NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Sir Charles Russell, the celebrated counsel who acted for the Irish party before the Parnell commission, is the father of thirteen girls, so that he has an opportunity of putting home rule into practice.

One of the rules in the Royal Library in Berlin, made with a view to preserving quiet and good order, calls for the exclusion of all members of the gentler sex. Some of Bismarck's nasty work, probably.

An annexation league, it is said, is being formed in Buffalo. It would be just as well to go slow in this matter. The last time that an attempt was made to regulate Canadian politics from Buffalo the affair did not pan our as well as its promoters hoped.—Ex.

Michell Allen, of Woodbury, Conn., owned a horse which had been raised near by. After some time it was sold in Bridgeport. Years after Mr. Allen was surprised to see it walking weariedly past the house. It went to its old pasture, made its way in, laid down and died.

Doctor—How is your husband, Aunt Cynthia? Aunt Cynthia—He's wuss dis mawnin' doctah, lot's wuss. Doctor—Did you give him that medicine as I directed—a teaspoonful every hour? Aunt Cynthia—No, doctah, I jest give him de whole bottle ter wunst. He wanted to hurry up and git well so's ter gwine to de show ter night.

The Irish race, in matrimonial fidelity, challenges the world. Recently issued statistics on divorce show this country leading in the granting of half a million divorces in twenty years. Numerous European nations emulated us, but opposite Ireland the number is found only to be eleven. The Irish marry "for better or for worse, until death us do part," and yet this is the race the Tory government of England would have us believe devoid of fidelity, of integrity and honor.—Am. paper.

The discussion on high schools, and incidentally upon Ontario's educational system, was exceedingly interesting, says the Empire, referring to a debate in the Ontario legislature, and continues: It brought out the fact that there is a general agreement about the public school curriculum being overloaded to the detriment of thoroughness in the teaching. The principal objection to making the imposition of fees at high schools and collegiate institutes obligatory, was that it would be a retrogade step, and opposed to the spirit of free education. That improvements are desirable in the puplic school studies was not denied by any of the speakers.

The Times is in a bad way about Victoria. We clip the following from an editorial in a recent issue: "Finally, the city should have a park on general principles. Victoria should have something to recommend it to the visitor besides the fact of its being the "jumping-off" place of the British possessions in the occident and the scene of the location of the Driard hotel. To the man who attaches a romantic interest to a city which represents an extreme occidental feature, in conjunction with a hotel famous for its ability to meet the requirements of the inner man, a park is a secondary consideration. But all men are not built that way, and besides, a city without a park now-a-days is behind the times. Need we say anything more? We think not." Don't!

The New Westminster COLUMBIAN, referring to the celebration which the people of Victoria intend to hold on the Queen's Birthday and to the fact that the citizens of Vancouver have come to look upon Dominion Day as the time at which they expect to be visited by "their uncles, their cousins and their aunts" from every part of the province, thinks it might be judicious if the people of the Royal City reserved their special celebration for the week in which the Provincial Agricultural Association will hold its annual meeting in that place. We cordially agree with the suggestion of our cotemporary as by such a course the complete success of the festivities at each of the three places will be almost certainly ensured by the residents of each city co-operating with those of the others in making the three celebrations worthy of the important commercial, political and social centres of the province in which they are held. Such events are of very great benefit in bringing together the people of the various sections of the province, making them acquainted with one another and tending in many ways to conduce to the object which we all have in view—the progress and prosperity of British Columbia.—News.

Jonathan Martin, in the terrible St. George railway, accident, died at place Saturday. Mr Martin was an old and highly esteemed citizen, having been in the bakery and confectionery business for the past forty years. He leaves a widow and a grown up family to mourn his sad and untimely end.

At a convention of the third party it was determined to establish a weekly organ at Toronto to advocate the principles embodied in the platform whenever $25,000 worth of stock was subscribed.

THE GOLD FINDS

In Lower California are Greatly Overestimated. No Rich Finds Have been Made.

Fiends in Human Form Wreck a Train and Cause two Deaths in Texas.

The Northern Pacific Makes a Big Railway Deal and gets Entrance to Chicago.

A TERRIBLE EXPLOSION.

NEW YORK, Monday 25.—Shortly before noon to-day a loud report startled the crowds of passers by at the junction of the fifth avenue, Broadway and 23rd street, just off the junction and on the side of the street next to the Fifth Avenue Hotel. The sidewalk was blown high into the air. Showers of stones and fragments of flagging fell on passers and at least six persons were thrown down and more or less injured, but none seriously. Windows of stores on the corner under the Fifth avenue hotel were shattered. There is a huge hole in the sidewalk next to the hotel on 23rd street. It is found that the explosion is due to the electric subway.

NOT SIGNED YET.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 25.—President Colby, of the Wisconsin Central Railroad, when seen this morning regarding the reported contract between the Wisconsin Central and Northern Pacific Railways, said no agreement has yet been signed. He refused to state whether or not an agreement had been entered into between the two roads.

TWO BOYS DROWNED.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 25.—George Ambrose, aged nine years, and Fred. Krauss, aged eleven years, while playing on the banks of a pond, yesterday, fellin and were drowned.

A CRAZY MAN.

WORCHESTER, Mass., March 25.—Albert Ernstrom shot and fatally wounded Emily Schenckle, yesterday, for refusing to marry him. He then blew his brains out.

THE N. P. EXTENDING.

PHILADELPHIA, March 25.—The Enquirer has learned from a well known railroad man, that the Northern Pacific has at last secured control of the Wisconsin Central Railroad, and through it an entrance to Chicago. The directors of the company will hold a special meeting in New York city, next Wednesday, to approve of the formal lease, but it will be a purely formal matter, as the directors are a unit on the question. The company has already, practically, control of the Wisconsin Central's lines. The lease is for a comparatively short time, either for thirty-three or ninety-nine years. The period has not been determined yet. It is an operating lease, that is the Northern Pacific is to operate the road and pay a rental of 35 per cent. of the gross receipts. All the Northern Pacifics Chicago business will be thrown upon the Wisconsin Central lines instead of being divided up between all the roads running between Chicago and St. Paul.

CALIFORNIA GOLD FIELDS

SAN FRANCISCO, March 25.—The str. Alanjandro, which arrived from Mexico, via Ensenda, this morning, brings some definite news regarding the gold fields in lower California. Gold exists but not to such an extent as to warrant the present heavy influx of people. The gold can only be obtained by means of machinery and many being without this have returned to their homes.

TRAIN WRECKERS AT WORK.

LAREDO, Texas, Mar. 25.—The north bound passenger train from Mexico, on the Mexican National road, was wrecked at Malvato last night. The engineer and fireman were instantly killed. It is believed the disaster was caused by train wreckers, as a large pile of stones was found on the track.

JUDGE MATTHEWS' FUNERAL.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The funeral services over the remains of Justice Stanley Matthews was held at his late residence at 1 o'clock to-day. Rev. Dr. Hamlin, pastor of the church of the Covenant, assisted by Dr. Leonard, conducted the services. President Harrison and the members of the cabinet, Chief Justice Fuller and the associate justices of the supreme court, a larg number of senators and many personal friends and acquaintances of the deceased attended the funeral. Chief Justice Fuller and his associates on the supreme court bench, acted as honorary pall-bearers. After the services were over the remains were taken to the Baltimore & Ohio depot, and at three o'clock the train bearing the remains, members of the family of Justices Fuller, Gray, Blatchford and Lamar leave for Glendale, Judge Matthew's country home, near Cincinnati, where the funeral services and interment will take place to-morrow.

DEPEW GETS THE ENGLISH MISSION.

NEW YORK, March 23.—The World this morning, says: It can be stated on the highest authority that Chauncey M. Depow has been offered the English Mission, and has signified his willingness to accept it. The nomination will not be deferred later than Monday.

BARRACKS BURNED.

HALIFAX, N. S., March 23.—A fire to-night inside the citadel fort burned the royal artillery barracks. The barracks consisted of an immense three-story wooden building and is entirely destroyed. Large powder magazines were in the proximity to the fire, but were saved. The magazines were filled with power and shells.

DONOHUE RELEASED.

OTTAWA, March 23.—John Donohue, known along the Niagara frontier as "Clutch" Donohue, the notorious "Fence," who has been serving out a sentence of six years in Kingston prison was, released to-day on representation that he is dying of consumption and has but a few days to live, his wife made a pathetic appeal to the minister of justice that her husband be permitted to die outside of prison, and her request was granted. Donohue kept the Queen's Hotel at Erie and was implicated in numerous American robberies on the American side, acting as receiver of stolen goods. He was sued by the United States Express to recover the value of bonds stolen at Susquehanna, Pa., and which were said to have come into Donohue's possession in his capacity as "Fence." The Express Co. also furnished evidence which led to his arrest on criminal charges of being receiver of stolen goods, on which charge he was convicted.

VICTORIA NEWS.

A Passenger Aboard the S. S. Umatilla Suicides and a Private in "C" Battery Attempts to Blow his Head off.

Special to the COLUMBIAN.

VICTORIA, March 25.—The s. s. Umatilla arrived from the Sound this morning and sailed at one p. m. for San Francisco with ninety passengers. While on the voyage from the Sound a passenger committed suicide by taking a dose of creosote. The inquest will be held this afternoon.

Yesterday morning a private of "C" Battery while under the influence of liquor, attempted suicide. He loaded a rifle, attached a string to the trigger and was about to blow off his cranium, when he was taken in charge by an officer.

The Salmon Trade.

A San Francisco despatch says: Eight vessels left port yesterday bound for Alaska to engage in the salmon trade. It is known that there are sixteen more vessels listed to follow those that have cleared this year, including two new steamers. This makes a total of forty-six vessels for Alaska this year. Many of these vessels will remain at their destination until fall, when they will, it is thought, all come back loaded with salmon. It is estimated here that over 700,000 cases of Oregon, British Columbia and Alaska salmon, of the pack of 1889, have already been sold, and not a single fish caught. It is understood here that fishing will be commenced on the Columbia river, under the law, on the 1st of April.

German Singing Birds.

In Germany and other countries of Europe there are many singing birds, beautiful in plumage musical in song, that are not native to America. Among these are the nightingale, song thrush, bullfinch, skylark and others. A year ago a movement was made by citizens of Portland to import a thousand of these birds into Oregon, with the expectation that they would rapidly increase in numbers and soon become as plentiful as the native birds. They will arive in May, and will be turned loose in and near city. The mocking bird, bob-o-link and red bird are also to be taken to Oregon from the southern states. The mild climate of Oregon will uo doubt be appreciated by what The West Shore Magazine calls "Our Feathered Immigrants," which is the title of a large art supplement accompanying the magazine for March. This is an elegant piece of artistic printing in colors, and shows these birds, sixteen distinct kinds, in their natural colors. Every lover of birds will be charmed with this beautiful engraving. The number also contains a description of them, as well as engravings and descriptions of North Yakima, Wash., and Rainier and St. Helens, Oregon, and much other interesting and valuable information about the Pacific northwest. Price, $2.50 a year, 25 cents a copy. address L. Samuel, publisher. Portland, Oregon.

CORRESPONDENCE.

"Progress" Advances.

EDITOR COLUMBIAN.—Your editorial strictures upon my letters would have remained unanswered but for two things. 1st, you have made me say, "and for fifteen miles back," &c., which should have been printed "ten miles," &c., a slight difference of only 100 square miles. Again, in using the "Folder" in discussing the bridge question, it is necessary to use a little of that seemingly rare gift, common sense. Traffic will take the most expeditious route, time is money—Chilliwhack, Matsqui, Sumas, and the Delta will never cross the bridge except for pleasure. A large part of Langley can reach the city by boat as cheaply as by driving; and if every effort is not made to build up our city the railroads that will shortly form a network through Surrey, Langley and the Delta will take the produce by us that should come here. I might add, by way of parenthesis, that except it rare cases it is usual for correspondents to withhold their names from publication, but if you will publish the name of the writer of the article headed "No Surrender" and of your exceedingly reliable editorial, you are at liberty to place my name to this letter, otherwise I beg to subscribe myself PROGRESS.

B. C. Provincial Exposition Subscription Fund.

For the purpose of raising a fund to contribute towards the patriotic and worthy object of making the next annual provincial fair, to be held in this city, a grand and unprecedented success, the undersigned agree to contribute the sums opposite their respective names (to be paid into the association or to trustees competent to receive the same, on or before 6 months from the date of the last provincial exhibition, and to be applied to preparing exhibition grounds and buildings in the city, for increasing the amount offered in prizes, and for furthering the exhibition in other ways):

WOUNDED HONOR

Induces two Frenchmen and two Italians to Scratch Each Other with Swords.

The Financial Crisis in Europe Over and Some Banks are Strengthened Thereby.

Lord Salisbury is not yet Inclined to Believe the Parnell Letters are Forgeries.

THE GREAT FRENCH DUEL.

PARIS, March 25.—A duel with swords has taken place between De Lonlay, a member of the chamber of deputies, and Gerault Richard who attacked the former in a newspaper article. DeLonlay was slightly wounded in three places.

THE GREAT ITALIAN DUEL.

ROME, March 25.—Under secretary of war Corveto was slightly wounded by deputy Cavalitti in a duel with swords yesterday. A personal dispute was the cause.

THE FINANCIAL CRISIS.

LONDON, March 25.—The markets today are quiet and little or nothing is doing. Advices from abroad are favorable, and foreign securities are steady. It looks as if the continental bourses have all recovered from the effect of the recent crisis in Paris. The general effect has been minimized by the joint efforts of bankers and capitalists, only individual speculators are the sufferers. The credit foncier, against which there were whispers of weakness last night, passed triumphantly through the tremendous pressure of the last two weeks and has come out stronger than ever, having gained by the disturbance. The banque de Paris also held its own although it was somewhat interested in the speculation and felt slightly the collapse. The bank of France has not been disturbed by the large advances made to serve the moneyed institutions, having been amptly secured, so the crisis has passed off without disaster.

HOME RULE INEVITABLE.

LONDON, March 23.—Mr. Jacob Bright is the authority for stating that Mr. Froude admitted that the policy of home rule was inevitable and must sooner or later be tried. When Mr. Parnell was told of Mr. Froude's admission, the Irish leader said he was not in the slightest degree surprised to to hear it, and he volunteered the information that it was the study of Froude's work on "the English in Ireland" that first had the effect of making him a home ruler. Mr. Morley's speech in the house of commons on Thursday night in which he said it would be irrational to propose a vote of censure of the government now, because fresh disclosures were made daily, but that it would come in good time, has created a lively discussion on the question: is it possible to bring about a dissolution? Several months ago in a conversation with Mr. Cobb, the liberal member for Rugby, Mr. Gladstone expressed the opinion that when the country is ripe for dissolution there were means by which it could be accomplished. The ex-premier has recently been reminded of this conversation and representations have been made to him from members below the gangway to the effect that the time is fast approaching when a dissolution ought to be demanded.

A DOUBTING THOMAS.

LONDON, March, 23.—Much surprise is created, not only in Liberal, but in Conservative circles as weil, at the public announcement made by Lord Salisbury in his speech this week that he still believes that the Parnell letters were genuine, especially as a piece of evidence has been brought out which put the forgery altogether beyond the possibility of cavil or dispute. This evidence was supplied by means of the science of photography; when the letters were produced in court they were photographed in the usual way. These photographs were afterwards made into enlargements, and the enlargement disclosed in the clearest way that the tracing had been made in the forgery in pencil, including the signature of Parnell, and that over the pencil tracing, plainly to be seen by the naked eye, was the careful penmanship of the forger, and when he missed the exact tracing the pencil marks became clear in the photographic plate. Not only so but the lines the forger had made appeared across the face of the letter, and most astonishing of all, at the foot and end of the letter the enlarged photograph revealed a most curious scribbling of names. Healy's name, for example, was pencilled in Roman characters. These facts should have dispelled any doubts Lord Salisbury may have had as they did with other members of the cabinet. Even Mr. Froude, who firmly believed in the "Parnell letters," when shown one of these photographs by Mr. Jacob Bright, said that he considered it to be simply incredible that such a paper as the Times should have published these letters without first taking every means in its power to test and establish their genuineness.

The short letter of "Progress," in another column, on a question of privilege, so to speak, will stand a word of comment. We regret the verbal error referred to, but the fault is about equally divided between our correspondent and the "intelligent compositor"—the words "for ten," which the writer intended, being so carelessly written and nearly run together, as to be casually taken for the offending "fifteen." It is not our purpose to waste any time making obvious contradictions to some of our correspondent's remarks in the body of his letter, but to touch briefly on other points. "Progress" is evidently laboring under the mistake that we want his name for publication. Nothing could be farther from our thoughts. What we did say, in effect, on Saturday, was, that it would have been better, in the interests of the Ross, McL. Mills, if some one, for the company, had written authoritatively on the subject, over his own name, which, we also stated, we had expected would be done. Our correspondent surely could not have thought we meant him, as he must know that his name to an article on such a subject as he essayed last week, so far from adding "authority," would detract, in the public estimation, at least, from what little weight the articles might have under a nom de plume. "Progress" caps the climax when he asks us to "publish the name of the writer of your exceedingly reliable editorial." The ignorance implied in such a request calls no more loudly for enlightenment than does the impertinence demand rebuke. If our correspondent will take the trouble to sweep his optics over the head of the column, immediately above "our" "exceedingly reliable editorials," he will find out who are the responsible parties for anything published in this paper—and that is all he has any business to know.

Vancouver has bitten off more than she can swallow; the hands of her great men—her councillors—are actually so full of something or other, high priced "dirt" probably, that they have allowed the legislative harvest to pass without getting some very desirable and important amendments to the "salt water terminus" city charter "put through the house." There is not sufficient time now at the present session of the provincial parliament to have the necessary bill introduced and "put through" in proper order, and it is understood that a Vancouver delegation, "foolish virgin"-wise, will shortly go to James Bay, and, with fists and heels, pommel frantically at the doors of the assembly for a suspension of the rules. The Vancouver News pleads for a special dispensation thus, at the same time boxing the ears of the delinquents: "It is, of course, absolutely necessary for the proper conduct of business of the legislature that its regulations and rules of procedure should be observed by all persons or corporations who may have occasion to ask for the passage of any measure, and the fact that in such an important matter as the amendment of the city charter, due regard has not been paid to this subject, shows that some person or persons connected with our municipal authorities has been negligent in the duties he was charged with. But it would be an act of grace for which the government and the legislature would lay our citizens under considerable obligations, if some plan were devised by them by which the bill embodying the proposed amendments could be carried through the house at its present session." If "Too late, too late; ye cannot enter now" should be the only greeting the Vancouver "foolish virgins" are vouchsafed, shrieked wierdly through the keyhole of the closed doors of the assembly, could anyone question the justice of the edict? Vancouver's predicament should be a warning to other corporations. It was, no doubt, the naughty "deadlock," when mayor and councillors were in each other's hair for a month or so, that is responsible for the city's interests being thus overlooked and neglected. We wish Vancouver no loss as a consequence, and, under the circumstances, shall not enter a protest to the suspension of the rules, but don't let it occur again, we would say to the "empire city" culprits. Take a leaf from the book of our methodical and energetic council of the royal city, who are attending to the city's interests in legislative matters "right up to the handle."

Cleveland is not the sort of a man to disappear from view simply because he has had to step down and out of the white house. The ex-president, by his force of character and strong individuality, has become necessary to his country, and will be heard from often in the future, without doubt, while his public utterances will always command that respect which their weight, judgment, and good sound sense entitle them to receive. Cleveland made his first public appearance as a private citizen in New York, on the evening of the 16th inst., the 105th anniversary dinner of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, at Delmonico's. At the dinner he received an ovation which could not have been excelled in point of warmth and sociability. The ex-president was attired, it is stated, in a dress suit and was given a seat in the banquet hall on the right of the presiding officer, the mayor of New York occupying the corresponding seat on the other side. After the banquet, when the president, Joseph J. O'Donoghue's, brief introduction was concluded with Cleveland's name, the diners cheered lustily. While the din was at its height, Cleveland, his face a trifle pale, slowly arose and acknowledged the reception given him. The cheering having finally subsided, he began his address, speaking clearly and easily. Some of his remarks are worthy of being reproduced, and are as follows: "The words to which I respond give rise to such various and impressive reflections that I find it difficult to determine the line of thought which should be followed. What is naturally and obviously suggested by the sentiment proposed is a country marvelous in its growth and development, great in its power and wealth, and free in its character, its institutions and its people. There is also suggested a broad and hospitable country which opens its gates to the people of all nations who are willing to assume the duties of American citizenship in exchange for a share in the blessings which God has in store for the American people. * * * We acknowledge we have received from the sturdy men of other lands additions to our population and true elements to our greatness. But other nations, too, are great. They are prosperous and rich, and in a measure they are free. States may mean any organized government, tyrannical, monarchial or free. It is therefore most important that we do not miss the reflection that 'the United States' alone stands for one government, always free and founded upon human rights and equality before the law. Our national life is inseparable from this union of state. Thus it was launched upon its career among the nations of the earth. Its machinery is suited to no other condition, and its success depends upon it. Whatever might be the achievements of separate and disjointed states, nothing but the triumph of the United States can be demonstrated in the eyes of the world in the success of the American exponent of self-government. We should not be content with veneration for those who made us a nation, nor with the sacred and grateful remembrance of those who shed their blood and gave their lives for its perpetuation. We, too, owe a duty to the United States. We can at least teach fraternity and toleration as the sure foundation of the unity of our country. If those precepts are firmly established in the hearts of our countrymen, we shall, to the extent that we aid in this consummation, perform the duty required of us in our day and generation. Let us resolve that no partisan exigency shall excuse the creation or keeping alive of irritation and jealousy and among a people all charged with the safety, development and triumph of American institutions. Our destiny is before us. It can only be reached by union and harmony. We are not called upon to surrender or jeopardize any results in favor of our union which we may have gained in its armed defence, but rather to foster and secure those results through patriotism and magnanimity. In the presence of the duty God has laid upon us as a nation it should never be forgotten that failure rests on dissension and division, and that a grudging acknowledgment of our common brotherhood or any failure of healthy co-operation in a common patriotic purpose will surely check our national progress."

JAMES CUNNINGHAM.

Importer of Hardware, Agricultural Implements, Etc.

In every city there are individual examples of men whose connections with its business pursuits, whose prominence in all matters of public enterprise, whose record for unflinching integrity, undaunted energy, and untiring industry, make them objects of special note, not alone in their homes, but wherever exalted commercial reputation is recognized and respected, such a man have we in the subject of this sketch. Mr. James Cunningham established his business in this city in 1862 and has, through all the vicissitudes of twenty seven years' trade, maintained the even tenor of his way. His transactions have increased year by year, and the circle of his customers and patrons gradually widening and his firm extending until he now controls a business unexcelled by any similar establishment in British Columbia. His buildings are large and commodious and admirably arranged and appointed. All this space is filled with a complete and extensive assortment of hardware, agricultural implements, paints, oils, glassware, crockeryware, wall-paper, woodenware, stoves, tinware, hollow-ware, plumbers' goods, house furnishings, iron pipe and fittings. This house also manufactures tinware of all kinds and does every variety of sheet-iron cornice work, gas-fittings, plumbing, roofing, etc. There is no house in the trade which carries a more complete stock or whose facilities surpass those of this establishment for supplying the trade with first-class goods at lowest quotations. The length of time this gentleman has been in business and the success he has attained are better recommendations than the loudest praise we could possibly give. We may mention, however, to our readers who have not yet become acquainted with this firm, that none in the Northwest has a better reputation for fair and honorable dealing. —Mercantile Review.

THE FRIVOLOUS GIRL.

Her silken gown it rustles,
As she goes down the stair;
And in all the place there's ne'er a face
One-half, one-half so fair.
But oh! I saw her yesterday—
And no one knew 't was she—
When a little sick child looked up and smiled,
As she sat on my lady's knee.

Her fan it flirts and flutters,
Her eyes grow bright—grow dim—
And all around no man is found
But thinks she thinks of him.
But oh! to her the best of all,
Though they be great and grand,
Are less than the sick whose smiles come quick
At the touch of my lady's hand.

Her little shoe of satin
Peeps underneath her skirt—
And a foot so small ought never at all
To move in mire and dirt.
But oh! she goes among the poor,
And heavy hearts rejoice—
As they can tell who know her well—
To hear my lady's voice.

Her glove is soft as feathers
Upon the nestling dove;
Its touch so light I have no right
To think, to dream of love—
But oh! when, clad in simplest garb,
She goes where none may see,
I watch, and pray that some happy day
My lady may pity Me.

CHINESE DOCTORS.

Their Pills, Poultices and General Methods of Practice.

What the Chinese know of medicine and anatomy may, according to the New York Herald, be summed up as follows: To them the body is a mash of flesh, supported by the bony framework and held in place by the skin. The blood flows through, but whether continuously in a circle or not is not clearly understood.

The brain is the seat of the yin, or female principle, the base of which has a sort of telegraphic communication with the whole body through the marrow. In the thorax are the lungs, consisting of six lobes, four on one side and two on the other. These lobes regulate the muscular activity of various parts of the body. Respiration is performed in the abdominal region, which, in the case of a scholar, is filled with learning. The heart is immediately below the lungs, and is the abode of the thinking principle. The liver is at the right of the heart, and is the seat of the passions.

The gall bladder supplies the human being with courage. Chinese history mentions a great General whose gall bladder was as large as a quart measure. From this his valor may be inferred. It is not an uncommon thing for the Chinese soldiers to eat the gall of fierce animals for the purpose of increasing their courage. Their ideas concerning digestion and assimilation of food are equally misty.

Sickness is as often ascribed to the agency of evil spirits as to natural causes. But if health results from the right proportions of the five elements—fire, earth, metal, wood and water—that go to make up the human form divine, the wrong proportions of the same will bring about all sorts of diseases.

The Chinese have, accordingly, two classes of doctors—one that makes a specialty of diseases caused by evil spirits, and the other that comprises all regular practitioners, whose duty is to restore the five elements to their normal portions.

The confidence placed in the diagnostic virtues of the pulse is unlimited. The radial pulse is not the only one depended upon, but there are three places on the right wrist where the pulse is felt, and the same number on the left. Chinese doctors distinguish twenty-four different kinds of pulse beats. According as the pressure is light or heavy they are enabled to diagnose the state of the organs. The right wrist gives information concerning the condition of the heart and intestines, and the left concerning the condition of the stomach and lungs.

The skin is considered to rank in importance next to the pulse. Names are given to almost every square inch of it. Hence Chinese doctors are especially liberal with poultices and plasters. Not infrequently the plaster that has effected a cure is pasted on the wall of a doctor's office. The number of such plasters indicate the quality of the practitioner and the extent of his experience.

Chinese doctors are also very liberal with their doses of medicine. In this matter of size they are catering to the public taste, for their patient is not pleased with either simple or small doses. His medicine must be compounded of at least five different drugs, in quantities large enough to have a telling effect. Hence the Chinese have neither respect nor use for homeopathists. No sugar-coated pills for them. The blacker and thicker the mixture the better are they suited. The efficacy of a dose is in direct proportion to its size and nauseousness.

The ingredients used in the art of healing are mainly vegetable substances, of which cinnamon and ginseng are the most costly and highly prized. But mineral substances, such as plumbago, sulphate of copper, calomel, arsenic and red precipitate are just as often prescribed. In addition to these various animal substances are deemed valuable for healing purposes.

The Chinese medical profession may be said to be self-taught, for they did not learn their art in schools of medicine under distinguished specialists. They are mostly scholars who have failed to pass the Government competitive examinations and are too lazy to teach. The perusal of several standard and ancient medical books is sufficient to qualify a man for practice. He hangs out his sign and trusts to chance to procure him his first patients and to luck in his experiments on them. Unless he prescribes deadly drugs he is just as likely to cure as to kill. In the former case Dame Nature deserves all the credit. However, his specifics are almost sure to heal certain simple ailments.

There are fashionable doctors as well as hacks among the Chinese Galens. The former never go out except in Sedan chairs, and the large fees which they have a right to expect are handed them wrapped up in red paper on their departure. The hacks' fees are sometimes made dependent on their success. As Chinese ladies are not permitted to be seen by strange men, they are shielded from view by a curtain with the exception of their wrists, thrust out to be felt by the physician.

The patient also pays for the hire of the Sedan chair, according to the distance he has come. The doctor does not present his bill or demand a certain sum for his services; he accepts whatever is given him. But if he thinks he has been underpaid he will be "busy" the next time you have occasion to summon him. His fees vary from ten cents to several dollars for each visit.

The successfully dosed patient often evinces his gratitude by presenting his doctor with roast pigs and a wooden certificate, two or more feet long and correspondingly wide, bearing appropriate inscriptions. The doctor is thereon likened to the Chinese Esculapius, Wah Foh, or to some almost equally potent healing divinity. These board certificates adorn the front entrance of a doctor's house and are the best kind of advertising known in the far East. On the other hand, the physician whose stupidity is supposed to have killed a patient may have signs and certificates broken to pieces by the latter's angry friends. In that case it is better for the man to leave town if he has any regard for his safety.

The Chinese are no better prepared to perform surgical operations than they are to deal with internal ailments. Still, they pull teeth with great success and little pain, understand how to open a tumor or to reduce fractures by pressure and the application of bandages. Acupuncture was practiced by them in remote ages and is still in vogue. In A. D. 1027 two figures of men were made to show where the needle could be inserted without touching the vital parts. A Dutch surgeon introduced this practice into Europe in the seventeenth century. They have also tried their hand at making artificial teeth, which are fastened to the natural teeth. Ivory has been employed in their manufacture.

Massage, or kneading of the muscles of the upper part of the back, is also quite ancient. Barbers combine it with the business of shaving and queue braiding. It is good in certain cases of neuralgic headaches.

Phlebotomy, or blood-letting, is performed by means of cupping and leeching, but never resorted to in fevers, for fevers are likened to a pot boiling. The thing is to reduce the fire and not the water. Hence ice that has turned into water, no matter how long ago, is deemed a sovereign remedy for fevers.

The American patent medicine man has his prototype in China, generally to be found in front of temples and in public squares. Though not so audacious as the American, he is equally mendacious in proclaiming the unapproachable virtues of his nostrums.

A Chinese lady had a mole removed after this fashion: By means of a brush a little caustic was laid on the mole, where it remained for an hour. The skin about the mole turned black after a day or two, and in a week came off, dragging the mole along with it and leaving a hardly perceptible scar behind. The fee charged was ten cash—equivalent to one cent in American money.

I have hitherto described the methods of the "regular school." The faith-cure men remain to be treated. They are mostly Troist priests, who fatten on the superstitious fears of the ignorant. They do not tell the patient that his disease is only a matter of imagination, but make him believe that he is troubled with evil spirits. Then they proceed to exercise him and force the spirits to abandon their prey by various incantations or by the use of charms, which are merely pieces of yellow paper bearing cabalistic characters. One copy is put on the bed curtain, another is worn next the skin, a third is burned and its ashes dissolved in water and drunk by the patient. Sometimes a medium prescribes while in a trance.

Then, again, an angry deity is supposed to inflict bodily pain on those who have offended him. Priests are hired to propitiate him by the singing of chants, the burning of incense and the offering of food. If the patient gets well the idol gets the credit and a thank offering. If he becomes worse it is because he lacks faith and has not spent money enough. If he dies "it is the will of Heaven." The idol is "well fixed" in any case. The sick man usually drinks the ashes of the incense dissolved in tea. Again, an idol may be asked to prescribe directly, in the following manner:

One hundred different prescriptions are printed and one hundred bamboo slips numbered to correspond to them are put into a holder, which is shaken until one slip drops out. The prescription similarly numbered is picked out and prepared at the drug store like any other, and the resulting coction is then swallowed as any ordinary compound. The chances are ten to one in favor of recovery unless the disease is incurable or the medicine too strong. Does not faith work wonders—for some people?

If nothing else will do a priest is hired to climb a ladder whose rungs are made of swords with the edge turned upward (he is barefoot, mind), while an attendant beats a gong. The swords are enough to scare away evil spirits, but when the priest repeats a powerful spell they are obliged to seek a warmer clime. Then, too, the gods may be induced to pity a sick man who takes so much trouble (to expose other people's feet), in order to propitiate them.

A LAWYER'S START.

How a Pittsburgh Attorney Brought a Female Deadbeat to Time.

Not more than two years ago there lived at one of the principal hotels in this city, says the Pittsburgh Dispatch, a lady of means. It is said that in round numbers she was worth more than $100,000. She dressed very handsomely, kept a carriage and pair and moved in what Thackeray's Jeems would call "the uppah suckles" of society. There is no need to identify her more closely.

Her striking peculiarity—the only one she had—was a deep-rooted aversion to paying bills. She always settled promptly her hotel bill, and the other bills which the maintenance of her establishment produced—the livery-stable's bill, for example—were punctually paid. But all others she incurred she never paid if she could by any means avoid doing so.

I am told that she used to drive up to a first-class store, order a sealskin dolman, a few silk dresses, diamonds or what not, to be sent to her hotel, saying that she would call around in a few days and pay for them. The goods were always sent and that was the end of it. Bills were rendered and bills were sent again, but my lady ignored them altogether. She had obtained the goods in the first place because she was known to be a wealthy woman and of good standing in society. For the same reason she was not sued when she refused to pay. Her many wealthy and honest friends might be offended if she were sued, the storekeepers reasoned and they bore the loss as well as they could.

She would never have paid a cent on any of say a dozen large bills if a smart collection agent had not applied a novel screw to her pocket-book.

The collection agent in question heard of this fashionable deadbeat's performances, and as he was drumming his heels in an 8x12 office on Grant street in an unprofitable idleness at the time he thought he could afford to risk his time—he had nothing else to risk—in experimenting upon her.

Accordingly he called upon one of her creditors to whom she owed a bill of $400. He asked the merchant to allow him to try to collect the money. The merchant warned him that it would be labor lost, but the collector was willing to make the attempt. He got a promise of 50 per cent. of the entire bill if he could collect it.

Then he set to work. He wrote the lady a polite note asking her to call at his office. It was not answered. He wrote a little sharper note. No answer came. Then he stated his claim in very plain letters and figures on a postal card. The lady herself came in great agitation to answer the card. She protested against the use of postal cards, which the hotel clerks, the bell-boys and every body could read.

"Pay the bill, madam," said the collector, "and I'll wait upon you myself with the receipt."

He got two hundred dollars on account at that session. The balance came the next day.

The merchant was delighted, and paid the fifty per cent. commission gladly. Then the collector went to every store of any prominence in the city, and wherever he found a bill against this lady he bought it as cheap as he could. Most of them he bought for a mere song.

He had some little difficulty in turning all of those bad debts into cash, but he always fell back on the postal-card squeezer, and it always did its work quickly and effectually.

In all, I am told that his profit on these transactions amounted to more than $3,000. I know it started him in business and though this all occurred since January 1888, when he was penniless, to-day he has a profitable collection agency and two brick houses of his own.

Manufacture of Crutches.

There are but three factories in the United States in which crutches are exclusively manufactured, one each in Boston, Philadelphia and New York. The crutches which meet with the readiest sale are those with elastic tops, which are generally made of rosewood, lancewood or rock maple, with a patent rubber-cushioned bottom. They sell for $12 a pair. The "cow-horn" crutch is made of a cheap grade of maple with nickel-plated ferules. The handles are securely fastened by a wire rivet running through both sides of the crutch and handle. This is light, tasty and durable. The armpieces and handles are made of black cherry. This crutch brings $10 at retail. Many crutches are made to order, their price depending upon the material employed in their construction. Some cost as high as $100 a pair.

In cases of alcoholic poisoning—the comatose condition of intoxication—the prompt-est recovery of consciousness will follow the subcutaneous injection of a mixture of one part of ammonia with two to six parts of water. Police surgeons who have to deal with cases of unconsciousness will find this a convenient method of determining whether a given case is due to whisky, compression of the brain, or nervous disorder.

The Crib-work Finished.

The contract for building the crib-work on the line of the Southern Railway, near the hatchery, is completed, and the work reflects the highest credit on Mr. N. B. Gauvreau, the engineer in charge. The crib-work is 1900 feet in length, and 60,000 lineal feet of timber were used in its construction. The whole structure is substantial and complete in every detail, and Lemon & Co., the contractors are much pleased with their success. Some 60 laborers are employed filling in the crib-work with earth, and building the road bed to its proper grade.

A New Village.

A new town plot is being laid out on the bank of the North Arm of the Fraser river at the end of the Vancouver North Arm road. Some 50 acres have been cleared and are being grubbed and fenced in a thorough manner. The land will be sold in 5 acre lots and can either be used for market gardens or subdivided into smaller building lots. A store, blacksmith shop and a couple of other small industries will soon be be established at this point, and a daily steamer will connect the new village with Westminster. The situation is central and well chosen and the coming village ought to prosper.

Curtis was elected president of the association, Mr. George Kennedy, first vice-president, Mr. W. H. Higgins, second vice-president, Mr Arthur Rand, treasurer, and Mr. Brydone Jack, recording secretary.

A New Breeding Ground.

The average Victorian never drinks water, and very many perform their ablutions with a dry towel or a curry comb. At least that is what one would infer from the reports from the capital. The water pipes in that city have become a favorite breeding ground for lizards, catfish and other members of the finny tribe, and we expect to hear next week that salmon are endeavoring to squeeze through the filters. Here is the last big find as announced by the Colonist: The tragic tale of the lizard and its journey through the water pipes, which appeared in the city papers a few days ago, was entirely eclipsed yesterday by the appearance of a second little voyager by the way of the filter, water mains and service pipe to the legislative assembly. Mr. Young, the caterer of the house, anxious to procure a glass of water, paid a visit to the tap, and was surprised to see a lively catfish make its appearance. The fish was fully two inches in length.

Charged with Larceny.

At the district court this morning, Captain Pittendrigh, J. P., and P. McTiernan, J. P., presided. They were called upon to investigate the charge of larceny against James L. Sprouster, who is accused of stealing two $20 bank notes, a half sovereign and some small change contained in a pocket book belonging to Mr. G. W. McRae, the school teacher at Port Moody. Sprouster was man of all work in the hotel and had access to all the rooms. He was, it is claimed, working for his board only and did not receive any pay, but this will not be proven until Mr. Scott's evidence is heard. Sprouster left the hotel on Saturday, the 16th inst., and came to Westminster. McRae did not miss the money until the following Thursday, and his suspicions fell on Sprouster. With the assistance of the police it was learned that the accused had changed a $20 bill at M. Des Brisay's store, and the arrest followed. A remand for a week was asked by Mr. Moresby, and granted by the magistrates.

The North Arm Channel.

The people along the north arm of the Fraser, and the cannery men in particular, are beginning to agitate in favor of a means whereby the current in the north arm of the river may be increased. The building of the new wharves from the C.P.R. station westwards, it is claimed, has lessened the volume of water running into the north arm and this has had the effect of blocking up the channel to a considerable extent. It is proposed that a tier of mattrasses, 500 feet long, be extended southward from the head of Lulu Island. This it is thought would turn a sufficient quantity of water into the north arm to keep the channel from blocking up and would possibly deepen it considerably and without detriment to the main channel. There are a number of sand bars at different points along the north arm, which run out a considerable distance from the land and form obstructions to navigation, and an effort will be made to have the dredger employed on these after its duties in connection with the harbor improvements are completed. These matters will be laid before the board of trade at an early date for the consideration of that body.

THE CHURCHES.

What Was Spoken at Some of the City Sanctuaries Yesterday.

METHODIST CHURCH.

Rev. Mr. Jamieson preached from Matt. 25c., 46v.—"And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal"—and spoke as follows:—At the judgment of the great day, Jesus Christ, who is to be the Judge Himself, tells us there will be two possibilities, two classes, two sentences: The righteous will be welcomed to enjoy the incorruptible inheritance, and those who, before this great tribunal, are found with sin stains, and stationed on the left hand of the Judge, will be committed to everlasting punishment. Let us consider a little while the first phase of the subject (one seldom spoken of by Christ Himself). The idea of future punishment is not to be lightly taken; eternity as a great attribute makes the great, momentous, question, of how we shall spend that eternity, one that cannot be trifled with; and yet there are so many objections urged against an unending future. First, its opponents say that the doctrine itself is unreasonable, and surely that is a very weak argument, as our weak understanding can never be a test of holy truth. Things have happened in our lifetimes even, which before they did happen we said were impossible, and shall we bring the great God to the bar of our finite understanding—a weak and utterly incapable tribunal. Then some say that death signifies the end—extinction and annihilation—and that the use of the word death as the end of sin is a very queer term to use and cannot imply everlasting punishment. Let us look at the affirmative evidence: First, there is no language possible to use, to make it plainer, in conveying the idea of everlasting punishment than is used throughout all scripture in denoting the eternity of hell; second, scripture declares broadly and plainly that the death of the wicked and the life of the righteous are of equal duration in their final destinies; and, third, there are many passages of scripture that imply, though they do not absolutely state, the endless term of punishment, and, as sin never relents, therefore God's wrath abides: the wicked are driven away in their wickedness, carrying with them and perpetuating in eternity their mode of life as followed in the world; for St. Paul says, as man has sown, so shall he reap. As there is nothing in pain or punishment in this world that will make the guilty relent, God's grace comes to the soul and causes repentance; but in the place of future woe there will be no dispensation of grace, no smile of mercy. God can not employ any greater means than He has employed to save the sinner; in the infinite source of the Godhead no higher or more priceless means could be employed; for, if the sinner could be saved in any other way, the incarnation on Calvary would appear useless and unnecessary. The judgment of the great day is final and gives fixedness of things future, the economy of grace ends, the last separation of families takes place, the gulf is fixed, and the shutting in and out of heaven is final, and the economy of justice commences, and character and destiny are fixed for ever. This is a subject not pleasant to contemplate, and you may wonder why I notice it to-day. It is that you may escape the awful doom, that you may not go through life carelessly, and then find the fact true in the end that there is no mercy beyond the tomb, and I speak not to frighten you, but as Paul, to persuade you; and to you who are saved, washed, sanctified, regenerated, I say, rejoice in that you cannot even conceive the fullness of the preparation for you in heaven implied in the text; rejoice in that you will hail with delight a participation in the blessed inheritance with those of the adopted family of God. The rev. gentleman was listened to with marked attention and interest.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH.

At the Reformed Episcopal church last evening Rev. Thos. Haddon preached from Proverbs 4 c., 23 v.—"Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life," and spoke substantially as follows: Solomon knew a great deal about the human heart, for he had allowed himself to be led by it into wrong; hence he gives advice with regard to its keeping, in the most emphatic terms. Our life is what the heart makes it, and the outward walk of life is the reflection of what exists in the heart. The life may be modified to meet the eye of those with whom we come in contact, but the moral texture can only be as the heart makes it. It is the most important part of man, and rules all his forces and actions. It is the fountain of life; the life's actions may be modified by disposition, but in nearly every case, as in the text, the issues of life permeate from the heart, and, as children are neglected in their early training, so they grow in sin, and it must present itself in their lives. The heart is bad to begin with, and needs training and the change by grace. The question naturally arises, and a very difficult one to answer: why does this inconceivable shadowedness exist in human nature, that we are troubled with the heart more than anything else? Paul felt the burden when he said "Oh wretched man that I am," &c. Paul's intellect was right, but his heart was wrong, and does this shadowedness come from training or example? Christ says, "Out of the heart the mouth speaketh." The heart and character stand in the same relation as the tree and fruit, and this should make us desire, like David when he said "Create in me a new heart and renew a right spirit within me." The heart ought to be kept, because it is king of the intellect. Some people think the intellect superior to the heart, I think the opposite, and the bible says, "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." The intellect may be convinced, but the heart very often does not respond, and so shows mastery over the intellect being the controlling power; and this explains many instances of infidelity. The heart dislikes God, then the intellect persuades that the idea of God in the bible is wrong, and the combined power of heart and intellect compels man to rebel. The heart is the controller of the actions, and when the heart is changed, that change is portrayed in the actions. Then the heart determines the destiny; death does not transform the heart; this change is only made by grace through faith, after repentance; death, finding the heart holy or unholy, cannot change it, and it is in time that the heart weaves the weal or woe of eternity. How can the heart be kept? It is so subtle, persuasive, impressive, and should be kept safe and under proper control, into whose custody then shall the heart be committed? The bible supplies the answer, "My son give me thy heart," and we know whose voice in tenderness as a father claims the right to protect against all influences of the evil one, breaking the yoke, making the heart clean, peaceful, radiant, joyous, a never failing fountain of blessing and benediction to our lives, and, as the bible declares, our bodies should be temples of the Holy Spirit, so our heart should be a dwelling place for Jesus. Bring your heart to Him, bathe it in His sunshine, and let the sweet influences of Jesus and His atonement upon Calvary surround it and watch it with a careful eye, and defend it against all foes, by putting on the whole armour of God. Brethern, everything depends upon the keeping of the heart, for out of it are the issues of life.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.

Rev. Thos. Scouler preached in the Presbyterian church last evening from Jeremiah 16c. part 19v.—"Surely our fathers have inherited lies, vanity, and things wherein there is no profit" —and spoke as follows: I purpose speaking this evening more especially to the young. To most young people a religious life seems to be an unprofitable thing. They will leave religion until they have got done with the world and its enchantments. They think religion good to have when men die, but it is not worth having to accompany them through life. This idea, alas is too often possessed by the young. In the morn of life they are possessed with the desire for happiness, and, they think that this desire can only be gratified in sources that are alien from God. But we think that in this they are mistaken. The desire for happiness is the desire for God Himself. It is the longing of an immortal spirit which can be satisfied only with God. He is the fountain of all good and the source of true happiness. The Christian finds great pleasure and profit in the contemplation of all God's works. He can say with David, "How manifold are Thy works; in wisdom Thou hast made them all." He has pleasure in exercising himself to keep his conscience void of offence toward God and toward man. Within and around the Chistian there is peace and satisfaction. Surely in these things there is profit. This is what we desire of you, my young friends, to possess, things in which there is profit, and we know that it is only in the possession of an interest in the redemptive work of the Lord Jesus Christ that we can enjoy things of this life. The speaker then noticed some things in which there was no profit—the pleasures of the ball-room, of the intoxicating cup, and also of a large class of fictitious literature, dwelling at considerable length on the great influence for evil that was exerted by pernicious literature, upon the young especially, and urging them to read good books which would profit them, of which there were many, but especially to read the Bible, the best of all books, which would profit them for time and eternity. Parents should be as careful with respect to the books which their children read as with regard to their companions. The preacher closed by asking all to take the bible as the man of their counsel and they would thus be led into paths of honor, of virtue, and up to immortality and eternal life.

THE CHURCH MILITANT.

The Salvation people are celebrating the anniversary of their entrance into this city. Last evening their hall was packed full of all sorts and sizes. Adjutant Scott, who is conducting the services, took for his subject the 12th chapter of Matthew, and read from the 38th to the 42nd verses (both included), and showed in the most forcible manner that if the Ninevites repented at the preaching of Jonah, the people of New Westminster, who are so highly favored with the means of grace though the various church agencies and the light of the Bible in the 19th century, will be held much more responsible than the Ninevites would have been, turning a deaf ear to God's messenger. His remarks were short and pithy and very much to the point. He was followed by his two lieutenants in the same strain. The next speaker proved to a demonstration that the human family was lost in sin and needed a Saviour and that Christ was the only Saviour. The third and last speaker showed the dreadful consequence of rejecting the great salvation purchased by Christ's blood, and urged his hearers to flee to the refuge, and seek pardon and redemption through faith in Christ, and a holy life, which was the promised privilege of all those who would lay down their weapons of rebellion and trust in promised aid through God's Holy Spirit.
