SPARTA'S WEDDING.

The Kaiser's Sister and the Duke of Sparta are Joined in Wedlock at Athens.

Burns and Tillet Address a Monster Meeting of Workmen at Bristol.

Miss Clara Huntingdon Married to Prince Hatzfeldt To-day; a Great Wedding.

SPARTA'S WEDDING.

ATHENS, Oct. 28.—The day was a most beautiful one, the sun shining as it shines only in Greece, and all the elements seeming to concur in the happy auspices of the wedding of Princess Sophia of Germany to the Duke of Sparta. A gorgeous procession, escorted by an imposing array of cavalry, left the royal palace at 11 o'clock. The guests occupying the carriages comprised the Emperor and Empress of Germany, the Empress Frederick, King and Queen of Denmark, Prince and Princess of Wales, Princesses Victoria and Maude of Wales, Marie of Greece and Victoria and Margeret of Prussia; Prince Victor of Wales, Prince of Meckleinburg-Schwerin, Hereditary Prince and Princess of Saxe-Meiningen, and other members of the royal families, besides a goodly number of people of only less exalted rank. Following the line of carriages came a magnificent state carriage drawn by six prancing black chargers, and containing Queen Olga of Greece and the blushing bride. The most brilliant of all the brilliant uniforms adorning the presence of royalty was that of the Emperor William, which as well as the robes of the Empress, fairly blazed with diamonds. There was great enthusiasm among the people, who thickly crowded the route of procession. The wedding service was elaborate, and occupied an entire hour. Afterwards the cortege returned by different routes, amid scenes of unabated demonstrativeness on the part of the populace. The marriage was then solemnized again according to the simple Luthern rite in the king's private chapel. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon the Duke of Sparta brought his wife from the royal palace to his own palace amid the cheers of the people. The bride, pale but smiling graciously, acknowledged the greetings of the throng with becoming grace. All the diplomats present in Athens were invited to the banquet in honor of the occasion to-night at the duke's palace. It was a brilliant affair and the display of wedding presents was dazzling. Chief among these were the gifts of the czar, consisting of a set of brilliants, a silver and crystal tea set, and a captain's uniform of the Neva regiment for the duke.

THE KAISER AT ATHENS.

ATHENS, Oct. 28.—Herr Balsman, marine painter, is in the suite of Kaiser Wilhelm during his trip in the east of Europe and came with him to this city. He was very busy all day Saturday and yesterday in making sketches of animated and picturesque scenes in the harbor of the Pirceus and in Athems. All the episodes attending the wedding Herr Salsman made sketches. The services at the entrance to the cathedral were imposing, thousands of privileged spectators were ranged in semi-circular ascending rows as at a theatre. Opposite the main entrance the appearance of this vast crowd was impressive in the highest degree. The marriage service is a very long and exhausting function and the king ordered the curtailment of it. This was a very good action, for there are no seats and the crowd of persons present made the heat very great and the atmosphere very uncomfortable. The array of priestly officers in their rich robes and paraphernalia made a gorgeous spectacle.

THE GREAT AGITATOR.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Mr. Tillett, the able lieutenant of John Burns in the recent London dockmen's strike, is carrying on a vigorous socialist propaganda and work of organization in the large cities of the united kingdom. His latest and most successful efforts have been at Bristol. To-day he addressed a monster mass meeting of workmen in that city. Competent observers place the number of his listeners at 60,000. Tillett urged the benefits of combination, and held out glowing prospects of success based on the result in the case of the dockmen. His remarks were not addressed to any particular class of workmen, but applied equally to all traders. It is noteworthy that regular radical socialists do not give a hearty support to the movement initiated by Burns and Tillett. A slight increase of wages, involving greater contentment on the part of the workers with the wage system, has no charms for out and out socialists, who would on the contrary, so arouse discontent with the whole existing social fabric as to hasten its total overthrow, and the establishment of universal co-operation. Burns and Tillett have, therefore, been almost read out of the socialist party by reason of their having descended to practical methods.

GREAT FIRE IN GLASGOW.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—There was an exciting fire at Glasgow early this morning. The wool market was destroyed and the flames spread to a number of thickly populated lodging houses surrounding the market building. There was an extensive panic among the thousands of inmates and at least 300 persons rushed into the street clad only in their night clothing and without saving any of their effects. A number of fugitives were more or less bruised and hurt, but no serious casualties are reported. The loss on the market building and dwellings is heavy, but exact figures are not learned.

MISS HUNTINGTON'S WEDDING.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Prince Hatzfeldt and Miss Clara Huntington, adopted daughter of Mr. C. P. Huntington, were married this morning at Brampton oratory. The ceremony was necessarily semi-private on account of the brief time allowed for the arrangements and because of the absence of many friends of the family from the city. About a hundred special guests were present in the oratory, which had been sumptuously decorated with rich draperies and growing plants. Prince Hermann Hatzfeldt was best man and the bride was given away by her father. Miss Ehrrall, of Washington, was the only bridesmaid. The marriage was performed by Bishop Emmons. Among those present were the Princesses Hatzfeldt, Count and Countess Altahair, Count Paul, German ambassador in London, and his daughter, the Austrian and American ministers to England, Counts Minsdorf and Lutzen, and the mother and brother of the bride. Count Paul gave a wedding breakfast at the German embassy. After the wedding the newly wedded pair will pass their honeymoon in Italy.

NOT GOOD AT "FIGGERS."

LONDON, Oct. 28.—The Times reduces its estimates of the wheat harvest eight million bushels.

SCOTCH PIG IRON EXCITED.

GLASGOW, Oct. 28.—The market for pig iron is excited and large transactions are taking place.

SATISFIED WITH CONYBEARE.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—While the Unionist candidate was addressing a meeting at Camborne, he was assailed with stones and bad eggs, and finally driven from the platform. The mob then reorganized the meeting and harmoniously adopted a resolution that the constituency was satisfied with the record of Mr. Conybeare, the Liberal member for that district.

BRADLAUGH RECOVERING.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Mr. Bradlaugh, who has been quite ill, is now convalescent. He expects shortly to take a sea voyage, which will no doubt fully restore his health.

ZOLA A CANDIDATE.

PARIS, Oct. 28.—M. Zola, the famous novelist, is a candidate for the seat in the Academy, made vacant by the death of Angier, the dramatist.

TURKEY IS SAFE.

BERLIN, Oct. 28.—The National Zeitung declares that Turkey occupies a solid position in the European concert, and enjoys the protection guaranteed by the treaty of Berlin. If the Emperor William had not visited the sultan, his omission to do so would admit of the worst interpretation.

BISMARCK AGAIN.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 28.—It is reported here that Prince Bismarck inspired Count Kalnoky, the Austrian premier, to dissuade Prince Ferdinand from returning to Bulgaria.

PRESENT FROM THE POPE.

PARIS, Oct. 28.—The pope has sent Miss Caldwell a valuable present and an autograph letter on the occasion of her marriage to Prince Murat.

TOO BAD.

BERLIN, Oct. 26.—News has reached here that the German empress, now on her way to Athens, with the emperor, to attend Princess Sophia's wedding, has been taken suddenly ill.

BRITAIN'S HARVEST.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—Lawe's semi-official report makes the wheat harvest in the United Kingdom 380,000,000 quarters; import requirements will be 18¾ million quarters.

LABBY AMUSES THE SCOTS.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—Henry Labouchere is stumping Scotland with considerable effect and his speeches have elicited the general approval of the extreme radicals. Their programme, as enunciated by Labouchere, is now definitely formulated. It includes the "one man, one vote," principle, or universal suffrage scheme of triennial and not septennial parliaments. Disestablishment of the church, accompanied by its disendowment, the funds now diverted to ecclesiastical purposes to be taken for secular uses in the administration of the empire. Such changes in the land laws as would lead, ultimately, to the extinction of great land-owning families and divide their tremendous possessions according to the theory of more even distribution of property. Mr. Labouchere was cheered fervently on one occasion when he declared, "We will make such a change in land laws that landlords will not recognize the country after we have put our hands in it." Another radical point is the compulsory sale of town lease holds for the housing of the poor.

MORE RAILWAY ALLIANCES.

CHICAGO, Oct. 26.—The Herald has a long article, to-day, stating that the roads competing with the Union Pacific and Northwest will form an alliance to fight the Vanderbilt Union Pacific alliance.

MYSTERIOUS HAPPENINGS.

QUEBEC, Oct. 26.—The parishioners of the adjacent parish of St. Catherines, Port Neuf, are greatly excited over the mysterious happenings in connection with the recent fire at the parish church. It seems that a flame would suddenly or without any apparent cause burst out in the most unexpected places among the surplices, in bags of clothing, brooms, in front of the altar, in the carpets on the floor, and it is even asserted that a table cloth was consumed on the table at which the cure was sitting. At the request of the church authorities, the cardinal has sent up Monsign. r Hamel and a couple of his other household clergy to investigate the matter.

SUBJECT FOR JUDGE LYNCH.

OTTAWA, Oct. 25.—Residents of the Allen settlement, Hastings county, have been thrown into wild excitement over the discovery that for upwards of a year John T. Blondin, aged 22 years, who had been teaching one of the schools, has seduced a number of his pupils. Saturday night Mrs. George Rollins, wife of one of the most respectable residents of the settlement, found her daughter Lillie, aged 14, crying bitterly. The girl acknowledged that she was in a delicate condition and that Blondin was responsible. Blondin was arrested Monday and residents of the village formed a vigilance committee, and headed by the father of the victim, started in a body for the house in which Blondin boarded, only to find him safely lodged in jail. By this time it had become generally known that he had ruined other children, from 12 to 15 years of age. Blondin has been in the habit of delaying young girl pupils after school, when he would threaten them and then quiet and please them with candy, and after getting them under his influence would accomplish their ruin. He would keep them in alternately and enjoin each to secrecy under threats of shooting them if they ever breathed a word to their parents or schoolmates. Blondin always bore an excellent character. He is greatly broken down over the discovery of his villainy and offers to marry Lillie Rollins. It is reported that another attempt will be made to lynch him.

THE CRONIN MURDER.

Another Very Important Arrest Made To-day in Connection with the Cronin Case.

The Marriage of Miss Newcombe and Lederer, the New York Actor, to be Annulled.

The Pan-American Delegates are Now Visiting the Wonders of the Wild West.

IMPORTANT ARREST.

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—Thomas Duane, who is believed to be the man who drove Dr. Cronin to the Carlson cottage, was arrested last night at St. Joseph, Mich., and is to be brought here immediately. The arrest is considered the most important yet made in the case.

PRISON SUNDAY.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—"Prison Sunday" was generally observed throughout New York city and state. Special church services were held and collections taken up for the continuance of the work of reforming criminals. Large quantities of flowers were received at the Prison Association rooms on East Fifteenth street.

A BIGAMIST FOILED.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28—Justice Andrews supreme court, to-day, appointed Richard S. Newcombe guardian ad libitum of his daughter Ida Florrie Newcombe in order that suit may be brought against George W. Lederer for annulment of the marriage ceremony performed in Long Island city a few days ago, of which Miss Newcombe and Lederer were contracting parties. Lederer is now under arrest on a charge of bigamy. The woman with whom he was living having claimed that she was his wife.

THOSE DELEGATES.

OMAHA, Oct. 28.—The Pan American delegates spent a very quiet day. This morning a large number of the party drove out to Fort Omaha and inspected that place. They witnessed a dress parade of the troops, who afterwards marched in review before General Camano of the delegation. They partook of lunch at Paxton. This morning the whole party boarded a train of cars on the electric railway and rode over to Council Bluffs. At dinner a pretty souvenir in the shape of an ox horn polished and trimmed with ribbons was presented to each excursionist. An informal reception was held in the hotel after dinner. At 10 o'clock the visitors were conveyed to the train and were soon en route to St. Louis.

RAILWAY RUMOURS.

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—Vice-President McMullin, of the Chicago & Alton, says the Alton is not a member of the Northwest Union Pacific's alliance as reported. The Union Pacific, he says, has made overtures for the forming of a traffic agreement with the Chicago & Alton via Kansas City, but so far there has been nothing definite accomplished. Arrangements may be made.

A FAT CORPSE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—The funeral of Annie Price, the Irish giantess, known as Barnum's fat woman, occurred to-day. It took sixteen men to carry the coffin to the hearse. The burial clothes were the same as worn by deceased when she appeared before the public. The family bible of her family was buried with her in accordance with her dying request. Her husband, Edward Price, "the Albino," and the undertaker and his assistants were the only persons that followed the remains to Evergreen cemetery.

AN EXPENSIVE BLAZE.

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 28.—The Frost & Ward blocks, containing the best business houses in Dunmore borough, were destroyed by fire this morning. Loss, $50,000; insurance, $32,000. The fire department of Scranton saved the town from destruction. The fire was of incendiary origin.

A TERRIBLE ATLANTIC WRECK.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 28.—Information has reached here of the loss of the schooner Francis E. Waters on Nag's Head, N. C., during a storm on Wednesday night. Nine men and one woman clung to the rigging for nearly 48 hours, and then, becoming exhausted, were swept off one by one. The life crew were unable to save them on account of the great height of the surf. The Waters was built at Taylor Island, Chesapeake Bay from whence her crew was shipped She was engaged in the West Indian fruit trade.

EXPENSIVE TOYS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 26—Bids were opened at the navy department to-day in a second endeavor to secure satisfactory proposals for the construction of the 3,000 tons cruisers, authorized by the act of congress of September 7th, 1888. Bids not to include arms or equipment. At noon there were present in the office of the secretary of the navy, Harrison Loring, of Boston, William T. Nolster, president of the Columbia Iron Works and Dry Dock Company, Baltimore; Geo. W. Quintard and N. T. Palmer, jr., of New York, and others. There were five bids opened as follows: Union Iron Works, San Francisco, for one cruiser, $775,000; for two cruisers, $1,450,000, for three cruisers, $2,054,000, or $684,667 each. N. T. Palmer, jr. & Co., New York, one cruiser, $674,000; Columbia Iron Works, Baltimore, for one cruiser, $625,000, and for two cruisers, $1,225,000. This bid, which was the lowest, was from the contractor for the construction of the gunboat "Petrel." Bath Iron Works, Bath, Maine, for one cruiser, $775,000; for two cruisers, $1,350,000; for three cruisers, $2,025,000. Harrison Loring, Boston, for one cruiser, $674,000.

STORMY POLITICS.

MONTREAL, Oct. 26.—The Club National of the Liberals held the stormiest meeting in their history last evening, several prominent members nearly coming to blows. It was largely attended by the leading men of the party, and there was a wordy war for about two hours' duration between the two factions, one made up of the irreconcilable of the rouge Liberal school, and the other of the Nationalists friendly to Mr. Mercier's government. There was an organized effort made to oust Mr. C. Lebeouf, the president, for having condemned Mr. Mercier's alliance with the Castors and it succeeded.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria

THE CHURCHES.

Summaries of Some of the City Sermons Spoken Sunday.

HOLY TRINITY CHURCH.

Bishop Sillitoe preached at Holy Trinity yesterday morning, taking his subject from Ephesians 4th chapter 23 and following verses: "And be renewed in the spirit of your mind; and that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." We have here laid before us with great simplicity a process described as a renewal; being renewed in spirit is not exactly a change of nature, but of condition. Human nature does not change, but the condition of circumstances are constantly changing. The nature of this process is of a spiritual nature, that is, it comes through the Holy Spirit of God Himself and the Holy Spirit seems to have been brought in to direct the change. We see certain signs and tokens of this renewal, and the Apostle tells us that these tokens are the putting on of the new man, speaking the truth, avoiding anger and corrupt communication, tenderheartedness and forgiving one another. Let us ask ourselves what is necessary to our renewal, and whether these words are not applicable to us. We know that we have a great promise for those who strive to do good, and the process comes easier to those who are ready to welcome it. God in his mercy has provided this process of renewal by His Spirit, which descends on us and spreads broadcast that great peace of mind. What a wonderful world this would be if we all had that peace of mind. The process of renewal is a double one; not brought by God in spite of man, but by God and man together. It must be done one with the help of the other. And what is it that interferes with the renewal of our life? It is the want of faith. If we only could accept the Word of God without mistrust or hesitation the renewal would be easy. We should follow in the footsteps of Jesus, hold out our hand to our brother, and strive as Jesus strove, ministering peace and concord wherever we go. God is willing to develop in us now, by the process mentioned, the renewal of the spirit of our mind, therefore let us strive to put on the new man and live after God in righteousness and true holiness.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH.

In the morning at St. Paul's (Reformed Episcopal) Rev. Thos. Hadden spoke from 1 Cor., 9 chap. 26th verse: "I therefore so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the air." He spoke substantially as follows: There are three certainties known to mankind; (1) That we exist; (2) That we all shall die and leave this state for another; (3) That religion is a reality. Experimental religion is one of the best fruits of Christianity, when we can with confidence say, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." Paul had a certainty—"I know in whom I have believed." "The Spirit beareth witness with our spirit that we are born of God." Some reject Christianity because they don't understand its mystories, but they do not reject to believe in nature, which is just as full of mysteries. The same trust is seen in the pursuits of life, which are alike freighted with mystery and uncertainty. Men would not enter upon undertakings if they could see staring them in the face, disappointment, failure and ruin. Young men start out with high hopes, flattering prospects, strain every nerve and muscle, deny themselves time for recreation, take temperance and morality on their side, and feel sure of success. So far so good; but they forget to take God into partnership, they put confidence in themselves and not in God; then, by one uncertain step, one stroke, riches, honor and prosperity are swept away, and they are alone and ruined; and as we see it all it teaches how changeable are all things earthly, and as we think we realize that this uncertainty is not confined to natural things alone, but that friendships change: where our friendship seemed to be heartily reciprocated, lo and behold, it becomes cold, then gradually turns to hatred, and we find our dear friend turned into a bitter enemy, and where we had expected true sympathy and help there we find estrangement and slander; this is not strange, and in view of it being a fact, the poet says, "Change and decay in all around I see; oh Thou who changest not, abide with me." Then our homes, with their peace and happiness, may be changed and made desolate by death. I would not cast gloom around in speaking thus, but it is well that we should consider it, so that we may not center all hopes there. Agnostics may revile, but we have certainty in our Christianity, a proof that stands, and we cannot help believing the fact; we can trace back its existence with certainty, and the fountain at Bethlehem has grown into a majestic river; the force of Christianity is greater than any other to-day. The bible has survived revolution, and amidst every opposition has come down through the ages intact, nation after nation has risen and fallen; assault after assault has been made upon its divine origin, but it abides and will for ever, and proof of this seems to come in the fact that it never had a stronger grip than down through this century, and to-day it is the foundation of those lands that can boast of the highest civilization. But Christians are certain of much more than this. Paul had no doubt as to the power of the gospel, he was not at all uncertain as to the end and the prize, and it is the Christian's privelege (1) of assurance of acceptance with God as the sons of God; (2) To have a hope of heaven and in all things seek to travel toward that certainty prepared for believers and doers of the Word; (3) To enjoy that certain hope of immortality if he surrenders himself to Christ, and that he can possess what Christ has purchased for us. If we succeed, it will not be through our ability, but through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ. In conclusion the reverend gentleman reminded his hearers of the welcome home, and said he preferred the certainty of religion to the uncertainty and unrest of sin, and invited them to seek that which will certainly bring peace and joy for evermore.

Daily British Columbian

Monday Evening, Oct. 28, 1889.

The great immigration question has long been a matter of moment with far-sighted English politicians, and the Pall Mall Gazette, referring to the subject, says that a select committee of the house of commons foresees a time when it will be necessary to enact the alien law of the United States. The large cities, and especially London, may be said to swarm with foreigners of the most poverty-stricken and degraded class, many of them being refugees from foreign states, for political plotting in their own lands. Such men find a safe and convenient asylum in London, and not infrequently repay the hospitality accorded them by directing their genius in the direction of upsetting the constitution which protects them. Of this class Herr Most was a notable type. A walk from Aldgate through Whitechapel, Middlesex street and Houndsditch, taking in, of course, the adjacent alleys during the perambulation, reveals to the observant tourist a large area inhabited entirely by an immense population, all, or nearly all, of whom are foreign Jews, most of whom can speak not a word of English, and half at least of whom speak dialects which perhaps twenty others in a population of 5,000,000 souls can barely understand. This latter statement is literally true, as the case of Lipski, tried for murder a few years ago, proves. Lipski spoke a mixture of Polish, Russian, and low German, a dialect known as Yeddish, and when put upon trial it was with the greatest difficulty that any person in the metropolis could be found with a sufficient knowledge of this tongue to be able to interpret the evidence for the benefit of the prisoner. A school teacher in Whitechapel estimates that in a population of 75,000 persons, 35,000 are foreigners, and in Lower Hamlets 75 per cent. of the population may be put in the same category. Hoxton, Shoreditch, and in fact the whole of the east end of London, is one vast foreign colony, burrowing in cellars like rats or swarming more thickly than Chinamen do in our western cities, in the rooms above. Ten or a dozen persons, of both sex and all ages, will find ample accomodation for sleeping, eating, working, and all other purposes, in one room twenty feet by twelve, and when every room in a house is peopled in like proportion, and street after street is so crammed with the human animal that there is positively no further room to squeeze in another specimen, it may be imagined that the sanitary condition of the neighborhood is not all that could be desired. This picture of the state of the east end of London is in no respect exaggerated, but, indeed, falls far short of the horrible reality. The mode of living of these people is extremely wretched, their food being of the scantiest. They are willing to work for next to nothing, and the consequence is a fierce struggle for existence, a battle for daily bread, which none who have seen these people can ever forget. The gin palace is their home, and who can have the heart to blame them (although to this institution is doubtless traceable much of their misery), for, as a scarcely clad woman, with one young child at the breast and another at her skirts, remarked, "The stuff helps us forget it all now and then." And so it goes on, this undying battle for the barest subsistence, alternated with the forgetfulness which a penny or two will purchase from the gin palace, protected by the state, a life enlivened only by street fights, brawls, and hideous murder, until one almost repeats what Victor Hugo said of Paris, that if London had eyes, "every brick would weep tears of blood."

The monarchical principle does not thrive on the virgin soil of the new world. Late events and portents in Brazil are furnishing fresh demonstration of this fact. During the past two years republicanism has obtained wonderful strength in Brazil. The immediate cause of this is said to be the great unpopularity of the crown princess, Dona Isabel, wife of Prince Louis of Orleans, Comte d'Eu. This lady gained the enmity of the landed proprietors and other classes among the people by her share in bringing about the sudden emancipation of the slaves in May, 1888, without allowing time for the substitution of voluntary for forced labor in the fields. The crops were unusually abundant, but many of them were left to rot owing to the difficulty of obtaining labor. The consequence was that a very strong feeling was aroused against the crown princess, and incidentally against the whole royal family. The sparks of republicanism, which are to be found in all monarchies, were fanned into flame, and for some time past the existence of the empire has been in danger. The emperor, Dom Pedro II., who succeeded his father so far back as 1831, is now advanced in years, and the thought that his place will soon be filled by his daughter is one that a very large section of the people refuse to entertain. This feeling has manifested itself in many extraordinary ways of late. Only recently, during the ceremony of conferring diplomas at the imperial school of medicine, one of the leading professors of the institution appealed to the emperor, in a speech which was enthusiastically applauded, to withdraw into private life, in order to permit the establishment of a republic. At the last convention of an organization of veterans, similar to the Grand Army of the Republic in the United States, the Comte d'Eu, who presided by virtue of his office as commander-in-chief of the army, was greeted on taking the chair with cries of "Viva la republica." Subsequently, whilst visiting the northern provinces for the purpose of carrying relief to the famine sufferers, he was received everywhere with hostility, and was accused by the press of making the journey solely to gain popularity. Just before the dissolution of parliament last summer, too, one of the most prominent members closed an eloquent speech with the cry, "Down with the monarchy! Long live the republic!" and was tumultously applauded by a large number of his hearers. These incidents illustrate the depth and extent of republican sentiment in the empire. The enemies of the monarchy are to be found chiefly among the landed proprietors and agriculturists, and the traders and merchants. The press, too, is largely on their side, every paper in Rio de Janeiro, with one exception, professing the most ardent republicanism. So far has the movement gone, in fact, that a candidate for the position of first president of the republic of Brazil has been selected, and the emperor is almost daily appealed to in the press to abdicate in his favor. The government, realizing its danger and that of the monarchy, went to the people at the elections last month with a programme specially designed to win them back. It promised universal suffrage, free education, the autonomy of provinces and municipalities, absolute freedom of creed and conscience, reorganization of the senate, abolition of customs dues on exports, increase of railroads and other facilities for transportation, and the creation of land banks and credit establishments designed to afford financial aid to the farming, manufacturing, and trad-classes. This liberal programme probably had something to do with the result of the elections, which were overwhelming in favor of the government, notwithstanding the increasing republican sentiment. Good authorities say, however, that the government victory was more largely due to judicious manipulation of patronage, and to the display of military force throughout the campaign. Such means of achieving success will naturally have the ultimate effect of stimulating rather than discouraging republicanism. The position of the government, notwithstanding its apparent strength, is thus really precarious, for, in the present temper of the people, any arbitrary proceeding is almost certain to lead to revolution. The chances are considered to be ten to one, at all events, that the empire will not outlive the present emperor, and he cannot have a very long lease of life.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The New York Press says that the heads of the Vanderbilt family are as literally immersed in business affairs as any tallow chandler within a mile of their magnificent homes. They work as many hours a day as their father did when conductor on a railway, and almost as many as their grand-parents when the one poled a flatboat and the other tended bar.

Edison, discussing the electric light wire danger, says that "low pressure is the only remedy." Placing the wires underground will result eventually in driving the danger into the manholes, stores and houses. High pressure currents are used solely to save investing in copper wire, and therefore the companies who refuse to adopt low pressure are saving money at the expense of life.

In Louisville, Ky., a few days ago there was a strange proceeding in pursuance of Mosaic law. A Jew had died without issue, and in such cases the Mosaic law requires that his brother shall marry the widow and raise up children in the name of the deceased. But in this case the lady objected to marrying the brother. The only lawful alternative was a divorce, and the ceremony of divorcing the woman from her dead husband was performed by two orthodox rabbis, who were summoned from Chicago for the purpose. Those who attended to witness the strange scene were charged 25 cents admission.

Paul du Chaillu differs with many leading historians as to the social condition of the vikings, the direct ancestors of the English-speaking people, whom he believes to have been well civilized. He insists that "the people who were then spread over a great part of the present Russia, who overran Germania, who knew the art of writing, who led their conquering hosts to Spain, into the Mediterranean, to Italy, Sicily, Greece, the Black sea, Palestine, Africa, and even crossed the broad Atlantic to America, who were undisputed masters of the sea for more than twelve centuries, were not barbarians," and concludes: "Let those who uphold the contrary view produce evidence from archæology of any indigenous British or Gallic civilization which surpasses that of the North."

BRANDY MANUFACTURE.

The Principal Industry of the Town of Cognac, France.

Originally Used as a Medicine, Brandy Soon Became the Tippler's Favorite Beverage—Destruction Worked by the Ever-Busy Phylloxera.

In Cognac every thing and every body are associated directly or indirectly with brandy, says the English Illustrated Magazine. If you come upon a grand pile of buildings you may be assured that they are brandy warehouses; if you see an unusually fine house it is certain to be the residence of a brandy merchant; the very atmosphere is saturated with it. Its deposits have imparted a new aspect to every bit of masonry its fumes can reach, and it is impossible to give a description of Cognac without some account of that commerce upon which its very existence depends.

Although distillation was understood by the Arabian alchemists centuries before a French physician and alchemist, Arnauld de Villeneuve, who died in 1360, appears to have been the first who distilled the famous aqua vitæ, which the discoverer proclaimed to be a panacea for every ill that flesh is heir to. "This water of life," he wrote, "is the water of immortality, since it lengthens our days, dissipates unhealthy humors, cheers the heart, and prolongs youth." Such praises were considered by no means extravagant in that age, and the extraordinary virtues of aqua vitæ were universally believed; it was used, however, rather as a medicine or cordial than a beverage. In 1560 it was given out to the Hungarian miners as a remedy against the cold, unwholesome air of the mines, and twenty years afterward the English army in Flanders was provided with it as a protective against the damp of the climate. That it was used in this country in Shakespeare's time is proved by the nurse in "Romeo and Juliet" exclaiming: "Give me some aqua vitæ!" Nantes seems to have been the earliest seat of the trade; thence it was smuggled across the bay of Biscay to our southern coast. In old plays brandy is frequently spoken of as "Nantes." As early as 1650, however, there were five or six brandy firms established in the little town on the banks of the Charente, and one of these, the house of Angier Freres, still exists. In the reign of Louis XVI. the eau-de-vie of Cognac was considered to be the best, but even in 1770 its merchants numbered only ten and in 1820 they did not exceed sixteen. During the next twenty years, however, the total leaped to 104, and in 1877 it further rose to 131; since then there has been a decrease in consequence of the repeated failures of the vintages.

Very little brandy is distilled in Cognac, the operation being chiefly conducted on the brandy farms in the district where the grape is grown. The brandy grape, which very much resembles the champagne, is a small, white berry, the juice of which previous to distillation tastes like very bad, sour cider. The farmers, as a rule, keep the spirit several years before offering it for sale; it is then purchased by the Cognac merchants. When brought into the warehouses its strength is about twenty over proof; this is reduced by adding a certain proportion of distilled water. Different vintages are mingled in huge vats, which sometimes stand in an upper part of the building, and are kept constantly stirred to blend the flavors and a preparation of burned sugar is added for coloring. It is then filtered through a peculiar kind of paper pulp and flows into vats on a lower level, in which it remains from five to twenty and even thirty years to mature. From these receptacles it is drawn off into casks for bottling or for exportation.

The premises of some of the principal brandy merchants are of enormous extent, the largest and most elaborate being fitted with all the newest appliances, which cover several acres of ground. The operations of the trade require large space. To give some idea of these we may state that the blending department, once the crypt of the monastry, contains eighty vats, each of the capacity of sixty hogsheads, and in the flourishing days of the trade this house has sent out in a single year as many as 6,000,000 bottles, besides casks. When we consider that there is another firm in the town whose business is equally large, and several that very nearly approach it, to say nothing of a hundred others which have more or less extensive transactions, some conception may be formed of the importance and enormous capital embarked in this branch of commerce.

But brandy is rapidly becoming a thing of the past, thanks to a tiny insect whose ravages have been as terrible to this part of the country as was the plague of locusts to Egypt. It was in 1865 that the phylloxera first appeared in France in the valley of the Rhone; by the close of 1874 it had extended throughout the south, southeast and southwest, from Lyons to Bordeaux. Only eleven years ago the cognac district had about 60,000 acres planted with vines; of these nearly 8,000 have been utterly destroyed, and over 20,000 seriously injured; since then three-fourths of the area have been desolated and the remainder much affected, and the opinion of the leading merchants is that the chances are that in another generation the true eau-de-vie will be a liquor introuvable. Some attempt is being made at replanting the vineyards, though, in most cases, the pest reappears upon the young shoots, and here and there experiments are being made with American vines, which are said to be phylloxera proof, but the prospects of cognac can scarcely be said to be improved to any great extent.

In the meantime, the effect of this state of affairs is everywhere visible. The precincts of the ancient convent, in which a famed firm of brandy-makers have taken up their quarters for the last hundred years and more, are as quiet and drowsy as though they were still the home of the followers of St. Francis.

A Needle's Protracted Journey.

Nineteen years ago this month a woman residing at Kingston, N. Y., accidentally pushed a needle into her breast. She had been sewing on fine muslin, and she pushed the point of the needle through the lapel of her basque, while she inquired into the cause of a quarrel between two children who were playing near by. In a paroxysm of tears the younger child threw herself into the arms of the lady, and, as she did so, the needle was pushed so far out of sight that only the eye was visible. A quick movement to rescue it resulted in an entire disappearance of the fine bit of steel. No inconvenience was experienced, and the incident was entirely forgotten. A few evenings ago the woman, who had carried the needle about her for so many years, was awakened out of a sound sleep by a peculiar pricking sensation in the throat. Rising up in bed, she began to cough. The pricking became more severe, but the sharp substance appeared to be rising in her throat. Thrusting her fingers down as far as possible, she caught hold of an object and drew it out. It was the needle that had been journeying about under the surface for nineteen years.

The Old German's Talisman.

The Germans have a story which that home-loving people like to repeat. A father, when his daughter became a bride, gave her a golden casket with the injunction not to pass it into other hands, for it held a charm which, in her keeping, would be of inestimable value to her as the mistress of a house. Not only was she to have the entire care of it, but she was to take it every morning to the cellar, the kitchen, the dining-room, the library, the parlor, the bedroom, and to remain with it in each place for five minutes, looking carefully about. After a lapse of three years the father was to send the key, that the secret talisman might be revealed. The directions were followed. The key was sent. The casket was opened. It was found to contain an old parchment, on which was written these words: "The eyes of the mistress are worth one hundred pair of servants' hands." The wise father knew that a practice of inspection followed faithfully for three years would become a habit and be self-perpetuating—that the golden casket and the hidden charm would have accomplished their mission.—Folk-

ABBIE ABILENA'S VICTORY.

I was sitting n my study, gazing out upon the ricks,
And the thoughts of days departed with things present oft did mix,
When a maiden stood beside me, spoke in silver, dulcet tones:
"I am Abbie Abilena, daughter of Sir Jonas Jones;
Many months I have been loving William Watson Watkins Ware,
With his pale, sun-flower complexion and his meteoric hair!
Oft and oft he came to see me when laburnum was in blow;
Came with happy, smiling features, o'er the crystal winter snow;
Talked he of the pigs and cattle, though he kept not one small swine,
Talked, while I was feeling surely, he would say 'Wilt thou be mine?'
But away into his dwelling, with unspoken love, he went,
With his forehead sweat embeaded and his eyes on flagstones bent.

"So," spoke Abbie Abilena, "yesterday, when down he came,
I went to him very quickly, softly breathed his entire name,
Clasped his right hand closely, closely as he spoke in haste forthwith,
In the meekest, fondest accents: 'Be thy huthband? Yith—O yith!'
And to-morrow we shall marry. Preacher, I do wish you there,
To wed us in the stately mansion of William W. W. Ware!"

Cloudy was the bridal evening, yet like noon time shone the hall
When young Abbie Abilena ready was, erect and tall;
Proudly up she stood before me, bashful William at her side;
Like a rose beside a snow-drift, or a colt to flagstaff tied.

"Wilt thou take this man for husband, Abbie Abilena Jones?"
"Yes," she answered, very sweetly, in her silver, dulcet tones.
"Wilt thou take Miss Abilena thy dear wife to be forthwith?"
"Yith!" he whispered, blushing brightly, "yith—and yith—and yith—and yith!"

Bride and husband I pronounced them, twain no more, but ever one,
United like the milk and sugar in a doughnut or a bun.
As she kissed him on that evening, she would kiss him evermore,
Bid him go and bring the water, pick the beans, or shut the door,
For, as she had deftly won him, his own will must be a myth;
As she ordered, he must answer, in his meekest manner: "Yith!"

Hear me, O ye young men bashful, hear me tell, in solemn tones,
Tale of Abbie Abilena, daughter of Sir Jonas Jones!
Ere the bells of morrow's mid-day peal upon the frosty air,
Be thy locks as black as coal dust, or as red as his of Ware,
Go and tell thy love with courage, or beware! beware—take care!

—Samuel C. Howard, in Yankee Blade.

AN INDIAN'S WRATH.

It Almost Results in the Death of Mother and Babe.

Several years ago my husband built and conducted a hotel for the accommodation of the miners and teamsters at the terminal point of one of our California railroads. Like many other small towns in the northern portion of the State, it boasted of an Indian rancherie, or settlement, within its environments, the half civilized inhabitants of which played a more or less important part in its local history. With few exceptions they were a moderately peaceful, industrious community—the men spending their time in hunting and fishing, and the women doing the drudgery, such as procuring fuel for their fires, the laundry work of their white neighbors, etc. Every now and then, however, the wild nature of the red men, either through the medium of firewater or intense passion, would become aroused, and at such times crimes of varying degrees of enormity were almost certain to be the result.

We had one child, a bright little fellow about two years old, who, by reason of his cute, babyish antics, had become a great favorite with the patrons of the hotel; and they, as a token of their affection, presented him on his second birthday with a diminutive iron bank, in which each of the miners and teamsters had dropped a silver dollar. As day after day came and went, dollar after dollar found its way into the little treasure-box, till it became so heavy that baby could no longer lift it, and I placed it for safe-keeping upon a bracket in my dressing-room.

One evening, after old Julia, the Indian woman who did our laundrying once a week, had performed her usual hard day's washing, it occurred to me that I had done a very careless thing in permitting her to go into my room for the soiled clothes, and, knowing the propensity of her race to steal, I at once proceeded to ascertain whether any thing was missing. Baby's bank was gone! Old Julia had stolen it.

It was too late to do any thing that day, but early the next morning we had their hut searched, with the result that fragments of the broken bank were found, but no money. They were bountifully supplied with provisions, however; an inquiry at one of the stores elicited the fact that a large bill of goods such as we had found had been purchased there the evening before by old Julia and her spouse. The woman was accordingly arrested, and, after being convicted, was sent to the county jail in the adjoining town for a term of three months.

Many predicted that this would not be the end of the affair, as the woman's husband was a dangerous character, and might seek to avenge his wife's imprisonment; but neither my husband nor myself shared their fears, and the matter was forgotten, after a day or two.

One day, about a fortnight after Julia's conviction, I was assisting the dining-room girls to prepare the table for luncheon, when suddenly the sound of a low, gutteral, threatening voice at the window drew my attention. Looking up, startled and frightened, I beheld a savage, hideous-looking Indian glaring in at me. It was Indian Jack, old Julia's husband.

Seeing my frightened look, he advanced still closer, put his swarthy face in at the open window, and, shaking his fist at me, grunted out: "You no give me back my Julia, me kill you pretty soon!"

I had him driven off at once, and as I watched him slowly making his way back to the rancherie on the river bank half a mile to the rear of our house, and saw his threatening, angry gestures, I confess I was badly frightened. This feeling soon wore off, however, and as my husband was inclined to think it no more than a game of bluff, his visit was quite forgotten by the time luncheon was over.

That afternoon the table-girls went out in the woods for ferns; the cook also was out, and as my husband was seldom about the house except at meals, I was for the time being alone. To while away the time I picked up a paper, and was just becoming interested in some article, when I was startled by a loud, frightened scream from my little boy, who was playing in the back yard. Springing up I ran to the window, just in time to see Indian Jack snatch up my child in his arms, and hasten away in the chaparral. A terrible, frightful thought instantly flashed through my mind. was going to avenge the incarceration of his wife by taking the life of my poor, innocent boy!

There was no help at hand; if he was saved, I alone must save him, and with a desperate hope spurring me on, I bounded out of the door in frantic, determined pursuit.

Believing his movements had been unobserved, the Indian had not made as hurried flight as he might have done, and before half the distance to the rancherie had been traveled, I was close behind him.

"Bring back my boy!" cried I, in frantic tones. "Kill me, if you will, but spare my child!"

An angry grunt was his only reply upon finding me in pursuit, and, placing his hand over the baby's mouth to still his piteous cries, he quickened his pace so as to keep out of my way.

Still I ran on, begging in sobbing tones for my child, but, if it had any effect at all upon the fiendish brute, it was to encourage him in his horrid purpose, for now and then he would pause, look back with an exultant, devilish expression upon his hideous face and then swagger off again with a low, gloating chuckle that pierced my heart like a dagger.

In this manner the race was kept up until his hut was reached, when he bounded inside, closed the door with a bang and then locked it. In vain I pounded upon the door, begged, wept and pleaded; the brute was as immovable as a rock, and I could hear my poor baby pleading in plaintive, wailing accents for "mamma, mamma, mamma!"

The sound of my lamentations attracted the attention of a score of half-naked, sleepy-looking Indians, who rushed pell-mell from their cabins to learn the cause of the unusual commotion, and to them I renewed my pleading. "No sabe!" was all I could get out of them, and I returned to the door again, knowing that Jack could at least understand me.

He gave me no answer, however, contenting himself with holding an animated colloquy in his own dialect with his comrades on the outside. What they were talking about, of course, I could not tell, but I was not to be kept long in ignorance; for I was suddenly seized, dragged to an adjoining hut and rudely thrust inside. With the sound of the key turning in the lock as I was made a prisoner and the feeble wail of my child ringing in my ears, I fainted—the intensity of my mental anguish was more than I could endure.

How long I lay thus I do not know, but when I awoke to consciousness all was silent. I listened, but I could not hear my child's plaintive cry in the adjoining hut. A horrible thought flashed into my mind: Had the dem on Jack killed him?

My distracted mind had not yet found the answer when the sound of my door being unlocked was heard, and the next moment Jack entered my presence, locking the door after him! I rushed toward him and frantically grasped his arm. "My boy! Where is he? What have you done with him?"

The Indian shook me rudely away. "Ugh!" grunted he. "Boy no good! Too much yah! yah! all time. D—— boy!"

I would not be thus put off, and still assailed him with my entreaties. He endured it with stolid indifference for several moments, and then, as if prompted by an uncontrollable impulse, took one hasty stride toward me and rudely clutched my arm. "You tell jail man let my Julia come back!" demanded he, savagely.

I told him I would do all I could, but that it was now beyond my power to effect her release.

The answer seemed to goad him on to greater fury; his grip tightened upon my arm; his dark eyes emitted a fiendish, wicked glitter, and, drawing from his belt a keen-edged dirk, he leaned over me and hissed: "You lie, and Jack kill you!"

I saw the gleaming blade ascend and hang trembling above me, and then, with a loud, despairing shriek, I lost consciousness.

When I opened my eyes I found my husband bending over me and a group of familiar faces all around me, whom I at once recognized as the regular patrons of the hotel.

The flight of Indian Jack and my frantic pursuit had been observed by some men working in a slaughter-house near the rancherie, and, learning some thing was wrong, they had notified my husband, who, with several miners, had rushed to my relief. My baby-boy was found fast asleep in Jack's cabin, which accounted for my not hearing him when I recovered from my swoon some time before.

As for Jack, after being mauled to the heart's content of the indignant miners, he was given notice to leave the community at once, which he did, making a bee line for the foothills lying beneath Mount Shasta.

The noble-hearted miners and teamsters, not satisfied with ridding the neighborhood of Indian Jack, donated a larger and stronger bank to my boy, and showed no relaxation in their generosity until it was even heavier than the one old Julia stole.

As for myself—well, I am no longer a resident of that part of the State, and though I were to live a thousand years I should never forget the horrors of that eventful day, or how nearly I became the victim of an Indian's wrath.—Mrs. A. S. Burrcughs, in Overland Monthly.

PETROLEUM LANGUAGE.

The Peculiar Slang Used by Dwellers in the Pennsylvania Oil Regions.

It has been frequently remarked that every separate trade and occupation has a language of its own, built up from its wants, and in the main unintelligible to other craftsmen. As a marked example, says the Golden Days, take the oil business of Pennsylvania. This region has a very peculiar slang, one phrase of which has drifted into general use.

"He's got the sand," as a synonym for "nerve," had its origin in the oil country. In an oil-well every thing depends upon the sand.

"The sand" is the rock in which the oil is found, and on its quality depends the production of the well. If no sand is found, the well is at once abandoned. If the sand is good—that is, of a coarse texture—the well is more than likely to be a good one; but if the sand is fine and hard, it is sure to be a small well, if not an utter failure. Therefore the important question, when a well is being finished, is "Has it got the sand?"

"Hitting her jugular," means to strike a well that flows immediately. "A duster" is a dry hole, and about twenty-five per cent. of all the wells drilled are dusters. "A spouter" is a flowing well, and "a rearer" is a large gas well.

"Spudding" is a term used for drilling when the well is just started. After the hole is deep enough to cover all the tools, it is called drilling. The drilling-tools of any well consist of several pieces screwed together, and hence are called "a string of tools."

An operator never says there are twenty wells drilling in a certain district, but "there are twenty sets of tools running."

"The big hole" means that part of the hole drilled before the casing is put in. "Shooting a well" is the process of exploding a torpedo in it to increase the production.

The "bull wheel" is an important part of the drilling machinery of a well, around the large wooden shaft of which the drilling cable is wound.

The "sand pump" is a valve about six feet long that is run into the hole to pump out the drillings.

The "bit" is simply the drill, and the "reamer" is the tool which is run into the well after the drill to make the hole uniform.

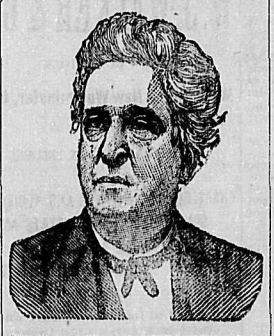
"A fishing job" is to hunt in the hole for lost tools, and this is a distinct and important part of the business. Fishing has become an art. There are one hundred different and curious varieties of "fishing tools," a peculiar one for every part of the drilling appliance that may be lost.

There are men who make a business of "fishing," and their skill in securing tools lost at as great a depth as two thousand feet is one of the amazing things of this peculiar industry.

The "white sand pools" are districts where the oil sand is white and full of pebbles. The oil produced in these pools commands a premium of twenty-five cents above the market, and is known as "premium oil." All the Pennsylvania districts are "white sand districts" except Bradford. The Bradford sand being of a dark color, it is known as "the black sand district." The oil is inferior, and does not command a premium. In drilling a well the drill is turned round and round, and a driller is known as a "junk-twister."

He Took His Rank.

Piron, the poet, went only occasionally to grand dinners and large entertainments. He knew very well it was his wit which was invited; as he said, "They hire me on wages." He went everywhere without bending the knee. One day, at the house of some Marquis, whose name I have forgotten, a nobleman made way for him to enter the dining-room before him. The Marquis, observing this ceremony, addressed the nobleman: "Oh, my dear Count, don't be so ceremonious; he is only a poet." Piron repelled the insult like a man of spirit. He raised his head proudly, and went in first, remarking: "Since our titles are known, I take my rank."



THE LATE PROF. PHELPS.

The above is a portrait of the late Prof. Edward F. Phelps, M. D., L. L. D., of Dartmouth college. He was a strong, able man, who stood high in the literary and scientific worlds. It is not generally known, but it is, nevertheless, the truth, that Prof. Phelps was the discoverer of what is known to the medical profession and chemists universally as Paine's Celery Compound, unquestionably one of the most valuable discoveries of this century. This remarkable compound is not a nervine, an essence, a sarsaparilla or any devised article, but a discovery, and it marks a distinct step in medical practice and the treatment of nervous complications. It has been freely admitted by the best medical talent in the land, and also by the leading chemists and scientists, that for nerve troubles, nervous exhaustion, insomnia, debility, senility and even the dreaded and terrible Paresis, nothing has ever been discovered which reaches the disorder and restores health equal to this discovery of Prof. Phelps.

Paine's Celery Compound is now being prepared in quantities, and can be procured at any reputable druggist. An attractive bunch of celery is to be found on every wrapper. It has become specially popular among professional men, mind workers, ladies burdened with exciting social duties and frequenters of the leading clubs.

Bryan O'Lynn had no boots for to wear,
So he came to Westminster to buy him a pair.
"I'll have one pair of thick ones and one pair of thin,
If I can find J. Rousseau's," says Bryan O'Lynn.

He hunted the stores all along the main route,
Says he, "The right one I've not yet found out.
I want J. Rousseau—I'll buy only from him,
For he sells the cheapest," says Bryan O'Lynn.

He stepped a little west of McKenzie street,
He met Rousseau's sign—sure it was a great treat;
He lifted the latch, and Jim stood within.
"I've found it at last," says Bryan O'Lynn.

We showed him both Calf Boots, Kip and Cowhide,
The ones we praise mostly, without seams at the side.
We have Boots of all kinds, from Quebec and Berlin;
"Sure you have boots for the million," says Bryan O'Lynn.

He bought him his boots, which of course were no trash,
He paid down the money, for we sell only for cash;
To the public he says, "Be not taken in,
But buy from J. Rousseau," says Bryan O'Lynn.

"If there is a leak in the toe or side of your shoe,
Just take it to Rousseau, that's all you need do;
He will peg it or patch it just while you are in,
And the charge seems like nothing," says Bryan O'Lynn.

Oyster cocktails at Club saloon. *

The city council meets to-night for the transaction of business.

Forty young men attended the services at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon.

Walker & Co. have Sapperton Lots near New Hospital and Ross-Maclaren Mills, at old prices. *

A good deal of snow is visible on the mountains. This means, trot out the overcoats and winter raiment.

A large number of Vancouverites who came over to see the lacrosse match on Saturday spent Sunday in town.

The steamer Michigan arrived this morning with about sixty tons of freight for this port. She cleared at noon for Portland.

Bargain hunters will do well to look through W. & G. Wolfenden's stock of Dry Goods, Hats and Clothing, now clearing at cost. *tc

The week of November 10 special prayer meetings for young men will be conducted at the Y. M. C. A. afternoon and evening.

At the Methodist church last evening, instead of the usual service, a service of song was held, which was very interesting and effective.

A roll of strong wire netting, 280 feet long by 30 inches broad, has been imported by Mr. James Cunningham for use on the str. Delaware.

To Farmers.—Messrs. Woods, Turner & Gamble make a specialty of lending money on farming lands; any amount from $100 to $20,000, according to security. oc17m

The Louise left for Victoria this afternoon with 173 bales of hay, 200 sacks of wheat and a large quantity of general freight. She had about 40 passengers.

The travelling public who are obliged to use Port Moody Station would feel deeply indebted to the C. P. R. if it could be arranged to light and heat the waiting-room.

The Y. M. C. A. string band meet for practice to-morrow evening. The band contains fine material, and under the present leadership will make itself heard before long.

Seven millions of salmon ova are now undergoing the process of incubation at the hatchery, and by Wednesday night the whole number, eight and a half millions, will be safely stored.

We have received a communication on the early closing of stores, which we shall be happy to print if our correspondent will comply with the usual condition and furnish his name to this office, not necessarily for publication.

Lewis Johnson, of Victoria, is said to have discoverd a rich gold quartz lead, from 150 to 200 feet wide, which will assay from $20 to $100 a ton. There is an open ledge for 500 feet. Johnston's claim is about 16 miles from Kamloops.

Two fine street cars for the Victoria electric street railway were unloaded from the cars this morning at the depot. The cars are the work of the St. Catharine Car Building Company, and are handsome specimens of rolling stock.

The Gladys arrived Saturday afternoon and the Rainbow yesterday afternoon, both with full cargoes and the average number of passengers. They both left this morning for Chilliwack and Victoria respectively, with heavy loads of freight.

Lots 4 and 29, block 7 (Clarkson property), Montreal, Melbourne, Clement and St. Patrick streets, subdivided into 33 lots, are now on the market at prices within the reach of all. Parties desiring fine residence lots will do well to call at once, before the choice ones are sold. The lots are mostly cleared. For sale by MAJOR & PEARSON. *tc

The numerous and heavy importations of merchandise into Westminster this fall shows how fast the city's trade is increasing. As an instance of the value of the importations it might be noted that Mr. James Cunningham has now two car loads of nails, one of stoves and one of building paper en route to Westminster and expected to arrive in a few days.

The Irving arrived last night and brought 88 boxes apples, 403 bales hay, 288 sacks oats, 79 sacks potatoes, 18 sacks pease, 2 horses, 3 cows and a large quantity of other farm produce and a number of passengers. It was 2 o'clock this morning when the cargo was disembarked; some of the hay went to the lower wharf. The Irving went down to Richmond cannery for 3000 cases of salmon. She leaves tomorrow morning at 4 o'clock for Popcum, where she will take on a load of grain and other farm produce.

The Louise arrived this morning; the following is the passenger list: Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Higgins, Mrs. Durr, Mrs. Wright and child, Mrs. Hicks, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Lord, Miss Murchison, W. A. Russel, R. Collister, W. J. Cotton, C. A. Wyld, F. Pemberton, J. McLeod, C. Sexmith, W. H. London, J. D. Scott, L. Guichon, J. McDonald, A. Anderson, A. R. Langley, C. E. Bempus, J. Thorne, T. W. Engeles, O. D. Robertson, J. K. Gilmer, D. Miller, W. McIntosh, S. Reid, S. Pavritch. She also brought 700 cases of salmon from down the river for transhipment east.

Appointed Stipendiary Magistrate.

His Honor Judge Bole has been appointed a stipendiary magistrate for the province of British Columbia. This appointment is to be commended on the grounds that it affords persons having important cases the opportunity of having them tried before a competent tribunal. The muddling of justice at Port Moody last week, in connection with the chicken stealing case, shows the importance of appointing only competent men to the magistracy, so that it will not become a subject of ridicule and mockery.

California Saw Works.

Mr. J. W. Speeks, formerly representing the Spaulding Saw Co., is now in the city. Mr. Speck represents Messrs. Bird & Haughy, of the California Saw Works. He states that their new patent bits are now running in the Puget Sound mills with great success. Mr. Speck formerly introduced the Spaulding patent chisel bit on Puget Sound, and claims that his new tooth is a great improvement. He expects in the course of a few months to have a number of these saws in operation in some of our mills, when they can be inspected by any one interested.

Pronounced Insane.

Ernest Grauex is a Frenchman and he is also crazy. He has been hanging around town for about two weeks and has had meals at the jail on more than one occasion. He called at that resort again on Saturday and his actions were so strange that Gov. Moresby sent him down to the police station in charge of an officer. Yesterday Drs. Smith and I. M. McLean thoroughly examined the man and pronounced him insane. Grauex was taken back to the gaol, where he will remain until the asylum is ready. His mania takes the form of complaints of injustice against everybody he can think of, but he is never violent or dangerous.

Cruelty to Animals.

A team of horses attached to a wagon containing two bales of hay, tried to drag the vehicle up McKenzie street this afternoon. The load was not heavy, but the horses were evidently unable to cope with it, in fact they seemed completely tired. The driver, to remedy this defect on the part of the horses, laid on the whip unmercifully. Several starts were made, the usual result being that the wagon slipped back a yard or two. Several gentlemen expressed themselves strongly on the subject, and said it was one of the worst cases of cruelty to animals they had seen in a long time. No police were in sight or a stop might have been promptly put to the disgraceful exhibition.

Another Challenge.

The lacrosse match of Saturday did not give much satisfaction to the people of the Royal City although it delighted many hundred Vancouverites. But for the fact that Cullen's lacrosse broke it is hardly possible that Vancouver would have scored during the match. However, the match was decided a draw and it remains with the teams to fight the battle over again. The Westminster men are not content to allow the championship to remain disputed and accordingly have decided on the following challenge which will be delivered to-night:

A. E. SUCKLING, Esq., Secretary Vancouver Lacrosse Club, Vancouver.

SIR: On behalf of the Westminster Lacrosse Club I hereby challenge the Vancouver club to play a match for the championship of the province in this city on Thursday, Nov. 7th, at 2 o'clock p. m., rain or shine, on condition that no new men be added to either team, except to replace those who have been obliged to return to the Northwest; that the referee and umpires be the same, and that the Alhambra cup be not played for. If above date is not convenient we will play your club on any day within a reasonable period.

Should your club refuse to accept this challenge within three days from date, I will claim for the Westminster club the championship of the province.

J. R. POLLEY, Captain.

This will settle the matter one way or the other. If Vancouver wishes to retain the championship it can only do so by defeating Westminster in the field. The conditions are fair and reasonable, and no just exception can be taken to them. Let Vancouver come to the scratch and have the championship settled in a manly way; Westminster will claim the honored title with great reluctance should there be no match.

Lord Stanley's Movements.

His excellency the governor-general and Lady Stanley attended divine service yesterday, both morning and evening at Holy Trinity church. This morning at 9 o'clock the vice-regal party left for Vancouver by special train, and on arrival there was met by the mayor and reception committee and escorted to the str. Premier, which immediately left on a trip up the inlet and North Arm.

Mayor Townsend had an interview with Lord Stanley on Saturday night, and discussed with his excellency the nature of the reception to be accorded him on his official visit to Westminster, which will be on Wednesday week. His worship will submit to the city council to-night a rough draught of the proposed programme, and he will ask that a reception committee be appointed to carry out the arrangements.

Capt. Colville, A.D.C., will return to the city to-morrow and confer with the mayor on the arrangements in connection with his excellency's official visit. Mayor Townsend proposes that the address of welcome should be presented to Lord Stanley immediatly on his arrival here on Wednesday 6th November; that the local militia assist in the programme by furnishing a guard of honor; that the municipal councils throughout the district be invited to be present, and present their addresses of welcome at the same time as the Westminster presentation; in the evening a public reception at Herring's opera house, at 9 p.m., at which his excellency will be pleased to receive everyone who wishes to be presented to him. It is proposed for Thursday morning that the vice-regal party should be taken up the river for an inspection of the canneries and hatchery, and a trip on Pitt Lake. In the afternoon the party will attend the lacrosse match, Vancouver vs. Westminster, if the game can be arranged for that day. It is suggested that a handsome arch be erected at some suitable point, and that it be decorated with suitable mottoes of welcome, and this and the other items on the programme will be finally decided by the reception committee at the city council meeting to-night.

FELL DEAD.

An Indian Falls Dead on the Street this Afternoon.

Shortly after 3 o'clock this afternoon an Indian, whose name could not be learned, suffered an attack of hemorhage of the lungs and dropped dead on the streets. He was walking quietly down Columbia street in the direction of the swamp, having just bought a piece of meat for his dinner, and was on the sidewalk near the Cleveland hotel when the attack came on. An eyewitness of the sad occurence says the Indian suddenly stopped, and an instant later a flow of blood rushed from his mouth and nostrils; he then fell down and to all appearance was dead before the first person reached him. Dr. Fagan happened to pass the spot a few minutes afterwards and on examination pronounced the man dead. The police were notified and removed the body to the city lock-up, where it will remain until a coroner's inquest is held, if such proceeding is determined on as necessary.

POLICE COURT.

(Before T. C. Atkinson, P. M.)

Peter Miller was charged with the theft of a watch. It was shown that some men, among them Miller, had been showing their watches and handing them around; one of the men afterwards missed his watch and a search being made it was found in Miller's boot. Mr. McColl appeared for the defense and showed that there was no intention to steal the watch, and that Miller had been sufficiently punished by his incarceration since Saturday. The bench adopted this view of the case and Miller was discharged.

E. Monterey, a half-breed, charged with being a vagrant, was ordered to go to work to-day or leave the town, under pain of further police discipline. He promised to be at work before noon. Monterey is described by the officers as a "bad egg." He is an old jail bird and is just out of prison after serving a term of four months.

W. Hammersmith and Mike Ambrose, two Italians remanded from Saturday on a charge of assaulting a Chinaman, were fined $1 each and $2.50 costs.

Geo. Parker, an aged and respectable-looking man, was charged with having been drunk and incapable. He was dismissed with a caution.

J. M. Wise, charged with having driven some women of ill fame about town in a hack contrary to the provisions of clause five of the trades license by-law. Mr. Eckstein, who appeared for the defense, asked that the case be remanded until to-morrow.

From the North.

At about 8 o'clock last evening the steamer Maude, Capt. John Leach, returned from the Naas and Skeena rivers. A large number of Indians were carried as steerage passengers on the up trip, and on the return two large surveying parties, those of Mr. Shinner and Mr. Perry, who have been engaged in work at Fort Rupert and Queen Charlotte Islands, came back to the city. Nothing but good weather was met with on the trip, the run down being delightful. The Maude brought back almost a full deckload of totem poles, and other strange things from the homes of the northern Indians. Some of the totem poles are very large; certainly they are the largest and finest ever seen here. Capt. John Irving, Capt. Carroll and Mr. J. A. Laidlaw were round trip passengers, it being understood that their trip north was for a dual purpose—of looking up new coal mines and prospecting a favorable spot for the location of another cannery next season. The down freight consisted of a quantity of skins and oil for the Hudson's Bay Co., 334 barrels and 332 half barrels of salmon, and two Dominion canoes, which had been in use by surveying parties.—Saturday's Colonist.

From Okanogan.

Mr. George Hutchison, of Enderby, arrived down last night with a carload of hogs, which were sold to Victoria dealers. He reports the establishment of a new industry at Enderby—a pork packing factory—by a Winnipeg gentleman named Knight. The buildings will be erected at A. L. Fortune's ranch, and it is expected they will be ready for the commencement of work in about one month's time. Mr. Knight, besides packing pork in barrels, will cure and smoke hams, and prepare the genus hog in a variety of forms for the market. This industry is an important one for the district, as it will open a profitable home market to the ranchers. Owing to the low price of wheat the farmers have commenced the raising of hogs on a large scale, and as it is possible to extend the business to an extent only limited by the size of the available markets for the product of the curing establishment, the pork industry will probably assume very large proportions in the Spallumcheen country within the next few years. The weather in the neighborhood of Enderby is still mild and pleasant, although considerable rain had fallen. The farmers are busily plowing, and still looking forward hopefully to the construction of the S. & O. railway.—Friday's Times.

PERSONAL.

A. W. Lundbom, of Port Moody, is in the city.

E. Rand, of Vancouver, formerly of this city, was in town to-day.

John Sirr, of the North Arm, arrived here from Cargill, Ont., to-day.

Guests at the Queens: J. W. Donald, J. A. Gilmer, Victoria; L. B. Blaisdell, Toronto.

J. C. Dockerill, of the Bank of British Columbia, left for Kamloops to-day to take over the management of the bank agency there. A large number of friends gathered at the railway station and gave him a hearty send off.

Guests at the Colonial: E.L. Bumpus, Athena, Oregon; S. Reid, J. V. Carter, J. Austin, J. T. Fee, Victoria; C. G. Sexsmith, W. H. London, A. T. Hobson, Lulu Island; L. Guichon, Guichon Landing; F. Kirkland, F. Lord and ladies, L. F. Lord and child, Miss E. P. Lord, Capt. La Folia, T. E. Ladner, Ladners Landing; A. W. Lundbom, Port Moody; R. Mathieson Jr., W. H. Sanders, Vancouver; W. Scott, Winnipeg.

ITS EXCELLENT QUALITIES

Commend to public approval the California liquid fruit remedy Syrup of Figs. It is pleasing to the eye, and to the taste, and by gently acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels, it cleanses the system effectually, thereby promoting the health and comfort of all who use it.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Mr. Cunningham's Veracity.

EDITOR COLUMBIAN—Sir:—You printed on Friday a letter from Mr. Thomas Cunningham, in which he states that "parties working in the interest" of Mr. Corbould are circulating a report that he has agreed to withdraw in that gentleman's favor; and Mr. Cunningham proceeds to denounce the report as a discreditable election dodge, and states that he was asked to withdraw and emphatically refused to do so.

Now, I wish to use no hard words, and to the first charge simply say, it is not the truth, and challenge Mr. Cunningham to produce his informant.

As regards the second charge, the facts are these: Mr. Thos. Cunningham, in conversation with me, before the requisition to Mr. Corbould was circulated, volunteered to retire if Mr. Corbould came out, saying he would hold up both hands for him, or words to that effect. After the requisition to Mr. Corbould was started, Mr. Gamble and myself waited upon Mr. Cunningham, not to ask him to retire, but to give him a chance to keep his voluntary promise, and then he did emphatically refuse to redeem that promise, a course of action which did not greatly surprise us.

I then asked Mr. Cunningham, in the presence of Mr. Gamble, whether or not he had voluntarily told me that if Mr. Corbould would come out he would retire. He at once said: "Yes, I did say so; but I won't do it now." We then left him, saying it made no difference.

I will leave the public to judge who has acted discreditably.

Mr. Cunningham has published just enough of the truth to mislead.
