MAY NOT BUILD SMELTER

Mine Owners Are Up Against It.

AFRAID OF THE TRUST

Although Organized Less Than Three Years Ago It Controls Smelting Industry.

Spokane, Sept. 4.—The fight of the Cour d'Alene lead miners with the smelting trust is still unsettled, and if a settlement was any nearer in sight none of the officials are willing to say. The mineowners position was indicative of the belief that some sort of a working arrangement would be reached whereby business relations would be restored and shipments would be resumed. The mineowners much prefer to make arrangements with the trust satisfactory to both sides, rather than resort to the erection of independent smelters.

Although the smelting trust was organized less than three years ago, it has the smelting industry almost completely buttoned up. Lately too the smelting trust has been making long time contracts with large consumers of pig lead, with the idea of heading off the Cour d'Alene mineowners if they should try building independent smelters. The situation would then be that the trust would have contracts to supply the largest consumers and the new smelters would be seriously handicapped in disposing of their product.

Disgruntled Boers Seeking New Homes, the Two Per Cent Tax Must Be Abolished.

Mont Pelee is again active.

It is said that F. August Heinze will build a railroad in to Dawson.

Frank is making preparations for a monster demonstration of Sept. 10th.

Upwards of $10,000 worth of lots have already been sold in the new own of Morrissey.

Claus Spreckles of San Francisco is said to be about to establish a six million dollar sugar refinery business in Canada.

Ed Boyce, ex-president of the western Federation of Miners, has been nominated on the socialist ticket of Colorado for Governor of that state.

Fifteen new suits, aggregating $229,000, have been entered against the Crow's Nest Coal company by relatives of those killed in the big mining accident.

Arrangements have been completed for putting in a large sawmill at Wardner. The mill will have a capacity of 50,000 feet, and will be ready for operation by the first of the year.

Disgruntled Boers are seeking Madagascar as a home. The French authorities are agreeable, insisting, however, on naturalization and an adoption of the French language.

Col. Prior, minister of mines, who has returned to Victoria from a trip through the Kootenays, says that the people invariably asked for the abolition of the two per cent tax on the output of metalliferous mines.

It is announced that the Montana and Great Northern and its Canadian extension will be formally opened for trafic in a fiew days. With suitable exuipment the Great Northern will be able to ship from $8,000 to 10,000 tons of coal per day from the Morrissey mines. President Hill says the Great Northern will haul 2,000 tons per train.

Insurance Agents Amalgamate.

M. A. Beale, John Hutchison and Edward Elwell have entered into partnership, amalgamating the late firm of Beale & Elwell with Mr. John Hutchison.

The head office is in Cranbrook and it is their intention to keep in active operation branch offices at Moyie, Fort Steele, Kimberley, Marysville, Morrissey and Elko, B. C., and Frank, Alberta. Their business will consist of fire, plate glass, boiler, life, accident and sickness insurance. They will also act as real estate, commission and financial agents, auditors and accountants, notaries public and general brokers. A collection department will also be one of their branches.

The new firm of Beale, Hutchison & Elwell forms a strong combination. All three are energetic young men, and so far as hustlers for business are concerned there are no better in South East Kootenay. They will practically control the insurance business of the district. Mr. Beale will attend to the Moyie office and will spend a good portion of his time here.

THE LADY OF LYNN

By SIR WALTER BESANT.

(Copyright 1900 by Sir Walter Besant.)

Finally he abandoned his learned view and adopted our more modern explanations of the case—viz. that the marriage was a sham and that the woman was some creature suborned to personate Molly.

"But what woman can she be?" asked the vicar. "She can write. I have seen the registers. She has signed in a full, round hand without bad spelling. The woman, therefore, is educated. My dear, we may perhaps find the woman. My worthy and pious brother in orders is most certainly in the conspiracy. When there are three, one is generally a traitor. To begin with, the scheme is both bold and dangerous. It is the first step toward obtaining a large sum of money under false pretenses. Their necks are in danger, even the neck of a noble earl.

"It is inconceivable," he went on after a little reflection, "how a woman could be found to play such a part. She must be the mistress of the earl. No other could be trusted."

"What should be done meantime?"

"We must meet the enemy on his own ground. He spreads abroad the report that he married Molly this morning. We must publicly and openly deny the fact. Captain, there will be a large company at the assembly this evening. You will take Molly there. I will go with you. Jack shall put on his Sunday best and shall also go with us. We must be prepared for an impudent claim, and we must be ready with a prompt denial. Let us court publicity."

This was clearly the best advice possible. We were left unmolested all the afternoon, though the captain made me stay as a kind of garrison in case of any attempt at abduction being made.

In the evening Molly in her chair and dressed in her finery was carried to the gardens, while the captain, the vicar and myself formed a bodyguard.

We arrived after the dancing had begun. Lady Anastasia was looking on, but her court of ladies and young men for some reason seemed to have melted away. She stood almost alone, save for the support of the old beau Sir Harry. The colonel was also with her, and the Rev. Benjamin Purden stood behind her.

The music was in the gallery at the end of the long room. The dancing was carried on in the middle. Lady Anastasia was standing on the right of the gallery, most of the company on the left. Molly, with the captain and followed by the vicar and myself, turned to the left.

On her entrance all eyes were fixed upon the newly made countess. She had come without her lord! Was this part of the secret—a secret known to all the world—or was his lordship, before the whole company, about to lead his bride to the first place, as became her newly acquired rank? Some of the ladies regarded her with looks of hatred, the successors of the looks of scorn with which they had first welcomed her. Most of them, however, were kindly. A tale of love always meets with a friendly reception. Not a woman in the place but would have taken her place with joy unmeasured. As no other woman could, they were ready to accept their fate and to make friends with the successful and the fortunate winner of so great a prize.

It was a great prize, indeed, if they only knew.

The minuets were over and the country dance was about to begin when Lord Fylingdale arrived, followed, as usual, by his secretary. He stood at the door; he looked around. Then, with the cold pride which never failed him, he stepped across the room and bowed low to Molly. "Madam," he said, "with your permission, we will dance this country dance together before I take you away with me."

"My lord," replied Molly aloud, so that the whole company heard and trembled, "I shall not dance with you this evening nor on any other evening."

"She will never again dance with you, my lord. Nor will she hold any discourse with you. Nor will she willingly admit you to her presence." It was the vicar who spoke, because the man and the occasion proved too much for the good old captain, who could only roll thunderously between his teeth things more fitted for the quelling of a mutiny than for dealing with such a man as his lordship.

"Pray, sir," said Lord Fylingdale, stepping back, "what is the meaning of this? Pray, madam"—he turned to Molly—"what is the meaning of this sudden change? Captain Crowle, have I or have I not the right to claim my wife?"

The vicar stepped forward and confronted him. His tall, thin figure, his long cassock, his thin and ascetic face, contrasted with the overhaughtiness of his adversary.

"My lord," he asked, "how long has this lady been your wife?"

"We were married," he said, "at 6 o'clock this morning by the Rev. Mr. Benjamin Purden, who is here to bear witness to the fact. The wedding was private at my request, because, as you may perhaps believe, I was not anxious to join in the wedding feast with a company of boors, bumpkins and sailors."

"Ladies and gentlemen"—the vicar raised his voice and by a gesture silenced the orchestra—"I have to lay before you a conspiracy which I believe is unparalleled in any history. You are aware that Lord Fylingdale, who stands before you, came to the spa a few weeks ago for purposes best known to himself. You will also doubtless remember that certain persons who arrived before him were loud in his praises. He was said by them to be a model of all the virtues. I will not repeat the things that were said."

"All this," said Lord Fylingdale, "is beside the mark. I come to claim my wife."

"Among those who accepted these statements for gospel was Captain Crowle, the guardian of the young lady beside me. It was to him a great honor to be admitted to converse with so distinguished a nobleman and to be permitted to consult with him as to the affairs of his ward. He even informed his lordship of the extent of the lady's fortune, which is far greater than was generally understood. Thereupon his lordship began to pay attention of a marked character. You have all, I believe, remarked these attentions. Then came the attempted abduction and the lady's rescue by Lord Fylingdale. After this he formally offered his hand and his rank to the lady. The honor seemed very great. He was accepted. He then engaged the lady to undertake a private marriage without festivities, to which she consented. She promised, in fact, to be married at St. Nicholas' church this very morning at 6 o'clock."

"All this," said Lord Fylingdale coldly, "is quite true, yet why you detain the company to the narrative I do not understand. The lady kept her promise. I met her at the place and time appointed. We were married. Once more, Captain Crowle, I claim my wife."

"Ladies and gentlemen," the vicar continued, "there is but one reply to the last statement, for the lady did not keep her engagement."

"Sir"—his lordship advanced a step—"are you aware of the meaning of words? Do you assert that I was not married at that time and in that place?"

The Rev. Benjamin Purden advanced. "Sir," he addressed the vicar, "like his lordship, I am amazed at these words. Why, sir, I myself—I myself at 6 o'clock this morning performed the marriage service as prescribed by the church for the right honorable the Earl of Fylingdale and Miss Mary Miller."

CHAPTER XVII.

"AT YOUR PERIL."

BY this time the company were crowding round, eagerly listening. No one could understand what had happened. The bridegroom claimed his bride. The bride's friends denied that she was married.

"Yesterday," the vicar went on, "there arrived simultaneously three letters. One of them, an anonymous letter, was addressed to Captain Crowle; one, from a respectable bookseller in London, was addressed to Mr. Pentecrosse, master of the grammar school, and one, from a certain fellow of his college at Cambridge, was addressed to me. All these letters together contained charges which show how deeply we have been deceived."

"Have a care! Have a care!" said Lord Fylingdale.

"By these letters and other sources," the vicar continued, "I learn first as to the noble lord's friends the following particulars:

"I find that the Lady Anastasia Langston hath been lately presented by the grand jury of Middlesex for keeping a house riotous, of great extravagance, luxury, idleness and ill fame.

"I am informed that Lady Anastasia hath held a bank every night in this place, to the hurt and loss of many.

"I turn next to the case of the Rev. Benjamin Purden, who stands before you. He was the tutor of Lord Fylingdale. He is described as the companion of his vices. He was the cause last year of a grievous scandal at Bath. He is the author of a ribald piece of verse, by which he has corrupted many. No bishop would sanction his acceptance of the smallest preferment."

"This is very surprising," said Mr. Purden, shaking his big head, "but we shall see, we shall see—immediately."

"There are next the two gentlemen known as Sir Harry Malyns and Colonel Lanyon. Their occupation is to act as decoy ducks, to lure young men to the gaming table and to plunder them when they are caught."

Both these gentlemen started, but neither replied.

"I now come to the noble lord before me. He is a most notorious profligate. He shares in Lady Anastasia's gaming house. He has long since been refused admittance into the houses of persons of honor. He is an inveterate gambler. He has ruined his own estate, sold the family plate and pictures, library, everything. He is at this moment unable to borrow or to raise the smallest sum of money. The Fleet and the King's Bench prisons are full of the unfortunate tradesmen who trusted him and the young rakes whom he has ruined.

"Ladies and gentlemen, this was the story which reached us yesterday, fortunately in time. Miss Molly broke off her promise and wrote to his lordship for explanations. Captain Crowle called upon his lordship this morning for explanations. He was met with derision. He was told that he was too late—the young lady was already married; there was no necessity for any explanations."

The company murmured. Voices were raised demanding explanations.

"My friends," said his lordship coldly, "these inventions need no reply. I claim my wife."

"She is not your wife," said the vicar. "We are ready to prove that at 6 o'clock the young lady was already engaged with her mother in the stillroom or some other occupation. Of that there is no doubt possible. But"—and here he lifted a warning finger, but his lordship paid no attention—"there was a wedding early this morning. His reverence, Mr. Purden, performed the service. The wedding was in the name of Mary Miller as bride. The registers are signed 'Mary Miller.' This is therefore a conspiracy."

"You talk nonsense," said his lordship, who certainly carried it off with an amazing assurance. "I claim my wife. Once more, madam, will you come with me?"

"I am not your wife."

"We must endeavor," said the vicar, "to find the woman who personated Miss Molly. The clerk of the parish testifies to the wedding, but he does not appear to have seen the face of the bride. Whoever she was she wore a domino and had thrown her hood over her face."

The Lady Anastasia stepped forward, agitating her fan. "Reverend sir," she said to the vicar, "in matters of society you are a very ignorant and a very simple person. It is quite true that I have been presented by a Middlesex jury for gambling. It is also true that half London might also be presented. As for the rest of your statements—that, for instance, Lord Fylingdale shares in the profits of my bank—let me assure you that your innocence has been abused. These things are not true. However, it is not for me to answer public insults in a public place. Sir Harry, my old friend, they call you a decoy, even you, with your name and your reputation. A decoy! Sir, your cloth should shame you. Sir Harry, take me to my chair. If, tomorrow morning, the company thinks proper to dissociate itself from this public insult, I will remain in this place, where, I own, I have never found many friends. If not, I shall return to London and to the house presented by the grand jury of Middlesex."

So saying, she retired smiling and, as they say of soldiers, in good order; with her, also in good order, the ancient beau, with no other signs of agitation than a trembling of the knees, and this might very well be laid to the account of his threescore years and fifteen or perhaps fourscore.

Lord Fylingdale once more turned to Molly.

"Madam, for the last time"—

"Send him away—send him away," said Molly. "He makes me sick."

"We deny the marriage, my lord," said the vicar. "That is all we have to say."

"At your peril," replied his lordship. So saying he walked away unmoved apparently. Mr. Purden and Colonel Lanyon went with him. Both men were flushed in the cheeks and restrained themselves by an evident effort. I was sorry for Sam Semple, for he followed, his face full of trouble and disappointment.

When they were gone, the vicar spoke once more.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "we have thought it best to court the greatest publicity possible in this matter. The people whom we have exposed will not again trouble this company by their presence. I know not what the law may decide in this case, supposing his lordship so ill advised as to go to law. But the truth, which is above the law, remains that an imposture of the most daring kind has been attempted, and that some woman has been found to personate Miss Molly. I have to express her sorrow for keeping you so long from your pleasures."

And with these words he offered his hand to Molly, and we withdrew and the music struck up a lively country dance.

CHAPTER XVIII.

CONFESSION.

WHEN, six months later, I returned from a cruise, I found that Lord Fylingdale, having agreed to leave Molly free, had been put into possession without resistance of the bulk of her fortune and was making "ducks and drakes" with it in London.

There came into my head the thought that I might somehow, by going to London, find out what manner of life was led by my lord and in what ways he wasted and scattered Molly's substance. I could do nothing to stop or to hinder the waste, yet when one knows the truth it is generally more tolerable than the uncertainty.

I thought over the plan for some days. It assumed clearer shape. It became a purpose. Molly, for her part, neither approved nor disapproved. She was for letting the man who pretended to be her husband work his wicked will and do what he pleased provided that he left her in peace.

The end of it was that I went to London, riding with a small company and meeting with no adventures on the way; that I put up at one of the inns outside Bishopsgate and that I found out my cousin and put the whole case before him. He was a grave and responsible citizen, a churchwarden and of good standing in the Stationers' company.

"You want to know how Lord Fylingdale spends his money. I can help you in this business."

It was by the kind offices of this gentleman, whom I found to be a person of quick wit and ready understanding, besides being of a most obliging disposition, that I was enabled to see with my own eyes an evening such as my lord loved. As for the details, you must, if you please, hold me excused. Let it suffice that our observations began at a gaming house and ended at a tavern. At both places I kept in the background because I would not be recognized by Lord Fylingdale.

He came in to the gaming table with the same lofty, cold carriage which he had shown at our humble assembly. He advanced to the table; he began to play. No one could tell from his lordship's face whether he lost or won. In half an hour or so my friend returned to my corner. "He has lost a cool £500. They are whispering round the table that he loses hundreds every evening. All the world is asking what gold mine he possesses that he can stand these losses."

"I know his gold mine," I replied, with a sigh. "But it is nearly exhausted."

We staid a little longer. It was about 10 or 11 in the evening that his lordship left the table.

"Come," said my friend. "I know the tavern where he will spend the next three or four hours. I can take you there. The bowls of punch and the company and everything is provided at his lordship's expense. Mr. Pentecrosse, it must be not a gold mine, but a mine of Golconda, to bear this profusion."

"I tell you, sir, whatever it is, the mine is nearly run out."

"It will not be bad for the morals of the town when it has quite run out."

As regards the tavern and its company, it is indeed astonishing to me that any man should find pleasure in such a company and in such discourse. At the head of the table sat my lord. He appeared to be neither pleased nor displeased. The drink flowed like a stream of running water. It seized on all and made their faces red, their voices thick. The noble leader sat unmoved, or, if moved at all, then by a kind of contempt. At 2 o'clock he arose and walked out into the street, where his chair awaited him.

"This is his humor," said my guide. "Play is his passion. It is the one thing that he lives for."

So I had learned all that I wanted to know. It was now quite certain that we were within a very short distance from the end. The lands and houses, the fleet and the business would be sold. What next?

The day after this experience in the life of a rake I paid a visit for the first and only time to St. James' park in the afternoon. It was, I remember, a cold but clear and bright day in January. At the gates stood a crowd of lackeys and fellows waiting for their ladies and stamping on the ground to keep off the cold. Within a goodly company walked briskly up and down. They were the great people of London whom I saw here. While I looked on, admiring the dresses of the ladies and the extravagances of the gentlemen, who seemed to vie with each other in calling attention to themselves by their dress and by their gestures, there passed me, walking alone, a lady whom at first I did not recognize. She started, however, and smartly tapped my hand with her fan. She carried the fan, although it was winter, just as the beaus dangled their canes from their wrists.

"Why," she cried, "it is my sailor! It is surely Jack Pentecrosse!"

Then I recognized the Lady Anastasia.

"And what is Jack Pentecrosse doing in this wicked town? And how is Molly, the countess? Come, Jack, to my house. It is not far from here. I should like a talk with you and to hear the news. And I will give you a dish of tea. Why, I left Lynn in disgrace—did I not? On account of the grand jury of Middlesex? It was that evening when Lord Fylingdale turned upon his enemies."

Her house was not very far from St. James street. As we walked along she discoursed pleasantly in her soft and charming manner, as if she was made happy just by meeting me and as if she had always been thinking about me.

She placed me in a chair before the fire. She sat opposite. She rang the bell and called for tea. Then she began to talk about Lynn and its people.

"Tell me, Jack, about your friend Molly. Is she reconciled to her rank and title yet? I believe that she does not live with her husband."

THE HOME OF SONG.

Sanford said: "Carnie, you're a brick."—Daily Paper.

Shake, Josh Sanford.
You're a brick
Of the richest, rarest clay;
Soldier-garbed such stuff would live
Forever and a day.
Pity tho, that pluck like yours
Wasn't labelled—"glorious wars";
Hadn't fought where shot and shell
Roar their threnodies of hell,
Yet, Josh Sanford, duty calls
Kings in smocks and overalls,
Writes their names imperishable
Even on an old farm well.

Young Josh Sanford,
Sixty feet
Down a hole of treacherous sand,
Where (his merry heart aglow)
You and I would quake to stand;
Digging, diggings, whistling p'raps,
Just like lots of other chaps—
When that awful shiv'ring swell
Caved the sides that groaned and fell
Then Josh Sandford—where were you?
God in heaven only knew.
Swift was death and burial
In that deep sepulchral well.

Dead? Josh Sanford!
Yes, they said—
Like the well pipe, good and deep;
Till a tapping on the pipe
Made a hundred pulses leap—
Made a hundred pulses sing
And a hundred shovels ring;
List! Each tap came like a knell
Mated to a marriage bell,
And Josh Sanford—all cried "save
Dig him from his living grave";
And they dug for your grim cell—
Dug, till sank again the well.

Faith! Josh Sanford—
You shall show
In your soul's extremity
Valor, such as scorns all fear,
Staggers all humanity.
Fight a hundred torturous hours
All death's nameless, hideous powers,
Make men leap to say, "farewell—
Dare the demoniacal—
Hold! Josh Sanford—Saved! Well done—
Carnie, Dunston, Hamilton;
These have wrought a miracle,
Snatched you living from the well.

Shake—Josh Sanford,
You have crowned
With the laurels of your fame
Everything that honor loves
In a truly hallowed name.
Pity, tho', that pluck like yours
Wasn't labelled "glorious wars";
Think what homage you'd compel,
And the grand things possible!
Stay, Josh Sanford—fame and time
Know no struggle more sublime
Than the one that you could tell,
Dauntless hero of the well.

JOSH SANFORD.

Here in northern solitudes,
Sounding shorelands, glooming woods,

Where the pines their dreams rehearse,
Is the home of haunting verse.

Dreams of beauty here inspire
All the summer's radiant fire,

In the gleam of leaf and bird,
Ere the Autumn's voice is heard.

Fluting, soft, her woodland tune
Down the golden afternoon.

Where the seaward ships go down,
By some ancient Norman town;

Where the northern marches lie,
Golden under azure sky;

Where the northern woodland glooms,
Luminous in leafy rooms,

With its ancient sunlit wine,
Under smoke of dusty pine;

Here the soul of silence broods,
Under haunted solitudes;

Here that spirit rare and pure,
Of the muses who endure,

Dreams the Wisdom's quiet eye,
While the phantom years go by.

Where far sunlands shine and drowse
And great leafy, golden boughs,

Swaying, pendulous, within
A sleep diaphanous and thin,

Answer to the drowsy mind
And lolterings of the thoughtful wind

Here in seasons lone and long,
The spirit rare of northern song

Keeps in dreams, remote, apart,
The cadences of her own heart.

His Distinguished Career.

The gentlemen to whom the degree of doctor of philosophy was awarded recently by the University of Toronto have had a distinguished career as under-graduate and graduate students. Mr. R. G. Murison (B.A., '93) and Mr. R. Davidson (B.A., '99) stood in the first-class in Orientals and philosophy until their final year, when they chose Orientals as their specialty, and graduated with high honors in that department. In Knox College they made a remarkable record for broad and accurate scholarship, especially in Oriental and Biblical study. Dr. Murison, who has been lecturer in Orientals in University College since 1897, is already well known as a scholar and investigator. His published researches into the primitive beliefs of the Semitic peoples have attracted attention, and he has written a sketch of the history of Babylonia and Assyria (Edinburgh: T. and T. Clark, 1901), which has met with universal approval. He is at present engaged on a similar sketch of Egypt for the same series.

Dr. Davidson was lecturer in Orientals in Trinity University, Toronto, during last season. As the holder of the traveling scholarship from Knox College he intends to spend a year in study in Europe. Dr. Murison's major subject was Hebrew, his first minor Assyrian, and his second minor modern history. His thesis was "the Serpent in Hebrew literature." Dr. Davidson's major subject was Assyrian, his first minor Hebrew, and his second minor Greek. His thesis was "the Semitic Permansive-Perfect Tense." In all of these subjects the candidates took first-class standing, and their work was of distinct original merit. It may encourage those who are endeavoring to promote post-graduate studies in Toronto to note that although one of these gentlemen has already pursued a course of study in Germany, and the other is about to do the same, and although resident fellowships in Semitic languages are offered by several American universities, both of them preferred to receive their doctor's degree from the hands of the alma mater.

PROSPECTUS.

In presenting the prospectus of the Ashnola Smelter, Limited, its directors only wish to convey to the public the plain facts in connection with the present position of the affairs of the company, and feel that by so doing, they will meet the approval of every one concerned.

ASSETS.

Copper Cliff mineral claim, situated about two miles from the company's smelter site at Ashnola, on which a tunnel has been driven a distance of 51 feet. The face of this tunnel is all in shipping ore, averaging $20.00 per ton in gold, copper and silver. The ore is copper pyrites and lies in a true fissure vein, which is widening at least one inch per foot. The ledge can be traced the entire width of the claim.

The Copper Bluff mineral claim adjoins the Copper Cliff, and therefore has equal advantages except that it is not a true fissure vein, but a large deposit of high grade bornite ore.

The ore from either of these claims can be delivered to our smelter by an aerial tram at a cost that will not exceed five cents per ton. These claims are now being crown granted.

The Ashnola mineral claim is situated about three miles from the company's smelter site. This property has a fair showing of gold and copper ore, assaying $18.00 per ton. There is practically no development work done on this property at present.

These properties were purchased under advice from W. Blakemore, M. E., and their location can be seen on the accompanying map.

The Copper Cliff and Copper Bluff ores are practically self-fluxing, carrying values as per assays as follows: Silver $1.00, gold $2.00, copper 20 per cent., silica 13 per cent., sulphur 15 per cent., iron 26 per cent., lime 24 per cent.

COAL LANDS.

One thousand two hundred and eighty acres of coal lands situated on Trout creek, two and a half miles from Okanagan lake. On this property there is one seam of coal eight feet thick already exposed, from which shipping will begin almost at once. There are also 2,560 acres of coal lands situated on the east side of Okanagan lake, about six miles up Mission creek from the lake shore. There are several small seams outcropping upon this property, from which favorable assays have been obtained. The location of these coal lands can be seen on the accompanying maps.

The above mentioned coal lands are now held by licenses from the government of British Columbia, and all demands are paid on the same for one year. Leases can be obtained for same at a nominal rent of 10 cents per acre for five years if desired, or crown grants can be obtained at any time at a cost of $5.00 per acre and the survey of the said lands. A portion of this land will undoubtedly be subdivided into town lots which will be to the mutual advantage of all concerned.

Samples of coal from the surface of the eight-foot seam mentioned have been submitted to A. McKillop, assayer, of Nelson, and his analysis will be found herein, and shows that it is a first-class steam and domestic coal.

STOCK, ETC.

Twenty-five thouand shares of Similkameen Valley Coal Company, Limited, non-assessable and fully paid up stock, and ten acres of land at Ashnola for the Company's smelter site, have been placed in escrow to be handed over to the Company as a bonus as soon as the smelter is completed.

There are 1,500,000 non-assessable and fully paid up shares of the company in the treasury, to be used for development purposes as required, and $10,000 in cash and to be paid to the company's credit on contracts. All expenses including incorporation have been paid for to date. In fact, there is not a dollar of outstanding liabilities against the company.

RESOURCES.

This company has undoubtedly three distinct sources of revenue. First—from its metaliferous mines. Second—its coal lands. Third— its smelter, which will in all probability be constructed within one year from the organization of this company.

The smelter will be located near the centre of the metaliferous mines of the district, and at the very base of Copper and Kennedy mountains, which are well known to contain vast deposits of gold, copper and silver ores, and within a radius of 12 miles from the smelter site every requisite can be obtained for the smelter. It has been carefully estimated that the ore can be treated at this point for at least $1.00 per ton less than at any other point in British Columbia, owing to the fact that not only is every requisite obtainable for smelting, but both agricultural and horticultural resources are also obtainable within a few miles from the Company's smelter. The company's metaliferous mines have been sufficiently developed to demonstrate the fact that they are very valuable, and from the assays obtained are certainly very high-grade ore, and taking into consideration the fact that this ore is practically self-fluxing and its immediate situation to the smelter it certainly should derive considerable profit from this source.

As can be seen by the accompanying maps, the company's coal lands are most favorably situated, and the company is therefore in a position to compete with any other coal company in the province, and with the assurance of the V. V. & E. railroad the position of the company will be a most favorable one. Its metalliferous mines alone should make the company's stock sell at par within twelve months form date.

ASSAY CERTIFICATE.

I hereby certify that the samples of ore herewith described and assayed for Ashnola smelter gave the following results:

MANAGEMENT.

The present management does not intend to incur any liabilities against the company beyond the cash on hand at any time to pay for same, but will proceed as fast as possible with the development of the property in the best possible advantage, using up-to-date and modern machinery. The employment of qualified and experienced help will be the motto of the management. Under this system the sheriff will never take possession of the company's assets, the stock will always have a value.

METHOD OF SELLING STOCK.

By resolution of the board of directors the first 100,000 shares are to be sold at 5 cents per share and are non-assessable and fully paid-up, or will be sold on calls of 2 1-2 cents per month if required, with a non-forfeiture clause, except the cancellation of the expired option, when stock will be issued for the amount of cash received by the company. The second 100,000 will be issued at 10 cents, the third 100,000 at 15 cents, the fourth 100,000 at 25 cents. It is expected that this amount will be sufficient for development and will put the company's coal mines on a paying basis. Stock will then be advanced according to progress and as funds are required.

It will be noted that no alluring statements are being made on behalf of this company, and that each officer and director has paid in full for their stocks the same as any other member, as can be seen by the books of the company.

The following is a partial list of the promoters of the company:

BABY'S OWN TABLETS.

For Weak and Sickly Children During the Hot Weather.

Thousands of children die during the hot weather months, because summer complaint and stomach troubles come suddenly and mothers do not have the means at hand to promptly check and cure them. In homes where Baby's Own Tablets are used these precious little lives can be saved, and no home where there are infants and young children should be without them.

Baby's Own Tablets will promptly cute all stomach and bowel troubles, and are a great relief to teething children. The tablets are sold under a positive guarantee that they contain neither opiate nor harmful drug. Crushed to a powder they can be given with absolute safety to a new born babe. Mrs. R. Ferguson, 105 Mansfield street, Montreal, says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets and have found them the best medicine I have ever given my children. My baby has always been small and delicate and suffered so much last summer with his teeth that I did not think he would live. Then he was attacked with dysentery, a feverish skin and cough. As the doctor's medicine did not help him, I sent for Baby's Own Tablets and they did him a wonderful amount of good, and he is now getting along splendidly. I gladly give my experience for the benefit of other mothers." If your druggist does not keep these Tablets they will be sent by mail post paid at 25 cents a box by writing direct to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., or Schenectady, N. Y.

A thing or two, I trow!
Now clips she with her scissors
And wields the silken thread,
While visions of her triumph
Are racing through her head,
And on her finger nimble
She fits the festive thimble,
A rosy, blushing symbol
Of youth to conquer sped.

Back, all ye weighty questions
And problems of the day!
We have no time for you now,
No matter what you weigh!
Let business complications
And great affairs of state
Stand back; we're near commencement,
And other things can wait!
Let armies vie with armies,
Let nations fall or rise,
But for these lesser matters
We have no ears nor eyes;
We're deep in admiration
Of all this preparation
For early graduation
And incident surprise.

Stand still, ye whirling planets,

Ye deem yourselves important,
But stand ye, none the less;
You're hardly worth a mention!
We rivet our attention

MARKETS.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

WHEAT—The wheat markets during the past week have continued to decline daily, with scarcely the least sign of reaction. Crop weather everywhere has been favorable, and the volume of trade extremely light. The consequence is that in the American speculative markets there has only been one way to the course of prices and that has been downward.

If anything should happen to depreciate the present fine prospect for the spring wheat crop a sharp advance in prices would readily take place. At the stage which the spring wheat has arrived, it would scarcely be possible under the most favorable conditions to improve the prospects further, so that any change in weather conditions would probably be for the worse, and much may happen between now and the time when the crop will all be safely gathered. The demand from Europe for wheat has been very quiet for some time, but in the last few days a good deal of export business is reported from the seaboard. Broomhall reports bad harvest weather this week in the United Kingdom, and this with small stocks of old wheat everywhere, and low prices on this side for future delivery easily leads to demand which again may lead to a reaction in the price of futures.

At Liverpool on Friday the price foe No. 1 northern spring wheat was 6s 1½d.

The market for Manitoba wheat continues firm, but the amount of business is small. Spot wheat is scarce. There are only three shippers in the market, but they readily take all the wheat they can get for immediate delivery, in store, Fort William. Prices have eased off a little under the effect of the decline in the American markets, and at the close last week prices were: No. 1 hard, 75½c; 1 northern, 73½c; 2 northern, 71½c in store Fort William, spot or delivery first half August.

FLOUR—Demand is light and the market is unchanged as follows: Ogilvie's Hungarian, $2.05 per sack of 98 lbs.; Glenora Patent, $1.90; Alberta, $1.75; Manitoba, $1.60; XXXX, $1.25.

MILLFEED — Bran is firm and worth $15 per ton in bulk. Shorts firm at $17 per ton in bulk, delivered, subject to usual trade discounts.

GROUND FEED—We quote: Oat chop, per ton, $28; barley chop, $24; mixed barley and oats, $26; chop screenings, $15.50; oil cake, $30.

OATS—The market is weak and lower, owing to near approach of harvest. No. 2 white oats are offering at 40 and 40½c, in store, Fort William. Feed grades are worth 37 to 38c per bushel at Winnipeg.

BARLEY—All offerings are now being taken for feed at 40c per bushel. The movement is very light.

SPELTZ—Dealers are doing a little business in speltz for feeding purposes at 50c per bushel of 50lbs.

HAY—Demand is fair and the market steady at $7 to $8 per ton for carlots on track here for fresh baled.

POULTRY—Spring chickens, 40 to 45c per pair, alive; fowl, 70 to 75c; ducks and geese, 9c per pound; turkeys, 11c, live weight.

BUTTER — Creamery—The demand for creamery butter is not so strong as to justify the advance in prices which some creamery managers hoped for in August. The make is now at high water mark and shipments regular at steady prices. We quote 16½ to 17c per pound f.o.b. at factory points.

BUTTER—Dairy—Receipts are moderately large, and the market is steady. Considerable quantities are paying 13c per pound for choicest dairy in tubs or boxes, and from that figure the market ranges down to 10c per pound for low grades, all commission basis.

CHEESE—The market is steady and purchases have been made at 8½c per pound. The range or prices is from 8½c to 9c per pound delivered here.

EGGS—Fresh case eggs are worth 12½c per dozen delivered in Winnipeg.

DRESSED MEATS—The market for beef is easy, and the price ranges from 7 to 7½c; veal, 8 to 9c. Mutton is steady at 8½c. Spring lambs are selling at 12½c per pound. Hogs, 7½ to 8c per pound.

HIDES—No. 1 city hides, 6½c; No. 2, 5½; No. 3, 4½c. Kips and calf the same price as hides; deakins, 25 to 40c; slunks, 10 to 15c; horsehides, 50c to $1.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE—The export movement is becoming larger and quite a few cattle have been handled this week. Their condition is good. Choice export steers from the western ranges are worth 4½c per pound off cars at Winnipeg; butchers' cattle, 3½ to 4c. Stockers are not moving to any extent.

SHEEP—Receipts are moderate and prices range from 4 to 4½c per pound, off cars, Winnipeg. Lambs are worth 3½ to 4c.

HOGS—Live hogs are coming in freely, and the market is easy at 6½c off cars here.

MILCH COWS—Cows are scarce. Good milkers readily bring $45 in this market, the range being from $35 to $45 each.

HORSES—There is a good demand for work horses, and an active trade is doing in these. Farmers are buying freely for fall work. Driving horses are also in good demand.

Women are naturally tender-hearted. No woman ever deliberately stepped on a mouse.

People are so anxious to see something for nothing that they will run a couple of miles to see a little shed burn down.

GRAVEL CURED.

REMARKABLE CASE OF THIS PAINFUL DISEASE.

Reuben Draper, of Bristol, Que., Who Was a Victim Finds Relief and a Permanent Cure—He Tells of His Sufferings and How He Left His Troubles Behind.

Bristol, Que., August 11.—(Special) No disease can cause more severe and dreadful pain than Gravel. Reuben Draper, of this place, was taken ill with this awful trouble about five years ago. He was cured and so many have asked him how it was done that he has decided to give the whole story for publication:

"About five years ago I was taken ill with Gravel. I suffered great pain so I sent for a doctor. He gave me some medicine and came to see me twice afterwards, but my disease was not gone, and in a short time I had another very bad attack.

"This time I sent for another doctor, with about the same results, only I was getting weaker all the time.

"Then a man advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills, for he said they had cured his mother. I thought I would try them and bought a box.

"Just one week after I began the treatment I passed a stone as large as a small bean, and four days later another about the size of a grain of barley—this gave me great relief, and I commenced to feel better and to gain strength right away.

"That was five years ago, and I have not had any trouble in that way since. I have the stones in a small bottle and anyone can see them who wishes. Dodd's Kidney Pills certainly saved my life."

The story of Mr. Draper will be good news to many sufferers who may not have known that Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure Gravel and Stone in the Bladder.

What has cured this gentlemen and hundreds of other very bad cases should cure anyone, and those who may be afflicted as Mrl Draper was should try Dodd's Kidney Pills.

The consumption of tea in the United Kingdom exceeds that of all other European countries and the United States put together. During the 17 years from 1884 to 1900 it has risen from 175 million lbs. to 250 millions, an increase of 43 per cent.

Geraniums bloom most satisfactorily when grown in comparatively small pots and soil which is termed rich, but is not rank with excessive manure.

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer diseases who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentry Cordial, the medicine that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly and thoroughly subdues the pain and disease.

In some parts of South Africa much damage is done by baboons, which go in large marauding parties to rob gardens.

THE BRIGHTEST FLOWERS must fade, but young lives endangered by severe coughs and colds may be preserved by Dr. Thomas. Eclectric Oil. Croup, whooping cough, bronchitis, in short all affections of the throat and lungs, are relieved by this sterling preparation, which also remedies rheumatic pains, sores, bruises, piles, kidney difficulty, and is most economic.

A New York paper has been investigating the Four Hundred, and prints a number of receipted bills of the last century showing that a Stuyvesant sold handkerchiefs; a Depeyster, beans; a Rhinelandee, hats; a Brevoort, pewter spoons; a Beekman, molasses; and a Roosevelt, lampblack.

It is remarkable that the United States, which began its little war some time before the British, is still hammering away in the Philippines. The old country is not so slow as some "dreffle smart" people suppose. —Scottish American.

Chronic Derangements of the Stomach, Liver and Blood are speedily removed by the active principle of the ingredients entering into the composition of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. These pills act specifically on the deranged organs, stimulating to action the dormant energies of the system, thereby removing disease and renewing life and vitality to the afflicted. In this lies the great secret of the popularity of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills.

A treatment highly recommended by a scientific magazine for poisoning from ivy is to wet a slice of bread with water, dust it with common washing soda and apply it to eruption, keeping the bread wet from the outside. Half an hour of this treatment is said to be a sure cure.

A pessimist is a man who believes that every chestnut has a worm in it.

There never was, and never will be, a universal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir—the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated diseases rooted in the system of the patient—what would relieve one ill in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtainable in a sound, unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual and judicious use the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength by the influence which Quinine exerts on nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life is a disease, and, by tranquilizing the nerves disposes to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses throughout the veins, strengthening the healthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame, and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance—result, improved appetite. Northrop & Lyman, of Toronto, have given to the public their superior Quinine Wine at the usual rate, and, gauged by the opinion of scientists, this wine approaches nearest perfection of any in the market. All druggists sell it.

Crystalized nitrogen is one of the greatest chemical curiosities. By cooling nitrogen gas down to 367 degrees below the freezing point, and then allowing it to expand solid snowlike crystals are formed.

As Parmelee's Vegetable Pills contain Mandrake and Dandelion, they cure Liver and Kidney complaints with unerring certainty. They also contain Roots and Herbs which have specific virtues truly wonderful in their action on the stomach and bowels. Mr. E. A. Cairncross, Shakespeare, writes: "I consider Parmelee's Pills an excellent remedy for Biliousness and Derangement of the Liver, having used them myself for some time."

Beale, Hutchison & Elwell are acknowledged to be the leading insurance agents of the district. They are also the largest advertisers in their line. Liberal and judicious advertising has built up their business and they realize it.

Labor Day was observed and celebrated by thousands of workingmen throughout the United States and Canada. In fact the day was more closely observed than ever before. In many places the unions turned out in their colors and a favorable impression was created everywhere.

South East Kootenay is rapidly becoming the land of monopolies and combines. Only within the past two weeks several of the sawmill owners have formed a trust, Beale, Hutchison & Elwell are monopolizing the insurance business, and Fred Simpson is dotting the map with newspaper plants.

All voters lists were cancelled on September 1st and the new list of voters commenced. On Monday, the 3rd day of November next, the Court of Revision will sit when the names of all qualified persons who have applied on the proper forms, will be put on the list of voters entitled to vote at any Provincial election, which may come on before many months.

An Anaconda, Mont., lawyer is suing the Northern Pacific railway company for damages for not running its trains on time. The lawyer purchased a ticket, and the train schedule showed that he would reach his destination at a certain hour. But he did not reach there until four hours later, which to him was a grievance too deep to bear. Lucky he does not live on the Crow's Nest line.
