Open the Door!

It is no longer a secret that the C. P. Railway contractor is going to concentrate his energies upon the Emory-Moody section, with a view to having it available at the earliest possible moment for the purpose of transporting from the seaboard to the interior plant and material and supplies for the Emory-Savona section, as well as for the steel bridge which is to span the Fraser at the crossing a few miles below Lytton. We cannot bring ourselves to regard that policy as being calculated in the highest degree to promote the best interests of the country. But it is equally impossible to close one's eyes to the fact that it is the true business policy, if the matter is to be viewed from the contractor's standpoint of self-interest. And we suppose it would be taken as an indication of extreme verdancy, were one to assume the possibility of the contractor regarding the question from any other standpoint, unless thereto impelled by the conditions of the bond. Such would appear to be the position of the question; and we have to deal with things as they are—not as they ought to be. Given the concentration of forces upon the lower section, it becomes an urgent duty to consider what can be done towards turning sequent conditions to the best possible account. The amount of skilled and unskilled labor employed in the valley of the Lower Fraser during the next two years on the railway works must necessarily be very great. It is estimated all the way from five thousand to nine thousand men. It would probably be safe to calculate upon the population being fully doubled in so far as consumption of food productions is concerned. Now the important fact staring us in the face is this: There is not the capacity on the Lower Fraser at the present time to supply the demand about to be created. We are accustomed to refer with pardonable pride to the District of New Westminster as one of very great agricultural capacity—as the queen district of the Province. Undeniably it does possess very great agricultural possibilities; but to pretend that it has the present capacity to meet such a demand as is likely, nay, certain, to be made upon it would be folly. There are not the farmers and there are not the farm laborers to do it. More farmers are required, and more fertile acres are essential. With such an absolute certainty of a rich harvest, there would probably be little difficulty in attracting the farmers if only there were the waiting acres for them to enter upon. But unfortunately all the lands that would be available are locked up—cannot be touched! Who holds the key? Technically the Dominion Government; but the Minister of Railways asserts that the Provincial Government won't let them open the door. It is only a short time since the local organ told its few readers that the country owed Talkem a debt of gratitude for keeping the door locked! The public writer who would, under the circumstances, venture such an assertion, must entertain peculiar views concerning the mental condition of his readers. Given the absence of capacity to meet the demand for food productions, what follows? Shall we be told that it will be all the better for the farmers we have, as they could get the more for their produce? Could that proposition be established, we confess that the matter would wear a very much less ugly face, as we should be glad to see the struggling pioneer farmers, who have borne the burden and heat of the day, enriched. But that is not what would happen. Would the products of the great interior come pouring down to the seaboard? If that were so, it would divest the question of its worst feature, as the money would be retained in the country to enrich our own people and develop the permanent industries of the country. But neither could that happen, because there would as yet be no means of moving produce to the seaboard. This is what would undoubtedly happen. Ships laden with foreign produce would line the wharves at Port Moody and at New Westminster and at Port Haney, and a large part of the money expended on the railway works would be drained out of the country to enrich the foreign producer. The only effectual way to prevent that disastrous condition of affairs is to throw open the door to our own fertile lands, so that they may be made to do their part towards supplying food for the thousands of railway workers. Better if that had been done sooner. But "better late than never."

HOW TO DEAL WITH RATS.—A writer in the Scientific American says: "We clean our premises of these detestable vermin by making whitewash yellow with copperas, and covering the stones and rafters in the cellar with it. In every crevice in which a rat may go, we put the crystals of the copperas and scatter in the corners of the floor. The result was a perfect stampede of rats and mice. Since that time not a footfall of either rats or mice has been around the house. Every spring a coat of the yellow wash is given the cellar as a purifier, as a rat exterminator, and no typhoid, dysentry or fever attacks the family. Many persons deliberately attract all the rats in the neighborhood by leaving fruits and vegetables uncovered in the cellar, and sometimes even the soap is left open for their regalement. Cover up everything eatable in the cellar and pantry, and you will soon starve them out. These precautions, joined to the service of a good cat, will prove as good a rat exterminator as the chemist can provide. We never allow rats to be poisoned in our dwelling; they are so apt to get between the walls and produce much annoyance."

HOW TO ESCAPE NERVOUSNESS.—Dr. Wm. A. Hammoud, an eminent physician, in an article "How to escape nervousness," prescribes the following rules, which are worthy of special attention in a season such as the present when the climatic changes are so frequent and so much malaria prevails:—1. An ample supply of pure, fresh and cool air. The nerves should not be asked to endure vitiated air, whether the impurities come from sewers, gas lights and subterranean furnaces, or the individual's own person. Don't live habitually in too warm an atmosphere. Keep your rooms at 65°, and open the windows every now and then. 2. Eat plenty of well cooked and nourishing food. Not slops, but undiluted animal and vegetable food; as a rule, animal food should predominate. Meat-eaters are rarely troubled with nervousness. 3. Take sufficient physical exercise in the open air. When you feel irritable, tremulous, fretful, fidgety, and unable to concentrate your thoughts on the veriest trifle, take a long walk or split half a cord of wood. If these rules were faithfully followed, there would be less work for the doctors to do.

THE POLYSCOPE.—At a recent soiree in the Paris Observatory, M. Trouve showed a live fish with its body lit up from within by his polyscope, a minute form of which, with conducting wires passing to the hands of the operator, the animal had been caused to swallow (comfortably, let us hope). The whole body became transparent in the dark, so that the vertebræ could be counted and all details examined. This instrument promises to have many uses. Among others it has already been applied, La Nature says, to show students the texture of the rectum and bladder; to facilitate extraction of a projectile at the back of the nose; to examine the stomach of a bull (in which a gastric fistula was formed); to lighting the interior of shells and cannon for examination; also to lighting powder magazines, in which case the reflector is enclosed in a triple envelope of glass.

A MISTAKE.—It is a great and often fatal mistake to take repeated drastic purgatives for constipation of the bowels; they induce piles and cause debility of the bowels. Burdock Blood Bitters is a safe and perfect regulator of the bowels, arousing the torpid Liver, and all the secretions to a healthy action, acting on the Kidneys, and renovating and toning the system in the most perfect manner.

Do not let prejudice stand in the way of relief if you suffer from any lingering disease. Burdock Blood Bitters cure others, why should it not benefit you? It is a specific for all forms of Blood, Liver, and Kidney Complaints, Nervous Headaches, General Debility, Scrofula, and all diseases of the Secretory system. Trial Bottles 10 Cents.

Ask your Druggist for a trial bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, it will only cost you 10 cents, and a few doses will prove its efficiency as a health-restoring Tonic-regulator of the Bowels, Liver and Kidneys. It is specific for all diseases arising from impure blood and disordered secretions.

For all purposes of a Family Medicine, HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL is at the head of the list. It is used with unprecedented success, both internally and externally. It cures Sore Throat, Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites; relieves, and often cures, Asthma.

Gentlemen, What Is Your Verdict?

The energies and aspirations of the people are crushed by the fatuous conduct of their rulers. Just look at the position of this community. Within an hour's drive of Burrard Inlet, our people might as well be a hundred miles away from that important centre of industry, in so far as its trade is concerned—being practically cut off for want of means of communication. The consequence is that the important trade of Burrard Inlet, rightfully belonging to us, filters into foreign channels. Turning south, the condition of affairs is little or no better. True, there exists on the other side of the river a road system which cost enough to be good; but it is rendered next to useless because of there being no reasonably facile means of crossing the river. It is now eighteen months since the attention of the Government was forcibly directed to this palpable want by a Grand Jury. Attention was still more forcibly directed to it a few months ago by the loss of four lives—two of them most valuable lives. Petitions were sent in to the Government two or three months ago, praying that the want might be supplied. These petitions were signed by the whole body of the people on both sides of the river. But up to the present moment, no steps whatever appear to have been taken towards complying with the reasonable demands of the people. The consequence is that trade in the town and industry in the settlements are to a great extent paralyzed, and that, too, at the very time when we are on the verge of great developments which might well tax all the energies and resources of the people under the most favorable circumstances. Did the supplying of these desiderata involve a considerable expenditure of public revenue, one could easily understand the conduct of the Government, because the great Jumbo at Esquimalt will obviously require all the revenue that might under other circumstances be supposed to be available for reproductive public works. But very little money is required for one, and none at all for the other. The conduct of Ministers in denying justice to this section of the Province in the matter of representation is easily enough understood. Knowing the intelligence and independence of the people, they naturally concluded that the less representation the District has the safer they will be. Is it possible that they are pushing this doctrine a step farther and acting upon the principle that the poorer the people are the safer they will be? Whatever may be the explanation, the line of conduct pursued towards the communities on the Lower Fraser and Burrard Inlet is wholly indefensible and calls loudly for a verdict of condemnation at the hands of the electors when they go to the ballot-box next summer. Let that verdict be both unanimous and emphatic!

Treaty-Making.

In the Dominion House of Commons, on the 25th the resolution offered by Mr. Blake, setting forth that Canada ought to have the power of making her own commercial treaties, was voted down by a majority of 124 to 58. The telegraph informs us that Sir John Macdonald contended for the present system of government, because if we made treaties we would not have power to enforce them, whereas now the treaties we are interested in are enforced by the power of England. He believed the resolution bad, and really meant independence and separation from the mother country. Mr. DeCosmos, as usual, not only supported the resolution, but went away beyond it, declaring himself in favor of Canada becoming an independent nation, and he had the company of M. Ouimet, a Quebec member. There is doubtless much to be said in favor of Canada being allowed to make her own treaties. History and experience teach Canadians a bitter lesson on that subject. There is, however, great force in the objections urged by Sir John Macdonald, although we are unable to discover why the concession of the commercial treaty-making power should not be perfectly consistent with political union with the parent empire. Canada already enjoys the power to frame her own customs tariffs, and she has exercised that power in a manner and to an extent which, to our thinking, places it very much upon the same footing as commercial treaty-making. It would be difficult to conceive of an objection to the one that would not lie against the other. And yet who would think of suggesting that the enjoyment of the tariff-making power is synonimous with political independence? There is no doubt whatever in our mind that many were deterred from pronouncing in favor of the commercial treaty-making power on account of an unwillingness to be associated with political cranks and extremists who openly declare for absolute independence. At the same time, if we believed that the power to make her own commercial treaties could only be enjoyed at the expense of separation from the mother country, we would at once say, let her remain as she is—for, while yielding to no one in belief in Canada's powers and possibilities, we believe that she will best attain true national greatness by loyally remaining an integral part of that mighty and glorious empire upon which the sun never sets.

Editorial Notes.

Quite a number of most valuable would-be settlers have lately been setting their faces towards the rich delta lands of the Lower Fraser; but they invariably turn their backs when told that these lands are locked up in the railway reserve. What consummate folly to keep these lands barred and bolted against settlement at the very time when it is of the utmost importance that every available rood should be made to yield up its quota of food for the great army of railway-makers. And yet the lying organs will tell the people that they (the people) are under a debt of gratitude to Mr. Walkem for keeping these lands locked up!

Is it not a severe reflection upon the Government policy that, while Victoria enjoys a free high school at the expense of the whole body of the taxpayers, many of whom are ruthlessly denied common school education for their offspring, New Westminster is successfully engaged in building up a high collegiate school which shall meet the higher educational needs of the country without a single dollar of state help? The high school in Victoria must not continue to be supported either in whole or in part by the state, unless similar support be extended to other localities. We lay this down as a fundamental principle, that it is the duty of the state to place a good common school education within reasonably easy reach of every settlement before it can be justified in extending to any community the luxury of a free classical education. To maintain a free high school in the most wealthy community, while important settlements are left utterly destitute of common school privileges is an outrageous crime, for which the Legislature should have called the Government to a strict account.

Encouraged by the experience of the past year those connected with the High Collegiate School in this city have resolved to place that institution upon a broader and more distinctive basis. In taking this step they are entitled to the sympathy and support of the community—of the whole country in fact. The experiment of starting the High Collegiate School without either church or state aid was a bold one. But it has succeeded, and now the institution is to take a permanent form. As the site for such an institution, New Westminster is peculiarly favorable. With a more equable climate than is to be found either farther east or farther west, sufficiently far removed from the sea-winds, so trying to weak constitutions, and in the centre of the finest food-producing district in the province, and with an abundant supply of good water, it is most favorably situated as a centre where the youth of the Province may find the means of a higher education. The site selected for the collegiate buildings could not be excelled anywhere. Sufficiently retired from the busy part of the city which it overlooks, it commands one of the finest views in the world. Altogether we must congratulte the promoters of this most worthy scheme upon the encouraging outlook.

DEATH IN THE COFFEE POT.—The public are cautioned against purchasing imported California ground coffee. Its cheapness is its only recommendation. The ingredients are of the vilest description, as any one using it will discover should he examine the grounds. During the perihelia of the planets people should be careful what they eat and drink. Don't allow your grocer to palm off his trash upon you, because it pays him better to sell it than the good article. Ask for FELL & Co.'s Coffee and take no other.*

☞ PORT MOODY.—Plans of the new Town Site for sale at T. R. Pearson & Co's., $1.00 each.—Adv.

MAY DAY.—Capt. McMurphy informs us that the May Day celebration has been fixed for Monday the 8th proximo.

METHODIST CHURCH—Rev. E. Robson, pastor. Service at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday School and Bible Class at 2:30 p.m. Seats free; strangers cordially invited.

COMING.—The Orillia (Ont.) Packet of 31st March mentions that Mr. James Bow, of South Orillia, has sold his place and intends to make his home in British Columbia. Mr. Bow will be welcome, and will find room enough in this country for advancement.

THE FEDERAL ELECTIONS.—Public mind, for some months oscillating, would now appear to have settled down to the conviction that the Dominion Parliament will be dissolved and a general election held next summer, between seed-time and harvest.

BIBLE SOCIETY.—Rev. Mr. Jamieson thankfully acknowledges the receipt of the following subscriptions towards the general work of the Upper Canada Bible Society, viz:—New Westminster, $104; Nanaimo, $25; North Arm, $20; Burrard Inlet, $15.25; Mud Bay, $8.50.

PORT MOODY.—We have to thank Mr. H. V. Edmonds, land agent, for a very neat plan of the new town site of Port Moody. The plan is drawn by Mr. Geo. Turner, P. L. S., and the execution is very creditable to his professional skill. Mr. Edmonds, we believe, has still a large number of lots to dispose of at Port Moody.

PORT MOODY HOTEL.—The material for a new hotel was shipped from Mr. Webster's mill here to Port Moody a few days ago. The hotel is to be 36 x 40 feet, 2 stories high, and will be placed at the end of the North Road. Mr. Turnbull is the builder, and we understand that the hotel will be under the management of Mr. L. F. Bonson.

MCLEAN ACQUITTED. — A London despatch of the 20th inst. says:—The jury in the case of MacLean, the crank who attempted to assassinate the queen, has returned a verdict of not guilty on the ground of insanity. After the jury rendered the verdict it was ordered that MacLean be detained in custody during her majesty's pleasure. Deliberation of the jury occupied five minutes.

ROYALTY COMING. — On the 25th inst. the irrepressible Member for Vancouver sent the following despatch to the Mayor of Victoria:—"To Mayor Shakespeare—Have had an interview with the Governor-General upon the subject of his intended visit to British Columbia. His Excellency and the Princess will visit our province in September next to remain some weeks.—A. BUNSTER."

THE NICOLA SHOW. — The annual stallion show was held at Nicola April 20th. There were six horses entered. The prize cup (offered by Capt. Irving) was awarded to John Gilmore for his horse "Irish Plowboy." The "Irish Plowboy" is a general purpose horse, dark dapple bay with black points, stands 16 hands 3 inches, built in proportion with great action. He was 4 years old on 2nd April last. Mr. Gilmore obtained the "Irving cup" last year, also, against nine entries with the same horse and the cup now becomes his property.

WORK BEYOND THE ROCKIES.—The firm of Langdin, Shepard & Co., of St. Paul, are preparing to commence work on the five hundred miles contract on the Canadian Pacific Railway. The firm will have its head office for contract in Winnipeg, and intends erecting a building near the depot at Point Douglass for the purpose. Donald Grant will have the supervision of the track laying, work in which he was successful last year. Grading will begin about the first of May, when, it is expected, they will employ 3,000 men and 2,000 horses.

THE CITY ELECTION.—Last Tuesday the City Clerk received authority from the Government to hold an election for the purpose of filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Deane. As there were two vacancies to fill, the Clerk applied for authority to hold both at once. A letter was received last night in which the existence of a second vacancy seems to be completely ignored, and ordering the single election to proceed. The Government seem to have muddled the matter as they muddle all matters. The election cannot be held till some time in May.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE. — The May number of this fine monthly comes to hand filled with interesting matter and illustrations. Among the contents are the following: Spanish Vistas; A Child's First Impression of Death; The Squirrel's Highway; Some London Poets; The Upper Peninsula of Michigan; Anne (continued); On the Nine-Mile; Shandon Bells; etc. Published by Harper & Bros., New York.

DISALLOWED ACTS.—British Columbia looms up "big" in the official return just laid before the Dominion House of disallowed Acts since 1867. Although this province did not join the Dominion until four years and a half after confederation her disallowed Acts exceed those of Ontario in the ratio of 3 to 1; those of Nova Scotia, 2 to 1; those of Manitoba, 2 to 1; and those of Quebec, 6 to 1! This return does not include a number of Acts that were decided by the Courts to be unconstitutional.—Colonist.

CANADIAN MONTHLY.—We have before us the April number of this national magazine. The contents are in some respects unusually interesting. The article on "The Power of Disallowance and its National importance," from the pen of the Hon. Mr. Cockburn, for some time Speaker of the House, is one which will be specially interesting at the present time, when the conflict between the federal and provincial authorities seems to be showing itself in many quarters. Among the contents are several other articles of importance. Published by the Rose-Belford Publishing Co., Toronto.

CLASSICS.—Our local contemporary says of us: "Why, he knows no more "of what constitutes a syllogism, than "he knows about the internal calculus." We confess not to have heard before of the "Internal calculus," but we should imagine from his frequent abortive attempts to "make water run up hill," our contemporary ought to be an authority on the biliary calculus. As for our knowledge of a syllogism, we understand it to be something like this: A "cad" cannot be a gentleman; our contemporary is a "cad;" therefore, our contemporary cannot be a gentleman.

DISTRICT MEETING. — The annual meeting of the Victoria and New Westminster District of the Methodist Church of Canada commenced its session in this city on Tuesday evening last, and closed yesterday afternoon. Considerable business of importance was transacted, and encouraging reports received from the various missions. Both membership and finances show an advance upon the previous year. The ministers upon the District remain where they have been during the past year, except Messrs. Turner, of Cariboo, and Chappell, of Nicola and Kamloops, who go East, their places to be supplied by new men who are expected. Several additional missionaries are asked for, one of whom is to take charge of the Chilliwhack and Sumas Indian Mission. Before closing, a resolution was passed, thanking the friends in New Westminster who had entertained the ministers and lay delegates during their stay in the city.

Educational Meeting.

The educational meeting in the Methodist Church on the evening of Wednesday last was well attended and highly interesting. The President of the Collegiate and High School Board, W. J. Armstrong, Esq., M. P. P., occupied the Chair and the efficient Choir of the Church was in attendance and sang several anthems. The Secretary of the C. & H. S. gave an account of the condition and prospects of the school which was considered highly encouraging. Remarks were made by Revs. Watson, Hall, and Thompson, and Messrs. Clute, Major, Calbick, Cunningham, Curtis, Wintemute, Peers, Wells (Chilliwhack), and Butler (Victoria), all expressing their confidence in the school, their gratification on account of its success and their intention of doing all in their power to promote its future prosperity. A resolution was passed appointing Revs. Watson and Robson, with the Chairman (Mr. Armstrong), a committee to prepare a detailed scheme for the organization of a joint stock company to carry on the school in future and disposing of shares in the same throughout the province.

New Westminster Rifle Association.

The annual general meeting was held last Saturday, when the report of the council was presented and adopted. It stated that the annual competition was well attended and 15 prizes, valued at $45, were competed for. The council thankfully acknowledge the receipt of numerous articles contributed as prizes from citizens of New Westminster. The report expressed great pleasure and pride in mentioning the receipt of a very handsome silver cup, presented by the President, Hon. H. Nelson, Senator, for yearly competition, for which the hearty thanks of the Association were tendered. The report recommended that the rule grading the competitors in shooting, and doing away with the "back position," adopted last year, be adhered to. Also, that at each monthly competition there should be a match at 200 yards, open to all members, with any rifle.

The following gentlemen were elected to constitute the council for the present year: Hon. Senator Nelson, Assistant Surgeon Trew, Lieut. Bole, and Messrs. I. B. Fisher, J. Orr, Wm. McColl, and J. Wilson, Capts. Pittendrigh and Peele being members ex officio. A vote of thanks was passed to Hon. Senator Nelson for the handsome cup donated by him.

For all purposes of a Family Medicine, HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL is at the head of the list. It is used with unprecedented success, both internally and externally. It cures Sore Throat, Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites, relieves, and often cures, Asthma.

Personal.

The last issue of the Government echo in this city contained two articles—one wholly personal, intensely bitter, and excessively vindictive; the other political, singularly empty, intended as an amplification of the first. The purpose of both articles is to warn the people of this district against permitting the editor of the COLUMBIAN to become their representative in Parliament. The very possibility of such a contingency seems to throw the organ into that state of terrible frenzy characteristic of a mad dog at the approach of a watery vision. The electors are besought with frantic entreaties not to countenance the editor of the COLUMBIAN (1) because he does not know "what constitutes a syllogism," (2) because he has not informed himself concerning the "internal calculus," (3) because he is a "hack politician," (4) because he is "a half-educated humbug," etc. Well, we confess at least to our ignorance of the "internal calculus," and we leave the public to judge between us and our contemporary as to the rest. It must be patent to every one hat the editor of the Government organ is eminently qualified to enunciate the correct principles of ethics and political morality. By his own confession he became the organ of the present Government simply because there was money in it, and it is fair to presume that he is open for any other bribe which may come within his reach. But his present disquietude arises chiefly from two causes: First, the fear that the Government to which he sold himself will be defeated at the polls, and his principal source of revenue cut off; second, the fact that while the COLUMBIAN grows and thrives on a rapidly-increasing subscription list and an advertising patronage second to none in the province, he sees his own little list gradually growing smaller and beautifully less until nobody cares to advertise in a thing which scarcely anybody ever reads. "So long as these talking frauds address themselves to the ragtag and bob-tail of society they are safe; but whenever they come in contact with men of sense and experience, their occupation is gone." This is a verbatim quotation from the organ. How aptly it describes his own position and experience need not be pointed out.

Cloture.

The first procedure resolution affirming the principle of cloture was carried by a greater majority (39) than was expected. It places the Government in a good position, showing the real strength of forces that can be arrayed against them, and indicating the solid unity of the Liberals under pressure. The Tories gave a straight vote, and were joined by thirty-nine Irish members. The Liberals were assisted by fourteen Home Rulers. Seven Home Rulers were absent, including three now in gaol. Five Liberals voted against the Government. There were sixteen Liberal absentees, of whom half could be accounted for. This record shows the real strength of parties. The Home Rulers can never give a solid vote with the Tories, and even if that be possible, the Liberals will still be in a majority. Among the Government's majority were five newspaper proprietors whose papers had opposed cloture. In the division were Mr. Errington, who came from Rome, Messrs. Villiers and Bass from the sick room, and three members from the Mediterranean. Sir Sidney H. Waterlow, who married a young rich Californian in Paris on Wednesday, travelled all night in order to vote.

Another Canadian Pacific Railway.

The bill to incorporate the Rapid City railway company, introduced by Mr. Bannerman, is for a road projected to run from the C. P. R. in Manitoba to Rapid City, Oak river, Bird Tail creek and Fort Ellice, thence to the Touchwood hills, thence to a point near Fort Alacorne, on the Saskatchewan, thence northwest to a point at or near Pine river pass, and thence to the Pacific coast. It is simply a proposition to build a second Pacific railway, running from Manitoba northwesterly through the fertile country not far south of Peace river. The capital is put down at only $2,000,000. The persons named in the bill are Hon. Thomas Howard, John W. Douglas, Wm. Murdock, E. A. C. Pew, C J. Whellams, Duncan L. McLaren, Captain Vivian, R. N., S. R. Gobson, N. M. Elliott, Thos. Scott, M. M., and A. W. Bell.

Criminal Statistics.

According to the returns just published, the convictions for 1880 were 28,209. Of the Provinces Manitoba stands second lowest—271, British Columbia being the lowest, having only 47. Of the whole number 7,411 were registered as moderate and 11,736 as immoderate drinkers. The birth places were as follows: England and Wales, 2,112; Ireland, 3,833; Scotland, 874; Canada, 12,296; United States, 942; other foreign countries, 373; other British possessions, 102. The religions of those convicted are set down as follows: Baptist, 507; R. Catholics, 10,826; Church of England, 2,496; Methodists, 1,406; Presbyterians, 1,508; Protestants, 3,347; other denominations, 40.

Compliments to Col. Laurie.

OTTAWA, March 20.—The following is a copy of a letter dated March 8th addressed to Mr. Caron, Minister of Militia:

"Sir,—We notice with regret that Colonel Laurie has been retired from the active Militia of Canada, with which he has long been connected, and as we were, previous to confederation and since, familiar with his work, we feel called upon to attest to the zeal and ability which he at all times brought to the discharge of his duties, and to the success that attended his efforts. By a judicious selection of officers he has placed the Militia of our Province in such a position that the effects of his withdrawal are not so immediately felt as they may be in the near future. Common with all who take an interest in our militia, we exceedingly regret his removal from Nova Scotia, and we trust that now, for family reasons, having been constrained to leave British Columbia, it may be possible to restore him to his sphere of usefulness amongst us. Although not born in the Province, marriage and twenty years residence have made Colonel Laurie a Nova Scotian, and his interest in all matters professional and otherwise bearing on the welfare and progress of our people leads us to welcome his return; and we trust you may be able to utilize his services in connection with our militia to the satisfaction of our people, and so retain him amongst us in the best interests of the Dominion.

We have the honor to be, etc., signed R. B. Dickey, Alexander MacFarlane, William J. Almon, H. A. N. Kaulback, William Miller, W. H. Odell, T. D. Archibald, J. Bourinot, R. P. Grant and Thos. Mackay, Senators; M. H. Richey, M. B. Daly, C. E. Kaulback, John Macdougald, A. Longley, A. Odgen, Robert Doull, S. T. R. Bill, John C. Wade, William McDonald and W. Henry Allison, M. P.'s."

There is a strong feeling here in favor of Col. Laurie's succeeding Major General Luard in command of the Canadian Militia. It is generally believed that under the present circumstances Major Luard's stay in Canada will be of brief duration, and should Col. Laurie succeed him the Government will have an exceedingly able and popular officer.

MRS. D. A. MACDONALD.

Our Story.

KITH AND KIN.

"Miss — Miss C — Conisbrough!" came in accents of surprise.

Judith started violently, crimsoning with shame; the instincts of pride, reticence, reserve, impelling her instantly to subdue and conceal every sign of emotion. But they came too late. Randulf Danesdale had seen her. It was he who reined up his horse close beside her; his face, wondering and shocked, which looked from his elevation down upon her, as she gave a startled glance upward.

He was alone, apparently, save his dog. Air and exercise had a little flushed his usually pale face; surprise gave it animation, and lent expression to his eyes. He looked, as she could not help seeing, very handsome, very manly, very well. Horse and rider were on the best of terms, and they formed a good-looking pair.

He had spoken her name half inquiringly, as if he doubted the evidence of his own eyes. But when she suddenly uncovered her face, and looked up at him, and he saw that it was indeed she, he backed his horse a step, and bowed. She had risen in an instant, but she could not entirely recover her presence of mind in the same space of time.

"I—Mr. Danesdale!"

"Good evening; I fear I startled you," he replied, and his presence of mind had not for a moment deserted him. He had waited for her to speak, that he might know what line to take, and he followed it up at once.

"I must have been sitting there without calculating the time, for I don't possess a watch," she said, with a faltering attempt at a laugh. He smiled in answer, and dismounted.

"That is quite evident," he said, holding out his hand. "Are you thinking of walking back to Yoresett?"

"Certainly I am; having no other mode of conveyance, I must either do so or remain where I am."

Judith had recovered her outward self-possession, but her answers were curt, and there was bitterness in her tone, and the mental agony which she was obliged to suppress forced from her certain tones and expressions which were unlike her usual ones.

"Then," said he, "since I have been fortunate enough to overtake you" (with as much gravity as if he had overtaken her walking at the rate of three miles an hour), "allow me to have the honor of escorting you home. I, of course, have to pass through Yoresett on my way to Danesdale Castle."

"I cannot think of detaining you. Pray ride on," said Judith; who, however, had begun to move onward, while he, slipping the bridle over his arm, paused beside her, and his horse, his friend, followed him.

"I shall enjoy the walk. I rode as far as Hawes, indeed beyond, this morning, to have lunch at the Sparthwaites. Do you know the Sparthwaites?"

"By name, of course. Not personally—at least, I only just know them to speak to."

"But your uncle, Mr. Aglionby——"

"Oh, Mr. Aglionby is on terms of friendship with many people whom we don't know at all. When my father was living, he was the vicar of Yoresett, and he and my mother of course visited with all these people. Since his death, my mother has been unable to visit anywhere. She cannot afford it."

"I beg your pardon——" began Randulf.

"Not at all," she answered, in the same quick, spasmodic way, as if she spoke in the intervals of some physical anguish. "I only think it foolish to pretend that there are reasons for not visiting people which are not the real reasons, and concealing the real one, which covers all the others and is simply—poverty," said Judith distinctly. It was not her wont to speak in this way, to flaunt her poverty, as it were, in the face of one better off than herself. But she was not her usual self at this moment. What she had just gone through seemed to have branded the consciousness of her misfortunes so deeply into her heart, with so burning and indelible a stamp that it would be long before she would be able to give her undivided attention to anything else. A week ago, she would have recoiled with horror from the idea of thus hardly and nakedly stating the truth of their position to young Danesdale; she would have felt it an act of disloyalty to the hardships of her mother, an unwomanly self-assertion on her part. Now she scarcely gave a thought to what she said on the subject, or if she did, it took the shape of a kind of contempt for her own condition, a sort of "what does it matter? He knows perfectly well that we are half-starved wretches — why should he not hear it, and learn that he had better go away and leave us to our natural obscurity?"

But for one slight circumstance, Judith would have almost supposed that Randulf had really forgotten, or not noticed, the strange position in which he had found her, "crying in a hedge," as she scornfully said to herself. That circumstance was, that he neither drawled nor stammered in his speech, but spoke with a quick alertness unlike anything she had imagined him capable of assuming. This convinced her that he was turning the case over in his mind, and wondering very much what to think of it. She knew nothing of his character. Of course he was a gentleman by birth and breeding. Was he a gentleman, nay, more, a man, in mind and behavior? Would he be likely to receive a confidence from her as a sacred thing? or would he be capable of treating it lightly and perhaps laughing over it with his friend? She knew nothing about him which could enable her to give even a conjecture on the subject. But the confidence must be made, the favor asked.

"Mr. Danesdale," she said abruptly, after they had walked on for some little time, and saw the village of Bainbeck below them, and the lights of Yoresett gleaming in the distance, and when she felt that the time for speaking was not long.

"Yes, Miss Conisbrough."

"You must have felt surprised when you saw me this afternoon?"

"Must I?"

"Were you not? Pray do not deny it. I am sure you were."

"Since you speak in that way of it, I was more than surprised. I was shocked and pained."

"Poor relations are very troublesome sometimes. I had been troublesome to my uncle this afternoon, and had got well snubbed—more than snubbed—insulted for my pains."

"The old r—rascal!" observed Randulf, and Judith almost smiled at the naive way in which he revealed how readily he had associated the cause of her trouble with Mr. Aglionby.

"I left the house in indignation. I cannot of course tell you what had happened, nor can you have any concern to know it. I was thinking about it. I shall never be able to tell it to anyone but my sister Delphine, for it concerns us alone, so, as you have accidentally seen that something was wrong, would you mind, please—not mentioning—you can understand that I do not wish any one to hear of it."

"It is natural on your part to ask it," said he, "but I assure you it was unnecessary so far as I am concerned. But I give you my word, as a gentleman, that whoever may hear of the circumstance, will not hear of it from me. Pray regard it, so far as I am concerned, as if it had not happened."

He spoke with a grave earnestness which pleased Judith extremely and sent a glow of comfort to her chill heart. The earnestness sat well on the handsome young face. Looking up, as she thanked him for his promise, she thought how young he did look, and happy. She herself felt so odd—so incalculably odd this afternoon.

"I thank you sincerely," was all she said.

"The s—storm's close at hand," observed he the next moment, displaying once more the full beauty of his drawl and his hesitation, "I shall be in for a drenching, in more ways than one."

"As how?" she asked, in a tone almost like her usual one.

"From the rain before I get to Danesdale Castle, and from my sister's looks when I walk in late for dinner, and take my place beside the lady whom I ought to have been in time to hand in."

Oh, and it will be my fault?"

"It will. That is a fact beyond dispute. But they never wait for me, and I shall have the pleasure of mystifying them and seeing their curiosity run riot. That is what I enjoy. D—don't distress yourself."

They were passing the market cross in Yorsett. Judith was opposite her mother's door. She shook hands with Randulf, thanked him for his escort, and wished him well home before the storm broke.

"Thank you, and if I may presume to offer you a little advice, Miss Conisbrough, don't bother yourself about your wicked uncle."

She smiled faintly, bowed her head; he waved his hand, sprang upon his horse, and they parted.

* * * * * *

With her heart low again, she knocked at the door. Insensibly to her perceptions—for she had been so absorbed, first in her own emotion, and afterward in her conversation with Mr. Danesdale, that she had noticed nothing else—the storm had increased. The wind was alternately wailing a dirge, and booming threats across the fells to the town. There would be floods of rain to-night, and to-morrow Swale and Yore would be thundering in flood through their valleys, fed by a hundred swollen becks from the hillsides. As the door was opened to her, the first cold splash of rain fell upon her face. The storm was from the northwest. It was well that all who had homes to go to should seek them while the tempest lasted.

It was Rhoda who opened the door.

"Judith!" she exclaimed. "Mamma and I both said you would be kept all night at Scar Foot. It was only that bird of ill omen—that croaker, Delphine—who said you would not. Are you wet?"

"A little, I believe," replied Judith, anxious for an excuse not to go into the parlor immediately. "Oh, there's my candle, I see; I'll go straight up stairs. I wish you'd tell Del to come and help me a minute."

Mrs. Conisbrough always resented the tendency to "talk secrets." Rhoda had rather a respect for it—besides, when her elders were engaged in that pastime, their eyes were not so open to her defects. She alertly answered, "Yes, to be sure," and ran back into the parlor, while Judith toiled slowly up the stairs, and along the bare, hollow-sounding passage. She entered her own bedroom, placed the candle upon the dressing-table, and paused. She pulled off her gloves, threw them down, and then stood still, looking lonely and desolate, till a light, flying foot sounded along the passage; even at that gentle rush her face did not lighten. Then Delphine's lovely face and willowy form came floating in, graceful even in her haste.

"Judith?" There was inquiry, suspense in her tone.

"Oh, Delphine!" Bursting into a fit of passionate weeping, she fell upon her sister's neck and cried as if her heart would break.

"Was it of no use?" asked the younger girl at last, softly caressing her as she spoke.

"Worse than no use! He not only refused, he insulted me; he spoke abusively, talked about 'plots' and 'schemes' and things I could not understand. And at last he got into a fury, and he—oh, Delphine, Delphine—he bade me begone. He turned me out—from Scar Foot—from my dear old place that I loved so! Oh, I think my heart will break!"

"He must be mad—the horrid old monster!" cried Delphine, distinctly, her figure springing erect, even under the burden of her sister's form. "He has not the right to treat you, or any of us, in that way. Let him do without us! Let him try how he likes living alone in his den, and getting more and more ill tempered every day, till he frightens the whole country-side away from him. I will never go near him again, of my own free will, but if ever I meet him, I will tell him what I think of him; oh, I will! Cheer up, Judith! Keep a good heart. We will not be beaten by a tyrant like him."
