as the committee was formed the heads of practically all the national women's clubs in the United States applied to it, asking to be included in the association. At the present time it is said that 28,000 women's clubs and other organizations in the United States are at work collecting money for the memorial. Even from Hawaii has come a subscription from an American women's club, and from Alaska has come a contribution of uncoined gold dust. The women in Panama, tao, have asked to be allowed to send on their mite. The result of this organization is that for some months past money has been flowing into the central committee at the rate of $300 a day. Even at this rate it would require considerable time to raise the half million dollars which is the sum to be spent on the memorial, and at the present time the organization is being fmproved with a view of hurrying up the contributions.

The women have clear ideas as to what will be done with the money. They have resolved that the half million shall be spent in an arch, and in nothing else, and that the arch shall be at Washiagton, in the Mall, which will then have four memorials, namely, the Washington monumeni, the Grant memorial, the proposed Lincoln memorial, and the Titanic arch. The leading artists and architects of the United States will be asked to submit designs, but they will be allowed no very great latitude, since it has already been decided that an arch squared on top, as is the Arc de Triomphe in Paris, and ornamented with classical pillars and appropriate carved figures, shall be erected. It may be that the poets will be urged to rise to the great occasion and write something that will be carved on the white marble of the arch, so that as long as the blocks remain one upon the other the world may read the story of the men who chose death on the Titanic.

The taste of the women in choosing the arch as an expression of their gratitude and reverence is to be commended. This beautiful form of memorial has been permitted to decay of late years, and at the present time there are not half a dozen great arches left standing in the world. The most famous is the Arc de L'Etoile, in the Champs Elysees, Paris. This arch was erected to commemorate the victories of Napoleon, and was completed in 1830. In 1807 Napoleon himself began the erection of an Arch of Peace in Milan, and it was finished by the Austrians fifty years later. There is also the Marble Arch, in London, which forms one of the entrances to Hyde Park, and there is a Wellington arch. None of these arches, however, cost half a million dollars to erect, and on this account the money which the women of the United States wil spend on the Titanic memorial ought to provide the noblest arch ever erected. Posterity will say that no other event commemorated by a triumphal arch was so worthy of being perpetuated as the tragedy of the Titanic, "where manhood perished not."

THE SAMPLE MARKET

How it Will Increase the Car Shortage

From time to time the grain growers of Western Canada are faced with problems affecting the disposal of the products of their labor; questions that require the most careful consideration. To come to a satisfactory conclusion on these vexing problems demands a thorough investigation of all the possible results which would arise from the adoption of the proposals made. To often the actual results of the operation of the proposed schemes are obsured by parties interested in securing pecuniary advantages.

Such a scheme is the one now before the Western grain growers, in which an effort is being made to establish a sample market for the handling of grain. The imaginary benefits of such a market are extolled while the injuries that would result from it are utterly ignored. Chief among the faults that may be found with the proposed scheme is the greater length of time which would be consumed in conveying the grains from the point of shipment to the lake front.

Every farmer knows the value of the rapid transit of grain from the farm to the market. The present cry from one end of the country to the other is that the railways are too slow in moving the crop. There are too few cars and insufficient motive power. And yet the establishment of a sample market would further lengthen the time of transit and lessen the abilities of the railways to handle the crop.

Next fall, one of the railways will be hauling into Winnipeg at least 500 carloads of grain every day. Should a sample market be established the grain would be sold by separate carloads on sample, and ordered out on time. The whole railway yard cannot be switched to pick out a particular car as each order is received, so that there will have to be a rule to start switching cars every night after five o'clock. This means, therefore, that a car of grain reaching Winnipeg after eleven o'clock on Saturday morning would not start to be switched until after five o'clock on Monday evening, as the grain would not be disposed of at the grain exchange before Monday.

Cars that reached Winnipeg before eleven o'clock Saturday morning and were switched Saturday evening would be shipped on Sunday. But on Monday there would be no grain moving out of Winnipeg. That means that practically no grain would be shipped out of Winnipeg for twenty-four hours each week. The same thing would occur on Thanksgiving Day and the other holidays.

Making the very best allowances it means that one day in every seven would be lost, and as there are only seventy-seven day in which the crop moves, which would include eleven Sundays and at least one holiday, it means that the ability of the railways to move the crop would be lessened by twelve days out of seventy-seven, or roughly speaking, the transportation facilities of the railways of the Northwest would be cut down by at least sixteen per cent.

Then, taking into consideration the glut that would take place at the lake front through the rush of grain there in the first part of the week owing to the hold up at Winnipeg over Sunday, it is not an exaggeration to say that the power of the railways to move the crop would be reduced by twenty-five per cent.

The agitators for a sample market are saying that the railways should add to their rolling stock and yard facilities. But every man who exercises common sense knows that notwithstanding their heavy expenditures and every effort they were able to make the railways have been barely able to keep up with the large increases in the crops produced in the West. It is apparent, therefore, that if the railways are hampered in their movement of the crop to the extent of twenty or twenty-five per cent, that the grain blockade will be worse than ever before.

The western farmer is well aware that a grain blockade always works to the detriment of those who raise the grain and to the advantage of those who buy grain and hold it in their elevators. The results of the grain blockade of last fall are still felt in the West. Let the farmers consider the results of a blockade twenty-five per cent worse than the last one before they consent to the establishment of a sample market and its attendant evils.

First Thimble

There is a tradition that a Dutch silversmith pondered over a certain notion which he had cherished long and silently in the slow working senses which he deemed his brain—a notion for a trinket, a fallal, for a dignified lady of Holland. It must be a useful trinket, albeit a costly one, meet for so good a seamstress as Dame Alixe Van Rensselaer. When the notion took definite shape, the thing was quickly wrought in precious metal by fingers as deft as the brain was slow, and the industrious housewife proudly wore not only the first thimble but the first thimble possessed by any Dutch frau.

His First Move

It was a shy young man who was once asked to take a class of girls about 15 or 16, which had formerly been taken by a woman. The young clergyman consented, says London Tit-Bits, but insisted upon being properly introduced to the class. The superintendent accordingly took him to the class for this purpose and said:

Young ladies, I introduce to you Mr. Chira, who will in future be your teacher. I would like you to tell him what your former teacher did so that he can go on in the same way.

The Two Dromios

They Turned Their Likeness to Mutual Benefit

By JANE D. WILLIAMS

Fred Boyce, aged twenty-five, desperately in love, gloomy, a scowl on his brow, entered the cafe of his club by one door, and a gentleman of his own age entered it by another. The two stood looking at each other in astonishment.

"Are you my twin brother?" asked Boyce.

"Have you a twin brother?"

"Yes. Have you?"

"I have. What's your name?"

"Boyce."

"You don't mean it!"

The two advanced and greeted each other warmly.

"Ned, how is father?"

"Quite well. And mother?"

"The same. Do you remember her?"

"Faintly."

"I don't remember father at all. Let me see. How old were we when they separated?"

"About seven."

"It was too bad that their separation caused ours. I suppose each wanted one of us. But sit down and let us have a cigar together."

It came out that Fred Boyce was a visitor to the city and had been "put up" at the club by a friend. The brothers showed all that affection for each other twins are known to experience. They had not been long together before it came out that though physically alike they were the opposite in disposition, one being the complement of the other.

"You have turned up, my dear boy, just in the nick of time to give me your sympathy. I'm in love with a girl who has been trying for some time to make up her mind to engage herself to me. I have just received a note from her saying that she can't do it."

"Why?"

"There's her note. Read it and you shall see for yourself."

He threw a note on the table which his brother picked up and read. It stated that, while the writer liked her lover well enough to marry him, there was an ineradicable blemish about him. He was too theoretic, too philosophic, too undemonstrative.

"I wonder," said Ned, folding the note, "if something of that sort isn't the matter with my girl."

"You're no pessimist."

"That's just the trouble between me and my Marion. She is a serious young woman of strong character, very practical, and though she likes me and has thought seriously of marrying me, I am quite convinced she thinks me in some respects a fool.

"It seems that I have been trying to mate with a girl you should have mated with, and vice versa."

"Right you are. I wonder if we couldn't swap 'em."

The humorous tinge to the proposition was entirely lost on Fred, who took the remark seriously. "Impossible," he said. "I can never give up Isabel."

"Nonsense. There are as good fish in the sea as ever were caught."

The pessimist heaved a deep sigh.

"I have an idea, Fred," said the other. "I doubt if either of these girls were we dressed exactly alike could tell us apart. How would it do for me to help you out by going to your girl and supplying in your place what you lack?"

Ned looked up with a spark of hope in his eye.

"I'll reply to her letter in person just as if I were you and see if I can't get her to alter her decision."

"Do you really think you could do that?"

"I can at least try."

"For heavens sake make the effort!"

"I'll do it. When can I see her?"

"Go tonight."

"How shall I be sure I have met the right girl?"

Fred opened his watch case and showed his brother a girl's photograph. Ned looked at it long enough to fix it in his mind, showing his brother the picture of his own girl, carried in his watch.

"Very well," he said. "I'll try it tonight."

The brothers reveled in their reunion till evening, then prepared for dinner, each putting on evening dress. Fred altered his whiskers to correspond with his brother's, and Fred placed a sprig of geranium in Ned's buttonhole, saying that his Isabel had been accustomed to seeing him with that boutonniere and no other. Then they dined together, and Ned sallied forth on a mission that was his brother's last hope.

"Remember, Fred," he said, "that if I succeed I shall gain for you nothing but a temporary advantage unless you can give up your pessimism and become both more practical and more demonstrative."

"Tide me over this bar, and I'll make a big effort not to get on to another one. I may steal in unobserved and see how you do it. I know every door, every nook in the house. Isabel will doubtless receive you in the little drawing room. It communicates with the library, and I may find a chance to hide there."

"That's all right, but don't spoil it all by getting caught."

Half an hour later Ned called on the young lady in question. He was shown into the room where she had been accustomed to receive her lover, and presently she came down prepared for a struggle no woman likes—to convince him that his case is hopeless. Absorbed as she was in this anticipated struggle, probably no better opportunity could have occurred for him to foist himself upon her for his brother. Knowing her lover's disposition she came forward expecting him to wait for her to speak. Instead of that he sprang forward with one word, in which was passion, protest, despair, hope—indeed a mingling of feeling that electrified her.

"Isabel!"

There was no need for her to utter a word. Indeed, he did not give her an opportunity.

"I have been crushed by your letter. But it has produced a contrary effect from what might have been expected. Confronted with the fact that I must lose you, I have become a changed man. For you I will root out a nature planted in me at my birth and replace it with one of a different kind. I have been unkindled fuel. You have applied the torch that has caused that fuel to burst into a flame. With you it will burn forever; without you it will be quenched as suddenly as you have ignited it. Isabel, you are my world, my whole being. Oh, do not cast me off! Give me one chance under this awakening to win you, and every idea that enters my brain in future shall be inspired by a knowledge that I possess your love."

She stood listening to this remarkable speech in silent wonder. But the pleader, like a general who pushes on to convert a victory into a rout, advanced, seized her hand and pressed it passionately to his lips. She looked down upon his bowed head—inclined partly because he feared a continued study of his features might betray him—but she could not speak from mingled amazement and pleasure. She loved, and now the way had been made clear for that love. Finally she found her tongue and said:

"Oh, Fred! How happy you have made me!"

"Oh, Isabel! It seems to me that all the joy of my whole life is concentrated in this one moment."

A blissful silence that followed was broken by the closing of a door in the adjoining room. The scamp knew that his brother had observed the wooing and, he hoped, had benefited by it.

That was indeed a joyful evening to the girl whose heart had been torn by casting off the man she really loved. She could not understand the change in him, but cared not for a reason, since she knew that the change had come. She frightened him by saying that it was hard for her to believe he was not some one else.

The visit would have probably lasted till the wee hours of the morning had not the actor said that after the receipt of his note rejecting him he had walked the floor all night, whereupon she forced him to leave her that he might seek repose. The repose he sought was at the club, where his brother had ordered a bottle of champagne on ice and was waiting for him to come and celebrate the victory, for Fred had stolen into the lady's house, hidden in the library and heard if he had not seen the victory. He threw his arms around Ned's neck and hugged him.

"It's all very well, Fred," said his brother, "but do you think you can keep it up?"

"You bet!"

"Don't be so sure. I'll put you through your paces every day. You shall make love to me, and I will coach you."

"Agreed. But how am I to repay this kindness? Isn't there something that I can do for you?"

"I've been thinking of that. My Marion doesn't tumble to my lovemaking as your Isabel does. Suppose you try a like game in my favor."

"I will."

"Be yourself. Don't imitate me except with your own fiancee."

"That's right."

The experiment was tried, but with indifferent success. However, the young lady, who preferred a more sober, undemonstrative man, was pleased with what she supposed was a change for the better in her lover. But unfortunately she was more observant than Miss Isabel and in time discovered the trick that was being played upon her. The truth is that Fred had not the histrionic ability of his brother and couldn't keep up the deception.

Later the brothers and their wives laughed over the comedy.

Found Wife In Canada.

William Cobbett, the celebrated English statesman, to his last day never regretted the hour in which he first set eyes on the young woman who made him the "happiest husband alive." He was walking along a street in Halifax, Nova Scotia, when he first saw her, stooping industriously over a wash-tub, her arm frothing with soap-suds and her comely features veiled by a curtain of steam. But a look was sufficient.

"That's the wife for me," he exclaimed; and, though for a time the seas divided them, he knew no peace until he had made a wife of the "servant-of-all-work," who had counted herself passing rich on $25 a year.

The Alberta Woman's Association is one of the most influential organizations in that western province. Its membership includes almost every woman university graduate in the province, as well as the wives of the members of the university senates and the board of governors. It was organized about six months ago for the promotion of higher education in the province.

The members are interesting themselves in the bill-board campaign of the City Planning Commission, and many club women are expressing their approval of the desire of the commission for more stringent bylaws.

Cockney.

There are not wanting authorities who rise to the defence of the Cockney speech, as was evidenced a year or two ago when the London County Council passed a resolution recommending measures that would drive the dialect from the schools of the English capital. Then appeared a certain Mackenzie MacBride, who put forth various pamphlets and a book to show that Cockney is no modern dialect or corrupted form of the King's English, but that it has an ancient and honorable lineage running back for nearly a thousand years.

Mr. MacBride points out that when the individual "who was born within the sound of Bow Bells" says "thet" for "that," "benk" for "bank," and "byliff" for "bailiff" he is guilty of no corruption of the English language, inasmuch as these pronunciations have obtained not only in London, but in Kent and Surrey for hundreds of years.

In like manner are justified "abaht" and "ahtside" for "about" and "outside." It is further contended that many Londoners have been laughed out of these ancient and excellent pronunciations, and Mr. McBride earnestly urges them not to change their speech by reason of any uncalled-for animadversions against it.

Whether Mr. MacBride be correct or not in his contentions, the fact remains that Cockney has survived for many centuries in the midst of speech that is deemed more cultured.

The Curse of Scotland.

Among the reasons why the nine of diamonds has been called the curse of Scotland are the following:

Diamonds, nine of, called the curse of Scotland, from a Scotch member of Parliament, part of whose family arms is the nine of diamonds, voting for the introduction of the malt tax into Scotland.—"Chronology; or, The Historian's Companion," Fourth Edition, by Thomas Tegg, London, 1826.

There is a George Campbell mentioned in Burton's "History of Scotland," as having caused the nine of diamonds to be called the curse of Scotland because he stole nine diamonds out of the royal crown in the reign of Mary Stuart, in consequence of which all Scotland was taxed.

When Newton Missed His Dinner.

Sir Isaac Newton one day invited a friend to dine with him and, as usual, forgot all about it. The friend arrived and found the philosopher in a fit of abstraction. Dinner was brought up for one. The friend, without disturbing Newton, sat down and dined. When Newton recovered from his reverie he looked curiously at the empty dishes and exclaimed:

"Well, really, if it wasn't for the proof before my eyes I could have sworn that I had not yet dined."

WEALTH IN GUTTERS.

Strange Experiences Told by England's Super-Tramp.

Our everyday carelessness, and the manner in which it provides a living for vagrants, is strikingly illustrated by a chapter entitled "The Finder" in "The True Traveler," a remarkable book written by Mr. W. H. Davies, the literary tramp, who has given us such books as "Beggars" and "The Autobiography of a Super-Tramp," in addition to poetical works and a novel, and who, not from necessity, but because he loves the life, has for many years led a nomadic existence, mixing with people of the underworld in various parts of the globe.

It was in a London lodging-house that Mr. Davies met "The Finder," a man who day after day walked the streets of London with his eyes fastened on the ground, looking for things which people had lost. In a confidential moment "The Finder" showed Mr. Davies the contents of his locker in the lodging-house.

"When I saw the things he had I was astonished, for I believe this man could have made a living by merely walking about. He had several fountain pens, one gold-mounted, which must have cost thirty or forty shillings. He showed me a gold pencil-case and two silver ones; also a silver matchbox, finely embossed, which still contained the matches as it had been found. I saw several purses, all of which had contained money; and there was a lady's silk parasol, which had been left on a seat in one of the parks, and also a gentleman's costly cane found in the same way.

"He showed me several articles of jewelry, such as rings, bracelets, and brooches; and one pendant, which was a silver cross with a Christ crucified in gold, which he had found one Sunday morning in Hyde Park. Even books—popular novels that had been left on seats, some of which may not have been forgotten, but read and thrown away—were to be seen in this man's locker."

"The Finder" confessed that sometimes he went for a whole day without finding anything of the least value, but on other days he was almost certain to find a number of things. One of his methods was to visit a heath or common after a Bank Holiday, when he invariably found something of value. And he is apparently not the only one who follows this extraordinary occupation of looking for wealth on the ground, for he finds it necessary, after a Bank Holiday, to be on the spot he has in mind as soon as it is daylight, "for there are others that do the same."

The contents of his locker must have cost the owners considerably over $500. Extraordinarily enough, he never attempted to sell any of these things, for he possessed a small income which was enough to keep him, and purposely kept himself looking like the commonest beggar so that people would take less notice when they saw him stooping to pick things up.

Hidden Treasures of the Tiber.

The waters of the Tiber are said to cover many costly treasures of antiquity. From Lake Nemi, near Rome, many bronze armaments and statuary from the floating palaces of the Emperors Tiberius and Caligula have already been recovered. It has long been the dream of poets and the belief of antiquaries that the Tiber's bed conceals a vast amount of artistic treasures which have been flung into it either from wanton recklessness or for the purpose of preservation from sacrilege. There is a legend that Attila buried all his treasure beneath the river.

No Reply.

Two English soldiers, seeing a comrade's coat lying on his bed, thought they would play a joke on him, as he happened to be an Irishman. So they chalked a donkey's head on the back of the coat and then waited to see him put it on. When Mike took up the coat he gazed at the donkey's head with deep earnestness, and then, turning to the Englishmen, he inquired, "Which of yez wiped your face on my coat?"

Something For the Inner Bar.

An eminent judge used to say that in his opinion the best thing ever said by a witness to a counsel was the reply given to Missing, the barrister, at the time leader of his circuit.

He was defending a prisoner, charged with stealing a donkey. The prosecutor had left the animal tied up to a gate, and when he returned it was gone.

Missing was very severe in his examination of the witness.

"Do you mean to say, witness, the donkey was stolen from the gate?"

"I mean to say, sir," giving the judge and then the jury a sly look, "the ass was missing."

Judge Leaves Faulty Will.

It is strange how many talented judges and lawyers have failed to draw up their own wills correctly. The English Judge Lushington, who died recently, leaving an estate of nearly $100,000, overlooked the important necessity of having his will and a codicil to it properly attested. Perhaps he intended that his professional colleagues should benefit indirectly by the consequent litigation.

DECATUR'S DUEL.

The Meeting With Barron That Ended the Brave Commodore's Life.

The practice of dueling, inherited from England, led to some tragic events in early American history. One of these resulted in the death of one of our early naval heroes, Commodore Stephen Decatur. He had gained distinction in the Tripolitan war, in the war of 1812 and stood very high in popular esteem.

Another naval officer of the period was Commodore Barron, who commanded the Chesapeake in the fight with the British frigate Leopard. While in command of the Chesapeake he was charged with neglect of duty, was tried by a court martial, on which Decatur served, and was found guilty and suspended from the service.

Later when he applied for restoration Decatur declined to approve it, and out of this grew a correspondence culminating in a duel. In one of his letters Decatur said, "Between you and myself there has never been a personal difficulty, but I have entertained and do still entertain the opinion that your conduct as an officer of the Chesapeake has been such as ought to forever bar your readmission to the service."

Barron sent a challenge, which Decatur accepted, and the duel took place at Bladensburg, near Washington, March 22, 1820. They fought with pistols at eight paces, and both fired and fell together, Decatur apparently killed, but he soon revived enough to say a few friendly words to his antagonist, who also lay on the ground. Both were removed to Washington, where Decatur died that night, but Barron recovered and lived till 1851.

Canada Loses Good Man.

Among the notable but least mentioned passenger who perished in the Titanic disaster was E. J. Sjostedt, a native of Sweden, who for several years has been engaged in geological and mineralogical work in Canada, principally in the copper bearing district of the north shore of Lake Superior. Some months ago he made up his mind to visit his native country, and the Department of Mines deemed it advisable to accredit him as its representative to make investigations into the treatment of copper ores in Norway and Sweden. He was on the return trip when he met death on the White Star liner.

Where Eggs Are Costly.

Ranchers in the Bulkley valley were selling their eggs this spring at $1.50 a dozen.

Sun or Heat as Maker of Baldness.

The fact that savages almost always possess fine crops of hair, taken with the fact that they do not wear hats, has led some people to believe that going bareheaded might be a preventive of baldness. But Dr. Gottheil in an article quoted by the Medical Record points out that the action of the sun's rays upon the head is injurious not only to the hair, but to the whole system, everindulgence in sun baths causing irritability and nervous cardiac and circulating disturbances and lesions of the skin that are often serious. But it is pointed out that the tight hatband constricts circulation in the arteries and veins of the head, and, as the Medical Record says, it is a moot point whether this be not as harmful to the hair as are the actinic rays of the sun.

The Waiter Understood.

They were lunching together, and the talk turned to superstition.

"When you made that boast just now," said one of the party, "you should have knocked on wood to drive away the evil spirits that are envious of human happiness."

"Is that what it's for?"

"Yes. It's an old German custom. You rap on wood three times. Say, that waiter of ours looks like a German. Rap three times and see if he doesn't understand it."

The other man rapped.

The waiter understood it.

He brought three beers.

An Old Banking House.

Child's Bank is one of the oldest private banks in London. No. 1 Fleet street was once a goldsmith's shop, and is said to have been changed into a bank in the time of Sir Francis Child, once Lord Mayor of London. Even now the custom exists of calling the front of the bank "the shop," and the back, where the ledgers are kept, the "counting house." Another old custom still kept up is that of three junior partners and two salaried partners sleeping on the premises in rotation. Thus one of the partners is always on hand if needed.

Ethics of Bribery.

A certain saloon keeper years ago was elected to the legislature of a southern state at a time when there was important legislation pending. He accepted a thousand dollars for his vote on a certain measure. The deal was hardly closed when the opposition came round, offering him two thousand. The temptation was strong, but the new member shook his head.

"No gentleman as is a gentleman," he said, "will sell out twicet on wan proposition!"—Saturday Evening Post
