THE MOYIE LEADER.

VOL. 7, NO 50. MOYIE, B. C., MARCH 25, 1905. $2 A YEAR

Great Was the Fall.

Eggs that were selling a week ago at $8.75 per case are now selling for $5.50, and all who do their trading at the store that keeps in touch with market conditions, have had the advantage of this price for the past week.

Don't be afraid of a shipwreck, for should the groceries be all washed overboard, you can always get Beef out of the Bullwarks and Wine out of the Porthole, and Chicken out of the Hatchway, providing there are no Hawks around, and should you want eggs the captain may command the ship to lay too and divide them up.

Use "Royal Household Flour," the best in the market.

A 30-DRILL COMPRESSOR

St. Eugene Enlarging Its Plant.

MACHINERY IS ORDERED

The Company Is Behind on Development, and Is Anxious to Catch up.

James Cronin, manager of the St. Eugene and the War Eagle and Centre Star companies, is home from Rossland. Yesterday, when asked about the compressor plant that is to be installed at the St. Eugene he said:

"We have ordered an air compressor from the Jenckes Machine company of Sherbrook, Ont. It will have a capacity of 3,000 cubic feet of air per minute and will furnish power for 30 machine drills. It will be shipped from the manufacturers about June 20th, and will be installed in July, and we expect to have it running by August 1st. Boilers will also be installed that will have a capacity of 500 horse power. This will give the mine a 50 drill equipment, there now being 20 machine drills in use. An addition to the building of 60x60 feet is now being erected. We are getting behind on development, and in order to catch up we have been compelled to increase the capacity of the plant. To do this development work we will probably have to add nearly 100 men to the present number employed. The mill this month is beating all previous records. Up to March 23rd the concentrates shipped amounted to 2600 tons, or an average of over 100 tons per day."

The Gun Club.

The Moyie Gun club held its weekly shoot yesterday afternoon, and the following is a list of the contestants and the number of clay pigeons broken by each:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Campbell | 22 | out 40 |
| Atchison | 17 | " |
| Eddy | 14 | " |
| Cameron | 14 | " |
| Armstrong | 11 | " |
| Hill | 9 | " |

Armstrong won the sweepstake contest, killing 9 out of 15 birds.

There is talk of a match being arranged between the Moyie and Cranbrook clubs.

Deserves Success.

Wm. Lawson is still industriously working on his claims on the side of the lake opposite Moyie. The tunnel in which he is working is now in 126 feet, and this work has been done by Lawson single handed and alone. The indications are becoming better and a good strong lead of galena may be encountered at any time.

Glasses are Plentiful,

But it is almost a certainty that they would be more common if everybody wore who should. You find people doing without them, just as they possibly can, which is a very wrong thing for them to do, indeed, as every day makes the case harder to deal with. If you, dear reader, have the slightest cause to beleive that your eyes need the attention of the optician, let us advise you in the matter. Let us advise you as soon as possible.

Corroded Lead.

Ottawa, Mar. 23.—Finance Minister Fielding asked for an increase in the duty on corroded lead or white lead to 30 per cent. The duty is now 5 per cent. Fielding was called on by Cornish, a representative of a firm which has contracts let to the extent of $200,000 for the erection of corroding works in Montreal and which expects to expend an additional hundred thousand dollars to obtain a plant with an output of 7000 tons by November next. The company is a branch of the Wisconsin firm, and is to be incorporated in the dominion as the Carter Lead Works of Canada.

Cornish was accompanied by J. L. Retalack, representative of the Silver-Lead Miners' association of British Colvmbia and W. A. Galliher M. P. They represented that the British Columbia producers are deprived of a domestic market for about eight or nine thousand tons of their lead through the absence of corroding works in the dominion.

The duty on pig lead is 35 per cent and on corroded lead 5 per cent. If the increase is given, there will have to be some increase in the rate of duty on mixed paints, as corroded lead is the raw material of the paint manufacturer. Fielding promised consideration.

Was an Oversight.

Last Saturday in giving an account of the St. Patrick's Day entertainment and ball the names of three persons who were largely instrumental in the success of the affair were unintentionally omitted. The names were P. J. McMahon, Mrs. Chas. Klingensmith and Mrs. M. J. Gill. The committee and the lady patronesses consisted of the following:

Committee—James Cronin, A. P. Macdonald, P. J. McMahon, Con Lynch, Mike Bonner, John Daly and Wm. O'Rourk.

Patroneases—Mrs. Cronin, Mrs. McMahon, Mrs. Proulx, Mrs. Klingensmith, Mrs. Stewart and Mrs. Bonner.

The omission of the names was purely an oversight. The editor was up late the night before doing honor to the patron saint and his head was not as clear as it should have been when the article was written.

The entertainment and dance was a big success from a financial point of view. After paying all expenses there were $98 left. Half of this amount was turned over to Messrs. Macdonald abd McMahon, secretary and treasurer of the Catholic church committee. The other half was turned over to Mrs. McMahon, president of the altar society, and this will be used towards paying for the new organ.

Crow Towns Prosperous.

D. J. Elmer returned home Thursday from a trip along the Crow east of here. He reports a successful trip, having disposed of several carloads of lumber besides taking several large orders for cigars. Mr. Elmer says that every town be visited is prospering.

Fire at Fernie.

A disastrous fire occured at Coal Creek, five miles from Fernie, last Saturday causing a damage of $200,000. The fire burned 800 feet of trestle across the valley, tripple, weigh house, one stable, 75 mine cars, and coal, 6 railroad slack cars, 4 G. N. and 2 C. P. box cars, and the hoisting plants of No. 2 and 3 tunnels.—Ledge.

How Martin Was Hurt.

Further particulars have been received frtm Rossland regarding the accident in the White Bear mine in which Duncan Martin was hurt last week. It seems he had spit some fuse and was burrying to get out of the way before the blasts went off. There was considerable smoke in the workings and this confused him and he fell into an ore chute. The chute was 18 feet long. He fell on his back and was badly bruised and shaken up. At first it was thought that one of his legs was factured, but after he was taken to the hospital it was found that this was a mistake. A week of rest in the hospital should see him in good condition again.

Death of Andy Oman.

Andy Oman died in a cabin back of the Morley building Monday night. Death was due to excessive alcoholism. Coroner Clark made an investigation, but deemed an inquest unnecessary. W. R. Beattie, the undertaker, took the body to Cranbrook and the funeral was held there yesterday. Oman had lived in this vicinity for several years, and had worked both as a section boss and as a hotel porter. He had a good education, and it is said he at one time held a clerical position in a bank in Regina.

Cap Exploded.

While Eddie Lutner, the six year old son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Lutner, was playing in the yard last Saturday afternoon he got hold of a miners' cap and in playing with it it exploded. Both of his hands were quiet badly lacerated, but fortunately he will not lose any of his fingers. This is the second accident of the sort in Moyie within a year. Master Earl Shae had a similar experience only a few months ago.

Stage Curtain Here.

The drop curtain for the stage in the Eagles' has arrived. The work was done by F. J. Bradley & Co. of Cranbrook and is in every way satisfactory.

Champion Liniment for Rheumatism.

Chas. Doake, a mail carrier at Chapinville, Conn., says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the champion of all liniments. The past year I was troubled a great deal with rheumatism in my shoulder. After trying several cures the storekeeper here recommended this remedy and it completely cured me." There is no use of anyone suffering from that painful ailment when this liniment can be obtained for a small sum. One application gives prompt relief and its continued use for a short time will produce a permanent cure. For sale by W. J. Atchison.

POINTS ON FEEDING.

At the meeting of the State Dairymen's association at Durham, N. H., Professor W. D. Gibbs of the college experiment station said that he had been studying the question of economically feeding the milk cow. He had as rations to choose from corn stover at $8 per ton, red clover at $12, ensilage at $3, timothy hay at $18, bran at $22, linseed meal at $30, cornmeal and gluten meal and oats each at $31. From these he could compound several desirable rations, but most of them cost more than the product of an ordinary good cow would pay for. He estimated that her product should be twenty pounds of milk a day, worth 1½ cents a pound, or 30 cents a day. But with eighteen pounds of corn stover, forty pounds of ensilage, one pound of bran, two of cornmeal and three of cottonseed meal he had a mixture that would keep a cow in good condition at a cost of 20 cents a day. In this ration he has not taken into consideration the making of any gain in flesh or the value of manure, both of which would be increased by giving a part of red clover instead of so much corn stover, without greatly increasing the cost of ration.

How Often Shall We Feed?

Cows appear to give better results when fed twice a day than when fed more frequently. When fed so frequently as three or five times a day they are up on their feet straining and worrying for their feed some time before it gets to them. Investigations have recently taught that an animal is using energy when standing that if lying might go to some other use. Ruminants have large stomachs, and the more quickly the stomach is filled and the animal lies down, contented and satisfied, the better the returns will be for the owner. It is well understood it will cost less and be more convenient to feed the ration in two feeds than oftener.

Feeding Fresh Cows.

In answer to a correspondent's question regarding the amount to feed fresh cows Hoard's Dairyman says: Thirty pounds of silage, 15 pounds of clover hay and 4 pounds each of bran and gluten feed would contain nearly 28 pounds of dry matter, but little less than 3 pounds of digestible protein, over 13 pounds of digestible carbohydrates and seven-tenths of a pound of digestible fat. This is very heavy feeding, more, we should suppose, than any, even extra large, cows could be induced to eat and much more than the average cow can eat with profit. We are of the opinion that 30 pounds of silage, 10 pounds of clover hay and not to exceed 6 pounds of grain would be ample as an average allowance for these cows. At all events we do not hesitate to advise trying the result of reducing the allowance with a portion of the herd. If with reduced feed there is a reduced milk supply, the evidence would seem to warrant going back to the original allowance.

Caused Abortion.

Several years ago we had a great quantity of muskmelons and watermelons, citrons and cucumbers, which we cut in small pieces and fed to three milk cows and were very much pleased with the result, says a correspondent of Rural New Yorker. But after about two weeks we found that with one of the cows an abortion had been produced, and it immediately occurred to me that it must have been the seeds. My uncle was a veterinary surgeon, and I asked him if my surmise was correct, and he said: "Yes; in all probability it was the seeds. It is a well known fact in the study of medicine that any food or medicine that acts powerfully on the kidneys also affects to a greater or less extent the generative organs." Three years ago we raised a great quantity of squashes, and after gathering what were good we turned the cows into the field, and they ate them, as many as they pleased, but with the same result.

Forming Habits.

If a cow does not show a strong inclination to go dry within two months of the time she is expected to drop a calf, her feed should be as light as will keep her in fair flesh. She should have no grain feed, and she should not be milked dry, but less and less and less often. On the other hand, if a young cow shows an inclination to go dry too soon, make every effort to prolong her milking period by more succulent food and reasonable increase in the grain ration. Remember that the habits permitted with first calf have a tendency to repetition thereafter.

Feeding Twice a Day.

At a recent dairymen's meeting attended by the writer one of the speakers, a very practical and successful man, advised feeding cows only twice a day, since he had seen the plan employed with results just as good as when the cattle had three meals and with a considerable saving in labor. Yet the speaker confessed that he still fed his cows three times a day, merely because he feared that a change would cause temporary shrinkage in the milk yield. But there is no need to fear such effects, says American Cultivator. The writer made the change from three to only two feedings without, so far as could be observed, losing a single quart of milk. It was done gradually in about four days, making the noon meal lighter each day and increasing the other feeds until the change was made before the cows knew what was being done. A cow's stomach is very large as compared with that of a horse or of a human being, and she can easily hold enough to last twelve hours. Water should be given in the forenoon. The two feed plan is quite a labor saver.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

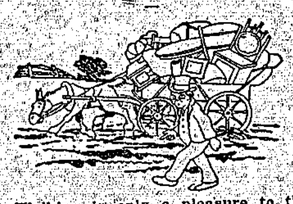
No woman changes her mind any oftener than she wants to, no matter what any one says.

"Just because I want to," is enough of reason and reason enough.

When fools fall out wise men reap the aftermath.



Walking is only a pleasure to the man who does not have to walk.

No man is afraid of a woman unless he has offended her.

Some people play with words as recklessly as a child with dynamite and often with as dire result.

Judging a man by the amount of gold he possesses is hardly what is known as the Golden Rule.

About the only thing that comes to him who waits these days is old age.

Made of Nicotine.

Dreams, pipe dreams, what should we do without 'em?
They come to soothe us when we're care beset.
Though cold, hard facts do oft essay to rout 'em,
Still they return and are with gladness met.

Ah, what so sweet as this delightful
dreaming,
This halt prevision of the things afar?
This dreamful rest from everlasting scheming,
This fire escape, when things caloric are?

Dream long—why shouldn't we be slaking
A thirst that burns as a consuming fire,
From which there's no escape when we are waking?
But in pipe dreams we get our heart's desire.

Not for the dreamer is the toil and trouble,
The smarting hands and blindly stumbling feet.
He dreams, and then do joy and gladness double,
Pain disappears and life becomes complete.

So light the pipe, nor listen to the chatter
Of sordid souls that never knew the bliss
Of just escaping from the grip of matter
By sweet communion with a pipe like this.

His Deserts.

"Give me liberty or give me death!" frantically shouted the political spellbinder as though he imagined his audience was composed of deaf men.

"Not if I happen to be on the jury!" exclaimed a man in the back of the audience who had yawned through the speech.

"What jury?" asked a friend who was groping for the drift of the remark.

"A jury to try the speaker on the charge of being an orator, of course," returned the first speaker. "He isn't bad enough to deserve death, yet it would be a shame to set him at liberty. I think $10 and thirty days would be about right."

May She Stay.

Where is the jolly bloomer girl
Who once went round the track,
The girl who set our hearts awhirl?
We know not where she is, alack,
But hope she won't come back.

When Cash Looked Good.

"Do you believe in art for art's sake?"

"Yes, on the days in which I do not happen to be hungry."

Starting Wrong.

"I never stole an umbrella in my life."

"And yet you say you hope some day to be a millionaire."

Forced to Be Polite.

"I notice Chawley speaks to his tailor on the street."

"Poor fellow! I had no idea he owed him that much."

Cheer Up.

What's the use of crying
When the skies are gray,
For you can't with sighing
Chase the clouds away.
Might as well be singing,
Though your verse is lame;
Care to windward flinging;
Price is just the same.

Though the day is hazy,
Dull the autumn sky,
There may be a daisy
Morning by and by.
Any way you guess it,
Crying does not pay;
May as well confess it;
May as well be gay.

Doesn't Match Name.

"He takes his whisky straight."

"You wouldn't think so if you saw him making crooked tracks for home."

Throwing Them In.

"Any germs in this milk?"

"Not that I know of. No extra charges if there are."

Honest Abe, U. S. M.

The Rural Mail Carrier Helps a Friend Out on Poetry.

AN accident to my mail cart detained me at Farmer John Day's house five hours the other day, but what was my loss turned out to be his gain. When he found out that I would be with him for the afternoon he said:

"Abe, I've been wantin' to talk with you for some time, but you are always in a hurry. I want to sort of pour out my soul to somebody—somebody who can appreciate the situation. You come purty near bein' the United States, don't you?"

I told him that as the carrier on No. 11 route, which reached from Daleville to Catton's Corners, I had the right of way over everybody else, even to a circus procession, and that I never went to Washington without asking if the president was well and the postmaster general was feeling happy.

"BY THUNDER, ABE, BUT YOU'VE HIT IT PLUMB CENTER!"

"I thought so; I thought so," he continued, "and now I'll unbosom myself. You know my wife died three years ago?"

"Yes."

"And mebbe you've heard that I was shinin' up to the Widder Skinner?"

"I believe I have."

"Yes, I'm shinin' up, Abe, and I'm expectin' to marry her next fall after the crops are all in. What I'm troubled about is that I haven't put any headstone up for my wife yet. I've meant to all along, but kinder put it off. I feel that I ought to do it before I marry again, and I want you to help me out of it."

"But what can I do?" I asked.

"You can help me with the poetry. I want at least two verses on the stone. I want to show the world that she was a good woman and I sorrowed for her, but at the same time I don't want to say anything to hurt the Widder Skinner's feelin's. She'll see the stone and read the poetry, and I don't want to make her mad. My daughter Sarah won't write a line, and the hired man don't know enough to find a rhyme for 'butter.' Will ye help me, Abe?"

I said I would, and we sat down on a hayrack in the barnyard and began the struggle. The sorrowing widower told me what he wanted as near as he could, and our first joint production read as follows:

Poor Hannah Day she had to go
And leave her John a-weeping,
And 'neath this stone her body lies,
While heaven her soul is keeping.

No more she will be seen on earth,
And John sits in his sorrow;
He weeps and grieves and does not care
What happens on the morrow.

Her equal will be hard to find—
So loving, kind and tender—
And he whom she has left behind
Will now and e'er defend her.

"Say, Abe, that's a peach!" exclaimed Uncle John when I had read it to him, "and if it wasn't for the Widder Skinner it would go like a house afire. You see, we've got to look out for her. We must do poor Hannah justice and yet not step on the widder's corns. I wouldn't exactly say that I sit in my sorrow. I did sit in it for the first three months, of course, but then it began to go away. I don't want the widder to think I'd sit around and weep. And about my not carin' what happens on the morrow, I guess I'd change that too. When a man is shinin' up to a widder he always cares what happens tomorrer. Try again, Abe."

We moved over under the shed to get in the shade, and I took a little longer to fit things together. At the end of an hour I read him the following:

Death came and beckoned Hannah
Day.
And Hannah she was ready.
All knew her for a patient wife,
So kind and true and steady.

She left a husband here behind.
And he was plunged in sorrow,
But later on got over it
And looked for the tomorrow.

Her virtues all remembered are,
And folks will always miss her,
And with the hope she's better off
Her John will not dismiss her.

"By thunder, Abe, but you've hit it plumb center!" shouted Uncle John as he jumped up. "If you had tried for forty years you couldn't beat that. It's not only poetry, but you've dodged and twisted around until Hannah couldn't object if she was alive, and the Widder Skinner can't find no fault if she tries ever so hard. How on earth did you do it?"

"The United States can do most anything, you know," I replied.

"Of course she can, of course. By gum, but how lucky for me that your cart broke down today! I'll go into town tomorrow and order the tombstone and set the man to work, and in a month everybody will be reading them verses. Yes, Hannah was beckoned and was ready to go. That's well put. She was patient and kind and steady—that's fine. I was left behind, and of course I took on about her loss, but after awhile I cheered up again. That gives the widder to understand that I'm not moonin' around yet. Of course I'll remember Hannah and hope that she's better off, and the end of the verse is simply immense, Abe—simply immense. 'Her John will now dismiss her.' Havin' grieved and done his duty, he now turns away and thinks of other things, principally the Widder Skinner. What's the charge, Abe?"

"Nothing whatever."

"Won't you take a dollar, at least?"

"Not a penny, Uncle John. You may send me a piece of the wedding cake, and it'll be all right."

"I'll do it, Abe. I'll send you half of it, the whole of it, a cake and five bushels of new potatoes besides. You've just pulled me out of a fix in the nicest way in the world, and if I ever forget it I hope to be kicked by a jackass. Three of the beautifulest verses of poetry ever written, and Hannah's all right, the widder's all right, and I'm feelin' as if I was seven feet high and weighed half a ton."

HEALTHY LUNGS

Depend upon Rich, Red Blood—Poor Blood Means Weak Lungs and Fatal Consumption.

Every drop of blood in the body must go through the lungs. That is why the lungs are helped and healed, and strengthened with the great blood-builder, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They fill the veins with pure, rich red blood that gives health and vigor to weak lungs. That is the way Dr. Williams' Pink Pills brace the lungs to throw off bronchitis and heavy colds. That is the way Dr. Williams' Pink Pills build up the lungs after an attack of la grippe or pneumonia. That is the way Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have saved hundreds in Canada from consumptives' graves. No other medicine does this work so speedily and so well. Mrs. Jane A. Kennedy, Douglastown, Que., says:—"My sister, a young and delicate girl, took a severe cold when about seventeen years old. Nothing we did for her seemed to do any good, and we feared she was going into consumption. Often after a bad night I would get up early to see if she had spit blood during the night. A friend strongly urged me to give her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and within a month from the time she had begun their use, she had almost recovered her health. Under the continued use of the Pills she is now well and strong."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills not only make weak lungs strong, but they cure all troubles arising from a poor or deficient blood supply, such as anaemia, indigestion, rheumatism, neuralgia, general weakness, St. Vitus dance, headaches and backaches, kidney troubles, palpitation of the heart, and the special secret ailments of young girls and women. Insist upon the genuine with full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" on the wrapper around each box. Sold by medicine dealers everywhere, or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by writing The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

COSTLY FIRE IN MAIL CAR.

A Connellsville, Pa., dispatch says:—A mail car on the westbound Baltimore and Ohio express was burned today between Kooas Mills and Ellis on the Connellsville division. Fifteen hundred registered letters, $250,000 in currency and hundreds of pounds of mail were destroyed. Mail Clerk Free and two assistants were slightly injured in jumping from the car.

CHEWED THEIR WAY THROUGH BARBED WIRE.

We were to perform a famous feat in crawling on all fours for many meters. Our ambition was not exactly to attract attention of the Russians and receive their applause from their quick-firers. All sorts of fireworks seemed to help the work of their searchlights. We made slow progress, always on fours. We reached the second netting of barbed wire, and this we hacked away without very much trouble. In front of us was the final fence. We had had a happy run of luck so far. We did not wish to spoil it by a touch of carelessness or too much daring. Cautiously, therefore, we went on our stomachs to make the distance between the second and the first barbed-wire entanglements. All this distance was a surprise to us; it was covered with many things evincive of the skill and thoughtfulness of the Russian engineers. It was about one hundred meters in length. The ground was sloping. It was filled with pitfalls and mines innumerable. For a second these mines made us forget the first line of wire fence toward which we were making our way. First of all, we had to dispose of the mines. We had reason to suspect that they were electric mines, and, in fact, the Russian engineers, with all their thoughtfulness, did not always take the trouble to bury the conductors. We discovered and cut as many as four conductors, which were just about the size of my thumb. They were wrapped in a rubber coating, and within the rubber coating we found over twenty-four small wires. I carried no scissors about me. These electric wires were a neat surprise to us. The severe usage to which it had been put had dulled the edge of my axe almost as blunt as the edge of my palm. It could not cut the rubber-wrapped wires on soft earth. Time was pressing. We were in danger of being discovered before we could get at the first line of barbed-wire fence, which was the last goal of our efforts; moreover, we were somewhat impatient. So all of us fell upon those electric wires and with our teeth we bit them off. I fear we may have been somewhat excited. We did some damage to our teeth by this work. When a man tells you that he did not know when his teeth were being broken, you would not believe him. That man might be telling the truth, under some circumstances, however.

He laughed a laugh innocent and childlike, and in the laughter you could see more than two broken teeth in his mouth. Nothing else could drive home the conviction quite so powerfully as those broken teeth of his.—Adachi Kinnosuke in Success Magazine.

MESSRS. C. C. RICHARDS & CO.,

Gentlemen,—My daughter, 13 years old, was thrown from a sleigh and injured her elbow so badly it remained stiff and very painful for three years. Four bottles of MINARD'S LINIMENT completely cured her and she has not been troubled for two years.

Yours truly,

J. B. LIVESQUE.

St. Joseph P. O., 18th Aug., 1900.

Many newspapers throughout the world, since the fall of Port Arthur, have criticised the Japanese for having used up so much energy in capturing that stronghold contending that it would have been more advantageous, from a military standpoint, to have taken Mukden, the capital of Manchuria, and the centre of the theatre of the war. There is no doubt that the capture of Mukden would have been greater as a victory than the taking of Port Arthur, but the Japanese reason for not doing so is somewhat peculiar, if not startling. Mukden is a sacred city, in the eyes of the Chinese, and if in the whirlwind of the war, it should be despoiled the curse and possibly the vengeance of the Chinese would be upon the nation responsible for it. Mukden is identified with all that is great and glorious in the records of the Manchuria emperors, and within its precincts rest the bodies of the Manchu fathers. It is well known that their dynasty is the oldest in the world. The Manchurians have become so intermingled with the Chinese that the veneration of the city is a matter of considerable moment. In such sacred regard has the city been held that the Siberian railroad, which enters so many of the other important cities in Manchuria, makes a wide detour as it approaches Mukden. The Chinese railway from Shan-hai-Kwan, instead of being continued to Mukden, has as its terminus Sing-min-Tung, a small town about thirty miles west of the capital. The city stands in the middle of an alluvial plain, and the soil for miles around is rich and highly cultivated.—Success Magazine.

Mt. Brydges, Ont., Mar. 6.—(Special).—Among the many people in this neighborhood who tell of the great work Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing, none is more emphatic than that old and respected citizen, Mr. Robt. Bond.

"I believe I owe my life to Dodd's Kidney Pills," Mr. Bond says. "My attending physician said I was in the last stages of Bright's Disease, and that there was no hope for me. Then I commenced to take Dodd's Kidney Pills and used in all twenty boxes. Now I eat well, sleep well, and my doctor says I am well. Dodd's Kidney Pills and nothing else cured me. Do you wonder I am always ready to say a good word for Dodd's Kidney Pills?"

What will cure Bright's Disease will easily cure any other form of Kidney Disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills will always cure Bright's Disease. They are the only remedy that will cure Bright's Disease. Be sure you get Dodd's.

HOW DISEASES MAY SPRING UP AND DISAPPEAR.

It is common belief that the germs of disease flourish only in the human organism, and that, if we could once eradicate an infectious malady, it would stay eradicated. It now seems very probable that this is untrue. According to a view held wholly or partially by many pathologists, and strongly upheld by a recent French writer, Professor Bodin, disease germs are only accidentally virulent, their normal existence being what is called "saprophytic;" that is, independent of any other organism. When one of these harmless varieties changes its nature so as to become parasitic, we have a new disease. Observation has shown that many kinds of bacteria are very unstable, and are constantly forming new varieties. It is possible, therefore, that potential germs of typhoid, lockjaw, or consumption may be growing harmlessly about us, to assume, suddenly, a virulent parasitic life at some future time. According to this view, bacteria are primarily benevolent agents for promoting chemical change, and the variation that turns some of them into injurious parasites is accidental and abnormal.

MOTHER'S ADVICE.

"I would advise mothers to stop dosing their little ones with nauseous castor oil and soothing syrups and use only "Baby's Own Tablets." This is the advice of Mrs. Joseph E. Harley, of Worthington, Ont., who has proved the Tablets the best medicine in the world for the troubles that afflict young children. Mrs. Harley adds:—"My little one has had no other medicine but the Tablets since she was two months old, and they have kept her the picture of good health." These Tablets are good for children of every age, and speedily cure all stomach and bowel troubles, break up colds, prevent croup, expel worms and allay the irritation of teething. And you have a solemn guarantee that there is not a particle of opiate or harmful drug in this medicine. 13 KILLED AT FUNERAL.

A New York dispatch says:—Thirteen persons were killed and upwards of 50 others injured, some probably fatally by the collapse of the flooring of of the Fleet street African M.E. The building was an ancient ramshackle frame structure, erected 60 years ago, in the heart of the colored section of Brooklyn, in Fleet street, Mickle avenue.

The United States Government is quite justified in asking the Russian Government to send back to San Francisco three Russian officers who broke their parole and went home. They were part of the crew of a war vessel which is to lie at San Francisco till after the close of the war. The breach of parole is not merely an insult to the United States Government, but an injury to all prisoners of war, whose lot is frequently ameliorated by being allowed freedom on giving their word of honor not to escape.

WILLIAM J. BARCLAY

WILLIAM J. BARCLAY

Editor and Proprietor of the Souris Plaindealer.

With some men newspaper work is a passion. They can no more help being newswriters than they can help breathing. They were born that way—predestined, foreordained and called to the business just as truly as other men are to the ministry. From the time they are able to form ideas as to their future they have elected their life occupation. And, of course, as is the case in all businesses, there are many who write editorials and run newspapers just as other men weigh out tea and sugar, or lay bricks, or preach sermons, or drive nails. But there is a third class whose devotion to their selected life work is every whit as strong as those with an inborn passion therefor, but which is not inherent, but the product of gradual growth. The love of their work burns with a steady intensity that is perhaps more effective than the more spasmodic efforts of those of more ardent temperament. If less brilliant, they are certainly more persistent, and it is a new saying that stick-to-it-iveness is nowadays the element of success.

A type of this slowly developed but able country editor is furnished in the person of Mr. William J. Barclay, proprietor of the Plaindealer, of Souris, Manitoba. Like many another young man in Western Canada, he nows owns the paper and plant on which he first "devilled." His family were much averse to his going into the newspaper business, and young Barclay had his path towards journalism no track of roses, but full of obstacles and opposition. But William could not content himself on a farm, and had made up his mind as to his future occupation. He carried his point, too, and in due time justified the wisdom of his choice.

Mr. Barclay was at that time twenty-two years of age. He was Scotch by both birth and parentage, his father, James Barclay, being manager of a large cabinet and chair works at the little manufacturing town of Beith, in Ayrshire. The future editor was the third youngest of a family of a dozen, and in hopes of bettering their position the elder Barclay determined to emigrate. This was in 1880, at which time the editor-to-be was a towheaded youngster of ten, whose chief object in life was to attend school as little as possible.

The family arrived in Winnipeg in June, 1880. The future western metropolis of the Dominion was then a very different place to what it is now. Instead of 100,000 people, it had then some 3,000 or 4,000. It was an overgrown village—wild, and woolly, and western, with the thrill of the forthcoming speculative boom already in the air, with streets hub-deep with the most tenacious and adhesive mud in the world, and a free, devil-may-care familiarity and license the outstanding characteristic of its people. To the elder Barclay, with ideas of community life formed after the strict model of a God-fearing, church-going, Sabbath-respecting little Ayrshire town, all this was anthema maranatha. Two weeks of Winnipeg was enough—indeed, too much—for him. Like every Old Country immigrant he had not pictured, or prepared himself for, conditions so utterly different, and instead, as most do, of modifying his attitude to the conditions—which, in nearly every instance, they ultimately greatly prefer to those they have left—he decided to return to the Land o' Cakes. So, with his numerous family, back they went to Scotland—all, that is, except one of the elder sons, who had made up his mind to stay.

Two years afterwards a brother and sister came out to this, the then sole representative of the Barclay family in Manitoba, and took up farms in the Souris district. And, in 1883, Mr. Barclay, Sr., brought out the rest of the family, the future editor among them, and all settled in the vicinity of Souris.

As before stated, Mr. Barclay manifested no fondness for farm life, and resolutely set himself to work to improve his education, while following the plow, with the object of leaving agricultural pursuits for a more congenial occupation at the earliest opportunity. And, gradually, there grew up within him the determination to be a newspaper man. A goal towards which to direct his efforts being thus provided, the means of advancing thereto Mr. Barclay secured for himself. He got a job as "devil" on the Plaindealer, of which George Perry, at one time on the Winnipeg Commercial and Grand Forks Plaindealer, was the founder and editor. His advancement was as rapid as his occupation was congenial. In two years he was in charge of the composing room, and, in the same year (1894) he formed a partnership with Mr. T. Dickie—afterwards member of the Manitoba Legislature—the latter taking charge of the editorial department, while Mr. Dickie looked after the mechanical end. In 1896 Mr. Dickie sold out his share of the business to his stepson, Mr. R. H. Cook, another printer-graduate of the Plaindealer office. Coincident with this change in the management was a readjustment of the office work, for Mr. Barclay took the editorial chair. In 1901 Mr. Barclay bought out Mr. Cook, and has since been editor, publisher and manager.

Under Mr. Barclay the Plaindealer's growth has been remarkable in every respect. The paper certainly deserves the liberal support accorded it throughout the district. It is, in the fullest sense of the term, a local newspaper. It covers its territory, and serves up its news items with both taste and skill. Its editorial utterances are never extreme, and reflect the views of the fair-minded, moderate-thinking men. To municipal topics it pays much attention, and its opinions there anent deservedly carry much weight in the locality. The appreciation of the Souris merchants for their local paper is testified by the extensive advertising patronage it boasts.

Mechanically, the Plaindealer is among the very best of Western Canadian newspapers. This excellency is carried into the job department, which is one of the best equipped among the smaller towns of the West, and of which the quality of the output will bear comparison with that of towns of many times its population.

Personally, there are few characteristics of Mr. Barclay that differentiate him from the energetic and successful western business men. He is married, and has two sons, his wife having been Miss Saunderson, a daughter of one of the most prominent farmers in the Souris district. The Plaindealer editor is an enthusiastic Freemason, having been, for the past two years, worshipful master of the local lodge. He is, it should be moreover noted, one of the best checker players in Western Canada, holding the championship of Southwestern Manitoba for two years.

The Secret of Happiness.

The man who can drill his thoughts, so as to shut out everything that is depressing and discouraging and see only the bright side even of his misfortunes and failures, has mastered the secret of hapiness and success. FANNY CROSBY.

There still lives in Bridgeport, Connecticut, at a ripe age, a lady who has brought joy into hundreds of homes throughout the English-speaking world. All classes of people sing Miss Crosby's secular and sacred songs. The children in the public schools use "There's Music in the Air"; their parents know and love "Hazel Dell," "Rosalie, the Prairie Flower," and others, which were immensely popular twenty-five years ago. But Fanny Crosby is best known by her hymns, such as "Rescue the Perishing," "I am Thine, O Lord," "Nearer the Cross," "Pass Me Not, O Gentle Savior," "Blessed Assurance", and "Some Day the Silver Cord will Break." The first of her hymns was written in 1864, and since that date she has composed over eight thousand, under various noms-de-plume.

The gifted singer has been blind since she was six years old, but through marvellous difficulties has overcome great obstacles. For twenty-three years she was a pupil and teacher in the New York Institution for the Blind. There she met and knew Henry Clay, General Scott, James K. Polk, Governor Seward, and ex-President Cleveland, who has been her firm friend for fifty years. Miss Crosby has known many of the greatest musical and literary men and women, including all the famous composers of sacred music. Recently she has written up the entire story of her life into an autobiography, which promised to be widely read when it is published.

Miss Crosby has a wonderful memory. She composes an entire hymn before having any of it written down on paper. Once she wrote forty songs before having any of them recorded; and at the end she could recall every one of them.

On March 26 the churches of America propose to build Miss Crosby a monument of gratitude, which will be more enduring than any marble shaft. They propose to honor her life-work while she still lives; and is able to appreciate the kind thought of those who sing and love her songs. Hundreds of churches are preparing special programs of song to use for that purpose, and a unique feature of the plan is a large gift of honor as a testimonial to Miss Crosby's public service. They thus hope to recognize in a fitting manner her eighty-fifth birthday.
