The steamer Marion is held at Kaslo for debt and will be sold by the sheriff shortly, if a claim of $600 is not promptly met.

On Saturday, Ci[illegible]rk Lilly received a cheque of $3.500 [illegible] the local government, as a paymen[illegible] on the new city buildings to be erected.

D. J. McLachlan has the contract for the skating rink, to be built just east of the power house. He has made a commencement on the work.

John Houston, Nelson's mayor, is taking the bit in his mouth again by suspending the fire chief at his own sweet will, and appointing "an old timer" in his places.

The K. & S. was not tied up by timber inspector Martin for timber dues as reported in some p pers. We believe there was some trouble, but the trains ran on time "alle same."

The K. & S. railway new time card will not come into effect until the repairs to their new boat, the Kaslo, which was damaged in the recent storm on Kootenay lake, are completed.

Minister of Mines McBride was in the city Saturday. He said his visit had no special significance, that he was simply making a tour of the mining districts to learn what he could about mining operations.

V. Kleinsmith, laundryman, visited the Lardeau some days ago to look after some claims. While there he was caught in a severe storm, and some of his toes were so badly frozen that they may yet have to be amputated.

Mr. Halton, of Nelson, is painting scenery for the new opera hall in the Miners Union building. It will be a sketch of the country from the Payne mine to Slocan lake, or in other words what the eye would take in, in that stretch, the spectator standing at the Payne.

The miners' hall is now nearly finished, and when completed will be one of the best buildings in the interior. It is substantial in every respect and has all the ante-room, lavatories, etc., that a building of its purposes should possess and is certainly a credit to its promoters and the miners in general. It will cost when completed, about $10,000.

A sad accident occurred at the Ivanhoe on Monday, by which Wm. Bryant, the foreman, lost his life. The accident was a cave in of a large mass of earth, under which the deceased was held for some time. He was but 24 years of age, and was an industrious and capable young man. He had been a resident of the camp some time, and was well liked by all acquaintances. He was buried in the cemetery here by the members of the Miners' Union.

Cliffe & Co. are moving their stock into their new store today. When their new goods are all in they will have one of the largest and choicest stocks in the country, bought mostly from manufacturers in Ottawa, Montreal, Toronto, New York and elsewhere; and their store will be one of the handsomest and best laid out in the country. It will pay all who want holiday goods, for young or old, to wait until the new goods are in at Cliffe's. The stationery lines will be full in every particular.

Everything that was gay and beautiful in Sandon and several townships around appeared at the Miners' Union ball on Thursday evening. The hall was tastily arranged, the new scenery setting it out in excellent form. The attendance was large, the supper one of the best ever served in the city, the arrangements faultless, and the management first class. All connected with the arrangements have every right to congratulate themselves on their success. At least this is the verdict of the ladies present, and though the writer was not present, we fully endorse their decision.

A Fire Meeting.

A number of property holders in the east end of the city held a meeting at the residence of Jas. Vallance on Wednesday evening, Nov. 28th, for the purpose of organizing a fire brigade in that part of the city. Geo. Waite was elected captain of the brigade, but resigned, as he was not sure of being on hand when needed, so E. M. Sandilands was appointed in his place, and the former accepted the office of vice-captain. A. L. McPhee was selected as foreman, and the following members compose the team:

Hydrant men—Murray Byers, Joe McDonald and W. McAdam; nozzle men—Geo. Hatt, A. L. McPhee, J. H. Cameron; line men—N. Nelson, — Trevor, S. Giegerich, J. Bigney, Jas. Vallance and Harry Nash.

A petition will be presented to the city council asking for a hydrant to be placed at the end of the new pipe line, also two fire alarms.

Regret was expressed that there was not a larger attendance of residents to consider a matter of so much importance to all property holders.

Organized for the Season.

A large attendance of the local curlers turned out to a meeting on Monday evening, for the purpose of organization and other business. The following officers were elected: M. L. Grimmett, president; H. H. Pitts, vice-president; A. E. Hall, secretary-treasurer; Wm. Hood and Wm. Wilson, committee of management; Wm. Karr and D. J. McLachlan, ice committee.

The curlers for this season will use the curling rink, and when bonspeils are held they will use the skating rink, which will give them more ice to play on.

The Rink Company Formed.

On Monday evening the new company completed organization, and the directors, H. H. Pitts, M. L. Grimmett, E. M. Sandilands and Wm. Walmsley elected the following officers for the year: M. L. Grimmett, president; Wm. Walmsley, vice-president; C. D. Hunter, treasurer, and J. J. Godfrey, secretary.

The contract for the rink was let to D. J. McLachlan, whose tender was $1986. The buildingis to be finished by the 25th of December.

MINES AND MINING.

It is said the Star will pay a dividend of $25,000 this month.

The last shipment of the American Boy ore netted $1,104 per car.

The Whitewater mine shipped 328 tons of ore for the week ending November 29th.

An assay should be of a sample, not a specimen, to be fair to the owner or prospective buyer.

The Heather Bell mine, near Three Forks, has been seized by the sheriff to satisfy a claim of $308 held by Angus J. McDonald for work.

The Trade Dollar is turning out a valuable property under development, and the impression is growing that it will shortly give a good account of itself.

The Monitor mine at Three Forks, has presented the owners with a strike of considerable importance. It was always held the Monitor was a good property, and big things are expected later on.

The Orillia, Ont., Packet says: "Mr. J. P. Secord has just purchased from Mrs. Harris, of Kaslo, B. C., another large lot, 15,000 shares, of the Kaslo-Slocan Development Company's mining stock. This makes about 220,000 shares of this stock that he has purchased on his own account. It is evident that his confidence in the company has not suffered from his recent inspection of the mines."

It is understood that the Ottawa property, adjoining the Tamarac on Springer creek, will ship a quantity of ore during the winter. The owners, Thomas Mulvey and John McKinnon, are working the proposition and have quite shipping of ore in sight at present. Their vein is similar to that of the Arlington, carrying leaf silver and it is expected that the Ottawa shipments will make somewhat of a sensation. The Tamarac will make several shipments during the winter.

The Methodist church services and and Sabbath school will be held in the Miners' Union hall next Sunday.

About the House.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

To clean carpets, dissolve one ounce and a half of alum in one quart of warm water, and one ounce and a half of Fuller's earth in another quart of warm water. Put a little of each in a bucketful of salt-water, adding a little oxgall, and rubbing in some common brown soap. Then wash the carpets little by little with this mixture till rather wet, rubbing it well with a coarse cloth. The carpet will appear as fresh and bright as new.

To clean decanters put the tea leaves from the teapot into the decanters overnight with a little cold water. In the morning shake them well until quite clean. Then rinse and polish. Some use small pieces of paper cut up and put in the bottle with some water. Salt will remove stains left by lime.

For blackheads bathe the face at night with very hot water, drying it with a soft towel, and then rub in very gently some cold cream, perfumed or not. In the morning wash your face well with hot water and soap, and then give it a bath in tepid water, so that all the soapsuds may be removed, finishing off with cold water.

If the water is very hard a tiny bit of soda, not larger than a pea, added will make the vegetables cooked in it tenderer and of better color. Ordinary water does not require such addition.

The best way to wash bedsteads is to thoroughly sponge all parts of the bedstead with hot water in which a little alum has been dissolved.

If clothes are soaked over night, one teaspoonful of pure ammonia in each tub of water will materially lessen the labor of washing.

VALUE OF PUMICE STONE.

It may not be apparent to all housewives, but pumice stone is really an indispensable requisite for the kitchen table. There is nothing better to remove burn from granite pans and kettles. Obstinate rust upon steel knives will also vanish if it is vigorously applied.

A NEW PHOTOGRAPHIC FAD.

There are fads in photography, just as in everything else. When the Trilby craze was on a lot of irresponsible girls insisted upon having their feet photographed. A shapely hand, holding a flower, also had a certain vogue for awhile. Now women are coming to have pictures of their eyes taken. Perhaps this is not so absurd as it seems at first thought, for the eye is usually the most expressive feature of the human face. The camera is placed very close to the sitter, and is focused so that the features are much more prominent than in the ordinary photograph. When the pictures are mounted all but the strip across the eyes is cut away, showing the eyes and the bridge of the nose. "I can't say that the effect is very artistic," said a photographer, yesterday, "but the women who have their eyes photographed, all seem pleased with the result. They claim that their friends when shown the picture, are able to tell at once whose eyes they are. But I frankly confess that, personally, I don't like it."

OUTDOOR LIFE FOR THE CHILDREN.

When the little one is sent out for an airing, do not dress him up clean and then put him in charge of an older person, with the injunction to see that he does not soil his clothes. Don't do it if the little one is a girl, either. Boy or girl, let them romp and tumble on the grass; yes, and play in the dirt, too. See that they have some sport where, without molesting anything, or being molested themselves, they can exercise a child's natural instinct to dig in the ground.

And, of course, this plea is not alone for the very young ones, but for the older ones as well. Give all the children the privilege of happy, unrestricted play on the earth and in it.

And there is the sand pile, with its possibilities in the way of amusement and education as well. "We learn by doing," and the pile of sand where the little workers build and burrow, construct forts and mountains, and dig wells and caves while engaging the faculties in healthful play, is an educational factor not to be lightly esteemed. In the winter time let the older ones play in the dry snow whenever possible.

PLENTY OF AIR.

The cellar, like the living rooms, ought, if possible, to have a good supply of air, light and sunshine, the morning sun being preferable, and all its compartments should be easy of access, both from the outside and from the kitchen stairway. But the one thing to be remembered, first, last, and all time, is that every part of it must be kept clean; no mold, no soured fruits or other spoiled victuals, no stagnant water, nothing that can possibly create a bad odor or in any way contaminate the air. Even the dust and cobwebs ought to be pretty carefully looked after. Of course there must be no roaches, no mice, and if possible no flies; all these pests give least trouble when there is nothing lying around to feed them; but if they do put in an appearance, the best way is to exterminate as rapidly as possible.

VARNISHED WALL PAPER.

Varnished wall paper, has many advantages, and especially in a dirty, smoky town, for it can be washed with soap and water and be perfectly clean without any expense. For halls, bathrooms and children's rooms varnished paper or painted walls are recommended; the former is especially durable, and if the varnish gets shabby another coat may be applied. After a case of infectious illness in a house where expenses have to be considered, one fully appreciates a varnished room. The walls once washed with proper disinfectants, the great expense of repapering is saved. The first outlay in this treatment of the walls is decidedly heavy, but it yields excellent interest.

A PRETTY CHAIR CUSHION.

To make a dainty chair cushion, take any pretty piece of flannel or broadcloth, and back of it put a layer of wadding and a foundation of denim or heavy muslin. Quilt these together in diamonds with any pretty shade of embroidery silk, or several colors may be used. Line the cushion with light-colored sateen, and put ruffles of the sateen, one over lapping the other, and the lower twice as wide as the upper, between the flannel and lining. Stitch three times around with embroidery silk and fill with any desired material.

TEACHING THE LITTLE ONES.

It is wonderful how much knowledge can be imparted to small children by a quick nursemaid, who has an inkling of the kindergarten system. Children are never tired of asking questions, and if these are intelligently answered they pick up all sorts of useful knowledge without any actual teaching. The object of the kindergarten system is to teach the little ones to think for themselves, and it is worth every mother's and nurse's while to learn something of it. The custom of talking nonsense to them and distorting words cannot be too much condemned.

PERFECTLY RAW WITH ITCHING ECZEMA

The torture which is caused by the intense itching and burning sensations of eczema makes it one of the most distressing of ailments, while the presence of the raw flesh, which refuses to heal under ordinary treatment, adds to the misery of the sufferer.

The following case is reported as one which illustrates the extraordinary control which Dr. Chase's Ointment has over eczema, both as a prompt relief for the dreadful itching and as an antiseptic healer, which speedily and certainly brings about a thorough cure.

In vain were all sorts of medicines and ointments used and doctors appeared to be helpless before the dreadful ravages which the flaming fires of eczema were making. Here is the way Mrs. Knight describes this interesting case:

Mrs. Knight, 17 Hanover Place, Toronto, states: "My mother, Mrs Wright, of Norval, suffered for a summer and winter with eczema on her foot. She could neither walk nor sleep, and it became so bad that she was perfectly raw from her toes to her knees. After trying every available remedy without success, and almost hopeless of relief, she began using Dr. Chase's Ointment. She has altogether used eight or nine boxes, with the happy result that she is now completely cured. Anyone wishing further particulars can communicate with Mrs. Wright, Norval, Ont. After such a grand success, is it any wonder that we recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment?"

It is just such tests as this one that have convinced physicians of the truly wonderful power of Dr. Chase's Ointment. If you are a sufferer, with any itching skin disease, or have a sore that will not heal, make a test for yourself. You will certainly become an enthusiastic admirer of Dr. Dr. Chase's Ointment, just as is everyone who knows its merits. Besides curing the most severe forms of itching skin diseases, Dr. Chase's Ointment is delightfully healing and soothing in all cases of chafing, skin irritations, sore feet, prickly heat, pimples and blackheads. 60 cents a box at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co. Toronto.

CHARLES DICKENS' PRESENT.

Charles Dickens was always very fond of children. One day he was walking in the neighborhood of Gad's hill, not long after he had acquired his property there, when he suddenly ran into a little girl wheeling a doll's perambulator. In an instant the tiny vehicle upset, the dolls being thrown out.

It was a bad accident as far as they were concerned, for wax heads and limbs are not calculated to stand much hard usage. The little maid burst into tears, and, much to the novelist's sorrow, refused to be comforted.

"Then come home with me," Dickens whispered, soothingly, "and we'll see if we can't find some grand waxen lady in silks and satins for you."

So back to the big house the two went, and sure enough, up in his children's nursery he managed to discover a few prettily dressed dolls. With these safely tucked in her perambulator the little girl trotted off.

But it is in the sequel that the best part of the story lies. The child's heart was set on making some return for this kindness, so her parents, who had not the faintest suspicion of her friend's personality, took her to town to choose something. Her choice fell eventually upon a gorgeously bound book.

When Dickens the next day undid the parcel his small visitor brought him he was surprised and delighted to see a copy of "David Copperfield."

Not until many years later, when they met again in society, did the little girl learn who the "kind gentleman" was.

CEMENT FOR STONE.

The combination of red and white lead with boiled linseed oil and litharge makes a good cement for joining stones of any size. It should be used by dressing a strip of thin cloth on each side and placing this between the parts to be joined. The stone should be warmed, if possible. This cement will resist boiling water. As to proportions, there is no regular formula. To dry quickly, red lead should be used in greater proportions. If there is no hurry, white lead should be used in excess. I prefer the white lead when ample time can be given for drying. Equal parts of oil and litharge may be used. Another Formula—Seven or eight parts of resin and one of beeswax, melted together, and mixed with a small quantity of plaster of paris, is a good cement to unite pieces of stone. The stone should be made hot enough to melt the cement, and the pieces should be pressed together as closely as possible, so as to leave as little as may be of the cement between them. This is a general rule in cementing, as the thinner the strata of cement interposed, the firmer it will hold.

FATHER'S ESSAY WRITING.

Teacher—I am sorry to say it, Henry, but your composition is not worthy of you. The rhetoric is faulty, the logic weak, the statements are based upon misinformation, and the style is lamentably crude.

Henry—My! Won't my dad be mad when I tell him that?

Teacher—But you can tell him you did your very best.

Henry—Did my best nothing. Dad wrote the whole of it himself.

JUSTIFIABLE FEARS.

They are just running that boy of mine at the kindergarten, said the worried father.

What is the matter? asked the friend, glad to hear one jarring note in the usual song of praise about the boy.

He calls his chums William and Henry, instead of Bill and Hank. Wouldn't that jar you?

"Have you tried 'Salada' Ceylon and India Green Tea? asked the dealer off a consumer of Japan.

"No, I never experiment," said the customer.

"Good rule, proved by it's exceptions."

"How so?" said the customer.

"A new Tea, grown on the richest Tea producing soil in the world—Ceylon and India—prepared by modern, cleanly machinery methods, just as "Salada" Black Tea is,—without the aid of nerve disturbing adulterants, may prove a revelation to the taste, and a positive benefit, rather than an injury, to the system. Now do you grasp the situation?"

"Yes," said the customer, "I do."

"Then, take a trial packet."

Result;

Japan Tea forever discarded,

"Salada" Ceylon and India Green Tea adopted.

HIS ADVICE.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer one Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

STRATEGY.

What did you expect to prove by that exceedingly long winded argument of yours? asked the friend.

I didn't expec tt oprove anything, answered the orator. All I hoped to do was to confuse the other fellow so that he couldn't prove that I didn't prove anything.

Of practical importance would be a bottle of the only sure-pop corn cure —Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor —which can be had at any drug store. A continuation of the honeymoon and the removal of corns both assured by its use. Beware of imitations.

PUTTING A HEAD ON IT.

This is a great story, said the new reporter, but I can't think of a good head for it. It's about a trusted employe, whose accounts were found to be crooked, and when he was accused of it dropped dead.

STILL IN THE BUSINESS.

Wunn—By the way, what became of Spriggins? You remember his great commencement essay on the downfall of the Roman Republic, eh?

MEN—PAY WHEN CURED.

Toronto, Ont, Oct, 5, 1900
Dr McLaughlin,
Dear Sir: After trying different prescriptions for nervousness and general debility without results, I secured one of your Electric Belts. Within a week I began to improve. I would not take ten times what the belt cost me and be without one
Yours truly,
111 Wilton Ave F. Dyer.

My Electric Belt is a quick and positive cure for weakness in men. The vitalizing electric power is given direct to all weak parts, developing the full natural vigor of health. It makes the blood warm and the nerves as strong as steel. I want every man who is weak from any cause, or who suffers from lame back, rheumatism, weak stomach or ailing kidneys, to be cured by it, pay me when cured, and then tell his friends.

DR. McLAUGHLIN'S OFFER.

I am not giving belts away. I am simply curing first and asking my pay afterward. I am doing this because I can do it. I have an Electric Belt which DOES CURE, and any honest man who will secure me can have my Belt and pay me when cured. Is that fair? I can do this because I have the best Electric Belt in the world. My Belt is twice as strong as any other, and it is the only one that can be worn with any comfort. It does not burn. Call and consult me today, or send for my beautiful 80 page book, which tells my story honestly. Sent sealed, free.

HOW HE WON.

Mr. Sifton and his friends never tire of talking of Mr. Sifton's "glorious triumph," in Brandon; but they are ever careful to conceal the methods by which the triumph was won. The facts are now, however, coming to light. Frank Taylor, Joseph Carson, Henry Scallion and Arch. Stewart have been arrested for crookedness, and the following appears as a report of the police court in Brandon:

Carson being called the chief of police narrated how Frank Taylor had been arrested, and how he went with Taylor the Liberal committee room to indentify the man who had given him a certain voting ticket, but did not find him in the rooms, but when outside Taylor pointed out Carson and had him arrested.

Frank Taylor, of Dauphin, upon first being interrogated insolently refused to state where he came from and how old he was, but afterwards did so to the Magistrate. He said he did not know Carson, nor could he say when he met him. An enquiry into Taylor's antecedents with difficulty brought out that he had been in the Portage police court on the charge of rape, and though he claimed to be a baker he would not name his employers, and admitted that his name was not on the Brandon list. He admitted getting a ballot in the name of Thomas Sheriff and gave it to the D. R. O. and explained that though he was sworn at the time he did not reflect upon what he was doing.

Joseph Quinn was called as a witness and recognized Taylor as voting in Sheriff's name at poll 16, and knew he was not the man claimed to be. Chief Kirkcaldy deposed as the manner of the arrest, and that Taylor had told him he had voted three times. Mr. Matheson drew attention to the fact that prisoner was a self-confessed perjurer and asked for highee bail upon which it was fixed at two securities of $1,000.

Mr. T. D. M. Osborne called as witness deposed as the manenor of the arrest of Taylor after he had voted as Sheriff, and Mr. Cameron cross-examined.

Archie Stewart was charged upon evidence of Rev. A. H. Cameron to have asked for a ballot under the name of John Flynn, and voted. Mr. D. Monroe testified that Stewart voted as Flynn whom he knew and Stewart was not the man.

H. Scallion, Winnipeg, was charged with personating. Rev. Mr. Cameron deposed that the accused came to vote under the name of Matthew Brandon and he asked that Scallion be sworn, but he refused the oath and so the ballot was refused. Mr. Chas. Gardner corroborated this evidence and the court adjourned till Monday, but in consequence of the assizes the cases were remanded.

Mr. Carson is out on bail, but the other prisoners not having money to pay for their meals or tobacco, were removed from the lock-up to Brandon jail on Tuesday.

Here is absolute proof Mr. Sifton's friends hired outsiders to come in and vote for absentees, even at the risk of perjury, if necessary; and if the whole truth was known, possibly with the knowledge and consent of Mr. Sifton himself. A pretence is made at passing rigid legislation to secure honest elections, and the law makers themselves in turn wink at the wholesale violation of that legislation when they have personal ends to serve. This would be less matter in this particular instance if Mr. Sifton did not pose as the apostle of purity itself, and if his friends did not hold him up as a model of all that pure and good in the make-up of mortal man. These are the things that sicken many of Canadian politics, and are driving many good men to care but little who may be elected in general elections. It is quite possible that for leaving the Provincial House so soon, Hugh John would have been beaten in any event, but in a fair contest, it would have been by a very much reduced majority.

POLITICAL QUIBBLING.

How politicians will wiggle and quibble when before the electors was fully illustrated by Mr. Galliher's utterances as to the tariff at the meeting here on Tuesday evening. He says the Liberal declaration always was for "a tariff for revenue only." Now, all readers of even the Grit press know full well Mr. Laurier has often said the goal was "Free Trade as they had it in England," "Unrestricted Reciprocity," and all such nostrums. It is well known Mr. Blake refused to further co-operate with the Liberals of Canada, because free trade was their declared aim, and he knew it was impossible. He declared so in his now celebrated address to the electors of West Durham. In the face of all this Mr. Galliher said his party never declared for more than "a tariff for revenue only." But even in this he is as far from the truth as it is possible; as the present tariff is in truth higher than that of the National policy. Import from the States to-day a similar suit of clothes to the one you imported in 1895, from boots to cap, and you will pay more duties now than then. Go farming and import an outfit of agricultural implements and you will also find a higher duty. Import from any paper manufacturers you like and you will pay 35 per cent. all around. But why go outside for the absolute proof Mr. Galliher's statement was positively untrue when you have the proof in the published records of the government themselves. Last year they say they had in the neighborhood of five millions of a surplus—all this is taxation in excess of the demands of the country. A tariff for revenue raises the actual requirements of the country only. Last year they raised, according to their own reports, nearly five millions in excess of that—they actually, needlessly wrung five millions from the pockets of the people, or $10 from every family of ten, and yet they have a revenue tariff! As a matter of fact every dollar raised by the customs houses is so much protection to home producers, then when excessive revenues, or surplusses as they are called, are raised it is exeessive taxation, the very thing for which they so long and so loudly blamed the Tories.

The Grit party may talk of the success of their policy because of their return to office on the 7th ult; but this is not the truth. The entire Dominion outside of Quebec gave an adverse majority. By carrolling the entire French vote of Quebec by Tarte's disloyalty cries, with the apparent approval of Laurier, they carried all but eight seats in that province. This is vhat has given them a renewed lease of office—this and this alone, and no hedging and dodging can conceal the facts. If the Liberals are proud of their cause of success no one should envy them in a monopoly of the pleasure.

Messrs. Galliher and McKane, two of the aspirants for the representation of this constituency, held a meeting here on Tuesday evening and had a fair audience. After about ten minutes four cornered jangle between the candidates, and Mayor Pitts and Mr. Grimmett as to how the meeting should be conducted, Mr. Grimmett took the chair, and McKane spoke first, Galliher closing. McKane is an aggressive, humorous speaker, while his opponent is smoother, and of a true lawyer type. As there was little enthusiasm throughout it is hard to tell which had the majority at the meeting.

BUREAU OF PROVINCIAL INFORMATION.

IN ORDER that the Government may be in possession of definite information with which to supply those seeking investments in this Province, I am instructed to invite particulars from those who have properties for sale, and who may feel disposed to forward such particulars to this office for the purpose in question.

In view of the proposed early re-organisation of the Agent General's Office in London, England, the desirability of having on file a list of farms and other properties for sale, with full and accurate details, is obvious. Properties submitted may include farms and farm lands, industrial and commercial concerns, timber limits, water powers, or other enterprises affording opportunities for legitimate investment.

It is not proposed to recommend properties to intending investors, but to afford the fullest access to the classified lists and all available information connected therewith, and to place enquirers in communication with the owners.

The fullest particulars are desired not only of the properties themselves, but of the localities in which they are situated, and the conditions affecting them. For this purpose printed schedules will, upon application, be forwarded to those desirous of making sales.

HOW HE WON.

Mr. Sifton and his friends never tire of talking of Mr. Sifton's "glorious triumph," in Brandon; but they are ever careful to conceal the methods by which the triumph was won. ONE YEAR OF KINGSHIP.

THE OPIUM FARMER HAS A BRIEF TASTE OF POWER.

This Remarkable Dignitary of Hong Kong Celebrates His Abdication With a Great Feast.

In order to regulate to some extent the importation of opium into Hong Kong and to simplify the collection of duties the British Government several years ago decided to place the whole business in the hands of one man. Realizing, however, the tremendous and arbitrary power that could be wielded by a single individual in such a position, it was also decided that the office should only be held one year and that no person should be allowed to keep it for more than a single term. So it was announced that the Government was prepared to accept bids for the privilege.

Since that time the selection of an "opium farmer," as he is called, has become an annual event. The highest bid generally ranges from 600,000 to 800,000 taels, according to the prospects of the poppy crop for the year and the condition of the market. The successful applicant is duly gazetted in his position, and he is given the assistance of a fleet of a dozen swift Government customs vessels to protect his interests. He himself employs several junks to guard his business against smugglers, but he must only use these boats for the purpose of obtaining information. If he secures knowledge of smuggling operations he turns it over to the authorities, who run the malefactors down. Nearly every week in the year there is a smart skirmish between the sampans of the smugglers from the mainland of China and the revenue cutters. Pretty little battles some of them are, too, and very useful in giving young British middies and junior naval officers their first taste of sea fighting.

The opium farmer has the sole control of every pound of the drug brought into Hong Kong, and he generally makes from $250,000 to $300,000 clear profit in his year of office. The Government gets much more from him than it could secure if it attempted to collect the duties itself, and, moreover, gets it in a lump sum without the enormous amount of trouble and the large force of officers that would otherwise be necessary. The opium farmer's salaried men watch all incoming boats, and as it is a case of Chinaman against Chinaman very little of the raw material gets past him.

At the end of his term of office he gives a great dinner to Government officials, newspaper men and the leading Chinese merchants of the colony. This dinner is one of the three great events of the Hong Kong year. The other two are the polo, championship games and the sham battle between the troops in the garrison. As a matter of fact, though natural pride keeps them from openly acknowledging it, the white people of Hong Kong look on this unique dinner as by far the most interesting affair in the social calendar.

When a Chinaman makes up his mind to do a thing handsomely he generally goes to the limit. The opium farmer always makes his dinner, which is a sort of farewell to his brief reign of Czar of the opium smokers, something to be remembered by his white friends. Indeed, he lays aside a large sum of money, from $20,000 to $25,000, for the banquet, and always reckons it as a legitimate item of expense when he figures up his bid to the Government at the beginning of the year.

A week before the close of his term of office the farmer nseds out his invitations. These are always verbal, delivered to the lucky recipient by a shroff, a polite native clerk, who comes to your door with a smile and a bow, clad in a long blue gown reaching to his heels, and tells you that his master desires the honor of your presence at the Wong Tai Lo Restaurant "to modestly sup with him from a little dish or two in token of your good will."

The invitation needs no response. The shroff takes it for granted that you would postpone a trip to Europe to get to that dinner, and he is right. There are no vacant seats when the ceremonies begin.

The Wong Tai Lo Restaurant, where all these affairs are given, is the Chinese Delmonico's of Hong Kong. It stands in the heart of the native quarter, a five-story frame building, elaborately carved, with broad balconies laden with flowering plants and creepers and the usual huge feast lanterns swaying in the wind.

The walls of the great dining-room are covered with Chinese flags and Union Jacks twined together, and hanging by the hundred from the ceiling are gay lanterns of all designs and colors enclosing electric lights. About three hundred guests find seats at places where their names are written on pieces of pasteboard. Round the head of the centre table are the ebony chairs of the host, the Governor of the colony, the Chief Justice, and sometimes the senior naval officer of the port. Here and there among the other diners are wealthy Chinese merchants, their costumes in startling contrast to the colorless white Eton mess jackets of the rest of the company.

When all are seated the opium farmer enters turns to the back of his chair and strikes a gong. Dozens of swift-footed waiters at once appear laden with silver ice buckets filled with champagne, port, sherry, Frontinac and a variety of native wines. A hundred young women follow with trays of wine glasses and tumblers and in a few moments every guest is supplied.

Immediately the affair develops into a feast magnificent enough for an old Roman banquet hall. The women, imported from northern China for the occasion, station themselves behind the chairs of the guests and play stringed instruments, singing an almost continuous accompaniment. Flower girls bearing sweet blossoms of the lichee enter and twine garlands across the tables, among chair backs, about the flags and in the long lines of lanterns.

The tables are rapidly spread with food and a strange mixture of Oriental and Occidental dishes it is. In addition to roast beef, ham, chicken, turkey and mutton, are dozens of Chinese delicacies, curries of every kind, sharks fins, jellied eggs, pickled fish, baked hedge-boar, spitted rice birds, drawn pelican meat, preserves of all sorts mangoose, mangostines, paradise fruit and dozens of wonderful Chinese puddings.

There is no menu card and no sequence of courses. You just pick out what you like and tackle it, irrespective of what your neighbor is eating and regardless of whether you begin with dessert or end with soup. The dishes in which these foods are served are the most magnificent and costly samples of Chinese ware and are intended as gifts for the guests. When the dinner is over you can select what you please among them. If you go away early enough you are generally wise enough to do this. If you stay till things begin to get warm you are apt to forget all about such a prosaic thing as dishes.

When midnight comes and the host, the Governor and the Chief Justice have discreetly retired, the singing, jubilating and toasting begin in earnest. As daybreak approaches the faithful ricksha men who have been kicking their bare heels on the brick roads for several hours, begin to think deep boiling-oil thoughts about the foreign devils inside who are yelling "Annie Rooney," "We Won't Go Home Till Morning," "Auld Lang Syne" and other incantations to their gods.

KITES REPLACE BALOONS.

Baden-Powell Makes a Valuable Suggestion to the War Office.

It is, perhaps ,not generally known that Baden-Powell, who has greatly distinguished himself in the Transvaal war, is not only a soldier of unquestionable ability but a scientist whose meteorological investigations have been stamped with the official approval of England's war ministry. It was through his influence that the army abandoned the cumbrous military balloon and adopted in its stead the more easily controlled and more simply constructed kite.

As a result of the experiments made by the major-general in collaboration with his brother officers, it was asserted that a man could be lifted several hundred feet in the air without the slightest danger and without the aid of any gas receptacle. An apparatus strong enough to lift two men weighs hardly more than 100 pounds. Kites can be assembled and sent into the air in five minutes. Their descent can be regulated by a parachute. The cost is hardly a fiftieth part of that of a balloon ascension.

Baden-Powell began his experiments in 1893. If he has not magnified the importance of the results which he has obtained, it is not too much to hope that, before the Transvaal war has seen its close, the utility of the kite as an instrument in modern warfare will be assured. If the truth must be told, it is difficult to imagine a man suspended 2,000 feet above the ground from a machine which is the plaything of the winds, and which is only too ready to plunge down at any moment. But it is still more difficult to imagine this same man, without that feeling of security so essential to accurate observation, spying upon an enemy and endeavoring to gather such information as may be of value.

The proper sphere of the kite's usefulness would seem to be in that field of meteorological experiment in which Franklin was a pioneer. That the kite can also be used for military purposes, signaling and the like, and especially for taking bird's eye photographs by means of automatic apparatus, seems likely enough. But the lifting of a man to the dizzy height of a thousand feet or more, so that he may leisurely study an enemy's position transcends the bounds of possibility.

RENEWING OLD PAINT.

When paint has an old, dingy look, take a flannel cloth, dampen it and apply as much first quality Spanish whiting as will adhere to it, and rub the paint. But little rubbing will be required to remove all dirt and grease. Rinse thoroughly with pure water and then rub dry with a soft cloth. Paint thus cleaned looks like new, and does not receive such injury as from soap suds. This process of cleaning is a good one to perform before laying varnish over old paint.

Worth Ten Dollars a Bottle.

Any person who has used Nerviline, the great pain cure, would not be without it if it cost ten dollars a bottle. A good thing is worth its weight in gold, and Nerviline is the best remedy for all kinds of pain. It cures neuralgia in five minutes; toothache in one minute; lame back at one application; headache in a few minutes; and all pains just as rapidly.

GROWING GIRLS

SHOULD BE BRIGHT, CHEERFUL, ACTIVE AND STRONG.

A Great Responsibility Rests Upon Mothers at This Period as It Involves Their Daughter's Future Happiness or Misery —Some Useful Hints.

Rosy cheeks, bright eyes, an elastic step, and a good appetite, are the birthright of every girl. These are the condition that bespeak perfect health. But unfortunately this is not the conditions of thousands of growing girls. On every side may be seen girls with pale or sallow complexion, languid, stoop shouldered, and listless. Doctors will tell them that they are anaemic, or in other words that their blood is poor, thin and watery. If further questioned they will tell them that this condition leads to decline, consumption and the grave. What is needed is a medicine that will make new, rich, red blood, strengthe the nerves and thus restore the vigor, brightness and hopefulness of youth. For this purpose no other discovery in the annals of medicine can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and thousands of once hopeless girls have been made bright, active and strong through their use. Among those who have been brought back almost from the grave by the use of this medicine is Miss M. C. Marceaux, of St. Lambert de Levis, Que. Miss Marceaux says; "It gives me the greatest pleasure to speak of the benefit I have experienced from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. For some years I resided in Wisconsin with a relative, where I devoted my time studying English and music, intending to make the teaching of the latter my profession. I was never very strong, and my studies fatigued me much. When about fourteen I became very pale, suffered from severe headaches, and weakness. I consulted a doctor, and acting on his advice, returned to Canada. The fatigue of the journey, however, made me worse, and finally I got so weak that I could not walk without help. I was extremely pale, my eye-lids were swollen, I had continuous headaches, and was so nervous that the least noise would set my heart beating violently. I almost loathed food and my weight was reduced to ninety-five pounds. Neither doctor's medicine nor anything else that I had taken up to that time seemed of the slightest benefit. I was confined to bed for nearly a year and I thought that nothing but death could end my sufferings. Happily an acquaintance of my father's one day brought me a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and urged me to try them. I did so, and I thought they helped me some, and my father got more. After I had used a few boxes all my friends could see they were helping me, and by the time I had taken nine boxes I was enjoying better health than I had ever had in my life before, and had gained fifteen pounds in weight. I tell you this out of gratitude so that other young girls who may be weak and sickly may know the way to regain their health."

Girls who are just entering womanhood are at the most critical period of their lives. Upon the care of receive depends their future happiness. Neglect may mean either an early grave or a life of misery. If mothers would insist that their growing daughters use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills occasionally, rich blood, strong nerves, and good health would follow. If your dealer does not keep these pills in stock they will be sent post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FORMAL ENTRY OF PEKIN.

Seeing the Sights of the Forbidden City—Grass-grown Marble Stairways—Incense to pewter gods—Desecration of the Palace.

The formal entry of the foreign armies was one of those demontsrations intended to be simple, but through its simplicity one of those imposing occurrences which leave its mark.

The gathering of the clans took place at 8 o'clock before the south gate known as the second gate of the series leading into the Imperial City.

The space in which the column gathered was a big letter T formed by three long avenues leading to the second gate. The Generals, their aides and their staff officers gathered at the joining point just opposite the gate, while their respective commands came up the long paved roadway and manoeuvred out of the way into the weeds at either side. There was band music, bugle music, drum music and bagpipe music as each organization arrived and took its station. The Ministers, their secretaries, and attaches all the guests of the Generals on this occasion, straggled up afoot or on ponies.

The commencement of a salute of twenty-one guns was the signal for the procession to start, so while the booming went on the Ministers and their secretaries singled themselves out from the throng of Generals and staff officers and fell in behind a Russian band. The Russians were the marshals of the day. They saw to the opening of the Forbidden City gates and when the Ministers had started forward the Russian General Linovitch and his staff fell in behind. The Russian troops followed. All the general officers in the column rode their horses through the several outer gates to the inside of the Forbidden City and there turned them over to the care of the orderlies, proceeding on foot.

The Russian soldiers who participated in the procession had evidently just had a busy wash day, for their uniforms were whiter than any before seen on these soldiers in the field. The baggy white trousers were tucked away in heavy knee boots, and the shirt-like blouses were gathered in at the waist by straps, making many of them set with all the fulness and frills of a woman's basque. The sea of white wide-topped caps bobbed in a pleasing unity as the Russians crossed the massive marble bridge and disappeared through the gate.

The Japanese Generals Yamaguchi, Fukushima, and Manabe, in their tight white riding breeches, shiny top boots and black coats, now took the roadway with the gentlemanly looking members of their staff. There was a great volley of words which came from an important-looking little officer on foot and the three hundred little warriors of Japan, all looking as if chipped off the same block, swung into the column headed by a cute little bugle corps. The force was representative of the mighty little dwarfs who have won from the armies such praise in the campaign.

Next in line came the troops of the United States with a handsome silk flag waving above them.

The French marines from Saigon followed the United States forces. They marched with a high step and proud air, but could not equal in appearance the battalion of Kaiser Wilhelm's big sons following behind, stamping the broad paving stones with their heavy boots as they pounded out the stately "goose step" to the strains of music sent up by the band which marched in a compact squad at their head. The German marines who did such yeoman service in the recent siege also had a place in the column.

Italy was represented by a bunch of half a hundred bluejackets, nearly all of whom saw siege duty. Last in the line were the Austrian bluejackets from the cruiser Zenta.

Inside the Imperial city of Pekin is a walled rectangular space half a mile long, east and west, and a quarter of a mile broad. A moat and three walls surround the collection of yellow-tiled pagodas and buildings, it contains, and this collection of buildings forms the royal palace of the Chinese Empire. If the outer precincts of the Imperial city are sacred to the tread of none but nobles of the palace this inner city is doubly sacred. Only in recent years have any foreigners been admitted there and these only the foreign Ministers and their attaches when they came to announce formally their arrival or their final departure from, Pekin. There is the reception room where the Ministers are received, the throne room, the living apartments of the royal family, the apartments of the servants and various summer gardens, temples and pagodas, to say nothing of many barn-like structures which are apparently of no use at all.

In a large enclosure just inside the main gate the officers abandoned their horses and proceeded afoot across a handsomely covered marble bridge and up flights of marble stairs from the crevices of which grew weeds and grasses, and indeed from between the paving stones of the whole court there grew rank weeds. The doors of the large building at the summit of the marble stairs had been thrown open. The place was in a direct line with the gate so the column marched straight through, tramping over a heavy Brussels carpet full of the dusts of months and even covered with bits of straw and debris. Faded grandeur was everywhere. A huge platform, with elaborate carvings, was covered with dirt and dust, as was the throne upon it. The bronze pillars were cracked and dusty. This was the reception hall for foreign Ministers, but evidently no Ministers had called in recent months.

Here and there stood solemn groups of eunuchs, passively horrified at the spectacle of foreign troops marching through the sacred grounds without so much as a bow. Almost hidden behind a stone column was a Chinaman of some rank and an officer, as his clothing indicated. He was deeply moved, apparently, for he looked straight ahead and now and then brushed big tears from his eyes.

Diverging at last from the straight line it had been following the column made diagonally across a huge paved court to a gate where a eunuch stood with outstretched hand pointing the way like a statue. This gate led down to a long, narrow passageway, which seemed to be the main street of the inhabited portion of the royal city. Through open doors on our left we could see courts similar to those we had left and closed buildings on top of the various little hills reached by the sets of marble stairs. There was one feature of each of those stairways, by the way, which made one linger, admire and wonder. The centre of each stairway was occupied by an immense marble slab, extending from the top landing to the foot, the steps being located at either side of this slab. The piece in each instance was covered with the most remarkable carving, Great dragons and serpents in bas relief extended from one corner to the other, and besides these there were representations of mountains, flowers and animals. One of these remarkable stair slabs was fully thirty feet long and a dozen feet in width.

As we neared the end of the narrow passageway, the natural beauties of the palace grounds came into view. We were marching on clean stone walks and passing through a beautiful grove. One tree of this grove was evidently of great renown. It was dead, but its scraggly branches still reached into the air, for it was carefully propped up by many strong supports.

A few paces further along, at the point where the route turned us westward, and back to the centre line stood what at one time had evidently been a solid boulder of huge proportions. As if eaten out by the elements and the ravages of time, this rock bore the appearance of an immense mass of coral. It had been hollowed out, and through a little door one could pass into the dark interior and discern a little altar, and through the gloom see incense burning before great pewter gods.

No opportunity was given during the march to continue along the romantic pathway to the west and view the apartments of the Empress Dowager and the other royal personages, who so unfortunately were not at home to receive their callers, but some persons turned back after the parade was over and seized the opportunity to peer into this corner of the royal city. Indeed, after the demonstration was over some of the most unpardonable desecrations the palace could sustain, according to Chinese beliefs, took place. One was the entrance of foreign women, and the other the taking of horses through the grounds. The wife of one of the Ministers and some women missionaries, each with an escort of gentlemen got in during the general confusion about the outside of the north gate where troops were sending up cheers and Generals were going through the courtesies of the day.

The servants and a high official wrung their hands at seeing these women enter and forever leave their curse in so doing on the apartments of their royal master. There were rich things to see in the royal apartments but for those who had stolen in they must be seen hastily for already the gates of the Forbidden City were being locked. Some before leaving had a good look at the richly bejewelled clock; some saw the table of solid cloisonne and others had a squint at a little German made piano.

The horses that visited the palace grounds were those of officers who had sent their orderlies back to lead them through, that they might not suffer the inconvenience of walking around the walls to the point where they had left them.

It was an enthusiastic reception each force got as it emerged from the north gate. When the Russians got through they established a battalion at the portal with arms at "present" and the Japanese made haste to follow suit on the opposite side. The British stepped out to be met with the shrill cheers of the Russians and Japanese. The Rajput pipers had taken up on a stand and turned loose by the time France came along and a Russian band was ready to greet them with the Marseillaise. The Germans came goose-stepping through the portal with their own band spieling at a rate which put the Russian band and the bagpipe corps out of business. All hands had fresh cheers ready when the swarthy marines of Italy came along and when the last in the line, the Austrians made their appearance, the enthusiasm was only at its height, but instead of remaining to parade and cheer all day each General made his bow to the other, gathered his men, and took them off to camp.

"Well, what do you think of the Forbidden City and the palace?" a man asked a well known diplomat.

"It is the decayed headquarters of a decayed Government," he answered.

Imitations

of Dodd's Kidney Pills are legion. The box is imitated, the outside coating and shape of the pills are imitated and the name—Dodd's Kidney Pills is imitated. Imitations are dangerous. The original is safe. Dodd's Kidney Pills have a reputation. Imitators have none or they wouldn't imitate. So they trade on the reputation of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Do not be deceived. There is only one DODD'S. Dodd's is the original. Dodd's is the name to be careful about—

D-O-D-D-'S KIDNEY PILLS

CLEANS WITHOUT CAREENING,

In the Aegean Sea, a vessel may sail into the top of a crater, and though it is hard to find an anchorage there, yet a mere sail through is appreciated greatly by Captains because it cleanses the bottoms of the ships from marine growth.

More than 2,000 years ago the isle of Santorin was split in half by an earthquake, with the result that what was once the crater of a volcano is now a crescent shaped harbor. Two glistening white towns of Thera and St. Nicholas are perched on the summit of the steep cliffs, whose dark and dismal hue is similar to that of the top of Vesuvius. Standing out against the sky are large numbers of windmills, with many sails arranged in perfect circle. These are evidently employed for crushing the olives, which, along with the terraced vines, are the staple product of the island. ppThe lSantorin wine is of excellent quality and is highly appreciated in the Levant.

Between the main island on the east and the smaller, Theresia, on the west, are the three small Kaumene Islands, all of which have come into existence since the original earthquake, while the largest of the three was "born from the sea" less than 200 years ago, showing that the center of the old volcano has still a certain amount of activity.

The water in the harbor into which the sulphurous streams from this volcanic island drain has a peculiar property which completely cleans off growths of every kind from the bottom of any ship.

Fernie Coke.

The output of the coal mines near Fernie is about 1,100 tons daily and the 300 coke ovens now in use turn out about 450 tons of coke per day. The 60 new ovens will add about 90 tons a day to the coke supply, and this additional quantity will, it is estimated, furnish all the coke that the Boundary creek smelters will use until their furnace capacity shall have increased, and, too, any extra consumption at the Granby smelter at Grand Forks, to which five cars of coke a day are now being sent. Later, the company's new coal mine at Michel, east of Fernie, will be in shape to put out some 700 tons daily, but at present it is only adding 100 tons a day to the total, the country has available for shipment. Some time ago, when the provincial demand for coal and coke was comparatively small, a market was sought south of the international boundary line, with the result that the whole of the output of the company's mines could now easily be placed across the line. For instance, the Great Northern railway company is prepared to take 40 cars of coal per day, but the Crow's Nest company is not at present able to supply one-tenth of that quantity and at the same time keep its British Columbia customers supplied, while the railway and steamboat lines in Kootenay cannot at present be supplied with any coal from Fernie. The company is also restricting its shipments to Winnipeg and other points east of British Columbia to actual current contract requirements and is not accepting any new business from that direction.—Greenwood Miner.

Science and Mining.

Refining copper by the electrolytic method costs ½ cent per pound at eastern refineries and ¾ cent per pound at Anaconda, Mont.

Gold having been deposited as a black or brown powder, by means of electrolysis, will again redissolve if the solution contains free nitro-muriatic acid.

New Mexico's mining statutes make void relocation of a mining claim to avoid the performance of annual labor, if made within ninety days of the abandonment of the first location.
