Last Friday the coroner's jury heard the evidence relating to the death of Thomas Kurmeen, and returned an open verdict. Kurmeen came to his death by a bullet wound in his head, but from the evidence there was nothing to show how or by whom the wound was inflicted. The jurymen were: T. Brannagan, Geo. Lamb, J. Sutherland, D. A. McDonald, W. H. C. Wilson and W. Connell.

A beautiful story is depicted in the picture, entitled "Home Again," given this season with the Family Herald and Weekly Star, of Montreal. It is beyond doubt the best picture ever offered with that great paper. The picture is 22 x 29 inches, ready for framing. The Family Herald and Weekly Star is growing faster and faster every year. It is the marvel of the newspaper world today and with such a picture as "Home Again," all for one dollar a year, it is no wonder the circulation grows. Every home in Canada should spend a dollar this season on this great bargain.

ROCK CREEK NOTES

A basket social was held in Larsen's hall on Friday evening last for the benefit of the school at Upper Rock Creek; it was preceded by a concert and followed by a dance. The program for the concert was: Instrumental trio, Miss J. Crawford, Messrs Crawford and Kelsey; Vocal duet, Mrs. Harris and Mrs. Jupp; Piano duet, Miss Bell and Miss Harrison; Habitant recitation, I. Crawford; Piano duet, Mrs. Harris and Miss Crawford; Song, D. Phillips; Piano solo, Miss J. Crawford; Song, J. Burgess; Piano solo, Miss Bell; Song, I. Crawford.

The way in which the program was carried through reflects great credit on our local talent. The concert was followed by the sale of baskets, T. R. Hansen, officiating as auctioneer, performing his duties so strenuously that at the conclusion he was minus coat, collar, and tie. The sum obtained from the sale cleared $108 which should help out the school a lot. After the sale there was a dance which lasted to the wee small hours of the morning.

W. Eddy has bought out I. Crawford's store and hopes that all readers of The Ledge will pay him a visit.

Norman Finsen is now occupying the half-way house between Riverside and Rock Creek—it is known as "The Saint's Rest"

Your corresopndent is thinking of taking holy orders owing to the prevailing epidemic of engagements in the immediate neighborhood. There should be a gold mine in the shape oi fees to the first parson at the new Church of England. At the rate things are going now, there will not be a single unengaged person in Rock Creek by spring. This should bring a smile to the face of Mr. Logan as it already has to the countenances of the Rock Creek carpenters.

THE LEDGE

Is located at Greenwood, B. C., and can be traced to many parts of the earth. It comes to the front every Thursday morning, and believes that hell would close up if love ruled the world. It believes in justice to everyone; from the man who mucks in the mine to the king who sits on the cushions of the throne. It believes that advertising is the life of trade; and that one of the noblest works of creation is the man who always pays the printer.

The Ledge is $2.00 a year in advance, or $2.50 when not so paid. It is postage free to all parts of Canada, Mexico, Great Britain and the county of Bruce. To the United States it is $2.50 a year, always in advance.

We cannot find our old bull-dog cut. Perhaps it is in the museum of the Fernie Ledger.

There are stars that do not move a second in a century. They are about as slow as the merchant who does not advertise.

The Riot Act was read in Fernie last week. This is rare literature for B. C., and it is never read in Sunday schools or by the fireside.

Europe is liable to make a jackpot out of that trouble between Italy and Turkey. When the dogs of war are loosed it is difficult to tell whose chickens they will destroy. War is still the same thing that Sherman called it.

In a recent issue of the Quesnel Observer the editor says: "Kindly excuse this weeks errors, for we were strictly up against the real thing." He does not state what the real thing was. Perhaps some tenderfeet wandered into the camp with a bottle of unwatered boozerine.

In Ontario politics the Liberals are making a strong plank of prohibition. In the past in that province buying booze, and kissing babies during election campaigns has helped many a candidate to climb into the Legislature. Out west legislative candidates are still buying drinks.

Away back east in Good Toronto, more than 100 games of poker are played every night, and the streets after dark are filled with women who deal in commercial love, while on Sundays the wise get their booze by knowing how to rap on the back door. Verily, in spite of its array of costly churches, and poorly paid parsons, the city of cant and hypocrisy is still unable to force the devil to stay in Hamilton.

Thinking Themes

To read only what is easy to read is like eating nothing but mush. The mind is developed only by effort.

The world has lasted a long time and is very much wiser than any one of us, and when, after 20 years of testing, the world says that such and such a book is worth while, it becomes you and me to read it, to keep on reading it until we do like it.

There are certain realms of personal taste in which we have no rights. No intelligent person has a right to say he does not enjoy Homer or Dante or Shakespeare or Goethe. Such masters have passed beyond the bar of private judgment. They have become a part of great Nature herself. It is as if we should say we prefer red grass to green. It is very wonderful to see how a great genius, despised in his time, advances after he is dead to the undisputed sway of all men, until opposition ceases and he takes his throne by universal consent. Only one or two first-class musicians acknowledged the ability of Wagner living: no one would dare to question the supremacy of Wagner dead. Jesus was rejected by the crowd and executed by the authorities, but who to-day questions his mortal grandeur or his spiritual dominion? When any man has won over the world, I cannot afford to turn away from him, but I should be very humble and teachable before him. If I cannot enjoy Bacon's essay, I must restle with them until they bless me.—Dr. Frank Crane.

The Late Census

The result of the Census just made public although a disappointment to the mass of the people did not greatly surprise the present Government. During the past session Hon. R. L. Borden and his followers repeatedly protested against the way in which the census was being taken. The enumerators were practically appointed by Liberal members and Liberal politicians with the result that some political advantage was sought rather than a proper enumeration of the people. In some cases the enumerators were directed to report to the Liberal organizer for the Province or District and it is well known fact that in some parts of the country the enumerators spent more time preaching reciprocity than in taking the census. From all over the country complaints poured in respecting the way in which the work was carried on. In Montreal, Toronto and other cities whole streets were missed and in one city an entire ward was omitted. The fact that Hon. R. L. Borden was not enumerated until he complained from his place in the House indicates how carelessly the work must have been done.

Hon. Sydney Fisher met all these complaints and objections with the cynical remark that the enumerators being paid per capita would be more likely to exaggerate than to under estimate the number of people. It appears, however, that a large part of their compensation depended upon their listing all parcels of land of one acre or less in their respective districts. In some parts of Quebec at least interfered with the census proper. According to La Presse, the Liberal organ at Montreal some $200,000 of public money was wasted in this way and that paper pronounces the census a veritable scandal and worthy of investigation by the new Government.

But however carelessly the census may have been taken the fact is apparent that the people of the country were misled as to the true growth of the country by the Laurier Government. That Government in order to make a good show of progress kept giving out inflated claims as to the population. In his last budget speech Hon. Mr. Fielding who should have had scientific data to draw upon estimates Canada's population at 7,775,000. For some reason the Government kept no count of emigration from Canada. They exercised no surveillance over bonused imigrants to ascertain whether they remained in Canada or merely passed through here on their way to the United States.

Letters from Jane Ann

By Moore Anking

Dear Mother,—I marked this letter Urgent so's you should get it quick. P'raps that'll make the postman run with it—I don't think. Never see a postman run in my life, mother, not with letters. Some of 'em can travel quick enough of a Sunday if they happen to be carrying a jug. If you want to see 'em off you've only got to stand round a corner and shout Time, gents!

Anyway, soon's you hear the postman knock with this I wish you'd rush in the kitchen and turn the gas off, else you'll very likely pass through the sub-lime to the ridiklus.

This is what's the matter. When I left home last Tuesday week I put a penny in the slot, turned the gas on and then forgot to light it. D'reckly I woke up this morning, thinks I, Mother's gas is on, I better tell her about it some time to-day. So that's why I'm writing in such a hurry. There don't seem to be any menchun of your name in the Fatal Accidents, but if you get this letter, old dear, I shall feel more contended. What I mean to say, I shall know yon're still at the same address.

Had company in the train coming here, mother. Gent with pewse-coloured socks, bundle of books under his arm, flat hat and wearing his collar wrong way round—made his face look as if it was hanging on a fence.

After he nipped up his pants so's to give his feet more air, he edged into the corner opposite me and undid his bundle. Then he loosened his collar so's it shouldn't cut his throat, and started to read a book with yellow covers and a picksher on the front of a lady in a hopskirt, leading a little white dog. You know the sort of picksher, mother, where the lady's carrying a parisole at bottom of a flight of steps, vase of flowers each side, and a peacock on a wall. If the lady has her parisole up and her hat on, and the peacock's got the hump and its tail down, its says underneath April Showers; if the lady's lost her hat and you can't see her boots for socks, picksher's called A Balmy Morning. Given with quarter-pound of tea at Christmas; for another couple of ounces they send it home in a cab. Of course, the person not been in our set I didn't think it right to take any notice, 'speshially as I could see him squinting at me over the top of his book.

After a while he says, Pardon me miss, are you fond of literachoor?

I wasn't expecting him to chirp just then, and all I could stutter was not in these——, then I pulled myself together and said Yes please.

With that he rattled on terrifik, all about what he'd read, and what he hadn't read, and what he should like to read if he'd wasn't lodging with the vicar. Told me what friends he'd made through reading books—Arry Stottle, and Jeff Chawsir, and Benny Johnson, and Jack Milton, and Alec Pope, and Sammy Coalridge, and Tommy Moore, and Wally Scott—there, you'd never have thought it of him, it was like lissning to one of the k-nuts reading the committee list at a friendly lead.

And all I got a chance to say was Rather, and Not 'arf, and Did he, and things like that.

Then he asked if I liked Browning, so I told him our family loved it, and how we flew to Margate for it every summer on the Steamboat. That made him write a bit down for me, and this is what he wrote, "I see my way as birds their trackless way. I shall arrive." Just then we all arrived so he had to get out. He saw his way right enough—to the refreshment bar, and last time I twigged him he was leaning up against the book-stall tearing a bun. But what a head-piece, mother, what an a-pex, what a summit?

Haven't had time to look round and report yet, old queen. Just missed the Boy Skouts. His lordship had them here for a fortnight sleeping in a field, but they left before I landed. I s'pose they were ordered off, or p'raps somebody lent them their lodging-money.

Now do write soon, mother dear. I'm dying to know if you got burnt and how much and what part. x

With tenderest love,

Jane Ann.

A Lost Mail Bag

A very curious discovery which throws some interesting side lights on the life of sixteenth century Europe was made some years ago when the contents of the old post-office at Frankfort-on-Main were transferred to the new premises. A complete mail bag full of letters and apparently officially sealed was discovered hidden among the rafters of the old post-office, where it had lain forgotten for over 300 years.

The bag was at first deposited intact among the State achieves, but it has recently been handed over to the Imperial Post Museum, where the curator, Dr. Sautter, has been occupied in examining the contents. Dr. Sautter has published the results of his examination in the Imperial Postal and Telegraph Archives.

The mail comprises 175 packages containing in all 272 letters; in some instances several different letters were enclosed in one package, either for the sake of economy or in the hope of greater security.

Most of the letters were addressed to persons residing in Aix-la-Chapelle, Cologne and Antwerp besides a number intended to reach officers and soldiers of the Spanish army then operating in the Netherlands.

One can but vainly speculate upon the disappointments, quarrels and losses that may have resulted from the miscarrage of all these messages. They were no doubt serious, for in those days letter writing was too costly and troublesome to be undertaken without real need. Dr. Sautter has classified the letters and published a selection of those that contain items of general interest.

The "aviso" or despatch note found in the bags is written in Italian, though signed by the Spanish postmaster at Milan. It is dated May 16, 1585, and consigns the mail to the Imperial postmaster then resident in Cologne. The letters themselves are dated from various towns in Northern Italy.

It is impossible now to say how these lettors came to be deposited in the roof of the Frankfort post-office, though they can be little doubt that it was the result of some mail robbery—which was no uncommon event at that period. The peculiar fact remains, however, that the thieves selected a post-office for the concealment of their haul.—Chambers' Journal.

Copper Mining in Ireland

A $73,000 company is being formed to acquire a mining lease of the Ardtully mines of copper, silver and lead situated between Kilgarvan and Kenmare, in the county of Kerry, Ireland. The property consists of fourteen acres of land, and the mining rights of adjoining property, comprising 265 acres.

An analysis made in the laboratory of Trinity College, Dublin, shows the mines are rich in copper, sulphur and arsenic, and the quality of the ore is stated to be superior to that of the Cornish mines, the average value exceeding $53 per ton. Assays show copper ore from 22 to 49 per cent., and silver lead from 18 to 75 ounces of silver to the ton.

A considerable amount of development work has been done, and the first ton of ore raised was sent without being concentrated to Swansea to be smelted, the assay being 15 ounces of silver, net value $7.74, and 15 per cent. of copper, valued at $30.84. Another sample sent shows as high as 61 per cent. copper.

Copper mining in Ireland in recent years has been of but little importance, chiefly on account of the low-grade ore, and the result of this new development will be watched with a great deal of interest.

Nevada Camps.

Nevada mining camps which have been quiet during the summer months are beginning to show signs of marked activity. The camps of Searchlight and Crescent expect to see new development work begun within the near future and a visit of two days at Las Vegas disclosed the camp busier than any time since the boom.

Goldfield has picked up wonderfully in the last three months. This is attributed to the Merger Mines and the belief in the ore bodies at depth. The camp seems to be the best in the state at present, there being more men working there now than any time since the early days of the camp. Here there are two 40-stamp mills at work as well as the 60 and 100-stamp mills at Millers Siding, with one 20-stamp on the West End property, which it is expected will be ready for operation by the 15th. In course of construction are the 20-stamp mill of the Macnamara Mining Company, and the 60-stamp plant of the Belmont Development Company. The future of Goldfield seems very promising.

It is stated that the Canadian Pacific Railway has secured a valuable water-power in British Columbia, which will utilize in the future for transportation purposes. The water-power secured is on the Adams river, which flows out of Adams lake and into the South Thompson river, near the west end of Shuswap lake. Exports have reported that it is capable of developing 100,000 h. p., at two points between Adams lake and its confluence with the south Thompson. The Canadian Pacific Railway it is stated has in view the generation of power for the electrification of a portion of its lines through the mountains. This step will not be taken for some years yet, of course, but the railway has secured the power with an eye to the future.

About Float.

Float is not a periodical. It is a book containing 86 illustrations all told, and is filled with sketches and stories of western life. It tells how a gambler cashed in after the flush days of Sandon; how it rained in New Denver long after Noah was dead; how a parson took a drink at Bear Lake in early days; how justice was dealt in Kaslo in '93; how the saloon man outprayed the women in Kalamazoo, and graphically depicts the roamings of a western editor among the tenderfeet in the cent belt. It contains the early history of Nelson and a romance of the Silver King mine. In it are printed three western poems, and dozens of articles too numerous to mention. Send for one before it is too late. The price is 25 cents, postpaid to any part of the world. Address all letters to

LOWERY'S CLAIM
During the 37 months that Lowery's Claim was on earth it did business all over the world. It was the most unique, independent and fearless journal ever produced in Canada. Political and theological enemies pursued it with the venom of a rattlesnake until the government shut it out of the mails, and its editor ceasad to publish it, partly on account of a lazy liver and partly because it takes a pile of money to run a paper that is outlawed. There are still 25 different editions of this condemned journal in print. Send 10 cents and get one or $2.50 and get the bunch.

Fit-rite

An Outward Sign of Inward Quality

The splendid appearance of a "Fit-rite" suit is the result of the careful, honest way in which it is made. A handsome outward appearance is of no value, unless it has the sterling material underneath to back it up.

It is the care taken in this particular that makes the "Fit-rite" a good suit all through. The hidden parts are given the same attention the surface receives. It retains its shape because the shape and style are built right into it.

Look over a "Fit-rite" suit and examine the quality of the material and tailoring. It is an honest effort to supply good clothes at a reasonable price.

Either call at the store or send us a post card bearing your name and address, and we'll give you a copy of the "Fit-rite Style Forecast," containing the latest news of fashion tendencies for the coming Fall and Winter.

TRIP IN WEST AFRICA

WOMAN'S JOURNEY IN WILDS OF DARK CONTINENT.

Mrs. Watherston Tells of Her Tash With Her Husband From Coomassie, Where the Rails End, Into the Uncivilized Lands—A Handful of Englishmen Govern Huge Native Population.

Mrs. Watherston contributes to the January Nineteenth Century a vivacious account of how she and her husband went to their "outpost of our Empire" in West Africa:

"Many miles from the surf-washed coast is a long ridge, rising out of a huge expanse of gently undulating country; on that ridge, is a European station, a little corner of our Empire, where a handful of Englishmen live and work, and govern an unthinkable number of natives.

"To reach it you must go by railway from Sekondi; and very early one morning in December, 1908, we started on the twelve hours' journey to Coomassie. Down at the iron-roofed station all was bustle and confusion; nearest the engine, the cars were full of natives, their bright colored cloths wrapped closely round them, against the chilly air of the morning — such a medley of women and babies, men and boys and girls, some strolling idly about, some dragging weirdly-assorted bundles from car to car.

"Nearer the end of the train smartly dressed colored ladies and gentlemen carried on somewhat stilted conversations in very indifferent English, as they stood about the platform or leaned out of the windows. The last coach was a special one, reserved for us; our 'boys' were settling in the luggage, arranging things in the tiny kitchen compartment, and putting out inviting-looking deckchairs on the observation platform.

"It was an entrancing scene to me, and only just at the end I turned away to take a last look at the sea, and listen once more to the boom of the surf. Then there was a clanging of bells and whistles, the shouted good-byes of the friends who had come to see us off, and the train moved slowly up the incline towards the mist-veiled hills that hid from me the secret of Africa.

"Coomassie is the last touch with civilization; there the railway ends, and ten days later we set on foot to do the last three hundred miles of our journey. I remember standing at the end of the broad road through the Zongo, waving good-bye to the men who had ridden out to wish us God-speed, and then, turning away from the houses and people we had only gone a few hundred yards when I found it was suddenly dark, and strangely quiet. The broad road had become a narrow path, where no ray of sunlight ever falls, and where growth and vegetation have gone on unhindered for aeons of time. The noises of the town, the sound of voices, all were gone, and in their place was a stillness which made me feel I must speak in a whisper. I have never lost my dread of the forest, though the first feeling of awe eventually wore off; it always tells me of the force and immensity of Africa, and while I admire I am afraid.

"For six days we trekked on, generally walking, but sometimes in our hammocks, and sometimes riding when the road was good enough, sleeping in tents at night, till gradually the forest grew thinner, there were little patches of country flooded with sunshine, and the narrow strip of sky to which my eyes had become accustomed changed to an increasing expanse of hard, relentless blue. Then one morning we came suddenly to the River Volta, the boundary between Ashanti and the Northern Territories, the line between forest and open country.

"After crossing the Volta it is all open country, and our marches began in good earnest. At a quarter to five my husband would sound his whistle, and somehow—I have never fathomed how—five o'clock would find us having breakfast in the middle of the compound, amidst the babel of shouting and scrambling which always accompanies the packing up and sorting of loads.

"Those early mornings were hours I can never forget, and one day especially has fixed itself in my memory. We were the only living things in the hush around us as we slipped into the grey before the dawn, and the clean soft air that came across miles of desert seemed to have a greeting for us. The grey turned to pale gold, I could see the dew sparkling on the grass, but still all was silence—the earth dared not breathe until the day had come. It came at last with a flush of tender pink, and then, growing bolder, turned to flame and crimson, kissed the clouds with the light, and whispered to the trees. The world was awake again, a myriad insects filled the air with song, and the birds woke echoes down the path we were treading.

"Five hours later the same world lay gasping in the fierce relentless heat, and our column moved slower and slower, as one by one each carrier put on his rough sandals to protect his feet from the burning ironstone.

"Evenings on trek are very delightful too; the welcome change to coolness and dark, the change of pleasant fatigue, and then at last, when all the camp was still and the 'boys' asleep like dogs on their little mats, we would go to our mosquito-netted beds on the far side of the compound, right in the open, and sleep like children, with only the gorgeous canopy of stars overhead, the open bush country at our feet, and the innumerable night noises sounding from near and far.

Psychic Phenomena

The vision of the Little Trianon is exciting worldwide attention among those, and they are many, who regard psychic phenomena with interest rather than with incredulity. This "vision" forms the subject of a book published by two English ladies who visited the Petit Trianon at Versailles on August 10 last year and saw there the Trianon of the eighteen century, not that of the twentieth. They found themselves surrounded by scenes which had not existed for over a century—terraced gardens, a chapel, a kiosk, a lake, a waterfall, a wood, all of which once were but are no longer. They saw and spoke to courtiers and servants. One of them declares that she saw the unfortunate Queen, Marie Antoinette, herself.

The publishers declare that they are satisfied of the genuineess of the vision, which occured on the anniversary of that fatal day in 1792 when the Paris mob sacked Versailles, while the Queen lay shuddering and watching from a little chamber, in momentary terror of death or worse.

Now, there are two sides to psychic phenomena. One is that of the various charlatans, palmists, mind readers, fortune tellers, the whole tribe of fakers who play upon the credulity of the public. The other is that of the research of great minds, such as Flammarion, Lombroso, Crookes and Lodge. These latter do not profess themselves able to trace out the being of these phenomena. But their researches point to the existence of an unseen world whose barriers are slowly giving way. The unbelief of an incredulous world is brought face to face with phenomena which are as well authenticated as they are inexplicable.

The Orient, especially, is permeated by mysterious powers, which are manifested in the Mahatma as in the street fakir. In some casss, in most, perhaps the fakir is a faker in the American sense—he is "faking" for dollars and cents. In other cases it is undoubted that money does not enter into the manifestation and the manifestor is truly a fakir, a mendicant priest. But such is the general distrust of such phenomena in the Western World that the word has passed into currency in this country as a synonym for cheating.

But the great religions of the world are founded upon a belief in mystic forces beyond the ken of science or reason and have their inspiration for man on unseen worlds through which and towards which mankind is moving. All cannot be a lie, all men cannot have been deceived in this way for age after age. For even today, when so much is known of material phenomena, the power of religion the world over is as great as ever.

The first essays of science strip from religion the puerile excrescences with which foolish zealots have clothed it. But the deep-seated beliefs are not disturbed, and the more advanced the scientist, the greater the authority of that science, the less are the credibility of those beliefs assailed. It is now considered to be unscientific to dismiss from thought as unworthy of consideration phenomena which cannot be explained. Gravitation may explain the genesis of a cosmos, but what explains gravitation.

Train Water

I wish here to call the attention of the Interstate Commerce Commission to a crying condition that calls for immediate action.

The sad fact is this: On most railroad-trains the water-cooler is located in the starboard corner of craft, adjoining the buttery. Often the cooler itself is inside of the pianola, and the faucet projects for the delight of the children who like to monkey in the slop.

Statistics show that ninety-seven and a half men out of one hundred, who pay their respects, when they emerge, stop at the cooler and caress the drinking-cup.

Now what is wanted is an order from the Intersate Commerce Straddlebugs, requiring all parties to tank up first and enjoy the arsenal afterwards.

In Illinois, Oklahoma, Kansas and other highly civilized States that have called in the public drinking-cup, a great shock has been given to the Jaybird, who on coming forth from the coopetaria, grabs with grimy hands for the drinking-glass, so as to leave the print of his observant thumbs. The guest of the railroad reaches for the holy water—but the cup is never there, and then he gazes off into space like a lost soul and says things unprintable.

Now that the Government is going to regulate us, let it be done right. Begin by separating the conveniences from the necessities, and then have the conductor pass out the White Rock liquid in individual communion-cups, duly certified, thus putting one over on the microbes.—Hubbard.

BOUNDARY MINES

The B. C. Copper Co. is unwatering the Comstock mine near Danville.

Last week the Greenwood smelter treated 11,947 tons of ore.

Last week the Mother Lode mine shipped 6,578 tons of ore.

In order to conserve its coke supply until more can be obtained from Coleman the B. C. Copper Co. has closed the Rawhide mine for a short time.

A map of Phoenix camp has recently been published by the department of mines, Ottawa. It is a work of exceptional merit, every detail of the camp being faithfully recorded. It takes in within its radius the Yellow Jacket, below the Snowshoe, on the east, a few hundred yards of the Greenwood wagon road on the west, the Bank of England and Bald Eagle claims below the War Eagle on the south, while the water company's reservoir marks the limits of its northern boundary.

The No. 7 mine has closed down. It is reported that a big strike of ore was recently made in this property.

The Elkhorn is shipping a carload of high grade ore to the Trail smelter this week.

The B. C. Copper Co. has taken a bond on the L H, a gold property in the Silverton district of the Slocan.

President Luther, of the Granby company, says that at the present market for copper, the company when operating again should be able to make approximately $50,000 net per month.

B. C. MINING NEWS

It is reported that gold has been struck within two miles of Hazelton

"We know that the Ground Hog Coal fields are 70 miles long by 30 miles wide" said Mr. R. C. Campbell-Johnston to the Herald, just after he and Mrs. Campbell-Johnstone had arrived in Hazelton, having completed the season's work and a twenty-six day tramp over a rough country.

Dr. E. Grobe of Ymir, has taken a lease and bond on the Nevada property on Porcupine creek, owned by the Royal Bank of Canada. He has had men at work for some time and has struck a body of galena ore that will average $50 a ton.

Thirty-six men are on the payroll of the Ben Bolt mine, near Stewart. Sinking and drifting is in progress, Application for a wagon road is to be made to facilitate the shipping in of machinery. Next spring Sir. D. Mann has in view the erection of a concentrating plant.

The Slocan Star, which has been idle for ten years, due to litigation, has been reorganised, and the Slocan Star Mines, Limited, has been incorporated to take over the management of both the Slocan and Rabbit Paw mines. The Slocan Star will be the fifth important mine in the Slocan district to inaugurate deep development. The leaders in this movement were the Standard, Rambler - Cariboo and Lucky Jim, in all of which it has recently been proved that the rich ore shoots persist to great depths.

On the top of the recent discoveries of mineral along the north shores of Shuswap Lake, comes the news of exceptionally rich ore in the vicinity of White Lake, a few miles from Notch Hill, says the Kamloops Standard. The ore contains gold, silver and copper, and extensive prospecting shows that the ledge is of considerable area. Claims have been staked by Notch Hill parties, and it is expected that work will be carried on during the coming winter. The property is within easy access of both Shuswap Lake and the C. P. R., which will materially reduce the cost of transportation to the nearest smelter.

The Babine Mining district which is tributary to Hazelton, is coming in for recognition more and more. The Islands in Babine Lake are highly mineralized and during the past summer good samples of ore have been brought in from several of the claims staked in that vicinity within the past year. On Wednesday another group of claims was heard from. Messrs. H. J. Macdonald and A. McDonald brought in samples of yellow copper taken from a property they staked which shows an immense body of ore. It is a low grade property but one that may be worked by steam shovels. It is low and no tram will be necessary.

The gold rush in the Ingenica country four years ago was recalled to mind when Messrs. Peter and Chris Jensen arrived in Hazelton after spending the spring and summer out there prospecting, says the Omineca Herald. These two old pioneers and prospectors went into the Ingenica country last March with two Indians and four dog teams loaded with supplies. They remained there all alone and worked hard. They did not see a living soul all the season until they came out and Peter said it was the most lonely time he ever put in and he has been in the Klondike and Alaska as far north as any white man. Messrs Jensen spent most of their time and did most of their work on the Ingenica and McConnel Creeks and went over them pretty thoroughly. They say that there is a big gold body in there some place, but as yet they have not located it. They got enough this summer to pay them well but they have not located the big property.

At the Queen Charlotte Islands hematite deposits are at the present time being investigated to prove their extent and while the locators are keeping the matter quiet until they have made fuller investigation they are satisfied that they have discovered a rich bed.

It is stated that the Canadian Pacific Railway is in the market for 50,000 tons of steel rails. This would seem to strengthen that the Canadian Pacific is pushing its new Western lines, to completion. Building as it is now nearly two miles of new track every working day in the year the C.P.R. is probably the largest individual consumer of steel rails on the continent.

Silver

The greater part of the silver produced in the United States is obtained when smelting lead and copper ores.

The greater part of the silver produced in Mexico comes from lead silver ores. These ores also carry some gold, which oftentimes is sufficient to pay for their treatment, although not in such quantity that they could be classed as gold ores.

The greater part of the silver produced in Ontario, Canada, is almost native, although associated with Cobalt and nickel minerals.

The first large silver deposit found in this country was the celebrated Comstock lode, in Nevada. The black sulphide of silver was at first thrown away by those who were washing for gold, and even broken up to obtain the free gold in the lumps. As soon, however, as an assay disclosed its nature, mining commenced in earnest The gangue in this deposit was mostly quartz and the vein has been worked to a depth of 3,100 feet, making it evident that the solutions forming the vein came from great depths. Argentite, or silver sulphide, contains 87.1 per cent. of siver and 22.9 per cent. of sulphur. It occurs in cubes and octahedrons, massive; as scales, coatings, and tree-like markings. It has a blackish lead-gray color. Its streak on porcelain has a lead-grey color and a shining metallic luster. It is partly soluble in nitric acid, and when in solution will silver-plate a copper strip. The mineral is as readily cut as lead; will flatten under the hammer, and is easily melted.

Other silver deposits were found in Nevada, although they were not remarkable, and it was not until 1878 that any bonanza silver deposits attracted attention. These were at Leadville, Colo., where the lead sulphides and carbonates were found in limestone adjacent to porphyry. In places very rich silver ore was found and often associated with it was gold. Closely following this were the Butte, Mont., deposits, which were in granite that had been cut by intrustive dykes, forming fissures that were afterwards filled by solutions carrying copper sulphides, gold and silver. The copper sulphides were weathered, leaving the gold and silver in great masses near the surface. The gangue in this instance is quartz, indicating that the mineral solutions came from below.

Following this discovery came the Mollie Gibson and Aspen silver deposits in Colorado. These mines were in limestone adjacent to porphyry, and like the Leadville mines, were contact deposits. Probably the next most noted silver deposit was found by a burro in the Couer d'Alene district, at Wardner, Idaho. The silver bearing galena seems to be as rich in the Bunker Hill and Sullivan mine at a depth of 2,100 feet, as at the surface. The mine is said to have paid over $7,000,000 in dividends since its discovery in 1885. It is at present the richest silver mine in the United States, and other silver-lead deposits are being discovered in the same district almost every year. The deposits are in a mineralized zone, having quartzite foot wall and an impregnated hanging wall of brecciated quartzite and schists that have been folded and otherwise distorted.—Mines and Minerals.

OPALS ON THE DESERT

Remarkable opal discoveries have lately been made in the Death Valley country and F. M. Myrick, an old miner of the desert, in company with two young prospectors from Los Angeles, have recently found opals which promise to start a rush into the country this fall, according to information which has been received here.

The rocks which Myrick and his companions have found are fire opals or white and red with the white transparent.

It appears that Myrick's long hunt on the desert is to be rewarded. For years he had prospected through the dead hills in vain for pay dirt and had about decided to come to Bakersfield when he made the strike of the opals. He will now remain in the desert. Bakersfield men are interested in Myrick's claims.—Californian.

A SAFE EXPLOSIVE

After 11 years of experimenting, B. F. B. Wright, former professor of chemistry at Harvard, has perfected a powder which, he claims, is three times as strong as dynamite, yet a child may play with it without danger.

To demonstrate the safety of the powder, Professor Wright put two ounces of it on a piece of cardboard. It immediately flamed, but there was no explosion. Professor Wright then dropped a bag of it out of a six-storey window to the ground, but it did not explode.

The powder will do away with all danger of explosions on warships and will prevent gun barrels from exploding. It cannot be exploded except by extreme heat.

Single Tax at Edmonton

The Hudson's Bay Co. have decided to place their land reserve at Edmonton on the market, and it will be at once subdivided. The company owns 1,000 acres of land within the city limits of Ednonton, which has hitherto been held from the market, thus causing considerable inconvenience in the building up of the city. The adoption of the single tax by the city increased considerably the amount of taxes levied upon this land, and the opening up of the reserve has now been decided upon by the company.

THE MEANEST YET

A farmer living in the West, in a moment of weakness the other day blew in twenty-five cents at a departmental store for a hat for his wife. On returning he was so overcome with remorse, that he went out to the barn and did the Haman act from one of the cross-beams. The hired man happening along just before the curtain dropped on the scene promptly cut the old hayseed down. He revived and apparently repented his rashness. At the end of the week he sacked the hired man for not untying the rope instead of ruining it by cutting it.

Jim Hill's First Railway

The first of the Jim Hill system of railroads has invaded Alberta, and three hundred teams are now at work on a line that will run from Calgary via Macleod, Pincher Creek, through the South Kootenay pass and connect with the Great Northern at Flathead, Montana.

Word to this effect was received in Calgary, and the Canadian Northern contractors, who are working on the grade of the new road which will prove of immense value to this city, expect to have 36 miles of railroad completed this month, orders having been received to rush the construction as much as possible. The section on which work has already been started is known as the Pincher Creek Gap-Macleod section, and it is also stated that work is to be commenced on the section of the line running from Macleod to Calgary within the next few weeks.

LONG LIVED MUSICIANS

A Dr. Roggers has been studying the effect of wind instruments on the life of musicians. The average life of the wind instrument artist is 63, while that of others is 62. Thirty-four per cent. of the former category attain 70 years. Performers on the flute, in Dr. Roggers' "echelle de longevite" reach on the average the age of 61, while the hautbois executant lives two years longer. Buglers go two years better, and the clarinet player lives till he is 65. He of the cornet only fails the allotted span by one year. The ophicleide artist beats them all. His time of life is from 75 to 80.—London Globe.

Nation Owns Minerals

In Mexico all mineral deposits are considered as the property of the nation, no matter whether on public or private land. In other words, ordinary title to land for farming or other purposes does not carry with it any right to the mineral deposits found on such land. Consequently prospecting for minerls may be done on private property with or without the consent of the owner of the land or surface rights. If the owner refuses to give his consent, however, a bond must be given for any damages that may result from prospecting or subsequent mining.

The Canadian Pacific Railway has started work on its new operations at Fort William and Port Arthur. The work for this year will consist chiefly in the erection of a huge new coal handling plant but in connection with the other operations there is considerable dredging to be done. The Canadian Stewart company has the contract for the building of the coal plant and it is stated that the appropriation for the work is in the neighborhood of one million dollars. The plant it is stated will take care of most of the soft coal assigned to the Company at the head of the Lakes, and it is hoped that it will be finished in time to handle some of next year's coal business.

HOW OLD PEOPLE

May Prolong Their Lives

At an advanced age waste is more rapid than repair. The organs act more slowly and less effectually than in youth. The circulation is poor, the blood thin and watery, the appetite poor and digestion weak.

We want to say to every aged person in this vicinity that Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic (without oil) will prolong life. It creates an appetite, aids digestion and makes good blood. In this natural manner Vinol retards waste and replaces weakness with strength, giving new life to the worn system.

If people in this vicinity only realized how Vinol invigorates old people we would not be able to supply the demand.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

LADY HENRY SOMERSET

A Leader in British Philanthropic Work

Lady Henry Somerset, president of the British Temperance Women's Association, and a leader in all philanthropic and social reform work, is a mighty influence for good, and has consecrated herself and her fortune to the service of humanity. She was born in England, the daughter of Earl Somers, for thirty years a member of the House of Lords and a man of noble character, who cared little for society, but spent his time in travel and scientific research. Ruskin, Garibaldi and Mazzini were his closest friends. He fell in love with the lady who became his wife through a portrait by Watts exhibited in London. It appealed to him as no living or pictured woman ever had; he sought the original, and after a romantic courtship, married her.

Lady Isabel, later Lady Somerset, was born in 1851, and even in the days of her girlhood found in social questions a theme of deep interest and was greatly influenced by the works of John Stuart Mill. After her presentation at Court she was caught in the social whirl and for years was a lady of fashion and pleasure, from which the present earnest, self-denying and enthusiastic worker for humanity was evolved in the days of sorrow, suffering and unhappiness through which she was soon to pass.

When she was twenty-one she was married to Lord Henry Somerset, second son of the Duke of Beaufort. The serious side of an unfortunate married life turned her mind to higher things; she helped those who needed it and was an angel of mercy and inspiration. She was interested in Biblical criticism, and in the maze of disputes and sophistries of many writers. One day while walking and thinking in her garden, she even doubted the existence of God. Then it seemed to her as if she heard an actual voice speaking to her very soul: "Act as if I were, and thou shalt know that I am."

Vividly impressed she went to her room, read her Bible, and in the morning told her friends she was going to retire from the world for a time. Taking her boy she went to Eastnor Castle, a beautiful place in the Malvern Hills, and fought out her battle with the Bible, realized her destiny, and conscious of the sins, shams and shallows of society, determined to give her strength to helping the world. With the poor at her own gates she started a temperance society, and gave an address in the school-room. Later she held Bible meetings in the billiard-room of the Castle, and thus began an unselfish work for good that has literally encircled the world in its influence and inspiration.

Entered according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by W. C. Mack, at the Department of Agriculture.
