SCIENTIFIC MISCELLANY.

Thousands of persons in Asia and some parts of America subsist upon the seeds of various species of water-lilies.

Modern living seems to favor cancer. Dr. F. B. Jessett, of London, affirms that the mortality from cancer in England and Wales increased from 4,966 in 1850 to 13,542 in 1881, and the death-rate per million inhabitants from 320 to 520.

Eight spots from which carbonic acid is abundantly exhaled, especially during storms or low pressure, are described by Dr. Parkin as existing in the hamlet of Niveze, near Spa, in Belgium. The ground presents no unusual appearance, except that nothing grows about the outlets.

EXPLORATION EXTRAORDINARY.—An archæological discovery was recently made in German Altenburg, on the Danube, in a curious manner. After a week's study, from an elevated point of view, of an extensive corn-field, whose colors showed great variations, Prof. Hauser declared that an ancient amphitheatre must be buried underneath. The corn was quite ripe over the centre of the ruins, where the soil was thickest, and elliptical lines of green, growing paler the higher they rose, showed the seats. Subsequent excavations confirmed this theory, and brought to light the structure, with a paved road leading to the Camp of Carnuntum.

TABLEAUS OF PROGRESS.—An important feature of the history of inventions in the dep't at the Paris Exhibition will be the tableaus showing the characteristic industries of each of the great epochs of human history. The industries of primitive man are illustrated by four groups in full size, giving the first makers of stone implements, the first engravers, the first architects and the first founders. The figures are modelled from skulls and skeletons of the various races. Egyptian, Chaldean, Greek and Gallo-Roman work is also represented, and the collection of groups of working-people is supplemented by collections of their manufactures.

A BUFFALO CENSUS.—A report is being prepared for the Smithsonian Institution, by Prof. W. T. Hornaday, which will show the habits of the American bison and its gradually decreasing range, and give interesting details concerning the reduction of its numbers from countless thousands a quarter of a century ago—the slaughter of 1868 to 1872 taking off three and a half millions—to less than 750 at the present time. The buffalo now left include 243 head in a domesticated state, viz.: 140 head belonging to C. J. Jones, of Garden City, Kans.; 35 head owned by C. Allard, on the Flathead Indian Reservation, Mont.; 18 head with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show; 13 head on Chas. Goodnight's ranch near Clarendon, Tex.; and several small herds of two to five head. The wild herds, so far as known, are as follows: Near Peace River, Canada, probably 200 head, though considerably more according to some estimates; in Yellowstone National Park, as counted no longer ago than Feb. 12, 200 head; in the Pan Handle of Texas, 30 head; on the Red Desert, Southern Wyoming 20 head; in the Mussel Shell country, Montana, 10 head; in Southwestern Dakota, 5 head.

IN THE WORLD OF THE LITTLE.—If unchecked by a limited food-supply and other causes of destruction, the inordinate multiplication of the lower forms of life would overwhelm the earth with appalling rapidity. M. Maupas, an Algerian naturalist, has lately illustrated this by determining the reproduction-time of certain infusoria. Taking Sylonichia, for example, he finds that each individual produces another by division at the end of four or five hours, making five divisions per day, or 150 generations at the end of a month. Making no allowance for casualties, the descendants of the 150th generation would give a number of individuals represented by a figure followed by the 44 ciphers. M. Forel tries to convey an appreciation of such a number. If we count one per second, at the end of a year we have 31 millions, or 3 followed by 7 ciphers; at the end of a century, 3 followed by 9 ciphers. Continuing the count a million millions of centuries, we add 12 more ciphers, making 21. Grouping our animalcules in bundles of a million millions each, we can again add 12 ciphers, making 33. Inviting the whole human race to aid in the enumeration, the 1400 million people bring our count only to 4 followed by 42 ciphers. Therefore, the entire population of the globe, working day and night during a million millions of centuries, each person counting per second a bundle of a million millions of infusoria, could not complete the count of the descendants of the 150th generation of Stylonichia produced from a single individual at the end of 30 days by simple division 150 times repeated. M. Maupas has made a more conceivable calculation, finding that the total volume of the 150th generation represents a little less than a thousand times the volume of the sun—though each individual measures hardly the hundredth of an inch. This is not exceptionally rapid reproduction, and in bacteria division is completed in an hour.

Minneapolis is Startled by an Earthquake Accompanied by a Heavy Crash.

Lower Freight Rates to the East Causes Salmon and Fruit Packers to Rejoice.

A POSSIBLE REVOLUTION.

WASHINGTON, May 11. — Advices from Brazil indicate that the death of the Emperor Dom Pedro, which seemed to be imminent, may be followed by a revolution.

THE WIRES DOWN.

NEW YORK, May 11.—The effect of yesterday's storm is felt here especially this morning in the interruption of telegraph service. Wires are down everywhere on the Jersey flats, where the storm centered with such fierceness that communication with the south and west is so seriously crippled that it will probably take the greater part of to-day to repair the damage.

COUNTING THE FUNDS.

NEW YORK, May 11.—The task of counting coin in the sub-treasury vaults begun a few weeks ago, when Assistant-Treasurer Roberts went into office. It was completed to-day and the figures are found to correspond exactly with the count of April 13th last, when Roberts took charge. Total sum gone over is $178,394,763,-45.

EXPLOSION OF FIRE DAMP.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 11.—An explosion of fire damp at Toms River mines, near this city, this morning, killed 4 miners and injured 7.

PLUCKY WOMEN.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 11.—Isiano Rojas, an Indian, attempted to assault a married woman yesterday afternoon. Her cries attracted half a dozen other women to the scene and they attacked him fiercely and bound him to a post and guarded him until the arrival of an officer, who placed him under arrest.

FIRE IN A BREWERY.

NEW YORK, May 11.—A fire occurred to-day in F. & M. Schaefer's brewery, caused by an explosion in the grain mill. Loss to grain and machinery, etc., $50,000. No one was injured.

THE SCORE.

NEW YORK, May 11. — Walking match score: Herty 459; Cartwright 514; Hughes 492; Noremac 550; Golden 480; Hegelman 501; Smith 472; Taylor 369; Adams 465; Johnson 419.

AN EARTHQUAKE.

MINNEAPOLIS, May 11.—A shock from what was supposed to be an earthquake was felt here at 3:45 this morning. The vibrations, from the northeast to the southwest were accompanied by a loud crash, as though some heavy body had fallen on the earth.

ON A JAUNT.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—President Harrison started off this morning for a trip down the river, and perhaps a short sea voyage on the Despatch; he left the white house accompanied by Mrs. Harrison and his grandson Benjamin McKee, Messrs. Windom and Rusk. The party were driven to the navy yard where the U. S. steamer Despatch was in waiting. Soon after the vessel was boarded by the president and party she steamed down the river. A more perfect day for such a trip could not have been selected and if the weather continues the party will not return until Monday night, and they may stay away until Tuesday. Plans for the trip were not matured before the Dispatch started. Probably to-morrow will be spent at Old Point comfort.

FISH RELEASED.

AUBURN, N. Y., May 11.—James D. Fish, ex-president of the Marine Bank of New York city, was released from State prison at 9.10 a. m. to-day. He seemed in good health. He was driven to the residence of his daughter, who has remained at Auburn the whole time of his incarceration.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

CHICAGO, May 11.—Patrick Ford, aged 60, employed in Armour's packing house, shot and killed his wife at 2 o'clock this morning and then shot himself fatally. They have been married three months. Incompatibility of temper was the cause.

DESERVED IT.

JACKSON, Miss., May 11.—Latimer, for murdering his mother, was sentenced this morning to solitary confinement for life.

THE WEATHER.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 11.—Light rains in the western portion and fair weather in the eastern portion, are predicted for Oregon and Washington territory for the succeeding 24 hours.

TRADING PISTOLS.

SACRAMENTO, May 11. — Charles Shoemaker, a junk dealer, was shot by a drunken Mexican, named Michael Lavroona, and died this morning. The men were examining pistols with the intention of making a trade, when Lavroona's weapon was discharged. After the shooting the Mexican fled, but was captured.

THEY REJOICE.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 11.—The despatch from St. Louis, stating that at yesterday's meeting of the Transcontinental association a reduction to one dollar per hundred pounds on canned goods from Pacific coast was agreed on, has caused a great deal of rejoicing among the fruit and salmon packers.

PACIFIC DEFENCES.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 8.—By request General Miles, commanding the division of the Pacific, to-day gave his views on the military situation of this coast, its defences, etc., before United States senate commission on our relations with Canada, which arrived last night. The general first outlined the history of the fortifications of this harbor and of the Columbia river. Puget Sound, he explained has never possessed any defences, although its ports are within sound of the guns of British fortifications. The defences of the Columbia river at Forts Canby and Stevenson are obsolete and almost practically useless. The same state of affairs was said to exist in this harbor. This need not be so, for this government has it in its power to equip its ports here with guns equal in force to any that any foreign vessel can carry. The statement of General Miles that the naval vessels of a foreign power, provided with a modern armament, could easily lie off the Golden Gate and throw shells weighing 1000 pounds to a ton into the centre of San Francisco, fully 8 miles, seemed to make a profound impression. With similar guns in the Alcatrez and other fortifications any such attack could be readily resisted. Gen. Miles was of opinion that $25,-000,000, as a rough estimate, would be sufficient to make the entire coast defences all that could be desired. In response to questions from Senator Dolph of Oregon, the defences required to make Puget Sound and the mouth of the Columbia river impregnable were outlined. Proper fortifications at Point Wilson, Melectine and Admiralty Head, would easily protect that interior region against any foreign naval force. The British have made very extensive and costly defences at Vancouver island, considering it evidently one of the most important of the British possessions. The Island and fortifications there are, in Gen. Miles judgment, valued independently of their proximity to the United States. "In other words," said Senator Allison, of Iowa, "even if we might buy British Columbia, the British would still desire to retain Vancouver island." The committee by invitation of Gen. Miles will tomorrow visit the various fortifications of the harbor.

FROM VICTORIA.

Daring Attempt to Rob a Till. Hot Weather.

Special to the Columbian.

VICTORIA, May 11.—While the bartender of the Vancouver hotel was out a few moments to-day a man made an attempt to rob the till of its contents, about $40. He was seen and stopped by another man. No arrests. It is said the would-be robber tried to induce a friend to go in with him and divide the spoils.

To-day was the hottest of the season; at 3 o'clock the therometer was about 75 in the shade.

Base ball and cricket matches on Beacon Hill this afternoon. The band from the Swiftsure is also out at the hill.

Weldon's Extradition Bill.

The extradition law, recently passed by the Dominion parliament, names the following list of extraditable crimes, viz: Murder, or attempt, or conspiracy to murder; manslaughter; counterfeiting or altering money, and uttering counterfeit or altered money; forgery, counterfeiting or altering, or uttering what is forged, counterfeited or altered; larceny, embezzlement; obtaining money or goods or valuable securities by false pretenses; rape; abduction; indecent assault; child stealing; kidnapping; burglary; house-breaking or shop-breaking; arson, robbery; abortion; perjury or subornation of perjury; piracy by municipal law or law of nations committed on board of or against a vessel of a foreign state; criminal scuttling or destroying such a vessel at sea, whether on the high seas or on the great lakes of North America, or attempting or conspiring to do so; assault on board such a vessel at sea, whether on the high sea or on the great lakes of North America, with intent to destroy life or to do grevious bodily harm; frauds, committed by any banker, agent, public officer of municipal or other corporations, made criminal by any law in force in the country in which the crime was committed; revolt, conspiracy to revolt by two or more persons on board such a vessel at sea, whether on the high sea or on the great lakes of North America, against the authority of the masters; any offence which is, in the case of the principal offender, included in any of the foregoing portion of this schedule and for which the fugitive criminal, though not the principal, is liable to be tried or punished as if he were the principal; malicious action with intent to injure persons in a railway train.

Geological Report.

The report of Geo. M. Dawson, assistant director of the Geological and Natural History Survey of Canada, on a portion of the Yukon district, N. W. T., and adjacent northern part of British Columbia, has just been published by authority of parliament. The exploration upon which this report is based was carried out as part of the work of the Yukon expedition, of which Mr. Dawson was placed in charge. Further explorations and surveys carried out by R. G. McConnell and W. Ogilvie will form the subject of separate reports. Dr. Dawson's report makes a substantial volume of nearly 300 pages. It contains, besides extended references to the geological character of the country, interesting information of a historical character, a description of Indian manners and customs, notes on the flora, fauna and insects of the country. The delimitation of the boundary between the Dominion and Alaska devolved upon Mr. Ogilvie, but it is plain to be seen from the corrected map accompanying the report, which embodies the result of Mr. Ogilvie's operations up to the end of last year that Forty Mile Creek, where the bulk of the gold mining is being done at present, is well within Canadian territory. Mr. Dawson says it has been prospected for about a hundred miles from its mouth, gold being found almost everywhere along it as well as in tributary gulches. Few men working there in 1887 were content with less than $14 a day and several had taken out $100 a day for a short time. The general result of the prospecting so far has been to prove that six large and long rivers, the Lewis, Teslintoo, Big Salmon, Pelly, Stewart and White—yield gold along hundreds of miles of their lower courses. Mr. Dawson, however, does not omit to state that great difficulties and hardships have to be overcome by miners now entering the country.

HOME RULE.

Dillon's Mission to Australia is Meeting With Success and Great Enthusiasm.

Ten Thousand French Cotton Weavers go on Strike and Further Strikes are Feared.

General Boulanger is Picking up Courage and is Eager to Befriend France.

GOOD NEWS.

LONDON, May 11.—Letters from John Dillon fully confirm the telegraphic reports of his extraordinary success in Australia. He writes that he and his colleagues are delighted with their reception at Sydney, and that there is every reason to believe that the Irish cause will benefit largely from their mission.

ENTHUSIASTICALLY RECEIVED.

SYDNEY, N.S.W., May 11.—John Dillon and associates Deasy and Esmonde, were received here with great enthusiasm. Their meetings are crowded.

FREIGHTS RISING.

LONDON, May 11.—Coal and freight rates at New Castle are rising on account of the German mine strikes.

HARDLY LIKELY.

LONDON, May 11.—It is believed in Berlin that Lieut. Wissmann's victory over Chief Bushin virtually means a collapse of the rebellion on the east African coast.

THE ROYAL STAKES.

LONDON, May 11.—The race for the royal stakes at Kempton park to-day was won by Ayrshire, Sea Breeze second, Melancon third. Seven ran.

A GREAT STRIKE.

PARIS, May 11.—The cotton weavers in the Thisy department of the Rhone have gone out on strike. The strikers number 10,000, and it is feared the strike will extend to Lyons.

BOULANGER GAINS COURAGE.

LONDON, May 11.—Boulanger has again been interviewed. He says if the French government intend to prolong the sitting of the deputies until next year the action is equivalent to a coup d' etat against universal suffrage, and it would be the duty of every citizen to rise in opposition. He would not be the last man to rise in such a condition of affairs.

APPLICATION REFUSED.

LONDON, May 9.—Lord Chief Justice Coleridge to-day denied the application of Attorney-General Webster for the postponement of a suit in which the latter is interested, the application being based on the ground that Webster was engaged on a case before the Parnell commission. The chief justice, in refusing to grant a postponement, said that it had been the practice, and still was, to favor the attorney-general in the respect mentioned when that official was engaged in public cases; but that the rule would not be permitted to extend to a case in which the attorney-general was acting in a private capacity. This judicial expression is believed to have been designed to strengthen the contention of the government that the attorney-general, as counsel for the Times, is in no sense an officer of the government.

A LONDON MURDERESS.

LONDON, May 9.—Another case of crime resulting from the practice of insuring children's lives, has been discovered at Deptford. In February a boy named Bolton, 11 years of age, died at Deptford. Suspicions of foul play arising, his body was exhumed, when it was found that he had been poisoned, traces of arsenic being discovered in the lad's stomach. The boy had boarded at the time of his death with a relative named Mrs. Winter, who obtained twenty pounds on the boy's life. In order to get the money the woman forged the boy's mother's name to the receipt. It transpired in 1885 that Mrs. Winter had insured the lives of twenty-seven of her relatives, and has driven rather a lucrative trade in the business. Five of her victims have died, and in each case she has collected the insurance on their lives. It is thought she poisoned them and intended to poison all the others whose beneficiary she was. This wholesale murderess is at present ill, but her arrest will be made as soon as possible.

Surrey Council.

Council met pursuant to adjournment, all members present. The minutes of previous meeting were approved; communications were received from D. Robson city clerk Westminster, Dr. Fagan and Dr. DeWolf Smith; Surrey agricultural association, W. A. Stone, John Lewis and from a number of settlers in the several wards, requesting the council to grant assistance in the construction of roads. They were referred to the councillors for respective wards. Accounts were received from A. J. Hill Esq., C. E., and B.C. Gazette; referred to finance committee; a cheque was ordered to be drawn on the bank of B. C. for $75 for payment of the proportion of cost of advertising folder, assumed by this corporation. Several councillors reported as to proposed road extension and improvements in their respective wards. Coun. McCallum was authorized to have certain works executed at the head of the Serpentine river and each councillor was authorized to expend a sum not to exceed $600 in his respective ward. The pound by-law was advanced to the third reading and the clerk was instructed to post notices to the effect that on and after the 6th day of June, 1889 the by-law prohibiting cattle from running at large, will be enforced. The council adjourned until Wednesday, May 29th at 10 o'clock a.m.

Daily British Columbian

Saturday Evening, May 11, 1889.

The agitation in Victoria in the matter of the China steamers being compelled to call at that port on their way to and from the mainland is serving some useful secondary purposes. In the first place a temporary sort of entente cordiale has been established between the journalistic gladiators of the capital, who for the nonce, being chronically loaded to the muzzle and furnished with hair-triggers of the most sensitive pattern, are discharging their incontinent Gatlings in a wild and indiscriminate frenzy into their brethren of the mainland. We could almost appreciate this part of the situation if it was not for the fact that we have come in for a broadside ourselves in the general running-a-muck of the unconscionable and reckless belligerents; but more of this later on. The agitation has developed the fact, too, that the press of the capital still continues to hug that old battered, played-out, delusion that "Victoria is British Columbia." We have not the slightest objection to Victoria agitating in an honest way and in a reasonable spirit for the interests of Victoria (no one would accuse the press of Victoria of agitating worth a cent for a very much broader object, where the island city's interests would be spread out thin, and perhaps equalled or exceeded by other sections of the province); but we do object to seeing an agitation dishonestly given a provincial significance, which in reality it does not possess. Another feature of the "rumpus," that is worth noting, is the confessed apathy of the people of the capital itself even, in the row that is being kicked up by its industrious and zealous press. In the Standard of the 9th inst., for instance, appears a long editorial, under the head "British Columbia's Interests" (mark the head), bewailing the fact that no one but "Willis Bond," whom it distinguishes as a "sable patriot," can be found willing to lead the hosts of the agitators at this important juncture. The Standard's language is almost pathetic. Here is a sample: "And so it is to be left to Willis Bond to convene a meeting for the purpose of discussing a subject of supreme importance to Victoria at the present juncture! Well, there are worse men than Willis. There are very many worse men. And yet, does it not seem a little strange that some prominent citizen, some one possessing larger interests and wielding greater influence, has not been found willing to take the lead in this crisis?" It does, friend Standard, it does seem passing strange, and when it is remembered, too, that the whole province is on the "ragged edge" of ruin on the issue, what are we to think? We would exhort the patriotic Victoria press, which, Atlas-like, has shouldered the entire province, and become the sole upholders of right and justice in this degenerate age and country, to redouble their disinterested and apparently unappreciated efforts—to cry aloud, to leap upod the alter, to lance themselves, if need be—for peradventure the great ones of the province are asleep, or they have gone on a journey, or they are "very tired," or perchance they are in an "awkward position" and will have to be drawn and quartered and handspiked to get them out. Go it, brethren; you have our best wishes and "moral support."

It is a curious and not altogether profitless study to note the different effects which the fiery ordeal is having upon the two leading belligerents—the Colonist and the Times. The old Colonist is plainly profitting by the dispensation, its dross is being purged away, and it gives promise of emerging from the furnace cleansed, renovated, converted, almost, we might say. The party thralls which erstwhile bound it are being shrivelled and scorched in the intense heat, and a new-born and vigorous freedom of expression is rapidly taking the place of the old cautious hedging. In the exercise of its newly-found liberty (which we hope it may never lay aside or allow to become rusty, even when the occasion which developed it has lost its power to move), the Colonist, on Thursday last, administers a lecture to the Vancouver News-Advertiser on "Independence in Parliament," which truth compels us to say that rather servile journal needs, but from which it is too much, perhaps, to hope that it will profit. We will just take the liberty of quoting a word or two from the Colonist's ringing utterances in the article mentioned: "We like to see the News-Advertiser, of Vancouver city, holding forth on the subject of independence in parliament. Its views on that matter are unfortunately not new. In fact our heavy cotemporary seldom ventures to be original. It evidently regards independence in any shape as a high crime and misdemeanor. It denies the existence of political independence altogether, and would have the representatives of British Columbia in parliament to be out-and-out party men. * * * Mind and will and conscience are not required for such puppets as the News-Advertiser would have the province send to parliament. All that is required are well made and nicely dressed tailors' blocks labelled 'Tory' or 'Liberal,' as the case may be. * * * As the News-Advertiser represents no one except its proprietor it may for a time sacrifice the interests of the province to those of a party with impunity. But it will be impossible for the men whom the province send to parliament to pursue that course without being made to feel that they have made an improper choice." Bravo, Colonist. As abstractions the above sentiments are sublime. It has always been the reproach of the Pacific province at Ottawa that it could be depended on to return a "solid" and automatic six for the government. The Colonist has helped not a little to establish this discreditable provincial reputation. Victoria, too, more than any other city or section, has lain its neck under Tory shoe-leather. While we cannot commend the ingratitude which such obsequiousness has evoked, still, if a more sturdy self-respect and manly independence of both press and people is to be the result, the capital city may well be congratulated that in its case thrift did not follow fawning.

And now the Times. O Tempora! We are sorry for the Times; yes we are. But we'll pillory it just the same. We'll "teach it better luck," the rapscalion sheet. We said yesterday that the Times had got the "big head." But that isn't all. It's got degeneration of the heart as well, and is going from bad to worse. Unlike the Colonist, its very worst qualities are being brought to the surface by the "fiery ordeal." In an unreasoning and pettish rage, it is striking right and left, with or without provocation, in a way that can only excite ridicule, while weakening the cause it pretends to have at heart, and getting itself into trouble at the same time. The gratuitous and impudent attack upon this paper in the Times of Thursday, with its senseless and lying insinuations and charges, calls for a brief special notice. In the first place we can't imagine what we've said or done to turn the Times' incontinent Gatling in our direction. Then it heads its article with what it knows, and deliberately intends, to be a mean falsehood. "Honest John's Paper" it calls THE COLUMBIAN, and repeats the senseless insinuation throughout. The article itself only requires a word to expose the ill-judged dishonesty of the Times' methods, and how very hard up it must be to make capital and fill its columns. The Times actually, in the endeavor to discredit this paper, has the gall to throw up in the face of THE COLUMBIAN of to-day the attitude of THE COLUMBIAN of three or four years ago on a certain subject, well knowing, but being too mean to admit the fact, when by ignoring it a low advantage can be taken, that THE COLUMBIAN of to-day is in name only what it was three, two, or even a little over one year ago, and that "Honest John," to use the Times' own vulgarism, has no more to do with THE COLUMBIAN than he has with the Times. We would ask the Times to make a note of this fact and to recollect it when it next feels tempted to wantonly sin in this particular. We don't want to be severe with a brother of the quill, but if the Times don't respect our right to be known as the owners and controllers of our own paper we shall take means to compel it to, that's all. To digress a little, with respect to the particular occasion on which, according to the Times, THE COLUMBIAN of a few years ago proved recreant to its duty—by failing to protest against the voting of six thousand acres of land by the provincial government to the C.P.R. to induce the extension of that company's road to Vancouver, and without any condition, which might properly have been inserted at the same time, that the road should have been extended to Westminster as well (thus saving our own and the government's subsequent bonus for that purpose)—we have nothing to do. THE COLUMBIAN'S attitude on that occasion, whatever it was, is none of our business. Our course under such circumstances would certainly have been very different from what the Times attributes to THE COLUMBIAN of that day. Is the Times satisfied? If not, we'll give it the other barrel, but not this eve.

There are inexhaustible IRON ORE DEPOSITS, of a superior quality, immediately adjacent, as well as vast strata of the finest BUILDING SAND and POTTERY CLAY.

On the Townsite are a number of valuable MINERAL SPRINGS.

Communication by land and water is unequalled, by reason of the location of the Townsite on the Fraser River and the Southern Railway, while the natural elevation and lay of the land can not be excelled as a situation for a fine town.

The ground is open and clear of heavy timber.

The site has been selected as one of the most important stations on the Southern Railway, and with the completion of the road, in the near future, must, with all its other advantages, spring into prominence at once.

THE WHEEL OF THE WORLD.

The wheel of the world turns round and round;
Those who are uppermost may be
Down in the dust or under the ground;
The King in chains, the serf set free.
Over the track in sunshine and rain,
It rolls on, over and over and over again.

The wheel of the world moves day and night,
And its swift revolutions bring
Nations from darkness into the light,
Where bells of the good times coming ring.
Over the plot where the palace shone,
It rolls in the dust of the crown and throne

Around and round the wheel turns and goes,
And we go with it, now up, then down
Few win the prize that many must lose,
Tired at the goal, how late comes the crown.
The brave, the true, the noble, the just,
Will never be lost in the whirling dust.

What is the top of the wheel to me,
Though it lifts me a moment above
The proudest folks in society,
If I fall below in honor and love?
The hero who offers the cup and the crust
Will leave his memory sweet in the dust.

The wheel of the world unceasingly rolls
Over and over and over again,
Over the turnpike of space where the tolls
Never hinder the wheel of the train.
As a star sweeps the realms of the night,
The wheel moves on in a cycle of light.

The wheel is vast and the path is broad,
And its highway is unchartered space;
The hand that guides is the hand of God,
The burden it bears is the human race.
True as the needle that points to the pole
The wheel of the world will roll to its goal

A SHAPELESS CHILD.

Bertha's Adventure With Her Carpet-Rags.

"It is too bad! Jake Grant might have harnessed his horse and taken the carpet-rags up to old Harriett's to-night. If they are not there bright and early in the morning, she will go to weaving Mrs. Stratton's first," and Bertha Howe ceased her impatient tramp across the floor, and peered anxiously out of the window to see if any one were going by with whom she might send the huge bag of rags, reposing so quietly in the corner, that night as she had promised.

No team was in sight, and she began the tramp again, so exceedingly annoying to the tall, sour-visaged woman, who sat by the open door, busily plying her knitting needles in the fast fading light of day.

She gave a sorrowful toss of the head, and the fast-growing stocking lay at rest in her lap, as she said, irascibly: "Neice Bertha, you are a consummate fool! Do you suppose that Jake Grant will be so accommodating as to cart your rags to the weaver's, when you refused to go to the picnic at Beech Grove to-day with him. No, indeed, I can assure you."

"Well, I'm not certain that it makes any particular difference," the girl retorted coolly. "'Where there's a will there's a way,' a favorite maxim of yours, auntie, I believe," an odd little twinkle in the dark eyes, half hidden by their thicket of lashes. "I abominate Jake Grant. He is a regular clodhopper—not fit to escort any pretty girl to a picnic, much less the belle of Shadowville. Don't scold, auntie; I'll manage to get the rags to old Harriet's somehow. If we didn't live on this dingy back street, where no one ever comes, unless," and now a bewitching smile flashed across her dark, piquant face, "an admirer of mine, it would be no difficult undertaking. As it is, I wonder if I couldn't shoulder that bag of rags and go on my way rejoicing, asking no odds of any one. What do you say, auntie?"

"That you've lost what little sense you ever had," snapped the irate woman, making the needles click-clack a livelier tune than usual. "Harriet Springbottom lives nearly three-quarters of a mile away, and a good part of the journey lies up a steep, stony hill, and you complain that you are so tired every time you draw a pail of water from the well. You're a bundle of contradictions."

"I suppose so," resignedly.

She left the room abruptly as she spoke, a bright idea striking her. A few moments later she called out merrily:

"There's a conveyance at the door to bear away the carpet-rags. Come and see it, aunt."

Charity Howe arose, brightened up her eye-glasses with a piece of chamois, put away her knitting work in a slow, methodical manner, that, to say the least, was simply exasperating, and then went to the door. Her glance roved up and down the road, but no conveyance greeted it.

"You are a thoughtless girl, Bertha, but it is excessively rude of you to joke with your aunt."

"But I am not joking," replied the girl, "I am in dead earnest. Behold my vehicle!" and she dragged before the astonished woman an old baby carriage that had been lying perdu in the woodshed for years and years—the identical carriage that Bertha herself had ridden in when a chubby, bright-eyed baby.

It was a sad-looking, rickety affair, the top destroyed long ago, but it had two wheels, something that answered for a seat, and a crooked handle which had been broken in the middle and tied together with a string. Not a word did Charity Howe utter; she turned her back on her niece, entered the room, and resumed her knitting, while, nothing daunted, the girl put on her wide sun-hat, conveyed to the dilapidated vehicle the bag of rags, and set it partly on the seat, with the remark that, "as it was twilight, the passers-by would take it for a baby out for an airing. And then—why, yes, I'd not thought of it—they will take me for its nurse. Well, no matter. If only the carriage don't give out! It is such a sickly, superannuated thing. But now I've started I'll have to take the risk."

Taking hold of the handle, she gave it a pull that sent the thing on two wheels along at a rapid rate, and made it give vent to a wheeze that was decidedly asthmatic. As she emerged into the front street she found the sidewalk crowded with pedestrians, the road was alive with gay equipages in which her little turnout looked shabby beyond description; but the lively scene that met her gaze, the vexations she had to encounter, did not deter her from venturing farther. She pulled the hat low over her face, and dragged the wheezy carriage through the crowd, the rag bag sitting bolt upright on the seat, every body peering curiously at her as she passed.

As she mounted the steep hill that led to old Harriet's, she paused a moment to take breath, and at this juncture two men came sauntering leisurely down a shady avenue leading from the one grand hotel of the place—The Phœnix. The lamp-light revealed two men as different as night and day. One, slight, blonde and effeminate; the other, tall, dark and grand beyond words to describe. The fair man was called Frank Wood. The dark one's name was Carl Spencer. They both caught sight of Bertha as she halted near the lamp-post, the light shining down on her dark face, where the roses burned in her cheeks, one small hand holding fast to the carriage.

"By Jove!" cried the blonde, not dreaming he spoke so loud that Bertha could hear, "what a lovely girl! and what a diminutive thing she is to draw such an immense baby as the one perched there in the wagon. Straight as a ramrod, and with no possible shape to it," he continued. "Barnum ought to own it and call it 'The Shapeless Child.' Ha! ha!"

Was he laughing at her? Had he said the words purposely to mortify her?

The blood rushed to Bertha's face, and she started on indignantly when the mended handle came apart, the carriage began to back and go swiftly down the declivity, and with the startled cry of "My rags! Oh, my rags!" the girl sprang forward, two men at her heels.

In a ditch, where rank weeds reared their heads, and a muddy streamlet glided slowly along, Bertha's conveyance came to a standstill, overturned, and the capacious mouth of the bag yawning open, the balls poured out one by one, and striking the ground, ran about in all directions.

The tears rushed to Bertha's eyes; a sob was in her throat.

Was ever any one so unfortunate as she? Then the ludicrousness of the thing burst upon her, and she gave vent to a prolonged peal of laughter in which the two men heartily joined, and then with one accord they all began to gather up the balls, of every color of the rainbow.

"I am glad it wasn't a baby, as I at first supposed," Frank Wood exclaimed, as he thrust his hand in among a bevy of stinging nettles to secure a ball that had lodged there. "If so, the poor little thing would have broken its neck! Oh, my hand! my hand! how it does smart!" he moaned, starting with alacrity to his feet and leaving the ball of rags in its nest. "Gracious Peter! I wonder what kind of weeds you call 'em?"

A crescent moon lit up the scene below. A merry one it was, all three down on their knees picking up the bright-hued globes that lay around them.

"There," ejaculated Spencer at last, in a tone of relief, rising to his feet, "we have not left a ball on the ground—not one."

"Don't be too positive," cried Bertha, who had counted each ball as it tumbled into and was swallowed up by the rapacious mouth of the bag. "One is certainly missing, for there were thirty-nine balls in all, and now I count but thirty-eight. Dear, dear! It is the largest one, too—a gorgeous hit-and-miss one. Do look for it in the ditch, sirs; it must be secreted there."

Frank drew back indignantly. "I've done my duty, all that is required of me in getting down on my knees and bending over till my back is almost broken. I'm not such a ninny as to poison my hands in amongst those filthy weeds, and cover myself from head to foot with the slime and mud of the ditch. If Mr. Spencer is fool enough to submit to your unreasonable demands, he may. Good evening," and he turned abruptly away.

"Well, why don't you go too, sir?" questioned Bertha of the dark man, who made no pretense of following his friend, but who was again on his knees in quest of the missing ball.

"Because I choose to stay. I shall not leave you until the ball is found and these rags are delivered into the hands of the person for whom they are intended."

Neither did he. He ferreted out the hiding-place of the ball, shouldered the bag, and to all Bertha's remonstrances merely said:

"Lead the way, 'tis useless to remonstrate."

So the rags got to Old Harriett's in time and—what's the use of spinning out the old story! When Carl Spencer took his pretty wife to his elegant city home the red carpet went with them. "For," reasoned Carl, "it won me a dear little wife, and therefore it is too precious a thing in my estimation to be trodden upon and worn out by Aunt Charity. Bertha shall present her with a new Brussels."—Albany Journal.

BANKING OUT WEST.

How Greedy Money Sharks Grow Fat While the Poor Grangers Starve.

"My business," said a banker from the arid zone of Western Kansas to a New York Times reporter, "is to loan money at high rates of interest. I know how to safely conduct that business in the arid zone. About nine years ago I established my bank. I had $12,000 capital. A banking capital of $12,000 would be laughed at in New York City, but it is ample for operations that are carried on in the arid zone. And my bank pays a much larger per cent. of profit than any bank in New York. I can give the bankers who do business in that town, and who think they know all about the business, points on banking. They sit in their offices and rub their faces with their hands and pretend to think about financial matters, and they talk learnedly about single and double standard, and the surplus and the state of trade and conditions favorable or unfavorable to profitable banking, but the truth is that they don't know how to bank to a decent profit. Prosperity of trade and industry!" he exclaimed scornfully. "What has prosperity, general prosperity of the people, I mean, got to do with banking?" he demanded. And then he added: "To bank to advantage you must bank among people who are hard up and who will cheerfully pay reasonable rates of interest for the use of money, say from 3 to 5 per cent. per month. And the payment of each and every note that you discount should be secured by a chattel mortgage laid on all the personal property owned by the signer of the note. And, in addition, you must be careful not to lend too large a sum to one man. I never lend a customer more than $100, except on the final clean up, and I very seldom lend a man more than $50, while $25 is my favorite sum to lend to tillers of the soil. I never loan money for less than 3 per cent. per month. I frequently charge 5 per cent., and sometimes I get higher rates. For instance, a granger came into my bank a few months ago.

"He said: 'I want to borrow $15 for fifteen days.'

"I said: 'Money is mighty scarce, Jack.'

"'I know it is,' he said; 'what is the rate?'

"'Jack,' I answered, 'money is scarce—mighty scarce—but as you are an old customer I will stretch a point in your favor. You want $15 for fifteen days? Well, I will make out the note for $20. How will that suit you?'

"'Good heavens!' he exclaimed, 'I thought you charged 3 per cent.,' and he looked quite angrily at me.

"'No, Jack,' I said, 'times are hard. I have to charge 5 per cent.,' and I smiled sweetly at him.

"'Well,' he said, after a moment's attempt to grasp the interest problem, 'if you are charging 5 per cent., I suppose that I will have to pay it, but I think 3 per cent. is sufficient interest for any farmer to pay.'

"He signed the note and the chattel to secure its payment, and to this day that man believes that he paid 5 per cent. per month instead of 33⅓ per cent." And the merry banker laughed loudly as he added: "And those are the sort of men I like to do business with."

THE FORCE OF HABIT.

How It Almost Led to the Loss of a $200,000 Package.

"Not long ago," said an express agent of the United States Express Company, to a St. Louis Post-Dispatch reporter, "I had an instance of the effects of long-continued habit brought to my attention in a most forcible and disagreeable manner. My run at that time was between Indianapolis and St. Louis, and I took the express and money packages from the Eastern agent at the former city. I had thoroughly systematized my work, especially in regard to the money packages, which I always placed in one particular spot before putting them into the safe. The agent always brought them to my car, when I receipted for them, and then I would walk about the platform for a few minutes before the train started. On the occasion to which I refer the Eastern train was rather late, the agent had some business to transact with the station-master, and sent me word to come on the platform to receive my money, he sending the other packages to my car. I went over to him and he handed me a canvas bag, which he told me contained over $200,000, the largest amount he had ever had. He explained that he had not sent the porter with this on account of its value. I set it down on a barrel, signed the book and then walked to my car to take a look at it. The porter had placed a traveling-bag in the place I reserved for my money, and seeing it occupied I thought every thing was in order, and strolled about the depot until the train started. Just as we were pulling out an Irishman came running up and threw the bag containing the $200,000 into my car. I glanced at it and very nearly fainted. I had become so accustomed to having nothing to do when I was on the platform, that I had entirely forgotten the money, although my attention had been particularly directed to it, and had left it lying where any one of one hundred people could have picked it up and walked off with it. Since that time I have let nothing whatever interfere with my regular routine."

"Will your work stand the test of time, my friend?" asked the minister.

"I think it will," replied young Mr. Sweetnote, who had published a volume of lovey-dovey poems, "it has been on the market for four years, and the publisher reports six copies sold, and they are copies I bought myself. I am only afraid it will have to stand the test of eternity."

J. D. Rae has purchased the stock and good will of Mr. D. McPhaden's grocery establishment on Columbia street, and will conduct the business in future. The Methodist Conference.

The stationing committee meet at Victoria on Tuesday, and mainland members go down on Monday. The annual conference opens on Wednesday, at Victoria, and will be occupied about a week getting through the business before it. There will be upwards of sixty ministers and laymen present, representing the whole province.

A Good Investment.

The Westminster Gas Co. has announced that it has a limited number of shares for sale. The works are now equipped in good working order, and the company is established on a good footing. On account of the considerable reduction in the price of coal lately the prospects for good profits are better than ever this season. The list of consumers is increasing rapidly and constantly, about one-third increase having been made during the year. Those who obtain possession of the limited number of shares offered for sale will make a good investment.

Canada vs. Old Country.

The first cricket match of the season was played this afternoon on the cricket grounds. The teams were chosen from the Canadian and Old Country members of the club, the advantage being with the latter team. The weather, if anything, was a trifle hot, but no one seemed to mind it much. Canada went to bat and after some indifferent play was put out with 51 runs to the good for 10 wickets. The only good stand made during the innings was by Dockrill, who made the pretty score of 21 runs. It was past 4 o'clock when the Old Country went to bat and the game is still in progress as we go to press. Rev. P. Woods' fine bowling attracted considerable attention.

The Surrey Dyking Scheme.

The Surrey dyking scheme will soon be an accomplished fact, the enterprising people of that municipality having taken the matter in hand and will build the dyke without waiting for outside assistance. Under the provision of the new municipalities act the council is empowered to proceed with any improvement, on the petition of two-thirds of the persons to be benefitted thereby, the lands improved to be assessed for the amount expended. The necessary petition is now being circulated and has already received a majority of the signatures required. The petition will be laid before the next meeting of the Surrey council, and prompt action will follow. The work will commence and be completed this fall.

Found Drowned.

Coroner Ferris went up to Nicomen Wednesday to hold an inquest on the body of an Indian, found by an Indian woman floating in Nicomen slough. The inquest was held at the house of the Messrs. Clark Bros., near Sumas. Mr. Ferris commenced the inquest on Friday, but for want of indentification of the remains, adjourned it until this morning, and sent to Chilliwack for the chief of the Indians there, who came but failed to produce evidenc identifying the body. The jury brought in a verdict of "found drowned." There was not a mark of violence upon the body, which appeared to have been in the water about three weeks. Mr. Ferris returned to the city by train this afternoon.

Royce and Lansing Co. the Coming Attraction

During the past nine years this company has appeared in all the states from the great lakes to the Gulf of Mexico and Atlantic to the Pacific. And during these nine years the same members of the company have been together constantly; in many instances they have appeared in the same cities regularly each season, and with constantly increasing favor and patronage. Nine years of success naturally suggests nine years of improvement, and the present programme of this company is beyond a question far superior to any they have ever presented. Wherever they have once appeared the reputation left behind them is a sufficient proof of the reliability of their promises for the future, and the present season cannot fail to add thousands of friends and fresh laurels to those already gained. At Herring's opera house 16th May.

The Mission Bridge Again.

Mr. H. Abbott, general superintendent C. P. R., and Mr. A. J. Cambie, C. E., were in the city to-day for the purpose of trying to effect a compromise on the width of the draw to be placed in the Mission bridge. They were anxious that the board of trade should withdraw its protest against a 60 foot draw, and wished that its action in the matter should be reconsidered. They received little or no encouragement, the general feeling being that a 100 foot draw should be maintained as the only safeguard to the free and unobstructed navigation of the Fraser. Mr. Abbott did not appear to be very well pleased with results of his visit, and intimated that the action of the board of trade might be overruled. But the people are unanimous that a 100-foot draw is absolutely necessary, and no compromise reducing its width will be tolerated.

It is learned from reliable sources that the piers of the draw are to be riff-rapped, that is, hundreds of tons of rocks will be piled around the crib-work of the piers to keep them solid and in place. If this is allowed, even if it does not interfere immediately with navigation, it will cause a bar to be formed, which will ultimately result in changing the channel of the river. It is well known that even small snags have formed bars in the Fraser which have closed miles of the river to navigation. The Board of Trade should take this matter in hand and deal with it promptly, otherwise the navigation of the river above the mission bridge will be seriously imperilled.

The Presbyterian Synod of Manitoba and the Northwest Territories meets in Winnipeg next Tuesday.

Death of an Old Pioneer.

Thos. H. Forister, well known to every pioneer of British Columbia as the very popular steward of the Fraser steamers in the early days, from '58 and later, died in Key West, Fla., on the 24th April last after a lingering illness. Genial Tom Forister was steward on the various boats owned by the late Capt. Wm. Irving that formerly plied on the Fraser, including the "Moody," "Maria," "Governor Douglas," "Reliance," "Onward" and the "Wilson G. Hunt," the latter craft now resting in the bone yard on the beach in the upper harbor. The deceased, from his sunny, obliging disposition, was the friend of all the old hands who sought fortune's favors on the golden bars of the Fraser and beyond. For the past two years he lived at the residence of Capt. John Irving, James Bay, until a few months ago, when he left for Florida to visit his mother. He was taken ill shortly after his arrival and did not leave his bed until death came. Capt. Irving yesterday received a letter apprising him of the fact.—Colonist, May 9. In this city and vicinity Tom Forister was for years a familiar figure, and was liked by everyone with whom he came in contact, and no wonder, for his courtesy and good humor as a steamboat officer and private citizen were unfailing. Many pleasant memories and warm regards are cherished througout the province towards honest Tom Forister.

District Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Westminster district of the Methodist church was held in this city on Thursday and Friday of this week; Rev. E. Robson, of Vancouver, presiding. Rev. T. W. Hall was elected secretary, and Rev. J. Calvart assistant. Thirteen ministers and laymen were present. A careful review of the work of the church in the district during the past year revealed a very gratifying degree of success in every circuit and mission. The total membership of the church in the district is 772, an increase of 137 over last year. The amount of money raised during the year for all purposes is $11,036. 551 scholars are reported in the Sunday schools, with 94 teachers and officers.

Rev. J. W. Patterson tendered his resignation from the ministry, and it was recommended that his resignation be accepted and a certificate of standing be granted him. Several additional men will be required for work in the district next year.

The following laymen were elected delegates to the annual conference, which meets at Victoria next week: W. Shannon, D. Gillanders, Alex. Peers, O. D. Sweet, H. Abercrombie, J. Calvart, and Capt. John, an Indian. Rev. J. H. White, was elected to the stationing committee, and Rev. S. J. Thompson to the Sunday school committee.

At the first day's session Mr. M. J. Stevens, a probationer for the ministry from Newfoundland, who has been supplying the work of the late Rev. R. B. Hemlaw, having passed a successful examination, was recommended to be received on trial.

In response to the formal question, "Who have died during the year," many touching references were made to the late deceased brother, Rev Mr. Hemlaw, and an obituary notice was directed to be prepared for the conference and a resolution of condolence was passed to be forwarded to Mrs. Hemlaw.

A '59er Rejected.

To the old pioneer of British Columbia it has of late years become more and more apparent that his day has passed, that the usefulness in which he once was held has branched off and passed down the flume of forgetfulness, and his glorious past as much forgotten as the worthless gravel from which the purest gold was washed. It is sad to think that this is so, but it is, and the proof of it is to hand. The men who packed their mining tools and a jug of whisky over many a weary mile of wild and rugged country, so that ungrateful prosperity might live and revel on the rich products of their arduous labors, are now rejected, cast out and harshly forgotten. The few luxuries they crave for are refused them, and the means of obtaining these are cut off and rudely denied by an unsympathetic and unpatriotic government. The latest instance of ingratitude is worthy the attention of all who still have a warm spot in their heart for the faithful "Old Timer." An old pioneer (name not necessary) who for thirty years has battled manfully with life in this glorious portion of the "wild and wooly west," and who during this time by strict attention to business, and by keeping his weather eye open on the "main chance," has only managed to lay up about a million dollars, sought to improve his condition by taking out a salmon fishing license in order to draw from the Fraser the wealth which the earth refused to yield. The old pioneer's eyes fairly watered as he laid the application on the inspector's table, and thoughts of glorious hauls of the silver shining salmon passed through his mind like the fanciful enchantment of a fairy tale. Life seemed young and joyous to the old timer as he stood waiting for the coveted parchment, but, alas, the parting wish of the pioneer was to be refused, and his pleasant vision swept away as ruthlessly as a dish of oolachans before a Victoria epicure. The inspector, hardened as most officials are, looked not on the worth of the applicant, carelessly passed over his craving for salmon, and firmly refused the license. We will draw a veil over the scene that followed. The pioneer, one of the fathers of the province, had been thrust aside to make room for a Siwash, his last means of earning the bread of life cut off. O Tempora, O Mores!
