Cotemporary Opinions.

From the (Toronto) Week.

The victory of Mr. Gladstone over his assailants in Parliament on the Egyptian question appears to be now assured. His escape from defeat is ascribed to the address with which he has divided the settlement into two portions, against neither of which, separately, can the opposition direct its attack with advantage. But the real secret of his strength is the hold given him over his party by the franchise bill, which no section of the Liberals, except perhaps the very conservative Whigs, would be willing to imperil, and the safety of which is specially important to that very section of ultra-Radicals, which would be most likely to bolt on the Egyptian question. Moreover, the prime minister has in his hand the screw of dissolution, of which the force, in the present uncertain mood of the constituencies, is very great. To his parliamentary power and strategy, however, Mr. Gladstone will owe the triumph which the cooler heads even of the opposition evidently regard as inevitable, though they are once more goaded into the breach by the uncontrollable violence of Lord Randolph Churchill and his train. If the terms of the settlement with France are anything like what they are believed to be, the nation cannot be proud of the result, nor is it at all likely, French character being what it is, that the concessions now made will avert quarrels and a renewal of the difficulty in the near future. Mr. Gladstone may well accuse the malice of fate which has set him, in his declining hour, to deal with diplomacy and war.

The chief event of the last week has been a squall in the financial region. The barque, however, which was struck by it had not only been carrying too much sail but carrying it in a way forbidden by all the laws of financial navigation. Had she gone to the bottom instead of righting, as it seems likely that she will, the catastrophe would neither have been unexpected nor undeserved. When a financial institution has machinery for doing indirectly what the law will not permit it to do directly, it is putting in jeopardy for illicit gain, not its own character only but those of all the sister corporations; and its managers would have little reason to complain if instead of receiving ready help when they had brought themselves into trouble by their practices they were to find the door shut against them in their need. Nothing of this kind can happen without shaking public confidence in the banks in general, and furnishing plausible arguments to the agitators who are always instigating politicians to lay maurading hands upon the money trade and to play tricks with the currency. Yet this community has as little reason as possible for mistrust. The manner in which our banks, and not only our banks, but our financial corporations generally, have passed through the commercial vicissitudes of the last ten years is surely most creditable both to the ability and to the integrity of the managers. Serious failure has hardly occurred outside of the French province, and even there it has by no means equalled either in magnitude or in turpitude the failures of the Glasgow bank and of other banks in that which is deemed the first of commercial countries. The character of our banks may fairly be coupled with that of our law-courts as a proof that in every department except that of politics we are sound.

The effect of Sir Richard Cartwright's speech continues; and the speech itself is still the theme of general talk, though the organs of the press on both sides are a little afraid of the subject. This is not due to oratoric brilliancy. Sir Richard is always a clear and strong speaker, especially when he is making a financial statement, yet he can hardly be called eloquent, nor was there anything very striking in his language or form on this occasion. But he had something to say. This it was that made his words come like rain to a thirsty land. With speaking oratorically excellent, with irreproachable sentiment, with keen criticism and invective in the forensic style, the party and the country had been feasted to satiety, and they had cried out like the clown in the ancient comedy, "Admirable, by Heaven; but what you are talking about I cannot tell." They can at least tell what Sir Richard Cartwright is talking about, whether his opinions appear to them admirable or not. He has given them a sensation like that which is produced by the long-expected tug of the engine among the passengers in a train which has been kept waiting till everybody is tired. Two things every political party must have, a leader who will lead it and a policy which the people can understand. The need of the second will never be supplied by mere criticism, however just, by indignation, however righteous, or by professions of superior virtue, even though they may be to some extent well founded. The country takes all this as the ordinary stuff of campaign speeches, yields at most a languid assent, and gives the leader who will lead and who at least promises to do something for the country a majority of two to one. It was by declaring for fiscal independence and a national tariff that Sir John Macdonald turned the tables on his victorious enemy and recovered power. If the Grits wish to oust him again they must let the country know what line of policy different from his they will pursue when they have the government in their hands. They must show that a change of administration will bring some intelligible gain. This, Sir Richard Cartwright seems to understand, and hence the remarkable success of his speech.

Chewing the Cud.

Every child living in the country has stood and watched this curious operation, and wondered what the lump was which he saw come up in the cow's throat, and then go down again after she had chewed it for a certain length of time. And perhaps he may have seen the anxiety and turmoil produced on a farm by the report that some one of the cows had "lost her cud," and as the result of this excitement he may have seen the absurd attempt to "make a new cud," in the hope that the cow would be by such means restored to good condition. There is in the minds of a large proportion of the people so little correct understanding of the true nature of "chewing the cud," that a few words concerning it may not be amiss.

A very large tribe of animals, of which sheep and cows are only familiar examples, are called in works of natural histooy Ruminantia because they all ruminate, they chew the cud. They do so because their peculiar organs of digestion require it; they have, it is said in the books, four stomachs, but the statement is not strictly correct, for the entire digestion is done in a single one, that which is called the fourth, the other three being only places for preparatory work. Their food is swallowed without being chewed; the chewing is to come later. When this unchewed food is swallowed it passes directly into the first stomach, to use the common term; but the drink which the animal takes goes straight past the entrance of the first into the second. These two serve only to soak and soften the coarse food. When the first has done what it can, the food passes out of it into the second, and then the cow or sheep is ready to "chew the cud."

The second stomach, while busily at work in soaking the food, keeps it in motion, and gradually rolls it up into masses, so that in the small upper part there is formed an oblong solid lump of the size that we recognize as the "cud." This the animal throws up into the mouth, and chews with evidently as much satisfaction as the same act of mastication gives us when we put the most delicate morsels between our teeth. When it is sufficiently chewed, the mass is swallowed and its place taken by another which had been rolled up in the mean time.

But the "cud" thus masticated does not return to the second stomach, from which it had come. It passes smoothly into the third, a place for additional lubrication, and then into the fourth, where the true digestion begins and ends.

This is, in brief, the whole story, and we see how naturally the chewing comes in; it is the same in our own case, only that it is at a different stage of the food's progress. And we see also what "losing the cud" really is. The cow or sheep is suffering from indigestion; the "second stomach" has failed to roll up the little masses suitable for chewing, and there is nothing which the poor beast can bring up. Of course, therefore, the one thing required is to restore the tone and power of the stomach; not to burden it with an "artificial cud," which would only increase the difficulty, instead of relieving it.—Scientific American.

"Nothing does so much harm to boys," says an old public school teacher, "as letting them run wild in the city during the summer vacation. The very best boys are demoralized by it. If they could only spend a few hours each day learning some industrial art it would be much better in the end for them and for the community. Many promising boys are ruined by one summer vacation in the city. The same may be said of girls, though, as a rule, they are better taken care of."

A New Jersey editor editorially complained of the indolent habits of hens when the price of eggs was so outrageously high, and the very next day one of his chickens laid two eggs and responded to an encore for several successive days. And yet some persons argue that the power of the press is waning!

A German savant has just discovered the remains of prehistoric men near Prerau. The report of the discovery states that "the interest of the remains is increased by the discovery of a lower human jaw under a gigantic thigh-bone." Probably some too loquacious pre-historic giant.

A youthful appearing couple have been detected in a strange conspiracy to obtain money. They visited different cities as single persons, obtained positions in society, courted each other, and were married. In every case the wedding presents amounted to handsome amounts.

Wednesday Morning, July 16, 1884.

Dunn, Wiman & Co.'s mercantile agency reports 752 failures in Canada during the first six months of 1884, against 687 for the corresponding period of last year. The liabilities of the failing concerns are nearly $2,000,000 in excess of last year. These figures are not encouraging, and confirm the belief that Canada has entered a period of financial depression which may not yet have reached its worst stage.

From Victoria papers we learn that the contract has been given to O. R. & N. Co. for a daily mail from Tacoma to Victoria. Many times the Dominion government has been asked to establish a mail route from Tacoma to New Westminster direct, but that very reasonable request has been refused. Victoria has had a tri weekly mail, which is increased to a daily; the mainland has to rest content without any direct mail at all.

Toronto, the largest and finest and most progressive city in Ontario, has just completed the celebration of her semi-centennial. The festival was conducted upon a most liberal scale, and the public demonstrations were extremely enthusiastic and creditable. The growth of Toronto in population and solid wealth has been quite remarkable. It is believed now to have a population of nearly 125,000, and every year it adds vastly to the beauty of its numerous attractions.

At the Maple Ridge meeting last Monday the provincial secretary made an important statement respecting the railway lands. He said an order-in-council had been passed at Ottawa last week authorizing Mr. Trutch to administer these lands, and he believed that under authority of this order the lands would be opened now without delay. We hope this anticipation may be realized. The people of this province have surely waited long enough for the Dominion government machinery to be set in operation.

At the council meeting on Monday night a committee consisting of the mayor and Messrs. Cunningham and Elliott was appointed to solicit subscriptions for the Nanaimo relief fund. In another column we publish an appeal issued by the central committee at Nanaimo. It is to be hoped there will be a liberal response to this appeal, and that needed funds will be supplied promptly. There are very few of our citizens who are too poor to give something, and the circumstances call for generosity.

The Irish agitators are always on the lookout for a row. It is reported that they have asked Parnell to issue an address to the Irish in America asking them to vote for Blaine, because they hope that through Blaine's election there may happen international complications which will bring grist to their mill. Dynamite and war and assassination are the methods proposed by these men, while Mr. Gladstone is engaged in the enactment of laws which have unquestionably given substantial relief to Ireland.

The Victoria Times questions the propriety of the local government continuing to reserve the lands west of Port Moody. We do not know the purpose for which these lands are being reserved, but we agree with the Times that if they are sold they should be sold by auction to the highest bidder. They are not agricultural lands, and if taken up would be taken for speculation. There are some lands in the reserve that would probably bring from $100 to $500 per acre, and it would be absurd for the government to sell them at $2.50.

Riel, it is said, has appeared again in Manitoba, and has been holding interviews with the discontented settlers. The purpose of his visit is not stated. It may not be far out of the way, however, to presume that his influence will be with the party which proposes to resist the powers that be. For his part in the Red River rebellion Riel never received the punishment he deserved. He was popular, however, although heartlessly cruel. It may be that in the discontent so widely prevailing throughout the north-west he perceives the opportunity to retrieve his fortunes, and his policy will be to keep alive and develop the spirit of rebellion.

C. P. R. Progress.

The Toronto Globe of the 5th inst. gives some interesting particulars respecting C. P. R. construction, obtained from Mr. Schreiber, chief engineer and general manager of government railways, who arrived in the city on his return from a visit to the north-west. He stated that there were now about 13,000 men at work on the eastern section of the Canadian Pacific road. About 9,000 of these are at work between Port Arthur and Dry Lick, and 4,000 between Bannerman and Sudbury Junction. The contractors are making very rapid progress, and have already completed over two-thirds of the heavy rock work. Out of the five tunnels on the section four will have daylight through them in about another month, and the other very shortly afterwards. Track has been laid 67 miles east of Port Arthur to Nepigon and 14 miles of track constructed at Gravel Bay. In addition to this, 140 miles of road has been completed and track laid between Bannerman and Callander. If the same rate of progress is continued during this summer and winter as in the past, the whole of the track on the Lake Superior section will be laid by May 1st, 1885. On the Rocky Mountain section of the Canadian Pacific there are now about 4,000 men at work, and track has been laid and completed five miles west of the summit of the Rocky Mountain range and grading completed an additional distance of ten miles. This makes a completed track 968 miles west of Winnipeg. On the Pacific section there are now 170 miles of track laid, and within two months the whole track will be completed on what is known as the Onderdonk contracts, leaving a break of about 276 miles yet to be completed. In an interview with General Manager Van Horne, that gentleman stated that the so-called arid region west of Moose Jaw has turned out to be the best watered of the whole western section of the road. This season the rains have been frequent and copious, more so than in the regions supposed to be more highly favored. The ten experimental farms owned by the Canadian Pacific Railway in this very section are all doing magnificently. Grain in that region is much farther advanced than in Manitoba, and there will be a surplus of at least 10,000,000 bushels of wheat for shipment this fall from the north-west. The progress of construction on the road was most satisfactory, and there was no room to doubt but that the road on the north shore of Lake Superior would be opened for through traffic at an early date in next year.

Sketch of Pinkerton.

The following is a short sketch from the life of Allan Pinkerton, the world-renowned detective of Chicago, who died the other day:

Allan Pinkerton was born in Glasgow in 1820, the son of a small tradesman. He married young and immediately after left for the western hemisphere, landing in Canada. A new post village in Bruce county, Ontario, is now named after him. The young couple's early struggles were a series of hardships, and after many vicissitudes Pinkerton came to this city where he engaged in the copper trade. He afterward moved to the neighborhood of Dundee, Ill., where he purchased a small farm. This was as near as can be ascertained about 1847. Pinkerton was then 28 years of age and it was then that he made his first detective ventures as an amateur. Horse thieves were on the rampage in those days and Allan Pinkerton after having been successful in hunting down a rascal who had stolen one of his horses, was employed by neighbors until his reputation reached the adjoining counties. What gained him a reputation all over the State, and even further, was in exactly the same line. At that time there was very little ready money in the country districts in the northwest and this scarcity was partially supplied by the checks of the Milwaukee Fire and Marine Insurance Co. (now Mitchell's bank), which were crude and easily imitated. Pinkerton suffered by the forgeries, and he succeeded in hunting down one of the forgers—Gray, a Vermont man. The merchants of the country employed him to run down the other forgers and Pinkerton succeeded in that. He was then invited to come to this city, followed the invitation and was made deputy sheriff of Cook county. This was in 1849, and in the same year Pinkerton received the appointment as special agent of the treasury under Secretary Guthrie. In this, and also in the position of mail agent, he distinguished himself by numerous brilliant pieces of detective work.

The feat which gave Allan Pinkerton a national reputation was to conduct Abraham Lincoln safely through Baltimore to the inauguration in Washington. Pinkerton knew of the plot to assassinate the president-elect in Baltimore, which was then completely in the hands of a rebel mob. Riotous scenes and attacks upon federal troops were the order of the day. It was said, though the story was speedily denied, that Pinkerton accomplished his hazardous task with the aid of one of his female operatives, who occupied the same seat in the car as the president, who wore a bonnet with a thick veil, which completely concealed his well-known features. A shawl thrown over the knees gave "Old Abe" the appearance of an elderly lady, as whose companion posed Pinkerton's lady detective. The latter is buried in Rose Hill Cemetery, where a space is reserved for the Pinkertons and their employees. The graves are decorated once a year. Allan Pinkerton, although to all outward appearances a cold and unsympathetic man, never forgot a friend or those who served him faithfully.

During the war Pinkerton entered the secret service of the government, and was the trusted agent of Lincoln, Stanton, McClellan, Halleck, McDowell, Sherman and Grant. Previous to the war he was a staunch abolitionist, and sustained confidential relations with John Brown and others in the underground railway.

The first established agency was begun in this city in 1855. Beginning with a handful of trusted employees, Allan Pinkerton steadily increased his business until there are now "Pinkerton Agencies" in all the principal cities of the Union, employing thousands of men and women in every state of the Union. Contrary to the maxim that "it takes a thief to catch a thief," often illustrated in the workings of municipal police departments, Allan Pinkerton always refuses employment to any one whose character is not absolutely unimpeachable. The various agencies at present employ about 200 first-class detectives, men and women, whose pay ranges from $5 a day to $5,000 a year.

Allan Pinkerton is a man who knows no fear, and numerous are the exploits in which he took his life in his own hands, figuratively speaking. On one occasion in Detroit, he was so severely handled by his adversaries that his life was despaired of. A partial lameness remained to the last as the result of the bloody encounter. He was a man who detected at once what qualities there were in a person that came under his observation. A striking illustration of this fact is the career of McParlan, the great detective in the Molly Maguire cases. McParlan was a coachman in the employ of a merchant who resides on Laflin street. The stables of this gentleman joined those of Pinkerton on Monroe street, and "the old man," then deeply involved in the study of the Molly Maguire cases, came to the conclusion that "Mac" was his man. He engaged him at a high salary, instructed him personally for hours every day, and finally turned him over to the Philadelphia agency, which had the special management of this great case.

Other brilliant feats of Pinkerton's men under old Allan's personal supervision can be but briefly touched upon at this time. There was the arrest and conviction of August Stuart Byron and of a young man claiming to be a nephew of Admiral Napier. These men wrecked a Michigan Southern train and robbed the mails of a large amount of money. Pinkerton has lost a great many good employees in his dangerous work. Five lost their lives in capturing the James brothers in Missouri. The Reno brothers gang at Seymour, Ind., was also broken up by Pinkerton. Then there was the capture of the Bidwell brothers for forgery on the Bank of England; Roberts and Gleason, the bond forgers; the apprehension of the Northampton Bank breakers, and a host of cases in the interest of railroad, bank and express companies. The Pinkertons have never laid their hands on any case that merely involved a scandal.—Chicago Herald.

BLUE RIBBON CONCERT.—To-night the Blue Ribbon Club will give a concert in the Skating Rink, beginning at 8 o'clock. The programme, we are informed, embraces a number of fine selections, and there will be refreshments consisting of ice-cream, coffee and cakes. Admission, 25 cts.

THE LUMBER TRADE.—Owing to an over production of lumber all the large mills on Puget Sound will close down one week in this month and one week in August. The Tacoma Mill company will consequently close down with the rest of them for one week during this month and one week next month, but even with this time lost they will be able to produce a large amount of lumber. It appears that a large quantity of lumber has accumulated at San Francisco, which has caused the price to fall considerably. The general opinion seems to prevail that the demand will improve in the fall, especially in foreign orders, when the mills on Puget Sound will commence running on full time.—Ledger.

POLICE COURT.—On Saturday a man named Michael Doutney came up before Mr. W. D. Ferris, J. P., on a charge of being drunk. He said he had come down the railway to Port Moody two or three days ago, had two drinks at the Caledonia Hotel, but had neither made a disturbance nor been uncivil to any one. He was sitting quietly in front of the hotel when Constable Sharpe arrested him and put him in the lockup. He was then brought over to this city and put in gaol. For two days he had been in custody and unable to obtain a hearing. The court asked the constable if there was anything against the prisoner beside being drunk. The constable said no, and the prisoner was discharged. Constable Sharpe asked permission to explain why he had brought the prisoner to this city. He arrested him at Port Moody and asked Mr. McGillivray, J.P., to fix a time for the trial, but Mr. McGillivray declined to hear the case at all. The constable then went for Mr. Butchart, J.P., but he could not be found. There was no alternative, therefore, but to bring him over to this city.—Constable Wiggins then produced Thos. Leihy, a respectable looking man, and stated that he had been acting so strangely at the Occident Hotel that he was taken to the gaol for safe keeping. Leihy was dumb, and stated in writing that he had lost his speech the night previous, and was unable to utter a word. In reply to questions put to him by the court, he stated that he had been working on the Granville road; had no friends in this country; if allowed to go he was quite capable of taking care of himself. There being no charge against him the court dismissed him, for which he wrote a very nicely-worded card of thanks. If this man's loss of speech is real, of which there seems no ground for doubt, the case is quite peculiar. Yesterday morning James Kennedy was up on a charge of breaking windows and other foolishness near the Cleveland Hotel, and got $20 or 2 mos.

CITY COUNCIL.—Council met on Monday night. Present, the mayor and Couns. Johnston, Cunningham, Curtis, Elliott, and Hendry. Among others, a communication was received from the secretary of the Nanaimo relief committee, asking the corporation to assist in raising funds. On motion $100 was granted to the relief fund, and the mayor and Couns. Cunningham and Elliott were appointed a committee to solicit subscriptions. The following accounts were presented: T. R. Pearson & Co., $3; W. Blackie, $40.83; Jno. Wiggins, $10; Jas. Cunningham, $26.75. Capt. Peele was appointed returning officer for the sale by-law. On motion it was ordered that Daggett's tank be repaired and raised to level of street if necessary. The clerk was instructed to purchase a city clock. Tenders were asked for a sidewalk on south side of Agnes st. from Douglas to Ellice st. The clerk was instructed to notify property holders to construct a sidewalk on south side of Agnes st. from Mary to Douglas sts. The council adjourned till next Monday night.

Farewell Social.

On Monday night a farewell social was held in the lecture-room of the Methodist church for Rev. E. Robson, who will shortly leave for Nanaimo. There was a large attendance, and refreshments were provided by the ladies. During the evening Mr. D. S. Curtis, on behalf of the congregation, read the following address:

BELOVED PASTOR.—It is with feelings of sorrow that we see the time drawing near which takes you from us. During the four years you have spent among us we have ever found in you a faithful and laborious pastor, a kind and sympathising friend. In times of festivity and joy you have rejoiced with us, and in dark days of bereavement and trouble your tears have mingled with ours. We feel that it would be out of place to multiply words on this occasion, but as we say "Farewell" we ask you to accept this purse as a token of love and respect from your people We would assure you also that our good wishes will follow you to your new home, and our prayers will go up to God that He may abundantly bless you in your labors by giving you many "souls for your hire;" and though we may never again all meet on earth, as we do to-night, may God grant us a happy meeting beyond the clouds when our work here is done. (Signed) C. G. MAJOR, Recording Steward, on behalf of the congregation.

With the address Mr. Curtis presented a purse containing about $200. The Rev. Mr. Robson replied, thanking the congregation for their good wishes and generous liberality. The evening was very pleasantly spent in friendly intercourse, interspersed with music. We understand that the rev. gentleman expects to leave for Nanaimo about Friday of next week.

Lorne College.

The closing exercises of this school were held on Friday evening in the Drill Shed. Owing to a violent rain storm the attendance was not as large as it would probably have been under more favorable circumstances. At 8:30 the chair was taken by his lordship the Bishop of New Westminster, while on his left was seated the Rev. C. J. Brenton, principal of the school. The Bishop, after a few preliminary remarks, asked the principal to read his report. In reply he said that, owing to the delay caused by the storm, he would not detain the audience with a lengthy report. Though the school opened in November last, two months later than the usual fall term, yet all the available room in the boarding house had been soon filled. Twenty pupils had availed themselves of the benefits of the school, and the general health of the boys had been excellent. He believed a spirit of labor and healthy emulation had been aroused among the pupils, and from the reports of the examiners, the Ven. Archdeacon of Columbia, the Rev. Mr. Shildrick, and Mr. Peaske, who expressed themselves highly satisfied with the examinations, which were conducted in writing, he felt the school might hope for a successful future. There were boys who had labored faithfully, and as a reward they had been successful in winning the valuable prizes that were to be distributed during the evening. He felt that a spirit of healthful competition should be encouraged and suitably rewarded—that he, who as a boy gained prizes, would, when a man, in all probability, win some of the prizes of life, and that the conferring of prizes in public would be a strong incentive to hard work in the future.

The result of the examinations was that G. B. Nelson stood at the head in the collegiate department, closely followed by R. McBride. In the preparatory school Fred Alexander stood first and W. H. Edmonds second.

The following programme was then rendered: "What I live for," poetical recitation by Dunstan Dickinson; "Labor," essay by Henry L. Edmonds; "Virgil," quotation in Latin by R. McBride; "Economy of Time," essay by C. V. Smith; "Parting of Marmion and Douglas," by Ward Bell; "Riding on the Rail," poetical recitation by Archie Trew; "Formation of Good Habits," essay by Fred. Alexander; "Attraction," by Eddie McBride; "Charge of the Light Brigade," by Perley Brenton; "Advantages of Studying Latin and Greek," essay by G. B. Nelson; "Advice to Boys," essay by W. Humphries Edmonds.

The Bishop then distributed the prizes as follows:

G. B. Nelson, the choir prize, a complete set of Dickens' works.

G. B. Nelson, the Latin prize, two volumes of Chamber's Encyclopedia of English literature.

C. V. Smith, the scripture prize.

These books were donated by the Bishop.

R. McBride, the Archdeacon's prize, a volume of Æsop's Fables.

W. H. Edmonds, the second Latin prize, two volumes of the poets, the gift of the Rev. R. C. Whiteway.

C. V. Smith, the mental arithmetic prize, a large and handsome album, the gift of the Rev. Mr. Horlock.

Henry Edmonds, a prize in written arithmetic, Tennyson's poems, the gift of Mrs. Springer.

Dunstan Dickinson, the junior Latin prize, a writing desk, from Dr. Trew.

All the books were in expensive and elegant bindings.

At 10:30 the proceedings closed with three rousing cheers for the Bishop, and the Principal of Lorne College.

Maple Ridge Meeting.

AN IMPORTANT GATHERING OF SETTLERS.

On Monday afternoon, according to announcement, a meeting of the people of Maple Ridge was held at the school house to discuss public matters. It is well known to most of the readers of THE COLUMBIAN that last year the people of this important municipality differed so widely respecting the location of public roads that very little work could be done during the season. The meeting on Monday was called to arrange, if possible, a scheme of road work which would meet with general favor. The hon. provincial secretary and Mr. Geo. Turner, C. E., were present by invitation, and there was a large attendance of representative men from various parts of the settlement. At 5:10, on motion of Mr. Webster, the reeve took the chair, and Mr. Laity was appointed secretary. The reeve stated that there had not been sufficient time for a meeting of the council, and an address had been hurriedly prepared, which he would ask the secretary to read. It was as follows:

ADDRESS OF WELCOME.

TO THE HON. JOHN ROBSON:—Sir,—We, the reeve and council of Maple Ridge municipality beg to tender our thanks to you for coming amongst us at this important time to discuss matters relating to the interests of the municipality. We would also embrace this opportunity to express our approval of the policy of the present government, especially as relating to expenditure on remunerative public works throughout the province. (Signed), HENRY DAWSON, Reeve; W. J. Harris, T. Haney, Jno. Laity, Wm. Isaac, councillors. In reply the provincial secretary said he was very much gratified at the expressions contained in the address, particularly the last part of it which endorsed the government policy and expenditure on roads. It was particularly gratfying in the present circumstances, and coming from Maple Ridge. Before saying more he thought it would be better first to hear the report of the engineer and then discuss the road question. Mr. Turner, C. E., then presented and explained his report. It recommended that the $1000 appropriated by the government be expended on a road leaving the front road at Kanaka Creek and proceeding eastward in the direction of Stave River. This, he considered, would be the best route for a trunk road, and would afford an avenue by which nearly all the settlers could reach the front. In his opinion it was the road that would do the greatest good to the greatest number.

A LIVELY DISCUSSION

followed, in which Messes. Webster, Dockstader, Hedge, Smedley, Harris, Trembath, and others took part. As there seemed to be a wide difference of opinion, Hon. Mr. Robson said he hoped they would come to some agreement now as to what road should be built so that the government would be able to go on with the work. He reminded them that they had already lost one year through disagreement, and it would be in the interest of the municipality that a settlement be reached at once. If they would throw aside their differences and pull together harmoniously he might say that the government would not stop with the expenditure of this $1000. But the government did not want to build a road which might be so distasteful to the people that they would refuse to travel on it! They must be perfectly sure of the road, for he didn't want them to adopt a route and find, on his return to Victoria, a stack of letters protesting against it. On motion of Mr. Webster Mr. Turner's report was adopted, with only two dissenting votes. The provincial secretary then wished to know whether they wished the government to spend this money, or to hand it over to the council. After some discussion it was decided by a vote of 19 to 8 that the money should be expended by the council. The provincial secretary said he was told the other day at Langley that if the government gave $500 towards a road across the prairie the municipality would give $500 more, and he had promised to meet them on that condition. It seemed, however, that the road would cost $1500. If they could devise any way out, the government's offer would remain good. He was very glad the people had decided to adopt Mr. Turner's report and pull together. Two men in a boat, rowing in opposite directions, could make no progress. He must say the people of Maple Ridge had been very much like this. They had all heard of the

BUNDLE OF STICKS.

While the sticks kept together they couldn't be broken, but when separated they were weak and of littleuse. When he came here two years ago to solicit their votes he regarded Maple Ridge as one of the pet settlements of the district. He knew they had the right sort of stuff in their land, and he hoped the settlers had the right sort of stuff too. He confessed that he had been grievously mistaken. One of the first things they did was to send down what seemed to him an influential petition asking the government to spend $1000 on a certain road under direction of Mr. Dockstender. This petition was strongly endorsed by his calleague Mr. Orr; but the government had no sooner made arrangements to carry out the prayer of the petition than down came a large sized protest. From that day to this, as sure as night followed day, no request had ever come from Maple Ridge without being followed by protests and counter protests. And when the government came to examine these counter petitions it was found that the same names appeared on both! The government was completely puzzled, and under these circumstances, much to his regret, found itself unable to carry on any public improvements in the settlement. He asked them to let the past be forgotten, and to become a bundle of sticks. Let each of them look beyond his own farm and his own barn-yard, and remember that the prosperity of one's neighbor was the prosperity of oneself. They were here to stay, and he asked them if they could reasonably look for prosperity so long as they continued quarrelling and fighting each other. He hoped they would also look even further, and remember that there is a place and a life beyond. If they spent their lives here in quarrelling, when they reached the other shore he supposed the first thing that might occur to them would be to take each other by the the throat and have a general shaking up! The reputation of Maple Ridge had gone over the whole district, and this municipality had been held up as

A WARNING TO OTHERS.

He had heard some people in another municipality say, "Take care, or you'll get into the same fix as Maple Ridge!" They had a fine location, which was being opened up and improved by railway and other communication, and he hoped they would consider the happiness of themselves and families, and the future of their settlement, and lay aside these petty jealousies and disputes. It was absolutely necessary that concessions should be made for the general good. Concessions were one of the fundamental principles of all society. He would be exceedingly glad if from this time they were to turn over a new leaf, and he could assure them the government would do all it could to help forward needed improvements. The government would probably not limit its appropriations to the $200 already promised, if the people manifested a disposition to unite and assist in carrying on improvements. The speaker then referred to the general policy of the government, and contrasted it with the policy pursued by their predecessors, and concluded by saying that he would be looking anxiously to see whether the compact of peace now entered into would be lasting. The address was frequently interrupted by hearty cheers, and the hon. gentleman sat down amid great applause. In reply to Mr. Howison he said the government had done all it could to have the railway lands opened, and he must say that the Dominion authorities had been very dilatory. After a great deal of negotiation he was glad to state that an order-in-council had been passed at Ottawa last week, authorizing Mr. Trutch to administer these lands, and he hoped there would now be no more delay. On motion of Mr. Webster, seconded by Mr. Harris, a hearty and unanimous vote of thanks was given to the provincial secretary, the entire audience rising and cheering lustily. The meeting adjourned at 7 o'clock, the people generally expressing great satisfaction with what had taken place.

Almost every person has some form of scrofulous poison latent in his veins. When this develops in scrofulous sores, ulcers, or eruptions, or takes the form of rheumatism, or organic diseases, the suffering that ensues is terrible beyond description. Hence the gratitude of those who discover, as thousands yearly do, that Ayer's Sarsaparilla will thoroughly eradicate this evil from the system.

SAVONA, July 15.—Savona's bridge was finished to-day; 500 cattle passed over it yesterday; people are greatly pleased at the completion of the work. Mr. Onderdonk and party arrived on Saturday and left by the str. for Kamloops to-day. Mr. Hagan, with the Sentinel outfit, arrived on Saturday and left by Monday's steamer for Kamloops.

YALE, July 14.—Yesterday (Sunday) train No. 5, when about a mile and a half wear of North Bend on its way to Lytton, ran off the track. Engine No. 6 went off on the river side and turned over on its side, the smoke stack stack and cab lying over the river bank. The tank turned round, and one car was smashed. Very little namage was done, and no one was injured. The engineer and fireman saved themselves by jumping. It is reported that the accident was caused by a boulder which had rolled down on to the track. The train proceeded to Lytton about noon to-day.

From Okanagon.

(Correspondence of the Columbian.)

OKANAGON, July 3.—The Bishop and Mrs. Sillitoe arrived last week and are making arrangements for the opening of a new parish; the parsonage will be located in Spallumcheen.—Mr. Jas. Miller, of New Westminster, has passed through via Hope, on his return trip from Winnipeg and the Northwest. He purchased a horse in Calgarry and rode over the C.P.R. to the mouth of Eagle river. His is the first horse to cross the Selkirks on the line of the C.P.R. Mr. Miller reports surveying parties all along the line. The old trail by Colville and Kootenay will now be discarded for this much shorter route. Haying commenced about the middle of June, but has been much retarded by rain; however no one is grumbling, as it is a welcome visitor. Crops are looking well, and should they be harvested in good order the farmers will salt down some of the needful, as prices are bound to be high this season.

From Cariboo.

(Correspondence of the Columbian.)

BARKERVILLE, July.—At the recent annual school meeting Jonathan Nutt, Esq., was elected to the vacant seat on the trustee board. The present teacher, Mr. Stirling, having resigned, Mr. Dannerman, an experienced teacher lately from Ontario, has been engaged and will commence his duties after vacation. The hospital meeting passed off quietly under the management of the present board of directors. The affairs of the hospital are in a flourishing condition. All the members were re-elected—Mr. Stone for Quesnelle, Mr. Dunn for Stanley, and Messrs. Rogers and Nason for Barkerville. Mr. Bowron represents the government. The surgeon reported two deaths, both following severe accidents. Two cases of melancholic mania having occurred during the year and another in his private practice, Dr. Watt took occasion to advise miners to avoid as much as possible a too lonesome mode of life, the brooding upon real or fancied ailments, and especially the resort to patent nostrums and specifics—a habit of the injurious effects of which many instances might be cited in the history of our mining camps. Of mining news all that need be said is that since the rain water is abundant and the prospects of a good harvest from the hydraulic claims has not been better for several years. The first cases under the desecration of graves act came up at Quesnelle the other day before Justices Barlow and Nutt, when four Chinamen were fined $10 each and costs for disinterring the bodies of their countrymen. The coroner was applied to for permission to remove the bones, but declined to give it and application was made to the provincial secretary.

Nanaimo Relief Fund.

TO THE PUBLIC.—The explosion which occurred in the Wellington Collieries on the 30th ult., causing the death of twenty-three persons, has left destitute seven families, consisting of widows and nearly thirty children. Voluntary subscriptions have been forwarded to aid those in distress, and a central committee has been formed who will thankfully receive contributions and communications in reference to the same. An earnest appeal is now made to the sympathizing throughout the Province, and wherever willing contributions can be raised, to come forward and place these widows and children above want.—Dr. McN. Jones, Chairman; A. S. Ross, Secretary; W. A. Lindsay, Treasurer; Wm. Bailey, Wm. Beveridge, John A. Thompson.

The Committee of Wellington Relief Fund herewith beg to publicly thank Capt. Huntingdon, officers and crew of S. S. Mexico, for their liberal contribution to the Fund. The Committee also express their thanks to the Victoria Daily Evening Post for the subscription started by them which is being so liberally responded to by the people of Victoria.

From Surrey.

From Our Special Correspondent.

MUD BAY, July 12.—The municipality of Surrey extends from the Fraser to the Gulf, and takes in the whole of townships 1 and 2, the west half of 7 and 8 and the adjoining portions of 9 and group 1 on the south side of the river. The surface, which is very broken and uneven, consists of low alluvial flats and high and for the most part heavily timbered ridges. There are five separate settlements—Hall's Prairie, Clover Valley, Johnstone or Alder Bottom settlement, Mud Bay, and Kensington Prairie. Hall's Prairie valley, drained by the Campbell river, is situated in the S.W. of township 7, and extends S.W. from about the centre of the township to the international boundary line and the head of Semiahmoo Bay, a distance of about 5 miles by an average of 2½ miles broad. Towards the N.W. end of the valley is situated Hall's Prairie, a small piece of about 250 acres of

with a luxuriant growth of grass. It is owned between several parties and is still in its natural state having been in the market for some time at a trifle over $40 per acre. The surface of the valley, which is flat and nearly level, is intersected by one or two ravines and covered with bush, in some places heavily timbered. The soil is a rich, heavy clay loam, with a hard compact clay bottom. The valley is subject to considerable surface water, so that it must be all thoroughly underdrained before the land can be brought under successful cultivation. The settlement numbers 15 settlers, 6 married, the rest bachelors. The majority however are non-resident, and there are several ranches for sale. A few of the old settlers have considerable clearances and fine crops—principally oats and potatoes, but the chief occupation is dairying but only on a very limited scale. There is little or no fruit in the valley, and this is true of the whole municipality. It is claimed that there are 17 children in the settlement, but there is neither school nor church, the only institution of civilization there being a post office. The wide flat ridge between Mud Bay flats on the north and Semiahmoo Bay and Hall's Prairie valley on the south is covered with a heavy growth of green timber. In this region

FOUR LOGGING CAMPS

are at present in operation. The soil is gravelly, but towards the east end, between Clover Valley and Hall's Prairie, the land is very fertile and several claims have been taken up along the Hall's Prairie road since last fall, but so far there are no signs of any settlements. Clover Valley is the euphonious name given by an early and enterprising settler to a small valley at the head of Mud Bay flats of which in reality it constitutes the head. It lies between the Nicomekl flats on the east and that of the Serpentine on the west just before the valleys of these two rivers meet and merge into one. The soil here is more loamy than that on the adjoining flats, the surface soil of which consists of a stratum of peat varying from 6 in. to 2 ft. in depth with a deep layer of stiff clay for subsoil. The valley is not so soggy as the adjacent flats, yet like all the bottom land in the municipality every acre must be thoroughly underdrained to make agriculture a success. The designation Clover Valley has gradually come to include both the settlements on the adjoining flats and neighboring ridges; in fact all the settlements at and around the head of Mud Bay valley go by the name of

CLOVER VALLEY.

The settlement numbers 20 settlers, 7 married, the rest bachelors. Of these two families and two bachelors are new comers within the past year. All the settlers have more or less clearances and fine crops—principally oats, potatoes, and hay. There is also considerable dairying done in the settlement. Here is the home of the local immigration agent Mr. B. B. Smith. There is a school-house and the municipal hall is located here. There is no church, but service is occasionally held in the town hall. Neither here nor any where else in the municipality is there a store or hotel or place of any accommodation whatever worth mentioning for travellers. The ridge between the Mud Bay flats on the south and the Fraser on the north consists for the most part of heavy burnt timber land, the soil of which is generally very gravelly, but between the coast meridian and Mud Bay roads in the south of township 2 extends of alder land. This is what is known as the Alder Bottom Settlement. A great deal of the land in this belt has been taken up, but so far there are only two or three permanent settlers. Mud Bay is the largest and most important settlement in the municipality. It includes the whole of the Mud Bay flats from the Bay to Clover Valley, a distance of about 6 miles, by an average breadth of about 2½ miles. The surface of the flats is nearly perfectly level and interspersed with clumps of crab apple, and towards the upper end with large patches of hardhack, ferns, scrub cedar and fir, and one or two cranberry marshes. The Serpentine and Nicomekl rivers run through the whole length of the flats at an average of about a mile apart except towards the upper end where the former forks off in a north-westerly and the latter in a north-easterly direction. The surface soil is a stratum of peat with a deep subsoil of pure clay. The land is everywhere very wet and must be all thoroughly before farming on the flats can be made a success. The settlement numbers 13 married men with families and 17 bachelors. Of these 5 families and 4 bachelors are new comers since last year. Dairying is at present the chief occupation, but considerable agriculture is also carried on and this year's crop—principally oats—is no where surpassed. The settlement has a school-house and a good blacksmith's shop. Kensington Prairie, a small corner of the Mud Bay flats on the south side of the Nicomekl River, in its present condition, is little better than a peat moss bog. 8 settlers have taken up claims there since last fall, of these 3 are married, 2 are widowers, 1 is a widow, and the other 3 are bachelors. Besides the above settlements there are two canneries, at present idle, and a few scattered settlers on the Fraser within the municipality. J.C.McD.

UNDERDRAINED AND DYKED

Communications.

The Sumas Quarrel.

EDITOR COLUMBIAN.—In your issue of July 12th appeared an article headed "Sumas Quuarrel," which I beg to say needs correcting. In the first place, Mr. Editor, you are aware that petty quarrels carried on through the public press are not the correct thing. But when incorrect statements are placed before the public with the purpose in view of influencing men's minds that may be called upon to act as jurors, then it seems reasonable to put the affair truthfully before the public. "Settler" says quite emphatically that the road where the dispute arose is not a highway. "Settler's" opinion, probably, as to what constitutes a highway is equal to his opinion on many matters, rather thin and of a flopish or floping nature. "Settler" claims that in the eyes of justice Mr. Chadsey has committed a criminal offence by removing an obstruction consisting of a a field, 3 rods wide by 10 rods, which completely stopped the public from travelling the highway that has been in use for over 20 years by which they could reach a gazetted road which has cost the public the sum of $691, exclusive of three surveys to intersect said gazetted road, but he fails to see any criminal offense in a man rushing out of the woods armed with a shot gun under full cock and pointing it at Chadsey and swearing that he would blow his brains out. But let the joke be played on "Settler," and perhaps he would rush to a J. P. and try and have the would-be murderer taken care of. "Settler," truthfully says we are living in a country where we have good judges. Quite true, Mr. flopper, but there are some J. P.s that are not worth a bawbee. "Settler" mentions the resolution which the Chilliwhack municipal council passed, that in their opinion John Wilson had a right to fence up his own land. What a singular resolution! without defining where it should be fenced. Now, Mr. Editor, I have done all in my power to have the road gazetted which crosses my place and a small corner of J. Wilson's place, and which would give the public a road to reach the landing 195 rods nearer than by the other road. I fail to see any good which has come from our municipal machinery, unless you can make good out of evil. I do not wish to be understood to say that all of the councillors are troubled with the flops, as some of the councillors are gentlemen, but the worst kind of a whip to be lashed with is a public whip. "Settler" would like to impress the public that Wilson is giving all the land for the disputed road, which is quite to the contrary; the road passes diagonally through my place as far again as it does through his; it was surveyed to cross Wilson's place, and the reason that it was not placed on the line between J. Wilson's and my place was to avoid a slough that would have to be crossed twice, with low, flat land between, which would cost at least $1000 to make it equal with the one as it runs by all the different surveys, and instead of our council trying to settle the dispute they have taken quite an absolute extraordinary mode of procedure—expending the public money on a road and then barring it up in order to show absolute authority. Our worthy reeve told me in a private conversation about roads that if I did not keep my mouth shut I would get no road at all, and he is trying to show his short lived power with a vengeance. "Settler" complains that things have been too one-sided here for many years. Perhaps that is the reason that he has flopped over again. There is an old saying that "water will find its level." And another, that "birds of a feather will flock together," and perhaps it is being more fully verified than is commonly the case. Time will surely prove it if so. "Settler's" statement that I influenced the surveys is false, as I was in Ontario until the close of November, 1883. Now, Mr. Editor, I wish here to say that I had no knowledge of the first communication on this subject until I saw it in the paper, but must say, whoever the writer was, he gave a fair and truthful statement of the affair. I will say in conclusion that I shall not reply to any more communications on the subject, as I am no writer, and the whole affair will be cleared up before long. C. CHADSEY, Sumas, July 14th, 1884.

AN IMPORTANT ENQUIRY.—Are you threatened with Consumption? If so, the cause may be in the blood. Impure blood and Scrofula are close companions, and Scrofula and Consumption are still closer related. ## Mount Baker Gold Fields.

It is evident that the lower Sound country, especially Bellingham Bay, is on the eve of a mining excitement that for tangible results will exceed the red-letter days of 1858. That mines exceeding in richness the Cariboo, Pikes Peak, Leadville, Virginia City, Black Range, and compared with which the Cœur d'Alene pales into insignificance, have absolutely been found in the south fork of the upper Nooksack, near the base of Mt. Baker, in this county, is now an open secret. The Reveille is in possession of positive knowledge which, if we were permitted to make public, would create a stampede of gold seekers from every portion of the United States to these recently discovered mines. Enough has already been made public to justify the belief that one thousand miners will be on the ground within the next ninety days. A gratifying feature of this pending boom lies in the fact that several of our citizens already have, and others are now taking steps to secure first choice in matter of locating, and no less than fifty claims will be held by our citizens. The mines are less than 30 miles from Whatcom, and the only obstacle that can possibly interpose an immediate realization of their fondest hopes is the lack of roads or trails from the head of Lake Whatcom to the mountain valleys beyond, a distance of from 15 to 20 miles. The effort that has been made to keep these new finds from the public is now understood, and the parties who have given their time and money in prospecting will now reap the reward that is certainly due them.—Whatcom Reveille.

The Panama Canal.

GLOOMY PROSPECTS OF THE WORK.

PARIS, July 2.—A dispatch from Panama says: Heavy rains have seriously injured the canal earthworks on the Colon side. Hundreds of canal laborers in Colon are out of employment, and three hundred more will be discharged in a few days, there being no work since the rains set in. De Lesseps' announcement that the canal would be opened in 1888, and that he will be here to pass from ocean to ocean on a steamer is highly amusing in view of the fact that thirty-nine million dollars have been expended on tickling the surface and not one-thirteenth of the cutting done.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Lieutenant Brown, of the navy, has made a report to the secretary of the navy on the condition and progress of work on the Panama canal, under date of Callo, June 2. He considers the completion of the canal according to present plans very doubtful. It will certainly require much more time and money than was originally estimated. He thinks a canal with locks would be more feasible, but that its net profits would be much less. Unless the French government becomes interested in the canal he says the failure of the present corporation need not excite surprise. The total excavation necessary is estimated at seventy-five million cubic inches. Lieut. Brown thinks not more than four millions have been excavated. The most serious obstacle to the completion of the canal is the Chagres river which becomes an uncontrollable torrent in the wet season. Floods like that of 1879 might destroy the canal between Colon and Emperador. Much material has been bought that is worthless. Lieut. Brown was informed that material costing fifteen million dollars had been allowed to sink into the soft marsh, and was finally covered up. It is said some of the material has been condemned and sold to vessels for ballast.

WHAT THE FIGURES REVEAL.—G. M. Everest, of Forest, says that in one year one family purchased over fifty bottles of Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam for their own use and that of various friends. He has sold this invaluable throat and lung remedy over sixteen years, and its sales are steadily increasing.

NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10.—Bearing on the dispatch from Paris last night that war between France and China was believed to be inevitable, the Call this morning publishes a long article on information previously received from high reliable sources confirming the statement. It also publishes a letter from Tso Tsung, military grand secretary, dated Tientsin, May 28th, 1884, to a wealthy and influential Chinaman of this city, announcing a determination to combat the French, and ordering that a tax be levied on all Chinese here, and at Denver, New York and elsewhere in the United States, for the purpose of providing funds for the imperial treasury. For this object half a million dollars raised in this way were sent to China, July 1st, on the steamer Tokio, and a like amount will be forwarded by the next steamer. Another letter was received by Tong King Sun, president of the China Merchants Steam Navigation Co. Referring to previous ones, it says a treaty was made in December, 1883, between Germany and China, whereby the former will support the latter in a war with France; in return Germany to exercise suzerainty over the Island of Formosa, and to construct naval and military stations at different points for the Chinese government. China will refuse payment of the two hundred and fifty millions indemnity to France. A private dispatch yesterday announces that a rebellion against the Tartar dynasty has broken out at Sho Shing Foo, and that the rebels are in possession of the city.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Crop reports to the agricultural bureau relative to cotton report that rains were excessive, but there is nothing at present to render a fair crop impossible. The next sixty days, however, will be awaited with interest if not anxiety. The general average condition is one point lower than the previous report, 86 instead of 87. The area in corn has increased about 2 per cent. The total area will be between 69,000,000 and 70,000,000 acres. A few states report a decrease, Maine, Massachusetts, New York, Louisiana and Minnesota, and there is a good degree of uniformity in decrease in the southern and central districts. The crop is now generally healthy in cotton and growing.

LONDON, July 11.—A dispatch from the steamer Faraday, laying the Bennett-Mackay cable, states that she had picked up the Irish coast end 200 miles out and laid 250 miles more.

PARIS, July 12.—Francais announced there was a death from cholera in Paris to-day. There were 13 deaths at Toulon to-day.

MARSEILLES, July 12.—Thirty deaths from cholera here last evening. The panic is extreme Railway stations are crowded with frightened fugitives who fight for tickets which the agents cannot issue fast enough.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 12.—Advices from Winnipeg to W. S. Alexander, general traffic manager of the Manitoba road, state that the customs difficulties have been satisfactorily arranged, and there will be no further delays at the frontier.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Geo. Wm. Curtis, leader of the independent republican movement, says; "I regard the nomination as the wisest one the democratic party could have made and I believe it will be satisfactory to the independent voters." Carl Schurz said: "I am pleased with the nomination of Cleveland and shall give him my support. I think he is the strongest candidate the democrats could have nominated and he will undoubtedly receive a large support outside of his own party from independent republicans."

LONDON, July 12.—The Daily News says that the American foreign relations will be safer in Cleveland's hands than in those of Blaine. The latter represents American "Jingo" party which, like the same party here, make up in audacity and volubility for lack in numbers. As president Cleveland would cultivate quiet and peace at home. If elected he will be chosen on the ground of being more worthy to represent the probity and good sense of the American people than Blaine.

LONDON, July 12.—The Shanghai correspondent of the Times says that Sir Robert Hart, Chinese customs inspector, is trying to negotiate with the French minister of foreign council, who seems blind to the dangers of war.

Our Story.

JOB HENLEY'S LEDGER.

He reads again, "I guess I'll send 'em round a bag of flour." As Job finished reading this marginal note he took off his spectacles, closed the book and said, "I wonder if this Walter Lockheart is any relation of that Lockheart, then answering his own question he continued, "No, no, that could not be, for this Walter Lockheart is young enough to be his grandson——"

"And is his grandson," broke in Lockheart, who was standing by him waiting for an opportunity to speak.

"Bless me," said the old man, "you here, and in the morning too; why, what fetched you here, young man; you did not come for a morning dram; no, no, you must not do that, for that would break Ruthey's heart, and I—but I don't know what I am saying; sit down, sit down, young man, and tell me, what you came for."

"First then, Mr. Henley, I will tell you that I did not come for a morning dram, that, I say it with reverence, I thank God, is something that has never polluted my lips. Warned by the admonitions of my dear old grandmother, and the sad career and sadder ending of my grandfather's life, no less than by the religious teachings of a dear mother, now in heaven, who, when dying, bade me kneel beside her bed and join in her prayer that I would avoid a habit that had brought so much sorrow to my grandmother, and shame on the family.

I joined in that prayer with all the earnestness of my heart, and have never violated the promise there made to God and my mother. No, Mr. Henley, I did not come for liquor, but to ask you, as you value your happiness, if you would enjoy the remainder of your days in peace and quiet as a christian man, and leave behind you a name at once a blessing and an honor to your children, quit this dreadful business."

If Job Henley was ever astonished he was now. Here was a young man but little over a third of his, Job's, years, preaching morality and religion to him, whose opinions were considered even by ministers of churches as proper. Job's anger was excited, and he was determined to teach the young fellow a lesson that he would remember as long as he had remembered his mother's prayer.

He had only the day before been looking over a list of texts in support of drinking that had been given him by a wine bibbing deacon, and now he would look them up again, and read them to "this young teacher of old men;" so without other answer, Job got the bible from the book-shelf and turned to the passages.

"Take a little wine for thy stomach's sake," etc., and was about turning to other passages when Lockheart interrupting him said that he had seen and read those and all other bible texts bearing on the question of strong drink, and that he would now with Mr. Henley's permission read a few passages taken from the bible.

Job made no objection and Walter read slowly but with a clear voice and marked emphasis, "Woe unto him that giving his neighbor drink, that putteth the bottle to him and makest him drunken also." "Look not upon the wine when it is red." "Wine is a mocker, and strong drink is raging," etc.

Job Henley was staggered. He had not dreamed that such warnings against those who furnished strong drink were in the bible. His attention had been directed only to the texts which he had read, that had been given to him by a self-justifying member of one of the churches, who dealt in the "ardent" at wholesale, and had sold largely to Job. But the moral side of the question had been left untouched. Job now remembered a paragraph which the dealer had cut from a newspaper and handed to Job, which at the time seemed to the host of the "Brown Bear" a quietus to all argument against the morality and respectability of the business of innkeeper, and that he would get and read to the young man. A tin box in which Job kept particular papers was opened, and in turning over a bundle of papers in which he expected to find the newspaper article, there fell from them a miniature painted on ivory in the old style. The likeness was that of a beautiful girl of about seventeen years of age, and as Job did not notice its fall, Walter stooped down and picked it up, and was about handing it to Job, when he saw neatly written underneath, "Hetty Morton to Geo. W. Lockheart." On the back of the ivory was scrawled in Job's hand, "Left for three dollars and three fips, by Geo. Lockheart." Job had just turned as Walter had finished reading the memorandum on the back, and divining at once the cause of the young man's sudden excitement and flushed face, in a confused and stammering voice said, "Oh, that was left by your grandfather. I intended to return it to your grandmother, I'll give it to you, you may keep it, young man, good morning;" and turning abruptly from Walter, he went up-stairs to the private sitting room of the family, and seating himself in his easy chair, began a review of the long past of his life. "That miniature, said he, I would not have him see it for ten dollars. Why, I had forgotten all about it, and there was that old score of his grandfather's on the back of it, 'three dollars and three fips.' Well, my ledger shows I marked all paid, and that's the end of it. I wonder if he has come away; what business had he to come here this morning before breakfast, to worry me about what is none of his business? I suppose he wants Ruthey, and would like me to sell out the 'Brown Bear' and give him the money to set up some other business. But he shan't have her, or if he does get her, he shan't have a dollar of my money with her. He's a regular eavesdropper, so he is. I wish I knew whether Ruthey cares for him, but of course she does, it's just my luck——"

"Your luck just now, father dear, to have another eavesdropper at your side, just as you had a little while ago. And, your luck, father, to have the other eavesdropper fall in love with this one, as this one has with him. And now I am here to ask you what Walter intended to, but did not get a chance to, before you ran away from him. He wants me to be his wife, and I want him for a husband," and putting her arm lovingly as a child could around the old man's neck, she said, "Walter is down-stairs waiting for an answer." With trembling lips and bewildered looks, the tears standing in his eyes, the old man said, "Call him up, Ruthey." Walter was soon up, and Job Henley, without a preliminary word, question, or condition, placing his daughter's hand in that of her lover, said, "There now, God bless you both, but leave me till I get my head a little clear, I scarce know what I am doing—but stop a minute. Ruthey, hand me that little box from the top drawer of the bureau." The box was handed, and Job took from it a gold miniature case, and giving it to Walter, told him to put that miniature into it and keep it for himself, "and now," said he, "come and talk to me in a few days, and maybe I may hear what you have to say about the 'Brown Bear.'"

Ruth gave her father a kiss on each cheek, that might have melted the heart of a much sterner parent than was Job Henley, receiving back another with a smacking interest; and following Walter's lead descended to the "Brown Bear" parlor.

We do not like to disclose all the sayings of our heros and heroines, the more especially when they are lovers' vows, which everybody knows are apt to be more or less extravagant of expression, so leaving Walter Lockheart and Ruth Henley to settle between themselves and their love affairs and words of mutual congratulation on the auspicious commencement towards converting Ruth's father to their way of thinking, we shall go upstairs, and see what Job is doing, and the more fully to carry out this purpose, and particularly, as it is said there is luck in odd numbers, we shall play the eavesdropper, making the third or odd one in that line.

Peeping in at the door of the family sitting room, which we find slightly ajar, we see Job Henley looking over the papers in the bundle from which the miniature had dropped out; and now we hear him say, "Well, yes, that was kind of mean in me taking Geo. Lockheart's wife's miniature for that three dollars and three fips. But then he owed the money, and had nothing else to leave with me. I wish I hadn't and I wish young Lockheart hadn't seen it, I would like to have given it to him without him finding out I had it. I wonder if Ruthey will leave the house if she marries him? Of course, she will; it's just my luck. But she shall not, I'll tell her so. I'll sell out, and give everything away, sooner than have her go away. I'll tell her that too. How mean she must have thought I was when she heard me say he should not have a dollar of my money; but she knew better, of course she did; she can have everything she wants that any money can buy for her; and the tavern—what—shall—I do about that?" pondered Job. "I don't like to shut it up, and now I'm ashamed to keep it open. I just begin to see where Lockheart and Ruthey are right. I begin to think as old deacon Morton did, when he used to lecture us boys in the Sunday evening meetings. He used to say, 'Whatever is, is right, if it is not wrong; and if it is wrong the first best thing to do is to make it right.' Now I've been keeping the 'Brown Bear' for over forty years, and I didn't think I was doing very wrong as things went, but when I look over the old ledgers, and see many of my customers gone down to their graves poor drunkards, and so few of them that was ever anything else, and such a very few that got to be much, and they most all of them stopped drinking first, it does kind of seem wrong. I wish I knew what to do; I wish the old deacon was alive yet, but he's been dead years and years ago. He was a shoemaker, and I remember the tombstone they put on his grave. It was kind of funny, but they say the deacon made them promise before he died to put it there. Let me see how it read:

"'Never too late to mend boots and shoes if the sole is sound, and never too late to mend our lives if the soul is not gone.' I wonder," mused Job, "if my soul is good. Come to think, there's something about the deacon in one of my old ledgers. I'll see what it is, right away," and the interview between Job Henley's memory and past events was for that time concluded.

He has gone to hunt up for examination one of his old ledger of accounts, which as we have shown, are also kind of histories of the lives of his customers. While he is thus employed we will take a peep at the young folks. Walter still lingers by Ruth's side. Their right hands are clasped in token or their determination to do a loving work. Yet it is not a love token in the usual acceptation of the word. They have vowed for the love of Job Henley, who has been to Ruth one of the most kind and doting fathers, that they will strive to convert him to their way of thinking, by acts such as only loving children know how to perform. "I am bound," says Walter, "that he shall live with us, and have our care in his old days, and as to his money, your brother George can have it all, to start him in business as a builder. My present already liberal salary and the advancement promised me by the firm, will be ample for our support, till I grow richer in the future."

"But, Walter," answers Ruth, "while father would not hear to my living away from him, if he could prevent it, I know he would insist on at least paying his expenses or more, and although I would live for years to come in the very plainest manner in preference to using the means acquired by the sale of liquor, I still think there is something due you with interest, for the loss of your grandfather, and what might have come down to you from your great-grandfather had he not been ruined at the 'Brown Bear.'"

"Why, what an idea, Ruthey; next you'll have me claiming damages of some one because the old deacon was a cobbler, and foolishly buried, destroyed, or hid away, all the evidences of his having any property, even refusing to have his deeds recorded, or to make known from whom he had purchased property. Some said he had buried it in an old boot. But it would be hard to deprive any one of such property if they had afterwards become honestly possessed of it." "If there was any doubt of the manner in which they got it," said Ruth, "I would for your sake, Walter sue for principal and interest on every penny of it so held, no matter by whom held."

"Who shall I begin with, Ruthey?" said Walter, laughingly.

"I don't know, Walter, unless you sue me."

"Why, Ruth, I have sued and pursued you for months and had thought the suit ended and I had a decision given in my favor."

"So you have," said Ruth, "and now the court is adjourned, the plaintiff will go home, while the Judge attends to some other matters. Good morning, Walter."

"Good morning, Ruth."
