Wednesday Evening, June 13, 1888.

The Press of British Columbia.

EDITOR COLUMBIAN. — Having read in a late number of your journal the announcement from the new management, I feel rejoiced to think that at least one independent journal hails from the coast. While it may be a good thing to whitewash a fence, it is feared far too much whitewash has been wasted upon public men in this province. Hence a downward tendency of the press of British Columbia. For long years past elsewhere the press has been recognized as the "fourth estate," and upon festive occasions honored as such. Upon an occasion of the assembling of the most distinguished men of England at Lord Palmerston's mansion, one of the plutocrats present, that had come under the lash of the editor of the London Times, sneeringly referred to the presence of the editor of that celebrated journal, remarking that an honor had been conferred in extending the invitation to said editor; this catching Lord Palmerston's ear, he responded that Delany (the editor) had conferred an honor by attending upon the occasion.

Notwithstanding the labored efforts of editors in this country to create public opinion and elevate politcians to power, the service is soon forgotten, and, contrary to the practice in England and the United States, the newspaper "organs" are left out in the cold, while expected to defend the policy of the leaders of the party. We believe there are instances of this in Victoria.

Again, when some half-dozen years since a small paper at Yale was doing its best to draw attention to the way Messrs. Onderdonk & Co. were shirking the contract in hand, the "mammoth press" of the cities were doing their best to apologize for the wrong-doing instead of aiding in bringing about an investigation of the charges made. The government was swindled and traders and workmen along the line defrauded, while well-paid officials wined and dined in the sunshine of the parties responsible for the outrages; and yet no protest was heard from an independent press. Of course it was well known during the building of the railway that the work was slighted. This did not prevent "expert enginneers" certifying that all was right; and after Messrs. Onderdonk & Co. had pocketed their gains the C. P. R. Co. buck against accepting the road unless a million or more is paid over to make good the work according to contract. An expensive commission is then appointed, that go over the road like a flock of pigeons over a town, making very little inquiry about the weak points, likely to cause trouble at any time. Therefore it is not surprising that the gatherings of pioneers and others take place with very little or no respect paid to the "fourth estate." If toasted at all it is near the close of the festive occasion, when the few remaining are not always in a fit position to reflect honor upon the press or any praiseworthy object. If such proceedings took place outside of this province, honorable editors would have too much self-respect to respond.

Another thing observable in the Pacific province is that members of the press, or correspondents, are expected in travelling to puff up towns, railways, steamers, hotels, etc., and at the same time pay the highest rates for accomodation of every kind. Such is not the practice in the neighboring republic or in other civilized countries. We regret to have to admit that scenes like the following occasionally crop up and cast a shadow over the "fourth estate":

Arizona Kicker—"Correction.—Last week we had a brief item to the effect that Major Hornback, our efficient registrar of deeds, had got staving drunk, destroyed a bushel or two of valuable papers, had two fights, and had then gone home to smash his cook-stove and lick his wife. Next day Major Hornback called at this office, and not only subscribed for the Kicker for himself but sent two copies to friends in the east, paying in advance. We now desire to correct the item of last week. The major was not drunk. It was simply an attack of vertigo, to which he is subject. He was never drunk in his life, and a more efficient public officer or a kinder husband and father cannot be found on the face of this globe. We shall make other corrections from time to time as the victims come in and subscribe," etc., etc.

Now that a new departure is announced in one of our leading journals it is to be hoped that "press abuses" will be reformed.

LAST NIGHT'S DESPATCHES.

PROFESSOR MENZIES.

VICTORIA, June 12.—Prof. Menzies, the exposure of whose machinations created so much excitement in the city, is in Victoria. He was met yesterday by several citizens to whom he said he had never left British Columbia and was to be found by the police when they wanted him, but didn't consider it his duty to walk to the police station for an officer. The Times says the case must be investigated and the doings of Menzies sifted to the bottom. There is strong prima facie evidence that he was trafficking in Chinese girls for immoral purposes and his presence in Victoria with this charge hanging over him will not be tolerated.

THE DYING EMPEROR.

BERLIN, June 12, 9.30 p.m.—At this hour the emperor is slightly better, but the intense anxiety of his attendants and the people generally is but little diminished. The cartilage of the epiglottis has become permeable, allowing particles of food to enter the air tubes; this has produced violent fits of coughing and choking, necessiting the abandonment of feeding through the throat. The doctors are unable to exactly state the causes of some of the changes that have taken place in the emperor's condition, but it is plain that he is weakening very rapidly. Dr. Mackenzie has fed his patient through a tube inserted in the throat. The emperor does not seem to be aware of his extreme danger which all about him now realize. It is said that if his condition does not considerably improve a regency will be appointed tomorrow. The physicians now admit that his majesty's case is almost hopeless. The Crown Prince was summoned to his bedside at midnight. Dr. Bardelegen will remain in constant attendance upon the patient until relieved or joined by his colleagues in the event of the emperor's further decline.

THIS AFTERNOON'S DESPATCHES.

INDIAN JUSTICE.

WOODSWORTH, Nevada, June 13.—Charlie Winnemucca, son of a deceased chief of the Pintes, was murdered yesterday at Pyramid Indian agency by little Dunn, a drunken Piute. The crime was committed with a sharp-pointed knife which nearly severed the head from the body. The murderer was arrested by the Indian police and lodged in the reservation jail. He was given immediate trial by the Indian court and condemned to death. Before the sentence can be carried out it must receive the sanction of the president. Gibson, the agent, will forward a dispatch asking that the order of the court, which meets with the approval of the Indians, be carried out. The victim was well known and respected, while the murderer bears a bad reputation.

PARTIALLY PARALYZED.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 13.—Advices from Honolulu state that Washington Irving Bishop, the well known mind-reader, has become partially paralyzed from the use of cocaine.

SOMEWHAT BETTER.

BERLIN, June 13.—The emperor is somewhat better to-day, having rallied from yesterday's relapse. Less difficulty is experienced in swallowing and the fever has decreased.

CONTINUES TO IMPROVE.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—Sheridan continues to improve and passed a good night. His appetite is sufficient.

MONEY MARKETS WEAK.

LONDON, June 13.—The Bourses at Paris, Vienna and Frankfort are weak on account of the critical condition of the emperor of Germany.

TRUTH DEFEATED.

LONDON, June 13.—The Ascot cup was won to-day by Shillelah, Attila second, Veracity third.

DIVIDEND.

NEW YORK, June 13.—The Western Union Telegraph Co. to-day declared a dividend of 1½ per cent.

HANLAN WINS AGAIN.

SYDNEY, N.S.W., June 13.—The sculling match to-day on Fitzroy river, Queensland, between Trickett, the Australian, and Hanlan the Canadian, was won by Hanlan by six lengths. The race was for five hundred pounds a side.

WILL HAVE TO SERVE.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Judge Benedict to-day denied the writ of Habeas Corpus made by the boodle alderman, Jachne, who is serving seven years in Sing Sing.

NATIONALISTS ARRESTED.

DUBLIN, June 13.—Several members of the national league were arrested as a result of the series of secret enquiries instituted by the government. Some persons were arrested for declining to give evidence.

DYING.

BERLIN, June 13.—The emperor is worse this afternoon and the case is now hopeless.

BLAINE WILL NOT RUN.

PITTSBURG, Pa., June 13.—The Leader this afternoon publishes the following: B. F. Jones, chairman of the Republican national committee, left for Chicago last night. Prior to his departure he received a letter from James G. Blaine, which is to be read upon the assembling of the national convention next Tuesday. It settles for good all question of Blaine's candidacy and under no circumstances, Blaine says, will he permit the use of his name at Chicago, nor would he accept, were the nomination unanimously offered him. Blaine advises the selection of Senator Sherman as the best man to nominate.

GARRETT'S FUNERAL.

BALTIMORE, June 13.—The remains of T. Harrison Garrett were interred to-day in Green Mount cemetery. Short services were held at Garrett's country house. A large concourse of friends and associates were present.

A LIGHT SENTENCE.

MOUNT HOLLY, June 13.—Barclay Peak, who pleaded guilty of murder in the second degree of killing his cousin, Kate Anderson, was to-day sentenced to two years' imprisonment.

THE GRAHAM MURDER.

SANTA CRUZ, June 13.—In the Graham case this morning the defence stated they proposed to show a conspiracy existed in the Bennett family to make away with Graham and secure his wealth and divide it among themselves. In the absence of Graham the Bennetts broke open a trunk in the former's house and took out $30,000 and divided it among the family. When Jesse Graham returned he inquired about the money. Bennett endeavored to take the gun Graham carried with the intention of shooting him, and the latter thereupon shot Bennett to save his own life.

VERY MUCH BETTER.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—General Sheridan's condition is so much improved this afternoon that his physicians have ordered to omit the regular afternoon bulletin. The general has been sleeping nearly all morning and has taken much nourishment in the shape of beef tea and milk, with apparent relish. Up to Tuesday his stomach refused to digest beef tea, but now he is able to retain it without trouble. It is four days since the last occurrence of heart failure and its absence is looked upon as being encouraging.

Dismissal of Mr. Stramberg.

EDITOR COLUMBIAN. — As you are doubtless aware a meeting of the school board was held Monday forenoon in the council chamber. There were only three of the board present, and one clergyman, Rev. Mr. Jamieson. About the time of the board meeting it was reported on the street that the board of trustees were going to dismiss Mr. Stramberg, master of the high school, and it was considered a great hardship, so your correspondent with three or four others went to the place of meeting, and as we entered the secretary was just reading the report, after which one or two of the audience (twelve all told) enquired why Mr. Stramberg was desired to resign. After some hesitation, it came out that it was for general inefficiency; two or three children had complained to their mammas, and the ladies in question had told the trustees that if Mr. Stramberg was not dismissed they would not send their children to school any more. Consequently, to appease the wrath of those irate ladies, Mr. Stramberg is to be summarily dismissed or requested to resign—told that his services would no longer be required, which is tantamount to a dismissal—after seven and a half years' service, no regard being had for the irreparable injury to Mr. Stramberg's character. Doubtless there will be some, who do not know that gentleman, who will naturally suppose he has been guilty of some serious offence, and that the board is letting him down easily; but from what I can learn, Mr. S. does not want to be let down easy. He requires, and ought to have, a fair trial. The board has never up to this time had any complaints against him; therefore justice demands that an investigation should take place, and there let the board prefer their charges against him, and give him an opportunity of answering the charge or charges. If it is incompetency, is it not a wonder it had not been discovered before? Mr. Stramberg has for many years before he came to this country borne a most irreproachable character.

Daily British Columbian

Wednesday Evening, June 13, 1888.

In our despatches yesterday it was stated that our new governor general, Lord Stanley, of Preston, had arrived at Ottawa and had been sworn in by Chief Justice Ritchie, of the supreme court, in the senate chamber of the Canadian house of commons. He left soon after for Quebec, where he will reside, it is said, some three months. The telegram also stated that Lord Stanley hoped to visit British Columbia before the autumn. Since he comes well recommended, both as representing her gracious majesty, and on account of his own personal and family merits, he may be sure of a hearty welcome in this remote but loyal adherent of the British crown. We have had the honor so far of receiving three of her majesty's vice-regents and conducting them through our magnificent heritage, but British Columbians do not grow weary in well-doing, especially when it is remembered that three vice-regal tours in the past have redounded to the benefit of the province, from the free advertising which the illustrious visitors have subsequently given the country both in eastern Canada and in the old world, by means of word, pen, and brush pictures. Lord Stanley, like his predecessors in the vice-royalty, bears an irreproachable name, and it is said that history and tradition can be challenged alike in vain to produce anything to the discredit of the noble house. But it is not only in a negative sense that the family have been distinguished, for the Stanleys have figured prominently in the history of England for centuries both in the arts of peace and of war. The present Lord Stanley has sustained the reputation of his house in every respect, having achieved fair distinction as a public man, and being possessed of wide and varied knowledge, besides a good share of tact, which he has already manifested on more than one occasion. The new governor-general is described as a tall, powerfully built man, about five feet ten inches, of commanding and soldier-like appearance, wearing a short iron-gray beard and moustache, slightly bald, decidedly good-looking, and with an affable manner that cannot but make him popular. Lady Stanley is said in the despatches to have "looked remarkably well in her dark brown travelling dress." She is understood to be the peer of her distinguished husband in many respects. How kind of the mother country, when we must have these very expensive, and withal agreeable, luxuries in the shape of governors-general and governesses-general, that the most distinguished, clever, good-looking and amiable of the British aristocracy should be weeded out from time to time and sent to these favored shores to bloom awhile for our delectation and edification.

The election of three trustees for the public schools in this city takes place in a few days, and the present will be an opportune time to consider the school question and to draw the attention of parents and others interested to this important subject. A great many are not even aware that an act amending the present school act, under which provincial public schools have been conducted, was passed by the late session of our legislature. This act places Westminster city schools, as well as other city schools in the province, more immediately in the hands of the corporations of the different cities, so that it will be necessary for us as a community interested in such matters to be well posted as to our new privileges and obligations. As a general thing the people of this city have not shown the interest they should in the cause of education. The new act, or rather amendment, throws about half the cost of the teachers' salaries in public schools upon the city municipalities and also makes the mayor of each city chairman of the school board. It would be very convenient if more of the late acts, including the amended school act, were distributed in places particularly where they apply. The mayor of this city, who, according to the act, is chairman of the Westminster school board, has not, we are told, been furnished with a copy of the act, and, we believe, about the only copy to be found in this city is at the land office. By the act the trustees are given power with respect to high schools to charge fees for the pupils attending such schools, and further to discriminate as to who shall be admitted free. It is to be feared that this power to collect fees and to discriminate as to those who should be considered able or unable to pay fees may prove a dangerous franchise to place in the hands of trustees, and be a prolific source of irritation in the body social. It would be almost preferable that a small fee should be charged in every case. While the high school serves a useful purpose, it is usually only the minority that can avail themselves of its extra advantages; and, looking at the question in this light, it is only fair that the public generally should not be taxed for the support of high schools, especially when, as sometimes happens, the public or common schools are thereby stinted and their efficiency impaired. While, therefore, we would advocate the continuance of the high schools on some equitable basis, we would urge that, whatever else is done, the common schools—the real educational bulwark of the nation—should be protected, and multiplied, wherever required, and, if possible, their efficiency increased, so that every child in the land may have within easy reach the facilities for obtaining a good sound every-day education, which will fit him or her for engaging in the ordinary pursuits of life. Such an education is too much overlooked in these days, and there is a disposition on the part of many to strain at fitting themselves for some of the professions, while they would be far better adapted to a trade of some sort. The result is that the professions are often overcrowded with indifferent material, and scanty livings eked out by the votaries, while at the same time a wide field for successful labor is left partially unoccupied. On the other hand, when a scholar manifests more than ordinary ambition and capabilities, rendering it desirable that he should embrace in his studies a wider curriculum than that afforded by the common schools, ample facilities are afforded by our high schools and by the collegiate schools and universities of the Dominion and the neighboring republic. It is very doubtful if a higher education than that obtainable in the common schools should be furnished free, in any case, both on the grounds that this is liable to be done at the expense of the common schools, and that, judging from eminent examples in the past, so slight an obstacle as a small fee, even to one least able to pay the same, so far from proving an insurmountable barrier, is likely to act as an incentive to increased and successful exertion on the part of a scholar really determined to have higher educational advantages. Turning for a moment to the present system of education in vogue in America generally—for the difference in Canadian and American systems is not material—it may be stated that close thinkers and analytical writers in both countries have come to question seriously whether there is much ground for boasting of the educational advantages of this latter end of a century which is popularly credited with having made marked progress in nearly every possible direction. An American writer recently stated that the tendency of graded schools in the States was to suppress and destroy individuality, to force different minds into one common groove and to bring all to one dead level. The writer complained that there was too much system about the schools, thus hindering spontaneous and natural development, too much "stuffing," and too little "digesting," or thinking, and predicted that, as a result, in the next generation or two the country would produce no great men or original thinkers, but that all would be found on the dead level of mediocrity. The writer illustrated his remarks by citing the cases of illustrious Americans and others as instances of a healthier system of education, showing that the overcoming of obstacles in early youth and the necessity and opportunity for individual thought and effort were of more value in the acquisition of a real education than any amount of ill-digested stuffing. These questions certainly demand the serious consideration and impartial judgment of everyone interested in the important subject of education.

A Sluggish Liver

Causes the Stomach and Bowels to become disordered, and the whole system to suffer from debility. In all such cases Ayer's Pills give prompt relief.

After much suffering from Liver and Stomach troubles, I have finally been cured by taking Ayer's Cathartic Pills. I always find them prompt and thorough in their action, and their occasional use keeps me in a perfectly healthy condition.—Ralph Weeman, Annapolis, Md.

Twenty-five years ago I suffered from a torpid liver, which was restored to healthy action by taking Ayer's Pills. Since that time I have never been without them. They regulate the bowels, assist digestion, and increase the appetite, more surely than any other medicine.—Paul Churchill, Haverhill, Mass.

INVIGORATED.

I know of no remedy equal to Ayer's Pills for Stomach and Liver disorders. I suffered from a Torpid Liver, and Dyspepsia, for eighteen months. My skin was yellow, and my tongue coated. I had no appetite, suffered from Headache, was pale and emaciated. A few boxes of Ayer's Pills, taken in moderate doses, restored me to perfect health.—Waldo Miles, Oberlin, Ohio.

Ayer's Pills are a superior family medicine. They strengthen and invigorate the digestive organs, create an appetite, and remove the horrible depression and despondency resulting from Liver Complaint. I have used these Pills in my family, for years, and they never fail to give entire satisfaction.—Otto Montgomery, Oshkosh, Wis. ††

TELEGRAM.

OTTAWA, 27th March, 1888.

To LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF BRITISH COLUMBIA, VICTORIA.

Your Government should issue public notice cautioning persons going on Sealing expeditions to refrain from assertion of their rights by force, and from taking on board arms and ammunition in excess of their usual requirements. The whole matter is engaging the attention of Her Majesty's Government and forms the subject of diplomatic negotiations now in progress. Any intemperate action in the meanwhile would be most detrimental to British Columbian interests and might lead to serious complications and be followed by grave consequences to those concerned.

AMONG MOONSHINERS.

When, a few years ago, a United States marshal was murdered by moonshiners in the mountains of North Georgia, a New York newspaper said that another notch was cut in the big poplar that guards the entrance to Sleepy Cove, the retreat of the outlaws, making five in all, each significant of the death at the hands of the illicit whiskey makers, of a revenue officer. That fourth notch was cut for me. I saw it done, with death staring me in the face. Is it possible that the outlaws still believe my bones are bleaching on the damp ground in Smoky Hole?

When notch No. 3 was cut there was a great stir in North Georgia. We laid the murder of W—— at the door of the notorious Cap Hawkins, the daring leader of a fearless band of outlaws in the Cohutta Mountains, and as soon as possible we were on his trail with a good pack of bloodhounds. The scent was cold, and when we had penetrated some eight miles into the range the dogs became disheartened. After circling round us time and again in search of the trail they gave it up, and we were forced to retreat without having accomplished anything.

It was dusk when we got out of the deep woods, and we began to look about for a place to stay for the night.

A log cabin of two rooms was not inviting, but the old crone who came to the door said that she could provide for one of the party.

While I ate she smoked a clay pipe, sitting in the chimney corner with her legs crossed and her foot swinging incessantly. When she spoke to me, which she did oftener than I liked, I could not help feeling that she was trying to pump me.

When the old woman had shown me to room and my eyes grew accustomed to the darkness and wandered aimlessly over the open ceiling, I saw something about the size of the bed hanging directly over me. It seemed to swing slowly back and forth. I stood up and touched it, examined it as minutely as possible, and again laid down. It was nothing but three or four bed quilts stretched across two boards supported at the ends by short ropes. If it grew colder in the night I would reach up to them for more cover.

I intended to stay awake, but must have been nearly asleep when a creaking noise aroused me. The next moment it was repeated, and the quilts above me descended rapidly. It flashed upon me that I was in a trap.

Drawing my weapon, I attempted to spring out of bed, determined to sell my life dearly, but as I straightened up the quilts covered me, and before I could throw them off strong hands were at the corners.

With a frantic struggle I cocked my pistol and placing the muzzle close against the quilt pulled the trigger. I fired at random, trusting that fate might guide the ball into the heart or head of some one of my cowardly assailants. The concussion was awful in that narrow space. The smoke filled my eyes, nose and ears; the shot rang through my brain; I felt that my last hour had come. My God, how I suffered! I remember a derisive laugh that seemed to come from another world, then something heavy struck me on the head.

When I recovered consciousness I was lying on my back in a jolting wagon, with my hands and feet securely bound. The pale blue of the sky above me and the hazy outlines of the tree-tops reaching overhead told me that day was breaking.

"Wal, Kurnel, air ye come roun' all right?" said a deep voice at my head. Raising my eyes I saw over me the grizzly face of the outlaw, Cap Hawkins. He broke into a wild laugh at my look of astonishment.

"Didn't 'spect ter see me this mornin', air ye, Kurnel?" he said tauntingly. "Wear air yer doge?—ha! ha!—an' yer cows?—he! he!—an' yer—haw! haw! —an' yer reputation? Aw, Lordy! Kurnel, whar air ye a-takin me this morn'n? Air ye a-goin' ter lock old Cap up again?"

I determined to assume a bold air and affect a supreme indifference to my fate, whatever that was to be.

"Oh, Cap, dry up," I began, winking at him. "Don't frighten the revenue men; they'll be after you again."

Cap in he roared as if he would split his sides over the joke. He was immensely amused.

"Save your prayers, Cap," I continued. "It will be a long time before you see daylight again."

"Whut air ye drivin' at, Kurnel?" he asked, seriously, casting his eyes about him. My shot had missed, but I kept quiet.

"Well, you see, Hawkins, now that I've got you in my power I'm going to put you under for good. You come along with me to Sleepy Cove. There's a warm hole in the side of the mountain in which you can spend the winter, board and lodging free. Come, brace up, Cap; when you see how comfortable it is in there you'll want to make the place for life."

The outlaw made no response to my random talk, nor did he laugh as before. Something seemed to worry him, for he fidgeted about, scratched his uncombed head and ran his bony fingers through his tangled, tangled beard.

"Look ahear, Kurnel," said the moonshiner, leaning close to me and boring into me with his black eyes, "air ye over yer liar?"

"Here? Where, Cap?"

"That thar hole ye air a-goin' on about?"

"Why, of course; don't I know every hole and crag in the Cohuttas?"

"Then that settles it, Kurnel. I 'lowed it war jokin'. Waw Patay, waw Suck, gee-up."

He reined in his horses and stopped the wagon. Taking up an axe he handed it to some person on the ground, and said a few words which I did not understand. At the first sound of the axe Cap Hawkins put his arm under my back and helped me to sit upright.

"Cole, air a-cuttin' yer tombstone, Kurnel, an' 'lowed ye'd like ter git a last look."

To the right of the wagon stood a giant poplar lifting its shaggy top 300 feet above the rest. In its trunk were three gaping wounds, and a moonshiner in broad hat and big boots was cutting a fourth. Two other ill-looking men stood near, their guns in their hands.

"Kurnel," continued my guard, "do ye mind ter write yer epetaph?" The men laughed at their chief. "Them other three Reveis did'nt git nary chance ter write theirn. Boys, air any o' ye got a pencil?"

Too well I knew the meaning of that notch from which the sappy chips were flying. My heart quivered as the axe ate its way into the soft wood. My face must have reflected my thought, for the outlaw, giving me a gentle push, sent me on my back.

"Easy down, Kurnel an' don't git so all-fired skeered," he said. "That air a pretty comfortable hole up in the hills—leastwaysd an' lodgin' free." And quoting the seven words, he fairly made the welkin ring with his coarse laughter.

"Surely you don't intend to murder me, Cap?"

"That air lies about it, I reckon, Kurnel. Yer air across the dead line, and yer epetaph air done been writ."

Seeing I could say more his three companions climbed into the wagon beside him. Clucking to his horses he drove on at a trot through the pass, and as the sun rose over the mountain we entered the precincts of Sleepy Cove. It must have been after 10 o'clock, yet into that lonesome spot the sun was beginning to pour its rays. By 2 P. M. he would disappear and the jagged cliff that formed the western boundary of the retreat, and the twilight would set in with its spectral shadows chasing each other in the dark wood.

Suddenly the wagon stopped, and the four men threw themselves into attitudes of attention, grasping their guns and casting furtive glances at each other. Straining my ear I thought I heard the faint yelp of a hound. Cap Hawkins lashed his horses into a gallop, and we sped on through the woods for half a mile, stopping again in the shadow of a cliff. At their leader's order two of the men lifted me out of the wagon, and half dragged me to a spot where the earth formed a kind of bench against the rock wall.

Placing me on the ground they began prying a boulder which, gradually yielding to their hand sticks, rolled over on its side, exposing a hole in the cliff. Into this they dragged me for some twenty feet, and tossed me on a bed of leaves. Then one of the men brought in some food, and another water and another wood.

I turned to the outlaw leader and asked how long he intended to keep me prisoner. He ignored at the question, but made no reply.

I begged him to shoot me, cut my throat, anything—anything but leave me there to starve. But he paid no attention to my pleads.

"Ef you live when I git back, Kurnel—ef I git back," he said, "why, me an' the boys might put a leetle lead in yer carcass. We may hev comp'ny 'fore night, enyhows. The Revies air arter us hotter 'n demnition blazes. They air done 'cross the dead line. Hyar the moosic, Kurnel!"

"I hope they'll give you all you deserve, you cold blooded murderer," I said, wishing that I could throttle the villain.

"Now, Kurnel, don't git out o' sorts. It air mighty comf'table in hyer—board an' lodgin' free. Boys, air ye ready? Them hounds air pickin' us up. Light the fire, Cobe. Kurnel, hyer air a knife ter cut yer loose arter we leave ye. Don't git skeered o' the ghosts, an' 'member ye air mighty comf'table, mighty comf'table—board' an' lodgin' free, an' yer epertaph all down on the big poplar. Good-by, Kurnel."

The outlaws were already placing the boulder in position, and when Cap Hawkins had squeezed his way out the rock was rolled into the opening. With a crunching sound it settled into place, and I was a prisoner in Smoky Hole.

I listened for the baying of the hounds, hoping that they had tracked me to the cave, but not a sound penetrated the door of my prison. The fire burned briskly, and Smoky Hole glowed in the light of the blazing pine knots. It was the work of a few minutes to cut my bonds with the knife the outlaw had given me, and then I took an inventory of the contents of the cavern.

The place had evidently been fitted up for the illicit manufacture of "mountain dew" and "tanglefoot" and "red rye," for there were the worn out copper still, the worm, the mash tub, jugs and flasks and other apparatus of the moonshiner. The cave was about the size of a railroad box car, except that the roof was higher and more arched. I jabbed my knife into every square foot of the walls. They were of solid rock. In a vain, mad effort to roll the boulder from the entrance I drew the blood from my shoulder. It was all of no use. Unless help came to me from without my doom was sealed.

A dull, heavy feeling came over me and I sat down near the fire. The confined air was getting close. Suddenly, on looking up, I was appalled at the discovery of a new danger. The roof of the cavern was no longer visible. The dense, black smoke of the pitch pine, unable to escape, was banked above me like an ominous cloud, ever growing denser and blacker and descending steadily, remorselessly, upon me like a veritable shadow of Death.

Already the asphyxiating gases were causing my brain to whirl. I crawled to the fire and stamped upon the blazing knots until every spark was extinguished, but they continued to send up their stifling smoke. I could feel it ascending, hot and pitiless.

Falling flat upon the ground I saturated my coat sleeve with the water the outlaws had left me, and placing it against my mouth secured a few full breaths of strained gas. But they gave me little respite. The high pressure of the atmosphere made my veins swell almost to bursting, my hands and feet were benumbed, and I was soon unable to move a muscle. Then I longed for death.

Suddenly there was a loud explosion, followed by a falling of loose earth and rock and a rush of air. A faint ray of light appeared in the corner of the cavern over the mill, growing broader and stronger as the smoke cleared away. With life and strength renewed I made my way to the opening, where I drank in the fresh air with a swelling heart and a lighter conscience than I had ever hoped to possess.

The explosion had torn away some rough masonry with which the moonshiners had stopped up a fissure in the rock. I had found the chimney, and it was my determination to use it to advantage. In a moment, forgetful of pains and bruises, I was climbing for freedom.

Soon the rocky sides of the chimney gave place to wood, and the opening changed from flat to round. Still I climbed on. But the opening grew tighter and tighter, like an inverted funnel, and still the top seemed a long way off. I must have climbed some thirty feet in all when I stopped to rest, propping my foot against a knot-like projection, which suddenly breaking off left a hole through which the daylight streamed. Then, for the first time it flashed upon me that I was in a hollow tree. A glance through the knot-hole proved this to be the case, for there was the ground ten feet below me—the bench of earth I had noticed when the outlaws were making ready for my incarceration.

Escape now seemed certain. The wall of my prison was only two inches thick, and though the wood was dry and hard from age and exposure to smoke and heat, my knife was soon at work enlarging the knothole. As this faced the cave, I could keep a lookout for the moonshiners, and stop cutting at the first suspicious noise. Night soon set in, and I hoped to turn my back on Sleepy Cave ere the dawn of another day. But when the sun rose my task seemed not nearly done. The knife was dulled, and my strength had slowly ebbed away.

The baying of a hound reached me. It was repeated, and in a moment the thrilling music of the pack waked again and again the sleeping echoes of Sleepy Cove. Nearer and nearer it came, until a dozen fine bloodhounds burst through the underbush and dashed up to the boulder at the entrance to Smoky Hole. Then opening again, they sped on the cold trail of the moonshiners.

"Dan, here Dan, down, sir!" I shouted to the leader with all my might. The obedient brute, recognising my voice, dropped to the ground. I called him to me, and soon the entire pack was barking playfully at the roots of my novel prison.

Hearing a well-known signal in the woods I answered it, and one by one five of my friends crept cautiously up to the cave, carbines in hand. When I spoke to them from my porthole, there was a broad smile on every face. An axe was procured, and, while four of the men guarded against surprise, the fifth cut a window in my jail, through which I crawled, having been a prisoner for nearly twenty hours.

When we reached the big poplar that guards the pass to Sleepy Cove, I fastened in the fourth notch a piece of paper bearing these words:

"Cap Hawkins, beware. The Colonel is on your trail. Go look for his bones in Smoky Hole. EUHARLER."

Just after the recent election a gentleman was waited on by a worthy deacon who lives less than a hundred miles from Tusket, N. S. He wanted to see about putting down bribery and corruption, and he said: "My dear sir, we must arise in our wrath, we must stand shoulder to shoulder and foot to foot; we must choke this hydra-headed monster, or it will choke us, etc." His friend didn't think there was any bribery, could not believe it possible; thought the deacon must be mistaken. But the deacon said: "Sir, I know it; I know it. I offered one infernal scoundrel $5 to vote for our man, and the mean, degraded vagabond held up both hands and said he wanted 10, and could get it, too, from the other side. I tell you, sir, it is frightful! Ten dollars! Yes, sir, it has got to be put down."

Scrofula

Is one of the most fatal scourges which afflict mankind. It is often inherited, but may be the result of improper vaccination, mercurial poison, uncleanliness, and various other causes. Chronic Sores, Ulcers, Abscesses, Cancerous Humors, and, in some cases, Emaciation and Consumption, result from a scrofulous condition of the blood. This disease can be cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

I inherited a scrofulous condition of the blood, which caused a derangement of my whole system. After taking less than four bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla I am and, for the past year, have not found it necessary to use any medicine whatever. I am now in better health, and stronger, than ever before.—O. A. Willard, 216 Tremont st., Boston, Mass.

I was troubled with Scrofulous Sores for five years; but, after using a few bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the sores healed, and I have now good health.—Elizabeth Warnock, 54 Appleton street, Lowell, Mass.

Some months ago I was troubled with Scrofulous Sores on my leg. The limb was badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy failed until I used Ayer's Sarsaparilla. By taking three bottles of this medicine the sores have been healed, and my health is restored. I am grateful for the good it has done me.—Mrs. Ann O'Brian, 158 Sullivan st., New York. ††

The Tacoma Ledger of a recent date has a comparative table showing that the population of that city has increased from 300 in 1875 to 15,000 in 1888.

At the police court this morning Peter Olsen, a drunken Swede, was fined $20 or one month in jail for interfering with Constable Pearce in the discharge of his duty.

Do not take quinine for malarial disorders. Ayer's Ague Cure contains none, or any other injurious ingredient. This preparation, if taken strictly in accordance with directions, is warranted to cure all malarial diseases.

Mr. Jos. Wise has put a fast stage on the Westminster-Whatcom route, via Ferndale and Blaine. This will be appreciated by the travelling public as, with the mail stage, it gives a double service.

According to the Sentinel, Mr. Sinclair, contractor for the Kootenay canal, will commence work about the middle of this month, and will finish his contract, it is expected, in about five months.

Mr. D. S. Miller, stage driver on the Westminster-Blaine-Whatcom route, says that traffic on the road is increasing, and that Whatcom is experiencing a boom. Blaine also is progressing, and crops in the vicinity look well.

The ship Camana is delayed at Victoria waiting a tug to tow her to this port. A large number of vessels have lately arrived in the Royal roads and the tugs are kept very busy towing them to Nanaimo and Departure Bay.

The life-giving properties of Ayer's Sarsaparilla have established its well-earned reputation, and is the most effectual and popular blood purifier of the day. For all diseases of the stomach, liver, and kidneys, this remedy has no equal. Price $1.

The str. Rithet brought a large freight from Victoria last night and carried away 50 tons of merchandise and 50 head of cattle this morning. At Lulu Island wharf, last night, the steamer came in contact with a broken pile and slightly damaged her upper works.

The Ottawa Journal says two men have arrived in the city from British Columbia with a gold nugget weighing over 42 pounds, for which they have refused $3,000. Their object in coming here was to secure the mining claim upon which the nugget was discovered.

Some weeks ago the gas company opened St. John street, above Royal avenue, for the purpose of repairing the pipes, and the excavation has not been filled in yet. It is about time something was done in this matter, as a serious accident will happen sooner or later if the street is left in its present condition.

Steps are to be taken to irrigate the great dry belt of the interior by means of artesian wells. The Sentinel congratulates the provincial government on the favorable result of the explorations of Engineer McKay, appointed by them for the purpose of investigating the matter. A large tract of hitherto comparatively worthless land will, it is expected, be made to blossom as the rose.

The Boundary Line.

The U. S. coast survey vessel, Carlise P. Patterson, now engaged in the survey of Alaska waters, has been ordered to Portland Inlet, the dividing waters between Alaska and British Columbia, to establish the line at that point. This is understood to be preliminary to the delimitation of the entire boundary line, which, for some time, has formed a subject of international correspondence.—Vic. Times.

The Channel Survey.

Capt. Lewis arrived from Victoria last night on the str. Sir James Douglas, to confer with the board of trade on the channel survey, as per instructions from Ottawa. A number of the board went down to the sandheads this morning with Capt. Lewis to make arrangements for the survey, which will be made in a couple of weeks. It has been thought best to postpone the survey until the water falls, as the soundings cannot be taken to advantage while the water is as high as it is at present.

Real Estate.

Real estate is still booming, and more confidence than ever is now felt in the prosperous future in store for Westminster. Yesterday several large transfers of real estate were concluded and a number, involving many thousands of dollars, are pending. Victoria and Vancouver men are among the most recent purchasers of property, and many commissions from outsiders to purchase desirable property, are now in the hands of our real estate dealers. Building operations are being carried on with great activity on all sides, but not sufficiently rapid to keep pace with our increasing population.

Seattle's Invitation.

A meeting of the Caledonian and St. Andrew's Society was held last evening to take into consideration an official invitation from their bretheren at Seattle to participate as an organization in the festivities to be held on July 4th in the Queen city. In order that preparations might be made for the comfort of the members of the society, and that the proper position might be arranged for them in the order of the exercises of the day, a speedy reply was requested. On motion the invitation was accepted and the secretary has written to Seattle to that effect. The indications are that a large number of "Kilties" will take advantage of the invitation.

Delightfully Refreshing.

The following item is taken from the "Westminster news" in this morning's issue of the News Advertiser: "The water in the river is now commencing to fall, and will continue to do so until the next full moon, when for a couple of days the water will be rather high again, but nothing like what it has been." This will be "news" to many residents along the river who at present are rather anxious to know just when the next high water may be expected. What effect the full moon is going to have on the river, or on the streams and rivers in the interior which empty into the Fraser, our cotemporary does not explain, but we trust the "next full moon" will not disorganize the inland waters to the same extent as the last full moon seems to have disorganized the interior of our cotemporary's cranium.

Map of British Columbia.

We have received from Rand, McNally & Co., map publishers and engravers, Chicago and New York, a new indexed pocket map of British Columbia, "accurately locating on the map all creeks, islands, lakes, mountains, rivers and towns known to be in the province." The map, which is about 20x14 inches, is attached to, and designed to be folded in, a neatly bound flexible-covered oblong pocket-book, about 6 x 3½ inches. The book contains an indexed list, referring to corresponding letters and figures on the map, of all the natural and artificial features of the province, and a diagram explaining the use of the index in connection with the map, so that any desired locality can be placed almost instantly by the right angled intersection of two given lines. To the tourist, the explorer and the prospector, as well as the student of geography, this map should prove invaluable. The price, in paper, at the publishers', 148 to 154 Monroe street, Chicago, is 25 cents.

Mr. Stramberg's Resignation.

Mr. Stramberg's dismissal from the high school has caused much comment round town, and opinions both in favor and against the action of the school board have been freely expressed. The run of public feeling seems to be with Mr. Stramberg, although the reasons for disposing with his services have not been made public. A representative of THE COLUMBIAN called on a member of the school board this morning and enquired as to the reason for Mr. Stramberg's dismissal. The answer was "that Mr. Stramberg's engagement expired at the end of the present term, and the board had decided to dispense with his services and engage another principal." The members of the board think a change would benefit the school and claim to be acting in the interests of the community in the matter. Mr. Stramberg has asked for the specific reasons for his dismissal and we think in all fairness he is justly entitled to them. The general feeling is that the cause should be plainly shown and the grounds of complaint be put in possession of the public.

Gilbert Laird, St. Margaret's Hope, Orkney, Scotland, writes: I am requested by several friends to order Another parcel of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. The last lot I got from you having been tested in several cases of rheumatism, has given relief when doctors' medicines have failed to have any effect. The excellent qualities of this medicine should be made known, that the millions of sufferers throughout the world may benefit by its providential discovery.

Indian War Dance.

On Sunday afternoon a number of west coast Indians gave an exhibition and war dance on the Indian reserve. The performance commenced by a number of warriors in war paint and feathers paddling around the harbor. One large burly warrior beat the tomtom whilst the others sang a wild song accompanied by motions of the body. After paddling around for a couple of hours they proceeded to the reserve and began their wild fantastic dance. The chief, arrayed in many colored garments with paint and feathers, stood in the centre of a circle. A large silver ring hung from his nose and the heat caused streams of red ochre to run down his shapely neck, intermingling with the dirt which usually covers a majority of our dusky braves. The squaws and papooses took part in the wierd dance, which was kept up until well into the night. The dance was held in a large shed situate on the reserve. At the door stood a young savage who charged the pale faces the sum of ten cents for admittance. A large number of citizens witnessed the dance.—Vic. Times.

All Quiet in Kootenay.

It is understood that the detachment of mounted police which has been stationed in the Kootenay valley since last fall will be withdrawn before many weeks are over. The mounted police force was formed for service in the N. W. T. proper, but there is a clause in the act establishing the force which provides that on the requisition of any province the governor-general may send a portion of the force there, the province paying the expense, as it is the duty of each provincial government to keep peace within its territory. In the case under consideration strong representations were received from the British Columbia government that an outbreak was apprehended in the Kootenay district among Chief Isidore's band, which was expected to assume the dimensions of an Indian war, and, therefore, extending beyond the mere administration of law in the preservation of order in the province. The provincial government at the same time stated their inability to meet the expenditure, and the federal government therefore on this strong representation felt that they ought not to be prevented by any expenditure from sending a force into the district to overcome the Indians and repress the outbreak. It appears now that these apprehensions were without any real foundation and therefore the force is to be withdrawn.

Jos. Beaudin, M.D., Hull P.Q., writes: Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil commands a large and increasing sale which it richly merits. I have always found it exceedingly helpful; I use it in all cases of rheumatism, as well as fractures and dislocations. I made use of it myself to calm the pains of a broken leg with dislocation of the foot, and in two days I was entirely relieved of the pain.

Kamloops Assizes.

Before Mr. Justice Walkem.

Chisholm vs. Henry Woodward, E. Carswell, and Marks & Rutledge, forming the Nicola Milling Company. This was an action by the Rev. Mr. Chisholm to recover $500, which he had paid on a note for that amount, made by R. Winters and endorsed by him at the request of Mr. Rutledge for the accommodation of the Milling Co., as they were alleged to be in want of funds at the time. Chisholm endorsed the note purely from a desire to oblige the defendants and to assist them to raise the money they required at the Bank of British Columbia, as they were all personal friends of his. His evidence and that of Mr. Rutledge and of Winters conclusively proved this.

The company denied Rutledge's authority to arrange for accommodation paper or to interfere with the financial business of the company, and they contended that as Winters had failed to pay certain rent, the milling firm was entitled to collect the money from Mr. Chisholm, and having collected it to keep it.

The court held that the evidence showed beyond dispute that the note endorsed by Mr. Chisholm was an accommodation note, given in favor of and to assist the Milling Co., and that its character in that respect could not be changed afterwards at the caprice or will of members of the company like Mr. Woodward, and that payment of the note by Mr. Chisholm should never have been exacted as it had been, and that to refuse to refund him what he had paid was under the circumstances nothing short of ingratitude and dishonesty on the part of Messrs. Woodward & Carswell. The court added that Mr. Rutledge had acted very properly in the transaction in protecting Mr. Chisholm from an unjust loss, and that too in a matter in which the latter had acted solely from motives of kindness towards the defendants.

Judgment was therefore given for the plaintiff with costs; Mr. McColl for plaintiff.

GADDY AND RACETTE SWING

Special to the Columbian.

REGINA, N.W.T., June 13.—Jas. Gaddy and Moses Racette were hanged this morning at twenty-two minutes and nine seconds past 8 o'clock, for the murder of Hector McLeish near Wolseley, N.W.T., on May 3rd, 1887. Racette protested his innocence and did not think he should be hanged, as he did not do the shooting. Gaddy bore up pretty well till the hour of execution drew near. Racette kept cool all the time since his arrest, but broke down as he stood on the scaffold. His incoherent protests to the sheriff was evidence of his extreme nervousness. It was thought Gaddy would make a statement exonerating Racette, but the little murderer failed to come to time. About 7 o'clock the usual stream of inquisitive visitors began to arrive, and by 8 the guard-room was crowded by parties claiming to have passes to the scene of execution. At 7:55 a guard of nine red coats handed the prisoners over to the mercies of the sheriff and shortly after the police commissioner, from his bedroom, it is said, ordered the whole outfit out on the square. At 8.05 a redcoat called for Mr. Forget, but in his absence Mr. Gourget took from Racette a confession. At 8:14 the prisoners got through breakfast, immediately after which Jack Henderson, Riel's hangman, accompanied by Parson Gregory, Gaddy's spiritual adviser, and Fathers Graton and Leduc, Racette's comforters, left the cell and marched to the scaffold. At the scaffold Gaddy remained almost lifeless and Racette felt his unfortunate position keenly. Jack Henderson strapped the murderers in cool shape and while Peres Graton and Leduc said the Lord's prayer, the murderers were launched into eternity. They died without a single struggle.

Abstinence and Longevity.

Rev. Joseph Cook, in an article in the Chautauquan, says: "The life assurance organizations are a pedestal on which the doctrine of total abstinence now stands on the solidity of commercial triumph. Only the benighted and belated student of the signs of our times can any longer apologize for moderate drinking as beneficial to health. It is now nearly a generation since life assurance societies began in England to place total abstainers in one section and moderate drinkers in another, and to find the total abstainers far superior in longevity to the other class. When I was in London I took much pains to ascertain the experience of life assurance societies in this matter, and I quote here a statement from a letter received by me from a secretary of one of the foremost of these organizations. During the past sixteen years we have issued 9345 policies on the lives of non-abstainers, but we are careful to exclude any more who are not strictly temperate, and 3396 on the lives of abstainers; 524 of the former have died, but only 91 of the latter, or less than half the proportionate number, which, of course, is 100. Here is a fact attested by sixteen years' experience in a society conducted by good business prudence. Official statements show that the total abstainer has often been paid in life assurance societies from 10 up to 17 and 23 per cent. bonus over and above the moderate drinker. The United Kingdom Temperance and General Provident Institution held, last May, its 46th annual meeting. It has an accumulated capital of $4,000,000. From 1866 to 1886, inclusive, a period of 21 years, it has had a temperance section and a general section. Out of every 100 in the temperance section expected to die, 71 died. Out of every 100 in the general section expected to die, 97 died. The temperance section, therefore, had an advantage of 26 per cent over the general section; or, more nearly, 53 in every 200. Similar facts I have collected in Australia, where life assurance societies are organized very generally, so as to make a distinction between total abstainers and the merely temperate. Many, whose lives are assured as total abstainers, were not always abstinent. The contrasted figures will grow yet more striking when the abstainers are such from birth. These facts represent commercial results.

When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
