ST. EUGENE IS AT 85 CENTS

The Stock Is Soaring of Late.

AND IT MAY GO HIGHER

It Has Advanced More Than 20 Cents a Share During The Past Month.

Within the past five years at least, no mining stock in British Columbia has risen in value faster than that of the St. Eugene Mining company, says the Nelson Daily News. As late as six months ago it could have been purchased below 50 cents a share. It is quoted locally at 85 cents and few are found ready to sell at that price. The stock has advanced more than 20 cents a share in the last month.

While the explanation is probably to be found chiefly in the known value of the property, and the excellent results of the operations during the past two years, it is not improbable that other circumstances have contributed to the rapid advance.

The St. Eugene company was capitalized at $3,500,000. The Canadian Consolidated Mining and Smelting company whose assets include the St. Eugene, War Eagle, Centre Star, and Trail smelter add refinery, is capitalized at $5,000,000. The company has offered its stock in exhange for St. Eugene seock, taking the latter at 66⅔.

The value of 85 cents a share, now placed on St. Eugene, indicates that the consolidated company's stock is already at a premium of 27½ per cent, that is, that its holdings with a nominal value of $5,000,000, are considered by the investing public to be worth $6,375,500.

Whatever the cause or causes may be, the rapid rise in the value of St. Eugene stock, cannot fail to have a good effect on other Kootenay mining stocks.

Always Keeps Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the House.

"We would not be without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is kept on hand continually in our home," says W. W. Kearney, editor of the Independent, Lowery City, Mo. That is just what every family should do. When kept at hand ready for instant use, a cold may be checked at the outset and cured in much less time than after it has become settled in the system. The remedy is also without a peer for croup in children, and will prevent the attack when given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough appears, which can only be done when the remedy is kept at hand. For sale by the Moyie Drug & Stationery Store.

LEAD PLANT FOR SPOKANE

Is a branch of Carter Lead Co.

MORE LEAD BEING USED

Mr. Carter Says that Price will Go Higher in U. S. and Canada.

"The establishment of a large lead corroding plant in Spokane is one of the possibilities of the future. The plant which will be established will cost not less than $200,000 and will employ a force of from 25 to 50 men. The working capital required will be about half a million dollars. The Carter White Lead company has a process of corroding which turns pig lead into white lead in six days instead of six weeks, as under the old process. This company has secured concessions from the Canadian government and expects to corrode lead used in Canada on a royalty basis. Mr. Carter was much impressed with Spokane, and said he thought it one of the prettiest cities he had ever seen in the United States.

"Times will be good in the Coeur d'Alenes, which produce 65 per cent of the desilverized lead of the United States," said Mr. Carter. "The price of lead will go higher, as the Guigenheims have bought up most of the mines of the country and put them into a trust. Lead is being used to a much greater degree now than at any time before, especially for conduits for underground telephone and telegraph wires, and as yet is the only material found practical for this purpose."

Freighttrain Wreck.

A freight train was wrecked this morning near Sirdar and the fireman, named Alexander, of Medicine Hat was killed. A brakeman had his foot badly injured.

A Dear Mistake.

The woman cashier in a clothing house at Springfield, Ohio, recently created an excitement in the establishment, by giving a customer $1,600 instead of a 25 cent pair of suspenders. Both packages were wrapped in the same kind of paper, and the manager was handed the suspenders to deposit. Anxiety was relieved when the customer returned to the store with the money, which his wife discovered on opening the package.

The Estimates.

The estimates for the province have been given out. In South East Kootenay Cranbrook gets $6,000 for government buildings, and Fernie $5,000 for the same purpose. For roads, trails, bridges, etc., the Cranbrook district is allowed $6,000 and the Fernie district $2,500.

The Month's Output.

During the month of February the St. Eugene's shipments to the smelters at Trail and Nelson amounted to 2,700 tons.

Next Saturday will be payday and $28,000 will disbursed.

Doing Good Work.

Dr. D. N. McInturff, founder of the Alamo colony near Bonners Ferry, and Mrs. Chisholm, deaconess in charge of the Orphanage of the colony, were in Moyie most of the week, working in the interest of their institution. Dr. McInturff delivered a series of very interesting lectures along advanced lines of thought. The Dr. speaks apparently without an effort. He strikes from the shoulder, and to him a spade is a spade. The editor knows Dr. McInturff well, having heard him preach scores and scores of times. The work he did in Spokane and the state of Washington was truly marvellous. He is organizing a co-operative colony in the Kootenai valley, in Idaho, and proposes to establish an orphans' and an old people's home, and other institutions to help mankind. We believe he will succeed, because he is honest and desperately in earnest. The Alamo colony is now an incorporated company of the state of Idaho. Its assets are $100,000 on which still remains a debt of $15,000.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.

Stetson's big production of Uncle Tom's Cabin will appear at the Eagle hall on Wednesday, March 7th. It has been organized this season in a manner that will make it far superior to any previous production ever seen here. Special attention has been given to the staging of the piece, and the scenery faithfully portrays several scenes of southern life during Ante-Bellum days in the far south. A large number of genuine colored people, who introduce cakewalks, buck dancing, southern jubilee singing and funny scenes in the cotton fields add materially to the production. A street parade will be given that is said to delight every juvenile spectator beyond question.

Afflicted with Rheumatism.

"I was and am yet afflicted with rheumatism," says Mr. J. C. Bayde, editor of the Herald, Addington, Indian Territory, "but thanks to Chamberlain's Pain Balm am able once more to attend to business. It is the best of liniments." If troubled with rheumatism give Pain Balm a trial and you are certain to be more than pleased with the prompt relief which it affords. One application relieves the pain. For sale by the Moyie Drug & Stationery Co.

Unanimous, it is thought by members of the committee, will be the verdict of the Oddfellows in Spokane to build a temple which, it is now estimated, may cost $150,000 or more. It will be six stories high.

Excellent progress is being made at the Pilot Bay smelter by the Canadian Metal company. So far the work done is mainly lead separation on the ores of the Blue Bell mine. It is said that the volume of the work and its value, are at least equal to what is being accomplished at the Sullivan mine and the Marysville smelter.

Miss Lindell Sells Shop.

Moyie has lost its distinction of having the only lady barber in the Kootenays. Last Saturday Miss Ida Lindell sold her barber shop fixtures and good will of the business to Walter B. Laing, who owns the shop opposite the Hotel Kootenay. Wm. Pierson of Toronto will be here to take charge of the shop in a few days. Miss Lindell left Thursday for Spokane, and from there she intends going to Iowa to visit her parents. Miss Lindell made plenty of money and a host of friends during her six months' residence in Moyie.

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

A Cream of Tartar Powder Made From Grapes No Alum

Linked by Fate

BY CHARLES GARVICE

Author of "The Verdict of the Heart," "A Heritage of Hate," "Nell of Shorne Mills," "Paid For," "A Modern Juliet," Etc.

"Mum! isn't it?" said Vane. "This is called the Wizard's Room. Portrait of the wizard over fireplace. I should say. Looks forbidding enough for a wizard, at any rate," he added, and Julian, with his back to the window, looked up at the mould-spotted face scowling down at them.

"I like it," he said. "The room, I mean. It's so quaint and old-fashioned and remote. Ah!" his face lit up as if an idea had suddenly struck him.

"What is it?" inquired Vane.

Julian turned away.

"Oh, I was only thinking that it would make a good laboratory," he said, carelessly.

"By George! So it would!" assented Vane with a laugh. "Right away from the rest of the house—I suppose that even the awful smells I noticed at your place wouldn't get through that passage and that thick old door? We could put another door, a baize affair, warranted stink-proof, couldn't we? See here, Julian, why not have this room for your—what do you call it?—laboratory?"

Julian's face flushed and his lids drooped.

"My dear Vane, you speak as if—as if I were the owner, as if I had the right to dispose of, to choose, any room in Lesborough Court—"

Vane regarded him with a grave smile.

"So you are, so you can," he said. "You will be the owner—"

Julian's face grew pale and he smiled a polite contradiction.

"As I told you, I shall never marry. You are the heir, the next earl. See here, Julian, let us understand each other. I want you to make the Court your home—that is, if you care to do so, and while you wish to do so. You don't imagine that I intend living here alone? No, thanks! I know what loneliness, solitude, mean—" He broke off suddenly. "I want you to understand that the Court will be yours, and that you have as much right to live here as well as I have. Make the room your laboratory, by all means."

"But—"

"But me no buts," interrupted Vane. "I mean it. I've got a trick of saying what I mean. I—well, I'm not the sort of man to settle down anywhere. I'm a restless, Wandering Jew kind of fellow, and I shall probably be off on the tramp again presently. Now, you—well, I fancy you are quite a different sort of man, you are a 'Home Bird,' as the song says. Fond of music and science and all that sort of thing. Good; this is evidently the place for you."

"But—" began Julian again, but Vane made a slight gesture.

"Oh, don't think that I want to interfere with your independence, or to be a bore and a drag on you. Not a bit of it. You can keep up that old place of yours by the Thames, if you like. I should, it's a quicer, quaint old diggings, but make the Court your home. Now, don't argue. I'm a poor hand at arguing, and invariably lose my temper. You can send for that old servant of yours—what's her name, by the way?"

"Deborah," said Julian. His brows were knit, and he stood with drooped lids and tightened lips, he seemed to be reflecting, so intensely as scarcely to be breathing.

"Deborah; name seems to fit her. Well, send for her, if you like. In fact—there! do just as you like, and we shall get on very well together. Let's get out of this, shall we? If you decide to turn the room into a laboratory, it will want thoroughly doing up—"

"Oh, no," said Julian, glancing round almost lovingly. "Just clearing out and cleaning. The fireplace would need some little alteration. An intelligent mason—"

Vane laughed.

"First, find your mason," he said, "then sound him for intelligence; result—" he shrugged his shoulders. "We can get through that door into the stable courtyard. Why, where is the door leading from this room?" he broke off to remark.

Julian looked round. "There does not appear to be a door. Perhaps it has been bricked up or panelled over."

"Ah, p'r'aps so," said Vane, indifferently, and he led the way out by the door at which they had entered.

"My department again," he said with a laugh as they entered the stables. "But perhaps you ride, as well as you fence, Julian?"

Julian shook his head. "I'm not much of a horseman," he said.

"Modesty again!" retorted Vane. "Well, you must pick your mount. There used to be a fairish lot of animals— Ah, Dodson," as the coachman came hurrying across the yard from his cottage to receive his new master, "how are you? We are just looking round, but in a hurried kind of way only. Got anything worth looking at?"

Mr. Dodson hastened to display his animals.

"Hem, the carriage horses are all right; and that's a decent mare, Dodson; so's the chestnut; and the cob in the end stall looks a nice little lad. The hunters—well, well—hem!"

"Just so, my lord," said Mr. Dodson, with respectful eagerness. "There's nothing here fit to carry your lordship. The late earl gave up hunting long ago, as your lordship knows—"

"Well, keep your eyes open, and I'll do the same, and we may pick up two or three likely ones. Meanwhile—chestnut, quiet?"

"Quite, my lord. I bred him myself, and broke him."

"Good; then he'll do for Mr. Julian here—my cousin, Mr. Julian Shore, Dodson."

Mr. Dodson touched his cap to Julian, who remonstrated with Vane. "Oh, but—my dear Vane! You will surely keep the chestnut for yourself—"

"Oh, the mare will do for me!" said Vane, carelessly. "She's a good sort, though not so handsome, as the chestnut—"

"Nor so quiet, my lord; a little bit of temper," put in Dodson.

"So I see," said Vane. "I noticed her eyes and ears when I went up to her just now. But I like a bit of temper. Anyhow, I'll give her a trial. We'll just glance at the coach-house—"

"Ah, we want a new carriage or two, my lord," said Mr. Dodson.

"Just so, just so. Ah, well, plenty of time," said Vane as he cast a comprehensive eye round. "Glad to see you looking so well, Dodson."

"Thank you, my lord, and the same to your lordship, if I may make so bold," said the gratified Dodson, with a touch of his cap.

"We'll go under the arch and round to the front," said Vane, as they walked away. "Nice fellow—Dodson; remember him putting me on my first pony. Hello, who's this—Fanworthy, by George!"

They had passed under the tall archway and entered upon the drive along which an open landau was coming toward the house. An elderly man with the air of a sportsman and an aristocrat, was the sole occupant, and as he caught sight of the two young men he leaned forward and waved his hand.

"Ah, Vane!" he exclaimed. "What luck to just catch you! I heard the news of your arrival, and drove over on the chance of seeing you."

"The luck's mine, Lord Fanworthy," said Vane. "It's very kind of you, very! Let me introduce my cousin—Mr. Julian Shore."

Lord Fanworthy raised his hat with old-world courtesy.

"Come into the house," said Vane; but Lord Fanworthy shook his head.

"No, no. Can't! Against positive orders. Her ladyship emphatically bade me not leave the carriage. 'If he is there, just tell him that he is to come back with you; that I say so.' Her very words, Vane, I assure you."

"In that case, there's only one thing to do: obey," said Vane.

"That's right, my boy!" said Lord Fanworthy, approvingly. "Pray get in, Mr. Shore; my wife will be delighted to see you. It's not far. What a beautiful day for your return, Vane! By Jove, you must have a rare budget to tell us! Not a word till you get home! You're looking—yes, well. Been knocked about a bit, eh? Thought so." Then he turned to Julian. "I remember your father, of course, Mr. Shore. He may have spoken of me?"

Julian colored slightly. "I am sorry to say that he did not, Lord Fanworthy. My father never spoke of—old times."

"Ah, yes, yes, quite so!" assented Lord Fanworthy, quickly. "Great nuisance, family feuds! You have a look of the Mannerings, Mr. Shore. I think I should have known you as one of them, even if I had met you elsewhere."

The three men chatted as the horses span along the well-kept road, and after a short drive they reached the Grange. Lord Fanworthy led them into the drawing-room, calling "Emily!" as he went. Lady Fanworthy was seated in a low chair by the window, knitting. She had been a reigning beauty; she was beautiful with her silvery hair, wonderful complexion, and the grey eyes which were almost as brilliant—and far keener—than those of most girls. She held out her snow-white and exquisitely shaped hand to Vane and nodded and smiled, her eyes flashing over him as if they were taking in every feature of his face; then they passed from him to Julian, enquiringly, and as keenly.

"It's good to see you, Vane," she said, and there was almost a maternal note in the low, clear voice; for Vane, as a lad, had been a favorite of hers, and, with the tact for which she was famous, she had often slipped in between his uncle and him and prevented a quarrel. "And it was good of you to come so quickly. And this is—" Vane introduced Julian, and she bowed and smiled graciously. "And so you have come into your own, Vane? And it feels strange—at first?"

"It does, Lady Fanworthy," said Vane, as he took the seat beside her to which she had motioned him.

"And you are going to settle down, to be a model landlord and a pattern peer?"

"No," said Vane. "Part's already filled," and he looked towards Lord Fanworthy, who had gone to the next room to show Julian the view.

"Godfrey will be glad to have you at the Court," said her ladyship. "He was always fond of you. And I— So that is Julian Shore." Her voice scarcely dropped, but it was so soft as to be inaudible to the others. "A handsome young man; darker than the Mannerings usually are."

"Yes; he's quite an Adonis," said Vane. "And an extremely good fellow. I hope you'll like him. We are great friends already, though we only met a day or two ago."

"I will see," she said, with a swift, searching glance at Julian. "But I want to talk about you. Where have you been? No! are you well, happy, Vane?"

His eyes fell before her brilliant ones which seemed to reach his sadly tried heart.

"Fit as a fiddle, my dear lady; almost as fit as Lord Fanworthy there. And I am so glad to see you looking so well. Not a day older."

She raised her level eyebrows. "Why should I be? My dear Vane, at my age, women grow younger, nowadays. Where have you been, not to know that! And you are well and—happy?"

Vane's eyes dropped, then he raised them; but with an effort, for this old lady was a difficult one to deceive.

"As happy as I deserve," he said, smilingly.

"And you have been travelling a great deal, and, if rumor speaks the truth, have had some adventures."

Vane nodded, his lips tightening. "Yes," he said, "all sorts of adventures. You still stick to your knitting, I see, Lady Fanworthy."

It was enough for her; and she asked no more questions.

"Here's the tea!" she said, as the butler brought it in. "But, of course, you'll stay to dinner. Godfrey shall send for your things—"

But Vane declined. "I've ordered dinner at the Court," he said, "and Prance would break his heart if He didn't turn on tais the first night."

She nodded approvingly. "Quite right, Vane."

"But, see," he said, "it will be rather lonely for us two bachelors. Now, if you want to be as kind as you always used to be, you bring Lord Fanworthy to dine with us!"

She did not hesitate a moment.

"Yes," she said, smoothly.

The other two men came to the tea-table and her ladyship conversed with Julian. She asked no questions, but almost unconsciously she found himself telling her that he was unmarried, that he lived alone, that he had no profession and was content with a small income; indeed, nearly all the details which another person would only have extracted by a series of categorical questions; and he did not make the discovery until the two young men were going home in the landau.

"A wonderful woman!" Vane remarked. "You admired her, of course? She used to be a great beauty; and she is as clever as she is beautiful."

"Yes; she's clever," said Julian, absently, as he reflected on the way in which her ladyship had "pumped" him.

"Yes; she used to play an important part in the political world," Vane went on. "Kept what used to be called a 'salon'; entertained the people of her husband's party. Fanworthy was in the Cabinet. They say that she kept the party in power for six months longer than it ought to have been. Don't understand politics myself. She was very good to me when I was a lad—they both were—and I like her, naturally. I don't know any one to whom I'd sooner go, if I were in trouble or in a mess. I think you'll like her, Julian."

"I am sure I shall," said Julian, with an admirably feigned tone of conviction.

"Oh, Prance," said Vane, as the butler came to meet them. "Lord and Lady Fanworthy dine here to-night. And light up the music-room, will you. Right!"

POWER OF WATER.

The Great Force a Six Inch Stream Can Exert.

Imagine a perpendicular column of water more than one-third of a mile high, twenty-six inches in diameter at the top and twenty-four inches in diameter at the bottom, writes Hamilton Wright in The World Today. Those remarkable conditions are complied with, as far as power goes, in the Mill creek plant, which operates under a head of 1,900 feet. This little column of water, which, if liberated, would be just about enough to make a small trout stream, gives a capacity of 5,200 horsepower, or enough power to run a good sized ocean going vessel. As the water strikes the buckets of the water wheel it has a pressure of 850 pounds to the square inch. What this pressure implies is evidenced by the fact that the average locomotive carries steam at a pressure of 190 or 200 pounds to the square inch. Were this stream, as it issues from the nozzle, turned upon the hillside, the earth would fade away before it like snow before a jet of steam. Huge bowlders, big as city offices, would tumble into ravines with as little effort as a clover bur is carried before the hydrant stream on a front lawn. Brick walls would crackle like paper, and the hugest skyscrapers crumble before a stream like that of the Mill creek plant.

It takes a powerful waterwheel to withstand the tremendous pressure. At Butte creek, California, a single jet of water six inches in diameter issues from the nozzle at the great velocity of 20,000 feet a minute. It impinges on the buckets of what is said to be the most powerful single water wheel ever built, causing the latter to travel at the rate of ninety-four miles an hour, making 400 revolutions a minute. The six inch stream has a capacity of 12,000 horsepower. The water for operating the plant is conveyed from Butte creek through a ditch and discharged into a regulating reservoir which is 1,500 feet above the power house. Two steel pressure pipe lines thirty inches in diameter conduct the water to the power house.

Falsely Charged.

A little northern boy was visiting the south for the first time. His awe and admiration for the darkies knew no bounds. Meeting a little negro boy one day, he screwed up his courage to ask him his name.

"I is dun called David," promptly replied the little negro.

"Oh," exclaimed the little fellow, his face full of delighted surprise, "are you the David that killed Goliath?"

The little negro gave him a terrified glance and, sticking his dusky knuckles in his eyes, shrieked out, "Naw, I ain't nebber teched him."—Lippincott's Magazine.

PRAISE FOR THE C.P.R.

What a Travelled Scotsman Says of the Transcontinental Line.

Alex. McOwen, writing in the Winnipeg Free Press, says:—

It is perhaps a healthy sign suggestive of a progressive spirit, but the western Canadian is disposed to be extremely critical of his governments, his institutions and his great corporations. He regards almost as a heritage, for instance his right to abuse the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. for its iniquities of one sort and another, but more especially its excessive freight rates. These appeal to young and old alike and the theme of them is ever fresh and the outcry against them made with the utmost sincerity of conviction. Robert Burns, the Scottish bard, prays that a higher power may endow us us with the gift of seeing ourselves as others see us, and perhaps it would be interesting for readers of the Free Press to know how our greatest railway company is regarded in the old country. When in Scotland at the beginning of this year, on immigration business, my attention was directed to a complaint in the Scotsman newspaper, the national organ of the country. It was written by a well-known cattle breeder, a landed proprietor, near the town of Oban on the west coast of Scotland. In his letter this gentleman complained that a steer could be purchased at Calgary and the C.P.R. would haul it to St. John, N.B., a distance of 3000 miles, tranship it to one of their ocean steamers and carry it over sea another 3000 miles, landing it in Liverpool cheaper than he could ship a beast by freight from Oban to London. You can depend that this gentleman did not think the Canadian farmer had much to complain about in comparison with his own grievances.

Another case was brought under my notice by Mr. W. Haxton of Dundee, of the firm of Fleming Haxton, shipping agents, through whose hands thousands of emigrants for Manitoba and the Northwest have passed within the last ten or twelve years. "That Canadian Pacific of yours is a marvel for low rates," said Mr. Haxton to me one day. I ventured to remark that if he were on the other side he would hear more about it. "Oh! it'll be the old story," he said pawkily. "A prophet is always without honor in his own country."

He then laid before me the details of a comparison he had just made between Home and Canadian rates. Two years ago a family had passed through his hands from Forfarshire and gone to Brandon. A year after settling there, they sent home for some household effects that had been left behind. The weight was some where about two tons. The goods were shipped from Glasgow to Halifax and thence to Brandon. Out of curiosity, Mr. Haxton asked a quotation for the same weight of material from Dundee to London and was more than astonished to find that the difference was a shilling in favor of the British consignment. Now, Mr. Haxton is a man doing business in the course of the year, with agents of almost every railway system in the world, and yet out of all these he was disposed to regard the C.P.R. as "a marvel."

It has been my own privilege, at one time or another, to travel over nearly every one of the railways of Britain. I have also sampled, at odd times, those of Germany, France and Belgium, but nowhere in these countries can one enjoy the same comfort in travelling as one may do on the C. P. R. system. The same regard for the comfort of its passengers is displayed on the company's ocean-going steamers, and I did fair to say that if two or three fast boats were added to the Atlantic fleet the line would soon become the most popular between Britain and the Dominion.

It seems to me that during its history the policy of the company has been to promote the development of the West, first by encouraging production and again by providing for that produce being placed on the world's markets on terms which will permit of its holding its own. I do not suggest that this has been undertaken as a philanthropic enterprise. The company is out for profit like every other business organization, but as a factor in the marvellous development of the West, the master minds which inaugurated and successfully if profitably carried out, the details of this policy have earned in my estimation no little measure of honor. When one reflects that billions of dollars are invested in railroads in America which are not earning a cent of dividend for the investors, one can understand the full meaning of what the Hon. Clifford Sifton said in as many words at the monster meeting at Brandon last October, that the success of the C.P. R. had not so much depended upon the fact that they had no opposition, but on a fact more creditable to its officials that it was one of the best managed railroads in the world.

AGONIZING NEURALGIA.

Due to Poor, Weak Blood—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will Insure a Cure.

Neuralgia is the surest sign that your whole system is weak and unstrung. Those sharp, stabbing pains are caused by your jangled nerves. But your nerves would not be jangled if your blood was pure and strong. You can't cure neuralgia by liniments or hot applications. They may relieve for a moment—but they can't possibly cure. You can never cure neuralgia until you enrich your blood and enrich your starved nerves with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They actually make new blood. They soothe the nerves and strengthen the whole system. They strike right at the cause of agonizing neuralgia. Mr. John McDermott, Bond Head, Ont. says: "As the result of a wetting, I was seized with pains in all parts of my body. I consulted a doctor, who told me the trouble was neuralgia. He treated me for some time but did not help me. I had often read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and decided to try them. By the time I had taken three boxes, there was a good improvement in my case, and after I had taken ten boxes, every ache and pain had disappeared. I had gained in weight and felt better in every way. I shall always have a good word to say for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

When the blood is poor, the nerves are starved; then comes neuralgia, insomnia, St. Vitus dance, paralysis or locomotor ataxia. All these troubles are cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, because they actually make the rich, red blood that feeds and soothes the starved nerves and sends health and strength to every part of the body. That is why these pills also cure such troubles as rheumatism, anæmia, chronic erysipelas, indigestion, and the special ailments of growing girls and women. But you must get the genuine with the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper around each box. If in doubt, write the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and the pills will be sent by mail at 50 cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50. If you are ailing, try them to-day.

A BACKWARD LOOK.

"Add yo year to year."—Isaiah xxix. 1

So goes the old year forth, as goes
A king with no attending train,
As goes a monarch old, who knows
His further effort is in vain;
In stately sequence they have gone—
The courtier months—and now, alone
The old year proudly falters on,
The new year comes to claim the throne.

But we that stand as subjects stand
Within the temple of the years
While faints the narrow thread of sand
That in the timeglass now appears—
Should we look out adown the way
Whereon our eager feet would fare
Or should we gaze at yesterday
And see what is recorded there?

Aye, backward then a moment's space—
Look backward at the dimming hill
Ere yet old Time with gentle grace
With drifting haze the distance fills;
Count now the heights which held the goals
Which had been ours to win and keep
Save that we in our shrinking souls
Feared that the climb was high and steep.

Now the horizon whence we wend
Seems but a path all smooth and fair
Where frowning hill and valley blend
And any load were light to bear.
Could we go back! Ah, might we go
Once more upon the dwindling way
The trials should not fret us so—
The trifles, now, of yesterday.

So, in the temple of the years
We gaze back at the fading view—
The composite of laughs and tears—
Then turn to face the roadway new
The new year comes, as comes a king
Appareled in rich stuffs, and gold—
Grant that unto it we may bring
The good we garnered from the old.

It is said that the cross mark instead of a signature did not originate in ignorance. It was always appended to signatures in mediaeval times as an attestation of good faith.

Throwing Cattle.

Throwing a bull or a cow not carrying a calf is not a difficult task and can be done in such a manner that the animal will not be injured in the least and is so simple that any one need not be afraid to attempt it. The throwing device is merely a rope tied about the horns or neck or to a halter, given a half hitch about the neck, a second half hitch, but direction of rope reversed, about the heart girth, and a third half hitch just in front of the hook points or hip bones. One man stands near the animal's head to hold the halter, and a second grasps the rope and pulls backward, either to one side or the other, according to whether the rope is right or left hitch. The animal stands still, acts as though he were surprised, but soon easily rolls over to his side. To hold him securely attach ropes to front and rear feet, stretch and fasten.—American Cultivator.

"Home, Sweet Home."

"Home, Sweet Home," Payne's song, was originally a number in the opera "Clari, the Maid of Milan," a production brought out in 1823. The opera was a failure, and nothing is now known of it save the one song, which became instantly popular. Over 100,000 copies were sold in the first year of its publication, and the sale in one form or another has been constant ever since the first appearance of this beautiful theme. The melody is a Sicilian folk song and was adapted to the words by Payne himself.

A white mink has been captured at Roberval, Que., by Mr. Henry Porter. It is a fine specimen, considerably above the average size. The animal is a very rare one and is regarded as very valuable for show purposes. Its fur is much finer than that of its brown brothers, its claws are shorter and its nose more pointed. Also, as in most albinos, the eyes are pink.

Poultry raising pays.

People who tell you that there is no money in raising chicks may have tried to make money in the business by using setting hens as hatchers, and they might as well have tried to locate a gold mine in the cabbage patch. The business of a hen is—to lay eggs. As a hatcher and brooder she is outclassed. That's the business of the Chatham Incubator and Brooder, and they do it perfectly and successfully.

The poultry business, properly conducted, pays far better than any other business for the amount of time and money invested.

Thousands of poultry-raisers—men and women all over Canada and the United States—have proved to their satisfaction that it is profitable to raise chicks with the

The noble Arabian steed is sometimes put to ignoble uses. A traveler with iconoclastic ideas said: "You have heard of the Arabian horse's beauty, its docility, its intelligence, its endurance. Did you know that it churned the family butter? Among the desert tribes when butter is needed the milk is put in a sheepskin bag and tied by a short rope to the horse's saddle. The horse is then urged into a trot, and this gait is kept up until the milk in the sheepskin is joggled into butter. A fine, firm, smooth butter it is."

WESTERN CANADIAN EDITORS

A Series of Articles Describing their Lives, their Aims and their Influence.

44.

R. L. RICHARDSON.

R. L. RICHARDSON.

Editor-in-Chief Winnipeg Daily Tribune.

While publicity and popularity are strong points of a newspaper, is one of the contradictions of rnalism that the men directing n controlling a power of such orld-wide influence are sometimes n of whom the public knows not en the names. Who knows anyng of the personality of the editor the London Times or Telegraph, Daily News? And of the great merican papers, those in which editors-in-chief are outstanding few indeed. In Canada, as in itain and the United States, pernal journalism, with some considrable exceptions, does not appear to rive. In Austria, in Germany in pain and Mexico and particularly France the popularity of a newspaper is dependent to a much greater xtent than in Anglo-Saxon countries n the writer than on the matter ritten. In Paris, the first thing ooked at by a newspaper reader is he signature at the foot of the arcle. If it be that of a man recognized s an authority on the topic of which he article treats, the reader says: Let us see what So-and-So has to ay." The French capital has thus often been called the "City of the Signed Article" and the title marks one of the characteristic differences between the ideals of French as distinguished from British journalism. The traditions of newspaperdom in Anglo-Saxon countries—though within the past decade strong personalizing forces have been at work—are all toward the anonymity of journalism. It is an axiom in almost every office that the paper, and not the writer, is to have all the credit of good work done on and for it. The subordination of the individual to the paper is the fundamental principle in almost every newspaper on this side of the Atlantic.

The exceptions — and within the past few years the exceptions are notable—have only made the rule the more marked. In every generation there have been one or two outstanding men who are a personal as well as a journalistic power. Greeley and Dana in the past generation of American newspaper men, and Hearst and Watterson in this and in Canadian journalism George Brown, at once rise to the mind as men of such personal force that their newspapers are not so much commercial enterprises or even political influences, as the outgrowth and expression of a commanding public personality.

In present Canadian journalism no newspaper man west of Lake Superior has been more in the public eye either as a journalist or a politician to a greater extent than R. L. Richardson of the city of Winnipeg, editor-in-chief and manager of the Tribune newspaper. Mr. Richardson occupies a unique and original position in the journalistic and political life of Western Canada. His friends and supporters, and they are many, vigorously contend that he is a devoted, fearless advocate of the cause of the people of the west, a sturdy champion of the constitutional rights a believer in the present opportunities and the great future of this country, and one who would not permit party affiliations at any time to interfere with what he conscientiously believed was just and to the advantage of western Canada. His enemies, and they are not few, dispute these high claims of Mr. Richardson's friends. Howbeit, there is no difference of opinion as to his abilities as a journalist, his thorough understanding of public questions and his strength as a publicist, largely through his strong personality, unquestioned ability and strength of purpose, he has made the Tribune newspaper since the first number a factor in Western Canadian life.

In the full vigor of virile manhood Robert Lorne Richardson is in his journalistic and political advocacy characteristically western in his forcefulness and energy. His strenuous manner, the outcome of his strength of purpose and untiring energy is evident in every phase of his business and political career and it is not surprising in life's battle if he gives as well as receives hard knocks.

Mr. Richardson was born at Balderson, a little village in the county of Lanark in Ontario of English and Scottish descent, in the year 1860, the son of Joseph Richardson and Harriet Thompson, his wife. His paternal grandfather, Thomas Richardson, was one of the early pioneers of the old Bathurst district as that part of Ontario was called. His maternal grandfather fought under Nelson at Trafalgar which may account to some extent for the fighting blood very evident in the make-up of the grandson descendent. Educated at the public school of his native place, he remained on his father's farm until 1876 when he joined the staff of the Montreal Star with which he remained until 1879 when he became one of the editorial staff of the Toronto Globe remaining with that paper until 1882.

The Canadian west with its manifold opportunities to the young and ambitious was beginning that development which has continued with such magnitude to the present time and Mr. Richardson recognized his chance. He came to Winnipeg in 1882. He was associated with J. H. Preston, now M.P.P. in the Ontario legislative assembly, of Brantford, Ontario, in the publication of the Daily Sun in Winnipeg from 1885 to 1889, when with D. L. McIntyre, he obtained control of the paper which he continued to publish as the Tribune an independent newspaper of influence and ability carried on along lines prompted politically by the convictions of Mr. Richardson himself.

A powerful and convincing public speaker, Mr. Richardson entered public life in 1896 defeating Hon. Robert Rogers, now minister of public works in the Manitoba government in a contest for the representation of Lisgar in the House of Commons and in the same general election stumped the province effectually on behalf of the Liberal policy of the time.

Differing with the leaders of the Liberal party as to its policy he in 1900 was opposed by a nominee of that party in Lisgar but was victorious by five times his previous majority.

While Mr. Richardson has the gift of making sincere political friends, he also has the qualities that make bitter political enemies and in 1901 he was the only member against whom the petition to unseat was pressed. Unseated, owing to the united actions of both political parties as is contended by Mr. Richardson's friends, he was defeated in 1902 in the consequent bye-election by the presence of a third candidate in the contest placed there to further his possible defeat. Mr. Richardson, however, carried every English speaking district in the constituency.

During Mr. Richardson's term as member of parliament he took a prominent position in the debates and was a recognized authority on Western subjects that came before the house. An ardent believer in Provincial rights particularly as regards education he has taken strong ground and a prominent position in the controversies and elections in which that has been the issue and his paper, The Tribune, has been the leading journalistic advocate of that course in the west.

Mr. Richardson takes much interest in rifle shooting and has been a member of the council of the Dominion Rifle Association. He is a Presbyterian in religion and married in 1885 Clara J., daughter of the late Ira Mallory of Mallorytown, Ontario.

HE WAS LAID UP FOR OVER A YEAR

TILL DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED HIS KIDNEY TROUBLES.

Now He's Perfectly Healthy and Able to Work—Gives all the Credit to the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Wapella, Sask., Feb. 12—(Special)—Cured of Kidney Disease that laid him up for over a year, Mr. George Bartleman, a well known man here, is loud in his praises of Dodd's Kidney Pills, for to them and nothing else he claims he owes his cure.

"Yes, I had Kidney Trouble," Mr. Bartleman says. "I had pains in my back and other parts of my body and though the doctor did what he could for me I grew worse until I was unable to work.

"Then I started to take Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I took them all winter and summer while I was unable to work. I took in all twelve boxes, and now I am perfectly healthy. My pains are all gone and I am able to work. I heartily recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to all sufferers from Kidney Disease.

Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure the Kidneys. Healthy Kidneys strain all impurities, all seeds of disease, out of the blood. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills cure such a wide range of diseases including Bright's Disease, Rheumatism and Urinary Troubles.

FASHION AND FIGURE.

Good Form Necessary—Simple Means of Acquiring It.

Speaking of the fact that fashion has been rather slow in adopting the empire style in dress, an authority on the human figure says it is clearly evident that "what has kept the empire vogue from attracting general approval hitherto has been a stupid indifference to figure. The presumption was that nothing mattered beneath loose folds, whereas, on the contrary, everything depended on the perfection of the figure."

A Good Carriage.

The woman who has a bad figure and desires to improve it has it greatly in her own power to do so. Setting aside the question of diet entirely, although it is so important a factor in both good complexions and figures, one must begin with the most simple rules. A woman who stands badly will never look well. She must contract the habit knowingly, both in standing and walking, of keeping the stomach well in, the chest well forward and expanded, the shoulders back and the head poised at a slightly raised yet comfortable angle, which will not allow the chin to fall upon the neck. There is also the question of breathing.

Right Breathing.

Deep breathing exercises should be included in the physical education of every child who is carefully and conscientiously brought up. One thing is certain—no woman can develop her chest naturally without accurate breathing. In order to practice it properly the head must be thrown back, the shoulders kept square and a deep breath taken very slowly through the nose until the lungs are filled with air. There is no more effectual aid to beauty than deep breathing, for it has the most remarkable effect on the internal organs, and therefore on the general appearance.

Purity of the Blood

The Best Protection Against Disease--Obtained by Using

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

If you enquire into the cause of sickness, pain and suffering you will find that fully nine-tenths of it results from derangements of the liver, kidneys and bowels.

This was the truth arrived at by Dr. Chase when he began experiments which led to the discovery of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

The liver and kidneys are intimately related as filters of the blood, and the regularity of the bowels depends on the healthful action of the liver.

Hence it happens that when the liver and kidneys are made healthy and vigorous by the influence of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, such diseases as biliousness, liver complaint, kidney disease, indigestion and constipation soon entirely disappear.

With the liver and kidneys in healthful working order, the purity of the blood is ensured and you are protected against colds, fevers and contagious and infectious diseases.

As a family medicine to promptly cure the most common ills of life there is no preparation that can be compared with Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. In every neighborhood there are people who have proven the merit of this great medicine. Ask them.

Mr. Wm. Cook, Moosomin, Sask., writes:—"I have been taking Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and must say they have done me a lot of good. I have been a great sufferer from diabetes and I can say to all who are afflicted with this disease that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will do them good. I cannot say that I am entirely cured, but I have been greatly benefitted by this medicine."

Minard's Liniment Cures Garget in Cows.

General Booth said at Exeter Hall that one of his cherished dreams was the establishment of a university of humanity.

A Lottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, taken according to directions, will subdue a cough in a short time. This assertion can be verified by hundreds who have tried it and are pleased to bear testimony to its merits so that all may know what a splendid medicine it is. It costs you only 25 cents to join the ranks of the many who have been benefited by its use.

The Battle of the Giants.

The Battle of the Giants was another name given to the battle at Marignano in 1515 between the allied French and Venetians, and the allied Italians and Swiss armies. The latter were defeated with slaughter, over 12,000 of their troops being left on the field. The victors lost 4,000. The battle was given this name by Trivalzio, a soldier and historian, who was present.

Rock Oil.

When petroleum was first discovered in this country it was called rock oil and was sold in small vials as a specific for rheumatism.

They are a powerful Nerviline.—Dyspepsia causes derangement of the nervous system and nervous debility once engendered is difficult to deal with. There are many testimonials as to the efficacy of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills in treating this disorder, showing that they never fail to produce good results. By giving proper tone to the digestive organs, they restore equilibrium to the nerve centres.

THE CLAM'S NECK.

Purpose and Characteristics of This Organ of the Bivalve.

Persons who have seen soft shell clams as they lay in a pan in the kitchen preparatory to being cooked scarcely recognize them in their natural state. Many of us who have seen clams know that they have "necks," but are ignorant of the purpose and characteristics of this attachment. As they lie on the ground they are far from being close mouthed. In fact, they are seldom to be seen with the shell closed. From one end projects the "neck," which may be three times as long as the shell when fully extended. This fact, in case the "neck" is stretched out, makes one wonder how such a length can be contracted into such a small space and how much remains in the shell after the "neck" has been elongated. This is the astonishing characteristic of the soft shelled clam and the one that makes him unrecognizable to so many people. One of the clams, for instance, is three inches long. His "neck" when extended is possibly eight or nine inches long and as large around as a man's middle finger.

As every one knows, the clam when in its native haunts is to be found several inches below the surface of the sand. He has to be dug up when discovered by the little spurts of water which the clam beneath throws up when disturbed.

This "neck" connects the clam with his food supply in the water above. In the "neck" are parallel tubes. Through one tube the clam sucks in a quantity of water. From the water he absorbs whatever nourishment it may contain and then expels the water through the other tube.

One may wonder how the clam gets into the sand or mud. At the end opposite the "neck" may be seen an appendage resembling a turtle's tail in shape and called a foot. It is with this foot that he digs his way downward.

An Atmospheric Test.

A curious test of the atmosphere was tried in the French senate recently. General Billot complained of a headache at a recent session and attributed it to gas given off by the heating apparatus. The engineer was unable to find any defect in the apparatus. Recourse was had to a "bird test." Bengalee birds are reputed to be very easily asphyxiated. One was hung in a cage for eight hours over the fauteuil in which General Billot contracted the headache. As the bird was lively at the end of that period, the atmosphere was pronounced pure.

A Rare Bird In England.

The zoo has just received the first hummingbird which has reached the garden and the second which has ever arrived in England alive. It was brought from Venezuela by Captain Pain, and its food is syrup mixed with extract of beef. The bird is a dark green in color, with blue cheeks.—London Chronicle.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS.

Meets the mother's need in caring for the health of her little ones as no other medicine in the world can. The Tablets cure constipation, indigestion, colic, simple fevers, diarrhoea, teething troubles and expel worms. They break up colds and prevent croup. They make children sleep naturally and healthily, because they remove the cause of sleeplessness. And they are the only medicine that gives the mother a solemn guarantee that it contains no opiate or poisonous soothing stuff. They are good for children from birth onward; they always do good—they cannot possibly do harm. Mrs. Geo. Turner, Barry's Bay, Ont., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the troubles that come to little ones with perfect satisfaction. I think there is no medicine can equal the Tablets." Every mother ought to keep a box of these Tablets in the house as a safeguard for her little ones. Sold by all druggists or sent by mail at 25 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.,

Queen Alexandra's Camera.

A most interesting feature of the fiftieth annual exhibition of the Royal Photographic Society, London, is a selection of splendid enlargements from negatives by Queen Alexandra. She seldom travels without a camera; in fact, it is one of her most constant companions, and her collection of photographs therefore is both extensive and unique.

One may note a strong evidence of artistic feeling in the selection of the subjects as displayed in pictures chosen for the exhibition, and the fact that they have stood enlargement so well is excellent testimony to the Queen's technical knowledge of the art. In sea views particularly the Queen's artistic instinct is strongly marked with delightful cloud effects.

A remarkable photograph is that of a loyal crowd in Denmark assembled outside the Amallenborg Palace on the occasion of the King of Denmark's birthday.

Chocolate Pie.

Scald one pint of milk. Stir into this half a cup of flour mixed with half a cup of sugar and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt. Stir constantly until the mixture thickens, then stir in the yolks of three eggs beaten with one-fourth of a cup of sugar and an ounce or more of softened chocolate. Flavor with half a teaspoonful of cinnamon and pour into a plate lined with pastry as for a custard pie. Bake and let cool a little, then spread upon the pie a meringue made of the whites of three eggs and six level tablespoonfuls of sugar.

Marabou Neckpieces.

Marabou and ostrich combinations are among the most fascinating neck adornments for dress occasions in particular, for the lovely dyes used on the delicate feathers furnish an entrancing choice. The more sober colors are equally attractive and prove extremely flattering to every complexion when in different shades of brown and gray as well as all black and black and white.—Vogue.

TO A NEW V.

Clean, crisp, innocent V,
Fresh from the mint,
Sent forth in this hard world
To do your stint,
It makes me rather sad
To see you go,
For soon your name will be
"Tainted," I know.

You'll pass through divers ways
And crooked deals,
And wicked avarice
Will dog your heels.
Likely enough twill be
Your wretched fate
With "graft" besmirched notes to Associate.

You may be held in some—
Trust pirate's thrall
Till there is left you no
Honor at all.
Then you'll be ostracized
By people good;
Condemned for others' sins,
Misunderstood.

You could not even be
Given away
For service with the just;
You'd have to stay
With outcast cash, and all
Your days be spent
Under a ban, despite
Your good intent.

MILD IN THEIR ACTION.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are very mild in their action. They do not cause griping in the stomach or cause disturbances there as so many pills do. Therefore, the most delicate can take them without fear of unpleasant results. They can, too, be administered to children without imposing the penalties which follow the use of pills not so carefully prepared.

Bismarck's Favorite Figure.

Prince Bismarck, it is said, had a curious superstition connected with the number three and apparently not without reason. He served three German emperors; he fought in three wars; he signed three treaties of peace; he arranged the meeting of the three emperors and established the triple alliance.

Patagonia.

Patagonia was named by Magellan from a Spanish word signifying "big foot." He formed his impression of the natives before seeing them by the imprints of their ample pedal extensions in the sand.

Externally or internally it is good.—When applied externally by brisk rubbing, Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil opens the pores and penetrates the tissues as few liniments do, touching the seat of the trouble and immediately affording relief. Administered internally, it will still the irritation in the throat which induces coughing and will cure affections of the bronchial tubes and respiratory organs. Try it and be convinced.

How a Great Actor Lived.

Charles Mathews, one day previous to the period of his publicly proclaimed dire bankruptcy, invited a friend to dine with him. The walnuts were washed down by some rare sherry. "That's a delicious wine," his friend exclaimed. "It must have cost you a lot of money." "It didn't cost me anything that I know of," the mighty comedian answered, with a shrug. "You had it given to you, then?" the friend suggested. "Oh, no," answered Mathews; "I bought it from Ellis, in Bond street!" "But he will charge you something for it?" the friend exclaimed in astonishment. "I believe he does write something down in a book," Charles retorted gravely. "Let's have another glass, my boy."

WANGKANG CEREMONIES.

How the Chinese Attract and Then Destroy Evil Spirits.

Recently the Chinese residents of the Straits Settlements had a great procession, called "wangkang," to get rid of a large accumulation of evil spirits, says a writer in the Chicago News. Ceremonies of this sort are held by the Chinese about once in fifteen years. The plan is to construct a richly decorated junk, fill it with dainty eatables, money, live animals, incense and other tempting things and then to take it about the city with music and appropriate singing and great pomp generally.

This causes the evil spirits to come out to see what is going on. Beholding the splendid junk and its rare contents, they crowd inside. Demons of sickness are especially sought for and snared.

After the junk has been sufficiently paraded so that it is chock full of demons, it is burned and the evil spirits perish. Formerly the junk was set adrift on the ocean, but sometimes it was stranded on some island or other, causing great suffering to the inhabitants thus exposed to the attacks of the marooned spirits. So now the junk is burned at the close of each ceremony of the sort.

The Chinese in the vicinity of Singapore spent about $10,000 in getting rid of their demons this fall.

Failure.

"Oh, George, I don't think that new safety razor of yours amounts to anything at all."

"Why not, dear?"

"Because I tried to use it today, and I couldn't do anything with it."

"What were you trying to do with it?"

"I was only trying to sharpen a pencil, and it wouldn't cut a bit."

Scarfpins show odd designs, as a pearl fish, a diamond owl, a Turk's head in enamel and an interrogation point of diamonds.

Chrysoprase and pearls, the green and the white, afford a pleasing contrast as employed with rose gold in some of the latest designs in the German style of "new art."

Sets of three handy pins are displayed in new openwork designs. Many are in ring shape, composed of pearls and rubies in alternation, and in the center of the ring is a single flower on a gold stem.

Boys and Balloons.

The French schoolboys had recently to pass a government examination at the close of the primary course. The invention of balloons was the subject given. "Balloons were invented," wrote one boy, "by the brothers Montgolfier, who were paper makers. They took a large balloon and filled it with paper. They then set light to the paper, and the balloon went up." Another boy included a treatise on ballast in his essay, with disastrous consequences. "When the aerostats, such being the name given to men who ride in balloons, wish to come down they fetch some sand and gravel and put it in the balloon. The latter is thus rendered heavier and more elongated." A pithy statement made is, "The aeronaut places himself within the balloon, the basket being used for provisions."

A Strenuous College President.

The energy of President Harper of the University of Chicago is both the despair and the admiration of those who know him. His driving power is extraordinary. Said a member of the faculty: "Dr. Harper knows all about the 'eight hour day.' He puts in two of them every twenty-four hours." For years Dr. Harper went to bed at midnight and rose at 5. To a theological student downeast because he could arrange no hour to meet the president for advanced work Dr. Harper said, "Are you free at 5:30 in the morning?" "Yes," was the startled answer. "Then come every day at that hour." And the arrangement was concluded on that basis.—World's Work.

IS IT PERSECUTION?

Before the law all men accused or suspected of crime are innocent until they have been proved guilty. The union officials arrested in Colorado and taken to Idaho to answer the charge of assassinating Governor Steunenberg, have not been tried and therefore are not known to be guilty of the crime alleged.

The Critic, a newspaper published in Salt Lake City, says it has not the slightest doubt but what a conspiracy exists among the mine owners of the west, having for its purpose the breaking up of the Western Federation of Miners. Innumerable facts have been disclosed at various times that point unmistakably to a connection between the mine-owners' association and crimes committed, which afterwards have been charged against the Western Federation of Miners, in order to discredit and disrupt this organization.

There is not a shadow of doubt it says as to the guilt of the large mine-owners of the state of Colorado in civil matters. It is a well known fact how they have debauched the legislature and judiciary of the state, and by threats to close down all the mines of the state they have held in check the legislature and forced it to do its bidding. Even the man acting as Governor today, possesses no legal right to the office, never having been elected or even a candidate for election.

The manner of arrest of Moyer and Heywood proves that this governor is but a tool of the mine-owners and willing to prostitute his office to further their private interests. Why could he not have followed the ordinary legal procedure and granted a hearing in Colorado, allowing the requisition for extradition if the evidence warranted? The very method of procedure in this case speaks ill for the authorites.
