BRITISH COLUMBIAN.

VOLUME 21 NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C., WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1882. NUMBER 13

The British Columbian.

Wednesday Morning, February 15, 1882.

Our Piscatorial Interests.

It will scarcely be necessary to remind our readers that British Columbia does not participate in the advantages of the treaty made between the United States and Canada in 1871. Unfortunately for this Province it did not come into the Union until some months after the treaty was made, and the authorities at Washington were rigid enough to decide that British Columbia could not be allowed to come under its operations. The result to this Province is very serious—even more so than is generally understood. Our nearest market is in the United States, and were that market open to us under the treaty referred to a great deal of our fish products would go there. But when these products are met by a heavy duty, that market is practically closed against British Columbia. Take, for instance, the article of pickled or salted salmon, which is met by a duty of no less than three dollars a barrel—of itself a slapping profit. And so with fish in other forms and fish oils, for all of which a ready and profitable market would be found on the other side, provided they could enter under the provisions of the treaty of 1871. Then, again, there is the question of fish breeding. When the great and unquestionable importance of artificial fish breeding is considered in connection with the fishing industry on the Lower Fraser, one feels at a loss to understand why there should be any reluctance on the part of the Dominion Government to establish hatcheries. The importance of fish-culture is well understood at Ottawa, and Canada stands foremost among the nations in so far as turning that science to practical account is concerned. There is not, in the whole Dominion, a better field for it than this. The fisheries of the Lower Fraser have already become one of our principal industries, and under proper regulations and with due attention to fish culture, there seems no reason to doubt that it is capable of enormous expansion. In fact, the industry is as yet only in its infancy. Amongst the most important subjects demanding attention at Ottawa are the two above touched upon. We want an open market for our fish in the United States, and we want fish-breeding establishments for stocking our great fish farm, as well as more thorough regulations for the judicious and profitable management of that farm. It will, therefore, become the duty of our representative to bring these subjects before the Dominion Government in such a way as to secure attention and insure prompt action.

Sir Stafford Northcoat and the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The January number of the Nineteenth Century Magazine contains an article on the Canadian Pacific Railway from the able pen of the above named British statesman. The increased attention which the great North-west has lately attracted and the question of how it shall be utilized to diminish the evils arising from the overcrowding of population at home he deems a sufficient reason for placing before the public a short account of the history of the country and the scheme for spanning it by a railway. After giving a very accurate account of the growth of Confederation and the railway scheme up to the conclusion of the arrangement with the Syndicate, he says:—

Enough is known of the salubrity of the climate of British Columbia, as well as of its resources in gold and other precious metals, to warrant the expectation that a great development of population and trade may soon be looked for in that province.

* * * * * *

It is reckoned that when the Canadian Pacific Railway and its branches are completed, the Company will own four thousand miles of railway, and Canada and the world at large are entitled to ask to what use this great engine is to be put.

The answer is simple, viz.: that it must be to the interest of the Company to act as the key that is to unlock the great treasure-chest of the North-west.

* * * * * *

In another year emigrants will be conveyed from England to their destination exclusively through British territory. There is no appreciable difference between the mean temperature of Winnipeg and that of Montreal or St. Paul; and Canadians have before their eyes the success which has attended the settlement of the American Northwest. It will, of course, require time for Canada to settle this vast country. But great results can be obtained by the cultivation of a small fraction thereof.

After giving the area, population and wheat yield of Minnesota, the writer concludes as follows:—

Such an example may well encourage Canada to vigorously prosecute the development of her resources. As a matter of fact, the Government and Company are selling the freehold of lands along the line of railway at ten shillings an acre to bona fide settlers, and one-half this sum is returned to purchasers by the Company for all of their lands brought under cultivation within a term of three or four years.

It is early as yet to prophesy, but indications are not wanting that this policy will be crowned with success, and that the establishment of a gigantic wheat-producing country, rivaling and perhaps excelling in its fertility the best lands of the United States, may prove a double benefit to Great Britain by supplying a new and happy home for her distressed or redundant agricultural population, and by relieving the mother country from her state of dependence on a foreign, however friendly, nation for her supply of daily bread.

Bret Harte's Fables.

THE KIND-HEARTED SHE-ELEPHANT.

A kind-hearted she-elephant, while walking through the jungle, where the spicy breezes blow soft o'er Ceylon's Isle, heedlessly set foot upon a partridge, which she crushed to death within a few inches of the nest containing its callow brood. "Poor little things!" said the generous mammoth, "I have been a mother myself, and my affection shall atone for the fatal consequences of my neglect." So saying, she sat down upon the orphaned birds.

MORAL—The above teaches us what home is without a mother; also, that it is not every person who should be intrusted with the care of an orphan asylum.

THE PHILOSOPHER AND THE SIMPLETON.

A simpleton, having had occasion to seat himself, sat down on a pin; whereon he made an outcry unto Jubiter. A philosopher who happened to be holding up a hitching-post in the vicinity, rebuked him, saying: "I can tell you how to avoid hurting yourself by sitting down on pins, and will, if you will set them up." The simpleton eagerly accepting the offer, the philosopher swallowed four fingers of the rum which perisheth, and replied, "Never sit down." He subsequently acquired a vast fortune by advertising for agents, to whom he guaranteed £3 a week for light and easy employment at their homes.

MORAL—The wise man saith, "There is a nigger in the fence," but the fool sendeth on twenty stamps for sample, and is taken in.

THE WOLF AND THE LAMB.

A Wolf one day, drinking from a running stream, observed a Lamb also drinking from the same stream, at some distance from him.

"I have yet to learn," said the Wolf, addressing the Lamb with dignified severity, "what right you have to muddy the stream from which I am drinking."

"Your premises are incorrect," replied the Lamb, with bland politeness, "for if you will take the trouble to examine the current critically you will observe that it flows from you to me, and that any disturbance of sediment here would be, so far as you are concerned, entirely local."

"Possibly you are right," returned the Wolf; "but, if I am not mistaken, you are the person who, two years ago, used some influence against me at the University."

"Impossible," replied the Lamb, "two years ago I was not born."

"Ah, well," added the Wolf, composedly, "I am wrong again; but it must convince every intelligent person who has listened to this conversation that I am altogether insane, and consequently not responsible for my Actions."

With this remark he at once dispatched the Lamb, and was triumphantly Acquitted.

MORAL—This Fable teaches us how erroneous may be the popular impression in regard to the Distribution of Alluvium, and the formation of River Deltas.

THE SECRET OF BEAUTY.—No cosmetic in the world can impart beauty to a face that is disfigured by unsightly blotches arising from impure blood. Burdock Blood Bitters is the grand purifying medicine for all humors of the blood. It makes good blood and imparts the bloom of health to the most sallow complexion.

CHILBLAINS.—These troublesome complaints may be speedily cured by Hagyard's Yellow Oil, the Rheumatic remedy, which, as an external application and as an internal remedy has a wider range of usefulness than any similar preparation in the world. All druggists sell it. 25 cents.

The British Columbian.

Wednesday Morning, February 15, 1882.

Woolen.

"All cry and no wool," exclaimed the man, new to rural life, after a vain attempt to sheer piggy. Much the same may be said of Columbia's attempt to possess a woolen mill. For several years the necessity for such an industry has been discussed, and about a year ago a loud cry was raised. The legislature offered a premium, the Victoria City Council supplemented it, and New Westminster did some "crying" about it; but so far it has been "all cry and no wool." And still the drain upon the country's wealth goes on at the rate of hundreds of thousands of dollars every year. Our farmers sell their wool at merely nominal prices, to be manufactured into cloth in foreign lands remote, and sent back to us with all the profits and commissions and freights added, and upon which we must pay an import duty of about 50 per cent. Surely something should be done towards stopping this drain. If nothing better can be done, the people of British Columbia might do worse than follow the example of other new colonies and resort to the antiquated methods of treating wool, and wear the old "home-spun" in which many of their forefathers gloried. But surely the establishment of a woolen factory ought not to be beyond the capacity of a whole province. What any little municipality in Ontario can accomplish, and hesitates not in accomplishing, cannot surely be beyond the reach of this "glorious province." Such fecklessness, such lack of enterprise and ordinary helpfulness utterly shames our country.

Naval Architecture.

As a nation the United States has no need to "take a back seat." Its position is undeniably in the van of civilization. Yet in some things still considered essential to the make-up of a great nation it lags behind its inferiors. An illustration of this has just transpired at Washington, which must have proved galling to the national pride; for whatever may be the defects of our big neighbor, lack of national pride can hardly be reckoned as one of them. The absolute necessity of bringing the United States navy up to something like a respectable standard having deeply impressed the governing minds of the nation, a Naval Advisory Board was appointed. After solemn deliberation, the Board has reported a programme intended, if not calculated, to strike terror to the hearts of the nations and cause the American Eagle to soar higher and scream louder. The Washington correspondent of a leading New York journal, writing under date January 21st, says:—

A distinguished British naval officer, who is thoroughly informed on all questions involved, was asked to-day to give his opinion of the plan of the Board.

"I do not wish," he said, "to take the position of a censorious critic. At the same time, if you want my candid opinion I will give you a few facts which will enable you to make up your mind. The idea is to give the United States a navy which shall command the respect of the world and place the naval defence of the United States on a modern and adequate footing. Many of the cruisers are to be of wood and to have a speed of ten knots. That is not a modern navy in any sense of the term. The fastest ships are to have a speed of fifteen knots. In other words, at the best the fastest ships of your new navy cannot catch and cannot escape whole fleets of ships which they are designed to exterminate.

"To judge from their recommendations, the officers composing that Board are not acquainted with the facts of modern naval architecture and warfare. Their report reads as if they had examined the facts of naval construction for the past generations. The report ignores the whole development of naval warfare since the close of your own civil war. See how inadequate the proposed new navy is. My Government has designated forty of the fastest steamships of our mercantile marine to act as swift cruisers in the event of war. These ships, as you know, have a speed of from sixteen to eighteen knots. They are the fastest and best ships afloat, comprising the crack ships of the Atlantic and the Oriental commercial fleets of Great Britain. These ships were built with a view to the possible contingency of war, and so constructed that they can be, as you will see, instantly converted into very serviceable cruisers. Their decks are prepared for the reception of armaments, and right at hand, so as to be exceedingly valuable. This armament is held already constructed and convenient of access. Each gun carriage is expressly made for the designated place on each vessel, and every bolt and screw is ready, so that upon orders from the Admiralty the whole could be shipped and the vessel made ready for action at forty-eight hours' notice.

"Every new ship that is built is looked on as a possible cruiser, and built with that emergency in view, and as the science of ship building is developed in Great Britain from year to year, the navy, in fact, is reinforced by just that advance. What I have said of England is true, in a measure, of other maritime European nations. Germany, France, and Italy have built merchantmen which could be readily and would be instantly converted into faster and better cruisers than the best which the Advisory Board recommend.

"Now I think you can see from this statement how I look at the report of the Board. The plan is antiquated and ridiculous."

Editorial Notes.

Coal and fish are now the staple industries of British Columbia and constitute its principal articles of export. Last year the export of coal was 198,323 tons, at $4 per ton, making $793,292. The canned salmon exported during the same period was 177,000 cases, which, at $5 per case, amounted to $885,000. The salmon in barrels would at least bring it up to $900,000. Thus our last year's export of coal and fish aggregated about one million and three quarters, and it must be remembered that the coal trade was dull during the greater part of the year. Should the coming fishing season prove to be a good one, the pack should not fall much short of 250,000 cases, and there is every reason to expect that with a brisk coal trade, of which there seems every prospect, the export should reach 250,000 tons.

A few days ago we published a copy of the petition circulated in the Delta, Surrey and Langley municipalities, praying for the establishment of a steam ferry, and, in doing so, it was stated that the petitions had been forwarded to their destination. That was a mistake. The petitions have not yet been forwarded, but will be as soon as the members for the District proceed to the capital. We are now in a position to state that every settler in the three municipalities who was afforded the opportunity signed these petitions, and that all were afforded the opportunity with the exception of half a dozen in the most remote part of Surry, who could not very well be reached in time; so that the petitions may fairly be accepted as the unanimous voice of the people interested in the matter residing beyond the river.

In many branches of the fishing industry Indians answer as well as Chinese. In some they are better. The whole of the money paid for Indian labor remains in the country—goes into circulation. The greater part of what is paid for Chinese labor goes out of the country. The Indians are permanent residents of the country. The Chinese are not, and are not desired so to be. Under these circumstances it is clearly in the true interest of the country to utilize Indian labor as much as possible, and Chinese labor as little as possible. Could not such representations be made through the Indian Agencies as would induce more Indians to come here during the fishing season to engage in this industry? It has occurred to us that by a system of careful selection and apprenticeship a large number of young Indians might, with great advantage to themselves and the industry as well as to the country, be trained to be expert in the various branches of fish canning.

According to Hubbard's Directory, there are now 34,274 newspapers and periodicals published in the world, with a circulation of 116,000,000 copies. Of these 19,557 are published in Europe and 12,400 in North America. There are 16,500 of them printed in English, 7,800 in German, 3,850 in French, and 1,600 in Spanish.

THE RAILWAY SERVICE OF LONDON.—London contains fourteen strictly terminal railway stations, from which no fewer than 2,202 trains depart daily, and nearly 1,600 of these leave between the hours of 10 a. m. and 10 p. m. The largest number of departures from a single terminus is 320, after which come two stations with 312 and 295 respectively. These figures are exclusive of the immense system supplying the city with local transit.

AN AMERICAN CITY IN MEXICO.—A thoroughly American city has been laid out in the State of Chiapas, Mexico. The site is a beautiful plateau of land, through which runs a never-failing stream of mountain spring water, clear as crystal, full of fish, and affording power for any amount of manufacturing machinery, at an altitude of 3,000 feet above the sea level, on the line of the Mexican Southern Railroad. It is called Allen City. Around the city are laid out and taken up twenty-four coffee farms, each touching the city plot. There will be over 3,000,000 coffee trees in nursery cultivation at this place the coming year, all to be transplanted and raised in bearing within the next four years. All goods, stores and supplies, agricultural implements, machinery, building material and furniture for the colonists are exempt from duty; also all exports and imports of productions of the country, and stock for work or breeding purposes, are exempt for ten years. The colonists thus far are from California.

Good Times

—ARE—

COMING

THE CANADIAN PACIfic Railway may come to Port Moody, Coal Harbor, or New Westminster, to one of them it must come, and to which one we care not, for we are sure good times are coming anyway, and have therefore made great preparation for enlarging our business, for at the present time we are doing a larger business than we have ever done before, and believing that "nothing succeeds like success" we shall make greater efforts to secure our share of business in the coming year. Our present premises are not large enough and we intend extending them shortly. We have during the past year opened a

Dress-making and Millinery Department, the success of which has exceeded our expectations.

We have on order direct from London, a splendid line, in fashionable Millinery, Flowers, Feathers, Dress Trimmings, &c., and all the latest novelties in neck wear, &c., and have done our utmost to secure a stock that will surpass anything seen before in this City.

All orders entrusted to us in this department, will be filled with despatch and our prices will be as low as good work will permit.

In staple and Fancy Dry Goods, we have a good stock, and for the spring trade we have ordered largely from several London Houses.

We also expect a large consignment of Carpets, Door Mats, Floor Cloths, Mirrors, &c. &c.

Kid Gloves we receive direct from Brussels.

FANCY GOODS

We have hitherto only kept a small stock of the above, but believing that this part of the Trade is largely to be increased, we have ordered from the old established House of Hutton & Co. a large stock. We have directed our buyer in London to send us a line of all the latest novelties, so that our spring stock will be equal to any in Victoria.

Gents' Clothing Department

In this department we have established a Tailoring Establishment. We have engaged a first-class Cutter from San Francisco, at great expense, but believing "poor work never pays," we have obtained the "best." We have now an opening for two or three good journeymen Tailors, as orders are coming in so fast that our present staff cannot fill them. Our prices are the lowest, our goods the best, and workmanship guaranteed. In ready-made Clothing and Gents' Furnishing, we have a large supply in Men's and Boys' and have to arrive a large supply from English, American and Canadian markets.

Hardware,
Paints and Oils,
Doors and Sashes,
Fanning Mills,
Rope, &c., &c.,
Rifles,
Guns,
Revolvers,
Powder and Shot,
Cartridges.

In the above lines, we have a good stock, and as we buy direct from the manufacturers, our prices are beyond competition. A full supply of Goods by Spear & Jackson, H. Disston, &c. Cutlery by Nostenholm, Rogers, &c. Razors (Wade & Butchers).

It turns out that Senator Nelson did not leave for Ottawa on Friday. He arrived here from Victoria yesterday.

The Brighton Hotel, Burrard Inlet, will, we understand, be formally opened to-night by a rousing house-warming.

Building and business were booming in Brandon. Over $100,000 worth of real estate changed hands in a fortnight.

A carefully prepared table of nationalities in the city of New York shows 153,000 Germans to 198,000 Irish.

The weather is still extremely fickle, but it has been very mild for some days and the snow is disappearing in the open.

The San Francisco mail steamer Elder having arrived at Victoria on Monday evening, our mails came up yesterday.

On the 17th January, Brandon had its first fire, the Methodist parsonage being the victim. The fire was nipped in the bud.

Among the members of the Nova Scotia Railway Syndicate are Sir Henry W. Tyler, Lord Ashley, Lord Colin Campbell, and Lord Grosvenor.

As was to have been expected, the appointment of Mr. Dewdney to the position of Lieutenent-Governor of the North-West is very popular in that region.

The steamer Wm. Irving came out of winter quarters on Saturday, and has gone to Victoria, where she will undergo repairs, preparatory for the spring trade.

Yesterday being St. Valentine's Day, there was a "boom" at the postoffice, and letters were eagerly opened with varied emotions. Our own experiences were mixed.

The "All Stars Minstrels" performed to a moderately good house in this city on Saturday evening. Proceeding over to Granville, they played there on Monday night.

Brandon, Manitoba, at the age of six months had a population of 700 and 170 buildings at a cost of over 200,000, and others were under contract for half as much more.

First and last a good deal of snow has fallen here during the winter now passing away; but it has never attained a greater depth on the level than ten inches, and did not remain many hours at that.

Capt. Hayward, the popular commander of the Victoria, has been promoted to the command of the Idaho, and Mr. Guard, Purser, has devoted himself to commercial pursuits. Both gentlemen have many freinds here who will miss them much.

Terpsichorean.—To morrow evening at 8 o'clock, Mr. Heimerle will open his classes at the Skating Rink. Terms — single lesson, 75 cts.; one month, $2.50.

Personal. — Sam. Dearin, musical comique and prominent feature of the "All Stars" minstrel troupe, is a son of Dr. Dearin, a prominent citizen of St. Johns, Newfoundland.

The county of Brandon has a council, which met in the town of that ilk for the first time on the 9th ult. They appear to have buckled down to work in quite a business-like fashion.

The Brandon Sun." — The first number of this very respectable looking newspaper published in the new town of Brandon, Manitoba, is before us. Its publisher is Mr. W. J. White. We have much pleasure in placing the Sun on our exchange list.

Speaking Well of Us.—The Mail's Ottawa correspondent, having interviewed Mr. Onderdonk, concludes the result thus:—"On the whole the Pacific province, according to Mr. Onderdonk's statements, seems to have a bright future before it."

Important Seizure.—The seizure of $8,000 worth of goods belonging to a Chinese firm in Yale, made some time since by the Collector of Customs at this port, has been confirmed by the Minister of Customs, the goods being confiscated and ordered to be sold.

The Syndicate's Ultimatum.—The Colonist publishes the following telegram from Ottawa, dated the 9th inst: —"The Syndicate have delivered their final answer. They will not build the Island railway. Their hands are said to be full on this side of the continent."

Fish Culture. — Lake Michigan white fish are being propagated successfully in California. In 1873, 25,000 of these fish were deposited in Clear Lake, and there is now a matured stock of these delicious fish. Another batch of 30,000 has been ordered from Lake Michigan.

Concert at Granville.—The choir of the Methodist Church in this city will, on invitation, give a concert at Granville to-morrow evening. Burrard Inlet is becoming quite gay. We understand quite a party of singers and others will go over to Granville to-morrow, as the sleighing is tolerably good.

Coming Round.—The committee of the Agricultural Society, at a meeting on Monday evening, unanimously expressed themselves in favor of the show being held at New Westminster next year. It was held at Victoria last year; why not hold it here this year? "Time about is fair play," you know.

The Three Judges Hors de combat. —On Saturday the Chief Justice fell and injured his knee so seriously as to prevent his coming up to hold court here. The Colonist describes Mr. Justice Crease as being doubled up with rheumatism and Mr. Justice Gray so ill with it as to be confined to his room.

The C. P. R. Contract.—It is now a fortnight since the tenders for the lower section of the Canadian Pacific Railway in this Province were received, and the public hereabouts are impatient to know the result. One would think the matter should have been settled and the contract let ere now.

Burns Mountain.—A letter dated Quesnelmouth, Jan 28th, says: "Burns Mountain Quartz Company's interests are progressing favorably under the management of Mr. Fallis, who feels confident that the company have the biggest thing in the province. The tunnel will be 600 feet long and will tap the vein 250 feet down."

Too Bad!—A very considerable number of people having business at the County Court, which should have met here to-day, arrived in the city yesterday, those from the more remote parts of the District having a hard two days' trip of it. And all for what? To learn that the three Judges are hors de combat at Victoria! It's really too bad!

New Canneries. — The British American Packing Company are making preparations for the establishment of their cannery on the Lower Fraser. The site chosen is on the slough immediately below Messrs. Adair & Co.'s cannery. Mr. Lord and Mr. Young arrived here from Portland last week and are making arrangements for the erection of wharves, buildings and plant. We understand Mr. Young will manage the business. Another cannery is about being established on the North Arm by Messrs. Fraser, Windsor and others. We understand it will be located on or near the valuable property purchased by Mr. Fraser last year. We hear that Mr. English is about starting a second cannery further down the river, should he succeed in making satisfactory arrangements at San Francisco, of which there is very little doubt. Thus there are already projected two, probably three, new canneries for the Lower Fraser—with the possibility of more. And there is room for more.

Death of a Whilom British Columbian.—Under the proper head will be found the announcement of the death, at Brandon, of the beloved wife of Mr. D. M. McMillan, late Postmaster at Yale. Deceased was daughter of Mr. Thos. Bartlett, of Chilliwhack, and she, as well as the bereaved husband, had many friends in this province.

Lord and Lady Dufferin.—Lord and Lady Dufferin fill up their leisure at Constantinople with private theatricals and poetical tableaux. Their pretty young daughter, Lady Helen Blackwood, and her brother Terence, lately appeared in a living copy of the well-known picture of "Spring," representing a charming pair in a swing. When the curtain was lifted a hidden singer softly sang Gounod's "Printemps." The young Blackwoods have all their mother's grace and beauty.

The Presbyterian Temporalities Suit.—The Imperial Privy Council has reversed the verdict of the Quebec Courts in the Presbyterian Temporalities case. This decision, we believe, declares invalid the legislation in Quebec and also in the other Provinces uniting the Presbyterian Church of Canada and the Canadian Church in connection with the Kirk of Scotland, on the ground that since these Churches extend over the Dominion the Act of Union should have been passed by the Dominion Parliament. This was not the opinion of Sir John A. Macdonald nor of our ablest lawyers. It will apparently be necessary to commence the work of legislation de novo, which cannot be set about too soon.—Toronto Globe.

The New Post Office.

Ottawa, Feb. 9.—The contract for the post-office building at New Westminster has been awarded to Charles Hryward of your city. The figures lie between $16,000 and $17,000.

The above appeared in yesterday's Colonist, but we cannot help thinking there must be some error. We are led to believe tenders went in from parties here at much lower figures than those above quoted.

The Hawaiian Islands.

It is a matter of surprise that the importance of these islands is not more fully recognized, occupying, as they do, the position of stepping-stones between the two continents. Bishop Willis, of Honolulu, in an address recently delivered at Chicago, adverted to the important geographical position of these islands, expressing the belief that they are destined to play an important part in the civilization of the world. Races from the east and from the west meet there, attracted by the fine climate and the great sugar interest. Chinese are there who are owners of large plantations, and there flourish the European and the American side by side.

The Port Moody Section.

The tenders for the contract of the Emory and Port Moody section of the Canada Pacific were up to-day. There were 17 tenders. Mr. Montgomery, of Portland, Oregon, put in a tender for $3,500,000; McMullan & Co., of San Francisco, tendered an offer of $3,200,000; Purcell & Ryan, of Perth, Ont., made an offer to construct the road for $2,900,000; Murray & Co., of St. Catharines, sent in an offer for $2,864,000; Messrs. Onderdonk & Mills, of New York, offered to do the work for $2,680,000; and Charlevoix & Duncan, of Montreal, sent in a tender for $2,480,000. It was rumored that there was a bid for $2,800,000 which was withdrawn. It is not known which tender has been accepted, but the supposition is that the offer of Charlevoix & Duncan will be accepted.—Globe.

Opium Smoking.

Dr. H. H. Kane is the author of a small volume tracing the spread of the habit of opium smoking in the United States. The facts which he presents are striking testimony of the Mongelization that is in progress. He assigns the genesis of this body and soul-destroying vice to San Francisco, some time in the year 1868. Since then it has spread by the routes of travel eastward to Chicago, and thence up and down the continent from New Orleans to Boston. There is scarcely a town of any size now in the country which has not its opium den. The attendants are in all cases Chinese, for they alone know how to "cook," as it is called, the drug. The doctor proceeds to describe the peculiarly degrading tendency of opium smoking, the slaves to the habit actually preferring the low loathsome dens to comfortable quarters; and he contends that all who indulge the habit for any length of time become absolute slaves to it. The picture presented is certainly sufficiently revolting.

BY TELEGRAPH!

EXCLUSIVE DESPATCHES TO THE COLUMBIAN.

Barkerville, Feb. 13.—The expectation of a good wash-up in the Sisters mine for last week has been realized, ninety ounces having been taken out for that period. Owing to their ground being very difficult to work only a small wash-up is anticipated for this week. Other mining news unimportant. The weather for past few days has been rather mild though accompanied by stormy gales which have rendered the roads in this vicinity impassable, the only means of communication with Stanley being by snowshoes. Arthur Johnston who fractured his leg some time ago is about town again. Foster Anderson is also making good progress towards recovery. George Cowan, M. P. P., starts to-morrow on snowshoes for Victoria.

George Washington never told a lie, and he got to be President of the Republic. Times have changed. George couldn't be elected to the Legislature if he lived in these times.—Boston Post.

The Constitutional Muddle.

The Supreme Court gave their decision on Friday last. Each of the Judges having delivered a separate judgment, Hon. Mr. Justice Gray proceeded to read the following epitome as presenting the conclusions unanimously arrived at by the Judges:

1. That the Supreme Court is not a provincial one within the meaning of the 14th sub. s. of sec. 92 of the B. N. A. Act, 1867.

2. That the local legislature has no control over its procedure and cannot legislate so as to prevent suitors having access to that Court and having their cases heard and carried on to final adjudication so as to have an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada.

3. That the local legislature cannot itself make rules to govern the procedure of the Court or delegate the power to the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to do so.

4. That the application of the Judicial Districts Act to judges appointed and holding their commissions prior to its enactment is unconstitutional and void.

5. That the judges are Dominion, not Provincial officers.

6. That in these respects the Judicial Districts Act, the Better Administration of Justice Act, 1878, and the Local Administration of Justice Act, c. 1, 1880, are ultra vires.

7. That the plaintiff in the case is entitled to have the relief asked for, and the Court is bound in law to hear his motion and permit him to proceed with his cause.

FINIS.

The Chief Justice said the Court would re-adopt the judge-made rules instead of the attorney-general-made rules. The general order would be published to-morrow and a full court might sit if necessary on Monday next.

City Council.

The Council met on Monday night. Present—His Worship the Mayor, and Councillors Howison, Haslam, Curtis and Webster.

Communication was read from T. R. Pearson, & Co. asking permission to cut down tree in front of store.—Referred to Board of Works.

The Committee appointed to make arrangements with Police Magistrate handed in their final report.

The Committee appointed to make arrangements for having prepared a statement of arrears of taxes, reported having secured the services of Mr. Duncan, for $175.

The Safe Committee reported having purchased through Mr. Waitt, of Victoria, a safe for $300, f. o. b., at Victoria. The report was approved and money ordered to be paid.

On motion, Mr. Jas. Orr was appointed Police Court Clerk for the year.

The Clerk was instructed to make enquiries in regard to purchase of blank forms for Assessment and Collector's rolls.

Council adjourned till Monday next.

A New Process for Ores.

The subject is not uninteresting in this Province, and we shall, therefore, submit what the Denver Tribune has to say about it:—

The Waltz Mining Company, with their principal office at Silver Cliff, claim to save 90 per cent. of the value of the ores treated. The closed furnace is built upon an incline and arranged in terraces, the ore, previously crushed to about the size of peas (as ore of this size is more readily heated than pulverized ore), is removed from shelf to shelf by automatic scrapers. During the process of heating, said to be accomplished in from forty to eighty minutes, the base metals are completely desulphurized and oxidized. The latter takes place by means of the conditions under which the ores are treated, viz., in the absence of atmospheric air in the presence of oxygen and in the absence of nitrogen, the oxygen either evolved from the ores themselves, as in the Boulder and Buffalo Hunter (containing oxides of manganese and iron), or by the addition of some oxygenated substance, should such be lacking. The conditions under which the oxidization of the base metals takes place are not such as to oxidize the noble metals. After leaving the furnace the ore is pulverized preparatory to introduction to the amalgamator. Pulverization is now accomplished with less power and in less time than before heating, in consequence of the disintegration of the ore by that process. Any amalgamator may be used, though Professor Waitz holds the patent to one consisting of two upright cylinders parallel to each other, and resting on a bed-plate. These cylinders are connected by pipes at top and bottom, the pipes of sufficient size to permit of the passing of the pulp from one cylinder to the other. Within each cylinder are Archimedean screws revolving in opposite directions at a high rate of speed; the quicksilver is placed in the bottom, reaching above the bottom opening; the pulp is placed in each on top of the mercury, so that as the screws begin to work they force the pulp up in one and down in the other, and assisted by the vacuum, produce a sort of rotary motion, continually changing the pulp from one cylinder to the other and through the body of quicksilver at the bottom, until discharged into the settler, from this point to be treated in the ordinary manner.

In 1880 the steam tonnage of the world was 4,110,000 tons, of which 2,580,000 tons were British and 1,530,000 belonged to other nations. The toll which all nations pay Great Britain for the carrying trade is nearly 4 per cent. of the exported value of the earth's products and manufactures.

Death in the Coffee Pot.—The public are cautioned against purchasing imported California ground coffee. Its cheapness is its only recommendation. The ingredients are of the vilest description, as any one using it will discover should he examine the grounds. During the perihelia of the planets people should be careful what they eat and drink. Don't allow your grocer to palm off his trash upon you, because it pays him better to sell it than the good article. Ask for Fell & Co.'s Coffee and take no other.*

Worse than War.—"The throat has destroyed more lives than the sword," by imprudence in eating and intemperance in drinking; but when the health becomes impaired the miserable dispeptic may find prompt relief in Burdock Blood Bitters. It regulates the bowels, acts upon the liver and kidneys, purifies the blood, and stimulates all the secretions to a healthy action.

A Good Filter.—To have pure water in the house every family should have a good filter, the health and comfort depends largely upon the use of properly filtered water. The liver is the true filter for the blood, and Burdock Blood Bitters keep the liver and all the secretory organs in a healthy condition. It is the grand blood purifying, liver regulating tonic.

Undertaking.—Having bought out Mr. Withrow and purchased the Hearse, the undersigned is now prepared to carry on the business of undertaking at the furniture warehouse (Mr. Withrow's old stand), next door to the Occident Hotel. The Hearse will be for hire on liberal terms. John G. Bunte, Manager.*

A Cure for Headache.—What physician has ever discovered a cure for headache? Echo answers none. But Burdock Blood Bitters, by their purifying, invigorating, nervine properties afford a cure in nearly every case. The health-giving principles of this remedy are unequalled by any similar preparation in the world.

REPLY.

Gentlemen—

I have much pleasure in acceding to your request conveyed to me in your requisition, that I would allow myself to be nominated as a Candidate, at the ensuing election of a Representative to fill the seat now vacant in the House of Commons. If I should be elected to fill this honorable position, I will give my support to the present Government, and in doing so, will trust that my future course of action may meet with the approval of my constituents, as it did on former occasions when I had the honor of representing you in the Legislative Council of this Colony. If elected, I will advocate the early completion of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

I will urge upon the Government the necessity of placing the Dominion Lands, now held in reserve, in a position so they may be made available for immediate settlement.

I will endeavor to show the Government the benefit which would be derived from the extension of the Ocean Mail Service to the Mainland, and to obtaining greater mail facilities throughout the Province.

As British Columbia has not been admitted to the benefits of the Washington Treaty, I will urge upon the Government the justice of allowing an abatement of Customs duties upon all material required for the Fisheries, and will ask for an appropriation for the establishing of Hatcheries.

The Agricultural, Manufacturing, and Mining interests will receive my most careful attention, and if the formation of a Commercial Federation of Great Britain and her Colonies, for their mutual benefit, should come under consideration, it will receive my earnest support.

Owing to the transitory state of the Dominion, many new questions will undoubtedly arise; in dealing with these, I will see that the interests of my constituents are protected.

I am, Gentlemen,
Your Obedient Servant,

Ja28 J. A. R. HOMER.

Our Story.

WHAT THE SHEPHERD SAW

A Tale of Four Moonlight Nights.

"Captain Pentridge!" she exclaimed, with an emphasis of playful fear, "how can such a friend of my youth behave to me as you do! Don't speak to me so, and stare at me so! Is this really all you have to say? I see I ought not to have come. 'Twas thoughtlessly done!"

Another breeze broke the thread of discourse for a time.

"Very well. I perceive you are dead and lost to me," he could next be heard to say.

"'Captain Pentridge' proves that. As I once loved you I love you now, Harriet, without one jot of abatement; but you are not the woman you were—you once were honest toward me; and now you conceal your heart in fictitious speech. Let it be; I can never see you again."

"You need not say that in such a tragedy tone. You may see me in an ordinary way—why should you not? But, of course, not in such a way as this. I should not have come now if it had not happened that the Duke is away from home, so that there is nobody to check my erratic impulses."

"When does he return?"

"The day after to-morrow, or the day after that."

"Then meet me again to-morrow night."

"No, Fred, I cannot."

"If you cannot to-morrow night, you can the night after; one of the two, before he comes, please bestow on me. Your hand upon it! To-morrow or next night you will see me to bid me farewell!" He seized the duchess' hand.

"No, but Fred—let go my hand! What do you mean by holding me so? If it be love to forget all respect to a woman's present position in thinking of her past, then yours may be so, Frederick. It is not kind and gentle of you to induce me to come to this place for pity of you, and then to hold me here."

"But see me once more! I have come two thousand miles to ask it!"

"Oh, I must not! There will be slanders — Heaven knows what! I cannot meet you! For the sake of old times, don't ask it.'"

"Then own two things to me: that you did love me once, and that your husband is unkind to you often enough now to make you think of the time when you cared for me."

"Yes—I own them both," she answered faintly. "But owning such as that tells against me; and I swear the inference is not true."

"Don't say that, for you have come—let me think the reason of your coming what I like to think it. It can do you no harm. Come once more!"

He still held her hand. "Very well, then," she said. "Thus far you shall persuade me. I will meet you to-morrow night or the night after. Now let me go."

He released her hand, and they parted. The duchess ran rapidly down the hill toward the neighboring mansion of Verncombe Towers, and when he had watched her out of sight, he turned and strode off in the opposite direction. All then was as silent and empty as before.

But only for a moment. When they had quite departed, another shape appeared upon the scene. He came from behind the trilithon. He was a man of stouter build than the first, and wore the boots and spurs of a horseman. Two things were at once obvious from this phenomenon: that he had watched the interview between the captain and the duchess; and that, though he had probably seen every movement of the couple, including the embrace, he had been too remote to hear the reluctant words of the lady's conversation—or, indeed, any words at all; so that the meeting must have exhibited itself to his eye as the assignation of a pair of well-agreed lovers. But it was necessary that several years should elapse before the shepherd boy was old enough to reason out this.

The third individual stood still for a moment, as if in deep meditation; he crossed over to where the lady and gentleman had stood, and looked at the ground; then he too turned and went away, in a third direction, as widely divergent as possible from those taken by the two interlocutors. His course was toward the highway; and a few minutes afterwards the trot of a horse might have been heard upon its frosty surface, lessening till it died away upon the ear.

The boy remained in the hut, confronting the trilithon as if he expected yet more actors on the scene, but nobody else appeared. How long he stood with his little face against the loophole he hardly knew, but he was rudely awakened from his reverie by a punch in his back, and in the feel of it he familarly recognised the stem of the old shepherd's crook.

"Blame thy young eyes and limbs, Bill Willis—now you have let the fire out, and you know I want it kept in! I thought something would go wrong with you up here, and I couldn't bide in bed no more than thistiledown on the wind, that I could not! Well, what's happened, fie upon ye!"

"Nothing."

"Ewes all as I left 'em?"

"Yes."

"Any lambs want bringing in?"

"No."

The shepherd relit the fire, and went out among the sheep with a lantern, for the moon was getting low. Soon he came in again.

"Blame it all—thou'st say that nothing hev happened; and one ewe hev twinned, and is like to go off, and another is dying for want of half an eye of looking to! I told ye, Bill Willis, if anything went wrong to come down and call me; and this is how you hev done it."

"You said I could go to sleep for a hollerday; and I did."

"Don't you speak to your betters like that, young man, or you'll come to the gallowstree! You didn't sleep all the time, or you wouldn't have been peeping out of that there hole! Now you can go home, and be up here by breakfast time. I be an old man, and there's old men that deserve well of the world; but no—I must rest how I can!"

The elder shepherd then lay down inside the hut, and the boy went down the hill to the hamlet where he dwelt.

SECOND NIGHT.

When the night drew on the actions of the boy were almost enough to show that he was thinking of the meeting he had witnessed, and of the promise wrung from the lady that she would come there again. As far as the sheep-tending arrangements were concerned to-night was but a repetition of the foregoing one. Between ten and eleven o'clock the old shepherd withdrew as usual for what sleep at home he might chance to get without interruption, making up the other necessary hours of rest at some time during the day; the boy was left alone.

The frost was the same as the night before, except perhaps that it was a little more severe. The moon shone as usual, except that it was three-quarters of an hour later in its course; and the boy's condition was much the same, except that he felt no sleepiness whatever. He felt, too, rather afraid; but upon the whole preferred witnessing an assignation of strangers to running the risk of being discovered absent by the old shepherd.

It was before the distant clock of Verncome Towers had struck eleven that he observed the opening of the second act of this midnight drama. It consisted in the appearance of neither lover nor duchess, but of the third figure, the stout man booted and spurred, who came up from the easterly direction in which he had retreated the night before. He walked once round the trilithon, and then advanced toward the clump concealing the hut, the moonlight shining full upon his face and revealing him to be the duke. Fear seized upon the shepherd boy; the Duke was Jove himself to the rural population, whom to offend was starvation, homelessness, and death, and whom to look at was to be mentally scathed and dumfoundered. He closed the stove, so that not a spark of light appeared, and hastily buried himself in the straw that lay in a corner.

The duke came close to the clump of furze and stood by the spot where his wife and the captain had held their dialogue; he examined the furze as if searching for a hiding place; and in doing so he discovered the hut. The latter he walked round, and then looked inside; finding it all seeming empty, he entered, closing the door behind him and taking his place at the little circular window against which the boy's face had been pressed just before.

The duke had not adopted his measures too rapidly, if his object was concealment. Almost as soon as he had stationed himself there eleven o'clock struck, and the slender young man who had previously graced the scene promptly reappeared from the north quarter of the down. The spot of assignation having, by the accident of his running forward on the foregoing night, removed itself from the Devil's Door to the clump of furze, he instinctively came thither, and waited for the duchess where he had met her before.

But a fearful surprise was in store for him to-night, as well as for the trembling juvenile. At his appearance the duke breathed more and more quickly, his breathings being distinctly audible to the crouching boy. The young man had hardly paused when the alert nobleman softly opened the door of the hut, and, stepping around the furze, came full upon Captain Fred.

"You have dishonored her, and you shall die the death you deserve!" came to the shepherd's ears, in a harsh, hollow whisper through the boarding of the hut.

The apethetic and taciturn boy was excited enough to run the risk of rising and looking from the window. But he could see nothing for the intervening furze boughs, both the men having gone round to the side. What took place in the few following moments he never exactly knew. He discerned a portion of a shadow in quick muscular movement; then there was the fall of something on the grass; then there was a stillness.

Two or three minutes later the duke became visible round the corner of the hut dragging by the collar the now inert body of the second man. The duke dragged him across the open space toward the trilithon. Behind this ruin was a hollow, irregular spot, overgrown with furze and stunted thorns, and riddled by the old holes of badgers, its former inhabitants, who had now died out or departed. The duke vanished into this depression with his burden, reappearing after the lapse of a few seconds When he came forth he dragged nothing behind him.

He returned to the side of the hut, cleansed something on the grass, and again put himself on the watch, though not as before, inside the hut, but without, on the shady side. "Now for the second!" he said.

It was plain even to the unsophisticated boy, that he now awaited the other person of the appointment—his wife, the duchess—for what purpose it was terrible to think. He seemed to be a man of such determined temper that he would scarcely hesitate in carrying out a course of revenge to the bitter end. Moreover—though it was what the shepherd did not perceive—this was all the more probable, in that the moody duke was laboring under the exaggerated impression which the sight of the meeting in dumb show had conveyed.

The jealous watcher waited long, but he waited in vain. From within the hut the boy could hear his occasional exclamations of surprise, as if he were almost disappointed at the failure of his assumption that his guilty duchess would surely keep the tryst. Sometimes he stepped from the shade of the furze into the moonlight, and held up his watch to learn the time.
