NOTES AND COMMENTS.

"My dear," said Mr. Ruggles, "did you say this was a tenderloin steak?" "Yes." "Well, my dear, maybe it was." And the accent on the "was" was so strong that Mrs. Ruggles dissolved in tears.

Crimsonbeck—I see that they toasted your friend Bacon the other night. Yeast—Is that a fact?" "Yes; I read it in last night's paper." At the alumni dinner, I suppose?" "No, it was out in Wyoming." "Toasted him out in Wyoming?" "Yes; burned him in effigy, you know."—Yonkers Statesman.

Of the great "trinity of the anti-corn laws league," Villiers, Cobden, and Bright, only the first and oldest survives. Of the three, Bright was always the most composed and methodical. When Cobden was anxious and speculative, and Villiers sometimes fretful and impatient, Bright, the youngest of the three, and the boldest and calmest character of them all, was in council the man of soundest judgment.—Ex.

For the benefit of such of our readers as may contemplate going to Oklahoma, we have with much care and circumspection prepared a list of those agricultural implements which the exigencies of soil, climate, and society there suggest as most to be desired. The list is as follows: Money enough to take you there. One pistol. Some whiskey. Another pistol. Some more whiskey. A long box. Money enough to bring you back in the box.—Washington Post.

It was not many years ago, says an exchange, that the cotton-wood tree was considered useless for the purposes of lumber. To-day it is crowding white pine out of the market for certain purposes, and large fortunes are being made all along the Mississippi river out of this wood, which was once despised as much in that field as a garfish always has been among fishermen. In New Orleans white pine is worth $35 a thousand while yellow cotton-wood brings $65.

Everybody is interested in the subject of hospitals and their management, and Canadians will be interested in the news that the Royal Victoria hospital at Montreal is likely to be one of the best institutions of its kind. Allowing for the parental fondness of the architect for this pet scheme, there is promise in his words. "When completed there will not be another hospital in the world like the Victoria." The bete noir of hospitals of several storeys is the foul and infected air which will persistently escape from one ward and pestilentially walk in darkness up the staircase to another. Mr. Maxon Snell is going to obviate this by open air bridges to connect the wards. The development of his design will be watched with interest.—Ex. Those who will have the planning of the new hospital to be built in this city before long might profitably make a note of the above.

An exchange has this reminiscence of an interesting incident in the life of Michel Eugene Chevreul, the distinguished French chemist who died in Paris on the ninth of last month at the advanced age of 102 years and seven months: One day during the siege of Paris shells from the Prussian guns began to fall near the museum of the Jardin des Plantes, where M. Chevreul then had his laboratory. He sat down and wrote King Wilhelm a personal letter, in which he protested in the name of science against the shelling of the garden and museum under his charge and that if continued it would be an act of vandalism. The king appreciated this appeal, and the guns were immediately pointed in another direction. Then the king sent the letter to a scientific journal, of which he has been a subscriber since its foundation. When the war was over the letter, translated back into French, was printed in Paris, and great was the sensation which it produced.

The following were recently among the written answers in examinations on the scriptures by her majesty's inspectors of schools: "Who was Moses?" "He was an Egyptian. He lived in a hark made of bullrushes, and he kept a golden carf and worshipt braizen snakes, and he het nothin' but qwables and manner for forty years. He was kort by the 'air of his 'ed while ridin' under a bow of a tree, and he was killed by his son Abslon as he was hanging from the bow. His end was peace." "What do you know of the patriarch Abraham?" "He was the father of Lot and had tew wives. One was called Hismale and tother Haygur. He kep one at home and he hurried the tother into the dessert, where she became a pillow of salt in the daytime and a pillow of fire at nite." "Write an account of the Good Samaritan". "A certain man went down from Jeralem to Jeriker and he fell among thawns, and the thawns sprang up and choked him. Whereupon he gave tuppins to the hoast and said take care on him and put him on his hone hass. And he passed on the hother side."—London Times.

SEDITIOUS SERMONS

By Jesuit Priests in Mexico Cause a Riot in which 230 Men are Killed.

The Opposing Factious in Hayti Effect a Compromise and Hostilities have Ceased.

Lord Lonsdale on the Way to Victoria En Route for Old England.

A TERRIBLE FIGHT.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., May 2.—News has reached here to-day which confirms the report of desperate fighting at Guanayuats, Mexico, in which 30 soldiers and policemen and 200 rioters were killed. The trouble arose from the imprisonment of five Jesuit priests who have been delivering seditious sermons. The populace endeavored to secure them, and a fight occurred. The priests are still in jail.

A MILITARY TOUR.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Secretary Proctor, who returned from New York last night, will leave on Saturday for a trip of a fortnight through the west. He will inspect the military prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kas., and the military posts at Denver, Cheyenne, Omaha, St. Paul and Chicago. Adjutant-General Drum and Col. Barr, military secretary, accompany him. Gen. Schofield will join the party at Chicago.

THE NEW COMMISSION.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Thomas F. Gilroy was sworn in commissioner of public works this morning. His sureties are Edward Simmonds and President Devoe of Mount Morris Bank.

A FRIEND AT COURT.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 2.—Congressman Morrow returned from Washington last night. He says that the Pacific coast will find a warm friend in President Harrison. Regarding the position of public printer, he thinks it more than likely that Henry Z. Osborne, proprietor of the Los Angeles Express, will be appointed. Mr. Morrow has no doubt that there will be an extra session of congress in October. The extra session will be made imperative by the amount of preliminary work the fifty-first congress will have to accomplish before it settles down to the actual affairs of the country.

HOSTILITIES CEASED.

KEYWEST, Fla., May 2.—The U. S. str. Ossiper has just arrived from Hayti and reports all quiet, there having been a cessation of hostilities.

A MUTINOUS CREW.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 2.—On the arrival of the schooner Carrie A. Lane, from Baltimore, last night, Capt. F. A. Dyer swore out warrants for the arrest of seven of his crew, on charge of insubordination. The seamen were arrested by the marshal and lodged in the city prison. The sailors state that after the schooner rounded the Horn a gale was encountered which caused them to be on duty three days and nights. They were completely worn out and refused to work further unless the captain consented to turn back. The schooner was rounded, but when fine weather was again encountered, the captain again changed his course and headed for this port. The accused seamen claim that they were treated cruelly by the mate, Thomas E. Moore.

LORD LONSDALE.

TACOMA, May 2.—Lord Lonsdale arrived last night from San Francisco and leaves for Victoria to-day. He then leaves for New York en route for England.

LIGHT RAIN.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 2.—Light rains are predicted for Oregon and Washington for the twenty-four succeeding hours.

BLAINE STILL ILL.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Blaine still keeps in doors. Walker Blaine said to-day he expects his father to resume his duties to-morrow or Saturday.

NO YELLOW FEVER.

BALTIMORE, May 2.—The following despatch was received from Bremen by the Baltimore agents of the North German Lloyd Steamship Co.: "The steamer Weser passed Dover at six o'clock this morning, all well. No truth in report of yellow fever on board. (Signed) LLOYD.

TWO FRIARS BURNED.

PHILADELPHIA, May 2.—At an early hour this morning a four story stone building attached to the Catholic college in east Chelton avenue, Germantown, was discovered to be on fire. Great excitement prevailed among the students in the college adjoining when it was learned. Two brothers, Ignatius and Michael Hillain, were in the third story of the burning building. Michael jumped to the ground but was so seriously injured by the fall that it is thought he will die. Ignatius was burned to death. He tried to follow his brother's example but the flooring gave way under him and he sank into the burning mass. The loss on the building is not yet known.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

PORT JERVIS, N. Y., May 2.—An accident occurred on the Erie Railroad this morning, which may result in the loss of several lives. An east bound stock train ran into a caboose of a construction train, completely demolishing the car and severely injuring seven employees. It is thought several will die. A carload of calves was derailed and all killed.

PARLIAMENT PROROGUED.

OTTAWA, May 2.—The governor-general to-day proceeded in state to the parliament building and prorogued the third session of the 5th parliament of the Dominion of Canada.

OTTAWA NOTES.

OTTAWA, May 1.—Mr. Mara left for home to-night. The passing of the bill providing for the appointment of three county court judges for British Columbia is due to his energetic efforts. Messrs. Prior and Barnard leave to-morrow.

The condition of Mr. Chisholm is unimproved.

Porogation will take place to-morrow afternoon.

There was a rather lively debate in the house of commons to-day on the Northwest land subsidies. Mr. Dewdney said that the total number of acres there granted to railway companies reached 35,000,000. The area of the agricultural lands in Manitoba and the North West he estimated at 135,000,000 acres. The subsidies were passed.

The bill authorising the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway short line link by the government from Salisbury to Moncton, N. B., was given the six month's hoist in the senate to-night, Senator Miller's amendment being carried by yeas 22, nays 11. Senator Abbott in a speech declared that the government was pledged to build the line. The result caused almost a sensation.

In the house Mr. Mulock urged the government to remove the ill-feeling throughout the country by referring the Jesuits' Estate Act to the courts. Sir. John Macdonald laughed and in reply said to the effect that it was out of the question for the government to test the constitutionality of the Jesuits' Estates Act in view of the overwhelming pronunciation of parliament on this question. He felt confident, however, that an appeal would be made by other parties.

VICTORIA NEWS.

A Wealthy Old Settler Passes Away. The Viva Sails for Behring Sea.

Special to the Columbian.

The Elder sails for Alaska this evening.

James Fish, an old settler, died to-day, aged 60. He left forty thousand dollars.

There was bright lighteing last night to the south, accompanied by rain. It continued to rain to-day and the streets are very dirty.

The British bark Brandon, Captain McLean, 50 days from Panama has arrived in the Royal roads for orders.

The sealing schooner Viva sailed for Behrings Sea to-day.

The Sapphire which left yesterday for Behring Sea was forced by heavy weather to return.

Dredging the Fraser.

The World is in a position to state that Col. A. Gibson, representing a number of capitalists in England, has made application to the proper authorities for permission to dredge the Fraser River for gold for a distance of 45 miles. The part of the river bed to which this application applies, lies between Boston Bar and Cornish Bar. Between the points indicated, the Fraser River passes—so the application says—for about 20 miles through canyons in which it is impossible for any machinery to work. A good deal of English capital is being put into the enterprise. This appears to be only one of several similar schemes to dredge the Fraser. Another company has about $3,500 worth of plant orders in England to mine the flats just opposite Yale. Two Vancouver companies are also in the swim. Firstly, Messrs. McHardy, Patterson & Co., of Vancouver, are going to dive for gold in Hill's Bar; and secondly, Beatty & Co., of this city, are about to try the same process above Boston Bar and have located 1½ miles of riverbed. We may shortly expect the country to be flooded with nuggets. The World is pleased to learn of these evidences of progress, and trusts that the wildest hopes of the originators will be realized. —World.

CROSS-EXAMINED.

Parnell Undergoes a Close Cross-Examination To-day on Many Important Subjects.

Sentences of O'Connor, Conlon, and Dr. Tanner and Father Manning are Confirmed.

The King of Holland's Health Improves and the Rulership is Restored to Him.

THE PARNELL COMMISSION.

LONDON, May 1.—On cross-examination Mr. Parnell denied that the Irish World had ever collected money for the Irish parliamentary party. The paper, he said, had been hostile to the Irish party and himself since 1882. Sir Richard Webster here produced extracts from the Irish World praising the actions of Mr. Parnell in parliament after 1882. Sir Charles Russell produced extracts from the same paper adverse to Mr. Parnell. Mr. Parnell admitted his aquaintance with Mooney but did not know whether he had contributed to the parliamentary fund or not. He had no communication with Patrick Ford since 1881. Mr. Parnell emphatically denied that his Irish scheme had ever included a coalition with the Fenians. The order to expel the landlords, he said, was certainly aimed to destroy landlordism but not to drive individuals from the country. He had never had any idea of resorting to illegal means. His testimony throughout denied all knowledge of any manifestoes counselling violence, but it was no part of his duty to exclude any one from the league on account of their antecedents. On the contrary, he wanted to include all Irishmen.

SECURITIES ADVANCING.

LONDON, May 1.—In view of the pending release of large amounts of money by the British government in repayment of the old consols, Canadian in common with other good securities, are advancing in price, Dominion issues having risen from one-half to two per cent. during the past week. British Columbia and Quebec securities are up 1½ per cent. There is a similar movement in Toronto, Quebec city, Winnipeg and Ottawa loans. Grand Trunk Railway securities have advanced despite the bad effect of the Hamilton accident. Canadian Pacific Railway stock is in strong favor and business done at 51½. Hudson's Bay Co.'s shares have been bought on rumors of a pending division of the capital into two classes, one secured on the lands and the other on the trading business. These rumors are at least premature.

PARNELL CROSS-EXAMINED.

LONDON, May 2.—In the special commission to-day Sir Richard Webster continued his cross-examination of Mr. Parnell, eliciting a number of positive denials which everybody was expecting, and some interesting affirmations. The witness declared he never knew of Nolan, the fenian, until last year, and said that in the speech he delivered in the house of commons in 1883, in reply to Mr. Forster, he repudiated every fenian or dynamiter who claimed connection with the league.

The cross-examination of Parnell continued. Parnell admitted that Condon was connected with the Manchester murders. He was chairman of the reception committee at Washington. The witness had always repudiated the dynamite and physical force party in America, and denounced them in the house of commons. He was not aware that the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette reported verbatim a speech he made at Cincinnati, in which he is said to have referred to the severance of the last link between Great Britain and Ireland, or that the report was like that in the Irish World. Parnell admitted that he had not found fault with the past action of the invincibles, but he quoted from his speeches and his manifestoes of 1881 denouncing outrages and unconstitutional acts by Irishmen.

DILLON'S GOOD WORK.

LONDON, May 2.—On Tuesday last John Dillon addressed a monster meeting at Melbourne. A thousand persons subscribed to the Home Rule fund. Dillon is meeting with great success on his Australian trip.

SUEING THE GOVERNMENT

DUBLIN, May 2.—Capt. Vandeleur has sued the government for razing the cottages on his estates from which the tenants had been evicted by force. The buildings were destroyed by the officers to prevent the tenants from reoccupying them, and this was done in spite of the opposition of the agent.

BLESSING THE COLORS.

BERLIN, May 2.—The impressive ceremony of blessing the colors of the guards took place at Potsdam to-day. Among those invited to be present on the occasion were the American delegates to the Samoan conference.

SENTENCES CONFIRMED.

DUBLIN, May 2.—The sentences of imprisonment passed upon Messrs. John O'Connor, T. J. Conlon and Mr. Tanner, all members of parliament, and Father Manning, have been confirmed.

THE RULERSHIP RESTORED.

THE HAGUE, May 2.—Both chambers of the States General to-day unanimously voted to restore to King William his power to govern Holland, which was placed in the hands of a regency while the king was ill and unable to rule. Cheers followed the announcement of the chamber's action. Telegrams felicitating the king upon his recovery and restoration have been sent by most of the rulers of Europe. The Duke of Nassau will retire from the regency of Luxemburg.

THE MISSION FAILED.

LONDON, May 2.—The representatives of the American Copper Mining Company, who have been visiting Paris, are reported to have failed in their negotiations with the copper syndicate, and it is said they will sail for home Saturday.

On the fourteenth of May the ratepayers of Victoria will vote on two by-laws for city improvements, pledging the credit of the city for an aggregate amount of $85,000. One by-law provides for a loan of $45,000 to be expended in street and bridge improvements and in enlarging the area of Ross Bay cemetery. The by-law further details the streets on which the money shall be expended. The other measure, entitled "The Street Railway Guarantee By-law, 1889," is for the purpose of enabling the city to guarantee interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum on the bonds of the National Electric Tramway and Lighting Company to the amount of $40,000 for a period of twenty years. These by-laws have the support of the press, and will undoubtedly carry. Neither Victoria nor Vancouver intend to stagnate, it is apparent, if a wise exercise of their borrowing powers will keep them "moving on."

Our American brethren just now are celebrating in befitting manner the centennial of the inauguration "one hundred years ago" of the first president and "father of his country," the immortal George Washington. With pardonable enthusiasm, old reminiscences and associations are being revived, time-honored, sacred relics and mementoes are being "dug up" and paraded, and the pure flame of patriotism is being fanned into a blaze by poet, orator, and penny-a-liner. Tuesday was the great day of the celebration, and New York, where Washington's solemn inauguration took place in April, 1789, the central point of the demonstration. Such an occasion as this celebration is well fitted to arouse the liveliest feelings of national enthusiasm in the American breast, while we, who also delight, with all civilized nations, to do honor to the noble memory of the only and original Washington—that grand patriot and lovable character—are forcibly reminded that a great nation has been "born in a day," and, being our kinsmen, we are proud and can rejoice with them. If Washington were in the flesh today, it may be that he would witness a "grevious falling away" from the simple integrity that actuated his own noble deeds; but it may be questioned if he would have much time to observe this amid the astounding evidences of progress and development which one short century has graven upon the face of his country. In spite, too, of political disingenuousness and personal lapses, he would doubtless find in the America of to-day millions of true hearts, prepared to "do and die" for their country, if the occasion required. The memory of a Washington, still revered and held in highest honor by his grateful countrymen, bespeaks as much.

According to the Winnipeg Commercial, a satisfactory state of things with respect to immigration, beginning with last year, has set in, which is doing and promising great things for the "prairie province" and its sister territories. For a time after the collapse of the 1881-82 boom, observes the Commercial, the difficulty of catching the "main ingredient in the soup of progress," the settler, seemed almost insuperable. Now, it is added, the tide of immigration from eastern Canada, at least, is sweeping towards the Canadian Northwest. The cause, or rather causes, of this tide of settlement turning in favor of the Northwest may be looked for and found in various directions, says the Commercial. The following explanation of these causes may be marked with profit by those in any way having influence or responsibility in the the matter of securing immigration for this province and for the various cities and districts: "In the first place, Manitobans, while they growled and fumed plenty over securing no reasonable share of the settlement which has been sweeping to the west for years, never made any direct effort to secure their share until within the last three years or so. Of course the Dominion government, the C.P.R. land department, the Canada Northwest Land Company and other corporations interested in the country, made efforts in the direction of settlement, but the people of the province were absolutely inactive, and could agree upon no concerted action, while the provincial government then in power were as inactive as the people, and the head thereof openly stated that they, the government, did not want settlers, as they were no immediate source of revenue to the province as a province. It was folly to expect immigration under such circumstances, and a great change was necessary before it could be expected. That change has come, and some of its fruits are now being had in the thousands of settlers who have this spring located in the province. Nearly every portion of the country has, during the past three years, been working either as combinations of municipalities, as organizations of districts, or in some other way; while the present local government, whatever other promises they may have failed to fulfil, have certainly redeemed their pledge as to a vigorous immigration policy. It is beyond a doubt that this combination of effort has been the main power in turning the tide of immigration towards Manitoba, and the power has been all the greater on account of the earnestness of the effort, an earnestness which could not always be accredited to the land-owning corporations, who formerly made such efforts, as frequently speculation more than a desire for colonization was the prompting power with them." The Commercial further adds: "Another factor in favor of Manitoban settlement is to be found in the fact that the Northwest has fewer bitter opponents than formerly. While this country was bound down by C.P.R. monopoly, the Grand Trunk, Northern Pacific, and other railway companies were interested in diverting immigration to other fields. Now they have an entrance to the Northwest, and have not only ceased their opposition, but are to a great extent interested in drawing settlement here. The cheap excursions to the east of last winter, for which we are indebted to railway competition, let loose over eastern Canada hundreds of the very best immigration agents, namely the farmers, who within a few years have made progress and laid the foundations of wealth in Manitoba, and the result is that in many portions of the east, the youth and enterprise of the agricultural population comprehend the great advantages this country offers, and the present season's arrivals are only the beginning of a stream of desirable settlers, that will make this province and the territories to the west in a very few years a power in the population and wealth of Canada. Now that immigration affairs are moving in the right direction, the aim should be to keep them so. Our local government must not relax in the least the vigor of their immigration policy, and the people in local organizations must second the provincial efforts. Now that we have railway competition, there is no fear but the railways will do their share of the work, and the more railways we get to come into our country the more numerous will be the interests at work in our behalf. The tide is undoubtedly turned in the interests of Manitoba, and Manitobans will have themselves to blame if it is not kept flowing freely in that direction." It is the old story: "No pains, no gains." "Heaven helps those that helps themselves." In the foregoing very reasonable and instructive argument from effect to cause is much that we in British Columbia should mark and inwardly digest, if we wish to catch the "main ingredient in the soup of progress," to use a borrowed figure. Without this ingredient, the broth must inevitably fizzle. Let us learn from and act upon the experience of others. This is the part of true wisdom.

MAKING SHOES.

In his little hut by the rocky shore,
Where the waters ever with changing hues
Creep in and out with a drowsy roar,
Sits an old man fashioning babies' shoes;
His face is wrinkled, his hair is white,
His form is bent with his years of care,
But always the old man's heart is light,
And he sings to himself as he labors there;
"Pegging away,
All the long day,
Stitching ever till set of sun;
Tides ebb and flow,
Hours come and go,
Rest comes after the work is done!"

Through the window, glistening far away,
He watches the white sails out at sea,
As they slowly fade from the shining bay,
Chased out by the west wind light and free;
And a far-off look in his faded eyes
Reveals that his thoughts are drifting far
With the gleaming sails where the sea-gull flies,
And he sings with his heart o'er the harbor bar:
"Pegging away,
All the long day,
White sails drifting across the sea;
Tides ebb and flow;
Days come and go;
Voyage soon over for you and me!"

He turns to his work, and his rough old hands—
As honest as human hands can be—
Draw out the threads with their twisted strands,
And stitch the crooked seams faithfully;
For babies' feet must be shod with care;
And old age carries the work along;
And shoes are better by far to wear,
When pegged and stitched with a little song:
"Pegging away,
All the long day,
Infancy, childhood, youth and age;
Tides ebb and flow;
Years come and go;
Life is only a written page!"

And thus he toils, while the days go by
Springs turn to summer along the shore,
The summers fade and the roses die,
And snow-drift whitens the headlands o'er;
And, day by day, as the seasons run,
He sings and toils in a thoughtful muse,
His thread near wasted, his work most done—
An old man fashioning babies' shoes:
"Pegging away,
All the long day,
Shine, and shadow, and spring, and fall;
Tides ebb and flow;
Men come and go;
God the Father is over all!"

—J. S. Cutler, in Youth's Companion.

EMBALMING THE DEAD.

The Ancient Method Far Superior to That of To-Day.

From the point of pecuniary gain to undertakers embalming has no advantage over the icing methods commonly employed, says the New York Press. Its superiority over the icing custom is claimed because of the protection afforded to undertakers specially and the public generally against infection of any disease with which the deceased may have died.

The unquestionable adoption of embalming processes for keeping bodies during transportation and of public men whose bodies are kept in state for protracted periods has within the past few years become of pronounced frequency, and it is somewhat pertinent testimony to the truth of the "nothing new under the sun" adage that this prehistoric practice after lying in oblivion for ages should be renovated and clothed by modern science and brought to renewed activity beneath the critical judgment of the current century.

Even yet in common thinking we have not learned to disassociate the term from its memories as a lost art; and with the mention of the word the fancy instinctively pictures vague visions of shriveled mummies curiously swathed in discolored linens, of pyramids and obelisks covered with hieroglyphs, and of the superstitious rites and ceremonies belonging to that dim and mysterious past when the worship of Osiris and Isis and all the tutelary gods was flourishing on the banks of the Nile.

The imagination flits through the long vista of thirty-six centuries to the time when the Sphinx and pyramids were young, and we seem to perceive the Kolchyte and his assistants engaged in their gloomy and somber occupation within the dread precincts of the Necropolis.

With the ancient Egyptians this artificial preservation of the dead was fraught with dread importance, for, according to their beliefs, the soul held such relations with its earthly envelope that although freed by death, it would, after a cycle of ten thousand years, re-enter it, provided the body was ready to receive it, but if not the migrations of the spirit were endless, and it became a homeless wanderer in the nether world.

The rite acquired further religious sanction with the Egyptians, who seem to have been the innovators of the art, by the legend of Osiris, whose body was embalmed by his son Amebis, Isis having found the body after his death by the hands of Typhon. All classes were embalmed and also the sacred animals, though these by simpler and less expensive processes than men.

Among the peculiar and apparently unexplainable customs was that by which the corpse of a male was given at once into the charge of the embalmers, while females were kept until decomposition had begun.

Those engaged in the work of mummy-making formed a distinct caste, the calling being hereditary, and its secrets transmitted from father to son; they had their homes within the boundaries of the cemeteries, and their society was shunned as condemning.

The lowest order of the class called parachitæ were regarded with particular malignance, and considered to be accursed spirits predestined to their work in penance of sins committed during a former existence. They were hopelessly unclean, and to touch their person or to enter their abode was defilement. Their duty it was to make the incision in the body preparatory to its disembowelment, after it had been marked with a reed pen by a scribe. Immediately upon the accomplishment of their duty they were pursued and pelted with stones to the door of their hut by the friends of the deceased.

A higher division, termed tarachentæ, removed the entrails, with the exception of the kidneys and the heart. The removal of the latter organ was supposed to destroy all possibility of the soul's future residence in the body, and to sentence it to eternal misery—it was the heart which was weighed and judged of its sins when the soul came before Osiris. The brain was drawn out through the nostrils, and after the cavities had been washed in palm wine the body was steeped in natron for seventy days, after which it passed to the charge of the Kolchytæ, the highest order of embalmers, who had charge of the tombs and masses for the dead, and were regarded more favorably than the parachitæ or tarachentæ; to them belonged the really preservative work, which was done by filling the brain and abdominal cavities with spices, aromatic herbs and various ingredients, the exact nature and proportions of which were carefully kept from general knowledge. The incision was then sewed up, the body tightly bandaged and wrapped in linens, secured by gums, after which it was ready for sepulture. But the mummies were often kept in their former homes for long periods before burial, and on occasions of festivity were introduced into the scenes of gayety to strike an average and remind the revelers of the transient lot of man.

The elaborate process outlined above cost a silver talent, or about $2,000, and was available only to the wealthy. Cheaper methods in vogue among the poor are recorded by Herodotus, in which Kedrion, or cedar oil, was injected into the viscera, the body washed in myrrh, soaked in a solution of natron or salt peter for the usual seventy days, smeared with gums and bound up.

In some instances the soles of the feet were removed and placed upon the breast. This was done that the sacred halls of the judgment temple might not be defiled when the deceased was called before Osiris. As the custom of profuse feet-washing was not practiced in Palestine, this perhaps, was not altogether a superstition.

The origin of the art antedates historical record. Mummies are referred to in the hieroglyps by the word "Sahu." The bodies of Cheops, Mycerinus and others of the Fourth Dynasty, and it is recorded that the body of the patriarch Jacob was thus prepared.

Embalming was also practiced by the ancient Persians, who used wax; by the Assyrians, who employed honey, and by the Jews, with whom spices seemed the popular method, the body of Jesus being so treated before burial.

Although the art of thus preserving the dead was known to the early Christians who embalmed the bodies of some of the martyrs, and even later to the people of the Canary Isles, after the dissolution of the Egyptian dynasty and the decadence of the Aryan religions, it gradually faded from the knowledge of the new civilization and found place among the lost arts.

Through the ensuing ages it remained in comparative oblivion until the nineteenth century, when, in 1834, Gannal discovered the preservative properties of equal parts of acetate and alumina, and the later development of arsenic by Tranchini revived the practice of embalming bodies requiring to be kept for short periods.

The recognition of the sanitary advantages derived from the effectual destruction of the disease germs gave it favor until, with the introduction of the chlorides of zinc, mercury, aluminium and other salts of antiseptic nature, together with solutions of creosote, carbolic acid and cresylic acid, various compound fluids were formed, and the practice of embalming bodies for transportation came into common favor with the more reputable undertakers, and to-day is gaining favor as a general substitute for the former method of freezing.

The modern embalming methods have little in common with the ancient processes, which imposed so much mutilation of the body. Now, with instruments of modern surgery, it is a comparatively simple and cleanly process. A simple puncture, sufficient to admit the nozzle of a small injector, is made above some of the principal arteries, usually the femoral, and a quantity of fluid varying according to the length of time it is desired to preserve the body, is injected. The fluid enters into the circulatory system and penetrates the minutest arterial ramifications, forming with the tissues new chemical compounds which are imputrescible. The effects are immediate; decomposition is arrested and the germs of contagion destroyed, and not temporarily neutralized, as is the case when freezing is employed.

The processes of to-day do not preserve the body indefinitely, as the ancient methods did, but as this is not required by modern sentiment it meets all the requirements, and its sanitary advantages place it in the field as a rival to cremation for the future method of disposing of the dead.

As the modern method preserves in the body all the softness and flush of life, scientific enterprise, if turned toward the subject, might effect a compromise between the present and past by which our dead might be forever preserved with all of life's appearance to ornament the halls of their former residences and to replace the present automatic figures with ones which have a history and once more make objects, ghastly to our forefathers, the playthings of their children. Will this be the seed of this flower which bloomed before the Christian era and has been transplanted in the present century to the soil of modern science?

ORIGIN OF NAMES.

The Curious Sources of Many Common English Surnames.

Not only countries but counties and towns were a fruitful source of surnames, remarked Prof. H. H. Egloston in a recent lecture. John from Cornwall became John Cornwall or Cornish. Richard who lived near a piece of woodland was spoken of as Richard at or near the wood, originating the surname Atwood, or John living near a hill became John Hill. So with Underhill, Atwell, etc. John living near a clump of oaks was John atten oaks, abbreviated into Noakes, or William who had pitched his tent or cabin near a notable ash tree was known as William at the ash or William atten nash, which easily drifted into Nash. So, too, Thomas who lived near a small stream (or in Anglo-Saxon a becket) was Thomas at the becket, and thus was named the martyr Thomas a'Becket. The most common terminations of English surnames taken from places are ford, ham, ley and ton. Ford is from the Saxon faran, to go, signifying the place where a stream could be crossed.

In the name of Shakspeare's birthplace we have a memento of three different eras of English history, viz., the periods of the occupancy by the old Britons, the Romans and the Saxons. Strat is an abbreviation of strata (street), the name by which the great Roman roads were known. Ford tells us that one of these roads crossed a stream, and Avon is the name which the old Britons or Celts gave to the streams.

The word lea, leah, or leigh signifying a partially wooded field, served as the ending for many surnames, such as Horsley, Cowley, Ashley, Oakley, Lindley and Berkley, or Birchley. Hay or haw means a hedge, and this has given us Hayes, Haynes, Haley, Haywood, Hawes, Haworth, Hawthorn, Haughton, or Houghton.

Occupations, too, have afforded an endless array of surnames. This method was used by the Romans in such names as Fabricus (smith,) Pictor (painter,) Agricola (farmer). In England a skillful hunter would adopt that as his surname, and equally so with the carpenter, joiner, sawyer, baker or butcher.

Personal traits and complexions, too, gave rise to surnames. From the former we have the names Stout, Strong, Long, Longman, Longfellow; and from the latter, Brown, Black, etc. Some mental and moral traits were also used to denote surnames. Richard the First, of England, was better known as Richard of the lion heart. The next step would be to derive from this quality the surname Lion.

EXPIRED FROM RAGE.

A Newspaper Man Truthfully Describes His Experience on the Prairie.

Snake stories are in season, and we propose to tell one literally true, says the Atlanta Journal. We were riding over the unsettled prairies of Kansas with a companion, when we came suddenly upon a large prairie rattlesnake. The growth of grass all over the prairie was rank and thick, and fully six or eight inches high, except in the little flat or depressed spots where the water had stood until late in the spring; on these it was short and scant. It was one of these partially bare places, perhaps thirty feet square, that we came upon the snake. We took out our revolver, and were about to shoot at it, but our companion said: "Don't shoot." We had wasted most of our loads shooting at prairie-chickens, etc., and might need what we had left for other game.

There was not a stick large enough for a riding switch within a mile, but there were limestone rocks here and there on the prairie, and he said if we would keep the snake in the bare place he would ride a short distance back and get a rock where he had seen several. We undertook the task, but the snake was vicious, and bent on getting out into the high grass. Finding that he would get out if he had to pass under our horse, we drew back a few steps and fired at him. The ball struck and cut up the ground a few inches beyond him; but the discharge seemed to change his entire disposition and action. He wriggled to a small "resin weed" growing in the bare spot, and coiled himself tightly around it. By this time our companion had returned with a rock, and, dismounting, we threw it at the snake. It struck the ground a few inches beyond him, and he never moved.

Approaching cautiously we drew away the stone with the crooked handle of an umbrella and again threw it at the snake. This time it did not quite reach him, but struck the ground near him and rolled over so as to touch him lightly. Still he never moved or rattled.

With some fear of danger we quietly touched him with the end of the umbrella, and as he still remained motionless and quiet we cautiously unwound him from his coil around the weed. He was limp as a rag, but entirely dead—dead all over; not even his tail gave any signs of vitality. There was not a bruise about him, and certainly we had not hurt him with either ball or rock. We could only conclude that in his rage or fright when fired at he had bitten and thus killed himself.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Mayor Hendry dined the May Queen, ex-queen and maids of honor after the festivities at the cricket grounds had been concluded. The Hyacks, who escorted the royal party to the house, were invited in and treated most hospitably by Mayor Hendry.

The water cart made its appearance yesterday and kicked up a fearful dust. The rain to-day ably seconded the efforts of the sprinkler, and if the contractor can manage with this assistance, rendered gratis, to keep the dust in hand the $150 per month, voted for quieting the uneasy soil, will be considerered well spent.

Messrs. Bourchier & Higgins, in December 1888, purchased six lots in the city of New Westminster, paying therefor the sum of $60 each, or a total of $540. Yesterday they succeeded in disposing of these identical lots for $2000; an advance of $1460, or about 300 per cent. Westminster must be booming.—Colonist.

The captain of the steamer Rainbow informed us last night that he towed the disabled steamer Amelia from Chemainus to Victoria. The trip occupied from Saturday night till Sunday morning. He said the reports about the damage were not at all exaggerated, as the machinery was totally smashed, and the boat would be under repairs for some time.—Courier.

H. P. McCraney, who holds the contract for the construction of the street railway, left for Westminster to-day to sit on the jury at the assizes. On his return, he said, he hoped to be able to get the work of construction thoroughly started. About 200 tons of iron rails will be brought from the east. Men will be set to work preparing the roadway in a few days.—World of yesterday.

A man named Miller was drowned at Seattle last Friday. Deceased was a man about 40 years of age, and was of light complexion—hair and moustache. He was of stout build and rather neatly attired. On the remains, which were afterwards removed to Shorey & Co.'s establishment at 2.30 a. m., were found a check book on the Bank of Montreal at New Westminster with two stubs, one dated April 13, 1889, and marked Trapp, and the other with no date, marked $30 and signed Phillips, a purse, a pair of cuff buttons and a ring of keys.

Boundary Bay Baptism.

The largest gathering ever convened at Boundary Bay School house met on Sabbath last to listen to a sermon by Rev. W. H. Porter, of London, Ont., and to witness the first Christian baptism by immersion on the Delta. The day was beautiful and the services were deeply interesting and impressive.

The Van Luven Fund.

Two well known ladies have formed themselves into a committee to dispose of THE COLUMBIAN fund in aid of the distressed Van Luven family. On Tuesday a quantity of groceries, jellies, fresh meat, etc., were sent over to the family, and in a few days the remainder of the amount collected will be expended in purchasing certain necessaries for which the children have been suffering. The subscriptions now amount to $36.

The Langis and Sullivan Case.

It is currently reported that the Sullivan and Langis cases, on charge of procuring abortion, and which were sent up for trial at the present assizes, will be postponed for 10 or 12 days. The adjournment is asked by the prosecution, as it has been found impossible to prepare the case properly in time for the present sitting of the court. The witnesses in the case are all in the city awaiting orders, but it is probable they will be released to-morrow.

Went to Headquarters.

This morning a drunken fisherman climbed up to Mr. Thos. Mowat's office, under the impression that the inspector's office was a sort of fishermen's home, and lay down on the floor and went to sleep. His slumbers were soon disturbed and he was ordered to leave, which request was politely but firmly refused. The police were called and marched him to the lockup, where he gave vent to the large quantity of whiskey stored in him by singing "The Sweet Bye and Bye," in tones loud enough to disturb the officials in the government offices across the street.

Col. Prior's Request.

Col. Prior, M. P., had an interview with Sir John Macdonald a few days ago and urged the granting of a subsidy to the Victoria, Saanich and New Westminster Railway and Ferry Co. The proposed line will run from Victoria almost due north to Shoal Harbor, a distance of twenty miles; thence a ferry will run to Point Roberts on the mainland, from which place lines will extend to Vancouver, Westminster and Blaine, Washington Territory. The company ask for a subsidy of $6,400 a mile for the railway and $30,000 a year for twenty years to maintain the ferry system.

A "Boom" in Canneries.

Dr. Russ, who has been up north for the past three years, and who has just returned to San Francisco on the U.S. steamer Pinta, referring to the salmon fisheries of Alaska, informed a press representative that owing to the remarkable salmon catch a year ago there is a veritable "boom" in canneries this year. At the mouth of almost every river there is a canning establishment. The rivers are almost alive with fish, and in all probability the catch this year will be an enormous one. In Ward's cove and Langow's narrows a gentleman stated that the stream is like a solid mass of salmon, they are so numerous.

Southern Railway Grading.

The grading of the Southern Railway line continues to make most satisfactory progress. Seven and a half miles of the road bed are now ready for the rails, and besides this a large amount of ditching has been accomplished to drain marshy spots along the right of way. Another engineering party leaves on Saturday to work on the section adjoining the international boundary, and the graders will attack this last division as soon as the work is prepared from them. Mr. B. Douglas, president of the Southern Railway, inspected the work on Tuesday, and expressed great satisfaction with the manner and rapidity in which it is being performed. The force of men employed numbers something over 600.

The May Day Dance.

Herring's Opera House presented a pretty scene last night when the music struck up for the first dance. The floor was covered with pretty little misses who ran hither and thither anxiously looking for a partner to guide them through the terpsichorean exercises. The little boys were more shy, and it was only after some laborious coaxing that a few of them were persuaded to take the floor. The May queen and ex-queen, who were cavilered by the chief and assistant chief of the fire department, led off the dance. Other dances followed in rapid succession till 10 o'clock, when the little ones were bundled home and the "youth and beauty" of the Royal City took the floor and continued the ball with untiring energy for a few hours longer. The manner in which the whole arrangements of the day were carried out reflects the highest credit on the executive ability of the Hyacks, and to them the public generally are indebted for the many pleasures so heartily enjoyed. Well done Hyacks!

The Opera House was generously placed at the use of the Hyacks, free of cost, by Mr. A. M. Herring, the proprietor. The Gas Co. kindly furnished the gas free.

A Different Statement.

In reference to the item in THE COLUMBIAN of the 30th inst., headed "A Bad Case," Ah Foo, whose name appears in it, supplies us with the following statement, which places the matter as far as he is concerned in a much different light:

The woman Ah Moy is not, as stated, a half breed, but is a China woman, the wife of a Chinaman who is at present away on a visit to China. The information laid by me against her was on account of her wrongfully keeping certain articles and money given to her to be given to her husband, to be taken by him to China, and was only withdrawn upon full restitution being made, and not as suggested because the charge could not be proved. The assault case at present pending arose, as far as I am aware of the facts, as follows: The complainant with another Chinaman was left in charge of the defendant's store, and upon the latter's return the other two left and shortly after the defendant discovered that a pair of pants and a watch were missing. He thereupon found the complainant, who accused the other man of stealing them, and promised to help to find him. After an unavailing search he denied his former statement and said he knew nothing about it and a quarrel ensued, during which the alleged assault took place. These shortly are the facts, and as far as I know the woman has nothing to do with the case.

Assault.

Mr. A. J. McColl, barrister, was assaulted last night by Edward Gold in a seemingly most cowardly manner. The facts as related by Mr. McColl are as follows: He was returning home after a hard day's works at the assizes, and when almost opposite Mr. H. V. Edmond's residence he was suddenly struck from behind, the blow falling heavily on the back of his head. Mr. McColl was partially stunned by the blow, and before he had time to recover the blows were repeated, following each other in rapid succession. The night was dark and Mr. McColl could not distinguish whether or not more than one person was engaged in the assault. Thinking he was assailed by footpads he called for help and ran in the direction of Blackwood street, at the corner of which he met Mr. J. C. Armstrong and two men. A moment later Edward Gold came up and attempted to repeat the assault, but was prevented from doing so by Mr. Armstrong and the other people who had been attracted by the sounds of the disturbance. It was not until Gold came under the gas light that Mr. McColl learned who his assailant was. A warrant was immediately issued for Gold's arrest, and Mr. Moresby took the case in hand and served it. At the police court this morning Mr. Bole, Q.C., appeared for the prosecution, and asked that the case be remanded till to-morrow, as Mr McColl was busy with the assizes. Capt. Pittendrigh, the presiding magistrate, granted the remand and Gold was held in bail to appear. The assault arose out of a difficulty in settleing some legal matters.

Spring Assizes.

(Mr. Justice McCreight Presiding.)

Wednesday, May 1.

Regina vs Hanley: G. D. Brymner, agent Bank of Montreal, sworn, said: The bills produced are not genuine.

J. C. Dockerill, accountant of the Bank of British Columbia, also denied their genuineness.

John McLaren of the Vancouver police force, sworn: I arrested the prisoner on the 12th of March; I found certain chemicals in his possession which I here produce; a man named Watson pointed out prisoner to me, I had conversation with him with respect to the money; I took him to Mrs. Franks' to see if she would identify him; she recognised his pipe and his pocket book before she did the man; I partly searched his trunk on that night; I found these chemicals which I produce, and I found also a false whisker.

John Watson, sworn, said: I saw the prisoner previous to meeting him in Franks' store; some time in March; he passed a $5 bill; I gave evidence in this case at the police court at Vancouver; the $5 bill was produced there, and I recognised it as the one passed off on Mrs. Franks.

Moses Gibson, sworn: I know the accused; I have known him for nearly nine years; I keep a hotel; the accused lived at my hotel; he and I had supper together on the 3rd of March; it was about 6.15 o'clock; after tea the accused took a walk out and returned about 9.30 o'clock.

To McColl: I keep a medium class house; I was on trial in the police court at Vancouver for a criminal offence; I was found guilty of selling whiskey to Indians; the accused lived in my house about five months; he is a carpenter by trade; he bore a good character in the east; I knew him for a number of years before he came to British Columbia.

This concluded the evidence in the case.

After a brief address by Mr. Atkinson, his lordship charged the jury at some length. He remarked that forgery did not merely consist in putting another man's name to a document, but in endeavoring to give the appearance of truth to mere deceit and falsehood. "The first thing for you to do in this case is to enquire if this is a genuine bill? If it is not a genuine bill, did the accused utter it with a guilty knowledge? In all these cases there are concomitant and surrounding circumstances that must be taken into account. There is nothing strange about a man calling at a hotel about dusk and asking for a glass of liquor and then asking to change a $5 bill, but under certain circumstances it might have important significance. If the accused had a guilty knowledge of this bill he might suppose that he would be more successful in passing it off at that hour of the day."

The jury retired and in about two and a half hours returned with a verdict of guilty. The prisoner was then remanded for sentence and the court adjourned until Thursday morning at 11 o'clock.

Thursday, May 2.

The court re-assembled at 10 o'clock.

The names of the petit jurors were called.

J. R. McNeill, charged with uttering forged bank notes, was placed in the dock. He pleaded not guilty.

Mr. McColl appeared for the prosecution and Mr. Atkinson and Mr. Townley for the defence.

Garret Moore sworn: I lived at Langley before I came here about a month ago; am a carpenter; I remember the day we were playing a game of cards in King & Keery's hotel; we played along until about 2 o'clock in the morning; McNeill was not playing cards; he was attending bar; Walter asked McNeill for a $5 bill; prisoner beckoned Walter Moore to the bar; Moore then went to the card table and put down the $5 bill and asked me to change it; he came in after a few moments with another $5 bill and asked to change it; I gave him good money for it; I paid no particular attention to the character of the bills at the time; I said when I received the first bill that I did not think that it was good; he replied that he was not the man that could not make that amount good; I called McNeil to the card table and asked him if the bills he gave Walter Moore were good; he gave me no satisfactory reply; I met McNeill again before going to bed; he said that the bills were not good; that he got them up town and he was afraid that he would get into trouble about them; he said that he got the bills from Walter Moore; I went next morning about 6:30 and asked him to come down that I wished to see him; I said to him that if he did not look after McNeill I would look after him.

Cross-examined by Mr. Atkinson:—We played cards on several occasions; I do not remember any other occasions in particular; we began to play cards on 22nd March about 4 o'clock in the afternoon; the name of the game is "stud poker;" I do not remember the time of the day that I first saw McNeill; I am sure I saw him at 4 o'clock p.m.; there were several others in the room besides those who were engaged playing cards; the table on which we were playing stood at a distance of about 14 feet from the bar; the game we were playing is sometimes called "whiskey poker;" Walter Moore did not seem to have any money except what he received from McNeill; McNeill took the bill from a pocket on his right side, inside his vest; I did not see where Walter Moore got the second bill.

The court ruled that the witness need not answer that question; a charge amounted to nothing, but if the prisoner was convicted on any charge he might be compelled to answer a question respecting the said charge.

Mr. W. H. Falding, registrar of the court deposed: The bills in question have not been tampered with since I took possession of them, but they have faded some since.

Mr. Moresby was the next witness. He deposed: I received the bills from Constable Pearce and handed them over to Mr. Falding.

A juror named Irving who was not present yesterday when the roll was called was asked to account for his absence. He explained that he had no intention to treat the court with contempt, but had simply forgotten the date of the assizes. His lordship said as this was his first offence and probably an unintentional one the court would deal with him as lightly as possible. Mr. Irving was then dismissed on paying the costs in the case, which amounted to $6.00.

The court assembled at 1 o'clock.

Walter Moore, sworn, said: Shortly after McNeill gave me the bill he came in and beckoned to me to go out to the bar; I went out; he gave me another $5 bill; I lost the proceeds of the first bill and a portion of the proceeds of the second bill; I had about $9 of my own money when I began to play; Garret Moore told me that the two bills I got from McNeill were not good; I was arrested in connection with this case; when I was changing the second bill, Garret Moore asked me if the bills were good; I said that I was good for the amount.

Cross-examined: I was tending bar about 30 minutes; McNeill asked me if I could play poker; I said I could; McNeill then said he would stake me; he put his hand in his pocket and brought out a roll of bills and gave me the $5 bill and put the rest back in his pocket; I gave the bill to Garret Moore; the two bills I received from McNeill I changed with Garret Moore. Garret Moore said to me that he would give a certain time to settle the matter; I replied "how can it be settled;" he said something about $100; I cannot swear whether he said it would cost $100 or that he said he would settle the matter for $100.

Mr. Moresby, sworn: I think it was about the 23rd of March that I arrested the prisoner; he was shown one note; he said he received it from a party in Toronto.

Constable Pearce, sworn: I know Garret Moore; I got one bill from him; I gave it to Mr. Moresby; I was present at the time McNeill was searched; he said he got the bills from a man in Toronto; the notes were here produced; I recognize the notes produced as the same taken from the prisoner.

Alexander Morrison, sworn: I know Garret Moore and was present when the game of cards was played; Walter Moore passed something to Garret Moore and the latter said it was not good.

John Uren, a photographer, on being sworn, was shown the bills. He said he believed them to have been photographed, and he could produce bills very nearly like them by the process of photographing.

Simeon Huff, sworn: I have known the prisoner for the past 13 years and before he came to this province; he resided at a town named Madoc; he kept a hotel in Victoria; I was in his employ there.

The witnesses for the defense were then called.

Robt. Keery sworn: I am a partner in the Eickhoff house; I remember the evening of the 21st of March; asked McNeill to attend bar for me; I know the position in which the table stood; if McNeill was standing close to the bar he could not see Moore when sitting at the card table; Garret Moore lived in the house about one month; he said that he would attend bar for me and play cards to rope the boys in; told him I did not want any man to play cards in my house for money.

Thos. Levi, sworn, said he had known Garret Moore about 3 years but knew nothing of his character.

His lordship remarked that the best character a man can have is to have none at all.

Murdock McLean swore he had known McNeill 13 years, and knew nothing wrong of him.

A. Hill, C.E., testified he had known Garret Moore for 3 years, and thought he had always borne a good character.

Just as we go to press the jury brought in a verdict of guilty against McNeill.

PERSONAL.

A. O. Hastings, of Vancouver, was in the city to-day.

H. A. Berry came over from the terminal city yesterday.
