NOMINATION UNANIMOUS

Best of Feeling Prevails and the Party will Be Victorious

Forty-six votes were represented, either in person or by proxy, at the Conservative convention held at Cranbrook Thursday evening in Wentworth hall. It was a most harmonious assemblage and the best of feeling prevailed.

J. A. Harvey's name was placed before the convention by Mayor Rogers and was seconded by F. J. Smyth of Moyie.

Thos. Caven was next proposed by Wm. Small and seconded by Wm. O'Hearn.

D. J. Johnson proposed G. H. Thompson and B. H. Short seconded the nomination.

Mayor Rogers was placed in nomination by Joseph Ryan and was seconded by J. P. Fink.

Caven, Thompson and Rogers in turn declined in favor of Mr. Harvey, making that of the latter unanimous.

Mr. Harvey addressed the meeting and thanked the delegates most sincerely for the honor they had bestowed upon him. He said he was in the fight to win and felt confident of success.

The meeting was brought to a close by giving three rousing cheers and a tiger for Mr. Harvey and the Conservative party.

The Surgical Butcher.

A Moyie lady had given her butcher her daily order over the telephone, and later in the day decided to change it a little and countermanded an order she had given for some liver.

Ringing up her butcher she said: "You remember that I gave you an order for a pound of liver a while ago?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"Well, I find that I do not need it, and you need not send it."

Before she could put down the receiver she heard the butcher say to some one in the shop: "Take out Mrs. Blank's liver. She says she can get along without it."

For a Hockey Team.

Now that the ice is commencing to form on the lake there should be no time lost in organizing a hockey team. At the Kamm banquet the other evening J. C. Drewry offered to contribute $10 towards a hockey team fund, and Geo. Batchelor offered to put his name down for $5, making $15 in all.

AT HOTEL KOOTENAY

Was Married on Wednesday to Miss Zilla Oliver of Victoria.

The Kamm banquet at the Hotel Kootenay last Saturday evening was a bumper tribute to the chief accountant at the St. Eugene mine, previous to his leaving for Trail to be married. About 40 of his many friends joined in giving him a sendoff that he will pleasantly remember as long as he lives.

J. C. Drewry was chairman and filled the position to a nicety. He had always the right thing to say at the right time and his remarks were always pithy and redounding with good sense.

After drinking to the health of the King and the President of the United States, the toast of Our Guest was proposed, coupled with the name of E. O. Kamm, who responded with much feeling.

F. J. Smyth then responded to the toast of the Province, D. A. Ayres and Geo. Batchelor to our American American Cousins and C. A. Foote and Harry Stewart to Athletics.

Then Mr. Hart, a commercial traveler of Toronto, gave a recitation from Bill DeVere's book, "Walk You Sucker Walk" after which Our Merchants was responded to by E. A. Hill and A. P. Macdonald.

The Island—What Island? After A. P. Macdonald and L. E. McGregor [illegible] were unanimous in agreeing that Prince Edward's Island was the island referred to.

Chas. O'Neil rose to the occasion and gave two stirring recitations. The first was "How Baptiste came Home," and he received such an encore that he gave the second, "Casey's Revenge."

M. A. Beale very ably responded to Our Suburb, Cranbrook, and A. W. Davie and Geo. Batchelor followed with a talk on The Bachelors.

J. P. Farrell spoke of Moyie and its Future, and P. J. Bonner on Mining.

Jas. Roberts made one of the best talks of the evening, when he responded to the toast of Labor. Mr. Roberts is secretary of the Moyie Miners' Union.

The Ladies—This toast was responded to by L. E. McGregor and Roy Clothier, and Mine Host by F. J. McMahon.

During the evening several telegrams were read, and the health of two absent ones was drank to—John Daly and D. J. Elmer.

Mr. J. Trinder presided at the piano and rendered several appropriate selections during the evening.

The spread was all that could be desired, and there were plenty of good things to both eat and drink.

Mr. Kamm left for Trail Monday and was married the following day to Miss Zilla Oliver of Victoria, but who for some time has been on the office staff of the Trail smelter. Mr. and Mrs. Kamm will be absent about two weeks, when they will return to Moyie and take up their residence.

Beverly of Graustark

By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON,

Author of "Graustark"

Copyright, 1904, by Dodd, Mead and Company

CHAPTER I.

FAR off in the mountain lands, somewhere to the east of the setting sun, lies the principality of Graustark, serene relic of rare old feudal days. The traveler reaches the little domain after an arduous, sometimes perilous, journey from the great European capitals, whether they be north or south or west—never east. He crosses great rivers and wide plains; he winds through fertile valleys and over barren plateaus; he twists and turns and climbs among somber gorges and rugged mountains; he touches the cold clouds in one day and the placid warmth of the valley in the next. One does not go to Graustark for a pleasure jaunt. It is too far from the rest of the world, and the ways are often dangerous because of the strife among the tribes of the intervening mountains. If one hungers for excitement and peril, he finds it in the journey from the north or the south into the land of the Graustarkians. From Vienna and other places almost directly west the way is not so full of thrills, for the railroad skirts the darkest of the danger lands.

Once in the heart of Graustark, however, the traveler is charmed into dreams of peace and happiness and—paradise. The peasants and the poets sing in one voice and accord, their psalm being of never ending love. Down in the lowlands and up in the hills the simple worker of the soil rejoices that he lives in Graustark; in the towns and villages the humble merchant and his thrifty customer unite to sing the song of peace and contentment; in the palaces of the noble the same patriotism warms its heart with thoughts of Graustark, the ancient. Prince and pauper strike hands for the love of the land, while outside the great, heartless world goes rumbling on without a thought of the rare little principality among the eastern mountains.

In point of area Graustark is but a mite in the great galaxy of nations. Glancing over the map of the world, one is almost sure to miss the infinitesimal patch of green that marks its location. One could not be blamed if he regarded the spot as a typographical or topographical illusion. Yet the people of this quaint little land hold in their hearts a love and a confidence that are not surpassed by any of the lordly monarchs who measure their patriotism by miles and millions. The Graustarkians are a sturdy, courageous [illegible] they fought themselves clear of the Tartar yoke to this very hour they have been warriors of might and valor. The boundaries of their tiny domain were kept inviolate for hundreds of years, and but one victorious foe had come down to lay siege to Edelweiss, the capital. Axphain, a powerful principality in the north, had conquered Graustark in the latter part of the nineteenth century, but only after a bitter war in which starvation and famine proved far more destructive than the arms of the victors. The treaty of peace and the indemnity that fell to the lot of vanquished Graustark have been discoursed upon at length in at least one history.

Those who have followed that history must know, of course, that the reigning princess, Yetive, was married to a young American at the very tag end of the nineteenth century. This admirable couple met in quite romantic fashion while the young sovereign was traveling incognito through the United States of America. The American, a splendid fellow named Lorry, was so persistent in the subsequent attack upon her heart that all ancestral prejudices were swept away, and she became his bride with the full consent of her entranced subjects. The manner in which he wooed and won this young and adorable ruler forms a very attractive chapter in romance, although unmentioned in history. This being the tale of another day, it is not timely to dwell upon the interesting events which led up to the marriage of the Princess Yetive to Grenfall Lorry. Suffice it to say that Lorry won his bride against all wishes and odds and at the same time won an endless love and esteem from the people of the little kingdom among the eastern hills. Two years have passed since that notable wedding in Edelweiss.

Lorry and his wife, the princess, made their home in Washington, but spent a few months of each year in Edelweiss. During the periods spent in Washington and in travel her affairs in Graustark were in the hands of a capable, austere old diplomat, her uncle, Count Caspar Halfont. Princess Volga reigned as regent over the principality of Axphain. To the south lay the principality of Dawsbergen, ruled by young Prince Dantan, whose half brother, the deposed Prince Gabriel, had been for two years a prisoner in Graustark, the convicted assassin of Prince Lorenz of Axphain, one time suitor for the hand of Yetive.

It was after the second visit of the Lorrys to Edelweiss that a serious turn of affairs presented itself. Gabriel had succeeded in escaping from his dungeon. His friends in Dawsbergen stirred up a revolution, and Dantan was driven from the throne at Serros. On the arrival of Gabriel at the capital the army of Dawsbergen espoused the cause of the prince it had spurned, and, three days after his escape, he was on his throne, defying Yetive and offering a price for the head of the unfortunate Dantan, now a fugitive in the hills along the Graustark frontier.

CHAPTER II.

MAJOR GEORGE CALHOUN was a member of congress from one of the southern states. His forefathers had represented the same commonwealth, and so, it was likely, would his descendants, if there is virtue in the fitness of things and the heredity of love. While intrepid frontiersmen were opening the trails through the fertile wilds west of the Alleghanies a strong branch of the Calhoun family followed close in their footsteps. The major's great-grandfather saw the glories and the possibilities of the new territory. He struck boldly forward from the old Revolutionary grounds, abandoning the luxuries and traditions of the Carolinas for a fresh, wild life of promise. His sons and daughters became solid stones in the foundation of a commonwealth, and his grandchildren are still at work on the structure. State and national legislatures had known the Calhouns from the beginning. Battlefields had tested their valor, and drawing rooms had proved their gentility.

Major Calhoun had fought with Stonewall Jackson and won his spurs, and at the same time the heart and hand of Betty Haswell, the stanchest Confederate who ever made flags, bandages and prayers for the boys in gray. When the reconstruction came he went to congress, and later on became prominent in the United States consular service, for years holding an important European post. Congress claimed him once more in the early nineties, and there he is at this very time.

Everybody in Washington's social and diplomatic circles admired the beautiful Beverly Calhoun. According to his own loving term of identification, she was the major's "youngest." The fair southerner had seen two seasons in the nation's capital. Cupid, standing directly in front of her, had shot his darts ruthlessly and resistlessly into the passing hosts, and masculine Washington looked humbly to her for the balm that might soothe its pains. The wily god of love was fair enough to protect the girl whom he forced to be his unwilling, perhaps unconscious, ally. He held his impenetrable shield between her heart and the assaults of a whole army of suitors, high and low, great and small. It was not idle rumor that said she had declined a coronet or two, that the millions of more than one American Midas had been offered to her and that she had dealt gently but firmly with a score of hearts which had nothing but love, ambition and poverty to support them in the conflict.

The Calhouns lived in a handsome home not far from the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Grenfall Lorry. It seemed [illegible] young women should become constant and loyal friends. Women as lovely as they have no reason to be jealous. It is only the woman who does not feel secure of her personal charms that cultivates envy. At the home of Graustark's princess Beverly met the dukes and barons from the far east. It was in the warmth of the Calhoun hospitality that Yetive formed her dearest love for the American people.

Miss Beverly was neither tall nor short. She was of that divine and indefinite height known as medium; slender, but perfectly molded; strong, but graceful—an absolutely healthy young person, whose beauty knew well how to take care of itself. Being quite heart whole and fancy free, she slept well, ate well and enjoyed every minute of life. In her blood ran the warm, eager impulses of the south; hereditary love of ease and luxury displayed itself in every emotion; the perfectly normal demand upon men's admiration was as characteristic in her as it is in any daughter of the land whose women are born to expect chivalry and homage.

A couple of years in a New York "finishing school" for young ladies had served greatly to modify Miss Calhoun's colloquial charms. Many of her delightful "way down south" phrases and mannerisms were blighted by the cold, unromantic atmosphere of a seminary conducted by two ladies from Boston who were too old to marry, too penurious to love and too prim to think that other women might care to do both. There were times, however—if she were excited or enthusiastic—when pretty Beverly so far forgot her training as to break forth with a very attractive "yo' all," "suah 'nough" or "ge 'long naow." And when the bands played "Dixie" she was not afraid to stand up and wave her handkerchief. The northerner who happened to be with her on such occasions usually found himself doing likewise before he could escape the infection.

Miss Calhoun's face was one that painters coveted deep down in their artistic souls. It never knew a dull instant; there was expression in every lineament, in every look; life, genuine life, dwelt in the mobile countenance that turned the head of every man and woman who looked upon it. Her hair was dark brown and abundant; her eyes were a deep gray and looked eagerly from between long lashes of black; her lips were red and ever willing to smile or turn plaintive as occasion required; her brow was broad and fair, and her frown was as dangerous as a smile.

As to her age, if the major admitted, somewhat indiscreetly, that all his children were old enough to vote, her mother, with the reluctance born in women, confessed that she was past twenty, so a year or two either way will determine Miss Beverly's age so far as the telling of this story is concerned. Her eldest brother, Keith Calhoun (the one with the congressional heritage), thought she was too young to marry, while her second brother, Dan, held that she soon would be too old to attract men with matrimonial intentions. Lucy, the only sister, having been happily wedded for ten years, advised her not to think of marriage until she was old enough to know her own mind.

Toward the close of one of the most brilliant seasons the capital had ever known, less than a fortnight before congress was to adjourn, the wife of Grenfall Lorry received the news which spread gloomy disappointment over the entire social realm. A dozen receptions, teas and balls were destined to lose their richest attraction, and hostesses were in despair. The princess had been called to Graustark.

Beverly Calhoun was miserably unhappy. She had heard the story of Gabriel's escape and the consequent probability of a conflict with Axphain. It did not require a great stretch of imagination to convince her that the Lorrys were hurrying off to scenes of intrigue, strife and bloodshed, and that not only Graustark, but its princess, was in jeopardy.

Miss Calhoun's most cherished hopes faded with the announcement that trouble, not pleasure, called Yetive to Edelweiss. It had been their plan that Beverly should spend the delightful summer months in Graustark, a guest at the royal palace. The original arrangements, or the Lorrys were hopelessly disturbed by the late news from Count Halfont. They were obliged to leave Washington two months earlier than they intended, and they could not take Beverly Calhoun into danger ridden Graustark. The contemplated visit to St. Petersburg and other pleasures had to be abandoned, and they were in tears.

Yetive's maids were packing the trunks, and Lorry's servants were in a wild state of haste preparing for the departure on Saturday's ship. On Friday afternoon Beverly was naturally where she could do the most good and be of the least help—at the Lorrys'. Self courtesedly she delayed the preparations. Respectful maidservants and respectful manservants came often to the princess' boudoir to ask questions, and Beverly just as frequently made tearful resolutions to leave the household in peace—if such a hullabaloo could be called peace. Callers came by the dozen, but Yetive would see no one. Letters, telegrams and telephone calls almost swamped her secretary; the footman and the butler fairly gasped under the strain of excitement. Through it all the two friends sat despondent and alone in the drear room that once had been the abode of pure delight. Grenfall Lorry was off in town closing up all matters of business that could be dispatched at once. The princess and her industrious retinue were to take the evening express for New York, and the next day would find them at sea.

The Weaving Horse.

"Weaving" consists in a motion of the head, neck and body from side to side, like the shuttle of a weaver passing through the web, and hence the name given to this peculiar and incessant motion. It indicates an impatient, irritable temper and a dislike to confinement in the stable. A horse thus affected will seldom be in good flesh or be safe to ride or drive. It is not considered to be a disease, but merely an individual vice, and there is no cure for it that I am aware of.—Veterinary in Atlanta Constitution.

Cause and Effect.

Shakespeare saw life in large and wrote as he saw. He never blamed it on to God." His pages are full of the inexorable sequence of cause and effect, and the swift march of deeds points the moral of individual responsibility. If things were "rotten in Denmark," it was because the fathers had eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth were set on edge; if Macbeth trembled at the knocking at the gate, it was because conscience doth make cowards of us all. The ghosts that haunted Bosworth field were of Richard's own creating, and Regan and Goneril, desperately dead, reap but their inevitable due. In short, Shakespeare's message is the message of a robust manhood and womanhood: Brace up, pay for what you have, do good if you wish to get good. Good or bad, shoulder the burden of your moral responsibility and never forget that cowardice is the most fatal and most futile crime in the calendar of crimes.

Cowards die many times before their deaths;
The valiant never taste of death but once.

—Martha Baker Dunn in Atlantic.

A FATEFUL NECKLACE.

It Brought Misfortune to Each of Its Owners.

Mme. Andreef was the wife of a broker on the St. Petersburg bourse. She was killed by her husband in a St. Petersburg summer garden. The Novoe Vremya tells this story of a pearl necklace the woman was wearing when she met her death: "It is an old piece of work by one of the best Parisian jewelers. It had been sold first to the head of a well known French court family. In the excitement of the great French revolution nearly all the members of this family were guillotined, and only a few of them managed to escape to Brussels and so save their lives. But the flight cost a lot of money, and they were obliged to part with many fine jewels, among them the necklace in question. From the time that they got rid of this article they enjoyed good fortune.

"This cherished jewel, after changing hands about ten times, was bought by the St. Petersburg jeweler Butz for 40,000 rubles ($20,000) for Prince V——, who was at that time a leading man at court. The prince, who was a great lover of the ballet, gave the necklace to the well known ballerina Tzukki. For having done this he was exiled from St. Petersburg. Tzukki left the imperial ballet, and, finding her health failing, she went to her native countryside and abandoned the stage forever. But before doing so she sold the necklace.

"A subsequent owner, the antiquarian Linivitch, died suddenly at Monte Carlo, and a whole series of people afterward who came into possession of the fated necklace had most sinister experiences. One of these, a gambler at Monte Carlo, lost all his money, and only the sale of the necklace saved him from beggary.

"Finally it fell into the hands of M. Andreef. He paid the low price of 20,000 rubles ($10,300) for it, and his wife was wearing it when in a fit of anger he killed her, to whom he had but a short time ago presented the unlucky token. The necklace has now mysteriously disappeared."

HOPE FOR THE SICK

A VICTIM OF LA GRIPPE.

Mrs. Henrietta A. S. Marsh, 700 W. 10th St., Los Angeles, Cal., President Women's Benevolent Ass'n, writes:

"I suffered with la grippe for seven weeks, and nothing I could do or take helped me until I tried Peruna. I felt at once that I had at last secured the right medicine and I kept steadily improving. Within three weeks I was fully restored, and I am glad that I gave that truly great remedy a trial. I will never be without it again."

In a letter dated August 31, 1904, Mrs. Marsh says: "I have never yet heard the efficacy of Peruna questioned. We still use it. I travelled through Kentucky and Tennessee three years ago, where I found Peruna doing its good work. Much of it is being used here also.—Henrietta A. S. Marsh.

Adopting an Heir in Japan.

The custom of adoption is universal in Japan, where it is practiced to keep a family name from becoming extinct. Indeed, there is scarcely a family in which it has not at some time or other been observed. A person who has no male issue adopts a son and, if he has a daughter, often gives her to him in marriage. A youth or even a child, who may be the head of a family, occasionally adopts, on the point of dying, a son older than himself to succeed him.

Many inherit weak lungs, and as disease usually assails the weakest point, these persons are continually exposed to attacks of cold and pulmonary disturbances. The speedy use of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup will be found a preventative and a protection, strengthening the organs so that they are not so liable to derangement from exposure or abrupt atmospheric changes. Bickle's Syrup is cheap and good.

The late dynamite explosion in St. Peter's was considered as anarchy's protest against religion. The Pope preserved his composure, and said: "It was some madman's act. I will pray for the wretch."

The World's Debt to Flowers.

I have never known man or woman who has not improved in character by becoming devoted to the affairs of flowers, and I venture to say that the world at large is under the deepest obligation to pansies, violets, roses and lilies, to name but a few of the blossoms that silently help the good angel of mankind.

Fate of a Japanese Traitor.

Traitors among the Japanese officers are not treated pleasantly when their misconduct is discovered. Bennet Burleigh in his new book on Japan tells of an instance. Two Japanese transports laden with men, stores and heavy siege artillery had been suddenly attacked by the Russian Vladivostock squadron. One was sunk, and the other escaped with difficulty. Who had given the information of the sailing of these ships? "The Japanese made search to find out who had dabbed and ultimately traced it to a high official in Tokio, one holding sea rank and engaged in the admiralty. A Russian check for a large sum was traced into his hands. He was confronted with it and his receipt signature thereon. Then he was led into a secluded room, where a number of his fellow officers had gathered. They stripped him naked, spat upon him and kicked him to death."

PREPARING FOR WINTER.

Some Timely Hints to Guide the Prudent Farmer.

October—Sow cover crops, rye and buckwheat, on ground that would otherwise be bare during winter. Late in the month harvest roots and store in pits or root cellar. Finish harvesting and storing apples, pears and grapes. Leave only hardy vegetables, such as parsnips, Jerusalem artichokes and horseradish in the field. These may be dug as needed through the winter or in early spring. Fill cold frames with lettuce, radish and onion sets for winter use. Sow spinach for spring cutting. Transplant all flowers for house use before frost. Dig and start in a dry place dahlias, cannas, gladioli and similar bulbs and roots. When the temperature goes below 50 degrees at night start a fire in the greenhouses. Plant last settings of strawberries in pots, early in the month. Celery must have a final earthing up. Asparagus and rhubarb for forcing must be dug and allowed to freeze before removal to the cellar.

November.—Final harvesting of cabbage, celery, roots, etc., and final planting of spinach. Make cuttings and scions of grapes, currants, gooseberries and tree fruits, tie in bundles and bury butt end upward. Stratify seeds of peaches, plums and other stone fruits and store where they will not freeze. Spread matches on bulb beds, around shrubs, upon herbaceous borders and, when the ground is frozen hard, upon strawberry beds. Prune grapevines and other trees. Plow or dig heavy soil and leave in loose condition to freeze. Cover cold frames with straw mats or shutters on cold nights. Tidy up the place for winter. Review the season's practice and improve plans for next year.

RAPE AS A STOCK FOOD.

Its Value as a Catch Crop For Forage and Green Manure.

At the Kansas experiment station last year a very good crop of rape was grown in wheat stubble by simply seeding with a disk drill directly behind the binder as the wheat was being harvested.

Rape may be grown in the corn fields, being seeded at the time of the last cultivation or afterward, but it has not been so successful when grown this way, as the corn takes the moisture needed by the rape.

Professor Burnett of Nebraska recommends sowing rape in the spring with some grain crop, such as wheat or oats, allowing the rape to take possession of the field when the grain crop is cut. He states that in Minnesota and the Dakotas with a good stand of rape in the stubble sheep can be turned in about three weeks after cutting the grain. Such a field will support ten or fifteen sheep per acre and keep them growing six weeks.

Professor Hitchcock says that "each year finds the area in which rape is grown extended until it now includes much of the spring wheat region of the northwest, where it is grown chiefly as a catch crop."

The above experiments indicate that rape can be made a prontable catch crop in Kansas, especially for the farmer who is raising sheep and hogs.

"As a green manuring crop rape, owing to its containing a large amount of water, does not produce a very large amount of vegetable matter, but what there is decays readily when plowed under, and when the crop is pastured there is generally a considerable amount trampled down, which when turned under adds materially to the productiveness of the soil.

Restoring Prairie Soil.

All who have taken up prairie farms will recognize the truth of the following statement of Professor Ten Eyck of Kansas in regard to them:

When the wild prairie is first broken the soil is mellow, moist and rich, producing abundant crops. After a few years of continuous grain cropping and cultivation the physical condition of the soil changes—the soil grains become finer, the soil becomes more compact and heavier to handle, it dries out quicker than it used to and often turns over in hard clods and lumps when plowed. The perfect tilth and freedom from clods, so characteristic of virgin soils, is always more or less completely restored whenever land has been laid down to grass for a sufficient length of time.

An Effective Wagon Jack.

The wagon jack herewith shown is reproduced from Farm Progress. It is simple in construction and effective in use. A is of oak 2 by 4 by 33 inches, B is 2 by 4 by 14 inches, C is 12 inches long, and lever D is 5 feet long, the short end being one foot. The drawing explains itself.

Chemical Weed Killer.

A chemical weed killer has been developed or tested by the Wisconsin experiment station in attempts to kill wild mustard, cocklebur, yellow dock, etc. The peculiar thing claimed for this poison is that when sprayed on a growing grain crop infested by weeds it kills the weeds without injury to the cultivated crop. The solution used consists of 100 pounds of iron sulphate dissolved in fifty-four gallons of water, which amount will spray an acre.

Walnuts In France.

In some parts of France walnuts form a regular article of diet. The peasants eat them with bread that has oftentimes been rubbed with garlic. The hygienic effects are considered good, replacing meat to a large extent. These nuts are also used to make oil. It is much cheaper and similar in taste to that pressed from olives and is employed to adulterate the latter. The prisoners in certain prisons are engaged in cracking walnuts and picking out the kernels, which are pressed into oil.

DISEASE BORN OF CARELESSNESS

Disease results in most cases from the presence of poisonous waste matter in the body, and may, therefore, be said to arise from ignorance or carelessness.

Bilious spells, sick headache, attacks of indigestion, kidney pains and backache—such are the indications of failure on the part of the liver to remove the poisonous waste matter as rapidly as it accumulates.

By the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills the situation is promptly relieved, because liver, kidney and bowels are set in vigorous action and the filtering and excretory system thoroughly cleansed and strengthened.

Neglect to afford assistance at such a time is to invite the attack of such ailments as Bright's disease, dropsy, rheumatism or appendicitis.

Mr. Wm. Cook, Moosomin, N.W.T., writes: "I have been taking Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and must say they have done me a lot of good. I have been a great sufferer from diabetes and I can say to all who are afflicted with this disease that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will do them good. I cannot say that I am entirely cured but I have been greatly benefited by this medicine."

Mr. John Wilson, 415 Dufferin avenue, Montreal, Que., writes: "Last February I was taken sick and had to have the doctor, who said that my ailment was a disordered liver. A few weeks after completing his treatment I began to notice symptoms of kidney disease. The urine took on a reddish appearance and continued to get worse until there were brick dust deposits, and then I knew that the kidneys were seriously affected and that I was threatened with Bright's disease.

"I obtained some of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and as a result of this treatment was completely cured. My water became a natural color and is still so. The cure was thorough and lasting."

By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, as often as is necessary to keep the bowels in regular healthful action, you insure yourself against kidney disease and the subsequent suffering from Bright's disease, dropsy, apoplexy or other equally dreaded ailments. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

A Modern Desdemona.

The London papers are printing the story of an English girl, Clara Casey, who married a Moorish acrobat, Mohammed Ben Bulkhassim, and who now in far off Tangier sighs for her Albion home as follows:

"Would I were in England again. I am quite miserable and lonely here, and it makes me cry it more when I see how Mr. Abdullah treats his wives and the way Mohammed treats me.

"There is a great difference. He is always hitting me, and he hangs at me now he has got me here and tells me I will never see you again, that I shall live and die here.

"Dear mother, I hope and trust to God I will soon be able to return to England again. What a fool I have been to give myself to this man!"

So far the intervention of the British consul has led to nothing for Miss Casey, and previously became a convert to Islam, and she stated that she had the approval of her parents.

The peddlers with carts who supply the occupants of villas in the environs of Paris with cherries and other small fruits frequently carry for sale a few small turtles. They are purchased by the inhabitants of the villas to be placed in their gardens, where they are believed to serve as very effective aids to the gardener by preventing the ravages of the insects and other small creatures which are accustomed to do much damage to the flower beds and borders.

Street Car Rules of Rio.

There are first and second class street cars, writes Albert Hale in the Reader, and I, with a package in my arms, had taken a first class bond, as a street car is called in Rio de Janeiro. Scarcely had I done so when the conductor requested me to transfer to a second class car whenever it might come along, because no one is allowed to carry anything greater than a lap satchel first class. So I humbly descended and had either to rub with market women and sweaty laborers or to take a tilbury. A tilbury, named after the English maker, who years ago introduced it, is a curious two wheeled, light springed cab, like an old fashioned gig, and resembles a hansom without the attachment for the driver. He sits inside the tilbury. A person without a necktie is no more allowed first class on the street cars than was I with my parcel. They are decidedly particular in Brazil and inherit many fastidious ways from the time of the empire, when dress and manners were the mark separating the aristocracy from the working classes.

Could Take His Choice.

At a recent inquest in a Pennsylvania town one of the jurors, after the usual swearing in, arose and, with much dignity, protested against service, alleging that he was the general manager of an important concern and was wasting valuable time by sitting as a juror at an inquest. The coroner, turning to his clerk, said: "Mr. Morgan, kindly hand me Jervis (the authority on juries)." Then, after consulting the book, the coroner observed to the unwilling juror:

"Upon reference to Jervis I find, sir, that no persons are exempt from service as jurors except idiots, imbeciles and lunatics. Now, under which heading do you claim exemption?"

At that he tore the envelope open. As he read a smile settled on his face, and, pulling a dollar from his pocket, he handed it to the boy.

"It's all right," he said.

Then he threw the message on the counter. "Read it!" he said to C. L. Newton, the clerk. The message reads:

WASHINGTON'S DEATH.

There Was Not Very Much of a "Mystery" About It.

Clement K. Shorter, an English writer of more or less distinction, surprised everybody recently by printing in a London newspaper an article in which he asserted there was a mystery surrounding the death of General George Washington about which Americans hesitated to talk. If there be a mystery we should like to know what it is.

George Washington caught cold when riding over his plantation at Mount Vernon on the afternoon of Dec. 12, 1799. Forty-eight hours later he died.

He was attended by three of the best physicians of that part of the country. He was bled no less than three times to relieve a sore throat, and he was dosed with calomel enough to deprive a healthy man of his life. But what is the mystery?

Enlightened physicians frequently assert that General Washington was killed—that he was bled to death and poisoned with calomel. Tobias Lear, his secretary, says that after the doctor had bled him to the extent of half a pint Washington interrupted with the remark: "The gash is not big enough. Make it wider." And the highly trained professional idiot proceeded to do so. "Does your throat feel any better?" asked the learned leech. "It's very sore," murmured Washington. When the second physician arrived Mrs. Washington tried to stay his murderous hand by protesting that "the general was too old a man to stand much bleeding." "Yes, yes," said the mighty doctor No. 2. "I'll be cautious in blood letting."

And then he proceeded straight to rob his country's father of a full pint of life's most precious fluid. When the third physician had come he rolled his eyes solemnly and said, "I will bleed him." "We both tried that," said the other doctors. "Yes, I know," announced the consulting sage, "but if blood letting does not relieve him I must increase the dose of calomel." After the third bleeding—in which we are not surprised to learn that Washington's arm yielded its life fluid more slowly than it had before—the sore throat continued in spite of the last consulting doctor, and when his wearied body failed to respond to a heroic overdose of calomel the two consulting physicians retired and left Washington to die. Is there any mystery in his death?—Utica Observer.

Peculiarities of Napoleon.

Napoleon's father was a toper, a man utterly lacking in moral sensibility, and his sisters were immodest and hysterical. According to Dr. Cabanis, Pauline was particularly so. Napoleon himself was exceedingly sensitive to atmospheric changes, was headachey and had auditory illusions. He had twitchings of the arms, the shoulders and the lips. He was at times the most irritable of men, often being unapproachable. His mania for destruction was such that he whittled pieces of furniture, broke articles presented to him, pinched babies while pretending to caress them and took keen delight in shooting Josephine's rarest birds. The slightest opposition threw him into a paroxysm of rage. But in a campaign all weaknesses vanished. His pulse ranged ordinarily between thirty and thirty-five beats a minute and never went above fifty-five. The usual pulse rate is about seventy-two a minute.

The Eyes of the Eagle.

That the eagle has a most wonderful power of vision is shown from the fact that it flies in almost a straight line for any object which it desires to secure. Baby eagles also possess this farsightedness. Long before human eyes can discern them their gaze is fixed on distance, and their cries of welcome to their parents are shrill and continuous. The structure of their eyes makes them peculiarly strong. The brightest glare of sunlight does not affect them. Eagles do not fly as high in the air as some other birds, but their flight is very long and steady. A peculiarity about eagles is that they are constant to their mates, not changing every season, as most birds do. Sometimes the same pair of eagles will return to the same nest year after year. They seem to become acquainted with the locality, and if they are not disturbed are regular tenants.

Caste in the Churches.

There was often too great a separation between the rich and the poor in our churches, said the Rev. Principal Henderson, of Bristol, at the Baptist Union's Conference at Huddersfield. Was it justifiable, he asked, to reserve all the time and energy of the most attractive servants of Christ to certain congregations? Was it quite certain that wealth should command what were presumed to be the choicest ministries? Material resources, also, should be applied where there was most need for them. With reference to the multiplication of rigidly separated sects, he said that if any apostolic letter were in these days to be addressed to the "Church of God in Huddersfield," he feared it would be returned as "insufficiently addressed."

At the concluding meeting Dr. Clifford, after referring to the remarkable speech of the Bishop of Birmingham at the Church Congress, he said, "Let all destroy the caste spirit in the churches. The temper of our time is essentially a temper of freed m, resistant of everything in the shape of tyranny over the intellect or the life of men."

Royalty Made No Difference.

King Haakon when he first joined the Danish navy was treated exactly like any other boy. The chief purser issued his mess gear, consisting of an iron knife and fork, a tin spoon, two tin plates and a zinc mug. On his way back to quarters the lad stumbled while going up a ladder, and all these things went flying over the deck, waking the chief gunner from a nap and bringing down on himself a volley of abuse. He then acted as mess boy for the other apprentices and had to fetch their soup, wash the plates and clean up generally.—Philadelphia Record.

Look Out For 1907.

A lama living at Lassa has issued a series of predictions for 1907. "The king of the year," he says, "is Saturn, under whose malign influence meritorious people will suffer and thieves will prosper. Great disorder will prevail. The rich will satisfy their hunger at the expense of the poor, and the earth will quake thrice."

Peculiar Accident to an Engineer.

Edward Spencer, chief engineer of the S.S. "Glide" of Montreal, was working around his engine when a hot bolt flew out and burned his arm terribly. It was as if a red-hot spit had been thrust into it. A supply of Zam-Buk balm was speedily obtained and first aid rendered. The famous herbal balm alleviated the pain, and to the surprise of Spencer and all his friends, at the end of a week the wound was completely healed. This is only one of several cases reported recently in which Zam-Buk has been proved a wonderful healer of burns, cuts, bruises, and abrasions. It is equally effective for ulcers, sores, poisoning, no matter how long these have persisted. Mrs. W. H. Taylor, of North Bay, Ont., says: "I had a scaly spot about as big as a ten-cent piece on my face. I had it for four years, and hardly a night during that time went by but what I applied cold cream or some ointment or other, but it would always be there, and the warmer the weather the worse it got. I recently applied Zam-Buk, and in about a week's time the spot had disappeared completely."

One of the world's greatest analysts says the healing power of Zam-Buk is due to the rare herbal essences of which it is entirely composed. For rheumatism and sciatica it is also a speedy cure. Its healing influence on the skin is unequalled, and it is so pure that the delicate skin of babes benefits from its application. It cures rashes and eruptions as well as more serious ailments, etc. Indeed, as a household balm it is working wonderful cures all over the Dominion. Druggists and stores sell it at fifty cents a box. A sample will be sent by the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, to all our readers who mail this article with a one cent stamp to pay return postage. Write the name and date of this paper across the article before mailing.

Great Things From Little Causes Grow.—It takes very little to derange the stomach. The cause may be slight, a cold, something eaten or drunk, anxiety, worry, or some other simple cause. But if precaution be not taken, this simple cause may have most serious consequences. Many a chronically debilitated constitution today owes its destruction to simple causes not dealt with in time. Keep the digestive apparatus in a healthy condition and all will be well. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are better than any other for the purpose.

The Bishop Apologized.

Dr. Temple was wont to rule the diocese of Exeter with an iron hand, and a tale is told of a deanery meeting at which he presided, when the subject for discussion was "The Hindrances to the Spiritual Life of the Diocese." After the discussion had proceeded for some time a vicar electrified his audience by declaring that the greatest hindrance to the full spiritual life was none other than the bishop himself. "I repeat it," said the speaker calmly, "our right reverend father in God is very far from being a father to any of us. Your manner toward us," he continued, turning to the bishop, "is harsh in the extreme, while your method of rule is this: You treat us all, old and young, as if we were a set of schoolboys." This bold statement drew from the bishop an apology, and he explained that beneath his brusqueness of manner was a very genuine sympathy with the work of all the clergy. This impeachment created the more sensation in the meeting because it came from a son of Dr. Temple's predecessor, the famous Henry of Exeter.—Westminster Gazette.

Minard's Liniment Cures Distemper.

The choir of a large metropolitan church had sung a Te Deum of a very ornate description, the end of which was not only complicated, but required the exertions of the full lung power of the choristers. A Pleasant Medicine.—There are some pills which have no other purpose evidently than to beget painful internal disturbances in the patient, adding to his troubles and perplexities rather than diminishing them. One might as well swallow some corrosive material. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills have not this disagreeable and injurious property. They are easy to take, are not unpleasant to the taste, and their action is mild and soothing. A trial of them will prove this. They offer peace to the dyspeptic.

Rev. Henry A. Buchtel, a Methodist minister who has been elected governor of Colorado, says he accepted the nomination with the understanding that he would continue to serve as president of the University of Denver.

Her Heart Like a Polluted Spring.—Mrs. James Brigley, Pelee Island, Ont., says: "I was for five years afflicted with dyspepsia, constipation, heart disease and nervous prostration. I cured the heart trouble with Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart, and the other ailments vanished like mist. Had relief in half an hour after the first dose."—27.

In 1619, only twelve years after its settlement, and one year before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth, the legislative body of Virginia enacted a Sabbath observance law.

To Cheer Him.

The wife of his bosom was going to leave him for a fortnight, and Fitz-Tomkins was trying his very best to look sad.

"My dear," he said, choking back a chuckle with his handkerchief and wiping his eyes, "I hardly like to think how I shall miss you. The evenings will be so long and lonely without you. I shall have no one to talk to."

"George," said Mrs. Fitz, surveying him with a marble eye, "I have provided for your comfort in this as in every other way. When you return home you will find dear mother there. She will remain till I come back and keep you company in the evenings, George."

And as the train slowly glided out of the station the guard wondered why Fitz-Tomkins nearly bit him when he insinuated a tip.—London Telegraph.

London's New Mayor.

Sir William Purdie Treloar, the new Lord Mayor of London, is a man of many parts and is most popular with the members of the City Corporation. On election day, when his name was proposed it was received with tremendous applause. To all other names the crowd shouted, "next," meaning that they were to be set aside until next year. The Lord Mayor is a Cornishman, 63 years of age. He has been a member of the Corporation of the City of London since 1889 and an alderman since 1897. From 1903 to 1906 he was one of the sheriffs of the city and has been a Justice of the Peace in Kent, Surrey and London. He is deeply interested in Egypt as mayor, being a director and trustee of T. Cook & Sons, Limited, and is, besides an author of some note.

One Kitchen to a Block.

A co-operative kitchen in the middle of every block to serve all the residents of that block is the latest solution offered for the eternal problem that faces every housekeeper. The plan seems feasible in view of the fact that the new Art club studios have a kitchen in common for the use of a small army of students who occupy bachelor apartments. It has been suggested by economists that a large kitchen be established in every block and that the place be under the direction of a chef with several assistants. The housewife could take her food there to be cooked, thus saving the price of fuel and keeping the house free from the odor of cookery and besides in many cases dispensing with the cost of dyspep. tablets and pepsin.—New York Cor. Pittsburg Dispatch.

State Should Make People Sick.

Greece is threatened with an odd strike. At a public meeting the physicians and druggists of Athens declared that their professions would soon be reduced to starvation. Many physicians of the city are actually in straits because of the ever-increasing clinics where patients receive free treatment. The disciples of Esculapius intend, therefore, to strike unless the government prevents the further establishment of clinics and permits them to increase their fees from two drachmas to three drachmas (a drachma is about 19 cents.) Although the motion to this effect was combatted by several physicians as unworthy of the medical profession, it was finally carried by a great majority, and the strike will probably go into effect soon.—New York Tribune.

Revenge.

"I'd like that tooth, please," said the small boy, after the dentist had extracted the small torment.

"Certainly, my little man; but why do you want it?" queried the dentist, handing it over.

"Well, sir," responded the gratified boy, "I'm going to take it home, and I'm going to stuff it full of sugar. Then I'm going to put it on a plate and (with a triumphant grin) watch it ache."—Pick-Me-Up.

Helpless as a Baby.—South American Rheumatic Cure strikes the root of the ailment and strikes it quick. R. W. Wright, 10 Daniel street, Brockville, Ont., for twelve years a great sufferer from rheumatism, couldn't wash himself, feed himself, or dress himself. After using six bottles was able to go to work, and says: "I think pain has left me forever."—26.

Governor Cobb of Maine, has been asked to remedy conditions in the Holy Ghost colony at Shiloh, which the county attorney says is a menace to the state.

'Tis a Marvelous thing—When the cures effected by Dr. Thomas Eclectric Oil are considered, the speedy and permanent relief it has brought to the suffering, wherever it has been used, it must be regarded as a marvellous thing that so potent a medicine should result from the six simple ingredients which enter into its composition. A trial will convince the most skeptical of its healing virtues.

Exercising Dogs.

Never take your dog out for a run directly after he has had a meal. If the exercise is at all hard the food will remain indigested for hours. It is best not to allow a dog to play even directly after he has swallowed his dinner. In a fifty lines he can do so, but do not encourage him to romp about.

Got Him Mixed.

Miss Backtay—What I like about Henry James is the clarity of his style, his reserve force and his absolute mastery in the field of epigram and antithesis. Mr. Cahokia—Yes, but when it comes to the fast ball, you know, I think Walsh has got him skinned to death.

Knew the Measure.

"When you get your groceries today," said the butcher to his wife, "don't go to that little grocer next door to my shop."

"Why not?" she demanded.

"Because he sent in yesterday and borrowed an old pair of scales."

No Sinecures In China.

Everybody in China works hard, even those who have reached the highest positions. It is related of a member of the Chinese cabinet that he left home every morning at 2 o'clock, as he was on duty at the palace from 3 to 6. As a member of the privy council he was engaged from 6 to 9. From 9 until 11 he was at the war department, of which he was president. As the member of the board of punishment he was in attendance from 12 till 2, and as a minister of the foreign office he spent every day from 2 till 5 or 6 there. In addition he frequently served on special boards of commissions.

The English of England.

The London Daily Chronicle gives these eccentric pronunciations of a few of the curious place names that dot the map of England: Rhudbaxton is Ribson, Woodmancote is Uddeumuckat, Sawbridgeworth is Sapser, Churchdown is Chosen, Sandiacre is Senjiker, Little Urswick is Lilosik, Aspatria is Spethry, St. Osith is Toosy, Chaddenwyche is Charnage, Happisburgh is Hazeboro, Salt Fleetby is Sollaby, Almondesbury is Amesbury, Conugresbury is Coomsbury.

Your Doctor

Can cure your Cough or Cold, no question about that, but—why go to all the trouble and inconvenience of looking him up, and then of having his prescription filled, when you can step into any drug store in Canada and obtain a bottle of SHILOH'S CURE for a quarter.

Why pay two to five dollars when a twenty-five cent bottle of SHILOH will cure you as quickly?

Why not do as hundreds of thousands of Canadians have done for the past thirty-four years: let SHILOH be your doctor whenever a Cough or Cold appears.

SHILOH will cure you, and all druggists back up this statement with a positive guarantee.

"THE BATTLE OF THE AGE."

Rev. J. L. Gordon Reads Five Prophecies in Signs of the Times.

In Massey Hall, Toronto, on a recent Sunday Rev. J. L. Gordon of Winnipeg, taking as his subject, "The Battle of the Age," delivered an eloquent address on the progress of the temperance movement and the outlook for a glorious future. That the triumph of truth and right was assured, a scan over the past two thousand years would convince the most sceptical. It was 1,400 years since Rome had fallen. Human slavery had disappeared, as also the degradation of womanhood. In view of these facts, the speaker entertained a profound conviction that, under the guidance of the Holy Bible, the battle for truth and right would go on to a glorious victory. He would predict five great achievements for the future. He could read the signs of the times that great and marvelous things would happen.

There would be a universal language—that of Shakespeare and the Holy Bible.

The removal of tariff walls and universal peace would cement the federation of the world.

He believed the time was soon coming when would exist the great political equality of men and women.

There would be an equal distribution of the wealth of the world according to ability and skill.

The cardinal precept in would be the restriction of the liquor traffic, so as to guarantee universal sobriety.

The speaker touched on the great possibilities of the Dominion of Canada for the development of a magnificent manhood. The world would see the greatest men in mental, moral and moral might spring from this land, which would be the stamping ground for the noblest ideals in the interests of humanity.

"If we can save the 500 cities of this country," he continued, "we can save the country. The saloons in the cities of this land, placed side by side, would extend from New York to the Golden Gate, and every saloon is the banqueting hall of death, the lighted corridors leading down to ruin.

"I see in this a city that is growing nearer the day when the rum traffic will not rule. There is a bright and brilliant hope out yonder, and the temperance people are doing a noble work. This is a serious conflict, and we are battling for the life of the home. On our side we have God, the church, conscience and the Bible, and there is no other side. We are making inroads into the camp of the enemy.

"The saloonkeeper has more respect for the temperance man now than he ever had before. But we must not stop at this, although we see the evidence that the fight is going our way. There is more advertising done by the liquor interests selling their wares in the last five years than ever before, which is a sure evidence that the work of the temperance league and the W. C. T. U. and other temperance organizations is telling against the forces of the wicked."

Objects to Pessimism.

Over in England the shareholders in Canadian enterprises believe that these are the growing times, and when Sir Charles Rivers Wilson, the president of the Grand Trunk, at the annual meeting of the shareholders, spoke rather dolefully upon some points, took as he often does a very pessimistic view of the situation, he displeased his hearers. One of these, Mr. Charles E. Morrison, writes to The London Financial News that "we might almost have been attending the obsequies of a railway company; instead of a paean of triumph, it was a positive dirge of despair. He comes back imbued with what? With the paucity of labor! Could pessimism further go? Of course, the country wants labor; this is resultant on its prosperity. And what about the thousands that are literally pouring into the country? The president speaks of the moral obligations of the Canadian Government. I hope the directors will not forget the moral obligations they are under to their shareholders. He tells us of the generally-improved position of affairs; but, lo! Canada we have to thank for this. Canada is on the flood-tide of prosperity, and we are simply going with the tide. The president talks lugubriously of possible lean years; but not even Grand Trunk directors can put back the clock in Canada. Had he not, at the finish of his speech, talked of an increased dividend to the third preference holders, some hard things would undoubtedly have been said. If we do not get our full 4 per cent. this present year, I trust that we shall band ourselves together and put an end to this burning grievance."

The Satisfactory Part.

Jamie having come into the possession of considerable wealth through the death of relatives was thus addressed by one of his neighbors:

"Aye, Jamie, it was a guid thing for you that your rich freens waur born afore ye."

"Weel," said Jamie, "I'm nae sae sure aboot that, but it was a guid thing that they deed afore me."—Dundee Advertiser.

Adapting Aims to Ends.

He—I think a woman's club, to be successful, should aim at something far removed from female suffrage. She—I don't agree with you. That should be its sole aim. He—Yes, but if it aims at something else it is more likely to hit that.

A Farce Reformer.

The people of the Faroe Islands cling to their old customs and see little good in change, says the author of "The Faroes and Iceland," but now and then one of them becomes a conservative reformer. Such was an old man of Stromo who, in his youth, had learned cabinetmaking in Copenhagen, then had been a blacksmith in New South Wales and later a marine in the Danish navy during the Sleswick-Holstein war. Having thus traveled far beyond the wildest dreams of his countrymen, he returned with a comparatively young man to Stromo and invested his savings in a house. Conservative though he appeared to outlanders, to the islanders he was a reckless innovator. He roofed his house with slate instead of with the traditional turf, but could find none to follow his example. They shook their heads in doubt. He argued vainly with them against the habit of throwing fish cleanings into the brook and getting drinking water lower down. The only advice they would accept from him and that after long hesitation—was to boil their fish oil outdoors instead of in the living room. But when this terrible innovator heard from a visitor that women rode bicycles in England he was so astonished that he asserted confidently that the world could not last much longer.

CURED HIS WIFE of LA GRIPPE

Quebec Man tells how the Great Consumptive Preventative was an all-round Benefit

"My wife took La Grippe when she was in Ottawa," says R. N. Dafoe of Northfield Farm, Que., in an interview. "She got a bottle of Psychine and after using it for a few days she was quite well. I took a cold and am using it and am getting all right. I think Psychine is one of the best tonics on the market to-day."

There you have the whole matter in a nutshell. La Grippe and colds are among the forerunners of consumption.

This man had one, his wife had the other. Psychine not only cured both but it built them up so that their bodies are strong enough to resist disease. All seeds of consumption are killed by

Merry Christmas.

The Kamm Banquet was a crackerjack.

Now for a good hockey team for Moyie.

When business gets sick give it a dose of printers' ink.

Today is the shortest day of the year. Pilgrim, do you notice the difference?

Moyie has missed several good shows this winter by not having an opera house or suitable hall.

Young man, have you written a Christmas letter to your parents at home? If not, "Do it Now."

Burglars entered the Standard Oil offices in Buffalo the other day. The amount of their booty is not reported.

Betting has already commenced on the elections in this constituency. Old Man Simpson won a hat on the nomination.

Outside of Moyie, the Leader will gamble there's not a town this far north that has as many artistically dressed Christmas windows as are the windows of Cranbrook's enterprising merchants.

The Appeal to Reason predicts that in a few years the Democratic party will be a thing of the past, and that the conflict for the mastery of the nation will be between the Republicans and the Socialists.

SOCIALISM ANALYZED.

Professor Laughlin of the University of Chicago told the members of the Industrial Association of America some solid truths on Socialism, declaring that men, in allying themselves failures, and asked society to do for them what they had been unable to accomplish for themselves. He took up the Socialism question with ungloved hands, and said that a man who is temperate, industrious, honest, and thrifty succeeds, while the man who is not fails. In other words, the man who is fit succeeds and the unfit fails. And when men who fail wish society to do for them what they confess to being incompetent to do for themselves, we have an explanation of the demand for socialism; for socialism is the philosophy of failure. The professor contended that labor unions are going to accomplish the good they aim at, not by an abuse of power, but by a sense of responsibility, and by square and honest dealings with those whose interests are inextricably bound up with their own. Labor and capital must work together. Labor must choose wise leaders and capital must co-operate with them in bettering the conditions which make for the good of all. The dangerous abuse of power is to be found in stimulating ignorance to act as arbitrator of difficulties; to make the unfit believe themselves the equal of the fit, a thing hard to understand Until the Socialists learn that all men are not equal in wisdom, ability and business power, they will never select the wisest leaders or escape from the effects of the frightful excesses.—Vancouver World.

King of All Cough Medicines.

Mr. E. G. Case, a mail carrier of Canton Centre, Conn., who has been in the U. S. Service for about sixteen years, says: "We have tried many cough medicines for croup, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is king of all and one to be relied upon every time. We also find it the best remedy for coughs and colds, giving certain results and leaving no bad effects." For sale by the Moyie Drug & Stationery Co.

H. CAMERON.

In Praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

There is no other medicine manufactured that has received so much praise and so many expressions of gratitude as Chamberlain's Cough remedy. It is effective, and prompt relief follows its use. Grateful parents everywhere do not hesitate to testify to its merits for the benefit of others. It is a certain cure for croup and will prevent the attack if given at the first appearance of the disease. It is especially adapted to children as it is pleasant to take and contains nothing injurious. Mr. E. A. Humphreys, a well known resident and clerk in the store of Mr. E. Lock, of Alice, Cape Colony, South Africa, says: "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to ward off croup and colds in my family. I found it to be very satisfactory and it gives me pleasure to recommend it." For sale by the Moyie Drug & Stationery Co.
