NOTES AND COMMENTS.

At the International Exhibition of Botany, to be held in Antwerp in 1890, will be celebrated the three-hundredth anniversary of the microscope.

The Geographical Society, of Bremen, has commissioned Dr. Kuckenthal, of Jena, to undertake another journey to the Arctic regions in order to make zoological researches.

The meaning of "Oklahoma", in Indian tougue is "Beautiful Land." In the English language it signifies "A Stampede of Idiots." You pays your money and takes your choice.

The fact of a cob pipe factory in Missouri paying $64 to a farmer for a wagon-load of desirable corn-cobs leads the Memphis Avalanche to remark that "the time may yet come when the people will raise wheat for the chaff."

"Tommy," said his mother, "do you think you'll get a prize at the school for being good?" "No, 'm," said Tommy. "Why not, sir?" asked his father, sternly, laying down his paper. "Because they don't give any," answered Tommy, meekly.

Ten years ago the superintendent of an Iowa railroad booted a tramp out of his office for having the cheek to ask for a pass. To-day that tramp is the superintendent of that same road, while the man who lifted him on his boot keeps a restaurant and sends him over lunches.

Little Tom suffered with the toothache and had worn himself out crying. His grandpa told him to be a man and not cry anymore. The little fellow looked tearfully towards his aunt for sympathy and said: "Grandpa finks this is a slow, soft toosache, but its a tonfounded Buf'lo lightning nexpress toosache." Poor Tom got lots of pity after his remarkable definition of toothache.

Hon. T. B. Humphreys writes to the Ottawa Free Press denying that he used the language in reference to Canada and Canadians credited to him by a Victoria correspondent whose letter appeared in that paper some weeks ago. Mr. Humphreys was charged with having spoken contemptuously of the people of Ontario in the course of a speech delivered by him in the British Columbia assembly.

At the Centennial ball in New York Mrs. Cleveland was singled out in a marked manner by an applauding crowd, who paid her the same compliments that were bestowed upon the presidental party. Mr. Cleveland was not prominent during the proceedings, and during the whole celebration has played a very unostentatious part. But his handsome wife keeps his memory green with the people, and yet there are persons who pretend that woman in politics is a failure.

A correspondent of the London Notes and Queries says that "the expression 'sweetness and light' is meaningless, unless we know the context. In Swift's 'Battle of the Books' there is a dispute between a spider and a bee. Afterwards Æsop takes up the cause of ancient authors, whom he likens to bees, and says that 'instead of dirt and poison (such as are collected by modern authors or spiders) we have rather chose (sic) to fill our hives with honey and wax, thus furnishing mankind with the two noblest of things, which are sweetness and light.'"

A late Peoria, Ill., despatch tells this sad tale: Miss Jessie Bening was in the office of William Scott, a real estate agent, yesterday, and picked up a revolver which was supposed to contain only empty shells. The young lady turned the weapon toward herself with the remark: "I wonder if I can kill myself." There happened to be one loaded shell in the revolver and this exploded, the bullet entering her head and inflicting a mortal wound. Miss Bening was eighteen years old, and Mr. Scott was a few years her senior. They were engaged, and Scott is almost heart-broken over the affair.

The centennial ball in New York did not pass off with the success and satisfactoriness that marked the other events of the great celebration. The supper tables were insufficient for the thousands who attended, the waiters were too few and the rush for supper became a most disgraceful scene, in which men, ostensibly gentlemen, seized plates, provisions and bottles of champagne and carried them out to consume as best they could. The floor, says a New York paper, after the police had cleared the supper room, was littered with broken bottles and dishes and wasted eatables, and looked as if a tornado had been careering over it. Evidently many improper people had obtained tickets on account of wealth or supposed political influence, and the inadequate provision made to wait upon them brought about the disgraceful unfolding of their real natures. President Harrison and his party witnessed the scene for a few minutes, and, like many others, retired apparently in disgust.

FRENCH CANADIANS

In the United States will Hold a Convention to Bring About Closer Relations.

A Springfield Editor Shot and Killed in Mistake for a Burglar.

Three Hundred Tons Opium Seized on a Vessel About to Sail for San Francisco.

FRENCH CANADIANS TO CONVENE

WATERBURY, Conn., May 13.—Geo. Panneton and Dr. H. Lafontaine of this city, D. A. Albec of Meriden and Louis Monroe of New Haven, the state committee of French Canadians, have decided to call a state convention on August 14th and 15th. The object of the convention is to encourage the formation of societies, schools and naturalization clubs.

SUICIDED.

NEWBURG, N. Y., May 13.—Charles Stewart, 22 years old, an operator of the Western Union telegraph office, in this city, suicided this morning by shooting. Cause unknown.

MISTAKEN FOR A BURGLAR.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 13.—Jas. Beebe Smith, local editor of the Republican, was shot and instantly killed at 3 o'clock this morning by his brother-in-law, Royal B. Sturtevant, at the home of his father-in-law, W. F. Sturtevant. He was mistaken for a burglar. The shooting occurred through Smith being mistaken for a burglar who was in the house at the time. Sturtevant discharged the contents of a shot gun fully at Smith, who died without uttering a sound. Smith had been connected with the Republican since 1883 and leaves a widow and an infant daughter. He was well known here and very popular. No blame is attached to Sturtevant.

CRUSHED BY A WALL.

NEW YORK, May 13.—At noon today while workmen were pulling down a two story brick building, corner of Spring and Worcester streets, the wall fell, burying in the ruins Patrick Gillan, and James Joseph. The latter was taken out dead and Foreman Gillan badly injured.

A TERRIBLE DEATH.

HOUSTON, Tex., May 13.—W. G. St. Clair made a baloon ascent here yesterday with the intention of descending in a parachute. When about 500 feet from the ground he leaped but lost his hold on the parachute. His body was crushed into a shapeless mass before the large crowd of spectators.

A GREAT SEIZURE.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 13.—Hawaiian advices state that three hundred tons of opium were seized on the brigantine Consuelo, previous to her departure from Honolulu for San Francisco last Tuesday.

MINISTER RYAN BANQUETED.

TOPEKA, Kansas, May 11.—Hon. Thos. Ryan, minister to Mexico, was given a brilliant reception in the State Capitol, here last evening. Following the reception there was an elegant banquet at the Copeland hotel. Minister Ryan bade good-bye to his many friends in a happy speech. He leaves for his post of duty Monday next.

TOE AND HEEL.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 11.—At 1 p.m. to-day the following was the score of the leaders in the walking match: Albert 200 miles; Howarth 161; Guerrero 177; Hart 170; Campana 145; Vint 145; Klatt 151. Moore of Philadelphia retired from the race this morning.

THE U. S. CRUISER CHARLESTON.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., May 11.—The Charleston left port at 7 o'clock this morning for a point below Ventura from where she will make her four hours run to Point Conception. If the test proves satisfactory the cruiser will proceed at once to San Francisco, where the result of her trips will first be made known.

Y. M. C. A. OF THE WORLD.

PHILADELPHIA, May 8.—The twenty-eighth international convention of the Y. M. C. A. was called to order this morning by Gen. O. O. Howard of New York in the presence of the most prominent laymen of the evangelical churches. Delegates of the United States, Canada, England, Germany, Sweden, Switzerland and other countries were present, to the number of 1,000. The convention was opened by singing, led by Ira D. Sankey, the evangelist. Gen. Howard of New York, vice president of the last convention, then introduced Robert Byrne of London, general secretary of the association there. Byrne congratulated the members upon the occasion, and read a letter from President Williams of the London society, regretting his inability to be present. Robert McCann, travelling secretary for Ireland, was next introduced, and said he bore with him the warm greetings of 60,000 Irishmen, members of the association there. Baron von Stark of Berlin said he was glad to bear the greeting of the associations in Berlin to them. Carl Fries of Stockholm, Sweden, secretary of the national association there, spoke of the work and read a letter of congratulation upon this event from his association. The committee on permanent organization made its report, which was unanimously confirmed. The officers selected were: President, Humphrey B. Chamberlain, Denver; among the vice-presidents is C. B. Alexander, San Francisco; secretary, George B. Townsend, Chicago. The report of the international committee was next submitted. Several papers were read. Statistics in the international committee's report show that the total number of associations is 1,273, with an aggregate membership of over 195,456. The total net property of the associations reporting is $8,944,685, as against $6,052,250 at last report.

FROM VICTORIA.

Diabolical Murder. A Chinaman Kills his Sweetheart Because she Refuses to Marry him.

Special to the Columbian.

VICTORIA, May 13.—A most shocking deliberate and coldblooded murder occurred at a late hour last night. The victim was a young and pretty Chinese prostitute living at No. 7, Fisgard street. Living in the same house were supposed to be her father and mother, although more probably they were her owners. The young woman was found by her mother, leaning out of the wicket in the window, with her head almost completely severed from her body. Her blood lay in a deep scarlet pool underneath the window on the sidewalk. The supposed murderer was the lover of the young woman. He wanted her to marry him, but she objected because his wages as a servant were but $15 a month. He swore to make her suffer for her rejection of his suit. He went to the small wicket in the window and attracted the girl's attention. She opened the wicket and put her head out to speak to him. He struck her on the back of the neck a terrific blow with some sharp weapon, probably a hatchet, sword, or heavy knife, and almost completely severed the head from the body. Death must have been instantaneous. The murderer then fled. One prominent Chinaman says the murderer is not likely to escape. He thinks the old woman knows the murderer and he will be brought to justice

Following are additional details of the murder: The murderer was the girl's lover, and named Ju Ah Hang. He worked at the American hotel. He tried to induce the girl, who was about 15 years of age, and named Fou Kum, to marry him. She refused as he was not making enough wages. He then tried to induce her to poison her mother, which she also refused to do. Hang accompanied by two other Chinese came to her house last night and when You Kum put her head out of the window one Chinamen seized her by the hair while Hang struck her with a cleaver, cutting her head almost off and causing instantaneous death. The murderers then ran off.

The Walla Walla, from San Francisco, arrived early this morning and left for the sound.

Death of Major Rogers.

Major Rogers, known to the world as the discoverer of the Kicking Horse and Rogers Passes of the C. P. R., died at Waterville, Minnesota, on the 4th of May from cancer of the stomach. The major was a favorite with all who knew him, and his many friends in this city and province will always have a warm place in their memory for him. During his career in the mountains the major was never discouraged on account of temporary failure, and after suffering many hardships and narrowly escaping death, he finally succeeded in locating the line of railway that was adopted by the C. P. R. management. No doubt the privations endured during that period shortened his term of life, although he possessed an iron constitution, as well as a dauntless spirit. The deceased was present at the driving of the last stake at Craigillachie, and held up the tie while Sir Donald Smith made several vain attempts to drive the spike home with a swinging blow. He eventually succeeded by giving it a series of taps. Since Major Rogers completed his labors for the C. P. R. he has been engaged in locating a route for the Manitoba or "Jim Hill" road to the boundary of Washington, and it was during this work that he was taken ill. He died in the state where he had been a pioneer, and was buried among his friends. He was a bachelor.

THE NEW MILLS.

What Mr. James McLaren says of the Subject.

Mr. James McLaren, of Ross, McLaren & Co., who arrived from New Westminster on Wednesday, informed a reporter that the work of erecting the mill at New Westminster was in full blast. An hour after the final arrangements were completed the contract for the pile driving was signed, and the work went on at once.

What will be the size of the mill, asked the reporter?

Four hundred and fifty feet by seventy in round numbers, although the actual length will be 455 feet, with a platform of about fifty feet, so that we will be able to saw any stick from 25 up to 150 feet in length. We mean business, I assure you.

How long will it take to put the mill in working order?

Not less than six months, I expect, although everything is very favorable for making good time. We have a good manager in Mr. Kendall, who has been with the firm for many years and understands everything in the business, and then the lumber is obtained from the Royal City Mills, close at hand, whose managers have met us in a very friendly spirit indeed. My brother John has taken up his residence in New Westminster, and will attend to the financial affairs of the concern.

You propose to erect another mill? Yes, but we have not decided where as yet. For my part I am very favorably impressed with this island, but the matter will rest altogether with my father whose word is law, at least since the death of the late Mr. Ross. It was thought at first that the mill should be nearer our timber supply, but investigation shows, I think, that it will not work well to have it too far up. We are going to have two mills at any rate and will employ a large number of men. Speaking of labor, we have never been able to understand how the report was circulated that we were hiring a large number of men for the coast, for we have done nothing of the kind, and are sorry any such report should be spread abroad. There were hundreds of applications to the firm from men we knew in the east, good men too, but they were not engaged to come out here.—Times.

A LONDON CLUB

Raided by the Police and a Number of Noblemen Arrested for Gambling.

Opinion Grows that the Judges in the Parnell Commission are Biased.

The Emperor William Endeavors to Bring the German Mining Strike to an End.

NOBLEMEN ARRESTED.

LONDON, May 13.—Earl Dudley, Lords Lurgan and Paulet, Baron Ferrers and a number of other gentlemen were arrested this morning at the Field club and arraigned to-day at Vine street police court to answer the charge of gambling. The court was crowded almost to suffocation with people anxious to see the noblemen arraigned as criminals. Earl Dudley appeared heartily ashamed of himself and eager to escape the notice of the throng by the submission to a fine, but Lord Lurgan was defiant and angry at his arrest. The police officer who made the raid of the club admitted that the noblemen were not members of the Field club and declared they resorted to clubs for the purpose of gambling. The prisoners, twenty-one in number were remanded for a week on bail.

GREAT INDIGNATION.

LONDON, May 13.—No little indigdation is felt in police circles over the descent of the police on the Field club in the fashionable quarter of town, and the arrest of three lords for doing that which is done in every aristocratic club of London. The appearance of these noble members of society in the police court thif morning excited a sensation. They were treated most leniently by the presiding magistrate and bailed as soon as the formalities could be completed. Lord Lurgan was especially bitter about the action of the police authorities and denounced it as an outrage. All the twenty unfortunates who were arrested at the same time were unanimous in the opinion that the police were needlessly officious. The general public manifest a disposition to be amused with the affair.

ANOTHER CONSPIRACY DISCOVERED.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 13.—A conspiracy against the government, which implicates a number of military officers has been discovered here by secret agents. Numerous arrests have been made, some of high officers. Incriminating documents were seized and a number of dynamite bombs found.

HOW CAN SUCH INJUSTICE BE?

LONDON, May 13.—From the style of the questions put by Justice Hannen, and from the general attitude of the judges forming the Parnell commission of inquiry, both sides in the case have become impressed with the belief that the commission will pronounce in favor of the Times.

MORE SERIOUS.

BERLIN, May 13.—The troubles between the militia and the striking miners of Westphalia are increasing. A collision occurred to-day between them at Castrop, in which a body composed of dragoons and lancers charged upon the strikers and dispersed them. All last night there was random firing in the vicinity of Luenen. Most of the taverns in the disturbed district are closed. The strike committee at Dortmund, composed of Bante Schroder and Siegel have issued a manifesto in which the declared strikers will not resume work until the fullest concessions to their demands are made.

A SENSIBLE EMPEROR.

BERLIN, May 13.—The emperor declares himself as much shocked at the death of the miners in Westphalia as any of his subjects, and is distressed at the necessity of resorting to military force to prevent violence. He is most anxious to have the proprietors come to some agreement with their men, advises liberal treatment, and instructs the governor of Westphalia and the local authorities to use all their influences to bring about a settlement to set them the example. He has intimated his willingess to hear the complaints of the miners in person, and a deputation of men have left Dortmund for an audience with the emperor. This act has had a good effect and the coal regions are quieter to-day.

TROUP TO PUBLISH A BOOK.

LONDON, May 11.—Troup, who was to transport officer for Stanley, is about to publish a book in which he claims the failure of the rear guard to obey instructions was due to Major Barttelot, who cruelly punished and neglected the blacks and they murdered him in revenge.

PERSONAL.

E. A. Sharpe, of Lulu Island, was in town to-day.

Monday Evening, May 13, 1889.

On the 24th of April last a rather interesting debate took place in the Canadian senate on a motion of Hon. Mr. Bellerose, representing Delanandiere, Quebec, in the senate. The motion was to the effect that an address should be presented to the governor-general, praying that his excellency would be pleased to cause to be laid before the senate a copy of each and all the proofs taken by the minister of justice and the secretary of state on the 10th and 11th of December, 1886, at the time of their visit to the penitentiary of St. Vincent de Paul (in Quebec province), and also copies of all entries made at the time of this visit and in the course of the inquiry then made by the honorable gentlemen above mentioned, according to the statements made by the minister of justice in the house of commons on the 16th of April last. And in particular copies of the statements made and of the charges laid by the Hon. Jos. H. Bellerose on the first of the two days above mentioned. It is necessary to an understanding of the subject to recall the circumstance of the revolt which took place in the St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary in 1886, which was a culmination of a troublous state of things for years, and in which one person was killed, a good many others injured, and Warden Laviolette himself seriously, and at the time considered to be mortally, wounded. During the revolt a regular fight occurred, which continued for hours; the warden was taken prisoner by the convicts, and was used as a shield to cover them in their attempt to escape. Mr. Bellerose, as representative in the senate of the district where the penitentiary is situated, and taking an interest in the matter and claiming to know something of the causes which led up to the revolt, made the following inquiry in the senate shortly after the revolt occurred: "Does the government intend to order a serious and minute inquiry into the circumstances of the revolt which took place at the St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary on the 24th Nov., 1886, and into all the troubles which have occurred in the said institution for the four years past?" The answer to this was "It is the intention of the government." Subsequently, on the 10th and 11th December, 1886, an inquiry was held at the penitentiary by the minister of justice, Hon. Mr. Thompson, and the then secretary of state, Hon. Mr. Chapleau. Senator Bellerose was invited to be present and to lay his charges, if he had any. Mr. Bellerose said: "I charge the inspector, Mr. Moylan, and the late chaplain with being responsible for the difficulties this prison has been laboring under. I may say that I act as the representative of those who have laid such charges, either in the press or in public documents." Upon being informed by the minister of justice that it was the intention to take evidence without swearing any of the witnesses, Mr. Bellerose refused to give evidence at all, and characterized the examination, which was forthwith proceeded with on those lines, as a "mock inquiry, a sham investigation, far worse than any of the most disgraceful inquiries ever made by the minister of justice's officer, Inspector Moylan." Senator Bellerose's object in moving for the return of papers, &c., in connection with the affair, in April last, was to show the falsity of a reflection made upon him in the commons by the minister of justice, on the 16th of the same month, in this way: The St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary incidentally came before the house on the above date, when Hon. Mr. Laurier, leader of the opposition, rose and asked the government whether they had redeemed their solemn promise to make an inquiry into the revolt which had taken place at the penitentiary. To this the minister of justice answered "yes" and "no," that he had not made that solemn inquiry, because Mr. Bellerose had refused to lay charges against anybody. Mr. Laurier replied that he would leave Mr. Bellerose to defend himself. This Mr. Bellerose proceeded to do in the senate by making the motion first referred to, and in the somewhat sharp debate which followed we are bound to say that Mr. Bellerose came out very fairly, and the government certainly gained no added lustre from the discussion. Mr. Bellerose's motion was finally agreed to.

During the debate our representative in the senate, Hon. Senator McInnes, made a short, but effective speech on the subject, in the course of which he referred to the provincial penitentiary at this city. The senator's speech in full, as printed in the Senate Debates, was as follows: "This subject is one of considerable importance. To my personal knowledge the honorable gentleman from Delanandiere had been warning the government for years before this revolt took place, which resulted in the death of more than one individual and the wounding of several others, and instead of censuring him, as some honorable gentlemen do, he is entitled to the best consideration of this house and of the country. I am fully persuaded that the hon. gentleman is thoroughly honest and sincere in his advocacy of a thorough investigation being made in connection with the penitentiary. And if the government were desirous of making a thorough investigation and laying the blame, if blame there be, on the shoulders of guilty individuals in that penitentiary, the proper way would be to delegate the power to make the enquiry to some person entirely disconnected with the penitentiary, or the government, and to hear evidence under oath. Why are witnesses placed under oath? Is it not under the impression that they are more likely to tell the truth than if they merely make an unsworn statement? Not only are the majority of people afraid of punishment by the law of the land if they give false evidence under oath, but they are also afraid of future punishment. I think that the hon. gentleman was perfectly right when he refused to give any evidence to the minister of justice or to the inspector, except under oath. It must be quite evident to any disinterested person that he was willing to state nothing but what he believed to be correct, and which he could prove. I have some sympathy for the hon. gentleman, inasmuch as I am somewhat similarly situated. We have a penitentiary within a mile of where I live, in New Westminster. It is believed that there are a great many irregularities in connection with the management of that institution. I am not going to make any charges now, but I believe the rumors are well founded, and when the proper time comes I fear it will be my bounden duty to ask that an investigation be made, and that it be placed entirely beyond the control or influence of the inspector of penitentiaries and the government, and that some judge of the supreme court, or other thoroughly disinterested and qualified person, shall take the evidence and investigate all complaints, and thereby do justice to the people of the penitentiary, and if they are not guilty of what they are charged they will be exonerated; if guilty, they should be punished, and the public will be satisfied. Anything short of that, in my opinion, will not give satisfaction. I think this case of the St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary has not gone too far yet for a thorough and searching investigation to be made of it before some of the judges of the courts in the province of Quebec." It is unnecessary to comment upon Senator McInnes' remarks with respect to the penitentiary in this province. We have already made a similar suggestion, and thoroughly endorse what the senator has said on the matter.

A COUNTRY IDYL.

"Oh, let me leave the city's heat,
Its fripperies and formalities,
And place once more my tired feet
On nature's actualities:
I'll turn from fashion's mimic train,
Its aping arts, its high disdain,
And bathe my tired heart and brain
In primitive realities."

He turned from "fashion's mimic train,"
And sought the calm rusticity
Of field and forest, lake and plain,
Disburdened of publicity.
But horse-flies marked him for their prey,
And down his backbone day by day
The caterpillar wound his way
In sinuous eccentricity.

And when beneath some arbor snug
He'd lie in thoughtful revery
The bumble-bee and tumble-bug
Would come with fiendish devilry;
With daddy-long-legs run a race,
And march in military pace
Across his bleared and blistered face
In wild, tumultuous revelry.

And while the still breeze from the south,
Lapped him in dreams elysian,
The gay green frog leaped in his mouth
With acrobat precision;
The woodchuck nibbled at his nose,
The weasel chewed up both his hose,
The snake crawled thro' his underclo'es
In wandering indecision.

He lay there in the valley green,
The city's strain to calm off,
And the farmer with his mowing machine
Then mowed his outstretched arm off.
And then he rose with murderous will,
And roamed the earth and vowed to kill
All poets who with fiendish skill
Such pastoral lies could palm off.

—S. W. Foss, in Time.

IS DEATH PAINLESS?

Dr. Hammond Answers the Question in the Affirmative.

It is only necessary to see a person die to be convinced that so far from being a painful process the act of death is rather pleasant than otherwise, writes Dr. William W. Hammond in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The physical phenomena that leads up to the departure of vitality from the body are often characterized by great suffering. There may be pain suffocation due to the irregularity in the action of the heart and lungs, and above all intense mental anguish. But when death begins all feeling of discomfort in mind or body disappears; pain in whatever part it may be situated ceases to be perceived; the heart may beat with still greater irregularity, the lungs fail still more notably to perform their functions; nothing has happened to dissipate the fear or remorse or sorrow that have harrassed the dying person, but the perceptions, the intellect, the emotions, the will are blunted and no longer respond to excitations that formerly moved them.

Death as we see it in persons who have suffered from a more or less protracted illness is not generally an act that is accomplished in a few moments of time. It may even last for several hours, during which period the vital forces are extinguished little by little, so gradually in fact that we are not able to determine the exact instant at which life becomes extinct.

Physiologists speak of death as occurring through the cessation of the action of either the brain or the heart or the lungs. But the brain can not be regarded as an organ absolutely essential to life, however necessary it may be to its regular and systematic course. The entire organ may be removed from certain kinds of animals and yet life goes almost as perfectly for a time as though it were still there to dominate the rest of the body. The heart beats, the lungs respire, the stomach digests, and the several glands continue to elaborate the secretions proper to them, and not only all this, but actions are performed which are well calculated to excite astonishment in those who see them for the first time and who have embraced the idea that all intelligence resides in the brain. Thus, for instance, if the brain be entirely removed from the head of a frog and the web between the toes be pinched the limb is immediately withdrawn; if the shoulder be scratched with a needle the hind foot of the same side is raised to remove the instrument; if the animal is held up by one leg it struggles; if placed on its back—a position to which frogs have a great antipathy—it immediately turns over on its belly; if one foot be held firmly with a pair of forceps the frog endeavors to draw it away; if unsuccessful it places the other foot against the instrument and pushes firmly in the effort to remove it; still not succeeding it writhes the body from side to side and makes a movement forward. I have seen a rattlesnake strike after its head was cut off, and a viper has been known to crawl straight for its hole in the wall after suffering like mutilation.

Nor are such experiments the only evidence we have that life may persist though the brain be absent. It sometimes happens that individuals of the human species are born without brains. In one instance of the kind life was present for six months. Though very feeble this being had the faculty of sucking and the several functions of the body seemed to be well performed. Its eyes clearly perceived the light and during the night it cried if the candle was allowed to go out. After death the cranium was opened and there was found to be an entire absence of the cerebrum. In another case, that of a male infant which lived eighteen hours, there was found after death no vestige of a brain, nevertheless respiration was established; the pupils contracted the light; bitter juice put into the mouth was immediately rejected and loud noises caused movements of the body. In another case in which the cranium was entirely empty life continued for four days, not this being opened and shut its eyes, cried, sucked and even ate broth.

The brain, therefore, is essential to life only so far as it is essential to the continued action of the heart and lungs. When it is the seat of disease in certain of its parts the action of all the organs of the body is more or less impaired although they may continue their functions in such a manner as not to be immediately destructive to life. It is only when brain disease leads to the arrest of the action of the heart or lungs that death becomes inevitable.

Death beginning at the heart occurring either as the result of brain injury or disease, or like factors affecting the organ itself, may take place suddenly or after a very considerable period of time has elapsed. In neither case is the act of death painful. Should the heart stop suddenly the brain is at once deprived of its due supply of blood; all sensibility is immediately abolished. There are a few imperfect respirations and life has vanished, probably without the stricken person having the slightest consciousness from the moment that the current of blood failed to reach his brain. Such cases are comparatively infrequent, but they are common enough for us to have become acquainted with the phenomena by which they are characterized. The aspect of a person dying in the manner described shows that there has been no suffering, mental or physical; the countenance is placid and the position of the body that of entire repose.

In other instances the state of the patient for a considerable period before death is marked by great suffering. The respiration is difficult, the lungs are congested, there are periods characterized by faintness and loss of consciousness, the limbs and the face become dropsical, the recumbent position is attended with an increase in the feeling of suffocation due to the interference with the respiration, and hence the patient is obliged to pass the greater part of the day and night in a sitting posture. The countenance of a person thus afflicted is indicative of the distress which is constantly experienced. But when the physical forces become so far reduced that the act of dying supervenes, pain or discomfort is no longer felt and death ensues without there being any sensations but those of ease and comfort both as regards mind and body.

Death beginning by the lungs is the result of the more or less sudden stoppage of the act of respiration. Such as is produced in drowning or strangulation, in which cases it takes place rapidly, or in congestion or pneumonia, when it is a more gradual process. In neither instance is there much, if any, physical suffering after the first few moments. Unconsciousness takes place with more or less rapidity when all sensation is abolished. While this condition is being reached the speech and countenance of the patient, so far from indicating suffering, often show that the thoughts that are passing through the minds are of the most happy character. Persons whose lives have been saved from drowning or other forms of suffocation have stated that they seemed up to the last moment of consciousness to be living a life of supreme bliss. Opium poisoning, and the condition produced by the inhalation of carbonic oxide gas resulting from the combustion of charcoal are examples of death beginning at the lungs. There are many cases on record of persons who have been recovered when thus poisoned, when the very extremity of life had been reached, and their evidence is uniformly to the effect that not only was there no pain but that the act of dying, so far as they had experienced it, was a most delightful process.

I have seen a great many people die, some of them great sinners, even ruffians of the most degraded type, and I have never yet witnessed in any case the slightest fear of death or of a hereafter. I have also been present at the death-beds of many pious and worthy persons, and I have never known an instance among this class of the least abhorrence of death or apprehension in regard to the future. A person in sound health, receiving intelligence that his death is to take place in a few moments would, undoubtedly, at first be greatly disturbed, and if religiously brought up, would probably wish to make preparations for departing this life. But the case is very different with those who have suffered from a long illness, and whose perceptions, therefore, have lost their sharpness. I have often told such persons that they had but a few minutes to live, but the intelligence has never been received in any other than the most composed and resigned manner. Certainly this is a wise provision of nature. For if, as with his present knowledge, it is impossible for man to escape death, it is well that he is constituted as to be able to accept the inevitable with dignity and composure.

PLUCKY JUDGE DRUM.

How He Entertained an Ugly Visitor at the Point of a Gun.

Hon. Thomas J. Drum, of Butte, M. T., is one of the best known lawyers in the West, says the St. Louis Republic. He is a lawyer of distinguished ability, and has followed mining excitements in the West for the last twenty years or more. Judge Drum has lived in California, Arizona, Nevada and Montana, and has been a conspicuous figure at the bar in each place. During the days of Tombstone's prosperity he was a United States Commisioner in Arizona, residing in Tombstone, and when President Arthur issued his famous proclamation ordering the outlaw cowboys to disband Judge Drum took an active part in its enforcement.

A brace of cowboys were at one time arraigned before him for holding up a United States mail coach between Benson and Tombstone. The judge held them both for trial without bail, and sent them to the Tucson jail for safe-keeping. This made the cowboys very indignant, and threats were made that Judge Drum's earthly career would be wound up. A few days after he ordered the prisoners taken to Tucson, Red Thornton, a notorious desperado, quietly entered Judge Drum's office. He recognized Thornton as he entered, but pretended to keep on writing without taking any notice of him. In the meantime, however, he managed to get his hand on a double-barreled shotgun, with the barrels abbreviated to about fourteen inches in length, that rested on his desk within easy reach. He lifted it up, and concealing it behind a pile of books, with his hand still grasping it, asked Thornton what he wanted, as that gentleman appeared in front of the desk.

"Be you Jedge Drum?" asked the desperado.

"I be," responded the judge.

"Well, I kom to settle wid you about sendin' the b'yes to jail," remarked the desperado.

"How are you going to do it?"

"Jedge, you're a purty good-lookin' duck an' I hate ter do it, but I've got ter blow the top of your durned head off," remarked the gentleman with the red hair.

"That wouldn't be much fun for me, especially as they struck a big ore body in the Cromwell this morning," said the judge.

"Jedge, you're too durned funny," said the desperado, and he made a motion for his gun.

As he did so the judge presented his shotgun, stood up and held the muzzle within two feet of the desperado. This was something that had not been calculated on, and the intruder's disappointment was apparent.

"Throw up your hands!" called out the judge. Thornton obeyed promptly. "Now remain in that position until somebody comes along to take off your pistols," said the judge. Thornton did as he was told. In a few minutes footsteps were heard in the hall and the judge called the passer-by to enter. It happened to be a lawyer who had an office in the same building. Judge Drum told the lawyer to relieve the desperado of his pistols, warning the latter that if he made a move he would get a double charge of buckshot. The desperado's pistols were taken from him, and, in front of Judge Drum's gun, he was marched to the sheriff's office and turned over to the custody of that officer. It happened that the sheriff had a warrant for Thornton's arrest for stage-robbing, and he was sent to the Tucson jail to keep his friends company. Judge Drum had several exciting experiences in Arizona. His duty as United States Commissioner in a mail-robbing country gave him plenty of employment and brought him into official intercourse with some of the toughest men in the region. In 1885, when the "bottom fell out of Tombstone," Judge Drum moved to Butte, M. T., and is now one of the leading lawyers of that Territory.

A red flag waved up the track indicates "danger."
A red flag by the roadside means "danger ahead."
A red flag carried on a locomotive signifies "an engine following."
A red flag raised at a station means "stop."

Wood-Carving in Berlin.

Berlin, it seems, has gradually become the headquarters of the carved-wood industry, supplanting Switzerland. Six hundred artists in wood-carving, the same number of turners, and 700 carpenters are engaged in manufacturing such articles as cigar-cases, newspaper and picture frames, napkin-rings, etc. The value of the annual export of these articles is given as 5,000,000 marks, and this is exclusive of the costly carved wood furniture, the manufacture and export of which are assuming large proportions.

Looking After His Fences.

Senator Sherman thinks he is the author of the phrase "going home to look after his fences." Once upon a time, the eve of an exciting election, he went to Ohio, and while there, thinking his home at Mansfield might need some repairs, he went there. A newspaper man caught him and desired, after the ingenious manner of his craft, to know what the Senator had come to Mansfield for. Senator Sherman replied that he had come to look after his fences. That tickled the newspaper man immensely, and straightway he made it a classic

Mr. H. T. Thrift laid on our table to-day a number of branches of the salmon berry bush, all loaded with ripe fruit. The 13th of May is early even for salmon berries, but strawberries are a couple of weeks earlier.

The drawing of the $1,000 appropriation of the Building Society on Saturday night resulted in favor of share No. 36, owned by Miss McLachlan. This share was formerly owned by Mr. W. H. Lewis who withdrew it on March 17th.

A Spaniard who is known by the name of Maclugo, whose name has several times appeared at the police court, was arrested to-day for an unmentionable crime, perpetrated yesterday on a little boy. Maclugo was captured after a hot chase.

The Kamloops Sentinel has got a new dress and has very noticeably improved its general make-up lately. One would judge from the appearance of the Sentinel that Kamloops and the upper country was getting to be "some pumpkins," and there can be no doubt of the fact.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria

Although the meeting at the Y.M.C.A. was not as largely attended yesterday as on previous sabbaths, still the interest was very great and there were more requests for prayer than ever before. The regular monthly meeting of the association will be held on Wednesday evening.

Farini's & McMahon's consolidated circus is highly mentioned in the papers wherever the white tents have been spread. The fame of the great Farini show is world wide, while McMahon is known everywhere as always giving a performance of more than usual brilliancy.

The Dominion Illustrated of May 4th furnishes, among its fine list of illustrations, a portrait of the gallant Major Peters of "C" battery, Victoria, with notes of his life, career, etc., and a series of sketches from that versatile officer's pencil, illustrating a goat hunt in the Rocky Mountains.

Reports were received last night of a big strike on Texada Island. Our informant declined to state the exact whereabouts of the find but shook his head sagely and said he had his reasons for keeping the matter quiet for the present. We can only say we hope it is true.—Friday's Courier.

Wm. E. Mortimer was charged at the police court this morning with assaulting a man named Exposite. The latter went into the Merchants hotel and vomited on the floor, for which Mortimer gave him a drubbing. The provocation in the case was so great that the magistrate only imposed a fine of $1.00 and costs.

Mr. W. Thibaudeau C. E., has severed his connection with Messrs. A. J. Hill & Co., and has opened an office in the Hamley block and is prepared to do all surveying and draughting work. Mr. Thibaudeau is well and favorably known throughout the city, and will, no doubt, receive a fair share of public patronage.

As will be seen by a notice in another column, the steamship Idaho, which was to leave Seattle this morning for Nanaimo, Vancouver and this port, will sail shortly after her arrival here, to-night or to-morrow for Seattle direct, via Roche Harbor, carrying any passengers that may wish to go to the hub city of the Sound.

The Royce & Lansing Musical Comedy Co., who appear here for one night, May 16, present great variety of music and comedy, and from all sources we gather nothing but praise for their entertainment. This company, it will be remembered, made a decided hit on the Pacific coast last season. This season they have an enlarged company and $3,900 invested in new musical instruments. Secure seats early.

The Caterpillar Pest.

Under the new municipalities act the city council has the power to pass a by-law enforcing the destruction of caterpillars within the city limits. The caterpillar pest gives promise of being as bad as usual this year, and it would be well for the council to enforce the destruction of these insects for the protection of the many people who are troubled with careless neighbors.

The Cricket Match.

The cricket match on Saturday afternoon, Canada vs Old Country, resulted in a victory for the latter team by a score of 52 to 51. Considering that Canada played two men short of its opponents the term "victory" can scarcely be claimed by the winners. The fielding, batting and bowling were all in favor of Canada. The best scores for the Old Country team were made by Miles (16) and Hamber (13). A return match will be played on Saturday next.

Rifle Practice.

The Westminster Rifle Association held its first practice at Brownsville on Saturday afternoon. The following are the scores made, which, considering the condition of the range, first practice, etc., are very satisfactory:

The Nicholls Murder.

The inquest on the remains of Nicholls, who was murdered at Moodyville some eight years ago, did not result in any definite information being procured and it was adjourned till Wednesday evening to allow Constable Calbick to hunt up some fresh evidence. The Indians who were witnesses at the inquest showed great reluctance in giving their evidence and it was only too plain to those who understand Indian character that they were keeping back the information sought. Constable Calbick has the case in hand and he is determined that the guilty Indians will yet be brought to justice, and the chances are that he will succeed. Mr. Calbick left for Blaine this afternoon to hunt up fresh evidence in the case.

Toasted and Smoked.

On Friday night last, in Nanaimo, a banquet was tendered to Mr. J. A. Strong, on the occasion of his resignation of the editorial chair of the Nanaimo Courier. All the notabilities of the "black diamond" city were present to do honor to the guest of the evening, who was warmly toasted and caned. The cane wasn't a cane, however, for the reason, probably, that the honored recipient was strong enough but took the form of a gold mounted cigar case and an elegant amber cigar holder, all of which were suitably acknowledged. A melancholy reflection suggested by this otherwise pleasant incident, is that editors never seem to be appreciated until they resign or die, or in some way vamoose. Can it be that the handsome ovations and large funerals on such occasions are an expression of the community's pleasure at the occurrence? We hope not.

The Experimental Farm.

At the last meeting of the B. C. Fruit Growers Association, Mr. W. J. Harris, of Mample Ridge, said the government in choosing Agassiz's as the site for the experimental farm had made a very bad choice, and that no worse location could have been selected. Mr. Hutcherson, of Ladners, differed with Mr. Harris, stating he considered the location admirably adapted for the purposes of an experimental farm. Mr. Agassiz, writing THE COLUMBIAN on the subject says: "As Mr. Harris, of Maple Ridge, appears to have been entertaining the B. C. Fruit Growers Association with diatribes about the unfitness of the site chosen for the Dominion experimental farm, and laments in particular that moss grows upon the fruit trees and that cherry blossoms are blown off the trees (sic), I beg to emphatically contradict each and every statement made, and have great pleasure in corroborating the remarks made by Mr. Hutcherson, who is a gentleman of large experience in fruit culture, and who made a careful examination of the site of the experimental farm some years ago. I also send you some specimens of cherry trees, with fruit, cut from branches 16 feet long and loaded with fruit nearly all the way to the trunk. They are from a row of seven cherry trees grown here, all equally loaded with fruit, and averaging from 30 to 40 feet high branching out sixteen feet at the trunk, or 32 feet from tip to tip. One tree measures at least 5 feet in circumference around the trunk four feet from the ground. If anyone in British Columbia has a row of trees to equal them now is the time to let it be known. I won't say where the moss does grow, but it cannot be found on the trees here. I will show apple, pear and plum trees against anyone in the province."

The cherry branches mentioned were received at this office to-day and certainly they are free from moss and all signs of it, besides which they are as heavily laden with fruit as any we have ever seen. Mr. Harris' remarks concerning Agassiz are not founded on personal knowledge, while Mr. Hutcherson speaks from personal observation and wide experience.

THE CHURCHES.

Summaries of City Sermons Spoken Yesterday.

HOLY TRINITY CHURCH.

Rev. Phillip Woods officiated at Holy Trinity church last night, taking for his text I Kings 18th c. 21st v:—And Elijah came unto all the people and said: How long halt ye between two opinions? if the Lord be God, follow Him, but if Baal, then follow him. "These words, dear friends, were spoken by the great prophet Elijah on Mount Carmel, in the hearing of an immense concourse of people. All Israel was there and 450 prophets, but only one true prophet. The great question to be decided was whether Jehovah or Baal was God. 'If the Lord be God, follow him.' That was the advice Elijah gave Israel, and so the children of Israel in that crisis decided on Jehovah. And to-night my friends a decision has got to be made; God is on one side, sin on the other, which will you choose? If the Lord be God, follow Him, if sin be right, follow it. You and I are Christians, do we do what Christianity demands of us? Yes, sometimes. Once in a while we bring a child to be baptized, and we follow the Christian ceremonies of marriage and burial. In these ways we show our Christianity. In everything else Christianity demands, how do we comply with it? How often do we read God's holy word, and how often do we do those many things we are called on to do? We neither respect or embrace Christianity. Why do we not stand up for the religion we are bound to profess? Some say 'I am young and will live many a year, so there is time enough to look to the welfare of my soul.' Others say: 'The cares of life are too many and great, I haven't time.' Others evade the question by saying: 'We do not intend to die as we are living. We do not lead a proper life, but the time will come when we will do better.' It is not right to class all people as believers and non-believers for there is a middle class—the waverers. These go on from day to day waiting the convenient season that never comes, and when death approaches they are not ready. The waverer says: 'Yes, I will work in God's vineyard, but he does not. Is this class represented here to-night? If it is, may the Lord have mercy on them. There are men here who at baptism promised to lead a good life, but they have failed in their promise. How are we living if we perish everlastingly? No person in this church will perish except as a Christian. Everyone of you have had the opportunities and have failed to make use of them. The atheist can have consistency but the waverer cannot. The waverer's inmost conscience tells him he is living an inconsistent life. 'Take first the kingdom of God and all others will be added unto you.' We must not delay then to make the choice of the side we are going to choose. I ask you to look at the cross; was there any hesitation there? No Jesus Christ drank the bitter cup unhesitatingly for you and for me. You have a soul God gave to use to His glory—how are you using it? Can you take that which is God's and use it for the devil's purposes? Surely not; then let us decide between the two. We go on serving God a little and the devil the rest. What you and I waver between is everlasting life and everlasting damnation. We decide for hell while we are wavering for heaven. The lesson is that we must make the best use of the present. There is no use talking of to-morrow or years hence, for you have not 5 minutes to spare. So you who are doubting remember this and make your choice before the night is past. If the Lord be God, follow him.

BAPTIST CHURCH.

At the Baptist church last evening the pastor, (Rev. Thos. Baldwin) spoke about "Isaac," from Gen. 21st chap. 3rd verse and part 12th verse and various connecting sentences in Gen. 12th chap. He said: After the birth and early life of Isaac, God called Abraham to sacrifice him. For some reason or other the telling of the story of Isaac is the most difficult in scripture, principally because it contains promises of some of the largest blessings that will be bestowed away in the unknown future, and until then their full import and effect will not be known. Yet the Lord left data along the line whereby those already realized give ground on which to found a great many hopes and draw a great many lessons. Abraham has a promise from God when he is 75 years old, and waits 25 years ere Isaac is born, and then he waits 25 years more in interest of the bringing up of his offspring; then God calls him to sacrifice Isaac. We see in the act of sacrifice Abraham illustrating the world, with the sword of justice drawn and majesty calling for life, when suddenly a hand is thrust out staying the uplifted weapon about to strike, and a voice rings out in clarion tones "Hold, lay not thine hand upon the lad." Then a ram is produced out of the thicket, to be offered as a substitute, representing the coming Saviour, illustrating the coming intention of God the Father, and in the deliverance of Isaac, giving to future generations a sign of the manner in which they should be saved, giving to us a symbol of the way in which we are saved under the law by the sacrifice of Jesus Christ. Here the reverend gentleman pictured the sacrifice of Christ and the impossibility of escape, such as was afforded Isaac. Then continued: Isaac stood in line with the promises of the Most High, involving so much blessing reserved and methods employed. The trouble in our worship is, our faith does not take up what intervenes between us and God; we are willing to believe there is a God—devils believe this—but there are some Christians who take up specialities, and, while they seem to be in the midst of promises, yet never see the other side of these promises, and do not fully contemplate the conditions surrounding them, they murmur at the conditions, and want to select the time, place and method in which the change shall take place under the promises and pledges given by God. What has God promised? I want you to understand clearly and fully that God never promises substantially except for body as well as souls. Here is a distinct promise of "the land;" yet it is hardly understood, and therefore not valued as it should be. Christians (some of them) are so ethereal that they think because they are cleansed of sin that by and bye they will vanish into thin air; yet existing, where, they hardly know. There is tied up in every promise the substantial land to be inherited and peopled by united bodies and souls throughout all eternity. Jesus in His talk to His disciples on the mount told them "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." Now, has this been fulfilled here? No; nor it was never intended to be; this earth has been a field of strife, a battle ground, and the meek have been subjected to gibbet and rack and the horrors of the inquisition, and if you understand this promise to refer to this earth your hope will never be fulfilled; it refers to a new heaven and a new earth, where the pure in heart shall see God. True, we see Him in spirit now; but then we shall dwell with Him, and continually our natural eye shall see the King in his beauty and we shall realize in the land that seemed very far off the abounding of the changeless covenant of God. Man, whose mortality was used, just as an incident along the line, will witness "Death swallowed up in victory" and God's promises consummated in revealing His original purposes fulfilled. How is this to be accomplished? Like Himself, in methods. Picture Him as a father, burying His hopes in His only Son upon the altar of sacrifice—Abraham saved his son but Mine cannot be saved—He must drink—He did drink—the dregs of the cup of misery. He did die—alone—bore our sins in His body upon the tree—that these bodies of ours might become immortal; that we might be saved, body and soul. Recognise that there is no time when man won't be somewhere, body and soul, and when a Christian gives up the idea that we shall be like Him, a copy of the Ideal Man, the first fruit, changless, his hope is only half grounded. The rev. gentleman closed a thrilling discourse with an appeal to his hearers not to question the promises, but to take and use them, and find that God, who freely gave His Son, gives salvation, grace and mercy, and by and by, in the resurrection morning, awakening from the dead, they will join in perpetually living in the unity of a glorified manhood.
