FEET OF SOLID ORE

Another Surprise in St. Eugene.

TRULY WONDERFUL MINE

Company Declares Dividend in Face of all Sorts of Adversities.

The encountering of large, and in some cases unexpected, bodies of ore is becoming of frequent occurrence in the St. Eugene mine. Better still most of these big finds are made in the lower levels, showing that with depth the ore is becoming wider and richer. The mine never looked more promising, and there is now about double the quantity of ore blocked out that there was three years ago before the shut-down. Only within the last few days a big strike has been made. This is in the 125 foot level of the shaft and in a distance of about 1250 feet. Through the courtesy of Patrick Bonner, the shiftboss, the editor of the Leader was allowed to go in and see it for himself last evening. It was a sight well worth seeing. In the face of the drift is about 15 feet of clean galena of the highest grade yet found in the mine. The hanging wall had not then been reached, so it was not known how much wider this ore body was. It is clean shipping ore and will be sent to the smelter just as it is. In a vertical line this ore body has a depth of about 1200 feet from the surface, and is back about 250 feet from where the big strike was recently made in the raise from No. 1 tunnel.

Truly the St. Eugene is a wonderful property. In the face of the shortage of water and being handicapped in a dozen different ways incidental to the starting up of a property that has long been closed down, the cash surplus to the 30th of September last was $131,000, after paying an indebtedness of $26,000. With a mammoth ore reserves, the new machinery, lead at $18 and [illegible] on [illegible] St. Eugene [illegible] will be [illegible] in it for years to come.

St. Eugene Meeting.

The annual general meeting of the St. Eugene Concolidated Mining company, limited was held last Tuesday at the company's headquarters in Toronto.

The directors presented an excellent report in marked contrast to those of recent years. The cash surplus to the 30th of September last was $131,000, after paying an indebtedness of $26,000.

A quarterly dividend of two per cent was declared on December 15th.

The old board of directors was unanimously re-elected. The report refers in flattering terms to the prospects at the mine for the immediate future. The want of water caused by unusually dry summer and fall was the one drawback reported. All arrangements have now been perfected to obviate the delay caused by the water shortage.

Exclusive of the dividend referred to the St. Eugene company has paid in dividends to date $210,000.

Dam Is Removed.

The dam at the foot of Moyie lake which was put in two years ago by the East Kootenay Lumber company was removed this week by the same company. The dam has been a source of trouble ever since it was built. By raising the water in the lake it used to flood A. T. Clark's hay ranch, and it also interfered with the running of the St. Eugene mill. Action was taken in the courts by both the mining company and Mr Clark asking for the removal of the dam, and to avoid further trouble, the company has acceded to their request. The dam cost nearly $1000. Another dam will be built further down the river, which will enable the company to get a head of water when they choose without raising the water in the lake.

New Barber Shop.

Having completed my new building opposite the Kootenay hotel I wish to state that I am now prepared to do anything pertaining to the barber business in a first class and up to date manner. Particular attention paid to shampooing ladies' hair. My motto is clean towels and sharp razors. Asking for a share of your patronage I am truly yours. E. J. BAKER.

Sunday hours 8 till 12.

Eagles Dance.

The Moyie Aerie of Eagles have everything in readiness for their grand opening ball next Thursday evening. Invitations have been out for several days, and from all indications there will be a good attendance. The grand march will start promptly at 9:30 o'clock.

Curtain for Hall.

Prof. Chase is procuring advertising this week for a drop curtain for the stage of the Eagles' hall. He is meeting with good success, and it will probably not be long until the people attending a show will have something to occupy their attention while waiting for the performance to begin.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that sixty days after date I intend to apply to the Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works for permission to purchase forty acres of land, more or less, in East Kootenay District, described as follows:—Commencing at a post planted at the South East corner of lot 2801, Group 1, which is marked "A. T. Clark's N. E. Corner" and running thence West twenty chains, thence South twenty chains, thence East twenty chains, thence North along shore of Moyie Lake to place of beginning.

Good Property.

Joe Shea and Chas. Diamond have located two promising looking mineral claims about two and a half miles from the head of Moyie lake. The claims are on ground that had been located and allowed to run out. There is considerable work done on one of them. The showing on one of the claims is silver-lead, and the other is a vein carrying a good quantity of asbestos. It has been known for several years that this strip of country was well mineralzied, but owing to the inactivity in mining little attention has been paid to it for some time.

The New Church.

Fulljames & McPeak of Cranbrook are lathing and plastering the new Catholic church building. Contractor Johnson is nearly through with the carpenter work, and the outside of the building has been given the first coat of paint. HER FATHER'S WAY

By ALLAN P. AMES

Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure.

A young man was in love with Southley's daughter Lois. The fact is noteworthy only because this particular young man happened to be the first whose ambitions had received serious attention. Like a wise parent, Southley made no overt attempt to influence her decision. Nevertheless his mind was hard at work, because among all the youngsters who aspired to be his son-in-law Robert Lorland was his choice. Had Lois shared his opinion there would have been no occasion for the discussion now progressing in a cool corner of the veranda.

"But, father," she was objecting, "his chin is so square and firm and his mouth so hard. His face is almost repellent at times."

"His features are rugged," said Southley, "but I see gentleness in them as well as strength. Robert's worth a dozen of those round checked, chinless boys that have been hanging around here this summer."

"But, dear daddy, how can I love a man I'm afraid of? Why, if he ever commanded me to marry him I'd just have to. Oh, I don't know what I do think. Sometimes"—

"Then he hasn't asked you yet?" said her father.

"Yes; he asked, though he looked as if he preferred to pick me up and run off without a word. How I ever denied him I don't know, but I begged him to wait, and he's coming at 5 this afternoon for his final answer."

Southley laid aside his cigar and turned to regard the perplexed face more intently. "Daughter," he said, "you don't know men like your old daddy. Those blue eyes of yours have much to learn. Take a good, long look before you send away a fellow like Robert Lorland."

"Really, I wish I could see him as you do; but I'm afraid I can't. I have the feeling that if he were ever crossed he'd be positively brutal."

"You never knew him to do a harsh or unkind thing, did you?"

"No; nor anything markedly kind or gentle, either."

"Well, it's hard luck," he sighed. "Superficially, his looks are against him."

For a long while after Lois had left him to make those changes in her appearance which she thought were essential for the coming ordeal he remained thoughtfully smoking, with his eyes fixed upon the long white stretch of road down which young Lorland would shortly come marching to his fate. Mottled shadows of the sheltering vine crept across the veranda floor until they reached the spot the old cat had chosen for her family's afternoon siesta. Apparently considering shade unhealthful, she opened her eyes, stretched and yawned, shook her clustering offspring from their snug comfort and sauntered toward the master of the house. Arriving by his chair, she gazed a moment into his preoccupied face, then sprang upon his knee and rubbed her ears against his waistcoat.

"Why, Poesie," said the old gentleman, rousing from his reverie, "deserted the nursery? For a lady of so many family cares your familiarity is shocking. There! You see? That's generally what comes of it."

One of the kittens had started to roll down the front steps. Southley sprang to the rescue in time to prevent a completion of the descent. Poesie watched him with approval but in the end wished she had attended to the matter herself; for, after standing a moment with her venturesome child held thoughtfully before him, the man suddenly tucked it under his arm and started off around the house.

"Edward," he shouted to the gardener, "Edward, I want to borrow your high rubber boots. And see if you can find me a small wooden box."

A few minutes before 5 Lois returned to the veranda, a vision in white, but with her white face clouded with indecision. "I almost wish I hadn't told you, father," said she. "Before that I had my mind made up to send him away. Now I don't know what I shall do. And he's so masterful that if I show the slightest hesitation he's sure to make me do as he wants. Won't you stay and help me?"

Her father did not answer. He was standing at the end of the porch watching some one down the road. Lois went to his side and with a hand on his shoulder followed his gaze.

"Wonder what that chap's up to?" he remarked.

"He's too far away to make out who he is," she replied indifferently.

The unknown had halted and taken a stand beside the road with his back toward them. Something in the field had attracted his attention.

"Let's see what he is looking at," said Southley, as he handed Lois a pair of field glasses and took another pair for himself.

Without stopping to wonder how they happened to be so ready at hand, the girl received the binoculars and leveled them toward the figure on the road. Judging from his dress the man was young and prosperous, for his white flannels were of jaunty cut, and a gay ribbon encircled his stiff straw hat. Subsequent developments made the resplendent freshness of his costume all the more noticeable.

On the other side of the ditch bounding the highway was a muddy little pond, in the center of which they now remarked a box floating a small, frightened kitten. The little thing blundered at the edge of its frail support as though debating whether to remain and starve or trust itself to the dark water. Lois even fancied she could hear its appealing cries, and with an exclamation of pity she made toward the steps.

"Wait," said her father, putting out a detaining hand. "He's going to look after it. Besides, it can't fall off. It's tied."

"I don't see how you can tell," said Lois. "Your glasses must be better than mine."

In spite of the muddy water and its unknown depth, the young man seemed to be resolved upon rescue. He started to roll up his immaculate trousers, then, apparently realizing the futility of such precaution, threw off his coat and waded in. It was evident that if necessary he meant to swim. But he was spared that sacrifice. When he reached the marooned kitten the water was barely above his knees. Disregarding the ungrateful little beast's outrageous spittings and clawings, he picked it up, box and all, and started back to shore.

"Oh," cried Lois, with a long breath, "isn't he a dear! I don't believe there's another man in the place who would go to all that trouble for a poor little kitten. I wonder who he is. Won't you go out and thank him, father? Perhaps the kitten is one of Poosie's."

"I am sure he would appreciate thanks from you more," replied Southley, "and when he comes this way you'd better do it yourself. He deserves all the nice things you can say to him."

"Why, what do you mean?" inquired Lois, glancing up quickly at the significant note in his voice.

"Where are your eyes, daughter? There, he's facing us, with his hat off. Now you must recognize him."

The youth with the kitten on his arm had reached dry soil, where he stood ruefully inspecting his mud soaked clothing. After a moment's meditation, however, he put on his coat and continued his progress toward them, still bearing the kitten.

Lois took one long look, then lowered her glasses to hide a burning face against her father's coat.

"Is he still coming?" she at length whispered.

"Certainly," said Southley. "You didn't think he'd miss his appointment just because his clothes were mussed, did you?"

Lois forsook his encircling arm and began to settle her hair with deft pats. "I think," said she—"I think— No, I don't think any more. I know. Father, I shan't need your help. I'd rather thank him myself."

"All right, child," replied the old gentleman, turning to enter the house. "I never believed it wise for parents to meddle in such affairs as these."

Life, Death, and Love.

A woman lay with closed eyes and quiet breath waiting to welcome an angel whose presence seemed to overshadow the white curtained room. A man knelt beside the bed, the woman's hand pressed close in his against his cheek, while his lips moved as if in prayer.

In the room were Life, Death and Love.

"What have you given her?" questioned Death of Life.

"I brought her my best gifts," answered Life. "Youth, health, beauty, joy and love."

"Has Love brought her good gifts?" again asked Death.

Said Love, with wistful eyes: "I brought her brave, bright hours; sunshine and laughter, happiness and glory in living and then a heavy cross. The sunshine she shed all about her, even with the fading of Life's glory; the cross hidden deep in her soul cast out self and made a new radiance and beauty there."

"Let her come to me," said Death. "Life had much to give, but peace and rest are not for Life to bestow. Love would give all, but must reckon with the human heart. I will crown and glorify and bless her."

Life fled from the quiet room with a sish and one whispered tender word, but Love lingered, brave even in the full presence of Death.

"What of him?" said Love, pointing to the kneeling figure.

"He made the cross?" Death asked.

"Yes," said Love, weeping.

"We must teach him," said Death, "what he could not learn from life."—L. M. S. in Outlook.

An Erratic Memory.

Mrs. Ransom's greatest trial was her poor memory. She had tried all sorts of "systems," both original and recommended, but nothing succeeded for more than a little while.

"I'm almost wild," she said plaintively to a niece who found her with a wet compress bound about her head, "for my old school friend, Mrs.— There, I hoped perhaps it would come to me, but it hasn't. Well, she is here in New York, and I met her on the street and asked her to luncheon, and I wanted you and Emma to meet her. But what can I do? How can I introduce her when I can't think of her name?"

The niece looked properly sympathetic and murmured something about every one's having times of forgetfulness.

"But there's no reason for this," moaned the sufferer, "for we have exchanged gifts at Christmas for years! I've tried all my systems, but it's no use; her name has gone, so I doubt if I should know it if I heard it. Of course I shall just have to say, 'This is my old school friend, Mary Lane.' It seems more natural, anyway, to call her that, because that was her name before she married George Ray. I suppose I shall have to pass it off as best I can!"

WAGE REDUCTIONS

The wage reductions and the reductions in earnings of working men through closed industries and decreased output during the past 12 months have been pretty general only in manufacturing but in railroading was there a cutting down of expenses, and of the larger transportation companies materially reduced their mechanical and operating staffs. By the closing down of such companies as the Pullman Company thousands are thrown out of employment. The wave of great prosperity has evidently passed away, and while Canada has not yet been materially affected, the existing conditions in the United States gives warning to us that retrenchment may of necessity be entered here. Amongst the lists of United States enterprises which have found it compulsory to reduce wages of employees are the following:

CUT IN TWO AT PORT ARTHUR.

The mangled remains of John Drummond were taken from West Fort William to Port Arthur Saturday morning. He was a switchman on the C. N. R., and was killed by missing his footing and falling under the wheels of the locomotive, which passed over him, completely severing the body and breaking legs and arms. He was a native of St. John, N. B.

GLENCOE MILLINER GETS DAMAGES.

At the assize court, London, Ont., one day last week a verdict of $600 was awarded to Miss Ida McCracken, milliner of Glencoe, in the suit for damages against Mrs. Fanny Tyson, milliner of Ingersoll, and Editor Dellamy, of the Ingersoll Sun, is to contribute $300. The libel consisted of a publication of a newspaper article which accused plaintiff of theft.

FLOUR MILL COMMENCED.

The first pile was driven a few days ago for the new Ogilvie flour mill to be erected at Fort William. Mr. F. W. Thompson, president of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Mr. W. Black, western manager and head millwright, Mr. Chabaut, together with a number of local citizens were spectators of the event. Manager Black states that the mill will be of 3,000 barrels per day capacity, and one of the finest mills on the continent when completed. It may be stated that the company's contract with the town of Fort William only called for a 1,500 barrel mill, but the company are going to double it, which is very gratifying to the citizens.

ONTARIO FRUIT IS POORLY PACKED.

The fruit branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa has received a letter from a retail merchant in Winnipeg complaining of the way in which fruit from Ontario is packed. He states that Manitoba is the natural market for Ontario peaches, pears and plums, but it is now largely supplied by fruit from California, Oregon and Washington. This is because of the indifference of fruit growers. The consumer in Manitoba, states the writer, does not place any dependence on the marking of barrels, having been humbugged so long. The writer advises that fruit bulletins containing admonitions be showered upon the growers and that the strictest possible inspection should be maintained.

One of Sheridan's Dodges.

It is related of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, the dramatist and statesman, that, always in debt, he had among his creditors the brothers Chalie, who were the partners in a wine firm in 1775. One day when he was giving a dinner party to some distinguished people Sheridan sent for one of the brothers, told him he was now able to settle his account and invited him to the dinner party, asking him to come before the hour for some private conversation. Chalie arrived early, and he was no sooner in the house than Sheridan sent off a servant with a note to the clerk desiring him, as Mr. Chalie was favoring him with his company, to send as soon as possible three dozen of burgundy, two dozen of claret and two dozen of port, with a dozen of old hock. The unsuspecting clerk sent the wine, with which the guests were so pleased that they asked where it came from. Sheridan, turning toward Chalie, said, "I am indebted to my friend here for all the wine you have tasted and am always proud to recommend him." It was not until the following morning that Chalie realized the double meaning in Sheridan's words. The debt was canceled.

The Lonely Library.

At the English universities the libraries are so little used that they have become famous as places of unbroken solitude. One yarn told to illustrate this is to the effect that an elderly fellow, of Cains college, Cambridge, got tired of life and determined to put himself quietly and unostentatiously out of the way, so that the world in general and Caius college in particular should know him no more. Being a man with a great love for his university and a greater love still for his college, he made up his mind that no scandal should be caused by his sudden departure, so he debated in his mind the ways and means. His decision was an inspiration. He bought a decent length of rope and hanged himself in the college library. But his hopes were doomed to disappointment. He was discovered a year and a half later.

When a man loves his wife and is ashamed of it, it is not so serious, but when he thinks he has a right to love her, that is serious.

A THOUGHTFUL PRIEST

Points Out to Mothers the Way to Keep Their Children Well and Happy.

Rev. J. L. Francoeur, Cassselman, Ont., is a kind-hearted priest who has done much to alleviate suffering among the little ones in the homes of his parishioners. Writing under a recent date he says: "I must say that Dr. Williams' Baby's Own Tablets are deserving of the high praise they have had as a cure for the ailments of children. For the past eight months I have been introducing them in many families and always, the mothers tell me with perfect results. Their action is always effective, without any sickly reaction, and they are especially valuable in allaying pains in the head, fever in teething, nervousness, sleeplessness, spasms, cramps in the stomach and bowels, colic and other troubles. Their regulating action gives almost instant relief and gives speedy cure. This is the comforting experience that has come to my knowledge out of peig ma I can sincerely go to give you my sincere testimony, and I will recommend the Tablets to all mothers and nurses of sick children as I have done heretofore."

These Tablets are sold by all medicine dealers, or mothers can obtain them by mail at 25 cents a box by writing to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

From the Post, Thorold, Ont.

"Will you," thundered the stump orator, "strain at a gnat and swallow a camel?"

The thoughtful citizen of the front seat knit his brows anxiously. "Are they both sterilized?" he asked.

Canada captured the leading agricultural prizes at the World's Fair. The territorial crop bulletin estimates that between the two oceans we raised one-fifth of the world's wheat, four-fifths of its corn, one-fourth of its oats, and four-fifths of its cotton. This harvest is the foundation of our prosperity.

The President a Slave to Catarrh. D. T. Sample, president of Sample's Instalment Company, Washington, Pa., writes: "For years I was afflicted with Chronic Catarrh. Remedies and treatment by specialists only gave me temporary relief until I was induced to try Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder. It gave almost instant relief. 50 cents.—19

Mr. Haldane, writing a preface to a book on modern tariff history, says that if we would remain ahead of our rivals we must continue to be ahead of them in the quality of what we make. No tariff can keep out that quality, which is the key to quantity.

Name the most unsociable thing in the world.—Milestones; for you never see two of them together.

JAPAN BUYING OREGON FLOUR.

A despatch from Pendleton, Oregon, says: A local flour mill has received an order from Hong Kong for 80,000 sacks (2,000 tons) of flour, which is said to be for the Japanese government. Twenty thousand sacks of this will be sent this month by way of Portland and the balance from Tacoma and Seattle. The same mill has just completed a shipment of 60,000 sacks for Oriental ports.

Long Cooking.

Of fresh foods the elephant's foot needs cooking the longest time, as it does not acquire its proper tenderness and succulence till it has been baked for about thirty-six hours. Next comes tripe, which requires from ten to fifteen hours of boiling before it becomes thoroughly digestible. Next come hams of good size, which require from six to seven hours. Of roast meats, a haunch of venison takes longer than any other joint—about three and a half hours. Of puddings, the Christmas pudding comes easily first, as it is boiled over and over again. Sometimes it is kept for months or years and undergoes several boilings. The average time is from six to eight hours. The vegetable which takes the longest time to cook is the onion.—London Mail.

Huxley on Darwin's Degree.

Huxley did not love degrees, but he had to have one. Anticipating the donning of the red gown he informed his friends that after the ceremony he would have to be treated as a person of respectability. "I have done my best to avoid that misfortune," said he, "but it's of no use." It was Oxford that paid him the compliment, as it had done to Darwin two years earlier. When Darwin was given the degree Huxley let him have no false idea as to the honor bestowed. "Canon Pusey," he declared, "has been making inquiry as to who are the blackest heretics on the list proposed. He was glad to assent in your case in order to keep out seven devils worse."

Near Side and Off Side.

When horses were first hitched to vehicles the driver never thought of riding himself, but walked by the side of the road as he held the lines. So as to have his right hand always ready he walked on the left side, and consequently the horse on the left side came to be known as the "near" horse, and the one on the right side was called the "off" horse. In that manner the terms "near horse" and "off horse" became general, and still pertain to horses hitched as a team.

Reluctant to Give Up.

"Lend me $10, old man. I'm a little short."

"That won't help you any. You'll be just as short after getting the money."

"Nonsense, old chap! How do you make that out?"

"Why, after giving you the $10 I don't expect to see you any longer."

He Probably Took the Hint.

Young Tutter—Miss Clara, suppose that tomorrow evening I should call again and, having nerved myself up to it, suddenly, while we were conversing, I should without a word throw my arms around your neck and deliberately kiss you, what would you do? Miss Pinkley—Oh, Mr. Tutter, don't ask me to look so far ahead.

A Maddening Position.

The hardest thing a girl does is to refrain from asking a man a question that she knows will make him mad when she is just boiling with curiosity to know the answer.

Merely Wished to Know.

"Miss Passay," he said, "there is something I have for some time wished to ask you."

"Oh," she gasped, "I'm so glad—that is, I—I mean, is it anything personal?"

What May Be.

Appearance a Protection.

"Appearances are deceitful" is an old saying, which was illustrated by an old lady in one of our banks a few days ago.

She drew out a sum very near the $1,000 mark. The banker kindly asked her if she did not wish an escort to her destination in order to insure protection for the large amount. Looking calmly at the banker, she replied, "Why, nobody would think I had more than $1.25!"

TRIED ALL ELSE TO NO BENEFIT

Then Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured His Diabetes.

Startling Case of Thos. Harrison, of St. Mary's Ferry—He Tells the Story Himself.

St. Mary's Ferry, York County, N. B., Oct. 17.—(Special).—That Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure Diabetes, one of the most deadly forms of Kidney Disease, has been satisfactorily proved by Mr. Thos. Harrison, of this place. Speaking of his cure Mr. Harrison says:

"I began to suffer with severe pains above the region of the kidneys. When I lay down it was torture to get up again. My appetite failed and I lost flesh rapidly.

"I doctored with several physicians but it was all no use. Shortly after this I began to urinate blood and then I knew I was in the grip of that dread monster, Diabetes.

"At this time a friend prevailed on me to try a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills and they did me so much good I continued the treatment till I had used three boxes. They cured me completely."

Joy Succeeds De

In the Home of Mr. Hilton, Thorold, O

His Daughter, Florence, Was Dead from Dropsy. Her Doctor Given Her Up. Dr. Williams' Pills were then Used and She is Well and Strong.

Everybody believes in a sort of way of the strange and wisely advertised medicines, the recorded cases of remarkable cures at a distance daily become up in the home, the patient is known to everyone, when the cure is not only but marvellous, the medicine becomes a household thing. For many years advertised Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, hardly a family in the Province of Ontario, but have been told of the drug stores and many of the cures have been effected. The effect of the medicine attracted the attention of a reporter and he investigated the case of Mrs. Florence Hilton, the eighteen year old daughter of Joseph Hilton, living in the village of Thorold, who was taken ill with what the doctors pronounced dropsy. She was compelled to leave her duty after another, and became unable to walk. Her suffering was intense and all the skill did all that was in their power, however, she grew worse, and in her chair day and night for long months. At last the parents despaired of her life, the doctor gave her up and friends and relatives visits were frequent. Her limbs were painfully swollen, and at times would burst below the knee, helpless and weak, she lay for months, and at times would become only with the greatest difficulty. At night the neighbours could hear she could not live till morning. But to-day she is alive and well, and about among her friends a remarkable cure, she attributes to what she has taken. The reporter called on the family at their home, but Mrs. Hilton was visiting. The father had faith in the cure, which they attributed to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The first box was bought by her grandmother, who was a great believer in the medicine. Then Mrs. Hilton herself said that she had the previous year been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills of a slight attack of dropsy. She remembered the many cures made in the Post. She bought a box and Florence took the pills. After a dose. In two weeks the swelling slight, decrease in the quantity of pills, and more pills were taken. For five months—five long months, the weary girl lay day and night in her chair, but she began to feel the pain leave and to see her limbs resume their natural size. Fourteen boxes of pills were taken and at last the severance was removed. She rose from her chair, her health gradually came back, she took household duties, were taken again; and when the Post reporter called he was met by the fresh faces, and thankful hearts and grateful readiness to show the world the facts that had made a bright young life, and had joy instead of grief to a home.

In thousands of other homes scattered over the length and breadth of Canada, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have brought health and happiness and in every case in the land where sickness and sufferers now health and strength, or had through a fair trial of this medicine. Remember that they can't cure—they make no worse, and when you buy medicine see that the full name, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, is printed on the wrapper around each box—then you are sure you have genuine pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BEECHER AND "THE ROOSTER"—From "Success."—That Henry Ward Beecher was placed much embarrassment by his quickness at repartee is illustrated by the following story.

One evening as he was in the midst of an impassioned speech, some one attempted to interrupt him by suddenly crowing like a rooster. It was done to perfection; a number of people laughed in spite of themselves, and the speakers friends felt that in a moment the whole effect of the meeting, and of Mr. Beecher's thrilling appeals, might be lost. The orator, however, was equal to the occasion. He stopped, listened till the crowing ceased, and then, with a look of surprise pulled out his watch. "Morning already!" he said; "my watch is only at ten. But there can be no mistake about it. The instincts of the lower animals are infallible."

There was a roar of laughter. The "lower animal" in the gallery collapsed, and Mr. Beecher was able to resume as if nothing had occurred.

Commissioner Booth is not the only Salvation Army leader who has received instructions to prepare herself for another field of labor. There is to be a general change amongst the territorial commanders. Of the others who are bidding farewell are Commander Booth-Tucker of the United States, Commissioner Howard, foreign secretary of London, Commissioner Coombes of Great Britain, Commissioner Booth-Helberg, of Germany, and Commissioner Kilby of South Africa. One of these will replace Miss Booth in Canada.

THEY ARE A POWERFUL NERVINE.—Dyspepsia causes derangement of the nervous system, and nervous debility once engendered is difficult to deal with. By giving strength to the digestive organs they restore equilibrium to the nervous centres.

Commissioner Booth-Tucker, who is to be transferred from the United States to India, is a lawyer by profession, and was formerly a member of the Indian civil service. He is a nephew of the late Bramwell Booth, and a cousin of the present General Booth. He is a man of great ability, and his transfer to India is a matter of importance to the Salvation Army in that country. Mrs. Booth-Tucker will accompany her husband to India, and will be a great loss to the work in the United States.

Could'nt Rise From a Chair

On Account of Dreadful Pains in the Kidneys and Back—A Complete Cure by

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

In its course through the body the blood not only supplies nourishment to the various organs, but also gathers up the poisonous waste matter.

When the liver and kidneys fail to filter these poisons from the blood there are pains and aches and diseases of the most painful and fatal kind.

Because they restore the strength and activity to the kidneys and liver Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills overcome such troubles and purify the blood in a wonderfully short time.

Mr. L. W. Dennis, Welland, Ont., writes: "It gives me pleasure to testify in behalf of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. For many years I was seriously afflicted with kidney and liver troubles. At times my back would ache so bad I could not rise from a chair, and then again I would be confined to my bed. I was treated by the medical profession, but they all failed to understand my case.

"About the time I was most discouraged I heard of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and they were so strongly recommended that I decided to try them. Before I had used all of five boxes my old trouble had entirely left me, and I was again as healthy as in boyhood. I freely give this testimony for the benefit of those who suffer as I have."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.
