NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Says an exchange: Business in the Court of Appeals in the state of New York is said to be three years behind time. And there are Canadians who talk of seceding because there is a delay in the courts of a month or two. Assimilation would not be much improvement in this respect.

It pays a man to keep himself, no matter what his profession or business, by the public. His very name becomes in time a copyright in value. It pays, also, to have one's name in the best and most influential papers. A man who does not not keep himself as well as his business advertised will drop out of sight.—Ex.

The great American people consumed 70,000,000 gallons of whiskey last year and had 93,000,000 gallons left. The also got away with 24,680,219 barrels of beer. This confirms the reports of the chief American papers, in all the great towns, and explains the number and heinousness of the crimes which stain the calendars of the police courts.—Dominion Illustrated.

Says an exchange: It is not often that a fire is put out with wine. This was done last week at Kreuzmach on the occasion of a fire which broke out at night in the house of a large wine merchant, soon enveloping the whole building. Some sixty hogsheads of wine in the store could not only not be saved, but burst, and their contents ran into the ditch in the garden behind the house. Here the firemen placed their engines, with which they poured streams of wine upon a burning building, and succeeded in getting the fire under control. The fumes of the wine were so strong that the firemen had to be repeatedly relieved.

It is to be supposed, says an exchange, that in the ordinary course of events there will continue to be "incidents" in the life of Lord Sackville. The latest is his return to his home, and a London correspondent writes: "Lord Sackville's return to his home in Kent gives great pleasure to the folk of Stevenoaks. He has given the inhabitants the Christmas box which perhaps they would most desire to receive. He has announced a reopening of Knole House upon one day a week to the public. Thus one of the most interesting historic mansions in England has had taken away from it the wall of selfishness which made it for a time the possession of only a single man. Lord Sackville has acted according to the best traditions of the English nobility."

The Pall Mall Gazette says of Sir Robert Morier, whom the German press is accusing of having sent notice of the movements of German troops to the French government: "He was almost the only Englishman who understood the Schleswig-Holstein question, and when the war of 1870 broke out there was no German in all the fatherland who was more enthusiastic than he in the cause of German unity. When our military authorities and royalists here in London were calculating that the French would beat the Prussians, Sir Robert Morier astonished them not a little by predicting, with the confidence born of positive knowledge, that the Germans would be at the gates of Paris before October, and that all the south Germans would throw in their lot with Prussia. Few believed the fervent diplomat, but events justified his warnings to the letter. To imagine that he would send messages as to the movements of German armies surreptitiously to Marshal Bazaine is a notion too utterly fantastic to be credited by any but an addlepate. The whole man was passionately enlisted on the German side."

The Boston Herald says: We go on to increase in numbers and in wealth, but the republic is to receive, perhaps, its severest test in the opening years of the century upon which we are entering in adapting these numbers and wealth to its system. There is a large unintelligent vote at the North, as well as the South of the country. If the one is suppressed by force, or fraudulently deprived of representation, the other is not without subjection to another influence hardly less objectionable. The wealth of the country comes in here as its danger. The nation has just seen how easily wealth may be employed to affect a national election. A serious question is as to whether this is the beginning of a practice that is to increase, and, if so, if our government is strong enough to bear the strain thus put upon it. The final problem to confront the people in the second century of the republic is, therefore, that involved in the preservation of sound and judicious government while the suffrage is so widely shared by unintelligent people and the power of money is so potent in it. It is a serious one.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Advices from Hayti state that Gen. Paul, of Legitime's forces, has deserted with his army of 3,000 men and joined the army of Hippolyte outside of Port au Prince.

Richmond Council.

Council met in the town hall on Saturday, Jan. 5th. Present, Thos. Kidd, reeve, and Couns. Reid, Quigley, Youdall and Kilgour. Communications were read as follows: 1. From W. S. Gore, surveyor-general, stating that detailed specifications for bridges were being prepared, and tenders for construction would be called for as soon as specifications were completed; 2. From J. McMullen, president of the San Francisco Bridge Co., stating that he intended to tender for the construction of the Bridges, and at the same time strongly urged the council to use its influence with the government to induce them to adopt the plans prepared by the S. F. Bridge Co., being known as "Pratt's Truss" combination bridge, nearly as strong as an all iron bridge and very durable. Mr. McMullen further stated that he felt quite certain that if the bridges were built after the other plans prepared they would certainly be carried away by the ice. 3. From E. S. Jenns, on behalf of the Garypie estate, accepting the offer of the council to pay for the construction of a dyke outside of the present one, with the view of using the present dyke for a road leading to the bridge from Sea island to the mainland. 4. From Rev. S. J. Thompson, asking permission to construct a boat-house alongside the piling at the outlet near the town hall; granted, and the other communications filed.

The board of works reported the following contracts completed, viz: B. Whiteside, flood box and flume at Green's slough, road No. 4, and two bridges over ditches on road No. 9; A. H. Wescott, flood gate and two flumes on road No. 4; J. Brodwik, flood gate on road No. 9 at McDonald's slough; Tuck Yuen's contract on road No. 1, 162 chains at $5 per chain; Lam Lee, 60 chains on road No. 4; Won Lee, on town hall road, and road No. 7, $13; Ah Len's contract advancing on road No. 4.

The following contracts were reported as let, but not completed: A. H. Wescott, at south end of road No. 1, flood gate and flume, 150 feet, at $1 per foot; J. Brodwik, extention of road No. 9, eastward through the timber at McDonald's slough, at $3.25 per rod, distance about 20 chains. Reports adopted.

The committee appointed to determine the amounts expended in the different wards reported the total amount expended since incorporation not including amounts paid under "Loan By-Law, 1888," $25,675.23. Amount placed under the head of general expenses, as municipal hall, salaries, printing, &c. $4,226.54; thus leaving a balance of $21,448.69 expended in the different wards, as follows: Ward A, $3,765.43; ward B, $8,288.50; ward C, $9,394.76.

By taking the collector's rolls for 1884 and 1888, and comparing the revenue therefrom on real estate, ward A would be entitled to $4,120.83, wards B and C each $8,663.68. The expenditure would therefore be, in ward A, $355 below its share, in ward B $376, and in ward C $731 in excess of their shares. Included in the above amounts is $4,207.90, paid by the provincial government for public works, by vouchers. Under the loan by-law to date there has been spent in ward A, $450.50; in ward B, $871.10; in ward C, $1,611.38. All the items in detail of the foregoing expenditures were appended to the report. The committee recommended that the council should instruct the clerk to procure a statement of governments moneys moneys paid by voucher in this municipality from the department in Victoria.

The committee also recommended that in future the clerk should open two accounts for each ward, one for amounts expended out of the general revenue, and the other the amounts expended from the proceeds of the "Loan By-Law." (Signed,) Thos. Kidd, H. Youdall.

The report was adopted and the clerk instructed to carry out the recommendations.

The "Municipal Regulations By-Law, 1889," was reconsidered, signed and sealed.

The following bills were ordered paid: R. Whiteside, $99.25; Wescott, $70.50; Brunette Saw Mill, $279.98; Brodwik, $70; Tuck Yuen, $710; Lam Lee, $100; Lee Won, $13; Ah Len, $50; J. Cunningham, $9; R. C. P. M. Co., $19.74; B. C. Insurance Co., $13.50; O. D. Sweet, 1887, $72.00; W. Lord, $2.25; J. Mellis, $2.05; Thos. Kidd, committee, $10; H. Youdall, do., $10; O. D. Sweet, do., $10; Thos. Kidd, indemnity, $25; J. Quigley, do., $25; W. Beckman, do., $25; D. Reid, do., $25; H. Youdall, do., $25; Alex. Kilgour, do., $25; O. D. Sweet, clerk's salary 1888, $200. Council then adjourned.

The immediate motive of the attack of a colored porter named Chandler on J. A. Sheffield, of Montreal, supt. of the palace, dinning and sleeping car departments of the C. P. R., is believed to be disappointment on the part of Chandler in not obtaining promotion, which fact he seems to have believed was due to the action of Sheffield. During the afternoon Chandler was in the company's office and said to two colored porters that he had some one to kill. After leaving them he went to a pawnshop and secured a revolver. At 6 o'clock he proceeded to the station, where he met Sheffield on the platform and an altercation followed. Chandler was being controlled by Constable Ferguson and an employee named Barret, when he pulled out a revolver and fired the ball penetrating the breast in the region of the heart. Chandler, who is a powerful, tall man of 35, was removed to the police station, expressing no regret for the act.

The Medicine for Liver and Kidney Complaint.—Mr. Victor Auger, Ottawa, writes: "I take great pleasure in recommending to the general public Parmelee's Pills, as a cure for Liver and Kidney Complaint. I have doctored for the last three years with leading physicians, and have taken many medicines which were recommended to me without relief, but after taking eight of Parmelee's Pills I was quite relieved, and now I feel as free from the disease as before I was troubled."

The C. P. The resolution passed by the council last night, at their last meeting, tendering the thanks of the board to his worship Mayor Dickinson for the able and impartial manner in which he has presided over the council during the year, is an appropriate mark of recognition. Mr. Dickinson, as mayor, has served the city long and faithfully, and has assisted in inaugurating some of the most important undertakings and in shaping some of the most momentous events in its history. In this connection, we shall just mention the C. P. R. branch and the Westminster Southern. Mayor Dickinson's share in the former is well known: the latter, during his term of office, and owing not a little to his personal efforts and influence, has been inaugurated and, not without trouble, assured. Mayor Dickinson, and the retiring council as a whole, may take to themselves, from the result of the elections yesterday, a public expression of approval for their conduct in regard to Southern Railway matters at least. Mayor Dickinson retires to a well-earned rest from public service with the highest regards and best wishes of his fellow citizens, who are also satisfied that his patriotic efforts in the city's interests will not cease with his retirement from the chief magistrate's chair.

The battle is over, and victory, undimmed and complete, perches upon the banners of progress. A "courageous and lusty public opinion" has "played its club" with the result we predicted on Friday. Now that the smoke and turmoil of the well fought field have cleared away, it will be both interesting and instructive to examine more particularly into the result, its significance, the causes that led up to it, and the consequences that may be expected to follow. It will be seen, in the first place, that the "straight ticket"—what has been denominated by some the "railway ticket"—has been returned. The contest throughout has been essentially one of progress, in sentiment and method, versus its counter in both. But the railway question has been pre-eminently the battle ground—the chief issue, as it were. Here the heavy battalions of the two opposing forces met and trampled the earth in the tread of battle; the wings were engaged in sweeping the whole field of modern progress in municipal matters. As we have said before, the victory was complete. We do not intend to be understood as affirming that, out of the sixteen candidates for aldermen, all except the nine elected were fighting in the anti-progress ranks, nor even to say that outside of "the ticket" there were not just as good, and, perhaps, better, individual candidates than some of those elected in "the ticket." But the electors recognized—and it is to the credit of their intelligence and shrewdness that they did so, and to their patriotism that they acted accordingly—that "the ticket" represented and embodied the spirit and party of progress, generally, and, on the Southern Railway question, particularly, was "solid" without doubt; and herein lies at once the significance of the result and the main cause which produces it. Our citizens are to be congratulated upon the spirit which they have shown in this contest, and upon the creditable manner in which they have acquitted themselves. By their verdict at the polls yesterday, crowning as it does in a most fitting, consistent and conclusive manner the various public expressions of the last six months on railway matters and questions of general progress, the electors—the citizens—of Westminster not only reiterate that the Southern Railway is a citizens' affair, and the honest and earnest promoters of that and other progressive measures the city's best friends, but proclaim, in effect to the outside, world that Westminster has got beyond the village stage, that her citizens are capable of overlooking petty personal predilections and prejudices, and clique affiliations, and pulling together as one man for the general welfare, no obstacles will be suffered to obstruct the city's progress. The manner in which the late civic contest was conducted, the interest and earnestness sustained throughout, and the result, crowning all, mark a very clearly defined epoch in the city's history—such a series of events, such a consummation, would have been impossible a few years ago—and presage a most hopeful future. An avowedly progressive mayor and set of aldermen have been elected, as such. The importance of this fact may be emphasized; for, with a progressive council, having the confidence and support of a progressive community, we may naturally expect the surest and most satisfactory progress in the future, in every respect. It is to be hoped that all, including those who have had honest differences in the past, may co-operate—which we believe they will—toward this worthy end. In unity is strength.

The true inwardness of the Windsor, Ont., would-be annexationist mayor incident is described as follows: Sol White, the Frenchman with an English name, who is married to a Yankee wife, and professes to believe in annexation, has met with a sharp rebuff. He is personally quite popular among his acquaintances. Quite naturally, he aspired to be mayor of his town. Windsor, Ont., and in the recent municipal election offered himself as a candidate for that position. But some over-zealous Grit correspondent, in order to make what he supposed was a point in favor of annexation, telegraphed the fact of Sol's candidature to the Yankee newspapers, accompanied with the statement that he was running as an annexationist. Of course this soon found its way back to Windsor, and Mr. White's opponents (of which there were three) made haste to use it. Mr. White came forward with an emphatic denial, declaring that his candidature had nothing to do with annexation, and that whatever his opinions on that or any other subject, the issues in the then pending contest were purely local. But notwithstanding this disclaimer the cry defeated him. He was snowed under—Mr. Twomey, the Conservative candidate, being elected. Very little comfort or encouragement can be extracted from the above incident for annexationists or their sympathizers on either side of the line.

A little light has been let in upon the Morier squabble, says an exchange. The charge made, as everyone remembers, was that while Sir R. D. Morier, at present British ambassador at St. Petersburg, was chargé d' affaires at Darmstadt in 1870 he notified Marshall Bazaine, then defending Metz, of the advance of the Germans. Although a denial of this statement by Bazaine himself was forwarded to Count Bismarck by Sir Robert Morier with a request that the semi-official papers in Berlin which had been giving prominence to the report should give equal attention to the denial. The count declined to take any steps in the matter, and Sir Robert, in order to set himself right, had to publish the whole correspondence. Prince Bismarck having, it is said, privately given explanations to the British authorities regretting the attacks of the German papers, the incident has been sinking out of sight. It must have puzzled the ordinary reader a great deal to know why the German papers should have been reviving the trouble—for the charge was made before—and pursuing the theme with so much bitterness lately. Perhaps the latest report from Berlin in reference to the affair will supply some of the needed information on this somewhat mysterious incident. The news is that among the papers of Professor Geffcken letters to him from Sir Robert Morier were found urging the publication of Emperor Frederick's diaries. Although the release of Professor Geffcken indicates a desire on the part of the German government to let the matter drop, no doubt it still continues to rankle in the mind of the chancellor, and when the Geffcken papers were seized Sir R. Morier's correspondence—if the lettters alluded to were really discovered there—must have aroused in official circles that feeling which the Berlin press were not backward in expressing. This explanation, at least, must serve till more definite information is obtainable.

THE ROCK ON WHICH MANY a constitution goes to pieces is Dyspepsia. The loss of vigor which this disease involves, the maladies which accompany it, or which are aggravated by it, the mental despondency which it entails, are terribly exhaustive of vital stamina. Its true specific is Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, which likewise overcomes bilious maladies, female ailments, and those coupled with impurity of the blood.

THE OLD ROCKING CHAIR.

My grandmother sat in the old rocking chair
(But she was not my grandmother then),
And her pert little face was bewitchingly fair
As she laughed a defiance to men!
Her sunbonnet fluttered like bird on its string,
Her hair wandered free on the breeze;
And gayly I wken did my grandmother sing
Underneath those old gnarl'd apple trees.

My grandfather rode through the white orchard gate,
And tethered his roan to a tree;
He'd a well-powder'd wig on his silly young pate,
And high-tassel'd boots to his knee.
From the pink apple blossoms that over him hung,
He brush'd off the dew with his hat;
Till he came to the place where the rocking chair swung,
And my merry young grandmother sat.

The kingcup and daisy bloomed round in their pride,
And bees of their sweetness did sip;
But my grandfather blush'd and my grandfather sigh'd,
As he flick'd off their heads with his whip;
My granny she hummed her a cunning old song—
"Faint heart never won ladye fair!"
So he wooed and he prayed, and before very long
There sat two in that old rocking chair!

A LESSON TO LOVERS.

Dr. Newberry Fails to Follow His Own Excellent Advice.

"I think from all I have read and heard," said young Dr. Newberry, "the great bane of the happiness of lovers, whether engaged or married, is a lack of perfect frankness and confidence between them. Should any thing arise to excite doubt in the mind of either party, an explanation should be at once sought and given, and thus frequently much trouble and unhappiness may be avoided."

"I perfectly agree with you," responded Josie Chase, looking up brightly. "And so there will never be any danger of our misunderstanding each other, will there!"

"I hope not, darling, he replied.

And then there was some little ecstatic demonstration, such as youthful lovers are privileged to indulge in when alone.

They had been but three days engaged, and had known each other not quite three months—only since the young doctor had come to Woodleigh to commence practice.

Josie was the belle of the town, and it had not been without a struggle that the young doctor had won her in face of richer and, as some people considered, more desirable suitors.

She was very pretty and clever, and full of warm-hearted and generous impulses, and also, if the doctor's landlady was to be credited, somewhat fond of having her own way.

"Seeing she's an only child," said Mrs. Larrimer, who had five grown daughters of her own, "she's well nigh spoiled to death. Her ma lets her have her own way, and though her pa sometimes worries about her odd doings, she generally manages to bring him around in the end.

"She's such a flirt!" said Miss Blossom Larrimer, who, though the eldest of the cluster of five sisters, still languished ungathered upon the parent stem. "Why, I couldn't tell the men she has led on to propose and then discarded. It's dreadfully heartless and cruel!" she added, with a sympathetic sigh.

"Oh, you had better leave the doctor to find out all that for himself!" giggled Miss Gay, the youngest of the five. "Only, doctor, you mustn't blame us for letting you be caught in a man trap. We've warned you. He, he!"

"The last one," said Mrs. Larrimer, solemnly, "was that wild young fellow, Jack Ripley, whom they turned out of Rattlepan College for white-washing the president's horse and other lawless doings. He used to visit Miss Josephine while he was here at the college about two years ago, and just before you came to Woodleigh he was back again and the two were thicker than ever. Some folks thought it would be a match, but her pa interfered and sent him off. I must say she changes mighty easy from one to another. I'd be sorry to have one of my girls act like that!"

These accounts at first set the doctor to thinking a little; but he was not to be frightened from his wooing, and in his happiness as an accepted lover he forgot all the warnings and croakings of this Larrimer family.

He knew that his Josie was a little coquettish—a little vain it might be—as what pretty woman is not! But that she was either heartless or fickle he would not believe.

And it was not until further confidential revelations from the indefatigable Mrs. Larrimer that an uneasy feeling of doubt and perplexity began to take possession of his mind.

"Ahem!" said that lady, as she handed him a second cup of tea, when one evening he had come in rather late from a professional call. "So Mr. Jack Ripley is back again in Woodleigh. What do you think of him, Dr. Newberry!"

"I have not had the pleasure of meeting him."

"No! Dear me, that seems strange when—when you are both so much at the Chases'. He was there yesterday and again this morning and this evening. As they live nearly opposite us, some of us couldn't help seeing him going in and out. But of course you have heard Miss Josie mention him!"

No, the doctor had not heard any one mention Mr. Jack Ripley. And he thought it rather strange that if that gentleman had really come again a-wooing Miss Josephine Chase, she should have permitted him to pay her these visits—she who was his affianced wife.

As usual, when he was not professionally engaged, he went after tea to see Josie. It was a warm moonlight summer night; the parlor was unoccupied and close, and the doctor, while waiting for his betrothed, took his seat at a side window—a window which opened upon the pretty garden, and through which came a soft, refreshing breeze, laden with the perfume of roses.

In fact, just beneath this window was what Josie called her rose arbor—a trellis covered with a running rose bush, where only last night he had sat with her in the moonlight and talked over their plans of future happiness.

He had noticed at the time that she appeared a little absent and disinclined to talk. Could it have been on account of this visit of Mr. Jack Ripley? And now, as the thought occurred, he became aware of low voices in the arbor. Before he could rise and move away these words, in Josie's voice, slightly raised, came distinctly to his ear:

"I tell you, Jack, no one suspects us. But you come too often to the house. You must keep away, and this must be your last visit before—"

Her voice sank and the rest was inaudible. But a reply came in a man's tones—low and tender and pleading.

"You are sure that you will not fail me at the last—that I may trust implicitly to your promise!"

Then more murmurs—but only broken sentences came to the ear of the unconsciously spell-bound listener.

"What would the doctor say if he knew of this!"

"Why, I think he would not exactly approve," came in Josie's laughing voice; "but so long as I am unmarried I have a right to consult my own inclinations. As to papa, he will be angry with us, of course, but only for a time. You will see him with his benevolent face glowing with a smile of satisfaction, while he spreads out his dear pudgy hands and says: 'Bless you, my children.'"

And then they both laughed.

Just then a servant's voice was heard:

"Miss Josie! You're wanted in the parlor, miss."

There was a sudden rustling of the roses as the girl sprang up.

"Remember, Jack, to-morrow evening at eight precisely. Can you see the dress I have on—brown over a striped underskirt? Well, it will be this dress and a thick brown veil. And you must be standing exactly by that poplar tree I showed you. Good bye! You had better leave by the garden gate instead of going into the house."

Then the doctor regained sufficient presence of mind to move away and seat himself as far as possible from the open window.

Josie came in flushed, excited, and, despite her evident effort to appear as usual, shy and constrained.

The doctor did not remain long. He felt too shocked and wounded to know what course to pursue in this sudden and unexpected state of things.

He would go home and think it over. And the result of his thinking was that he concluded to say nothing to Josephine just now but to watch her movements the next evening and find out something more definite by which to shape his course.

It was a little past seven o'clock the next evening when, watching from his office window, he saw Josephine trip lightly down the steps of her father's house, attired in the brown and striped dress, and a little hat, around which was tied a brown vail.

He saw her face before she pulled the folds of the vail close, and even caught her glance as she looked shyly over towards his office, as if fearful of being seen by him. Then she walked on very fast, while he followed at a safe distance.

She went first to a house in which he knew a sister of her father resided—Miss Almeria Chase—a well-to-do maiden lady whose prink and severe aspect he had never liked.

Here she remained about half an hour, then reappeared, walking hurriedly as before and taking her way, not homeward, but towards the suburbs of the town.

Entering a sort of lane or narrow road, with a thick hedge on one side, she came in sight of a poplar tree at a turn of the lane. Here a man was standing—a tall, handsome young fellow—who, on seeing her, came hastily forward and received her, apparently half fainting, in his arms.

At the same moment he made a signal, and a carriage, until now hidden by the turn of the lane, came up.

The two hurriedly entered it, and they drove away at a rapid pace. They were clearly going to catch the north-bound train at the nearest station.

The doctor, although he now understood the plan, made no motion or attempt to oppose it.

"If she prefers him to me, let her go," he said and, in forlorn wretchedness and bitterness of soul, returned to his office.

The Chase house opposite was shut up and the windows closed, as though its life and light had forever departed.

Did the parents know as yet what had happened! Should he break it to them—more gently, perhaps, than others would do, and in their woe find some soothing for his own.

He walked slowly up the front steps to the porch, and there lingered. He could not find it in his heart to enter the house where her presence was no longer, and it was with an effort that he gave the bell knob a pull which seemed like the wrenchings of his own heart strings.

The door was instantly opened, and turning he beheld Josie standing sullenly before him.

"I have been expecting you for more than an hour," she said. "But," catching sight of his pale and startled face, "what is the matter! Are you ill?"

"No; but I—I don't understand. I did not expect to see you. I thought you had gone away."

"Gone away!"

"Yes—with Jack Ripley," he said, sternly.

And Josie, to his surprise, broke into a laugh.

Then, changing, she suddenly became very grave and dignified.

"How could you have had such a thought of me, Charlie?"

"Josie, was it you whom I saw leave the house about seven o'clock this evening, wearing a brown dress and vail?"

"Yes, certainly!"

"And you met a gentleman in the poplar lane—"

"No, no!" she interrupted, again laughing. "That was my cousin, May Harding—Aunt Almeria's niece. We are of the same size and exchanged dresses in order to deceive aunt's watchful eyes. But come in and let me tell you all about it. I could not before, being bound to secrecy."

And then she told him how Jack and May had for years loved each other and been kept apart by Miss Chase, who had taken charge of May when a child, and been to her a sort of domestic tyrant.

Whenever Jack was in town, Miss Chase kept a double watch upon the poor girl, and it was only by the scheme which had been so successful that May was enabled to elude her argus eye and get safely away with her lover.

"Papa had always been in favor of the match, but for peace's sake did not like to interfere with his sister Almeria.

"He will scold a little when he finds out my part in it," she said, "but will be delighted all the same that May is happy at last. No one could ever say a word against Jack except that he was a little wild and mischievous at college; but he has sobered now, and just settled down to the practice of law. And as to whether Dr. Newberry will blame—"

She paused, and looked up half archly, half inquiringly into his face.

"No, darling—not now," he answered; "although you have caused me the most miserable hours of my life."

"Charlie," she said, softly, as she allowed him to draw her gently towards him, "if you had practiced your own theory and sought an explanation of what appeared to you so suspicious, you would have been spared those miserable hours."

"Yes, darling, it was my fault. But this may serve us both for a lesson to begin with."—Saturday Night.

HELPING HIM OUT.

How a Smart Young Lady Brought One of Her Admirers to Time.

An unkind story, even if true, was told a Pittsburgh Dispatch man while he was in England, of a young lady who married a stuttering man.

The young man was undoubtedly a stutterer of the most positive order, for I have heard him go through paroxysms to get out a simple "Good morning!" The lady whom he subsequently married was of an eminently practical turn of mind. No maiden modesty or bashfulness cloyed her methods. She spoke to the point, and never left a thought unexpressed if she deemed it pertinent. After he had called upon her some three or four times she decided that it was about time for her to know his intentions. So the next time he called, after they had seated themselves as usual on the sofa, she said quietly but firmly: "Mr. Smith, I am much flattered by the interest you have taken in me, and the flowers you have just given me are pretty, but I feel that I should be not doing my duty if I delayed any longer asking what your intentions are; whither do these attentions and presents lead?"

Young Mr. Smith rose to his feet and a blush rose to his cheek. He essayed to speak. For a moment his lips and tongue seemed paralyzed. Then he managed to get out "M-M-M-M-M-y d-d-d-d-d"—but he could get no further. The d might have stood for any number of words, but Miss Smith, justifiably, perhaps, interpreted it to stand for darling, and the youth's acute embarrassment to a modest confusion in making a formal proposal.

Any way, she took Mr. Smith by the hand and, looking into his eyes, exclaimed: "Mr. Smith, I appreciate your embarrassment, but I understand what you wish to say. You may speak to papa, and if he approves, so do I."

They were married a few months later, but Mr. Smith has never explained satisfactorily to his friends whether he stuttered into matrimony of his own free will or against it.

Columbia's Coal King.

A visitor from Victoria says it is the popular impression that Dunsmuir, the coal king of British Columbia, has an income of from $2,000 to $3,000 a day. He got for the construction of a railway sixty-five miles long a third of the islands of Vancouver, with its enormous coal wealth. The output from his mines is the railway's chief item of traffic. His political influence in both local and federal elections is great, and it is usually exercised in behalf of the Governments. The Government reciprocates, and Mr. Dunsmuir can afford to take the street-cars twice a day regularly, and can get credit at the stores for any amount

The aldermen elect will be sworn some time this week and the first regular meeting of the new council will be held on Monday evening next.

A practice of the foot-ball club will be held on the Athletic grounds tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Every member is requested to be present.

A vote of thanks was passed at the council meeting last night to Mayor Dickinson for the impartial and able manner in which he filled the civic chair during his term of office.

One hundred and sixty head of cattle arrived from the interior to-day. Twenty head will go to Nanaimo and one hundred and twenty to Victoria. The remainder are consigned to dealers in this city.

Fresh salmon appeared on the market to-day for the first time this year. They were caught in Nanaimo Bay. In another week the fish ought to be in the Fraser River and Mr. Vianen will put out a boat about Feb. 1st if the weather does not grow suddenly cold.

Under the "Speedy Trials' Act," before Mr. Justice McCreight, to-day, Ah Lim and Ah Wing, charged with larceny and receiving stolen property, were acquitted, and Ah Hoy, on the same charge, was remanded for sentence. In the case of Ah Hong, defended by Mr. Jenns, a nolle prosequi was entered by the crown.

THE COLUMBIAN issued a morning edition to-day, containing a full account of the meeting of Saturday night in the Royal City, as well as many interesting and important telegraphic despatches from all parts of the world. The effort was an exceedingly creditable one. The enterprising publishers deserve the increased patronage which a discriminating public is bestowing on them.—World of Yesterday.

Late last night a resident of Port Moody, while wending his way homeward from a neighbors house, met a former well-known citizen of the Statutory Terminus who had just arrived from Westminster where he had been taking a very active part in the civic elections. "What in the world brings you to Port Moody," says the resident. "Oh, I came over for a rest, it is impossible to find rest in Westminster," was the reply and he hurried away.

Yesterday's Voting.

The voting yesterday was not nearly so one-sided as many expected it would be, and the idea that the two tickets would be voted straight turned out to be entirely wrong. The straight "popular ticket" received 68 votes while only two straight votes were cast for the "independent ticket." The remaining 149 voters scattered their votes generally among the whole sixteen, but with the great majority in favor of the popular ticket. Two hundred and nineteen votes were polled. Messrs Ewen and Reid tied for second highest vote with 182 each.

Heavily Afflicted.

Much sympathy is felt for Mr. Cunningham, of Skeena River, at the death of his eldest son by drowning. But one year ago, the beloved wife of Mr. Cunningham met her death in the Skeena River by the upsetting of a canoe, and the afflicted gentleman was but just recovering from the shock of this tragic event, when he received the sad news that the sea had robbed him of his son. Mr. Cunningham is at present in Victoria, and knew nothing of the loss of his schooner, the Skeena, and the death of his boy, until after the arrival of the steamer Cariboo Fly on Friday night.—Colonist.

C. C. Jacobs, Buffalo, N. Y., says: "Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured him of a bad case of piles of 8 years' standing, having tried almost every known remedy, besides two Buffalo Physicians, without relief; but the Oil cured him; he thinks it cannot be recommended too highly." There being imitations on the market of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, customers will see that they get the genuine.

The Yukon.

Distant fields always look green, but the Yukon and Mackenzie River districts will not prove very inviting if the report of Mr. Ogilvie, D.L.S., upon them is to be relied upon. Mr. Ogilvie spent last winter on the Yukon, near the international boundary. On December 7th the sun set, and it did not rise again until January 5th. During the long night the thermometer went down to 55° below zero, and this though the camping place was well to the south of the Arctic circle. The far northern territory is distinguished for its cold and for its gold. Yet, on the Yukon, a miner can only make eight dollars a day, and that but for three months in the year.—Mail.

Petition for Roads.

A petition has been circulated among the residents of the North Arm, and very largely signed, asking the provincial government to complete the road from New Westminster to the North Arm school house and to locate a new road to the Indian reservation in a straight line so that it may intersect the Vancouver road. The petition also asks that the present road be placed in good repair. The Westminster city council has been asked to co-operate in this matter, and, it is expected, definite action will be taken at the next meeting of the council. The importance of this road to Westminster is very great, and the whole community should be a unit in urging upon the government the necessity of its construction. A petition will probably be circulated in Westminster asking that the road be located and it should receive at least a thousand signatures.

Prof. Heine.

The Redpath Lyceum, Boston, speaking of Prof. Heine, who is to appear at the Oddfellow's hall to-morrow night, says: Mr. Joseph Heine has already gained critical favor throughout the civilized world. This extraordinary musician, though of German extraction, was born in England. His early talent won recognition in that country, and he profited by the instructions of such masters as Tolbecque and Sainton, Vieuxtemps, Sivori, Joachim, and other great performers, also gave him the benefit of their experience and wonderful abilities. In an extended tour, Mr. Heine gained the most distinguished honors from the potentates of the globe, with the Bishops of York, Canterbury and Oxford, as well as the highest praise from the critics of all nations. Mr. Heine introduces into concerts a great musical novelty in the form of solo playing on a common tin whistle. It is a performance no less artistic than amusing and extraordinary, and it has won the praise of the severest critics

Peck's Bad Boy.

This most amusing play was witnessed by a large audience at Herring's Opera House last night. From beginning to end the audience was kept in roars of laughter and when the curtain fell on the last act everyone regretted the fun was so soon over. J. J. Williams, the "Bad Boy" was a very bad boy indeed and played his part perfectly. Whenever he appeared it was the signal for a general roar from the audience. Frank Calburt the "Grocery man" has a perfect German dialect and created endless fun. He is a comedian of rare ability and shared equal honors with the "Bad Boy." Miss Laure Adams, as Mrs. Peck, proved herself to be a very clever actress, and she possesses a fine contralto voice and pleasing manners. Miss Effie Adams, the Bad Boy's best girl, is a bright and talented little actress and sings well. As an Irish comedian R. J. Wallace, the policeman, made a decided hit. All the songs were well sung and the whole entertainment was decidedly good.

Celebrating the Victory.

After the announcement last night that the straight "popular ticket" had been elected, a tremendous cheer went up from the several hundred people assembled in the Hyack Hall. Those waiting outside caught up the cheer and it passed like lightning from one end of Columbia street to the other, everyone guessing correctly the cause for the enthusiasm. There was no end of handshaking for a couple of hours and the general enthusiasm was very great. About 11 o'clock a row of bonfires were lighted on Columbia street to celebrate the event and these were kept burning for more than an hour. A number of alderman-elect and their friends met in the Club where a fine supper was soon prepared, and a jolly couple of hours were spent in hearing the further sentiments of the alderman on the issues at stake. It is perhaps unnecessary to say that they are more deeply pledged than ever. The rejoicing over the whole city was great, and this last and decisive victory of the progressive party is considered Westminster's grandest triumph.

A Crushing Blow.

The poor old COLUMBIAN has received its death blow at last. It has struggled bravely on under adverse circumstances and vexatious disappointments for some time, and was just beginning to be able to hold its own nicely when down fell the proverbial straw which is generally supposed to break the camel's back. The calamity occurred as follows: This afternoon one of the persons who was foremost in the ranks of the "injunctors" entered this office and threw on the desk a weekly COLUMBIAN, saying: "I will not take that paper any longer." We bowed our heads submissively to the awful decree and assumed a cheerfulness which would have done honor to any martyr, even under less trying circumstances than suffered by us. The tone used towards us was imposing and magnificent and we were awed. Ye heavens observe, the injunctor had stopped his paper. A weekly paper was sufficient for this injunctor, but he stopped it and thereby deprived us of the two thousandth part of our subscription list. We will endeavor to bear up and struggle along under this crushing blow, but should it prove too powerful and too terribly severe for our broken constitution, we simply ask that a modest stone be raised to our memory and on which the words be carved, "Killed by Injunctors."

H. F. McCarty, Wholesale and Retail Druggist, Ottawa, writes: "I was afflicted with Chronic Bronchitis for five years, but have been completely cured by the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in doses of five drops on sugar. I have also pleasure in recommending it as an embrocation for external use."

VICTORIA NEWS.

An Intoxicated Chinaman Draws a Revolver on Some Boys.—The New Nanaimo Civic Rulers Hold a Banquet.

Special to Columbian.]

VICTORIA, Jan. 22.—An intoxicated Chinaman named Yen Kow drew a revolver and threatened to shoot some boys who were annoying him on one of the principal streets this morning. A gentleman passing at the time gave chase, but "John" ran into one of the China houses and escaped.

The principal parties concerned in the late prize fight between McGee and McCannon on San Juan Island have been summoned to appear at the Nanaimo police court on Thursday.

The new civic rulers of Nanaimo celebrated their success by holding a banquet last night at the Royal Hotel.

"Billy" Garbet, of the Salvation Army, who is wanted at Nanaimo for obtaining money under false pretences, gave himself up to the city officers this morning and was returned to Nanaimo.

PERSONAL.

D. W. Miller, of Sumas, is in the city.

J. H. Todd, of Victoria, is staying at the Colonial.

D. Chisholm, M.P., accompanied by Miss Chisholm, left for Ottawa to-day and was given a hearty send-off by many friends who assembled to witness his departure.

The Picton, N. S., News says: "We are pleased to have Mr. James McG. Blaikie home again from British Columbia after an absence of twelve years. We wish to inform his lady friends that he is still a bachelor, (and looking well)."

City Council.

The last meeting of the council for 1888, and the last under the old charter, was held in the council chambers at 8 o'clock last night. Present, Aldermen Shiles, Elliott, Hoy, Ovens, DeBeck, and Calbick.

His worship reported verbally that a number of citizens, and a majority of the members of the council, had requested that the auditor's statement be published in the city newspapers, and, acting on that request, he had instructed the clerk to have the statement published on the best terms he could make. As a result, the statement had been published in both newspapers, and 250 copies printed in pamphlet form, at a cost of $75, whereas last year the cost of publication was about $130. The action of the mayor was approved.

An account of $10 was presented from Davie & Pooly for opinion re trust committee furnished by telegraph to the chairman of finance. On motion of Ald Shiles, seconded by Ald. Hoy, the account was referred to Ald. Herring for payment, as the council declined to be responsible for the unauthorized acts of its individual members.

Moved by Ald. Shiles, seconded by Ald. Hoy, That it is the opinion of this council that the Westminster Woollen Manufacturing Co. is justly entitled to any sums of money voted as a bonus and that the refusal to pay the bonus voted by the provincial legislature, on which the payment of the city bonus depends, is arbitrary and unfair.—Carried.

On motion of Ald. Hoy, seconded by Ald. Shiles, the sum of $25 extra was voted to the acting clerk for the month of December last.

Ald. Hoy said he had received a complaint from Mr. Tierney that a doctor had been sent to examine him to ascertain whether he had small-pox, and he wished to know by what authority this had been done. He thought it was injurious to the interests of the city to send abroad the impression that contagious disease existed here. Last year they had small-pox for several weeks at Vancouver, but they were prudent enough to keep the matter quiet.

The mayor explained that it had been reported to him that Mr. Tierney was suffering from small-pox, and he considered it proper in the interest of the city that the truth should be definitely known. After consultation with some members of the board of health, it was decided that a doctor should be sent to make an examination; and he was glad to state that there was no foundation whatever in the report. He thought the action taken was not only in the public interest, but also in the interest of Mr. Tierney, as it showed the rumors respecting him to be without foundation.

The business being finished, on motion of Ald. Hoy, seconded by Ald Shiles, a vote of thanks was tendered to His Worship Mayor Dickinson for the able and impartial manner in which he had presided over the council during the year. The resolution was put by the clerk, and carried unanimously by a standing vote.

His worship returned thanks for the resolution, and for the courtesy and assistance received from the council on all occasions. He believed the result of to-day's election was entirely satisfactory to a large majority of the citizens, and it was a marked endorsation of action taken by the council on the railway question. It afforded him great pleasure and satisfaction to hand over to his successor the seals of office, for he believed that they might without misgiving entrust the affairs of the city to the gentleman who had been chosen by the people as his successor. (Cheers).

The council then adjourned sine die.

Chilliwhack Temperance.

(Reported by a Correspondent.)

On Monday evening, Jan. 14th, a meeting was called in Henderson hall, for the purpose of organizing a literary society, and the establishment of a broad temperance platform in connection with it.

Mr. Davison was elected to fill the chair, and briefly explained the object of the meeting.

Mr. Wilkinson was the first speaker, and strongly advocated the organization of a mutual improvement society. He urged the importance of the temperance pledge in connection with it. He did not agree with the Rev. Mr. Patterson that a man must be converted before he can be a temperance man. He thought a prohibitory law would be a great boon to this settlement, and that the people would be happier if liquor could not be had.

Mr. Cawley (reeve) said he had come to the conclusion that a man was better off without liquor; but he did not always think so. He did not think a prohibitory law would be best. He did not understand the laws of either God or man to be prohibitory, and he could never agree to compelling men to stop drinking. He thought if the ministers of the several churches would meet and lay down a platform that all denominations could endorse, it would be a good thing, and he would give it his support.

Mr. Mellard said he was not a drinking man, although he had been where it was used all his life. He had been accustomed to taking it in the old country—he never touched it here, and felt just as well or better without it. He would not advocate organizing any order that would interfere with the existing Good Templars lodge.

Mr. A. C. Wells said that he was a Good Templar, and did not wish to make a secret of it. He thought it was a good order. Its pledge is for life, but if a pledge is good for three days, or three weeks, or three months, then it must be good always. He thought temperance agitation always did good, and the more organizations that had for their object the suppression of the liquor traffic, the sooner it would be accomplished.

Rev. Mr. Tate said there was great need for a literary society, as the young people were growing up without any seeming taste for reading and self-improvement, and he thought an organization of this nature, where debates would take place, speeches be made, essays read, and opportunities for general improvement given, would be a grand thing. He thought the temperance pledge in connection with it was very necessary; and if people could be made, and kept sober, there would then be some hope of their considering the more serious matter of the soul's salvatioe.

Rev. Mr. Patterson said he expected shortly to leave Chilliwhack, hence did dot feel so much interest in this scheme, as though he were going to remain among them. He believed it would be of lasting good to them, and would have entered heartily into it were it not for the fact already stated. Although a persistent temperance worker, he did not see eye to eye with all temperance advocates. He did not believe a man would be sent to perdition for taking a glass of liquor. There had been holy men in all ages who had taken it, and were none the worse for it. The greatest of the Apostles even recommended it to one of his fellow-laborers, and nowhere in God's word were men commanded not to take it. He did not believe in compelling men to give it up, as the desire would still be for it; but we ought to try and persuade men to give it up. He complimented the Rev. Mr. Allen on being the most energetic temperance worker in the community, and the people had only to know him aright in order to love him.

Dr. Henderson spoke in favor of the organization, and would give it his hearty support. He thought denominational differences ought to be unknown in temperance orders. It was said the Good Templars' Lodge was run by Methodists, and he did not think it ought to be so.

Mrs. Tate said she was a Good Templar and also a member of the W.C.T.U., and had never entertained the thought of either of those orders being denominational, but if all other denominations decline to do their part, are the Methodists to give up also.

Rev. Mr. Patterson—Certainly not; go right on.

Mr. Crookshanks said if everybody did their duty in the matter, and were all united in their efforts to save men from drink, it would be better than raising objections to any order of temperance.

Mr. Dumville made a telling speech, giving his own experience with the drink traffic. He said that every organization ought to be helped which aimed to keep men from drink.

Mr. A. C. Wells moved, seconded by Mr. Cawley, Resolved, That we request Revs. Allen, Patterson and Hall to formulate a constitution and pledge for the proposed literary and temperance organization. Carried.

Mr. Davison made the closing speech, and showed clearly the duty of all voters, to send only those men to parliament who would pledge themselves to do all in their power to destroy this monster evil, whose effects were most appalling to all who would read the statistics.
