NOTES AND COMMENTS.

It is stated that the Times knows where the knives with which the Phœnix park murders were committed were bought, and will be able to prove that the purchaser was a member of the Irish Parliamentary party.

Spiritualism has received a severe blow in the confession of the Fox sisters, the inventors of the famous "Rochester knockings," from which the whole scheme of modern spiritualism was evolved. Mrs. Kane, the most celebrated of the sisters, stated at a public meeting on Sunday in the New York Academy of Music that she had been guilty of imposing on the public, and that the "spirit rappings" of herself and sister had been pure humbug, and had been produced by the joints of the toes on a sounding board. She also exposed slate writing, portrait painting, and other "spiritual manifestations," giving practical illustrations of each. Strange to say a number of spiritualists in the audience expressed their disapproval of the exposure by groans and hisses. The presumption must be that they were professionalists who have everything to lose by the pricking of the spiritualist bubble.

The American Inventor says: There is only one machine mill in Morocco. It belongs to an enterprising citizen of the United States named Cobb. Its erection was utterly illegal. The prejudice against machinery among the Moors is as strong as it was among the English hand loom weavers. Mr. Cobb's application for authorization of his mill was rejected. The prime minister would not hear of it, the Sultan absolutely forbade the new fangled method of grinding corn. Mr. Cobb, however, went "right ahead." He built his mill; he put in his machinery. Only one finishing touch was necessary. The grinding stones were duly delivered at the wharf. But this gave the authorities their opportunity, and they calmly impounded them. It was useless going to the Moorish government, so Mr. Cobb applied to the United States representative. He got a formal reply informing him that since the prime minister and the Sultan had both forbidden the execution of the project, it would be idle for him to expect any assistance from the formal representative of the United States. That letter was all that Captain Cobb needed. He took it to the local authorities, who had his grinding stones in charge, and asked them if they could read English. "No!" "Then read this," cried Captain Cobb. There were the arms of the United States; there was an undoubted official signature; and Captain Cobb said he was going straight ahead with his mill. Nobody knew what complication might ensue if this determined American were disappointed. The stones were given up, the mill was finished, and the next time the Sultan came that way he sent his corn to be ground by machinery.

Mr. Samuel Wilmot, the superintendent of the Canadian fish hatcheries at Newcastle, Ontario, tells the following story of an eagle: A pair of eagles built their nest near our house well up in a large pine tree year in and year out for many seasons. One autumn the cold weather set in earlier than usual and the smooth parts of the stream that ran by our house were frozen, but the eagles still remained in the big pine, save when they flew abroad for food. One morning as I sat at the window looking in the direction of the pines I noticed one of the birds leave the tree and poise directly above a rough part of the river which was not frozen. Then he went down like a bolt and disappeared under the water. I watched with great interest to see what he would fetch—watched one, two, three, four seconds, but he did not appear. This was something so unusual that I became intensely interested. I stood at the window for half a minute watching where the bird had disappeared, and then, sure that something had happened to him, I snatched my hat and ran down to where lay my little boat. After some difficulty I managed to get in the open water, and then poled to the spot where the eagle had gone under. Looking down I saw the bird, his wings partly extended, and held fast to the bottom in some unaccountable way. With a grappling hook I drew him out. Judge of my surprize when there came to the surface, besides the eagle, an enormous salmon. It was for this splendid prize that the eagle had made his plunge. Of course he had buried his strong, sharp talons in the side of the fish, but when he wanted to rise he could not lift his prey. Neither could he withdraw his talons from the salmon's side, and so had perished. The fish weighed a trifle over thirty pounds.

Dyspepsia and Indigestion.—C. W. Snow & Co., Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "Please send us ten gross of Pills. We are selling more of Parmelee's Pills than any other Pill we keep. They have a great reputation for the cure of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint." Mr. Chas. A. Smith, Lindsay, writes: "Parmelee's Pills are an excellent medicine. My sister has been troubled with severe headache, but these Pills gave cured her."

A BOLD TRAIN ROBBERY.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 3.—At 5. a.m. to-day between Lacey and Derry stations, 50 miles from here, a robber entered the express car of the North-eastern Railway train arriving here at 7 a. m. and compelled baggage master, Harry McElray, at the muzzle of a pistol, to hold up his hands. He quickly threw a sack over his head. Charles Lowry, the United States express manager, who was checking freight in the express end of the car, was compelled at the pistol's mouth to open the safe. A sack was thrown over his head, and the robber, after rifling the safe of its contents, stopped the train by pulling the bell rope and departed. The conductor on going forward to investigate found the car near the express car locked. On reaching the express car he found McElray and Lowery standing in the sacks still holding up their hands. It is said the amount of the loss is between $40,000 and $50,000 but the express officials decline to state the amount.

ANOTHER OLD GUN.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 5. — Jennie White, aged 17, was killed by the accidental discharge of an old gun yesterday which she had been carelessly handling.

HEAVY LOSS.

CHICAGO, Nov. 5.—The Monticello Ladies Seminary at Godfrey was burned to the ground yesterday morning. Loss, $150,000; half insured.

MINE EXPLOSION.

LOCKHAVEN, Pa. Nov. 5.—There was an explosion on Saturday night in the Kettle Creek company's mine thirty miles west of this city. The accident occurred in the new drift in which twenty-one persons were at work. As soon as possible after the explosion the mine was entered and fifteen dead bodies carried out. Four other men, badly injured, were found, one of whom has since died. Several others are likely to die. The cause of the explosion is unknown but it is supposed to have been the striking of a fissure or pocket of gas.

It is rumored the direct cause of the explosion was inexperienced use of dynamite. In conversation with one of the drivers who escaped it is learned that an Italian received one hundred sticks of dynamite from the storekeeper in the morning, with one hundred caps and had returned after a fuse, but as there were none in stock, it is supposed that he tried to set the stuff off in some other way, thus causing the explosion.

YOUTHFUL MURDERERS.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 5.—Two young men named Caskin and Smith, aged 16 and 19 respectively, are under arrest charged with the murder of Pietro Paglinso, a young Italian on Saturday afternoon. Pietro's uncle had siezed their guns for shooting on his place and given them in charge of Pietro. When the uncle disappeared Caskin and Smith shot Pietro and escaped.

MYSTERIOUS MURDER.

DAVISVILLE, Nov. 5.—Late last night some unknown person shot and killed Charles Filliber, a young barber of this place. The object of the deed is a mystery, it not being robbery, as a gold watch and about forty dollars were found undisturbed on his person. He leaves a young wife.

DYNAMITE FACTORY.

PITTSBURG Nov 5.—The Glycerine factory and warehouse located near Shannopin, an oil town on the Pittsburg and Lake Erie, road, 15 miles from this city, exploded this morning. At first it was reported that three persons were killed, but later accounts say none.

SACKVILLE SELLING OUT.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—A modest advertisement in this morning's paper announces that the British minister offers for sale his house, carriages, sleighs, saddles, whips and entire contents of the legation stables. This is the first evidence Lord Sackville has given of preparing for his departure.

THREE KILLED.

VICKSBURG, Miss. Nov. 5.—A freight train on the Louisville and Texas road struck a cow and was thrown from the track. The engine and thirteen cars were wrecked. Three men were killed and two wounded.

THE UNCERTAIN WEST.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—The U. S. signal service predicts, generally, fair weather in the states east of the Mississippi river during Tuesday. West of the Mississippi the department is unable to prognosticate as storms arise suddenly there.

NO TIME TO DECIDE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Judge Lawrence in the supreme court chambers to day heard arguments by Smith, counsel for Tammany Hall, for a mandamus compelling the inspectors to receive the vote of any woman desirous to cast a ballot. The court said the constitutional and legal questions were too great to decide in a day and he would deny the application for want of time, without prejudice to any one's rights, and without expressing an opinion. The woman's suffrage party present approved of the course taken and stated that the application did not come from them.

THE RAWSON CASE SETTLED.

CHICAGO, Nov. 5.—The famous Rawson controversy, long before the public, is settled. The terms of agreement are that Mrs. Rawson is to receive $46,000 in settlement of all her claims, and a divorce on the ground of desertion. All litigation is to be withdrawn, including the criminal prosecution of Mrs. Rawson for shooting at Lawyer Whitney.

BEFORE THE BATTLE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Things were remarkably quiet at the different national political headquarters this morning. At the democratic headquarters on 29th street, the Shibboleth was "We've got 'em and they can't get away." Subordinate republican leaders are equally confident and both sides talk of fraud as if they feared it.

THE KAVANAGH-COX AFFAIR.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The Kavanagh-Cox incident has caused a tremendous sensation in Parnellite circles, and has also stirred up considerable feeling among the tories. The examination of Kavanagh in the police court to-day has proved the reckless manner in which the Times has gone about obtaining evidence to sustain its case, as well as the disregard of truth shown by its agents either upon their own or their employers' account. The witnesses in the cases showed conclusively that even humble workmen were paid £6 per week, a greater sum than they ever had in their lives, to remain in London and answer to their names when called to the witness box and the testimony altogether show that the witnesses bought, including the prisoner Kavanagh, are of the kind not to be believed under oath if their antecedents are known. The Evening Star (Parnellite) heads its report of the Kavanagh-Cox examination "Waltersism and crime" and accuses the Times of flooding London with human refuse in expectation of being allowed to disgrace the courts with that sort of witnesses in its behalf. London, the Star asserts, has been turned into a sort of Texas and Fleet Sheet at the expense of the Times. It has infested in the debating rooms and taverns with scoundrels carrying revolvers and filled with strange oaths and whiskey. The admission of Cox that he could not or would not make under oath before the commissioner the statement he made to his employers, agents of the Times, upon which his suspense was based, has led a great many persons to believe that the Times' case is founded upon a conglomeration of falsehood, hearsay, suspicion and expectation, which under the searching light of a cross-examination, and the burning light of reason will crumble to dust and precipitate the entire fabric into the abyss of mendacity, together with its builders.

OUT OF DANGER.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—Cardinal Newman is out of danger.

GOOD ADVICE.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The Times in a long editorial on the presidential contest and the Sackville matter, says there is not the slightest reason to retaliate on minister Phelps, and advises the government to show deliberation in choosing a successor to Lord Sackville.

TWENTY-TWO LIVES LOST.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The Norwegian bark Nor, which sailed from New York Oct. 25 for Stettin, collided with and sunk the steamer Saxmundham off Cowes. Twenty-two persons are missing and supposed to be drowned. Eight survivors were landed at Weymouth. The Nor was abandoned.

IN CLEAR WEATHER.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—Captain B. Jenness, str. Nor, which collided with the steamer Saxmundham, off Cowes, yesterday, disclaims all responsibility for the accident. He says the Saxmundham ran into the Nor while the weather was perfectly clear. The crew of the Nor remained on the bark eight hours after the accident. They then abandoned her. He says signals of distress were made to passing steamers but they declined to render assistance. Nothing has been heard of the twenty-two persons missing and there is little doubt but they went down.

HIGHBINDERS AT WORK.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 5.—A fashionable resort on Bartlett alley, in the heart of Chinatown, frequented generally by Chinese merchants, was the scene of a terrible conflict this morning. Ten highbinders attacked the place with the hope of robbing a number of merchants who were inside. Armed with crowbars, knives and pistols they reached the stairway leading to the upper apartments when they met with resistance. A bloody battle followed in which one of the attacking party was shot dead and others were slashed, beaten and otherwise injured. The clamor brought an officer and a citizen to the place and two arrests were made.

METALLIZED WOOD.—This method of giving a brilliant metallic surface to wood has been brought out in Germany: The wood is first treated in a bath of caustic alkali, then in a bath of hyposulphite of calcium to which sulphur has been added, and finally in a bath of acetate of lead. In each of these baths the wood remains for several hours. It is then dried, and may be given a very high polish.

In a speech recently at Toronto ex-Minister Cartwright said that annexation to the United States was inevitable unless both countries could agree on free trade. He ridiculed the federation scheme as impossible.—Ex. Sorry we can't agree with you, mister, the cart isn't just right; you've got it before the horse.

H. Gladden, West Shefford, P. Q., writes: For a number of years I have been afflicted with rheumatism. Two years ago I was attacked very severely. I suffered a great deal of pain, from which I was not free a day, until last spring, wyen I began to use Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, and I rejoice to say it has cured me, for which I am thankful.

MR. MOODY'S MEETINGS.

Four Largely Attended Meetings in the Opera House Yesterday.--Considerable Interest Manifested.

A Crowded House Last Night of Nearly Fifteen Hundred.--Meetings To-Day Good.

Mr. Dwight L. Moody's opening meeting yesterday morning was a much greater success than could reasonably have been expected considering the early hour at which it was held. The Opera House was filled to overflowing with people of all creeds, the desire to hear the noted preacher not appearing to be confined to any particular church. After a hymn by the choir, followed by a prayer, Mr. Moody, without prefacing his remarks, launched out on the subject of "Faith." Man must have faith in himself. The greatest men in history have been men of faith. Look at Moses, it was his faith that made him mighty among the children of Israel. Caleb and Joshua had great faith—the sons of Anak though giants were as grasshoppers in their eyes. In the performance of God's work all must have faith. It would be better to have an army of 200 men like Gideon's chosen few, filled with the Holy Ghost, than thousands of doubters. Some people here have said: "Its no use, Mr. Moody can't do any good here, things are different from the east and the people will not be lead." Such talk was downright nonsense and christians who talk in this strain would throw cold water on anything. When Joshua stood face to face with the man with the drawn sword outside the walls of Jericho, his faith saved him. There was more excitement in the saloons in a day than in the churches in a year. The people must be enthusiastic. The scriptures say one good man will chase a thousand wicked and two shall put 10,000 to flight, but of the sort of Christians now-a-days it would take nearly a thousand to chase one. The Lord was always fond of faith, but faith without works avails nothing. Preachers must get off the high platform and step down among the people, work with the people and be of them. Without this nothing can be accomplished. What is wanted is work, hard and honest. Christians who do things from a sense of duty only, are not wanted. He had seen hundreds of meetings completely spoiled by persons who considered it a duty to get up and speak. The work of duty was not the work of love. If the ministers had half a dozen good Samaritans working with them the churches would have to be doubled in size within a year. The meeting closed with the benediction.

THE MEETING FOR MEN.

About 900 men gathered to hear Mr. Moody's address at 2.30 o'clock. After a hymn and prayer Mr. Moody took for his text the 7th verse of the 6th chapter of St. Paul's epistle to the Galatians: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he reap." He believed that verse 20 years ago and he believed it now more than ever. It would be easier to blot the sun out of the heavens than this truth. Man must reap what he sows. There are lots of things in the bible men don't want to believe and therefore deny the truth of it. God cannot and never did deceive, neither can he be deceived. When a man sows he expects to reap some kind of fruit. It is the law of nature. If a father tells his boy to go to the door and inform a visitor that he is out of the city that boy will lie to him within six months. To rum sellers I say, get out of the business at once or it will fall back on you and prove a bane to some part of your family. Jacob practiced deceit and his son practiced deceit on him. No man commits a sin but he commits another to cover it up. If you sow rebellion you will reap rebellion and if you sow murder you will reap murder. "He who covers his sins shall not prosper" says God. No man can cover his sins from God and He will punish severely. If a man sows one bushel he expects to reap ten, and if a man sows one sin what must the harvest be? Look at the drunkard—it did not take him long to get down, but what a reaping it has been. Young men what kind of seed are you sowing? Fathers what kind of seed are you sowing? Tell me how you spend your Sabbaths and I will tell you what kind of harvest you will reap. Tell me how you speak of your mother and I'll tell you how you will reap. Atonement can be made but yet there is certain consequences we must suffer. Suppose you get angry and strike and maim a man for life. He may forgive, God may forgive, but you can never forgive yourself. Ask God to forgive your sins—He wants to—but you must ask Him—and then see what the harvest will be. Why should we not seek the Lord and receive pardon. Is there no one present who will say "I want to live another life, I will leave my evil life and try to do better."

Mr. Moody then asked all who wished to become Christians to stand up boldly and so signify. The appeal was responded to by 10 young men. A warm prayer was then offered for the supplicants, after which the benediction was pronounced and the meeting closed.

THE FOUR O'CLOCK MEETING.

The opera house was jammed at the 4 o'clock afternoon meeting, with the exception of the small gallery, which was unoccupied. After the singing of several gospel hymns by the choir and congregation, Mr. Moody read the 55th chapter of Isaiah, prayer by Rev. Mr. Scouler followed, and at the request of Mr. Moody the choir sang the 66th hymn alone. Rev. Mr. White offered prayer, and Mr. Moody made the announcements for following meetings, after which he gave out his text. "I want to call your attention," said Mr. Moody, "to John the 1st chapter and 38th verse." Mr. Moody then said he would divide his subject into three parts: 1st, a question; 2nd, an exhortation; and third, a command. The question would be found in the verse referred to, "What seek ye?" The two disciples of whom the question was asked sought Jesus and followed him and found in him something that other

Monday Evening, Nov. 5, 1888.

On account of the resignation of Mr. Robert McLeese, to contest Cariboo district for the Dominion house, a provincial writ has been issued to the returning officer of the electoral district of Cariboo to cause the nomination to be held on a day not yet proclaimed. The writ is made returnable on the 16th of January next at the latest. Old Cariboo will have something to warm up on during the approaching cold snap, and the veteran war horses of the mountain town will no doubt soon be snuffing the battle.

It will be seen that the subscription list in our columns, for the furtherance of the next provincial exhibition, to be held in this city next fall, continues to grow. A noticeable and gratifying feature is that some more of the old pioneers are putting down their names for respectable sums, thus evincing their interest and insuring the success of the show. Sheriff Armstrong figures on the list to-day with $30, a good example, and one that, we predict, will be followed by still increased amounts from many more of our pioneers and others who have made homes and fortunes in this city and district. We are glad to see the pioneers "coming up;" we knew they would, and would do so handsomely when they got ready. The more late arrivals, however, have set an example for promptness and liberality that entitles them to honor, although our district friends, Messrs. Sharpe & Paine, in view of all the circumstances, exhibit a public-spirited disinterestedness that would be hard to beat. With a long pull, and a strong pull, and a pull all together, we will have such a show at this city next fall as will literally astonish the natives, and be a lasting credit and benefit to the city, district and province.

The eastern Grit press are taking advantage of some of the rather intemperate utterances of the Victoria papers anent the reported removal of "C" battery to the mainland. The Ottawa Free Press makes more capital out of these utterances than was really warranted by the expressions themselves, which, of course, is only natural, when party spirit is considered. The Free Press says: "Once more the Tory province of British Columbia is threatening secession from the Dominion—this time because of the federal government's proposal to remove "C" battery of artillery from Victoria to Vancouver. The Tory Colonist charges the minister of militia with violating a solemn promise he made to the people of Victoria last summer, and the Times declares that the government's treatment of Victoria has created an annexation sentiment, and that a similar policy drove Manitoba to the verge of insurrection." The Free Press would appear to be still laboring under the long since exploded delusion that Victoria was British Columbia. As an antidote for that species of myopia, we would recommend our eastern cotemporary to take a trip out to the Pacific province and get his eyes opened. British Columbia has no notion whatever of annexation, and the Free Press could never have drawn such conclusions if it had made due allowance for the utterances of the Victoria press, instead of exaggerating them. So far as Manitoba is concerned, it may fairly be questioned if the Dominion government has treated that province justly. A little more regard for the rights and welfare of the prairie province, and less respect paid to the wishes and demands of the C.P.R. in the furtherance of their disallowance and monopoly schemes, would, we believe, have reflected greater honor upon the federal power, besides being more consistent with its functions and duties. In its own way, however, the Free Press hits upon a point which is worthy of notice, and with the spirit of which we not only agree, but have sought to embody and enforce in former articles. "All this bluster will avail nothing," says our cotemporary, "so long as the British Columbia delegation in parliament continue to vote blindly with the Tory party. Sir John Macdonald cares very little whether he enjoys the confidence of the people of Victoria or not so long as he holds the votes of the city's representatives in his pocket." There is something in this way of putting it. Irrespective of any particular matter altogether, British Columbia has less to gain and more to lose, a great deal, by returning party supporters to Ottawa than by electing only free and independent men as representatives to the federal parliament.

Dr. Tanner, who won glory a few years ago by breaking the fasting record, is now proposing to give his soul a rest for sixty days, having his body sealed meanwhile in an air-tight casket. At the end of the two months he promises to come out of the coffin just as well as he was when he was boxed up.

A curious phase of the progress of civilization, says America, is the increasing desire of nations to become naturalized by placing strictures upon the migrating tendencies of mankind, and thus prevent the influx of aliens into their midst. A decade ago a nation adopting measures to restrict immigration would have been denounced as barbarous, and governments then endeavored to attract foreigners by offering special privileges to immigrants. Unless present signs are not true forecasts, says the magazine above quoted, the United States will soon be compelled to adopt rigid restrictive measures against foreign immigration. Germany has already taken action against the influx of Poles, and in England the recent "sweating' investigation developed an anti-alien sentiment contrary tot he accepted spirit of free trade; but the most strenuous measure yet attempted is the recent decree of President Carnot imposing a stringent form of registration, not only upon all fresh immigrants, but upon the foreigners already resident in France. This decree is the outcome of the growing uneasiness felt by French workingmen owing to the competition of foreign laborers. Hereafter every foreigner resident in France will have to make a declaration "setting forth, first, his name, and the names of his father and mother; second, his nationality; third, the place and date of his birth; fourth, the place of his last domicile; fifth, his profession, or means of subsistence; and sixth, the names and nationality of his wife, and of his children under age, when he is accompanied by them." He will also have to produce documentary evidence to support the declaration. All of which goes to show, inter alia, that the supposed mercurial and flighty Frenchman is capable of following an idea, when he gets a good hold of one—or rather when it takes a good hold of him—to the bitter end. Statistics show that for thirty-five years ending 1886 the number of foreigners in France had increased three-fold, and this increase was greatest among the Italians, who as a class were composed principally of pauper laborers—the same class (including the Chinese) against which Anglo-Saxon countries are beginning to legislate. It will thus be seen that this question—the same in essence everywhere—of restricting undesirable immigration, is beginning to thrust itself forward as a distinct issue in the councils of the nations, and even Canada, much as she is in need of the right kind of immigrants, will soon have to take steps to exclude others besides the unfortunate and undesirable Mongolians. In taking steps for the restriction of immigration—an apparently harsh, but at the same time necessary measure—as much respect as is possible under the circumstances should be shown to the feelings of those nations thus discriminated against. The matter is a delicate one at the best, and though it must be handled, let it be handled with gloves—and a certain amount of Christian charity and common decency—even though the feelings of the depised celestial be all that is in the scales. One does not have to go far for an illustration demonstrating the expediency, as well as morality, of such a course.

B. C. Provincial Exposition Subscription Fund.

For the purpose of raising a fund to contribute towards the patriotic and worthy object of making the next annual provincial fair, to be held in this city, a grand and unprecedented success, the undersigned agree to contribute the sums opposite their respective names (to be paid into the association or to trustees competent to receive the same, on or before 6 months from the date of the last provincial exhibition, and to be applied to preparing exhibition grounds and buildings in this city, for increasing the amount offered in prizes, and for furthering the exhibition in other ways):

Your Children
Are constantly exposed to danger from Colds, Whooping Cough, Croup, and diseases peculiar to the throat and lungs. For such ailments, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, promptly administered, affords speedy relief and cure.
As a remedy for Whooping Cough, with which many of our children were afflicted, we used, during the past winter, with much satisfaction, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. For this affection, we consider this preparation the most efficacious of all the medicines which have come to our knowledge.—Mary Parkhurst, Preceptress, Home for Little Wanderers, Doncaster, Md.
My children have been peculiarly subject to attacks of Croup, and I failed to find any effective remedy until I commenced administering Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. This preparation relieves the difficulty of breathing and invariably cures the complaint.—David G. Starks, Chatham, Columbia Co., N. Y.
I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for many years, and have found it especially valuable in Whooping Cough. This medicine allays all irritation, prevents inflammation from extending to the lungs, and quickly subdues any tendency to Lung Complaint. —J. B. Wellington, Plainville, Mich.
I find no medicine so effective, for Croup and Whooping Cough, as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It saved the life of my little boy, only six months old, carrying him safely through the worst case of Whooping Cough I ever saw.—Jane [illegible], Piney Flats, Tenn. ††

OPIUM AND YELLOW FEVER.

IS THE DRUG A CURE FOR THE DEADLY PESTILENCE?

Chinamen Claim That None of Their Number Has Ever Caught the Disease.

(Copyright, 1888.)

When the death, by yellow fever, of the eminent English astronomer, Prof. R. A. Proctor, in this city, brought home to the popular consciousness the alarming fact that the dreaded scourge of the South was actually among us, some anxious excitement might reasonably have been expected. New Yorkers, however, do not scare easily, and though certain newspapers have seemed desirous of cultivating a panic by their sensational articles on the subject, the public seem to view the situation with gratifying coolness and confidence. Among one large element of our population the feeling is placid indifference. Those exceptionally unconcerned ones are the Chinese. No fear of yellow fever agitates them nor would they be frightened were that pestilence raging here with even greater virulence than it has attained in Jacksonville. It is not that they fancy that there is any race immunity for them, but they have unbounded confidence in the preventive and medical powers of a habit to which nearly all of them are, more or less, addicted. That habit is opium-smoking. They aver that one who habitually "hits the pipe"—whatever his race, color or previous condition of servitude—is proof against yellow fever germs. And if, not being thus protected, one gets the disease a prompt and certain cure is afforded by resort to the opium pipe. It is affirmed by them that although there are a number of Chinamen in Jacksonville, not one of them has died or has even been a sufferer from yellow fever, and they affirm that the same fact has been observable in each of the yellow fever epidemics that have in former years raged in other Southern cities, ever since Chinamen have lived in them. A rheumatism possesses infinitely greater terrors for John than a yellow fever. It seems as if, in view of these facts, the opium pipe is well worth trying as a remedial agent, where the disease prevails, by others than Chinamen. It is simple, easy when one gets the knack of it, and certainly not likely to be hurtful if not used to excess. But some special instruction is necessary to enable one to smoke opium, and it is rather doubtful if one novice out of ten will be able, from any mere description, to accomplish it without ocular demonstrations by an expert. The whole art of it is in the "cooking" of the opium. The variety of the drug that is used for smoking is very different from that employed in pharmaceutical preparations. It is soft, thick, glossy black, tarry-looking stuff, and costs four or five times as much, at least, as the other kind does. Enough of it for a dozen "pipes" will cost from 30 to 45 cents in any respectable "joint" in New York, but then one no doubt pays there a certain percentage for the use of the "lay-out," which consists of a pipe, needle, lamp and place to lie down and enjoy the questionable dissipation.

The lamp is fed with some vegetable oil—probably that from peanuts—which gives forth no unpleasant smell in burning. Its flame, small and clear, is surrounded by a little dome of glass, open at the top. The expert "fiend"—as the habitual opium smoker is called—takes upon the point of the long slender steel needle a small wad of the opium from "shell" in which it is served. This he holds over the flame of the lamp, where it boils, bubbles, squirms like a golden bronze worm and gradually changes color to a shade of metallic gray. All the while it is undergoing this transformation, he twirls it deftly and shapes it on the bowl of the pipe, which has a broad, smooth surface surrounding a tiny central aperture. First he makes it cylindrical. Then he pokes the end of the needle through the little hole in the pipe, compressing the pasty pill into a little disk, in which shape he finally leaves it sticking to the bowl round the hole. By this time it is quite hard and seems coked as well as cooked. Now he holds it over the flame of the lamp and, as it sizzles, sucks in the volume of faintly odoriferous smoke that it gives forth. Three or four long and deep inhalations—the smoke being taken away down into the lungs—and the pill is consumed. Then the cooking process is re-commenced. Out of three hours of opium-smoking, two hours and a half are consumed in the preparatory cooking of the drug.

Whether the practice is a very injurious one or not; whether the incidental associations of the "joint" are sometimes very immoral, or not; are questions that need not be discussed here. Some estimable Chinese merchants in this city smoke twenty or thirty pipes per diem, at least, and do not seem to be harmed by it, physically, mentally or morally. But all that has nothing to do with the question—Will it prevent or cure yellow fever? and that is one of such importance that it deserves speedy and effectual determination.

J. H. CORNELLY.

A RICH MAN'S QUEER MASCOT.

He Accumulates $10,000,000 and Firmly Believes it, Still, To Be the Secret of His Success.

Col. Samuel A. Scott, of Kansas City, St. Louis and nearly all the thriving cities in Missouri and Kansas, has been attracting a good deal of attention here during his visit, not alone on account of his openhanded liberality, but his breezy, western style. Aside from Levi P. Morton, Col. Scott is said to be the second largest contributor to the Republican campaign fund and he is known as the Napoleon of real estate transactions in the West. He is estimated to be worth $10,000,000, which he has made out of real estate within the last ten years. His career has certainly been a remarkable one.

To a party of prominent politicians whom he was entertaining at the Hoffman House he told the story of how he got his start in life.

He began by trying to do a real estate business on commission. He easily secured property to sell, but it was another thing to secure customers. The colonel was finally down to his last dollar when he traded off a lot in exchange for a team of horses and a Jersey bull. The owner of the lot took the horses and the colonel took the bull for his commission.

Now how to dispose advantageously of the bull was a matter of no little concern to him. Fortunately, he happened to mention the matter to Eugene Field, the now famous humorist of Chicago, then the managing editor of one of the principal daily papers in Kansas City. Just at this period Field's paper was adding to its then meagre income by conducting a lottery. Every person who subscribed for the paper received a lottery ticket. The articles offered as prizes were such things as the paper had received in return for advertising, money at this time being scarce. Field thought it would be an excellent thing to offer a blooded bull as one of the prizes, as it would be sure to excite interest among the farmers. So he proposed to take the animal off Col. Scott's hands and gave him the price of it in advertising. It was then an unheard of thing for a real estate dealer to advertise, but anyway the colonel thought the experiment worth attempting and he accepted Mr. Field's suggestion.

In exchange for the animal Col. Scott received a column advertisement in the newspaper every day for a month. The people considered this little short of reckless enterprise, but anything reckless in Kansas City in those days took, so, of course, Scott secured plenty of customers. At once he became the most prominent man in his business and made money rapidly. Naturally, he was so highly elated with his bargain that he offered to the person who should draw the bull as a prize $100 for the first calf.

The animal finally went to a farmer in Kansas, but it proved to be utterly worthless. The farmer came back on the newspaper and the newspaper in turn had to look to Col. Scott, who went to the man who originally owned the bull. As a result the man gave Col. Scott a three-hundred-dollar interest in the property, which was the price at which the bull was valued, and the colonel sent the farmer a sewing machine and the matter became satisfactory all around.

Shortly after this the colonel left the real estate business and turned his attention to a new system of sewerage and went to Denver in hope of making a fortune out of it. This proved a failure and he lost everything, and the only thing he had left was his individual interest in the Kansas City real estate in which transaction the bull figured so prominently.

In the meantime Kansas City had been enjoying a remarkably rapid growth and what was a year before a suburb had become the heart of the city, and the increase in the value of property was simply astonishing. Col. Scott found his property surrounded with fine buildings and that it had made him a comparatively rich man. He sold a half interest for $25,000 and in about a year the other half was worth nearly twice that amount.

Believing that his good fortune was due to the bull Col. Scott hunted up the animal and repurchased it. He has the animal to-day, and although it has eaten its head off a thousand times over Col. Scott could not be induced to part with it. He firmly believes if it had not been for the animal he would not be a millionaire.

HARVEY WALKER.

THEY DIE IN THE STREET.

A Great Falling Off in the Death Rate of Horses in New York.

"How many fall dead in the street?"

"Oh, it used to be no uncommon thing to pick up seventy-five or eighty in the heat of the day, but this summer we have never found more than forty a day and the average is below twenty-five."

This remark was made by Mr. Kielmann, foreman of the factory on Barren Island, where dead horses and dogs are carried every day by the boat load to be converted into gas. This new Arabia is a narrow strip of sand just beyond the dead sea that covers Canarsie flats and within smelling distance of Coney Island.

The men who navigate these waters have whiskers that seem to grow out of their noses. When this peculiarity is referred to they shake their heads solemnly and point towards Barren Island.

A twenty-five horse power odor, reinforced by the interesting aroma of a hundred and fifty stewed dogs rises out of the caldrons and starts on its glad career. It was with difficulty that I kept my feet to walk from the boat landing to the factory. When I entered the foreman's office I was gasping for breath. Embracing a pillar I cast an appealing glance at the gentleman who stood at a tall desk making entries in a ledger.

"Sick?" I inquired with a tender infection as soon as I could get my breath.

"My God, do I look sick?" he replied, eyeing me sharply and slapping the convex surface of his stomach. To tell the truth he was not slender. I was about to apologize, when he continued: "I know what you are going to say, but I tell you the place is healthy. We have had a large force of men here for years—never less than forty-five—and only one man has ever died on the Island. He was a slim chap who had consumption, contracted before he came here."

I was about to make another remark when he broke in on me as follows: "No use, I can't show you through without a permit from the head office at Peck Slip." There was no trace of sarcasm in his face, I had gone far enough and was quite content to take his word for everything I wished to know concerning his factory. "How many fall dead in the streets?" I ventured to ask, to which question he made the response recorded at the beginning of this article. "The heat kills them fast but more die in the winter when the streets are slippery with snow—sometimes eighty or ninety a day. It is unaccountable," he said, "how the number has fallen off this summer. I can't understand it at all. Maybe it's on account of the cable cars, but it don't seem as if that could make the difference."

"How do you find the dead animals?"

"We are notified by telephone of the location of a dead horse by the captain of police in the precinct in which he died. He is then picked up by one of our wagons and carried to the boat, which makes one trip a day. The dogs are brought twice a week from the pen where they are drowned. We get about three hundred a week through the summer—sometimes more.

"When the bodies arrive at Barren Island we take their skins off, cut them up, put them in the caldrons and boil them down. After it is done stewing, the flesh is dried until reduced to a powder which resembles moist sand when put into bags and sold for fertilizing purposes. The manes and tales of the horses are cut off before they are skinned and the hair is carefully washed and prepared for market."

The horse hides are sent to Europe and the dog skins are made into gloves at Gloversville. Then the oleo which comes from the horse flesh adds largely to the revenue of the proprietors. Every horse yields about ten gallons of oil which is used for machinery. They also get somewhere in the neighborhood of $25,000 for removing the carcasses from the street.

At a low estimate ten thousand horses are turned into gas, oleo and fertilizing material on this island in one year. And these horse boilers are grumbling because the number has decreased.

One Way of Disposing of Tramps.

A Visalia Justice of the Peace has hit upon a novel way of clearing his district of tramps.

Arrested and taken before him he lectures them on the enormity of their offense, pronounces them guilty, and tells them to come next day and receive sentence.

Of course, they get out of his jurisdiction as soon as possible.—San Francisco Call.

In Luck.

"Why, Wooden, what makes you so happy this morning?"

"Happy? Well, I should think I could afford to be; I made $300 yesterday."

"That's good. How'd you do it?"

"Why, I put $200 into Union Pacific."

"But I thought stocks fell off yesterday."

"So they did: I lost the $200, but I would have put in $400 if I had had it. So you see that other $300 was a clear gain."—Boston Commonwealth.

The Dear Creature's Consistency.

Mrs. Homespun—"I declare I would just like to be able to vote once."

Mr. Homespun—"Why, my dear, I thought you were strongly opposed to woman suffrage."

"So I am; and I would like to vote in order that I might vote against the horrid thing."

Report from the Dining Room.

"Mary, how could you serve up such a piece of beef as this? It is all bone. You ought to have known better than to have accepted it from the butcher."

"Yes, ma'am, I know it, and I told him I wouldn't have taken it if it had been for myself."—New York Truth.

Scrofula

Is one of the most fatal scourges which afflict mankind. It is often inherited, but may be the result of improper vaccination, mercurial poison, uncleanliness, and various other causes. Chronic Sores, Ulcers, Abscesses, Cancerous Humors, and, in some cases, Emaciation and Consumption, result from a scrofulous condition of the blood. This disease can be cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

I inherited a scrofulous condition of the blood, which caused a derangement of my whole system. After taking less than four bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla I am and, for the past year, have not found it necessary to use any medicine whatever. I am now in better health, and stronger, than ever before.—O. A. Willard, 21½ Tremont st., Boston, Mass.

I was troubled with Scrofulous Sores for five years; but, after using a few bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the sores healed, and I have now good health.—Elizabeth Warnock, 54 Appleton street, Lowell, Mass.

Some months ago I was troubled with Scrofulous Sores on my leg. The limb was badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy failed until I used Ayer's Sarsaparilla. By taking three bottles of this medicine the sores have been healed, and my health is restored. I am grateful for the good it has done me.—Mrs. Ann O'Brian, 158 Sullivan st., New York. ††

BY-LAWS ISSUED BY HIS HONOUR THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR-IN COUNCIL,

UNDER THE AUTHORITY OF THE "HEALTH ORDINANCE, 1886."

HIS HONOUR THE LIEUTENANT-Governor of British Columbia, by and with the advice of the Executive Council of British Columbia, acting under and by virtue of the provisions of the "Health Ordinance, 1886," enacts as follows:—

1. Whenever small-pox is present in any locality without the boundaries of any Municipality, the Provincial Health Officer nearest to such locality shall at once cause the patient to be removed to an isolated hospital, tent or other suitable place, or cause such person to be otherwise sufficiently isolated, and shall see that he is properly cared for, and shall take proper measures for the disinfection, or, if necessary, the destruction of all clothing which may have been exposed to the contagion, and for the disinfection and purification of every conveyance, rail-car, steamboat, railway, vessel, carriage, or other vehicle which may have been exposed to the contagion.

2. Such Health Officer shall have, in his discretion, full power to place in another building or tent all persons who may have been exposed to the contagion, and shall cause them to be supplied with all necessaries until the period of incubation of the disease shall have elapsed, and no such person shall go, or be permitted to go, abroad, until he or she has given satisfactory proof of successful vaccination within the preceding seven years, or shall have obtained a medical certificate of insusceptibility to the vaccine disease, nor until the clothing or effects worn or carried by or with him or her have been properly disinfected, if the same have been exposed to contagion.

3. To assist the Health Officer, he shall have full power to employ persons to be nurses, sanitary policemen, and other wise to aid in the prevention of the spread of the disease, and may himself give and enforce such reasonable directions for the same purpose as to him may seem expedient, and the nearest Government Agent shall see that all articles and necessaries required by the Health Officer are furnished.

4. It shall be the duty of every medical practitioner who shall attend upon, or give medical or surgical advice, to or about any person suffering from small-pox, to give notice forthwith after he shall have commenced so to attend or give such advice, to the nearest Provincial Health Officer. When a householder knows that a person within the house occupied by him is taken sick of small-pox, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the nearest Provincial Health Officer.

5. The Provincial Health Officer before mentioned is and includes any person appointed Health Officer under the "Health Ordinance, 1886," by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council.

6. The foregoing provisions shall have no effect within the limits of any Municipality, save as hereinafter mentioned.

7. In case the Council of any Municipality, whenever small-pox is present, or likely to occur therein, shall fail to make or carry out proper provisions to prevent the invasion or spread of small-pox within the Municipality, and complaint thereof shall be made to the Lieutenant-Governor by the Council of any adjacent Municipality, it shall be lawful for the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, acting upon such complaint or in his discretion upon other information, to order that these regulations shall, until otherwise ordered, apply to and be in force within the Municipality in which such neglect occurs, and thereupon any Provincial Health Officer shall have, within and in respect of such Municipality all the authority with which he is clothed in respect of localities without Municipalities, and in such case all disbursements and expenses paid by the Province, in the carrying out within such Municipality of the foregoing regulations, shall be paid by such Municipality.

8. These regulations may be cited as the "Provincial Health (small-pox) By-Laws, 1888."

Dated at Victoria, this 3rd day of October, 1888.

Little Boys by a Little Girl—Boys is men that have not got as big as papa, and girls is young women that will be ladies by-and-by. Man was made before woman. When God looked at Adam he said to himself: "Well, I guess I can do better than that if I try again," and then he made Eve. God liked Eve so much better than he did Adam that there has been more women than men ever since. Boys are a trouble; they are wearing on everything but soap. If I could have my way half the boys in the world would be little girls and the other half would be dolls. My papa was so nice to me that I guess he must have been a girl when he was a little boy.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria

MR. MOODY'S MEETINGS.

men did not find. A great many men followed Christ for what they could get out of him, not for what he was to them. When Christ was upon earth, no doubt he was followed by a good many who had heard of his miracle of feeding the five thousand in the wilderness, and wanted to get a chance at the loaves and fishes. "I can imagine some of them saying to their neighbor," said Mr. Moody, "How did the bread and fishes taste? do you think he will make any to-day; I would like just to see him make a little bread, and fish that never saw the water." Another class would like to see him perform miracles; they did not want to be blessed, but wanted to see a sign. When Jesus was upon the earth, a great many wanted to see him establish a kingdom, so that they could get some government appointment or something of the sort. Another class sought Jesus Christ for what he was, and they were not disappointed. "Jesus is all you make him," said Mr. Moody; "some find very little in him, but others find in him a mighty Saviour." Nearly nineteen hundred years had rolled away and human nature had not changed a bit. "You will find in this audience," said the speaker, "just the same motives that controlled people in the times of Christ." Some people in the audience would say: "I did not come here to hear you preach, I can tell you that." Another came because he had promised his mother he would. A man in Philadelphia went to the meetings once to see how eleven thousand chairs would look; he stayed and found a living Christ. "Pretty good thing he came, wasn't it?" said Mr. Moody, and he continued: "If any of you meet Jesus Christ to-night, you will look back upon this day as the best one of your life."

Mr. Moody recited an incident of a young man in one of his Glasgow meetings, who was standing near the door. The speaker, pointing to him, said: "Will that young man near the door take eternal life as a gift?" The question put the matter before the young man in a new light, and he decided he would be a fool to reject such a gift; he afterwards proved one of the brightest stars of the work in Glasgow. Coming to the 2nd part of his subject, "an exhortation," Mr Moody said that the text would be found in the 6th verse of the 55th chapter of Isaiah. "You will notice," said Mr. Moody, the text says 'Seek the Lord'; it does not say 'Seek feeling,'" or anything else." A man told him once that he had been seeking the Lord for forty years; but he could not have sought in the right way; it would take but a very short time for a true seeker to find the Lord. Mr. Moody had told him to do nothing, but "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." "I am one of those," said Mr. Moody, "who firmly believe that we are living in the days of shams;" men were only half-hearted. Those who would find God must be in earnest. Men were searching for God with their heads, said Mr. Moody, and added: "You cannot find him with your heads; you must seek him with your hearts, as you would seek money or any other object upon which your hearts are set." Mr. Moody here introduced one of his apt illustrations to show how earnest people can be over some things; for instance, if he were to say that he had lost a diamond in the hall and would give a reward of $10,000 to the finder, the speaker believed that a great many would soon be under the benches, and would cheerfully remain all night searching, going without both food and sleep. "If some one was to come to the hall about midnight and say that your wife was anxious on account of your absence," continued Mr. Moody, "you would say, 'Let her be anxious; when I get that reward I'll make it all right with her.'" "But isn't the grace of God worth far more than $10,000?" he added, and the speaker proceeded to enlarge on the value of eternal life, contrasting it with the present life, full of suffering and death. Mr. Moody said the text which he took for the third and last part of his discourse—"a command"—would be found in the 6th chapter of Matthew, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness." This, the speaker continued, was as much a command as the ten commandments, and meant just what it said. All were urged to seek the Lord and do so at once, and they would surely find him. Mr. Moody related an incident of a man of his acquaintance who, when he left home had the text written on his Bible by his mother; he afterwards heard three consecutive sermons on the same text, and was convinced that he should seek the Lord, but he deliberately decided not to do so until he had established in business. Mr. Moody met him years afterwards, and he had everything that he wanted from a worldly standpoint, but lamented the fact that his heart was perfectly hard. The same man subsequently became insane, in which condition he died, and to the day of his death, when spoken to by anyone, would point his finger at the person and and exclaim: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God." Continuing, Mr. Moody said: "Every true friend you have got will give you this advice, 'Seek first the kingdom of God.'" "I hope these children will seek the Lord; dear little girl (addressing one of the children near him), give Him your heart," added Mr. Moody. On the invitation of Mr. Moody, eight rose for prayer, and they were asked to meet him in the Methodist church at the close of the meeting. Prayer followed, and the benediction by the Rev. Mr. Baldwin, and the meeting came to a close.

THE EVENING MEETING.

The meeting commenced with the singing of gospel hymns by the large and well-trained choir that occupied nearly the entire stage of the Opera House. Shortly after seven o'clock the building was crammed, gallery and all, every available space on the floor being taken up with chairs; some of the audience were given seats on the stage, and the inside entrance doors had to be left open as the entrance hall was filled with people standing who could not gain admission. Mr. Moody, after the singing of several hymns, and reading part of the 14th chapter of Luke, and prayer by Rev. Mr. Haddon and himself, took as his text the 19th verse of the 14th chapter of Luke. "I pray thee, have me excused." You will see, said Mr. Moody, "that these men were invited to a feast, not to a funeral. At Vancouver they had a feast the other night and everybody turned out. When God gets up a feast there the excuses begin to rain in." The first man invited gave as his excuse that he had bought a piece of ground, and must go and see it. "A queer time," said Mr. Moody, "to look at his land before supper; he might have looked at it before he bought it." The second man's excuse was no better; he had bought a yoke of oxen, and must go and prove them. The speaker did not believe that he intended to do anything of the sort, but when a man wanted an excuse he was sure to make excuses; he (the speaker) would emphasize the word "make." The third man's excuse was even more absurd than the others; he had married a wife, and therefore could not go. A feast was a good place to go to, and there he was invited by a king; he might have taken his wife with him. "The fact is," continued Mr. Moody, "these men were lying; every man told a downright lie." The origin of excuses is as old as man; Adam excused himself and hid behind his wife: that was a mighty mean thing to do, but men did it still. Excuses were the devil's cradle to rock souls to sleep. One of the most popular excuses of the present day was the Bible; people said they couldn't understand it, but there was enough that they could understand, if they wanted to. Mr. Moody said he was glad there was some mystery in the Bible; it convinced him that it was the word of God; there were things in it that were above and beyond men, and that man, consequently, could never have written. If there was no mystery in the bible, we should have thousands of bibles instead of one. Men will hardly undertake, if asked, to express an opinion on a book of any consequence if they have only read it once, but the bible they will condemn without reading it. The bible was written by spiritually-minded men; an unrenewed man does not understand spiritual things. "If I was to take my little boy out of school for not finishing his education in one day," said Mr. Moody, "it would be no more foolish than for people to expect to understand the bible in the same time." The speaker said he pitied a man who thought he knew more than the scriptures. A man being asked for proof that the bible was inspired, said that it inspired him. Every man in the audience ought to thank God for a free bible. An excuse offered by many in these days was that they were predestinated, and had nothing to do with accepting the invitation; if God meant them to be saved, they would be saved. Mr. Moody asked them to put that theory into every day practice and see how it worked; some might refuse to exercise their will to the extent of leaving the hall after the services were over, with the idea if God intended them to get home, they would get there all right without any action on their part; they might imagine what the result would be if this idea was carried out as well in their business transactions. The unsaved had nothing to do with predestination. God's invitation reap "Whosoever," and this all-embracing word, as if to assure any stumbling soul, was repeated lovingly and with emphasis in the last chapter of the bible. There was a man down near the door, Mr. Moody said, with the poorest excuse yet; a church member had cheated him out of $5, and he would not come. The speaker recommended to him the words of Christ: "What is that to thee; follow thou me." There were more hypocrites out of the churches than in them. If people did not wish to associate with hypocrites hereafter, they should accept God's invitation for themselves. If a man talks a great deal about hypocrites, it is a good sign that he is not far from one himself. An excuse that young people sometimes made was that they did not like to become Christians, for they would have to put on a long face; they want to have some fun, to have a "good time." The idea that Christians must put on a long face was the greatest lie that ever came from the pit of hell. The bible says: "The way of the transgressor is hard," and experience and observation prove it to be true. Some people are afraid of religious excitement; they might go out to the cemetery, where all was cold and dead, and get converted on a tombstone if they liked. There was more excitement in the saloons than in the churches; in the saloons people got so excited they would knock each other down. A man got converted over on the Sound the other day and restored $5,000 that did not belong to him, and people said he was mad; the speaker would like to see others bitten with the same sort of madness. Some excused themselves from coming to Christ on the ground that they were not fit. Mr. Moody said these were just the ones that Christ was seeking. There were two excuses, Mr. Moody said, that kept a great many away from Christ, but these people were not willing to acknowledge. These were cowardice, and the indulgence in known sin. Mr. Moody urged his audience to accept the invitation and never mind what people would say. The address continued at considerable length for which we have not got space. At its conclusion those who wished to see Mr. Moady were invited to adjourn to the Methodist church. A great many did so.

TO-DAY'S MEETINGS.

Mr. Moody held a service in the Baptist church at 10 o'clock this forenoon with a fair attendance. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, a congregation of about 300 people—some of whom came from distant parts of the district—gathered at the Methodist church to hear the noted evangelist. Mr. Moody took for his text the 2nd chapter of St. Paul's epistle to Titus, and preached an eloquent sermon.

IMMENSE SALE

—OF—

DRY GOODS, CLOTHING

HATS, CARPETS,

LINOLEUMS, OIL CLOTHS, ETC., ETC.

Commencing Oct. 10th, 1888.

As we have decided to retire from the retail Dry Goods business this season, we now place our entire stock on the market at

WHOLESALE PRICES. NO RESERVE.

EVERYTHING MUST BE SOLD.

$6,000 worth of Clothing, Hats and Men's Furnishings.
$20,000 worth of Dry Goods, Carpets, Oil Cloths and House Furnishing Goods, etc.

☞ As we are known to carry one of the largest and best assorted stocks in the Province, it will not be necessary to enumerate. An early inspection will convince the public that we mean business, and that the stock must be closed out before the end of this season; therefore we have placed our goods at prices lower than have ever been offered before in this Province.

REMEMBER—The Stock must be closed out by the end of the year.
CALL EARLY WHILE THE ASSORTMENT IS GOOD.

TERMS—Under $100, cash; over $100, secured notes at three months with interest.
