VOLUME 21 — NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 7, 1882. — NUMBER 45

The British Columbian.

Wednesday Morning, June 7, 1882.

SPEECH

DELIVERED IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS ON THE 16TH ULT. BY J. A. R. HOMER, ESQ., M. P. FOR NEW WESTMINSTER, ON THE OCCASION OF THE INTRODUCTION OF SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES CONTAINING AN APPROPRIATION FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A SALMON HATCHERY ON THE LOWER FRASER.

During my short stay at Ottawa I find that it is the general opinion of the people of the eastern provinces that the resources of British Columbia are confined principally to the salmon fisheries. Our fisheries are extensive, but that is not our only source of natural wealth. We have no difficulty in finding a market for our fish and could dispose of five times as many if we had them. Therefore it seems highly proper that the Government should assist in developing this very important industry by establishing hatcheries which will enable us to supply the continually increasing demand. Among the other products of our province we have gold, silver, copper, lead, and iron. The gold and iron are being developed at the present time, but the other metals will remain undeveloped until cheap transportation can be afforded by the railway now under construction. There are also fertile valleys producing cereals, herds of cattle and flocks of sheep. A market for the cattle is found in the North-West Territory east of the Rocky Mountains and in Washington Territory south of the boundary. The province is belted with timber extending from the northern to the southern boundary, the markets for which are England and France for spars; Mexico, South America, Australia and China for assorted lumber, for which ports cargoes are leaving every week in the year. The coal beds are very extensive, and the quality is such that it commands a higher price in the San Francisco market than any other bitumenous coal. That market consumes 700,000 tons of coal annually, contributed by different coal producing countries of the world, and when British Columbia coal brings a higher price than any other in that market it is sufficient evidence of its superior quality. British Columbia is penetrated with rivers and its coast indented with harbors of the finest description, containing the best qualities of fish, which, with proper supervision, will become one of the most important industries in the province. This is the general character of the natural resources of British Columbia, which are now being developed by a comparatively small population of 50,000 people, who last year exported products of the value of $3,200,000, of which $1,400,000 according to the official report were products of the fisheries, being nearly one-fourth of the whole amount of fish exported by the Dominion. Last year British Columbia contributed to the Dominion revenue $680,000, of which $601,000 were contributed by the customs alone, it being more than one-third of the amount contributed by Nova Scotia with a population of 450,000, and about one-half the amount contributed by New Brunswick with a population of 350,000.

This House has already appropriated this session the sum of $150,000 for the fishermen on the Atlantic coast and $30,000 for hatcheries, making a total of $180,000 for the eastern provinces. We now ask for $4,000 to establish hatcheries, which in addition to a previous appropriation, amounts to $6,000 or thereabouts, which sum I think you will all agree is very reasonable when we consider the amount the western province contributes towards the fish export of the Dominion. Some complaints have been made that the Government are appropriating too large a sum for the hatcheries in view of the large appropriations for railway purposes in our province; but I think it would be a very unwise policy on the part of the Government to refuse to assist these young and growing industries in any of the provinces. I may, however, say that the Government have taken a course which will be satisfactory not only to British Columbia but to all the eastern provinces, in assisting these industries. We admit that we are deriving great benefits from the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and expect to derive greater benefits upon its completion; but at the same time we cannot admit that British Columbia is the only province to be benefitted by the extension of that road from the eastern base of the Rocky mountains to the Pacific ocean. We believe the eastern provinces will be equally benefitted if not more than British Columbia. The people of the eastern provinces do not appear to realize the important fact that upon the completion of the Canadian Pacific Railway to Port Moody the markets of the whole Pacific coast, as well as those of the Australian colonies, China, Japan and the whole of the Asiatic coast, will be open to their manufactures, and that with the very efficient and intelligent staff of commercial travelling agents in the employ of the Dominion mercantile community they will in a short time create an extensive and profitable trade with those countries, containing a population of 700,000,000 people. But to return to the fisheries, there are three distinct runs of salmon in the Fraser river, suitable for canning purposes. The first makes its appearance in the river about the 1st of April and continues to run in limited numbers until the 30th June. These are called Spring or large salmon. They again make their appearance about the middle of August and run in limited numbers for a period of six weeks. These two runs of fish are of a superior quality, and if they could be propagated in sufficient numbers for canning purposes the Government would realize a large amount of revenue, both directly and indirectly, from the increased consumption of dutiable merchandise by the persons employed in this important industry. The third run, or middle run, which is called the "Sockeye," makes its appearance in the river about the 10th July and continues for thirty days. Every fourth year this fish runs in large numbers: the second year they decrease one third, while the next two years they run in such limited numbers that they are not profitable for canning purposes. It is from this run of fish that seven-eighths of the fish are obtained for canning purposes. The large fish which we wish to propagate is the same kind which is caught in the Columbia river in Oregon and the Sacramento river in California. Last year the Columbia river packed 550,000 cases, the Sacramento river 200,000, and the Fraser river 160,000 cases, showing that the Fraser is only third in order of the three principal salmon producing rivers on the coast. Six years ago the salmon fisheries on the Sacramento river were greatly reduced; but by the establishing of hatcheries and a proper supervision they brought their supply last year up to 200,000 cases. If the hatcheries were so very successful on the Sacramento river, I do not see why they should not be equally as successful on the Fraser, and increase our catch to something near to what it is on the Columbia river. By establishing hatcheries and propagating the large fish it would enable the canneries to extend their fishing season over a period of five or six months, while now the principal fishing season lasts only about thirty days. It gives employment at the present time to a population of 3,500 for a period of thirty days, 3,000 for forty days, 2,500 for fifty days, and 500 for the balance of the year. It would do away with the difficulty which is experienced yearly in obtaining such a large number of persons to work so short a time. It would give employment to a large number of Indians which might otherwise become a burthen to the Government. It would increase the Dominion revenue very materially, and it is to be hoped that it would add to the prosperity of those who invest their capital in this branch of business, from which all classes of the community would derive more or less benefit.

Scientific Miscellany.

In some interesting experiments Dr. Liebenberg has shown that the presence of lime in the soil is absolutely necessary for the germination of many plants, while many others do not seem to reduire it at all.

The French physiologists Perrier and Poirier have found that, properly speaking, star-fishes have no blood circulation at all, as what has hitherto been supposed to be the heart in these animals is simply a gland.

It has been noticed that wines, especially when hard and acid, are improved in flavor by the passage of an electric current through them. The electricity is claimed to have the same effect as age, mellowing the wines by the decomposition of the bitartrite of potash.

The electric light was used in a recent search for three persons who had lost their way in an attempt to ascend a peak of the Alps. The use of the light was not successful, but the idea seems to have been a good one, and in many similar cases might serve to direct the wanderers.

The Central Bureau of the weather service of France receives daily ninety-seven telegrams from foreign parts, and fifty-two from France. From these telegraphic reports the weather probabilities are calculated for eight agricultural and four maritime districts, to which warnings are telegraphed. Eighty-two per cent. of the predictions thus sent out have been justified.

The question of the existence of earth-tides, or ossillations of the earth's crust corresponding to those produced in the sea by the attraction of the moon, is being investigated by a British commission. A pendulum is so suspended that its slightest motion turns a mirror and causes the point of light reflected by it upon a distant screen to move very perceptibly. The pendulum is proved to be in continual change of position for the motion of the reflected light is incessant, and so irregular that it is hardly possible to determine its mean position on the screen within five or six inches.

An expedition, under Edward Scheiffelin, a well-known Arizona explorer, has been fitted out in San Francisco for the purpose of exploring the valley of the Yukon river, Alaska.

The Way to Death!

These words might not inappropriately be placed over the entrance to the provincial lunatic asylum. Immured in that dismal prison-house, sane persons would be apt to become lunatics. That insane persons should either recover reason or retain physical health in such a place seems extremely improbable indeed. Confined in rooms with windows too high to admit of seeing objects outside, the poor unfortunates are doomed to pass long weary days in self-communing or in listening to the monotonous and incoherent jabberings of their fellows. Occasionally taken into the open air, they are allowed to run in a large, bare yard, surrounded by a high board fence and destitute of tree, shrub, flower or any object calculated to please the eye or attract the attention—pelted by the merciless storm in bad weather, and scorched by the broiling sun in hot weather. Inside and out there is nothing calculated to please the senses or amuse the mind. Are such conditions, is imprisonment in such a place, calculated to promote the recovery of a disordered intellect? Are they conducive to mental or physical health? Most certainly not. We are not aware how many, if any, are discharged alive. It may be possible for one's reason to return even in spite of these most unfavorable circumstances; but we should imagine the cases of recovery must indeed be rare. To the great bulk of those who have the misfortune to pass through that gate it must prove the way to death. What would we do? Take in a generous sweep of ground now lying waste, and have these unfortunates, or such of them as are fit for it, employed in reclaiming and beautifying it. Have it laid out it pleasure ground, or parterre, provided with shade trees and arbors. The very work of cultivating and beautifying these grounds would afford healthful recreation, and the after enjoyment of their fragrant beauty could hardly fail in exerting a beneficial influence on both body and mind. These would be but preliminary to establishing the "cottage system," attended with such happy results in Ontario. All this could, with proper management, be accomplished with very little expense, the most of the work being done by the inmates themselves. That the unfortunates who become inmates of that institution would be greatly more likely to recover under such improved circumstances and civilized modes of treatment goes without saying; and there would be the conscious satisfaction of doing all that can be done towards ameliorating their condition. As matters now stand, that institution is, as compared with similar institutions in the other provinces, a disgrace to British Columbia. We would not be understood as in the slightest degree reflecting on the management of the gentleman in charge. Under the circumstances, probably every thing is being done that can be done towards promoting health and comfort; but, under the circumstances, anything like proper treatment is simply impossible!

Agricultural Association.

We have to acknowledge the receipt of a quite presentable pamphlet containing the constitution and regulations of the British Columbia Agricultural Association, together with the programme and prize list for the exhibition to be held on the 27th, 28th, 29th and 30th of September next, and also a list of the prizes awarded at the exhibition held last year. Although hitherto almost exclusively under local management, the association has claimed provincial status, and it was as a provincial association that it obtained an appropriation of $1,000 this year. In referring to it on former occasions, we felt it our duty to point out that so long as it was under Island management and held its exhibitions exclusively there it could not properly be regarded as provincial. Since then some effort has been made to place it on a broader basis with a view to securing Mainland sympathy and co-operation. It has been agreed that the annual exhibitions shall be held alternately at Victoria and New Westminster, and another Mainlander, Robt. Stevenson, Esq., of Chilliwhack, has been placed on the Directory—W. H. Ladner, Esq., having previously been on the board. It must be admitted, however, that two out of fourteen is by no means adequate representation for this important section of the province. There is still far too much Victoria domination about it to take well on the Lower Fraser. These are, however, matters that can be righted afterwards, and considerations of that kind should not hinder our farmers taking an active part in the work of the association. The selection of Mr. Stevenson was a natural and proper one. He was amongst the largest and most successful exhibitors last year, the following prizes having been carried off by stock either exhibited by him or sold by him on that occasion to the parties exhibiting the same: 2nd prize for grey stallion, "Oregon Prince;" 1st prize for pair matched carriage horses (sold to Mr. Sehl); 1st prize for saddle horse; 1st prize for buggy horse (sold to Mr. Humber); 1st prize for ladies' riding horse (loaned to Mrs. Tillbury for the occasion). Let the farmers of this the queen agricultural district come forward, and they will not only make a creditable showing as exhibitors, but they will very soon be in a position to insist upon a due share in the management of the affairs of the association. How shall this be gone about? Let the Chilliwhack Agricultural Society, the only organization of the kind in the District, so far as we are aware, take the initiative, and let it correspond with the people here and in other parts of the District with a view to holding a public meeting or convention for the purpose of promoting general co operation. Nor is there much time to be lost. Between seed time and harvest would appear to be the most favorable time. In conclusion, it seems questionable whether the date fixed for the exhibition is not rather early to enable the farmers in this part of the province to do justice either to fruit or root crops; but that point can be discussed by the farmers when they get together.

Editorial Notes.

In an article by no means free from blemish, the Standard gives some wholesome advice to electors. Alluding to the numerous candidates seeking legislative honors, it advises electors to be on their guard, and not be led prematurely into making promises which they might have occasion to regret afterwards. It is to be hoped this sage advice will be acted upon in all the constituencies. The grand aim should be to select the very best available men, and the best men are not always first in the field. It is quite common at an election to hear the remark: "O, I wish I had known you were coming out; but I have promised Smith." Don't promise "Smith" or anybody else until you are in a position to choose the best of the lot offering.

When the proposition to make provision for an annual payment of $150,000 towards developing the sea fisheries of the Atlantic provinces came before the House of Commons, Mr. DeCosmos made a very sensible speech, urging Columbia's claim to its share of the money. Mr. DeCosmos got somewhat astray, however, when dealing with statistics. He placed the total take of fish in British Columbia last year at $1,454,331, whereas that was the value of what we exported. The total take is estimated in the official returns at $6,339,321- a very different amount. He was also very much under the mark in stating that "the produce of British Columbia amounted to nearly one-fifth of the total export of fish." The fact is the total produce of this province was very nearly equal to the whole export of the Dominion, our own included, while our export came very much nearer one-fourth than one-fifth of the total export. The statistics, as given by Senator McInnes and Mr. Homer were correct.

Probably in no session of the Dominion Parliament since the extension of confederation to the shores of the Pacific has more been done towards making Columbia and her immense resources better known than during the one just concluded, and of all the Districts, perhaps New Westminster has most reason to feel proud of her representatives in both branches of parliament. In our last issue we published a report of the able and practical speech delivered by Senator McInnes upon the important subject of the marine wealth of this province. This morning we publish a report of the equally able and, if possible, still more practical speech delivered on the same subject by Mr. Homer. Such speeches as these cannot fail to do good. Attentively listened to in the House and extensively read in the newspapers, they will do much towards making this Province properly understood; and to be understood is to be appreciated. It is not often that a new member makes such a creditable showing during the first session as Mr. Homer has done, and when it is remembered that the session was more than half over before he reached the capital, it must be admitted even by his opponents that the queen district of the Pacific province did not make an unwise choice. Indeed it is admitted, for already we find the organ of the faction that opposed him singing his praises.

THE LAST CHANCE!—The Floating Gallery is going away very soon, and you may not have such another opportunity of getting a really good photo.

POLICE COURT.—On Monday James Brennan, of the Pony Saloon, was brought up on a charge of selling liquor to Indians, and was fined $150.

RAIN, WELCOME RAIN!—Seldom was rain more welcome than that which set in early yesterday morning and still continues. It has extinguished the forest fires, watered the parched ground and, paradoxical as it may appear, caused the flood in the river to stay its rising.

A common, and often fatal, disease is Jaundice. Regulate the action of the liver, and cleanse the blood with Burdock Blood Bitters, and the worst case may be speedily cured.

FOREST FIRES.—Incalculable damage is being done by forest fires, millions of dollars' worth of valuable timber being destroyed. At Jarvis Inlet the loggers were obliged to seek refuge from the fire fiend by fleeing to the sea side. At Mr. Gillis' logging camp it was with difficulty the oxen were saved, on Thursday last. On the peninsula between here and Burrard Inlet the fire is still pursuing its work of destruction.

PERSONAL.—Hugh Watt, Esq., M. D., passed through this city a few days ago on his way to Barkerville, where he goes to take charge of the hospital. Dr. Watt comes from Toronto, Ont., where he has for some time been practising medicine. From a personal acquaintance, extending over ten years, we can unhesitatingly commend Dr. Watt to the people of Barkerville as a gentleman worthy of their fullest confidence and esteem.

SUDDEN DEATH.—On Friday Capt. Teaters, who sailed a schooner amongst the islands of the Gulf of Georgia, was bringing over to Burrard Inlet a settler with some sheep from a small island in the vicinity of Cowichan Gap. When off Point Gray, Capt. Teaters called the settler to take the helm as he felt sick. He was no sooner relieved than he dropped dead! The settler succeeded in bringing the schooner into port with its strange freight, and he at once reported to the authorities at Granville what had occurred.

A GENEROUS OFFER.—The Bishop of New Westminster has made an offer of $100 to the Churchwardens of Holy Trinity, towards fencing in the Church site,— conditioned, however, upon the work being done within two months. It is to be hoped the Churchwardens will see their way clear to avail themselves of this liberal offer. The enclosing and beautifying of the grounds around Holy Trinity Church would be in the nature of a public improvement, transforming an unsightly waste in the centre of the city into a beauty spot.

DOMINION ELECTION.—As will be seen by reference to another column, Mr. Homer is a candidate for reëlection. Mr. Homer was elected a few months ago by a vote of about three to one, and it must be admitted even by those who opposed him that he has done exceptionally well, considering that he only reached Ottawa at the fag end of the last session of a parliamentary term. Under the circumstances, the correct thing would be to send him back to Ottawa by acclamation, thereby strengthening his hands for future usefulness.

THE ELECTIONS.—An Ottawa dispatch of the 19th ult. says:—"The Clerk of the Crown in Chancery was busy all day preparing writs; and the instructions to the returning-officers have been printed. The proclamation proclaiming dissolution is expected to appear in the regular issue of the Canada Gazette to-morrow. The dates of nomination and polling are the 13th and 29th June respectively. Manitoba dates will be about a week later, and in most of the British Columbia constituencies it is expected that the returning-officers will be left to name their own dates."

THE LOST CHILD.—The mysterious disappearance, some nine months ago, of a two-year old daughter of Mr. Gavin Hamilton, at the 150 mile house, will be remembered. On the 28th ult. some of the remains, consisting of three ribs, lower, part of upper jaw, and portions of clothing (identified) were discovered in an open space about a mile from the house. It will be remembered that there was a most thorough search for the missing child, and it is alleged this very spot was examined. Although this melancholy find sets the fate of the child at rest, it does not solve the mystery of how that sad fate was reached.

PROVINCIAL AREAS.—The Globe of the 20th ult. contains a very interesting map and diagrams showing the relative areas of several of the provinces. Of these British Columbia looms up, nearly double the size of the largest. It has 400,000 square miles or 256,000,000 acres. Quebec comes next, with 210,000 square miles, or 134,400,000 acres; Ontario, 100,000 square miles, or 64,000,000 acres, but with the award, 197,000 square miles, or 126,000,000 acres. Manitoba (as recently enlarged) has 115,000 square miles, or 73,600,000 acres, but if given the territory awarded to Ontario, it would have 150,000 square miles, or 96,000,000 acres.

The Matsqui Dyke.

The present being the greatest freshet since the construction of the dyke, many anxious eyes are watching to see if it will stand. Mr. Sword, the enterprising projector, is watching it with intense interest; because he has a fortune at stake. Farmers in the Matsqui settlement are watching it with interest proportioned to the area of land on their farms to be reclaimed by it. Many farmers along the river are watching it because it is an experiment in which they are more or less interested. Some in Matsqui are watching it with an intensity second to none, because they hope to see it swept away in order that they may escape assessments! The result it is impossible to foretell. Should the river continue to rise as it has been doing, it is estimated that to-morrow it will have reached the 1876 flood mark, the highest ever known in the history of the country. On Monday night the river was one foot higher than in 1880, the next highest to 1876. The pressure on floodgates was 11 feet, being 5 feet more than they have ever before been subjected to. During the Derby regime they gave way under less than half the pressure. Present appearances would seem to justify the belief that, unless the flood far exceeds anything hitherto known, even the unprecedented flood of 1876, the work will stand triumphant, as every true friend of the country must wish.

BY TELEGRAPH!

SPECIAL DESPATCHES TO THE COLUMBIAN.

YALE, June 6.—The warm weather of the past week has raised the Fraser river to within a foot of the high water mark of '76. To-day the weather is much cooler, and as the rise for the past six hours has been very little, and the quantities of drift much less, it is hoped that the turning point has been reached. The wagon road between here and Boston Bar is under water in many places and it is impossible to estimate the damage at present. The bridge 4 miles above here is washed out. Yesterday the water was up to within 10 feet of the Suspension Bridge. Estimated damage so far to R. R. works, $10,000. No traffic can pass over road for a month at least. No reports from the upper country. The telegraph line under water 16 miles out.

HOPE, June 6.—River 2 inches higher than it was in 1876, and is now apparantly at a stand still. Drift wood constantly going down. The bank is undermining considerably. One Chinese house is full and surrounded by water; the house is tied with ropes to prevent its going down river, and the young fruit trees are nearly covered with water. Weather cold and raining.

CHILLIWHACK, June 6.—The water has now reached within eighteen inches of the mark of 1876 and still rising. The trunk road is submerged for miles and culverts floated off. All the low land is covered. It is difficult at present to estimate the amount of damage to crops but it will be very heavy. No loss of stock or damage to buildings reported. Traffic is entirely suspended. The Chilliwhack river is about at a stand, owing to the cool cloudy weather which set in yesterday evening.

LATER.

MATSQUI, June 6.—At nine o'clock this morning the planking of the gate of No 3 Slough succumbed to the heavy pressure of water and caved in, allowing water access to the prairie. Shortly after the water burst through between the floodgate and the bank on No. 2 Slough. Water now rushing through at terrific rate. At time of collapse water was within 20 inches of high water mark of 1876. Weather cool; threatening rain.

An Outsider's Opinion.

Mr. J. C. McLagan, who visited our Province last year, entertains great expectations respecting the future of Port Moody. In a four column communication to the Manitoba Free Press he says:—"In addition to Port Moody being the terminal point of the transcontinental railway and an immense shipping business consequently to be done, it will also become a manufacturing centre. All the raw material which form such important factors in the carrying on of manufactures successfully are to be found in prodigal abundance in close proximity. Coal at Nanaimo—some 40 miles distant—iron ore in inexhaustible quantities on the island of Texada, limestone and lumber at its very door, are such natural advantages to the establishment of a large manufacturing city in Canadian territory that if properly managed Port Moody can become a second Glasgow. Here will yet be manufactured all the rolling stock for the Canadian Pacific Railway, while thousands upon thousands of tons of rails, pig iron, spikes, &c., will be turned out of the great smelting and iron works certain to be erected in a few years. Ship-building and such like industries are likewise sure to be carried on."

The Flood!

"The oldest inhabitant" never saw anything like the Fraser river flood of 1876. Already it has its equal in 1882, and there seems to be a painful probability of this year's flood being as much greater than that of 1876 as it was greater than all others. In our telegraphic column will be found an account of the condition of matters at and above the head of navigation on the Lower Fraser. In the valley below the lower lands are submerged, some of the farm houses being invaded by the waters of the treacherous Fraser. At the Chilliwhack landing several buildings had to be moved back, large portions of land being sliced away by the swollen current. Back in the settlement, we extremely regret to learn, considerable damage has been done to crops and other property situate on the less elevated ground. At Sumas the condition of matters is no better, a considerable area being under water; and so on down till this city is reached, the low lands are covered. It is feared that the melting snows which feed the flood away up in the mountains are not nearly exhausted, and that if the weather should continue warm the river will rise much higher yet. Should such be the case the consequences may be very serious. As it is, we fear some of the farmers on the lower river must suffer severely.

The change which took place in the weather during Monday night, and the fact of the water having slightly abated, affords some ground for hope that the flood has reached its height.

Embryo Provinces.

An Order in Council has been passed by the Dominion Government, creating four new Districts in the North-West, doubtless destined in the not very distant future to attain the status of provinces of the Dominion, as follows:—

Assiniboine, which contains about 95,000 square miles, is bounded on the south by the international boundary, on the east by the western boundary of Manitoba, on the north by the ninth correction line, Dominion Land System Surveys, near 52nd parallel; on the west by a line dividing the 10th and 11th ranges township, numbered from the fourth initial meridian, Dominion Lands System. Qu Appelle, Souris River, Fort Polly, Fort Ellice, the Touchwood Hills, and part of South Saskatchewan are included in this.

The Saskatchewan, containing 114,000 square miles, is bounded on the south by Assiniboine, on the east by Lake Winnipeg and Nelson River, on the north by the 28th correction line, Survey System, and on the west by a continuation northward of the western boundary line of Assiniboine. It will contain Carleton, Battleford and Prince Albert.

Alberta, containing about 110,000 square miles, is bounded on the south by the international boundary, on the east by Saskatchewan and Assiniboine, on the west by British Columbia, and on the north by the 18th correctional line, near the 55th parallel. This district will contain the Battle, Bow and Belly river countries.

Athabaska, containing about 122,000 square miles, is bounded on the south by Alberta, on the west by British Columbia, on the east by a line between the 10th and 11th ranges townships, already mentioned, until that intersects Athabaska River, and then by that river and Athabaska Lake and Slave Lake to the 32nd correction line, which forms the northern boundary of the district, and is near the 60th parallel. This district includes the Peace River district.

City Council.

Council met on Monday evening. Present—The Mayor, and Councillors Curtis, Edmonds, Cunningham, and Johnston.

Applications were read from Drs. Trew and Sivewright for the appointment of a Health Officer.

A committee was appointed to confer with applicants, explain duties, and ascertain terms.

Several Committees asked and were granted further time to report.

Action on specifications for St. John street was delayed.

Several bills were disposed of.

The Clerk was instructed to obtain from Mr. Morrison certain papers and documents belonging to the Council.

The Clerk laid before the Council a statement of taxes in arrears, as prepared by Mr. Duncan, showing $6,435.78 to be due, and a resolution was passed instructing him to collect the same, and allowing 5 per cent. commission for collection.

Resolved, that the City Barrister be asked to report what Bylaws are legally in force.

Resolved, that the Council assume charge of the public cemetery (on Douglas street road) and that the Mayor appoint a committee to look after it.

The Revenue Bylaw was passed through Committee.

Council adjourned till Monday evening.

Communications.

A Liquor Bar for Trenant.

EDITOR COLUMBIAN,—A letter appears in the Churchman's Gazette, over the signature of "Piscator," bewailing the misfortune of there being a probability of a whisky shop opened at Ladner's Landing. What appears to trouble "Piscator" most is the natural consequence of a drunk, that the drinkers will not be able to earn their day's pay after a debauch. That event is by no means unlikely, but "Piscator" ought to know that the inhabitants have the matter in their own hands, as can be seen by S. 4., Chap. 106, Consolidated Statutes of British Columbia, which reads as follows:—"No license shall be granted for the "sale of wines, spirits, beer, or other "fermented or intoxicating liquor, in "any town, village or settlement, un"less a petition or requisition for the "granting of such license, signed by "at least two-thirds of the residents, "other than Chinese or Indians, over "twenty-one years of age, of such "town, village or settlement, shall be "presented to the Magistrate or Ma"gistrates to whom such application "shall be made for the granting of "such license." It may perhaps be argued that the Delta, being a municipality, is exempt from this restriction. Not so, however, for the next section (S. 5) says:—"Section four of this Act "shall not apply to the cities of Vic"toria, New Westminster and Nanai"mo;" so it is plain and clear that the above named places only are exempt from this restriction.

Now, "Piscator," go ahead, and let it be seen that you mean what you say in the Churchman's Gazette. D.

Richmond Council.

Council met at the Town Hall on Monday, June 5. Present—The Reeve, and Councillors Smith and Reid.

A communication from Alfred Janes was read and laid over till next meeting.

A communication from H. P. P. Crease was read and ordered filed.

The Revenue Bylaw was reconsidered and passed.

The Board of Works reported that over one-half of work on J. McMyr's contract was done to their satisfaction, and that John Blair and H. J. Kirkland's contracts were completed and the work accepted. Report adopted.

The following bills were ordered paid: John Blair, $350; H. J. Kirkland, $137; H. J. Kirkland, $280; Pearson & Co., $1.50; Robson Bros., $13.06.

Council then adjourned.

Dr. Suys is credited with the statement that Brown-Sequard once injected the head of a dog, after being separated from the body, with defibrinated and oxygenated blood, and at the moment when the injection of this blood had recalled manifestations of life he spoke the dog's name. The eyes of the head thus cut from trunk turned toward him, as if the master's voice had still been heard and recognized.

Our Story.

KITH AND KIN.

"Did he look like a gentleman?"

"Upon my word, I can hardly tell. Not a finished gentleman, though he had some of his grandfather's pride of bearing. But everything about him tells of the town, any one would have picked him out as belonging to a different world from ours."

"Are you obliged to call upon him?" asked the young man.

"No, I suppose not, but I chose to do so, though I am sorry for Mrs. Conisbrough and her daughters. If I find the fellow is amenable to influence, I shall let him see that the whole place would approve of his sharing his inheritance with them."

"I hope you won't burn your fingers, said his son skeptically. "For my part I am very glad not to have made the acquaintance of this redoubtable 'old John,' for, from all I can hear, he seems to have been a most odious character, and to have behaved disgracefully to these ladies."

"Well, I'm afraid there is not much to be said for him, in that respect, but after all a son is a son, Randulf, and I can pardon a man almost anything when it is done for a son or a son's son."

Randulf made no answer. He had been glancing aside, occupied in looking for the spot where he had found Judith Conisbrough, weeping. He had seen and recognized it, with the sight of it came the remembrance of her face. Unknown "sons and son's sons" appeared to him insignificant in comparison with a woman whose sorrow he had beheld, and whose individuality had profoundly impressed him.

They rode into the courtyard, at the back of the house.

"I hope he won't be away," said Sir Gabriel with an earnestness which amused his son. "It has been an effort to me to come, and I don't want to have made it for nothing."

He pulled a bell, and while they waited for a man to come, Judith Conisbrough walked into the courtyard, having come from the front part of the house. Neither Sir Gabriel nor his son knew of the presence at Scar Foot of Mrs. Conisbrough and her daughter, and were therefore proportionately surprised to see her there. She was going past them, with a bow, but Sir Gabriel, quickly dismounting, shook hands with her, and wished her good-day. She gravely returned his greeting.

"Are you—are you staying here?" he asked, at a loss to account for her presence.

"I am, at present, with my mother, who was unfortunately taken ill here, on Saturday."

"Dear, dear! I'm sorry to hear that. Then I fear we shall not find Mr. Aglionby at home?"

"He is at Scar Foot—Mr. Bernard Aglionby. Whether he is now in the house, or not, I have not the least idea," replied Judith, composedly.

"Ah! I hope Mrs. Conisbrough is not seriously ill," pursued Sir Gabriel, uncomfortably conscious that the young lady looked careworn and sad, and with a sudden sense that there might be more circumstances in the whole case than they knew of, complications which they had not heard of.

"No, thank you. I hope she will be well enough to be moved in a day or two. She is subject to such attacks. As you are going to see Mr. Aglionby, I will not detain you any longer."

She bowed to both father and son, and was moving on. Randulf's horse had been taken. He returned Miss Conisbrough's bow, and made a step after his father, in the direction of the house. Then, suddenly turning on his heel, he overtook Judith, raised his hat, and held out his hand.

"You looked so stern, Miss Conisbrough, that at first I thought I had better go after my papa, and not say anything to you, but—see, allow me to open this gate for you, if you are going this way—are you?"

"Yes," replied Judith, repressing a smile, "but if you are going to call upon Mr. Aglionby, do you not think you had better follow Sir Gabriel?"

"Directly—no hurry; I never expected I should have the good-fortune to meet you, or I should have ridden here more cheerfully. My father was wondering how we should get on with this man here. You know, he has the kindest heart in the world, has my father; he thinks Mrs. Conisbrough has been treated badly. There!" as Judith's face flushed painfully. "I have said the thing I ought not to have said, and offended you."

"No, you have not, but I think we had better not talk about it."

"Well, we won't," said Randulf, deliberately pursuing the subject. "But everybody knows that the aged r—rascal who lived here——"

"Hush, hush, Mr. Danesdale!"

"I beg your pardon—he behaved scandalously to Mrs. Conisbrough. Have you had speech from this new man? What is he like? Is he horrible?"

"Oh, no! He—I like him."

Randulf was scrutinizing her from under his sleepy eyelids. After this answer, he did not pursue the subject further. Judith asked him to open the gate and let her go for her walk. He did so, and added, with a slower drawl than usual, "and, Miss Conisbrough, how is your sister?"

"Which sister?" asked Judith, surveying him straitly from her large and candid eyes.

"Your sister Delphine," answered Randulf, leaning on the gate, in a leisurely manner, as if he never meant to lift himself off again.

"I have not seen her since Saturday. I had a note from her this morning, though—I want her to meet me. I won't have her come here, and that reminds me," she added, "that I want to find Toby, the farm boy, to take a message——"

"I am going home that way. Couldn't you intrust the message to me?"

"I'm afraid it would be a bore," said Judith, who perhaps saw as clearly out of her open eyes, as did Randulf from his half-closed ones.

"I never offer to do things that are a bore," he assured her.

"Well, if you really don't object, I should be very glad if you would call and tell her that if it is fine this afternoon, she must set out at half past two, and I will do the same, and we shall meet at Counterside, just halfway. I want very much to speak to her, but you can understand that I don't care to ask any one into this house, unless I am obliged, nor to send Mr. Aglionby's servants on my errands."

"So you employ your own most devoted retainer instead," said Randulf composedly, but unable to repress a smile of gratification. "I will deliver the message faithfully. Now the gate stands open. Good morning."

Judith passed out at the gate, and Randulf hastened after Sir Gabriel, the smile still hovering about his lips, and inwardly saying, "I'm glad I turned back. It was a good stroke of business, after I'd racked my brains for an excuse to call there, without being able to find one."

Mrs. Aveson received him with a smile and words of welcome, and ushered him into the state parlor where already his father and Aglionby were together.

Certainly three more strongly contrasted characters could hardly have been found, than the three then assembled in the parlor at Scar Foot. Each, too, was fully conscious of his unlikeness to the other. There was a necessary constraint over the interview. Sir Gabriel spoke in high terms of the late squire. The late squire's successor listened in courteous, cool silence, bowing his head now and then, and smiling slightly in a manner which the candid Sir Gabriel could not be expected to understand. Aglionby did not protest, when this incense was burnt at the shrine of his grandfather, neither did he for one moment join in the ceremony. When, however, Sir Gabriel remarked that Mr. Aglionby had been hasty and inconsiderate sometimes, the newcomer rejoined, "I am quite sure of it," in a voice which carried conviction. Then Sir Gabriel remarked that he supposed Mr. Aglionby had not lived much in the country.

"My fame seems to have preceeded me in that respect," replied Aglionby, laughing rather sarcastically. After which Sir Gabriel felt rather at a loss what to say to this dark-looking person, who knew nothing of the country, and cared nothing for country gentlemen's pursuits, who could not even converse sympathetically about the men from whom he had inherited his fortune. Mrs. Conisbrough was a tabood subject to Sir Gabriel. And he had just begun to feel embarrassed, when Randulf came in, and afforded an opportunity for introducing a new topic, and a powerful auxiliary in the matter of keeping up the conversation, for wich his father could not feel sufficiently thankful. He introduced the young men to each other, and Randulf appologized for his tardy appearance.

"I wanted to speak to Miss Conisbrough!" he said, "and stopped with her longer than I meant to. She had an errand for me, too, so I stayed to hear what it was."

It seems to me that you and Miss Conisbrough get on very well together," observed his father good-naturedly.

Bernard sat silent during this colloquy. What could Judith Conisbrough or her friends possibly be to him? Had he not Lizzie at Irkford? His forever! Yet his face grew a little somber as he listened.

"Do we, sir? Well, it is but a week to-day since I made her acquaintance, but I think that any man who didn't get on with her and her sisters—well, he wouldn't deserve to. Don't you?" he added, turning to Aglionby, and calmly ignoring the possibility of any awkwardness in the topic.

"I know only Miss Conisbrough, and that very slightly," said Bernard, very gravely, "She seems to me a most—charming——"

"You are thinking that charming isn't the word, and it is not," said Randulf. "If one used such expressions about one's acquaintances in these days, I should say she was a noble woman. That's my idea of her; exalted, you know, in character, and all that sort of thing."

"I should imagine it; but I know very little of her, said Aglionby, who, however, felt his heart respond to each one of these remarks.

Sir Gabriel found this style of conversation dull. He turned to Aglionby, and said, politely:

"I believe you have always lived at Irkford, have you not?"

"Yes," responded Bernard, with a look of humor in his eyes. "I was in a warehouse there. I sold gray cloth."

"Gray cloth," murmured Sir Gabriel, polite, but puzzled.

"Gray cloth—yes. It is not an exciting, nor yet a very profitable employment. It seems, however, that if my rich relation had not suddenly remembered me, I might have continued in it to the end of my days."

"Rich relation?" began Sir Gabriel; "I thought——"

"That I had others, perhaps?" suggested Bernard, while Randulf listened with half-closed eyes, and apparently without hearing what was said.

"Well, I certainly have a vague impression—I may be quite wrong—I suppose I must be."

"It is an odd thing that Miss Conisbrough also accused me of having rich relations the other day," said Bernard, and then changed the subject. The guests sat a little longer. The conversation was almost entirely between Aglionby and Sir Gabriel, but secretly the young men also measured one another with considerable eagerness, and the conclusion left in the mind of each concerning the other was, "I don't dislike him—there is good stuff in him."

At last they rose to go, and with wishes on the Danesdales' side to see more of Mr. Aglionby, and promises on his part to return their visit, they departed.

Bernard looked at his watch, paused, considered, muttered to himself, "Of course it is all right," and ringing the bell, asked Mr. Aveson if Miss Conisbrough were out, and if she had said whether she was coming in to dinner.

"She went for a walk toward Dale Head, sir, and she didn't say when she would be back," responded Mrs. Aveson.

"Thank you," said Aglionby, and with that he went out, and by a strange coincidence, his steps, too, turned in the direction of Dale Head.

It will cost you nothing for consultation, so please call and satisfy yourselves whether the Doctor understands your case. If he can cure you he will tell you so; if not, he will tell you that, for he will not undertake a case unless he is confident of effecting a cure.

Parties at a distance wishing treatment, by sending $25 and a minute description of their troubles will receive in return a full course of treatment securely packed so as not to excite curiosity.

DR. SPINNEY will guarantee to forfeit Five Hundred Dollars for every case of any kind or character which he undertakes and fails to cure.

P. S.—For diseases of short standing, a full course of medicines, sufficient for a cure, with all instructions, will be sent to any address on receipt of $10.
