Tuesday Evening, July 5, 1887.

Jubilee Festivities.

LONDON, June 26.—The queen's party on Tuesday was unprecedently magnificent. It consisted entirely of kings, queens, princes and princesses of the European royal families who are guests of her majesty. The Queen of Hawaii, Prince Komatsu of Japan, and all the Indian princes were excluded, as they are to be entertained separately in a day or two at Windsor. The Indian princes have had the good sense to wear their national dresses, and these are most artistic and enriched with priceless jewels. Their conduct, however, is sometimes rath extraordinary. For instance, one of them is the terror of all the waiters at the hotel where he resides, for he very facetiously obliges his attendants to finish all that is left on the table after each meal, and to the evident delight of his highness, the poor fellows are rendered ill by overeating of pats of butter and such like bilious articles. The plate, which had been sent from Windsor for the state dinner on the 21st, was, says a correspondent, glorious, and at dessert the Queen used for the first time the service presented to her by the King of Saxony. It is of "pate jaune" with flowers in the middle, and is valued at £8,000. Gold and silver vases filled with exotics, and forty-two enormous candelebra, containing over seven hundred candles, illuminated the table. The Queen sat in the centre, and was dressed in black satin, covered with Maltese lace. She wore her usual widow's cap, with many diamonds on it, and star and ribbon of the Garter, with all her other orders. Her hands were literally laden with priceless rings. She had the King of the Belgians on her right and the King of Denmark on her left, and with them chatted throughout the banquet. The Queen of the Belgians sat next to the King of Denmark, having on her right the King of Greece. Then came the Crown Princess of Germany, who is certainly the plainest of the English royal family and who wore of pearls, some of which were the size of a pigeon's egg. The Princess of Wales wore the jewels presented to her by the city of London at her marriage. The rubies and diamonds worn by the Duchess of Edinburgh are valued at a quarter of a million sterling. The Crown Princess of Portugal had on superb emeralds. Behind each guest was a servant in scarlet livery with powered hair, golden epaulets and a court sword, whilst many gentlemen-in-waiting in full court attire were grouped around the table. The band of the Corps of Royal Engineers performed a selection of music during the dinner. When they played the "Blue Danube" waltz the Queen sent a messenger to the Crown Prince of Austria and smiled graciously at him, evidently wishing him to understand that she had selected this air in honor of Austria.

AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE

REMARKABLE ENTERTAINMENTS.

On Wednesday night London was alive with carriages. All the royalists went to the foreign office, where Lady Salisbury did the hon ors. The Princess of Wales looked lovely in gray satin, with pink tulle glittering with silver llama. She wore superb diamonds, and was certainly the best dressed woman present unless the Crown Princess of Portugal is excepted. The Queen of the Belgians was in deep blue velvet, and wore beautiful pearls. There were nearly 1,500 guests, including the Hawaiian Queen, who wore her famous sky-blue velvet garments. It was a bright scene. Later on in the evening the Prince of Wales went to the Austrian colony ball at the Metropole, whither the Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria had preceded him, as well as the King of Saxony, This was another success.

THE COTILLION OF HONOR

was danced by the Crown Prince of Austria, in his white uniform with the beautiful Countess de Grey, formerly Lady Lonsdale, who was exquisitely dressed in gold brocade, with a train of white corded silk. She looked very handsome, as did also the Countess Karolyi, the Austrian ambassadress, who wore an enormous moon-shaped tiara of diamonds. Princess Galitzine, who talked a good deal with the Prince of Wales, was in white gauze, the whole front of her dress being covered with diamonds. The Prince danced with the Countess Karolyi. He was heard to say as he stood under the decorated portrait of the Emperor of Austria, at the foot of which was a very good bust of the Queen:

"WHY THERE'S MOTHER,"

a remark which made the Countess de Grey laugh. All the English royalties dance well and are passionately fond of this exercise. The Prince of Wales is a very good waltzer. There were a number of Hungarian and Austrian noblemen at this ball in their national costumes. The Prince of Wales, out of compliment to the Crown Prince, wore his Austrian hussar uniform. The Crown Prince of Austria was the first of the royal guests to leave London. After Monday most of them who choose to remain will do so at their own expense. Some have arranged matters admirably by billeting themselves on their various embassies.

LADY ROSEBERY'S BALL.

A grand entertainment was given on Thursday evening, at request of the Prince of Wales, by Lord and Lady Rosebery at Lansdowne House in honor of the visiting royalties. By desire of the prince, knee-breeches, black silk stockings and buckle shoes were worn by the gentlemen invited. The invitation list was small, and included some well-known Americans, among whom were Minister Phelps, Lady Mandeville, Lady Randolph Churchill and Mr. Blaine. The rooms were exquisitely decorated, and the affair was a great success. The Prince and Princess of Wales, with the visiting royalties, were all present.

THE NEWS.

The Porte Must Ratify the Anglo-Turkish Convention at Once.

All Hope Abandoned of Rescuing the Imprisoned Nevada Miners Alive.

Russian Intrigue in Afghanistan.—Sad Accident.

OTHER ITEMS OF INTEREST.

By Associated Press.

ALL HOPE ABANDONED.

VIRGINIA, Nev., July 4.—All hope of rescuing the imprisoned miners alive is abandoned. The compressor air pipe was found fractured at a point 90 feet below the 1300 foot level. It is supposed they have been buried since the first night of the fire by the caving mass of rock and timber. The air compressor, which has been kept running at the highest possible speed since the night of the fire, stopped this morning. Efforts to break through into Best & Belcher's drift will not be attempted. It is now thought that the point of connection has been passed in sinking and the twelve foot drills are being sent out in every direction to probe the ground.

SAD ACCIDENT.

FENELON FALLS, Ont., July 4.—Three brothers named Moffett, aged 12, 15, and 17 years, were drowned today while bathing in Burnt River.

SEATTLE'S CELEBRATION.

SEATTLE, W. T., July 4.—The day passed off nicely. The parade, taking place at 11 a. m., was composed of representatives of all the trades of the city. An address at the university grounds, given by Hon. John R. Kinnear, was well received. The fire works in the evening closed the day's programme. The utmost good order prevailed and, notwithstanding a great many people went to Tacoma, the town was crowded. The game of baseball played at the race track this afternoon between Portland and Seattle nines resulted in a victory for the Portland's by a score of 9 to 7, a tenth inning being necessary to decide the game. The day has been a perfect one, only one accident occurred from the use of fire-works, and that is not serious.

LAYING THE CORNER STONE.

LONDON, July 4.—The queen laid the foundation stone of the imperial institute. She was accompanied by the Prince and Princess of Wales, Duke of Teck, Duke of Hesse, Prince Henry of Battenberg, and the Duke and Duchess of Connaught. Many other notable persons attended the ceremonies. Twenty thousand people were present. The queen replied to an address of thanks in a firm and audible tone.

MUST COME TO TIME.

LONDON, July 5.—Ferguson, parliamentary secretary for the foreign office, announced in the commons today that the Anglo-Turkish convention in relation to Egypt had not yet been ratified by the porte. He stated that England would grant no postponement of the signing of the convention by Turkey beyond to-day.

AN INDIAN LOAN.

SIMLA, July 5.—The Indian government will issue 4 per cent. bonds for a loan of two million pounds.

FROM THE FAR EAST.

LONDON, July 5.—Advices from Cabul say that the Ameer is suspecting the fidelity of Janishedies, near Herat, owing to the visits of the Russian embassy. The Khan threatens to execute him unless his tribe send to Cabul some of their chiefs as hostages. A number of the head men of Janishedies have gone over to the Russians. The forts at Herat have been repaired and the crops around the city harvested.

NO BREACH OF FAITH.

LONDON, July 5.—Balfour, chief secretary for Ireland, replying through his secretary to Healy's charge of breach of faith in connection with the crimes bill, says the government is still in favor of granting an appeal from sentence in all cases that he found a law already existed fully adequate, and further legislation was not needed.

The Dead.

John Paulet, Marquis of Winchester and earl of Wilshire, and premier marquis of England, is dead.

Condensed Despatches.

H. D. Whitney, secretary of the Montreal harbor board, has skipped. His defalcations are estimated at $50,000.

Dominion Day was celebrated in Toronto in an extensive manner. The procession was the largest ever seen in Toronto.

England and Russia have made mutual concessions regarding the Afghan boundary questions, which will, it is thought result in an early agreement.

From Lulu Island.

(Correspondence of the Columbian.)

The people on this side of the island have asked for a school, and a district has been laid off. Trustees were elected at the annual meeting, and parents are anxious that a building should be ready so that a school may open at the beginning of next term. The roads are not fit for small children to travel on in the rainy season, and it is very desirable that they should have the benefit of the time they are good. Visitors from other parts are delighted with the island. The North Arm is also worthy of a visit from any one who admires a farming country. Grass is looking well and promises an abundant crop where it has not been pastured too late. We saw rye on Mr. M. Steve's farm that measured six feet ten inches on the 24th June. Moncton Times please note this and tell us when New Brunswick gets ahead and we will try again.

Interior Happenings.

ENCOURAGING PROSPECTS OF THE MINES, ETC. MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

(From the Sentinel.)

Several mining claims have recently been taken up on Mission Creek, and the prospects are said to be of the most encouroging character. Many men have quit work at the adjoining ranches and gone to the mines.

The Thompson river has fallen about 8 feet during the week, and is still subsiding. It is hoped that the inconvenience of high water is now over for the season, as the bulk of the snow has melted from the mountains at the head waters of both branches of the river.

A sad accident happened to Mr. Walter Humfrey, of Grand Prairie, on Thursday last, whereby he had his leg so badly crushed that he was brought to the Royal Inland Hospital the same evening for treatment. It appears that Mr. Humfrey had hitched his horse to a log at Duck's corral; and the horse in pulling the log rolled it over upon Mr. H.'s limb.

Illecillewaet has evidently a golden future before it. Mr. G. B. Wright has in the neighborhood of 50 men working in his mines at that place, and it is said they are striking it rich. Mr. Wright has introduced some of the most modern and effective machinery, and ore-crusing operations will be commenced in a few days. The mines are rich in gold, silver and grey copper. It is said that $1,500 to the ton has been assayed. The formation is mostly slate and the ledges well defined. Wood, water, and transportation are all at hand, and there is little doubt that the mines will pan out well.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Suggestions to Fishermen.

EDITOR COLUMBIAN,—Through the columns of your journal I would call the attention of all cannery owners and managers to a scheme which has been devised for the protection of the nets of fishermen on the Fraser, and which, if adopted, will be a great saving to cannerymen and convenience to steamers navigating the river during the fishing season. I would suggest that one buoy, used by all boats when drifting, be painted a bright red and that all nets be so laid out that the red buoy would be always on the southern extremity of the net or port shore going down the river. With such a rule (which can be easily imparted to the Siwash fishermen), the position of a net can easily be determined by an approaching steamer and consequently steered clear of. Under the present system it is very difficult at times to tell from a steamer how a net is laid and a great many are run over and damage is done which could be avoided if this or some other system, generally recognised and adhered to, were adopted. I think that cannerymen should combine and come to some understanding on this point and advertise it to all mariners, the result of which would be a great saving to them and convenience to craft on the river.

Mr. R. A. Harrison, Chemist and Druggist, Dunnville, Ont., writes: "I can with confidence recommend Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure for Dyspepsia, Impure Blood, Pimples on the Face, Biliousness and Constipation—such cases having come under my personal observation."

Daily British Columbian

Tuesday Evening, July 5, 1887.

On Its Own Bottom.

The remarkable growth of Vancouver has been a source of wonder to many people. In less than two years it has grown from a village of 300 inhabitants to a city of 3,000. It possesses many fine substantial buildings, extensive wharves, miles of streets paved with three inch plank, and presents evidences of much enterprise and pluck on the part of its inhabitants. Vancouver is, however, emphatically a railway city, and as such, there is about it an artificial air. If the railway had not gone down Burrard Inlet, Vancouver would still have been unheard of, and beside the placid waters of Coal Harbor would still be standing the placid village of Granville. The new city was not, therefore, a natural growth, but was forced into existence by the railway and inflated by real estate boomers. It has been called a city of saloons and real estate agents. Of the former there are, we believe, no less than 52. It was expected that the commissioners this year would cut off about 11 of these; but when the time came the commissioners seem to have weakened and it is probable the whole batch of licenses will be granted. The subterfuges resorted to by some saloon keepers who had not the accommodation required by the regulations are amusing, and the commissioners must have shut their eyes and "gone blind" when they suffered themselves to be imposed upon by such stratagems. We are not certain as to the number of real estate agents, but it cannot be much less than the others, and neither of these classes produces anything by which the city can be benefitted or enriched. They are both equally interested, however, in booming the place for all it is worth. A few days ago we pointed out some of the peculiar features of this new city, and noted the fact that beyond the benefits it would derive from railway patronage (which will be very large) it has scarcely any natural resources, and that very soon it would have to stand upon its own bottom and be measured by what it is and not by what it might be. The Vancouver News of Sunday contains a carefully written article dealing with the present condition and prospects of the place which confirms the opinion that this time is not far off. It was the expectation of everybody that as soon as the railway was opened for regular traffic down to Vancouver, and when the transpacific steamship line had been actually established, there would be a very perceptible increase in real estate transactions, and an impetus would be given to every kind of business. This expectation has not been realized. Real estate men report quietness instead of activity, and the amount of general business throughout the city has not responded to the sanguine expectations of the citizens. The News says it is easy to talk of undeveloped resources and the immense traffic that is coming through the terminal city; but this talk doesn't pay one's bills or fill an empty stomach. Proceeding, the News remarks: "When a year ago one discussed the line of ocean steamers from here it was often replied that at the same time we should see an immense advance in the price of real estate, and a very great improvement in everything. Yet we do not think this has come to pass. The numerous improvements which have been made have given employment to a large number of men, and their wants have had to be supplied. But this will end at some time, and then we shall begin to think it would have been very satisfactory could we have found some permanent employment for them, so as to keep them here." Our cotemporary comes to the sensible conclusion that the railway traffic and the shipping will be unequal to the building and maintenance of a great city, and that the people themselves must give proof of their claim to success by establishing reproductive industries of a permanent character. The same remark applies to Westminster. Here we have resources partially developed and natural advantages which Vancouver has not, but if our citizens think some unforseen force is going to carry them forward to the goal of their ambition without effort on their part, they are going to be left. Westminster is in no sense a boom town. Her growth has been gradual, and she is the result of a legitimate and natural business demand. It is not to transient traffic she looks for the means of existence so much as to the more secure and certain trade of the river (which means the agricultural trade) and the benefits of manufacturing industries. But if Westminster lacks the energy and common sense necessary to harvest the legitimate fruits of her opportunities, there is nothing for her but disappointment. She, too, must rely upon her own resources for success.

Joseph Ruzan, Percy, writes: "I was induced to try Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for a lameness which troubled me for three or four years, and found it the best article I ever tried. It has been a great blessing to me." Beware of similarly named articles; they are imitations of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil.

WHAT PHYSICIANS SAY ABOUT THE STARR KIDNEY PAD.

"Treatment by Absorption has for some time been recognized by Medical Men to be the most simple and effectual means of conveying to Diseased Organs, "Curatives," but in cases of Kidney Disease and Complaints attendant thereon, successful treatment was practically impossible until the introduction of the Starr Kidney Pad. It costs less than a single prescrip*tion and is immeasurably more decisive and effective than any quantity of internal Medicinal dosing.* Worn immediately over the seat of Disease, its curative properties become absorbed by the diseased and enfeebled Organs, continuously and directly, as required to insure in return their healthy action and original vigour. It is comfortable to the patient and pleasant in its effects, and cures when nothing else can. The Starr Kidney Pad accomplishes positive, decisive results. A more valuable discovery as a true remedy for Kidney Diseases was never made.—Medical Gazette

The Starr Kidney Pad, manufactured in Toronto, is a permanent sure cure for diseases, disorders and ailments of the Kidneys, Bladder and urinary secretive system, or attendant complaints, causing pain in the small of the back, sides, etc., producing urinary disorders, such as too frequent, scanty, difficult, painful or copious micturition, inability of retention and sedimentary urine, dropsical symptoms, etc., denoting the presence in the system of diseases common to the urinary secretive organs—known as gravel, catarrh of the bladder and passages, Bright's disease, diabetes, dropsy, piles, nervous debility, etc. Send for pamphlet to LANGLEY & CO., Wholesale Agents, Victoria. LOST AT THE MILL.

In the beautiful district of Fannet, on the coast of Donegal, near Lough Swilly—the Lake of Shadows—lived two poor families, celebrated far and wide as the best neighbors ever known or heard of.

If Martin wanted a hand with his harvest Donnelly was ready to give it and ask no wages, and the kindness was returned when the potato digging came on. Their wives also lived in the greatest harmony, and they were such close neighbors that they met continually, for one roof covered the two houses.

This long cabin, or rather range of cabins, stood on the banks of Mulroy, an inlet of the Atlantic, so landlocked as *to look like a lake. Behind towered gi*gantic heather-crowned mountains; in front lay the high road leading from the sea to Milford, the nearest market town, a winding road, hard and white from limestone, now dipping down into a valley, now mounting up a sharp hill, and always keeping close to the blue waters of Mulroy, divided from it by a shelving bank festooned with woodbine.

Mulroy was studded with many islands —islands sacred to the "wee folks;" islands in possession of the sea birds; islands where sleepy broad-browed seals basked on warm evenings.

Beyond Mulroy rose more mountains, the nearer hills cultivated to their summits, the more distant so pale and indistinct that they were like smoke-colored phantoms against the sky.

Errigal, a cone-shaped mountain, the last point of Irish earth seen by the emigrants as they sailed to America, and Muckish, the pig's back, were most prominent in the range.

The Martins and Donnellys did not know that they were looking at one of the loveliest landscapes in the world. They thought Mulroy a wild, desolate place.

Sometimes the deep silence of the place was broken by the keening of mourners or the chant of priests, and then the children in the cabins would run out to the road, and look up and down.

A long procession wound from the seacoast, and on its way to yonder burial ground beneath the chapel at the edge of the lake—a holy spot, marked by a forest of black wooden crosses. The priest walked first; then came the coffin, followed by a motley company—men in long gray stockings, knee breeches and brogues, mounted on shaggy ponies, and women seated behind them dressed in homespun and scarlet headgear.

The keening woke the mountain echoes, the fairy glen throwing back the sound to the flax mill that stood, gaunt and grim, by the roadside; then the crying and chanting died away and flocks of curlew and plover circling overhead sang a shrill requiem.

Two of the children were wont to follow the procession—Teague Martin and Mary Donnelly. They were inseparable, toddling hand in hand to school, hand in hand to chapel, playing together, herding the cows together on the knowes. They would follow the procession together as far as the flax mill, a mile from their own doors, and would stay there to play. The gossips of the country remarked the tender friendship of the children, and foretold that it would end in matrimony.

The first separation of these little friends took place when they were thirteen years old, and Teague was hired by a farmer. Mary moped and fretted when he was gone, wandering sadly to the flax mill, their old play place, and then wandering back again with her head hanging down. But she found some consolation in knitting his socks, washing his clothes, and carrying the little bundle to him on Saturday at the farmhouse.

Things did not turn out as the neighbors expected. The friends did not become lovers; they remained devoted friends, but they married strangers.

Years went by. The old Martins and Donnellys were "gathered to their fathers," and Mary and her husband, and Teague and his wife, lived on in the old cabin, "under the roof wi' other," and the good neighborhood was the same as ever. Time passed; they grew middle aged, then old; the days when they had played at the flax mill were very far away.

One day Mary was taken very ill—so ill that the priest was sent for. She received the last rites of the church and then she asked for Teague. He was at a distance—gone to Milford with cattle to sell—would not return home till late. Mary watched the door as long as her sight lasted.

"Is there no word of Teague?" was her constant question. His name was the last upon her lips.

A woeful man was Teague when he found his old friend gone. He walked beside her husband after the coffin, and saw her laid low in the churchyard mould, and then he came back to the cabins, the truest mourner she had. But work had to be done, though his heart was heavy, and the next morning he took his flax to the mill.

As he jogged along the limestone road in his cart he was suddenly aware of a figure seated behind him on the bundles of flax. How had she got there? He thrilled with terror, and it was all he could do to look round and see who was his companion. An old woman? Yes; and her red shawl, the gray hair, the features, the blue eyes, which had never lost their brightness, all reminded him of Mary. He looked closer.

It was Mary certainly, and he must conquer his fear and speak to her for the sake of their lifelong friendship. Must Mary be a restless wanderer because her old comrade failed her? No —a thousand times no! So, with a tremendous effort, he conquered his dread.

"Mary, darlin', is it you?" he faltered.

"It is, Teague, dear; it is."

"An' what is it, Mary, that's keepin' you frae your rest? Sure you had the priest, an' he gave you the viaticum."

The voice he knew so well answered in accents that pierced his heart.

"There's nae rest for me. I flew up to the gate of heaven, but I wouldna be let in, and I'm flying about the world in the cold an' the rain, or lyin' aback o' thon thorn bush. Think on me, Teague, in the night time when you ones is comfortable by the fireside, an' pity me an' help me for the sake of we'er old friendship."

"Help you!" cried the poor man; "sure I'd gie my heart's blood to help you, but how is it to be done? An' why wad you not be let into heaven, a good livin' woman like you?"

"I'll tell you, Teague," replied the specter; "That's what I'm here to tell you. It's true that I went about my duty regular, an' knelt wi' the congregation in the chapel Sunday after Sunday, an' I was respectit for a good livin' woman, but in all my lifetime I never prayed. My lips would be movin', but my thoughts would be away.

"When I was a young girl I'd be thinkin' of my sweetheart or my dress or the dance at the fair; when I was a married woman I'd be frettin' about the childer, thinkin' ane o' them would fall into the fire or another would be drowned in the well while I was out, an' when I was old there was frets an' anxieties still; but, anyway, in all them years I never prayed, so I canna be let in."

"Mary, Mary, poor soul! What is it I can do for ye?"

"Listen, Teague. Go to his reverence, Father Dan, an' pay him to offer up twa masses for my sinful soul; but the money——"

"The money, Mary. It's here," touching his pocket, "aye, if it was twiste as much—it's here. But how will I know that the masses is accepted, an' that ye'll be let into heaven?"

The figure began to fade away, and the voice was fainter.

"If I am forgiven, the night after the second mass is said for me I'll come to you in the form of a white bird, an' I'll stand in the window, at the foot of your *bed, an' sing you a beautiful hymn be*fore I fly away to heaven."

The voice died away softly, and, just as they reached the flax mill the figure disappeared. Weary though Teague was that night, he went straight to the priest after supper and told him the strange tale.

Father Dan took the money and promised to say the masses, encouraging Teague to hope that all would be well with Mary.

"Come back an' tell me if she appears to you again," said he.

Some days later he had a second visit from Teague.

"Well, my good man," he began, "did you get any word from that poor soul?"

"I did, your reverence—I did."

"An' how is it wi' her now?"

"Thanks be to your reverence an' the Lord, she's got to her rest now! It was in the night time, an' I was lying on my bed wi' the blessed rosary in my hands, prayin' constant, when I heard the flutterin' o' wings at the window, an' then a beautiful hymn, like ane o' them hymns that is sung in the chapel on Easter Day, was sung, an' so I knowed Mary was going to heaven."

"Did she speak, Teague?"

"Feen a word! The hymn sounded fainter an' fainter, till it was like a wee gentle sound o' wind on the Lough, an' I was content in my mind to think that Mary was at her rest."

The flax mill on the Mulroy road was the scene of another ghostly appearance. The reader must transport himself in imagination across the ferry opposite the mill to the farms lying beneath the hills, from whence there was a good view of Teague and Mary's house, and the wild range of mountains behind it.

Rose Dillon was the prettiest girl in the whole country, and she had many admirers among the rich farmers—any one of whom would have pleased her parents better than the suitor she chose.

James Majilton was a handsome young man, but he was not rich—he had only the flax mill and a poor small farm and three cows. How vexatious it was that Rose should set her affections upon him, when she could have been mistress of a slated house and 14 cows.

Father Dan was entreated to use his influence, and he did say a word or two, representing the worldly advantages of Mike and Sam, Teddy and John. But it was all to no purpose. Rose blushed and persisted in clinging to James.

"Put your commands on her, your reverence; she willna go against the church," her father said.

"No, no; that is not to be done," replied the priest. "James is a good boy, he pays his dues regular, an' is diligent at his duty, an' obedient to his church. He deserves a good wife. Let Rose have him."

After that opposition ceased, of course, and a day was fixed for the wedding. Plenty of corned beef and cabbage, bacon and eggs, tea and whisky were provided; two fiddlers were engaged; the neighbors were invited to the feast; and all was going merry as a marriage bell, when James was taken suddenly ill. The priest was sent for, and then a messenger went across the ferry to summon Rose.

Alas! there was no time to say farewell. James was unconscious when Rose reached his bedside. To describe her wild grief would be impossible. Hanging over the corpse, she let her *tears rain upon his placid face, unheed*ing the grave reproofs of the women.

"Why do you be cryin' that way, Rose Dillon? Sure you know that your la*mentin' will keep him frae his rest.*"

They alluded to the belief that the inordinate grief of survivors troubles the departed soul, and weighs it down so that it is unable to soar toward heaven.

"Wad ye keep the poor fellow flyin' about the world?" asked her grandmother, who had been brought across the ferry to attend the wake. "Sure, sure ye wouldna be that cruel to the poor boy that loved ye true? Lay back thon sheet, girl, an' drop nae mair tears over him. I ha' knowed it done."

And then followed a long list of examples, the experience of close upon 90 years.

The "wake house," as the mill was called, while James lay there holding his last party, was quite full, and men and women listened to Grannie Dillon respectfully, shaking their heads gravely and uttering many an "Och, hock! and Alaise-a-me!" the while.

There was good cheer at this last entertainment of James's—his cousins had seen to that. Tea and bread and butter and whisky were provided in abundance, and there were plates of cut tobacco, bundles of clean pipes, and supplies of snuff for all comers.

The visitors went one by one over to the bed, and, turning down the sheet, took a last look at the corpse.

James was laid to rest in the chapel graveyard at the edge of Mulroy, and the plover and curlew circled over his head, and the work of the world went on as before.

It happened that Rose's father followed her down to the ferry one evening and found her gazing at the flax mill so fixedly that she did not hear his footsteps.

"What is it you see there, girl?" he asked.

"Oh, father, do you no see?"

"Naething ava, Rose."

"It's James that's standin' yonder on the shore lookin' over at me, an' whiles he lifts his hand an' waves to me. He's there every evenin' an' I still come here to meet him. It's the only tryst we can hold now."

She faded away from that time; and although James visited the mill no more, it was believed he was beckoning to her.

A year had not passed before the crones, meeting one another, said:

"Do you know that I'm just done hearing? Rose Dillon's got to her rest!"

It was true. The chapel bell was knelling for her; she was gone to meet James upon the further shore.

Dolly Varden Plasters.

An amusing incident occurred recently at a Seneca-street drug store.

A man had made several purchases, and to the clerk's inquiry if he wanted anything else he replied:

"Yes, there was something else my wife wanted me to get. Let me see, *what was it? Oh, yes; some Dolly Var*den plasters."

"What kind of plasters?" asked the clerk with a laugh.

"Dolly Varden! Dolly Varden!" was the answer, given with some show of irritation.

"Well, we've had some, but they're all gone. I guess you mean belladona plasters."

"Yes, that's it. I knew it was some*thing like that,*" and the customer's perplexed countenance lighted up with a smile of satisfaction.—[Buffalo Courier.

MR. G. ROBERTSON,

Representing Goldie & McCulloch,
Galt, Ont.

SIR.—We the undersigned having witnessed the terrible fire which wiped out of existence the young city of Vancouver, *on the 13th inst., have, after the fire, ex*amined the safes sold by you, some of which were put to the most severe test, having been surrounded by large quantities of lard and bacon, and we are pleased to testify to the remarkable manner in which every Safe sold by you preserved its contents, not only books and papers, but also thousands of dollars in paper money were taken out in perfect condition. We can, therefore, with the greatest confidence, recommend them as thoroughly fire proof:

1873. GRIP! 1887.

CANADA'S COMIC JOURNAL

GREAT IMPROVEMENTS FOR 1887.

THE AIM OF "GRIP" is to set forth, in *in an impartial and independent man*ner, the passing events of Canadian political and social life. Its Cartoons speak more definitely and more pleasingly than who'e columns of editorial. In its pungent, easily appreciable, and artistic style of presenting a subject, the whole situa*tion is revealed at a glance. The success* of Grip shows how well this fact is appreciated—its Cartoons on the passing political events of the country being even more eagerly sought after than the chaste and humorous letter-press of the paper,—though the latter is equal to that of any similar publication on the continent.

The publishers of Grip are making extensive improvements for 1886. The old cover is to be discarded, and the journal will hereafter comprise 12 pages, and be printed on heavy toned and calendered paper,—every number being so artistically executed as to compare favorably with the best papers on the continent. The advts. will be compressed and more syste*matically* arranged; while similar improvements will be made as to the letterpress. A new and handsome design will adorn the title page; while the Cartoons will certainly not suffer from extensive improvements in the artistic department.

The price of Grip will hereafter be $2 a year, which is lower than that of any paper of its kind in America,—most of them selling for $5. Single numbers of Grip will be 10 cents.

Twice a year, at Midsummer and Christmas, a beautiful special number will be issued, the number of pages being increased, and pleasing features introduced, particulars of which will be given in preceding issues. These numbers will be presented to subscribers without extra charge.

Patriotism without Partizanship;
Truth without Temper.

THE BRITISH COLUMBIAN

Printing Company

(LIMITED.)

ON THE 10TH OF JANUARY, 1887, the COLUMBIAN Newspaper and Printing Concern was purchased by a joint stock company composed of citizens of New Westminster, to be known as the "British Columbian Printing Co., Limited." The concern has been for nearly a year owned and controlled by the British Columbia Stationery and Printing Company, of New Westminster, Victoria and Vancouver. The object of the new company is to continue the publication of the BRITISH COLUMBIAN newspaper and carry on a general printing and publishing concern, controlled entirely by those whose individual interest it will be to promote the development, especially of the Mainland. There will be no *slackening of the energy hitherto dis*played in the management of the estab*lishment, and its patrons may rely upon* receiving full value for their money. The COLUMBIAN will continue to be entirely independent in both Dominion and provincial politics, and will devote itself to the advancement of such schemes as may be considered in the public interest. The concern is now entirely separate from any other business, the book and stationery establishment in this city having been taken over by Mr. T. R. Pearson, who will continue to carry it on in his own name and for his own benefit. It is desirable that a daily newspaper should be maintained in this city, and the new company asks for public patronage on the ground that it is engaged in an enterprise calculated to promote the public welfare. It asks that the COLUMBIAN be judged on its own merits and supported only so long as its policy is consistent with its professions. In consequence of this business change all accounts due the concern must be settled without delay so that the books of the former company may be adjusted and closed. THE ONDERDONK BUSINESS.—The defence entered with regard to the payment to Mr. Onderdonk of 120,000 more than the arbitrators awarded for his British Columbia plant is that "the government were morally bound to see that Mr. Onderdonk did not suffer loss." Surely this explanation is unauthorized. If the chief responsibility resting upon a government with reference to a contract is to see that the contractor does not suffer loss, the contract system is a farce. It has hitherto been the theory that the duty of the government is to protect the treasury and not those who make claims upon it.—Toronto Mail.

LEW JOHNSON'S MINSTRELS. — A large audience was present at the Drill Shed last night to witness the performance of Lew Johnson's colored minstrels. The programme consisted of songs, dancing and farces, and lasted about two hours and a quarter. The company cannot be said to be strictly first-class; yet, they provided a good evening's entertainment and were frequently applauded.

Y.M.C.A.—Last night the rooms of the Y.M.C.A. on Front st. were opened. There was a fair audience present, and appropriate addresses were delivered by Rev. Thos. Scouler, Rev. Robt. Lennie, Rev. Thos. Haddon, and Mr. C. C. Fisher. To-night the ladies' committee will give a reception commencing at 7:30. Light refreshments will be served during the evening, and a programme of music, etc., has been prepared. There will be no admission fee.

THERE IS A WIDE DIFFERENCE between medicines which affect merely the symptoms of disease and those which affect its cause. The first are useful as palliaties, the second, if of genuine efficacy, produce a radical cure. To the latter class belongs Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. Thoroughness of operation is its special attribute in all cases of Biliousness, Costiveness, Indigestion, Kidney Complaints, and Female Weakness.

City Council.

An Interesting Session.--Loan By-Law Sustained.---Spirited Discussion on Sunday By-Law, which was Killed in Committee.---Mayor and Councillors Show Their Hands.

The council met Monday night in the council chamber. Present, his worship Mayor Dickinson, in the chair, and a full board of councillors.

Minutes of last meeting read and adopted.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The following communications were read:—

From the secretary of the Orange order, requesting permission to use the "pavilion" on Albert Crescent on the 12th of July. On motion leave was granted.

From J. M. Draper, secretary of the woollen mill company, asking for the use of water lot No. 31 in front of the woollen mills. On motion, received.

From H. L. DeBeck, asking for grade of sidewalk in front of his lot on Royal avenue. On motion, received.

From Ackerman Bros., asking permission to use portion of street while moving Mr. Brigg's house. On motion received and leave granted.

From J. G. McDonald asking that same price be allowed by council for gravel from his excavations for street purposes, as had been allowed to others. On motion received and left in the hands of board of works.

PETITIONS.

A petition was read, numerously and influentially signed, protesting against the loan by-law, 1887, being adopted and put in force, on account of so many large property owners having been excluded from voting. Not wishing to resort to litigation unless compelled to do so, the petitioners requested that the by-law be not further proceeded with.

BILLS AND ACCOUNTS.

The following bills and accounts were read:

From F. Forrest, $49.50, ordered paid; F. Forrest, $47.50, ordered paid; John McCrae, $47.50, ordered paid; BRITISH COLUMBIAN Printing Co., $52.77, referred to finance committee; G. Pittendrigh, services as returning officer, $5, ordered paid; John E. Lord, burial of an Indian woman, $13, ordered paid; N. W. Gas Co., gas for June, $187, referred to committee; C. Murray, painting signs, $8, ordered paid; D. Lyal, stationery, etc., $3, referred to finance committee; chief of of police, $3.75, for keep of prisoners, ordered paid.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Coun. Duncan reported that there was an indebtedness of about $200 on the Mechanics' Institute, and it was for the council to consider whether it would be responsible for this indebtness.

His worship the mayor advised the council to take up this indebtedness; the library was a great benefit to the public and should be kept open.

On motion the account was referred to the finance committee, to be paid if found correct.

Coun. Shiles, for police committee, presented an application from the Chief of Police Devlin for supplies for the lockup.

Mayor Dickinson informed the council that the government had made arrangements to have the old jail and lockup pulled down on the 25th inst.

Coun. Duncan thought the government should have given more time so that some other place could be provided for the prisoners.

Several councillors spoke in the same strain, and various suggestions were made for the disposal of the prisoners.

Coun. Jaques—A good plan would be to tie them to the telegraph poles around town!

Mayor Dickinson—Or let them run with tags on, as they do dogs!

Moved by Coun. Jaques, seconded by Coun. Bonson that the report be adopted and the requisition of the chief of police be received. Carried.

The mayor and Coun. Curtis called attention to some defective sidewalks, and the board of works was instructed to have the necessary repairs effected.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The reconsideration of the loan by-law was brought up, and the mayor said it would now be in order to consider the petition on that subject.

Coun. Duncan referring to the petition, characterized the opposers of the by-law as cranks, soreheads and disappointed people; he said that quite a number of those whose names appeared on the petition had not paid their taxes, and displayed a great deal of cheek in thus coming forward. He was not in favor of forcing even a good thing on the people, however against their will, and thought that perhaps it might save a good deal of trouble if the by-law were not enforced.

There was some further discussion on the question, when it was moved by Coun. Jaques, seconded by Coun. Reid, that the by-law be reconsidered and finally passed to-night. Carried.

THE SUNDAY BY LAW.

Council then went into committee of the whole on the Sabbath observance by-law. Coun. Shiles in the chair.

Clause 1 was read, and after some discussion and objections by Couns. Bonson, Elliott and Jaques, the clause was defeated. Coun. Bonson remarked during the discussion that the tendency of the Sabbath observance by-law would be to ruin the the town.

Coun. Elliott then moved, seconded by Coun. Bonson, that the matter be laid over until next January.

It was moved, in amendment, by Coun. Curtis, seconded by Coun. Reid, that clause 2 be taken up.

The amendment was lost and the original motion carried, Couns. Duncan, Reid, and Curtis voting for the amendment, and Couns. Elliott, Bonson, and Jaques, and the mayor against it.

SOME FORCIBLE TALK.

Coun. Curtis—This by-law has been murdered for the present, I am sorry to say; but I must express myself on the subject if it is too late to save the measure. Mayor Dickinson has misled us. I repeat this, and I wish the press reporters to make a note of it.

Coun. Elliott (interrupting)—They've got no business to!

Coun. Curtis (continuing)—Mayor Dickinson promised the promoters of this by-law that he would support it through committee, and now he comes here, and after putting a supporter of the bill in the chair, votes to kill the by-law before the reading of the second clause!

Mayor Dickinson—I told Coun. Curtis that I would support the by law if it should come before the people, but after our experience with the loan by-law I don't want any more voting on by-laws.

Coun. Duncan—Although the by-law has been defeated, I want the council to know just where I stand on this question. I am in favor of Sabbath observance, and always have been and always will be. I do not believe that any business of any kind should be allowed to be carried on on Sunday. No works but those of necessity and mercy should be permitted on that day. In any other place where I have lived no business was carried on on Sunday. This is the only place in the British dominions where work of any kind is carried on all day Sunday. I believe if a Sunday by-law were to be enforced that before long those who are now opposing it would change their minds. It is unnecessary to submit the by-law to the people. It is for the council to say whether it shall pass or not. I am in favor of the by-law and I want the people to know it.

Coun. Reid—The intention was not to force anything upon the people, it was to get an expression of opinion from them. I am terribly surprised to find out the way things have gone. The question is not whether the people would have voted the by-law down or whether they would not. The question is to give the people a chance to say what they do want. It is needless for me to say that I am in favor of it. I introduced it. I was not prepared to have the thing killed.

Coun. Shiles—I do not understand why every man does not want one day of rest in the seven. I hope I shall live to see the day when a Sunday by-law will be carried and enforced in this city.

Mayor Dickinson—I have seen petitions before for Sunday closing; they never came to anything. I want the legislature to take it up first and make it general throughout the province. This way of dealing with the question only makes trouble. I am in favor of Sunday closing.

Coun. Shiles—I hope that no one of these gentlemen will ever have cause to regret that they killed this bill.

Coun. Elliott—I guess everybody's got a right to their own opinion and a right to express their opinion. I don't regret voting as I did.

Coun. Jaques—I don't believe there is a man around the table who opposes Sunday closing. The promoters of the bill were trying to rush it through.

Coun. Elliott—His worship the mayor has said that it makes trouble. Let the legislature pass a law and let them make it general all over the country.

Coun. Reid—It will be general as far as this town is concerned!

Moved by Coun. Curtis, seconded by Coun. Curtis, that committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again. Carried.

After the mayor had resumed the chair the report of the committee was adopted.

On motion the clerk was instructed to inform the woollen mill company that they can have the water lot on Front street for the same terms as allowed others.

It was moved by Coun. Jaques and seconded by Coun. Reid that the loan by-law be published in the COLUMBIAN and B. C. Gazette.

The police committee was instructed to report at next meeting on a suitable site for a lockup.

NOTICES OF MOTION.

Coun. Curtis gave notice that he would introduce at next meeting plans and specifications for the opening up of Royal avenue from St. Patrick st. Park lane.

Council then adjourned.
