Story Not Told in Court.

The suit of Henley vs. Reco Mining Company was settled without any evidence for the defense being submitted. Had the case been fought to a finish the evidence would have been decidedly interesting. As it is, the story of the visit of Lew Houck, the king of gamblers and card sharpers, to Sandon, will not be told in the witness box, unless it should come out in the course of a new suit instituted after the settlement in Henley vs. Reco. The case opened yesterday morning when court resumed. D. W. Henley, of Spokane, the plaintiff, was represented by L. P. Duff, of Victoria, and R. S. Lennie, while defendant company was represented by W. A Macdonald and N. E. Nnyum, of Spokane. J. Morgan Harris, president of the company, was in attendance. The morning session of court was devoted to the examination of plaintiff Henley, who is a Spokane attorney. His story was that he came into possession of the Reco stock given by Harris to Houck and Arthur, through advancing money to the latter, and that he was entirely unaware of the facts which placed Arthur in possession of the certificates. Witness was subjected to a lengthy cross examination, but his evidence was not impaired.

When court opened Mr. Macdonald applied for leave to amend his defense, by adding a clause to the effect that the were not valid because they lacked the war stamps demanded under the State of Washington, and also putting in certain by-laws of the befendant company. The application was refused because these matters were not included in the original defence, and would not, even if set up, determine the real question in controversy.

After the noon adjournment the litigants came together with their counsels and agreed on a settlement. Plaintiff received under agreement one block of 3,500 Reco shares and the costs of the action. The second block of 2,600 shares in dispute is to be returned by Henley to S. T. Arthur without prejudice to the latter's claim, if any exists. Then J. M. Harris commenced action against Arthur and the Reco Mining Company, to compel Arthur to deliver up the shares to be cancelled, and to prevent the company from honoring the certificates. Judge Walkem approved of the settlement, remarking that the evidence of the plaintiff was so clear and straightforward as to remove all doubt as to his bona fides.—Tribune.

From Far and Near.

Queen Dowager Margherita, of Italy, has just completed the distribution of her personal effects and has finally retired from the world. Her 300 superb costumes have been apportioned among her friends. Immediately after King Humbert's funeral she sent to the museum at Florence the exquisite embroideries which made so fine an exhibit at the Chicago exposition, and all her jewelry has been given to relatives. Young Queen Helena has received Margherita's royal diadem, valued at nearly two hundred thousand dollars.

Sir Francis Plunkett, the new ambassador from Great Britain to Vienna, will be more pleasing to the Austrian court because of the fact that he is a Roman Catholic, and the first diplomat of that faith to be accredited to Vienna for a long time. Sir Francis entered the service in 1855, and his record as a diplomat covers secretaryships to the legations at Yeddo (1873-76) and Washington (1876-77), the mission plenipotentiary to Japan (1883-87), and the Swedish mission which he filled from 1888 to 1893. Since the last named year he has been minister to Brussels. Sir Francis is the youngest son of the ninth earl of Kingall. Lady Plunkett, his wife, was a Miss Morgan, of Philadelphia.

Development on the Reco.

Mr. Harris to a Tribune reporter: In connection with the recent strike on the Reco property at Sandon, J. Morgan Harris, president of the Reco Company, gives some details of interest. The strike was made in the lowest level on the property, a tunnel having been driven to tap the vein 200 feet lower than had been reached previously. Some difficulty was encountered in finding the lead, a couple years elapsing before it was definitely located. The lead is only 12 icches wide, but in places it is solid galena carrying silver up in the thousands of ounces. At other points the galena is mixed with sulphide of porphyry. Where the galena is clean no assays are taken, but at a couple points where it was thought to be indifferent in quality samples were taken and gave returns 414 ounces in one instance and 549 ounces in another. Mr. Harris was notified of these figures on Tuesday. He states that it is possible to secure assays of 10,000 ounces at almost any spot in the mine, and that assays of twice this amount are not uncommon. The property has not shipped extensively in the ordinary sense of the term, its mining season being limited to a few months of in each year. Great bulk in shipping is not essential to the prosperity of a property like the Reco, however, when the average carload gives half a ton of pure silver. One banner car ran 500 ounces over a ton of silver bullion. The total output of the property has been $550,000. Mr. Harris states that the company will recommence mining in December and will take out ore for two or three months.

MINES AND MINING.

The Arlington since resuming operations has shipped 700 tons of ore.

So far this year the Rossland mines have sent out 170,000 tons of ore.

G. T. Kane thinks he has a tin mine of great value in the Dayton group, near Kaslo.

The Enterprise has shipped over 1,000 tons of ore this year, and its staff is to be largely increased.

Silverton has about 120 miners at work altogether, while the Payne alone, at Sandon, has more than that number.

Ore shipments from McGuigan for the month of October were: Rambler 178; R. E. Lee, 22; Soho, 21½. Total 221½ tons.

The Bondholder, near New Denver, has resumed shipping after a long rest. Its last shipment ran 218 ounces of silver to the ton.

In one of the Emily Edith's tunnels the ore body is 15 feet across. The entire property is now showing up in most satisfactory form.

The second payment has been made on the Fletcher group. This is a gold property, and was reported to have been sold for $30,000. The owners will start work in a short time.

The Corinth mine, near the Queen Bess, after being idle for the most part of several years, started up a few weeks ago with a force of ten men. They have now over five tons of ore ready to ship, and expect to ship from 200 to 300 tons this winter. The ore body is a very valuable one.

The mines around Slocan City, Silverton and New Denver are keeping up their shipments. Last week the Arlington sent out 40 tons and the Enterprise 20 tons. During the winter the Hewitt will make a considerable showing in the shipping list. It has 160 tons ready to send to the smelters.

W. R. Winstead returned last Friday from Whitewater, B. C., where he is extensively interested in mines, says the Spokane Chronicle. He reports the outlook in the Slocan is better than it has been for the last two years. The day Mr. Winstead left a strike was reported on the Sunset of 18 inches of high grade ore. This was in a different part of the mine from where they they were already getting out ore. They also had two carloads of ore mined and ready to ship. Mr. Winstead reports that the Sunset mine on Jackson Creek has been sold to George Hughes for $10,000 cash. It was sold by Spokane parties. This is a silver-lead property, and will net $2,000 a car. There is one carload ready to ship and enough ore in sight to pay for the mine.

THE LOCAL GRAFT.

Mrs. Pitts and family returned home this week.

A stock of the very best fountain pens at Cliffe's bookstore.

The Methodists have given the church contract to Duffy & Stoffer.

W. W. Beaton has been granted a license for the hotel at Bear Lake.

Miss Mary Crawford returned Monday evening from her long eastern visit.

B. C. Riblet, of Nelson, spent a few days in the city the first of the week.

Rev. Menzies, of Kaslo, preached in the Presbyterian church last Sunday.

Thos. Num, a miner at Moyie, was killed in a tunnel last week, by the fall of some loose rock.

Two of the west end damsels had a rock fight the other day, which resulted in a fine of $25 for one of them.

H. Byers & Co. have leased the lots next Mr. Nash's store, and are going to erect a large hardware store thereon.

There is much anxiety among Americans everywhere for the results of the elections to be announced on the 7th.

Tom Duffy says St. Peter ought to let him into paradise at half fare at least, after building all the churches in Sandon.

Clifford Seale returned to Sandon last week, after spending many months in the Windermere, working some claims he has there.

C. V. McCune was here on a visit from Salt Lake, and visited the Payne mine of which his father, A. C. McCune, is a large owner.

Waterland, who used to be here at one time, mulcted the city of Greenwood in $3,000 for damage done to some property he had there by an overflow of water.

The Rev. H. McKay, formerly of Eholt, is now to have charge of the appointments of the Presbyterian church at Nakusp, New Denver and Silverton. He was in Sandon on Thursday.

His Lordship Right Rev. A. Dontenville, Bishop of New Westminster, will bless the new St. Joseph's Catholic church on the 11th of November, at 10:30 a.m. In the evening there will be prayers and Benediction of the most Blessed Sacrament at 7:30 p.m. All are invited.

A peculiar case is before the courts at Nelson. The C. P. R. agents at Cranbrook and Moyie made up their minds to do up the railway, and this was the modus operandi. One agent would ship goods to the other town without making any entry in the books, and the agent receiving would make out regular expense bills and collect the freight. When it came to dividing the spoils they fell out, and one complained on the other, leading to arrests and trials.

It may be of interest to some of our readers to be informed that voters in the coming Dominion elections need not necessarily go to the local constituency in which their names are registered to poll their votes. For instance if a voter, now in the Slocan, is registered at Rossland, he can vote in the Slocan. In other words, a voter registered in the Yale-Kootenay constituency can vote in in any part of the riding.

To the Business Men and Residents of Sandon.

The Methodist congregation of this town is making an effort to build a house of worship that will cost about $1,700, when completed. A parsonage has already been purchased at a cost of $950, and the lot upon which our church will be erected, cost $500. Upon these properties there is some indebtedness, but we wish to open our church without any incumbrance upon it whatever.

Knowing that the fire must have seriously affected the resources of many persons, we have decided not to make an individual appeal. We do not wish to tax your well-known liberality, but we would at the same time beg leave to urge that our enterprise receive your attention, and whatever support you feel inclined to give.

Any contributions will be thankfully received by the members of our Trustee Board, and acknowledged in our reports issued quarterly.

A. M. Sandford,
Chairman of Board.
G. H. Smedley,
Secretary of Board.

Sandon, Oct. 25th, 1900.

The Madison.

This property purchased by the Slocan Sovereign Co., of Montreal, about a year ago, is situated as the crow flies, about one mile to the north of Sandon. It consists of a group of five claims, of which, however, the Madison and the Argenta are the only ones on which any extensive work has been done.

The Madison has now three tunnels in 425, 170 and 95 feet respectively, and is without wenzes or upraises. So far it has shipped no ore, but has quite a quantity on the dump. Lately in prospecting, a vein of very rich cube galena has been found in a cutting. No regular work has been done for some time on the property.

Considerable work is now being done on the Argenta, a staff of ten or twelve men being steadily employed. The property has five tunnels in 800, 225, 200, 95 and 75 feet respectively, with 325 feet of upraises and 50 feet of winzes. All told some 45 tons of ore have been shipped from the workings, with an average value of 135 ozs. silver and 10 per cent. lead. The general impression is the property will prove a valuable one.

Sandon Ore Shipments.

Sandon ore shipments this week were: Payne, 390; Last Chance, 90; American Boy, 19; Slocan Star, 40. Total 557 tons.

BARRIERS SWEPT AWAY

No other moment in the course of a woman's life is fraught with such significance, both in anticipation and retrospection, as the one which contains an offer of marriage. It is probably the basis of civilized society, it is certainly the culminating point of all stories, and the points of scenic arrangement and dramatic effect receive much attention from romance writers. In fact I am free to confess that I had not reached my twentieth birthday without having occasionally dreamed of the hour when Sir Launcelot would come riding down. I even pictured in fancy the gorgeous drawing-room (not our own) or the romantic glen, when a manly voice should repeat nonsense and plead for the boon of my regard. He should plead in right good earnest, too, for it was my privilege to be delightfully cruel once in my life. The girl of the period is much too easily won to be valued. My lover should fully appreciate the worth of my consent, it would be so long withheld.

But in my most improbable fancies I had never imagined the possibility that upon a wild and terrible February night, on the way home from the lecture of a popular humorist, as we clung together and hobbled over the icy pavement, Frank Moore should remark, in his usual terse, practical manner:

"I've been promoted, Kate. I'm junior partner now, and father has given me entire charge of the warehouse. That means a great deal to me now."

"I suppose so," I answered, intent upon balancing myself.

"Yes—hadn't we better take the middle of the street here?—it means enough for two, if she isn't killing extravagant. I shall go east the first of April. Can you get ready to go with me by that time?"

The suddenness of the suggestion and the high wind took my breath, but I was able to answer with great dignity, "No, I think not."

"First of May, then?"

"No, sir."

"Good heavens! You don't mean to say that you won't have me, Katie?"

Why couldn't he call me Katherine, as I made every one else do, and spell it with a K?

"You don't mean to say that you thought I would?"

"Why, no, I—well—yes, I rather thought that you might."

I could not see Fred's face in the Egyptian darkness; the little quiver in his voice I did not notice until I recalled it afterwards. We were both so occupied in keeping our equilibrium that neither could analyze the mental state of the other. We walked on in silence, and I was obliged to depend upon Fred's sustaining arm more than ever. I wondered if he had expected me to be so anxious to take the "trip" with him, that I could accept his loveless, unromantic proposition. How I wished that I could tell him that my heart was another's, but it wasn't, and he knew it. I might have said in calm kindness that we should always be friends as in the past, but he gave me no opportunity. His only further remark being, "What a thundering night!" a striking figurative one, by the way.

And I vowed a vow, in the depth of my injured fancy, that before I said "Yes" to Fred Moore that easy-going young gentleman should literally go down upon his knees in the most approved manner, and tell me that he worshipped the ground I walked upon, and that his only hope of life was in my smile. I meant that he should do it, too. If I was not too lightly won, neither was I to be lightly dropped. He left me at my door with a quiet "Good-night, Katie," and a moment later I heard the great hall-door of the Moore mansion slam with much energy, and then the well-known light appeared in his own room.

Mother looked up as I entered, and asked, "Why didn't Fred come in?"

"I didn't ask him," I returned shortly.

"Don't you think you treat Fred rather—well—childishly for a girl of your age? You are not children any more, and yet you tilt and quarrel as you did ten years ago."

"Fred Moore is the most disagreeable young man in town. He is a perfect bear and I detest him," I exclaimed, unbuttoning my boots with a vigor that sent the buttons flying across the room.

"Katherine!" cried mamma, "you are abusing your most faithful friend. He has been like a brother to you for years. You owe him too much to say any such thing."

"I know he has teased and worried and scolded me as devotedly as the most horrid brother would have done."

"Katherine, you shall not go to that skating rink another night. It makes you nervous and cross all the time. I knew you couldn't stand it."

I vouchsafed no reply, but stretched out my slippered feet to the fire and meditated. We sat in silence for nearly half an hour. At the end of that time there was a ring at the door-bell, and when I opened the door there stood Fred Moore.

A flash of triumph came over me. He had come again. I knew he would. Now he should make love in the most approved manner, and he would, for he looked so grave and resolute. He stepped into the hall, saying, "I came over to give the warning. Rob has just telephoned up to get ready for a flood. The river is on a tear and is rising fast. It will be as bad as it was last year, and perhaps worse."

"But it won't come up to Third street," I said.

It is over Second now, and rising. Front and First are six feet under. It is coming fast. Pull up your carpets, there's no time to lose. I will get help for the piano and heavy things if I can, but there's such a panic, I may not be able to. Hurry now," and he vanished into the darkness.

We tired to think of the most important things to do, but found ourselves with trembling, uncertain haste, doing the least necessary. Fred returned very soon with two or three strong men, and under his quick, business-like directions, preparations were made like magic. The piano was hoisted into wooden chairs, the library taken apart and packed upon the dining-table, the carpets were piled upon these, and the parlor furniture was carried upstairs. Mamma and I busied ourselves in carrying provisions and cooking utensils up to my room, which had a grate, the others being heated by registers. In twenty minutes the cozy sitting-room looked like the debris of a hurricane. Then a thin stream of water came under the front hall-door, for our house was low and old-fashioned. Fred turned to mother on the stairs, saying: "Mother is anxious to have you come over and stay with us until the danger is over. She does not consider it safe for you to stay here alone, especially as you are so delicate, Mrs. Burnett."

Mother was about to accept the invitation, but I answered from the top stair, "Oh, no, we shouldn't think of such a thing. We are perfectly safe here, and we have everything we shall need."

"You will both get sick or lonesome," said Fred, pulling his cap over his eyes, and looking at mamma.

"No, we are accustomed to living alone. You had better come upstairs, mamma, I urged."

She came, reluctantly, up a step or two.

Fred came upon the lower step.

"I shall leave my window open, Mrs. Burnett. It is not over ten feet from yours and if you should want help just make a noise. I shall hear you. Good night."

"We shan't disturb you, my dear boy, we are so much indebted to you already," said mother in her sweet voice. "I shall not try to thank you," and she took both his hands and looked into his face. He blushed like a girl, and dropped his eyes. "Good night; call me if you need help."

When we were alone in the blackness of the night, with the water climbing up the starway and beating against the doors, I could have cried out in my longings for the sufficient presence that had been our reliance for so many years. What would life be to mother and me without Fred Moore?

One foot on the parlor floor stood the water, two feet, three! and the piano began to float; the library was bumping around the dining-room. The current had grown swift in the street and all night long came cries for help from boatmen who were upset by the whirlpool at the corner lamp-post.

We could not sleep, but, like thousands of others, sat by the fire and awaited the worst all that weary Thursday night.

It did not take many of those waiting hours to show that I had loved Fred Moore all my life. A childish terror lest he should die or be drowned or go away before I could see him overcame me.

Higher and higher swept the flood. Another foot would reach the parlor ceiling. The frail old house shivered as the waves beat against it. At last the gray, awful dawn of that February morning revealed the "abomination of desolation" that had been wrought by the angry river. A turbid yellow lake lay between us and the brown tops of the hills—a lake that was navigated by a pitiful fleet of lost houses, homes to which some of the inmates were yet clinging as they swept on to destruction. How long before our home would be swept from its foundation and swept down the river? Mother looked wistfully at the staunch brick walls only twelve feet away, but twelve miles would not have seemed farther then.

She busied herself about breakfast with the calm adaptability of her nature. It was hard to think that she had ever cooked upon anything but a smoky grate, or used a larger table than the toilet stand that she spread with a towel.

Suddenly she gave a cry of alarm, "We forgot the bread, dear."

"Make pancakes, then. I brought up flour," I suggested, in my miserable idleness, as I curled up my hair.

"Did you think of baking powder?"

"No, nor soda."

"What shall we do?"

"Hello," cried a voice. I ran to the window.

"How are you this fine morning? Got plenty to eat?" called Fred from his window.

"O, Fred, we haven't any baking powder, nor bread, and we're hungry."

You shall have some of our biscuits, then; we have a store," and he vanished, reappearing with a tempting plateful of hot rolls.

"Now catch them or starve," he called, as one by one he fired them into my hands with the accuracy of a baseball pitcher.

"Shall call for you to take a walk this morning; don't forget your rubbers, it is damp." This was an example of the execrable jokes that flew back and forth during the day; but they had a mission, for we should have died of pure misery if we hadn't joked. A slow rain fell most of the day, and the river rose several inches before nightfall.

We slept that night from sheer exhaustion, and the next morning looked upon the terrible flood that had wrought such havoc.

Our own hastily-gathered supplies began to fail, and we hailed the news that the Government boat was on its way up the river, and the sufferers would be fed. We had not yet considered ourselves sufferers. Looking out at a sound, we saw Fred shove a long plank from his bay-window to our verandah roof and walk across upon it. Tapping at the window he entered, saying:

"Mrs. Burnett"—all his communications were addressed to mamma now—"father telephoned up from the offices that the relief boat is making such waves that all the lower houses are carried from their foundations we are afraid that yours is not quite safe. You must come over right away. Gather up what you can carry and I will come back for more. Be quick."

We made no resistance this time, but went, mamma first, and I the second trip, trembling over the plank, clinging to the strong arm of our rescuer. How good the Moores had always been to us. When Fred put his arm around me to help me in at the window I wanted to tell him how sorry and ashamed I was for my speech of Thursday night, but he helped me down and hurried back for some of our treasures. The house was rocking plainly now—it swayed with every wave.

"Oh! Fred, Fred, come back; it is not safe," I called. He came to the window in answer to my call.

"Dear old home," moaned mamma. "I was married there, and my children were born and died there, and husband lay in that very room," and she waved her hand in a piteous farewell. I am afraid my own feelings wavered between sentiment and regret for my paintings and my new black silk, just home from the dressmaker's.

Fred stepped out upon the roof with his arms full of goods, and before he could put his foot upon the plank the house gave a lunge and a groan, and, careening upon the side, swept out toward the street. I shut my eyes and screamed, while Mrs. Moore dropped upon her knees in an agony of prayer.

Surely no experience in after life can equal the anguish of the next half hour, and when we saw— How convenient to be limited by facts! I could describe a very graceful scene, as my lover, borne in with dripping locks and pallid face, if left to my fancy. But to say that he paddled up to the window alone, in Mr. Murray's water-trough, and was so completely encased in coating of mud that he was unrecognizable, seemed so ludicrous that our sobs of joy cannot be understood. He disdained our open arms and growled, "You women get out of my room, or I won't get in. Camphor sling be—be condemned. Get out, I'm freezing on the roof."

Then, in addition to having mamma crippled with rheumatism, and Mrs. Moore and her servant girl sick with colds, we knew, in a few hours, that Fred, our rock of help, must go down into the Valley of the Shadow with pneumonia. Soon after his icy bath his fever had risen, and I could hear his hoarse whisper as I passed in the hall. What if she should die with my cruel words yet in his ears! Was it on my account that he lay in danger? "O, my darling! my darling!" I whispered over and over again, and I

Dodd's Kidney Pills

The Business Girl and The Home-Bird.

The stay-at-home girl whose parents are numbered among the well-to-do, has far more opportunities, of meeting possible suitors and marrying well than the girl whose time is almost entirely taken up in the struggle for self-maintenance. The former has little else to do but attend to her dress, help in the domestic arrangements, and make herself attractive and agreeable; the latter spends all her time in traveling, working hard all day, returning home tired in the evening. Her complexion is not so fresh as her butterfly sister's, her dresses are plainer and quieter; yet, when it comes to the question of marriage, one has only to look round to see which of the two would make the best wife.

"The stay-at-home girl is the girl for me," says the unthinking youth. "She is prettier, more girlish, and more domesticated."

This may be. She would be a pretty little housekeeper, no doubt; keep the place neat and spotless, and cook the daintiest little dinners in the world. But would the average man be content with that? Does he marry because he wants a cook or a kind of superior housekeeper? Let us have a better opinion of him than that. He marries because he wants a wife and a companion, and as long as things are fairly comfortable, he is not particular as to the condition of his home—in fact, he objects to fussiness, and grumbles at having to change his boots or clear up his papers. A pretty wife does not satisfy a man nowadays. He wants to be entertained and amused. To be happy, he must have a smart wife, a lively wife, and a wife with plenty of fun as well as commonsense. For that he has to seek further than the girls who have lived a butterfly existence at home.

"When I marry," said a young man the other day, "it will be a girl who has never been further than the village in which she lives—a sweet, country girl, unhardened by contact with the world!"

"Then you would make the biggest mistake you ever made in your life!" said a practical friend. "You would get tired of her in a month. Take my advice, and when you do marry, choose a wife, whose charm lies in her self-helpfulness and her developed mind. Select a wife for everything but her ignorance, and you will not go far wrong."

And there is a great deal of truth in this. A man takes a fancy to a girl he has seen but three or four times—perhaps on the tennis-court, or at a friend's house. She is pretty and girlish, and well-dressed, and by and by the two become engaged. If he is fortunate, he finds out his mistake before it is too late. Even then he sometimes sacrifices his future happiness by honourably carrying out his contract. The girl he has married is vain, simple, and narrow-minded. She has but few ideas in her head, and those he knows by heart. He cannot imagine how he could possibly have been attracted by such a very uninteresting woman. Yet she is as pretty and as well-dressed as when he first saw her.

Thus the girl who spends the best part of her life in a city office has far better prospects of married happiness. The strain of daily travelling and close work may have stolen the bloom frrom her cheek; she may make hideous failures in her first attempts at cookery; but she has every advantage of keeping a man's affection. She can hold her own with him, for she has had almost as much worldly experience and she knows just how far money will go. Pettiness and spite—woman's greatest pitfalls—no longer sway her. Her life has improved her mind, if not her appearance.

"There is no reasoning with my wife!" said a much worried man to his father-in-law, as he overlooked his housekeeping bills. "She knows exactly what my income is, and yet she is for ever pestering me to buy things I can't afford!"

"You took her from a luxurious home to a poor one!" said the father calmly. "You must remember that and bear with her and teach her the value of money. If you had been a wise young man, you would have chosen a wife who needed no instruction. Romance is nothing but a blind, and scarcely lasts the wedding-clothes out!"

There is no happiness in a home, rich or poor, which is governed by an extravagant wife; and there are few women in the world who can be taught to know the worth of money, except by suffering from the lack of it.

"I used to keep myself entirely on twenty-five shillings a week," said a happy bride, who had given up a Government appointment to become the wife of a struggling young artist. "Now I shall think myself rich indeed to keep house on the same money, and without earning it."

Had the daughter of a wealthy man left her father's luxurious home for the artist's modest little studio, she would have wept bitter tears over that paltry twenty-five shillings a week. Why, it would be nothing for her to spend that and more on the purchase of a single hat! How, then, could she keep house for a whole week on the price of a hat?

Again, the business-girl has had the corners knocked off her. She doesn't expect to be made much of and fussed after. In fact, she would think this rather boring than otherwise. She would rather be treated with ordinary deference and as a rational being than be called all the most endearing names in the world. Thus, unlike the spoilt home-bird, instead of fretting for the lover's caresses in the husband she is perfectly content with a steady affection.

SIBERIAN ROAD BLOCKED.

No Freight Except War Material Hauled on the Line.

Recent letters from Moscow, printed in the European papers, are full of details concerning the inability of the Siberian Railroad to meet the strain imposed upon it by the Chinese campaign. Beyond the Urals it is almost entirely occupied by the transportation of troops and military stores. No goods are accepted from private consigners and only occasional trains are run for the convenience of passengers, and it is often difficult to find a place even upon one of these. There is much difficulty in working the road, and men have been drafted from all the lines in European Russia, at dobule wages and a daily bonus, to work on the Siberian division. One of the great troubles is the lack of proper engines. Break-downs are frequent, and even troop trains are subject to constant and prolonged delays. All along the road the prices of provisions have risen to famine prices, and hay and oats are worth almost their weight in gold. The inhabitants of the different towns on the line are compelled to provide food, chiefly rusks made out of the ordinary black bread of the country, for the soldiers, who are on their way to the Chinese frontier. In some places the value of this commodity has risen to ten or twelve times the ordinary rate; and this scarcity of provisions is said to be causing an exodus from central Siberia toward European Russia. Information as to the actual condition of affairs is guarded jealously by the authorities, and it is thought that matters are much more serious in Eastern Siberia than any one would gather from the official bulletins.

LONDON ANARCHISTS.

The headquarters of anarchy in London are in the byways around Goodge street, Tottenham Court Rd., streets where you can obtain a five-course dinner for a shilling, wine included and as much bread as you please, and where you hear six languages when walking 20 yards. Many years ago Karl Marx, the philosopher of economic socialism, starved near here in a top garret, while he wrote his monumental book on capital; and ever since fanatical reformers have had a constant kindness for the place. As you walk down Goodge street or go on through the maze of backways to Old Compton street you may see some of the most famous revolutionists. An Italian whose name turns faces pale in many cities is a common figure. So far as the Italian anarchists in London have a leader, Enrico Malatesta is the man. A dark-complexioned and misery-stricken figure, he bears from head to foot the stamp of poverty. His beard, you often see, is of many days' growth, his clothes are greasy and worn, his forehead is furrowed, and there is a scowl above his deep-set eyes. Sometimes you will see Louise Michel, perhaps on her way to the meat market in Titchfield street for her supper. Louise Michel may be, and no doubt it, the most violent of demagogues in speech, but I doubt if to-day she could find it in her heart to hurt a fly. This poor, half-crazed, wholly pitiful woman is tragedy incarnate. To hear her speak, to catch the poignant misery of her every tone, is to realize the unhappiness of her life. Her bloodless face, her stooping, miserable figure, tell of this saddest of all anarchists.

FOR BURNS AND BRUISES.

The most important point in the treatment of burns is to at once exclude the air. Cotton wool saturated with sweet oil is a safe and effective application. Do not remove the dressing until the irritation has subsided. In the country mothers often cover their children's burns with flour. In serious cases a mixture of sweet oil and molasses is favoured. Vaseline will sometimes be sufficient. If the air is kept away nature will generally restore the tissue without other assistance.

Table oil or fresh butter rubbed immediately on a slight bruise will prevent swelling or disfigurement. But if the bruise is severe of course a little raw beefsteak is better. A slight bruise may often be best treated by a compress wet with witch hazel.

The first thing to do with a sprain is to apply water as hot as can be borne, and repeat until the pain is gone. The hot water may be showered on the sprain or wet cloths may be used if frequently renewed. The foot or ankle can be conveniently immersed in the hot water. The next thing is to keep the injured part thoroughly warm. This is done by winding it with wadding or flannel. The less a sprained limb is used, the quieter it is kept, the more likely it is to get well quickly.

TURF FIBERS

Are Now Being Used in the Manufacture of Paper.

According to the business columns of a Reichenberg newspaper, an Australian manufacturer, in his search for a cheap raw material for paper making, has successfully experimented with turf. It is alleged that from the cleaned and bleached turf fibres he produces a remarkably durable paper substance. This method is said to have been patented in various civilized countries and to be meeting with gratifying success. Paper of various kinds, pasteboard and paper boxes are now made out of turf and are declared to be of good quality and to have great power of resistance.

SIBERIA HAS DEPARTMENT STORES.

Blagovestchensk, in Siberia, is a city of about 40,000 inhabitants. It has many fine buildings, including four or five Greek churches, one of which is a cathedral, and one is in process of construction. Besides a large department store of a German firm, there is a Russian department store which would hold its own in Broadway or Sixth avenue in point of size and equipment. The building is of white stone and stands on one side of the large market square, where daily the country people congregate with their fresh supplies of milk, eggs and butter. The prices may be a little heavier and the variety of stock not so large as in the haunts of our American shoppers, but one cannot help feeling surprised at what can be bought in this faraway part of the world, including a large selection of toys, cameras and photograph supplies.

NEXT SEASON, PERHAPS.

Jones, reading newspaper—I'd like to murder somebody!

Wife, anxiously—What is the matter, dearest?

Jones, savagely—Here, that fresh young reporter, in his account of the Blank affair, has my new shirt waist down as a pink-and-scarlet creation, when it should be pink-and-sky-blue. And, just to think of it! I gave him a quarter cigar to get it right! O—h!

HIS THINK.

He thought he thought great thoughts and thought
No other thought a thought;
If others ever thought he thought,
They thought he thought he thought.

The Mining Review.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1900.

THE ELECTIONS.

As far as visits from candidates go, the people have but little to show them an election is pending, Mr. Foley, the Labor candidate, being the only one who has visited the place. All the same, however, a general election is on, and the people are to say whether or not the Laurier government is to be given a new lease of power.

Although some features of his administration have been very fair, he has seriously disappointed even many of his friends, and defections have followed by the wholesale, John Charlton, the veteran standby, being one who has left his leader. There is no doubt but that after all the promises about free trade, the country had a right to expect something different from the old national policy practically retained.

The N. P. was an advance of duties to prevent Canada from being flooded with American products at slaughter prices; and the assertion that they have lowered the duties on British goods is no assurance they have carried out their pledges. They used, in opposition, to tell the farmers of the eastern provinces they were robbed by the Canadian manufacturers, because competition from the States was shut out by the extortionate duties, and after five years of rule the agricultural implement duties remain in most cases unchanged, nay actually raised in some cases, and so all along the line.

Again, the pre-election pledges were jobbery and corruption would be put down, and still it is known scores of Mr. Sifton's friends have become wealthy by one haul after another from the Yukon cow. Even Mr. Sifton himself, who compromised with some of his creditors before he became a member of the cabinet, is now known to be a wealthy man, though at Ottawa he gave party after party, that it was known should have consumed most if not all of his salary. Exactly how all this wealth passed into the pockets of himself and friends, we do not know; but the mere fact it is there is proof the rigid economy promised in opposition was never practiced in office.

Mr. Foley, the Labor candidate, says he is not educated, but has common sense. It is not every man's fault that he has not received a good high school or college education, but if a man is not well posted on all public matters, in this age of cheap books and cheap papers, it is absolute evidence he is lacking in the qualifications that are necessary to make a good representative in parliament. College training does not give a man the incentive to acquire information, it only assists the natural abilities of the man; and without information and knowledge no man can properly discharge the duties of an M. P. It is not enough for a man to say he is a working man and knows the wants of the working men—he should also know whether these wants are just and fair, and if they can be satisfied without infringing on the rights and liberties of others. In doing this he must be familiar with the history of his country—its legislation, past and present, the legislation of other countries, bearing on the issues and how they work—the conditions and surroundings fully considered. If Mr. Foley is familiar with these matters, the mere fact of whether or not he is a B. A. from college is a matter of sceondary importance.

LICENSE AUTHORISING AN EXTRA-PROVINCIAL COMPANY TO CARRY ON BUSINESS.

"COMPANIES ACT, 1897."

CANADA:

PROVINCE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA.

No. 192.

THIS IS TO CERTIFY that the "Conder Claims, Limited," is authorised and licensed to carry on business within the Province of British Columbia, and to carry out or effect all or any of the objects of the Company to which the egislative authority of the Legislature of British Columbia extends.

The head office of the Company is situate in England.

The amount of capital of the Company is £20,000, divided into 20,000 shares of £1 each.

The head office of the Company in this Province is situate at New Denver, and Wm Henry Sandiford, Mining Engineer, whose address is New Denver aforesaid, is the attorney for the Company.

Given under my hand and seal of office at Victoria, Province of British Columbia, this 14th day of September, one thousand nine hundred.

(L.S.) S. Y. WOOTTON,
Registrar of Joint Stock Companies.

The following are the objects for which the Company has been established:—

(a.) To purchase or otherwise acquire and work any lands, mines, mining or mineral claims, mining rights, grants, concessions, leases, easements, or interests in lands, waters, mines, minerals, mining or mineral claims, mining rights and other hereditaments in British Columbia or elsewhere, and any property, real or personal, movable or immovable, for purposes incidental thereto, or to any other objects of the Company:

(b.) To prospect and search for, get, win, work and raise, either within the area aforesaid, or elsewhere, copper or other ores, metals, minerals or substances, and to carry on the business of miners, millers, smelters, and workers of any processes in the production, reduction and making merchantable of ores, minerals, metals, metallic products, suppliers of water, merchants and manufacturers and workers of any minerals, metals, articles, and things used in connection with mining, milling, smelting, and other processes aforesaid, or any of them:

(c.) To search for mines and minerals, and to acquire and grant licenses and other rights and privileges for the purposes of, or in respect of, the search for or winning and getting of copper or other ores, metals or minerals:

(d.) To purchase, take on lease, or in exchange, hire or otherwise acquire any real or personal property, live or dead stock, or any easements, rights, privileges or concessions, or any interest therein, necessary or convenient for the Company's business, or for developing or utilizing any of the Company's property, and to explore, work and develop the same:

(e.) To acquire, erect, construct, or hire and maintain and work, any buildings, plant, engines, machinery, fixtures, mills, roads, railways, tramways, canals, creeks, shafts, ditches, or other works which may be necessary or advisable for the purposes of the Company, whether on land of the Company or not:

(f.) To undertake and carry into effect all such financial, commercial, trading, or other operations or business in connection with the objects of the Company as the Company may think fit:

(g.) To acquire any inventions capable of being used for any purpose connected with any of the businesses or operations of the Company, or the license or right to use the same, and to acquire or cause to be applied for and obtained, any letters patent or concessions or privileges of an analogous character, whether British or foreign, in respect of any such inventions, and to grant and issue licenses for the use of any such invention or inventions, upon such terms and conditions as may be considered expedient:

(h.) To amalgamate with any other company having objects altogether or in part similar to the objects of this Company, or to acquire and undertake the whole or any part of the business, properties and liabilities of any person or company carrying on any business which this Company is authorised to carry on, or possessed of property suitable for the purpose of this Company:

(i.) To pay for any property or business purchased or otherwise acquired in shares (to be treated as either wholly or partly paid up), or debentures or debenture stock of the Company, or in money, or partly in shares or debentures or debenture stock, and partly in money; and to accept in payment for any part or for the whole of the property of the Company, sold or otherwise disposed of, shares, bonds or debentures or any other company or companies:

(j.) To improve, manage, develop, let or sell, or otherwise dispose of, charge or deal with, in any manner whatsoever, all or any part or parts of the property of the Company, or any rights or easements in or over the same:

(k.) To acquire by original subscription or otherwise, and to hold and sell, or otherwise dispose of, shares, stock, debentures, or debenture stock, or any interest in the revenues or profits of any company, corporation, partnership, or person carrying on any business capable of being conducted so as directly or indirectly to benefit this Company, and, upon any return of capital, distribution of assets, or division of profits, to distribute such shares, stock, debentures, or debenture stock among the members of this Company in kind:

(l.) To borrow or raise money for the purposes of the Company, and to execute and issue bonds or debentures, or debenture stock, to bearer or otherwise, mortgages and other instruments for securing the repayment thereof, or for any other purpose, with or without charge upon all or any of the property of the Company or its uncalled capital, and upon such terms as to priority or otherwise as the Company shall think fit:

(m.) To establish or promote, or concur in establishing or promoting, any other company whose object shall include the acquisition and taking over of all or any part of the property, assets or liabilities of this Company, or shall be in any manner calculated to enhance, either directly or indirectly, the interests of the Company, and to acquire and hold shares, stock, or securities of, or guarantee the payment of any securities issued by, or any other obligations of any such company:

(n.) To lend, invest, and deal with the moneys of the Company not immediately required, upon such securities, or without security, and in such manner as from time to time may be determined:

(o.) To make, accept, indorse, and execute promissory notes, bills of exchange, and other negotiable instruments:

(p.) To apply for, obtain, accept, adopt, and carry into effect, any Acts of Parliament, provisional orders, concessions, contracts, grants, decrees, powers or privileges, which may be deemed necessary or desirable for facilitating the objects, or any of the objects of the Company:

(q.) To procure the Company to be registered, or incorporated, or otherwise domiciled, represented, or recognised in British Columbia, or in any other place where it may be necessary or expedient so to do:

(r.) To hold in the names of others any property which the Company is authorised to acquire, and to carry on or to do any of the businesses and acts and things aforesaid, either as principal or agent, and either by the agency of or as agents or trustees for others:

(s.) To pay all expenses of and incident to the formation of the Company, and to remunerate and make donations (by cash or other assets or by the allotment of fully or partly paid shares, or in any other manner) to any person or persons for services rendered or to be rendered, in introducing any property or business to the Company, or in placing or assisting to place any shares, debentures or other securities of the Company, or for any other reason which the Company may think proper:

(t.) To execute and do generally all such other things as the Company may at any time consider conducive to the carrying out or attainment of the above objects, or any of them.

The Nelson Tribune represents that as the rest of Canada goes in the general elections on the 7th inst., so will this province go on the 21st. This is a very strange system of political morality, to say the least of it. For instance, it is well known to every well informed person in British Columbia, that this province never got money grants or public works in proportion to the revenue it gives the Federal treasury. It is just as well known to the people, the province is unfairly treated in representation in the House and the cabinet by the present government. These and many other complaints are purely local, yet if the rest of Canada endorses the Laurier government we should disregard our own convictions of duty in the matter, and vote for Laurier as the rest of Canada does! We repeat it is a very dangerous doctrine, and one that will never, while observed, lead to an improvement in political ethics.

FOOD MEDICINE

Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil is equally food and medicine.

A little of it sets the stomach at work on some easy food—that is medicine.

How does it "set the stomach at work?" By making strength: by creating strength: by turning the oil into body and life—that is food.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

Rambler-Cariboo a Mine.

Late news from the Rambler-Cariboo, a Sandon mine, is of an encouraging nature and shows that it is a mine of more than ordinary worth. This is shown by the returns from 38 tons of ore which were the last shipment made. This shipment went 541.9 ounces and 63.3 per cent in lead to the ton. The 38 tons yielded $14,568.20. Seven other carloads were recently sent to the smelter and yielded $1200 to $1500 net each to the company. These seven carloads were taken from the old workings. The 38 tons were from a new find on the 350-foot level going north into the hill. In the bottom of the winze on the 450-foot level while drifting on the ore body there has just been encountered a full face of ore that carries over 262 ounces and over 60 per cent lead to the ton. During the past summer there was installed on the Rambler-Cariboo the largest plant in the Slocan.

HER HUSBAND WAS A DRUNKARD

A Lady Who Cures Her Husband of His Drinking Habits Writes of Her Struggle to Save Her Home.

A PATHETIC LETTER.

"I had for a long time been thinking of trying the Tasteless Samaria Prescription treatment on my husband for his drinking habits, but I was afraid he would discover that I was giving him medicine, and the thought unnerved me. I hesitated for nearly a week, but one day when he came home very much intoxicated and his week's salary nearly all spent, I threw off all fear and determined to make an effort to save our home from the ruin I saw coming, at all hazards. I sent for your Tasteless Samaria Prescription, and put it in his coffee as directed next morning and watched and prayed for the result. At noon I gave him more and also at supper. He never suspected a thing, and I then boldly kept right on giving it regularly, as I had discovered something that set every nerve in my my body tingling with hope and happiness, and I could see a bright future spread out before me—a peaceful, happy home, a share in the good things of life, an attentive, loving husband, comforts, and everything else dear to a woman's heart; for my husband had told me that whiskey was vile stuff and he was taking a dislike to it. It was only too true, for before I had given him the full course he had stopped drinking altogether, but I kept giving him the medicine till it was gone, and then sent for another lot, to have on hand if he should relapse, as he had done from promises before. He never has, and I am writing you this letter to tell you how thankful I am. I honestly believe it will cure the worst cases."

SENT FREE TO ALL.—A sample package of Tasteless Samaria Prescription gladly SENT FREE with full particulars in plain, sealed envelope. All letters considered sacredly confidential. Address, The Samaria Remedy Co., 33 Jordan street, Toronto, Canada.

STILL HE CAUGHT CUSTOMERS.

A well known portrait painter was not always the receiver of such handsome honorariums as are now paid him for his portraits. Time was when he lived in a common lodging house, at an altitude of no less than seven stories. Necessity is the mother of invention, but how to induce a discriminating public to climb seven pair of stairs?

He put up a placard in the basement of the house, "Portraits taken here. Only ten francs. Studio on the third floor."

When the would be purchaser had arrived at the studio designated he found himself confronted by a placard, "Ten franc portraits. The studio has been removed to the fifth floor."

After much puffing and panting the fifth floor was reached, where a new bill met the inquiring eye, "The ten franc portraits. The studio has, owing to rebuilding of the premises, been temporarily removed to the seventh floor."

Having suffered so much the victim did not mind suffering once more, and the aspiring artist got another customer.

HOW A JAPANESE HERO DIED.

A lieutenant of engineers at Tien Tsin, with three sappers, crept up in the dark an dplaced a charge of guncotton at the huge gate. There was the dark and placed a charge of guncotton, but it failed somehow; and, as daylight was dawning already, the four Japanese felt that their manoeuver was in danger of failing, so one of them fired the charge with a match, blowing himself to death and glory, and giving entry to the allied army. His comrades rushed in and climbed the internal gate and burst the inner gate open. The Chinese, always cowards at close quarters, made no resistance, but fled into the town, where promptly ensued brisk street fighting for a while, but by the time the sun was fairly up the city was taken.

Green Ceylon and India Tea which is now being introduced into Canada, in the well known packages of the "Salada" Tea Company, has got one great advantage over Japan Tea; and that is, while it is of the same flavor and the same light coloring liquor, it is very much stronger and absolutely free from adulteration, which practically no Japan tea is. Ceylon Green Tea is sold in the sealed Lead Packets of the "Salada" Tea Company and is always fresh and fragrant as well as healthful.

Hay Fever Serious This Year.

Hay Fever this season appears to be of a very virulent type, developing inflammation of the lungs. Evidently in many instances into congestion and Hay Fever should not be trifled with. A most fortunate discovery to this class of sufferers is that marvellous microbe killer, which during the past two years has been found so absolutely certain in all cases of Hay Fever, Asthma, Bronchitis, Catarrh. It is very strange how people will persist in using snuffs ointments and washes which are not only disgusting to use but are useless. Catarrhozone is very pleasant—it is carried by dry air through the most remote air cells to the lungs. It quickly destroys the germs and cures simply because there is nothing left to excite disease. It is to be had from druggists, or the originators, N. C. Polson & Co., Mfg. Chemists, Kingston, Ont., will send it to any address in Canada or United States, post and duty paid, for $1.00.

OFF WITH THE CASH.

With a bright smile the beautiful Eskimo girl left us to join the merry throng in the ballroom.

"Your daughter is a gay butterfly!" I exclaimed, desiring to be very complimentary.

"For my part, I don't think much of this social life!" replied the mother, with sudden vehemence, "The idea of dancing every night till away along in March, and then lying in bed next day until August 1, or such a matter!"

It was on my tongue to say that these young people had too much latitude, but I checked myself.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer one Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Output of Iron in Canada.

The production of pig-iron in the Dominion of Canada in the first half of 1900, according to the American Iron & Steel Association, amounted to 45,234 gross tons. The total production in the whole of 1899 amounted to 94,077 tons, against 68,755 tons in the whole of 1898. Of the production in the first half of 1900 about one-sixth was made with charcoal fuel, the remainder being produced with coke alone. In the first half of 1900, Canada produced both Bessemer and basic pig-iron, two companies manufacturing Bessemer pig-iron, and one company manufacturing basic pig-iron. The production of Bessemer pig-iron was about one-third of the production of basic pig-iron. Neither spiegeleisen or ferromanganese was produced in Canada during the first half of 1900. The unsold stocks of pig-iron in Canada on June 30th, 1900, in the hands of manufacturers or their agents, none of which was intended for consumption by the manufacturers, and all of which was for sale, amounted to 13,673 gross tons, against 9,932 tons on December 31st, 1899. The number of completed blast furnaces in Canada on June 30th, 1900, was nine, of which four were in blast and five out of blast. On December 31st, 1899, there were also four furnaces in blast and five out of blast. Of the total number of furnaces in Canada, four use coke as fuel, four use charcoal and one used charcoal and coke when last running.—Bradstreet's.

We have arranged to club the Winnipeg Free Press with the MINING REVIEW for $2.50 a year, throwing in the balance of 1900 free. With the joint subscription we present our readers during the year with 30 pictures of the leading men of Canada. If you want the two papers for 14 months and the pictures, send in your $2.50 at once.
