IS STILL IN PROGRESS

The C. P. R. Is Taking a Hand.

MEETING ON APRIL 23RD

Will Be Held at Fernie to Try and Arrange For a Settlement.

The coal miners' strike is still in progress, and the prospects of an early settlement are not at all bright. Yesterday the C. P. R. sent notifications to the various smelters and mines in the Kootenay that no further ore shipments could be accepted until the railway had a visible supply of coal on hand. Only perishable freight is being accepted. At Fernie the C. P. R. has told the miners they cannot pull an engine after 10 days and want to know if the miners have a full supply of grub to last. Manager Lindsey has left Toronto for home.

It is reported that it is the C. P. R. that is making the most vigorous efforts to settle the difficulty between the mine operators and men. Realizing that a close down of the mines would have a most disastrous result on their road, they will not tolerate any interruption as far as their mines are concerned.

Vice President Lewis of the union is expected from Indianapolis shortly and a conference has been arranged for Tuesday, April 23, in Fernie between him, with the district officers, and the representatives of the companies. It is hoped that some arrangement may be agreed to then.

At Moyie the St. Eugene is running without interruption. R. H. Stewart, general superintendent of the company, informed the Leader yesterday that there were no immediate prospects of the mine having to close down. They have coal enough on hand for nearly two months and they have a good supply of water for running the mill. Arrangements maybe made for storing the concentrates if the railway refuses to haul them to the smelter.

International Hotel Sale.

The International hotel in Moyie was sold at auction at W. F. Gurd's office in Cranbrook this morning at 10 o'clock. C. J. Armstrong and B. J. Riley were the purchasers and the price paid was $3,200.

Fire Hall Concert.

A high class performance by local talent will be the attraction at Morley hall on the evening of Wednesday, May 1st. The minstrel show will probably last 45 msnutes, after which will follow a varied program of songs, recitations, etc. A meeting of the program committee will be held next Monday evening.

Good Ad for Moyie.

Dr. Harvie has had some choice views of Moyie made up in the form of a souvenir letter cards and now has them on sale. The views are well selected and will give the outsider a good idea of Moyie's scenic grandeur. They will prove a good advertisement for the town.

ANOTHER DIVIDEND

Declared by the C. M. and S. CO.

AMOUNTS TO $120,000

This li the Sixth Quarterly Dividend Since the Consolidation.

The usual quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent on the capital stock of the Consolidated Mining & Smelting Company of Canada, Ltd., was declared on Friday, to be payable to shareholders registered on April 22, on which date the books of the company will close. This is the sixth quarterly dividend paid since the consolidation was effected. The dividend amounts to the comfortable sum of $120,000, and the aggregate of all of the six dividends is over $700,000. This is a remarkable good showing and reflects high credit on the able manner in which the large and varied interests of the company are looked after. The several mines of the company are gradually getting in better condition for an increase d output, the smelter and refinery can handle a larger tonnage than ever, and the outlook for an improvement in the output of ore and an increase in the dividends is very bright.

To Suppress Gambling.

The following was handed this week to the Leader for publication:

A well attended and representative meeting was held in McGregor hall Wednesday night to take under discussion the matter of suppressing the gambling evil, now existing in Moyie. Thos. E. Kelly was unanimously voted to the chair. He briefly stated the object the meeting was called for and invited expressions of opinion from those present. The following gentlemen took part in the discussion that followed: Chas. A. MacKay, Geo. Edwards, Rev. G. H. Findlay, P. Besovi, Alvide Brydle, D. Macdonald, J. A. Macdonald, James Roberts, J. H. Alexander and others. The concensus of opinion was that some active steps should be taken at once to suppress all gambling in the city, and the following committee was appointed to see that the anti-gambling law of this province be enforced, and also to draw up and circulate a petition for signatures of those in sympathy with the movement: Chas. MacKay, Thos. E. Kelly, Alvide Brydle, Geo. Edwards, Jas. A. Macdonald. Rev. Mr. Findlay and Jas, Roberts.

CHAPTER XIV.

THAT same afternoon Baldos, blissfully ignorant of the stir he had created in certain circles, rode out for the first time as a member of the castle guard. He and Haddan were detailed by Colonel Quinnox to act as private escort to Miss Calhoun until otherwise ordered. If Haddan thought himself wiser than Baldos in knowing that their charge was not the princess he was very much mistaken. If he enjoyed the trick that was being played on his fellow guardsman his enjoyment was as nothing when compared to the pleasure Baldos was deriving from the situation.

The royal victoria was driven to the fortress, conveying the supposed princess and the Countess Dagmar to the home of Count Marlanx. The two guards rode bravely behind the equipage, resplendent in brilliant new uniforms. Baldos was mildly surprised and puzzled by the homage paid the young American girl. It struck him as preposterous that the entire population of Edelweiss could be in the game to deceive him.

"I have seen her before," said Baldos, a strange smile on his face.

The Countess Dagmar found it difficult at first to meet the eye of the new guard, but he was so punctiliously oblivious that her courage was restored. She even went so far as to whisper in Beverly's ear that he did not remember her face and probably would not recognize Yetive as one of the eavesdroppers. The princess had flatly refused to accompany them on the visit to the fortress because of Baldos. Struck by a sudden impulse, Beverly called Baldos to the side of the vehicle.

"Baldos, you behaved very nicely yesterday in exposing the duplicity of those young women," she said.

"I am happy to have pleased your highness," he said steadily.

"It may interest you to know that they ceased to be ladies in waiting after that exposure."

"Yes, your highness, it certainly is interesting," he said as he fell back into position beside Haddan. During the remainder of the ride he caught himself time after time gazing reflectively at the back of her proud little head, possessed of an almost uncontrollable desire to touch the soft brown hair.

"You can't fool that excellent young man much longer, my dear," said the countess, recalling the look in his dark eyes. The same thought had been afflicting Beverly with its probabilities for twenty-four hours and more.

Count Marlanx welcomed his visitors with a graciousness that awoke wonder in the minds of his staff. His marked preference for the American girl did not escape attention. Some of the bolder young officers indulged in surreptitious grimaces, and all looked with more or less compassion upon the happy faced beauty from over the sea. Marlanx surveyed Baldos steadily and coldly, deep disapproval in his sinister eyes. He had not forgotten the encounter of the day before.

"I see the favorite is on guard," he said blandly. "Has he told you of the lesson in manners he enjoyed last night?" He was leading his guests toward the quarters, Baldos and Haddan following. The new guard could not help hearing the sarcastic remark.

"You didn't have him beaten?" cried Beverly, stopping short.

"No, but I imagine it would have been preferable. I talked with him for half an hour," said the general, laughing significantly.

When the party stopped at the drinking fountain in the center of the fort Baldos halted near by. His face was as impassive as marble, his eyes set straight before him, his figure erect and soldierly. An occasional sarcastic remark by the Iron Count, meant for his ears, made no impression upon the deadly composure of the new guard who had had his lesson. Miss Calhoun was conscious of a vague feeling that she had served Baldos an ill turn when she put him into this position.

The count provided a light luncheon in his quarters after the ladies had gone over the fortress. Beverly Calhoun, with all of a woman's indifference to things material, could not but see how poorly equipped the fort was as compared to the ones she had seen in the United States. She and the countess visited the armory, the arsenal and the repair shops before luncheon, reserving the pleasures of the clubhouse, the officers' quarters and the parade ground until afterward. Count Marlanx's home was in the southeast corner of the inclosure, near the gates. Several of the officers lunched with him and the young ladies. Marlanx was assiduous in his attention to Beverly Calhoun, so much so, in fact, that the countess teased her afterward about her conquest of the old and well worn heart. Beverly thought him extremely silly and sentimental, much preferring him in the character of the harsh, implacable martinet.

At regular intervals she saw the straight, martial form of Baldos pass the window near which she sat. He was patrolling the narrow piazza which fronted the house. Toward the close of the rather trying luncheon she was almost unable to control the impulse to rush out and compel him to relax that imposing, machine-like stride. She hungered for a few minutes of the old time freedom with him.

The Iron Count was showing her some rare antique bronzes he had collected in the south. The luncheon was over, and the countess had strolled off toward the bastions with the young officers, leaving Beverly alone with the host. Servants came in to clear the tables, but the count harshly ordered them to wait until the guests had departed.

"It is the dearest thing I have seen," said Beverly, holding a rare old candlestick at arm's length and looking at it in as many ways as the wrist could turn. Her loose sleeves ended just below the elbows. The count's eyes followed the graceful curves of her white forearm with an eagerness that was annoying.

"I prize it more dearly than any other piece in my collection," he said. "It came from Rome. It has a history which I shall try to tell you some day and which makes it almost invaluable. A German nobleman offered me a small fortune if I would part with it."

"And you wouldn't sell it?"

"I was saving it for an occasion, your highness," he said, his steely eyes glittering. "The glad hour has come when I can part with it for a recompense far greater than the baron's gold."

"Oh, isn't it lucky you kept it?" she cried. Then she turned her eyes away quickly, for his gaze seemed greedily endeavoring to pierce through the lace insertion covering her neck and shoulders. Outside the window the steady tramp of the tall guard went on monotonously.

"The recompense of a sweet smile, a tender blush and the unguarded thanks of a pretty woman. The candlestick is yours, Miss Calhoun—if you will repay me for my sacrifice by accepting it without reservation."

Slowly Beverly Calhoun set the candlestick down upon the table, her eyes meeting his with steady disdain.

"What a rare old jester you are, Count Marlanx," she said without a smile. "If I thought you were in earnest I should scream with laughter. May I suggest that we join the countess? We must hurry along, you know. She and I have promised to play tennis with the princess at 3 o'clock." The count's glare of disappointment lasted but a moment. The diplomacy of egotism came to his relief, and he held back the gift for another day, but not for another woman.

"It grieves me to have you hurry away. My afternoon is to be a dull one unless you permit me to watch the tennis game," he said.

"I thought you were interested only in the game of war," she said pointedly.

"I stand in greater awe of a tennis ball than I do of a cannon ball, if it is sent by such an arm as yours," and he not only laid his eyes, but his hand, upon her bare arm. She started as if something had stung her, and a cold shiver raced over her warm flesh. His eyes for the moment held her spellbound. He was drawing the hand to his lips when a shadow darkened the French window, and a saber rattled warningly.

Count Marlanx looked up instantly, a scowl on his face. Baldos stood at the window in an attitude of alert attention. Beverly drew her arm away spasmodically and took a step toward the window. The guard saw by her eyes that she was frightened; but, if his heart beat violently, his face was the picture of military stoniness.

"What are you doing there?" snarled the count.

"Did your highness call?" asked Baldos coolly.

"She did not call, fellow!" said the count, with deadly menace in his voice. "Report to me in half an hour. You still have something to learn, I see." Beverly was alarmed by the threat in his tones. She saw what was in store for Baldos, for she knew quite as well as Marlanx that the guard had deliberately intervened in her behalf.

"He cannot come in half an hour!" she cried quickly. "I have something for him to do, Count Marlanx. Besides, I think I did call." Both men stared at her.

"My ears are excellent," said Marlanx stiffly.

"I fancy Baldos' must be even better, for he heard me," said Beverly, herself once more. The shadow of a smile crossed the face of the guard.

"He is impertinent, insolent, your highness. You will report to me tomorrow, sir, at 9 o'clock in Colonel Quinnox's quarters. Now, go!" commanded the count.

"Wait a minute, Baldos. We are going out too. Will you open that window for me?" Baldos gladly took it as a command and threw open the long French window. She gave him a grateful glance as she stepped through, and he could scarcely conceal the gleam of joy that shot into his own eyes. The dark scowl on the count's face made absolutely no impression upon him. He closed the window and followed ten paces behind the couple.

"Your guard is a priceless treasure," said the count grimly.

"That's what you said about the candlestick," said she sweetly.

She was disturbed by his threat to reprimand Baldos. For some time her mind had been struggling with what the count had said about "the lesson." It grew upon her that her friend had been bullied and humiliated, perhaps in the presence of spectators. Resentment fired her curiosity into action. While the general was explaining one of the new gun carriages to the countess Beverly walked deliberately over to where Baldos was standing. Haddan's knowledge of English was exceedingly limited, and he could understand but little of the rapid conversation. Standing squarely in front of Baldos, she questioned him in low tones.

"What did he mean when he said he had given you a lesson?" she demanded. His eyes gleamed merrily.

"He meant to alarm your highness."

"Didn't he give you a talking to?"

"He coached me in chess."

"You are evading the question, sir. Was he mean and nasty to you? Tell me; I want to know."

"Well, he said things that a soldier must endure. A civilian or an equal might have run him through for it, your highness." A flush rose to his cheeks, and his lips quivered ever so slightly. But Beverly saw and understood. Her heart was in her eyes.

"That settles it," she said rigidly. "You are not to report to him at 9 tomorrow."

"But he will have me shot, your highness," said he gladly.

"He will do nothing of the kind. You are my guard." And her eyes were gleaming dangerously. Then she rejoined the group, the members of which had been watching her curiously. "Count Marlanx," she said, with entrancing dimples, "will you report to me at 9 tomorrow morning?"

"I have an appointment," he said slowly, but with understanding.

"But you will break it, I am sure," she asserted confidently. "I want to give you a lesson in—in lawn tennis."

Later on, when the victoria was well away from the fort, Dagmar took her companion to task for holding in public friendly discourse with a member of the guard, whoever he might be.

"It is altogether contrary to custom and"— But Beverly put her hand over the critical lips and smiled like a guilty child.

"Now, don't scold," she pleaded, and the countess could go no further.

ANIMAL EPICURES.

The Crab Eating Raccoon and Peculiar Crustacean Taste.

What made the crab eating raccoon first take to his queer diet? The question is suggested by a specimen of this strange animal which has arrived at the menagerie and will be happy to oblige any generous visitor with an illustration of the quickest way to kill, unshell and swallow a crustacean without artificial assistance of any kind. Doubtless the peculiarity originated in the shore frequenting habits of the species, and, being a delicate feeder, the succulence of the crab, once cracked, was an obvious inducement to renew his acquaintance on every possible occasion. Originally probably a fruit eater, the raccoon is inquisitive and dainty, both strong incentives to experiments in diet. When an individual sees a small object he does not understand, his actions fall under three headings. He first puts the article to close scrutiny, both with his eyes and that supercilious upturned nose of his; then he takes it away and washes it—a very characteristic action of this water loving animal—and finally puts it to the grand test of eatableness or otherwise. If it appears unpalatable, he gives it to his wife. In this way it is easy to imagine how the creek loving coon, wearying of too much fruit, made his first crab supper and, though he has never been able to add a squeeze of lemon or brown bread and butter to the repast, has become a confirmed love of crustacea ever since. All creatures make experiments of the sort and occasionally carry them on until they become a fixed habit, and their whole structure is modified in accordance. Nature, for instance, never intended the osprey to live on fish. It was the temptation of an old world trout in difficulties in the shallows that first led the great hawk astray. Some small Brazilian monkeys, again, live almost exclusively on birds' eggs, an Australian parrot has given up a proper vegetarian diet for an exclusive regimen of mutton, and many other instances of the same unorthodox appetites might be cited. —London Globe.

Swish!

One of the first secretaries of agriculture was a man of great shrewdness and ability, which were not incompatible with a certain slow footed ease. He was known to be late at cabinet meetings, where tardiness is a serious breach of etiquette. One day when he came into a meeting a minute or two late one of the other secretaries, thinking to give a helpful rebuke, said:

"Hello! Here comes the tail of the administration."

The secretary slid leisurely into his seat and then answered:

"Well, the tail may come in handy some day to brush the flies off the rest of the administration."

Quaint Verses On Tomb of Mariner.

The destruction by fire of the historic and beautiful Abbey of Selby not only deprives Yorkshire of its most perfect monastic church, but robs the country of a national relic of surpassing interest. Few churches possess the architectural interest of Selby Abbey. It owes its foundation in 1068 to William the Conqueror, whose son Henry, afterwards Henry I., is traditionally supposed to have been born in Selby.

One of the most curious epitaphs in the Abbey of Selby was in the reredos on the east side. It read:

"Tho' Boreas with his Blustering blasts,
Has tos't me to and fro,
Yet by the handiwork of God
I'm here enclosed below.

"And in this Silent Bay I lie
With many of our Fleet,
Until the day that I set sail
My Admiral Christ to meet."

A SPRING DANGER

Many People Weaken Their Systems by Dosing with Purgative Medicines

A spring medicine is a necessity. Nature demands it as an aid to enriching the blood and carrying off the impurities that have accumulated during the winter months. Thousands of people, recognizing the necessity for a spring medicine, dose themselves with harsh griping purgatives. This is a mistake. Ask any doctor and he will tell you that the use of purgative medicines weaken the system and cannot possibly cure disease. In the spring the system needs building up—purgatives weaken. The blood should be made rich, red and pure—purgatives cannot do this. What is needed is a tonic, and the best tonic medical science has yet devised is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. Every dose of this medicine actually makes new, rich blood, and this new blood strengthens every organ and every part of the body. That is why these Pills banish pimples and unsightly skin eruptions. That is why they cure headaches, backaches, rheumatism, neuralgia and a host of other troubles that come from poor watery blood. That is why the men and women who use Dr. Williams Pink Pills eat well and sleep well and feel active and strong. Miss Mabel Synnott, Lisle, Ont., says: "I was pale and weak and suffered greatly from headaches, and I found nothing to help me until I began taking Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These have completely restored my health and I bless the day I began taking them."

But be sure you get the genuine Pills with the full name "Dr. Williams Pink Pills for Pale People" on the wrapper around each box — all other so-called pink pills are fraudulent imitations. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville Ont.

ANOTHER JOB FOR ALCOHOL

That the method of garbage disposal is about to be revolutionized by the manufacture of denatured alcohol is the statement made to the common council of Milwaukee by Dr. W. A. Boyd, of Rockford, Ill. Milwaukee now pays $1.83 a ton for burning its garbage at a municipal plant, and Dr. Boyd has offered to do the work at 70 cents a ton, and at the end of ten years give the city his plant. Milwaukee gets no return in the way of by-products from burning its garbage. Dr. Boyd says he will get grease, fertilizer and alcohol from the waste. Alcohol would be the most important of the by-products.—New York Tribune.

For Inflammation of the Eyes.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

The Habit of Health

Many people have a habit of ailing. How much better it would be to learn to keep well. For health, after all, is largely a matter of habit, which all may acquire with a little practise.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

teach good habits to Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Bowels. If you are subject to Bilious Attacks, suffer from Constipation or are troubled with Indigestion, Nervousness or Headache, Beecham's Pills will reform all these bad habits and set an example of good health, which the body will quickly follow. You can break up all sickly habits by occasionally using the health suggestions transmitted by Beecham's Pills.

CRYING BABIES

Babies do not cry for the fun of it; nor is it always because they are hungry, as so many young mothers think. Nine times out of ten baby's cry indicates that his little stomach is out of order. Mothers will find instant relief for their suffering little ones in Baby's Own Tablets. A few doses will cure the most obstinate cases of constipation, indigestion or vomiting, and a Tablet given now and then to the well child will keep it well. Mrs. Mary Pollock, Gawas Ont., says: "Baby's Own Tablets have been a great benefit to my baby. They have made him happy, peaceful and contented, when before he used to cry all the time. I have more comfort with him since giving him the Tablets than I ever had before. He now sits and plays and laughs while I do my work. What greater praise can I give Baby's Own Tablets." ARTIFICIAL NUTMEGS

Artificial nutmegs are made in Belgium in so clever a manner that they can hardly be distinguished from genuine ones, especially if mixed with the latter. A chemical analysis has shown them to consist of a mixture of finely powdered nutmeg (from extracted or injured kernels) and about 20 per cent of mineral substances. The following means of detection are recommended: —When the kernels are cut, the well known plantlike structure, so characteristic in genuine nutmeg, is absent; if the kernels are treated for three or four minutes with boiling water they become soft, and can be rubbed up into a powder with the fingers; on being burned they leave about 18 per cent of ashes, while true nutmeg contains only 2 to 3 per cent; the imitation nuts are generally much heavier than the genuine article.

STEAMSHIP ENGINES.

One of the most impressive manifestations of the power of the modern steam engine is the sight of an up to date freight locomotive starting a train of forty or fifty cars and gathering way until the whole mass is thundering over the rails at a speed of twenty-five or thirty miles an hour. When we attempt by our unaided strength to move a heavy piece of furniture, we understand very well what is meant by mass and inertia. To move a single loaded freight car on the level by human power it is necessary to crowd around it as many men as can lay their hands or shoulders against it in a united propulsive effort. And hence when we see not one, but forty or fifty loaded cars, started from rest and swung into their full stride by a single locomotive, the latter becomes symbolical in the popular mind of majestic power.

It is for this reason that to represent the horsepower which will be necessary to drive the new Cunard liners at twenty-four and one-fourth knots an hour we have taken the average sized freight locomotive as our unit of comparison. The least amount of power which the designers of the Lusitania and Mauretania found would be necessary to drive these ships at their contract speed was 68,000 horsepower. Now, the horsepower of the average freight locomotive is about 2,100, and consequently the total thrust on the four propellers of each of these ships will be equal to the total pull exerted by thirty-two modern American freight engines. One of these locomotives could haul on the level a train of fifty cars, whose total length would be just a third of a mile. Consequently the whole 68,000 power of the Cunarder expressed in terms of locomotive work would be sufficient to haul a train of 1,600 cars, whose total length would be over five miles.

To develop a minimum of 68,000 horsepower and a maximum that will possibly run up to 75,000 or 80,000 horsepower calls for a boiler and engine plant of truly titanic proportions. Steam will be supplied by twenty-five cylindrical boilers, of which twenty-three are double ended and two single ended, the former being seventeen feet three inches in diameter and twenty-one feet long. The coal will be burned in these boilers on 192 furnaces, the total area of whose grates would be represented by a square measuring sixty-four feet on each side, containing about 4,000 square feet of surface. Night and day an army of several hundred firemen will be continuously shoveling coal into these furnaces, where it will be burned at the rate of about 1,000 tons every twenty-four hours, and to insure that the coal is burned at a fierce white heat the air will be forced through the grates continuously by means of powerful electrically driven fans, the rush of air being also assisted by the four great smokestacks, through which the products of combustion will be discharged high up in the air at about 150 feet above the level of the grate bars.—Scientific American.

Queer Mental Disorder.

A singular mental disorder is reported of a patient confined at Bicetre, France. He professes to remember nothing except the month and year in which he was born. Lest he should forget the date of each new day he fills sheet after sheet of paper with memoranda. It is not a case of true amnesia or loss of memory; otherwise he should be unable to speak or write. It is a "fixed idea" of forgetfulness, a delusion, not an incapacity to remember. It has been argued by some that all the delusions of the insane are the result of the imagination filling the gaps which exist in an impaired memory. But this is the first case which has been described of une idee fixe d'oubli.

Spokane's Ambition.

Spokane has an honorable ambition to be a state capital. To achieve it Spokane would make a new state, to be called Lincoln. To the eastern counties of Washington it would add the northeastern counties of Oregon and the "panhandle" of Idaho. Such would be the new state. To round things out nicely it would recompense Idaho with the southeastern counties of Oregon. What is left of Washington and Oregon it would turn into a single state. Up to the present Spokane only has consented to this remaking of the map.—New York Tribune.

Submarine Auxiliary.

When a submarine boat becomes disabled beneath the surface of the water and cannot rise, its crew is in a bad predicament. To remedy the difficulty an inventor has contrived an auxiliary boat to be carried in the submarine and to be a part of it, practically, until needed. In time of accident the crew of the incapacitated submarine would enter the little craft, and when the containing chamber had been flooded the bolts would be withdrawn and the vessel with its human freight would clear itself and rise to the surface.

New York Subway Mistakes.

"There are four fool things that New York has done in its subway that are big mistakes and the causes of much unnecessary delay in operating the lines," said a man from London when he made his first trip from the bridge to Harlem in an hour. "The first is having stations on curves; second, making station platforms too short for increased train lengths; third, making entrances and exits of cars at the same points, and, fourth and worst of all, making tracks cross each other at Ninety-sixth street."—New York Herald.

Cash or Credit.

Women should not get credit. Neither should men. Cash is the cure. Tradesmen maybe would have a bad time for six or twelve months, and many a lady would have to "lie low," but in the end we would get both our trade and our money, and she would get her dress and at far less cost.—London Opinion.

Cold in the Chest Seemed to be Unmovable But Cure was Soon Effected by

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine

It is waste of time to use ordinary cough mixtures for serious colds on the chest, and time is of infinite value when the lungs are in danger.

The risk is too great, especially when you wait to think that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is for sale in nearly every store that keeps medicines at all.

This letter gives you some idea of the effectiveness of this great medicine.

Mrs. A. Barnum, Ingersoll, Ont., writes:—"My husband had a very severe cold on his chest and got so bad he could not speak above a whisper. The cough medicines he tried seemed to have no effect and reading about Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine I sent for a bottle. In two days he was cured and is very grateful for such a medicine. He says we will never be without this medicine in the house."

The very name of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is sufficient to explain the simple and yet powerful and well-known ingredients of which this great medicine is composed.

While linseed sheathes the mouth, tongue and throat, with a protective coating to prevent injury from hard coughing, turpentine disinfects and stimulates the ulcerated parts of the bronchial tubes and lungs and is almost specific for bronchitis.

Other ingredients which along with these go to make up Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, soothe the nerves, loosen the cough, aid expectoration, and by thorough action on the whole system completely cure coughs and colds, bronchitis, asthma, whooping cough and sore throat.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 25 cents a bottle at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every bottle.

AN EVEN BREAK

There was once a sporting parson at Eastington, a place on the English coast which was a favorite landing place for woodcocks at the time of their immigration to England. When the birds arrived, exhausted by their long flight, everybody in the parish, including the parson, at once turned out to join in the sport of knocking them down with sticks. One Sunday the people were in church, and the parson in the pulpit, when the church door was cautiously opened, and a head appeared with a beckoning finger. "Well, what is it?" asked the parson. "Cocks is coom!" The parson hurriedly shut up his sermon case. "Shut the door and lock it," he cried to the clerk. "Keep the people in church till I've got my surplice off. Let's all have a fair chance."

PEEPS INTO WOMEN'S LETTERS

If our readers could spend one morning looking through the letters received from all over Canada by the Zam-Buk Co., it would bring home to them with irresistible force the healing virtues of this great household balm. Old women, young women, wives, mothers and even young girls have something to say about how Zam-Buk did this or that good office in their home. Many of these writers give permission to make extracts from their grateful testimony. From these the following were taken at random:

"I was troubled for some weeks with salt rheum in hands and arms and was using a salve which did me little good. On receiving a supply of Zam-Buk I applied it, and it really seemed to act like magic! The itching and burning ceased, and in a few days the skin was cleared and healthy." So writes Miss E. A. Butchard, of North Keppel.

"Three boxes of Zam-Buk cured me of Eczema, from which I had suffered a long time." So says Mrs. Gladden, of Mansonville, Que.

"Zam-Buk cured a case of blood poison in my family, and I wish to thank you for the great blessing it has proved," is the effect of a letter from Mrs. Webb, of Dovercourt.

And so one could go on quoting extract after extract, showing how Zam-Buk cures chronic sores, ulcers, abscesses, bad leg, itch, and blood poison; takes the soreness out of cuts and burns, and grows new, healthy skin over injured or diseased places. All stores and druggists sell at fifty cents a box, or the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, will mail for price.

A REVISED EDITION

A small citizen of Springfield, Mass., says Lippincott's Magazine, made out a list of the things he hoped to receive for his approaching birthday, and this is what his fond mamma found recorded as the first item of all:

"Anew testimunt, reversed virgin!"

"HOMES, HEALTHFUL AND BEAUTIFUL"

Under the above caption the Alabastine Co., Limited, of Paris, Ontario, have put out probably one of the handsomest booklets on home decoration ever issued in Canada. While designed primarily as a catalogue, the book is handsomely illustrated with numerous cuts of the interiors of rooms in colors, and, as well as containing complete information on wall decoration, is filled with many valuable suggestions, both pictorial and otherwise, on tasteful home furnishing. It is a book which needs only to be seen to be appreciated.

"Homes, Healthful and Beautiful" is gotten out in the form of an edition de luxe, and is too expensive a book to distribute promiscuously to everyone who might write for it merely out of idle curiosity. The Alabastine Co. are therefore making a charge of ten cents for it, which amount, while not nearly covering the cost of the book, is intended to discourage those who would write for it merely to gratify an idle whim.

It is well worth reading. A copy will be mailed to any address on receipt of ten cents.

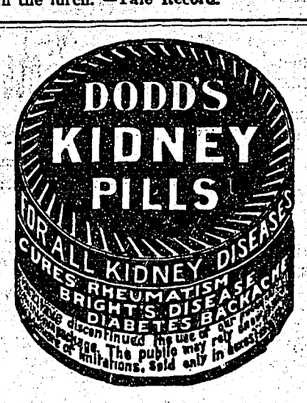
Making a Skirt.

In making skirts be sure to have all creases pressed out before arranging pattern on material. If material has a nap, or, should it be a large design, lay pattern on the one way. If not, you may reverse pattern up and down, which would prevent its matching when put together. Be sure that the pattern is arranged in the correct way.

Traitor.

"They say that he fell overboard as the ship rolled on its side."

"You might say that he left the ship in the lurch."—Yale Record.



KITCHEN ECONOMIES.

A Substitute For the Fish Kettle and Other Makeshifts.

If you have no fish kettle tie the fish in a piece of coarse muslin before cooking it, so that there may be no delay in lifting it out when done. Rub it slightly with vinegar or add a little to the boiling water, as it whitens the fish and makes it firmer.

Small mustard tins make good spice boxes if a neat label is placed on the front of each tin. An earthen pan is the best receptacle for keeping bread fresh, but if this cannot be obtained a large tin with a good lid makes a capital substitute.

For the cutter which is used for stamping out rounds of pastry use lids of tins, tops of tumblers or wineglasses. A good set of weights and scales should find a place in every kitchen. Quantities may sometimes be guessed pretty accurately, but there are many things which must be weighed.

A salamander is used to impart a brown color to any preparation. The instrument is made red hot and held close to the preparation till it is browned. A fire shovel made red hot will do as well. If you have no tongs for turning steaks and chops, this can be done with two spoons.

Every housekeeper knows that by using a fork the juice runs out and is wasted, and the meat will look white inside.

When pinched with the spoons, it should feel soft; if hard, it is too much cooked; if spongy, it is underdone. A chair placed upside down on another chair makes a very good stand for a jelly bag. A tall music stool is still better. Cheesecloth folded four times makes a much better strainer than the old fashioned flannel bag. Dip it first in boiling water and let the straining be done before the fire. If an egg whisk is not possessed, a plate and a long handled knife will do as well.

Covering Furniture.

An original idea for covering furniture has been tried and proved successful by a woman who wished to have some unsightly chairs in her furnished flat improved. She bought a lot of Roman blankets with wide dark blue and red stripes and had an upholsterer cover her sofa and chairs with them, just as though he were using tapestry or velours. These looked so well that she has had her bedroom chairs also covered with blankets having alternate pink and floral stripes. She has had portieres and inside curtains made of blankets matching those on the chairs, and the effect is really charming, and, as the blankets are very cheap, they cost much less than one would suppose. She says that everything depends upon the color of the blankets chosen. Of course very pronounced stripes would be ugly upon furniture, but the more subdued or delicate colors give a most satisfactory appearance to a room. Here is an opportunity for the amateur upholsterer to try her hand.

Rhubarb Recipes.

Rhubarb and Orange Marmalade.—String and cut in pieces one inch long two pounds of rhubarb. Peel half a dozen oranges and shred the yellow rind. Put it into a preserving kettle with the oranges, rhubarb and a pound and a half of granulated sugar and place over a slow fire. Cook and stir until it is the right consistency and then pour into jars, but do not cover until quite cold.

Rhubarb Jam.—To each pound of cut rhubarb allow one pound of sugar and one lemon. Peel the lemons as thin as possible and slice them, removing all seeds. Cut the rhubarb into pieces an inch long and into the bowl on top of the lemon and the peel, then put the sugar on top of the rhubarb, cover and set away in a cool place overnight. In the morning put the mixture into a preserving kettle and let it simmer gently for three-quarters of an hour. Remove it from the stove, allow it to cool and pack into jars, covering it with paraffin or brandied paper.

Dressmaking Hints.

New cotton often causes needles to break because of its exceeding harshness. This difficulty may be overcome by rubbing along the part to be sewn with a dry piece of soap. The plan answers equally well whether the work be done by hand or machine. Don't hang skirts wrong side out when putting them away. They are bound to crease, and with light ones, so a professional dressmaker says, whatever dust has been collected by the lining and clung in spite of your brushing is bound to sift through to the right side and stick. Go over skirt linings every couple of months with a cloth wrung out—as hard as you can—of water. That cloth should be just one tiny remove from perfectly dry. But the amount of dust it will collect from what you probably thought was a perfectly clean lining is astonishing.

A Government to Kick About.

"We kick about our own government," said a reformer, "and it is doubtless pretty bad, but what would we think if it took the taxpayers' money to pay every year a pension of $50,000 to the Goulds, another of $75,000 to the Astors and another still of $25,000 to the Vanderbilts? That is what goes on in England. The English doctor, the English druggist, the English carpenter, all sorts of hardworking Englishmen, are taxed $200 or $300 a year, and the money goes to pay the huge pension of some ducal loafer who is already too rich. Charles II., for instance, granted an eternal pension of $95,000 a year to the Duke of Richmond and Gordon. In all the years since Charles II.'s time that pension has been paid out of the taxpayers' pockets. To this day it is paid. The present Duke of Richmond and Gordon settles for his dinners at the Ritz in London or at Ciro's in Monte Carlo with money earned by English butchers, bricklayers and blacksmiths."—Exchange.

The Lion's Mouth.

The use of the lion's mouth as the vent of a fountain is so common that it cannot be regarded as accidental. As a matter of fact, the custom (like so many customs—not forgetting the fountain pen) came from Egypt, which adopted it because the annual inundation of the Nile takes place when the sun is in the constellation Leo—the lion. The allusion is too obvious to need pointing out. The oldest fixed date (4241 B. C.) can be traced to Egypt, where the calendar was introduced in the middle of the forty-third century. And the history of modern shipbuilding began in Egypt, where it can be traced to about 3000 B. C. The most recent discoveries give to the land of Egypt a clean run of about 11,000 years without any admixture of foreign races. "Egypt, land of hidden mysteries, great mother of science and art, what thinking mind has not dreamed of thee!"

Husband Would Settle.

From India comes a story of the discomfiture of a very distinguished soldier. It happened at a big dinner, where he had taken in a pretty American globe trotter, who asked him to pass a dish of almonds and raisins.

"With pleasure," replied the gallant son of Mars, "but do you know that what you have asked for is called in the vernacular kissmiss and that the penalty of a kiss attaches to the request?"

"Is that so?" answered the woman calmly. "I must consult my husband," and she called across the table to him and told him of the request.

"Quite so," he replied, "according to the custom of the country it is a just debt and must be paid, but is the general aware of the arrangement made when we married that I must settle all my wife's liabilities?"

Submerged Aristocrats.

Some curious letters are quoted by Mr. Percival Bickerstaffe the pedigree searcher, in an interview with a representative of the London Tribune. One runs:

"I am a plumber and gasfiter out of work. My stummick is empty, but in my art is the blud of noble burth. * * * I claim the family title and tenements which I will not be denyed the same."

A city clerk wrote:

"I have long suspected that I am of high birth. People tell me that I have manners above my station of life. My photograph herewith shows that I have an aristocratic cast of face and will perhaps be a clew to my ancestry. I do not ask for fortune, but I aspire to the pride of race."

THE LATE MR. C. B. RECORD,

FOUNDER OF THE RECORD FOUNDRY.

Reproduced above, is a portrait of the late Mr. C. B. Record, the founder and original head of the Record Foundry & Machine Co., of Moncton, N.B., and Montreal, P.Q.

Previous to Mr. Record going into the manufacture of stoves, those used in Canada were almost wholly of American manufacture. The character of the work turned out by the Record Foundry & Machine Co., at once gave their stoves a standing, and as a result a very large business soon grew up, largely owing to Mr. Record's untiring industry and perseverance against many obstacles.

Although Mr. Record retired from active business as far back as 1879, the solid basis on which he had established the industry, has resulted in its growth from a sturdy pioneer into one of the largest stove manufacturing plants on the northern half of the American continent. With two large plants, one in Moncton and one in Montreal, the Record Foundry & Machine Co. are known from Halifax to Vancouver, and their "Calorific" and "Admiral" furnaces and "Penn Esther" ranges recognized as the standard of Canadian excellence.

ON THE SCRAP HEAP

In an Irish court recently an old man was called into the witness box, and being infirm and just a little blind, he went too far in more than one sense. Instead of keeping up the stairs that led to the box, he mounted those that led to the bench. Said the judge, good humoredly:

"Is it a judge you want to be, my good man?"

"Ah, sure, your honor," was the reply, "I'm an ould man now, and mebbe it's all I'm fit for."

The judge had no ready retort.—Tit-Bits.

Minard's Liniment Cures Colds, etc.

Cittiman—Look here, sir, didn't you warrant the horse you sold me yesterday to be without a fault?

David Harum—Yes; ain't he?

Cittiman—No, sir, he is not; he interferes.

David Harum—Wal, I don't see as you hev any reason fur complainin' about that. He don't interfere with anybody but himself, does he?—Lippincott's.

A Requisite for the Rancher.—On the cattle ranges of the West, where men and stock are far from doctors and apothecaries, Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is kept on hand by the intelligent as a ready made medicine, not only for many human ills, but as a horse and cattle medicine of surpassing merit. A horse and cattle rancher will find matters greatly simplified by using this Oil.

"There's one thing I will say," remarked Mr. Millions, "and that is that my daughter, Arabella, has a fine disposition."

"Indeed!"

"Yes, sir. The way she can listen for hours to her own playing on the violin shows remarkable self-control."—Tit-Bits.

In its initial stages a cold is a local ailment easily dealt with. But many neglect it and the result is often the development of distressing seizures of the bronchial tubes and lungs that render life miserable for the unhappy victim. As a first aid there is nothing in the handy medicine line so certain in curative results as Bickle's Anti Consumptive Syrup, the far-famed remedy for colds and coughs.

A lady returned from the country to find her town garden denuded of all bulbs and plants, and a few months later a very worthy old woman told the lady's former housemaid that she had taken the flowers.

"People was beginning to steal 'em, my dear, and I felt sure your missus would rather they was took respectable."—Nursing Times.

Holloway's Corn Cure is a specific for the removal of corns and warts. We have never heard of its failing to remove even the worst kind.

The Reward of Industry.

Sir William White, who till recently was director of naval construction of Great Britain, began life as a shipwright's apprentice, but his genius carried him up the ladder with a rapidity which startled his fellow-workers. He nearly lost his life once through taking an experimental trip with a submarine boat which on being submerged stuck in the mud. It was only after furious work with the pumps that he was rescued.

COOKING A SQUASH

A correspondent of the Listener writes:—I think you will enjoy the following from our English cousins. We have laughed ourselves weak over it. A barrel was sent to London at Christmas containing apples, a Hubbard squash, some cranberries and sweet potatoes. This is from the reply: "The apples were fine, but the potatoes, alas, had gone quite bad and yellow. The cranberries are very handsome, but seem somewhat acid to our taste. The squash was a novelty, and I daresay we didn't know exactly how to deal with it. We put it on the table for dessert, but James found it extremely difficult to cut. Later I stewed it with lemon and sugar, and we all declared it delicious."

Minard's Liniment Cures Garget in Cows.

"I heard you giggling in the library last night," said the stern parent. "I think you must have been beside yourself."

"Oh! no," said the pretty girl, blushing deeply, "I was beside Charlie."—Life.

A Clear, Healthy Skin.—Eruptions of the skin and the blotches which blemish beauty are the result of impure blood caused by unhealthy action of the liver and kidneys. In correcting this unhealthy action and restoring the organs to their normal condition, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will at the same time cleanse the blood, and the blotches and eruptions will disappear without leaving any trace.

Miss Pepprey—No, he didn't like your eyebrows. He said they were too black.

Miss Painter—The idea!

Miss Pepprey—However, I assured him they were not as black as they were painted.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Minard's Liniment Cures Distemper.

Grim Joke In a Blue Book.

A grim piece of humor appears in the British blue book dealing with the taxation of unimproved land values in the colonies. The tax commissioner of Adelaide, after referring to the inaccurate returns, says:

"Side by side with these inaccurate returns it has been pleasing to note the completeness with which others have been prepared in the minutest particulars, and we cannot fail to recognize the thoroughness of the taxpayer who returned that piece of land of his, measuring nine feet by six feet, in the —— cemetery, and under the column 'Name of Occupier' gave that of his departed wife."

PSYCHINE

(Pronounced Si-Keen.)

FOR ALL THROAT AND LUNG TROUBLES

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS' SUCCESSFUL RECORD

MONEY can buy advertising space, but it can't buy a quarter century's successful record of wonderful and almost miraculous cures of the most difficult and intricate cases of throat, lung and stomach troubles. Such is Psychine's record. Thousands of cases given up by leading doctors as hopeless and incurable have been quickly and permanently cured by Psychine. It is an infallible remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis, pneumonia, consumption, indigestion, loss of appetite and all wasting diseases.

"My son had a terrible cough and was wasted to a shadow. Doctors said he could not live. He used Psychine, it cured him."—Mrs. J. Ranger, Brockville.

"After taking $5.00 worth of Psychine my lungs are well and life is again worth living."—Mrs. I. Richards, Marriotts Cove, N.S.

"My lungs are now sound as a bell after using Psychine."—H. Robbins, Bridgeburg, Ont.

"Psychine saved my life."—A. Walden, 7 Cornwall St., Toronto.

One rumor will spread faster than forty contradictions to stop it.

He shed his winter underwear,
Was soon with fever fired,
And now he is sojourning where
Such things are not required.

The "circular insanity" refered to by the experts in the Thaw case is perhaps the brain trouble known to western science as "wheels in the head."

A drug store in Moscow is said to have filled as many as 2,000 prescriptions in one day; almost as many as are filled in an American "dry" town on the Fourth of July.

It is said the Fernie miners feel that if they could pass up Lindsey, a settlement would be reached in a few hours. The operators it is said feel the same way. Then Lindsey should be asked to step aside and allow the settlement of the difficulty to proceed without delay.

The greater portion of the dividend just declared by the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co. of Canada, Ltd., was earned by the St. Eugene mine at Moyie, the most valuable of the company's holdings. Great is the St. Eugene.

There is too much rubbish and old tin cans in evidence in Moyie. Near the C. P. R. station Mr. MacKay is filling in a large hole. Why not have these cans and rubbish hauled and dumped there, where they will be buried and put out of sight forever?

The Col. Not a Good Husband.

At Spokane this week a decree of divorce was granted to Tiny Brayton, giving her a legal seperation from her husband, W. N. Brayton, whom she accuses of having a violent and ungovernable temper. She claims that upon the slightest provocations he would abuse her and call her vile names in the presence of friends, making life unbearable. According to her story, he has threatened to do her bodily harm, and she has feared that he would carry his threat into execution.

Colonel Brayton is well known to the pioneer residents of Moyie. During the building of the Crows' Nest railway he attempted to boom the townsite of Moyelle, now Aldridge, and did succeed in disposing of several lots.

Cured of Rheumatism.

Mr. Wm. Henry of Chattanonga, Tenn., had rheumatism in his left arm. "The strength seemed to have gone out of the muscles so that it was useless for work," he says. "I applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm and wrapped the arm in flannel at night, and to my relief I found that the pain gradually left me and the strength returned. In three weeks the rheumatism had disappeared and has not since returned." If troubled with rheumatism try a few applications of Pain Balm. You are certain to be pleased with the relief which it affords. For sale by the Moyie Drug & Stationery Co.

Delphine M. Delmas.

Delphine Michael Delmas, the famous California lawyer who was the leading attorney for the defense in the Harry Thaw case, was born in France, April 14. 1844. He removed to California in his boyhood, and was graduated from the Santa Clara College in 1862. Three years later he graduated from the Yale Law School. After his admission to the California bar in 1866 he practiced law in San Jose until 1881, and since then in San Francisco. He was chosen regent of the University of California in 1885 and delegate-at-large to the Democratic national convention in St. Louis in 1902. Mr. Delmas resides at Casa Delmas, Santa Clara County, and has his office in San Frahcisco. During his years of practice at the California bar he has won many famous cases. It is said, in fact, that no client he has ever defended, has ever been found guilty.

Will Defy the Act.

The C. P. R. have withdrawn their instructions to their employes in Winnipeg and the west regarding Sunday work. The men will, accordingly, work on Sundays and relieve the blocks and delays which are occurring to the stock trains. This is against the provisions of the Lord's Day Act, and the Lord's Day Alliance will probably be moved to take action against the company. Probably this is what the railway companies are aiming at, as if an action results they can then apply for an investigation to enquire into the working of the new act as it applies to the railroads. If the companies can show that the interests of shippers are menaced by the act, and the unnecessary suffering is caused to the cattle in these efforts to keep the Lord's Day holy. It may result in an amendment permitting the transportation of cattle on that day.

A Woman Tells How to Relieve Rheumatic Pains.

I have been a very great sufferer from the dreadful disease, rheumatism, for a number of years. I have tried many medicines but never got much relief from any of them until two years ago, when I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I found relief before I had used all of one bottle, but kept on applying it and soon felt like a different woman. Through my advice many of my friends have tried it and can tell you how wonderfully it has worked.—MRS. SARAH A. COLE, 140 S. New St., Dover, Del. Chamberlain's Pain Balm is a liniment. The relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. It makes rest and sleep possible. For sale by the Moyie Drug & Stationery Co.
