Our barber shop closes on Sunday. How we do move!

The next bank that is established in the Valley will be at Enderby.

Salmon are being caught in the river, weighing from 18 to 35 pounds.

Miss Wetterhause, of New Denver, is spending a week or two with Mrs. Wm. Anderson.

Geo. Folkard has three apple trees on his ranch near Enderby that net him $30 a tree each year.

The boat building epidemic has struck town. W. E. Truesdale informs us that the rate of life insurance remains the same.

The mill company is using its new boarding house. The bunk house will be in shape to receive the men in a few days.

The cellar of the large residence to be built by F. H. Hale is excavated, and work on the stone foundation will soon be started.

Fred Crouse had his left thumb caught in a planer at the mill this morning. Dr. Bentley amputated it at the first joint.

J. C. English has a stock of Bissell's carpet sweepers in stock that will brush the dust out of anything but a mule's eye.

Ed Shannon of New Denver, is visiting Enderby and the Valley. Ed is looking for those things he is accustomed to get.

A large gang of C.P.R. navvies pulled into Enderby the past week and are busy putting in the new switches on the sawmill property.

Walter E. Truesdale is reaching out after business in the direction of Salmon Arm. He is looking at some property there this week.

W. H. Hutchison is putting the finishing touches to his blacksmith shop and the furniture store, giving both a much-improved appearance.

The large scales that were planted in the street in front of the Wright property, were removed by the Enderby Trading company on Monday.

After being confined to the Vernon hospital for two months suffering from inflamatory rheumatism, Mrs. Harvey returned to Enderby on Saturday.

Pheasants are doing well at the coast, and Westminster sportsmen intend collecting several pairs to send to the Okanagan Valley.—Kootenay Mail.

Frank Franklin returned to Enderby from Vernon, Saturday, where he has been in the hospital for three weeks, a sufferer from inflamatory rheumatism.

The first timber camp sent out by the mill company this season, left for Mabel lake district on Monday. Albert Johnson is foreman of the gang.

School commenced Monday; the holidays have flown. Soon Jack Frost will kiss the cheeks of Summer, and we will bring out the flannels for Baby Winter.

H.W.Wright has displayed at the Enderby Hotel several branches of crab apples from his orchard that are pictures for beauty and fulness.

There is no news to give out in relation to incorporation. The committee are waiting to hear from Attorney Billings before any further step can be taken.

Rev. J. P. Bowell, Bursar of Columbian College, New Westminster, arrived in town Tuesday. He is spending a few days in the Valley in the interest of the College.

J. L. Hartwell came down from Vernon last week to look after his property near Lansdown. His barn was damaged by bush fires, but the damage is not great.

J. C. Orchard has just finished painting the Ireland residence. It presents a very pretty appearance. Mr. Orchard is looking after business this week in Armstrong.

Jas. Elliott of Bluevale, Ont., visited Wm. Anderson the past week, and was driven about the Valley to see its beauty. He was highly pleased with what he saw.

J. Eaves, of Mara, visited Enderby on Saturday. Mr. Eaves reports that his apple and plum crop is bigger than it ever was. His plums are the finest he ever raised in Mara.

The Kamloops Lumber Co. is installing one of the largest edgers made in Canada in the Enderby mill this week. This will bring the mill's finishing machinery up to its sawing capacity.

Chas. E. Strickland had his 400-acre property surveyed into 20-acre tracts this week. Extensive clearing has been done, and some excellent blocks of land have been shown up.

Campbell's comedians gave a pleasing performance in the town hall, last Saturday evening, before a full house. Everybody enjoyed the specialities, especially the buck-and-wing dancing.

A number of ladies met at the home of Mrs. F. H. Hale last Thursday afternoon, and the organization of the Enderby Missionary Study Class was affected. The class meets fortnightly.

R. McQuarrie left for Vernon, Monday, to take the engine in the sawmill there. Mr. McQuarrie handled the lever on the engine in the Enderby flouring mill for eight years, and never skipped a cog.

Six carloads of lumber were shipped this week from the Enderby yards of the Kamloops Lumber Co. When the stock of lumber is in condition to ship the company expects to send out from five or six carloads a day.

Jas. Bowes passed through Enderby Friday for Kelowna, with a carload of hotel furnishings for the Lake View hotel at Kelowna. Jim bought an entire new outfit at the coast for the kitchen and dining room, and other furniture for the rooms.

The green apple season is open. Our artist here illustrates from memory its more hasty than popular pastime, showing the muscular development of the limbs, and demonstrating the great advantages that might be derived from a close observance of the laws of hygiene and physics.

The Bohemian Concert Co., will give an entertainment in the Town Hall, Saturday evening. They are reported to be high-class. Miss Gertrude Marrack is the contralto; and Herbert Taylor, late of the Royal Carl Rosa Opera Co. of England, basso. Little Glen, the 12-year-old comedienne, is also with the company.

It might be a good scheme for somebody to compile a Book of Contemplations for the C.P.R., showing what that great institution is going to do to improve its Enderby property. It has been mixing paints for 14 years to put on to the station house. Contemplations like these are good, but they grow grey headed before maturity.

Four hundred pounds of Eaton's and Simpson's songs of praise came into Enderby Monday. It would be an exhibition of patriotism that would commend itself to the world if those to whom they are addressed would refuse to take them out of the post-office. Local merchants can supply better goods than those catalogued at prices little above those paid to the Toronto houses.

The Quarterly Official Board of the Methodist Church for the Enderby Circuit met in the church here on Monday evening last. Representatives were present from Armstrong, Knob Hill and Enderby. The business affairs of the Church were brought under review, and plans for future work discussed. Mr. F. McIntyre of Armstrong, was elected delegate to the Financial District Meeting, to be held in Revelstoke, Thursday next.

At the Picnic Grounds.

The picnic given last Friday to the children of the Methodist Sunday school and the public generally was very much enjoyed, despite the fact that the hours of pleasure had to be cut short owing to the rain. The number attending was large. Racks, heavily cushioned with hay, were provided for the children and other rigs carried the grown-ups to the grounds. Swings were provided, and other games entertained the children. The shallowness of the river furnished a delightful spot for bathing.

Mrs. Geo. Folkard, and Mrs. Wm. Anderson kindly furnished the kettles and pans for hot tea and coffee, and from their homes the children brought a bountiful supply of eatables. Messrs. Geo. R. Sharpe provided the rig for conveying the baskets, etc., to the grounds and Messrs. Greyal, Evans, Teece, and Jones the conveyances for the picnicers.

Owing to the rain interfering with the complete success of the picnic, a social was arranged for the evening at the Methodist parsonage, and was attended by a large crowd.

Will Shortly Move.

The roof will this week be laid on the Bell Block. Work will then be pushed with all possible haste on the lower floor. It is expected that the Enderby Trading Company will be able to occupy the large store rooms that are being prepared for them in about three weeks. When moving time comes it will be heralded with joy by Messrs. Bell, Peel and Woods. Since operations began on the new block they have been forced to do business under most adverse conditions. Their salesroom has been too small for their immense stock, and their store rooms are stacked high with goods yet unpacked.

The new salesrooms will be fitted up in modern style. Counters, showcases, shelvings and window brackets will be the latest improved. Each department will be finished in elegant style.

Mara Doings

Two carloads of lumber were shipped this week by the Rothesay Lumber Co.

Miss Edith Folkard, of Enderby, spent a few days in Mara last week, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Owen.

Miss H. Northen of Victoria, arrived here on Saturday's train. She will have charge of the Mara school.

Owing to a slight accident to the engine, the Rothesay company's mill was shut down for two days last week.

The family of W. M. Peacock arrived from the Northwest on Saturday. Mr. Peacock has decided to settle in this vicinity.

James Massey, the 15-year-old son of L. B. Massey, shot and killed a good-sized black bear on Sunday, the 14th. He is justly proud of his feat.

The unusual long spell of dry weather was broken on Friday last by a severe thunder storm, accompanied by a heavy rain. It will prove beneficial to root crops.

Local sports are anxiously looking forward to the 1st. From appearances, the ducks will have a hot time this year, with automatic shotguns and bicycles to contend with.

We regret to learn that Mrs. A. Zettergreen has been hurriedly called to Revelstoke, owing to the severe illness of her brother, L. Olsen, who is in the hospital there. [The news of the death of Mr. Olsen was received here Tuesday morning. The body arrived at Enderby for burial this morning, at Lansdown.—ED.]

In speaking of the splendid crop prospects of this districts, let us not overlook the root crop on the ranch of L. B. Massey. This is undoubtedly the best root crop in this locality. He has already placed orders with the Farmer's Exchange for the shipment of 23 tons, and expects to have as much more for his own use, for feeding.

We would like to know whether huckle berries are classed as forbidden fruit. They appear to be strictly so at this end of the Garden. The other day a merry party of Edenites assembled with buckets and pails, intent on gathering the lucious fruit. On the way to the patch, however, they found their way barred by a high gate, on which which was inscribed, "Trespassers will be prosecuted." Of course there was nothing for it but to return home, berryless, as all attempts to make terms proved futile. BE.

Salmon Arm

One notices improvements going on in all directions.

L. Hains is finishing a very fine house for J. D. Cameron on his Dairy farm.

Dan Sinclair has one of the largest residences in this part of the country finished. The cost will be about $2,000.

Ed Toombs has just finished clearing five acres for Thos. Sharpe, on his property recently purchased here, and which he intends to plant out as an orchard.

A. Brown is doing extensive improvements on his farm recently purchased from Mr. McLeod. He has built an up-to-date house, and let a contract to Mr. Banks to clear the land.

J. E. Judge has let a contract to L. Hains to build a house on his farm recently purchased from A. S. Henery. Mr. Judge has gone home to England, and rumor says he will not return alone.

Mrs. E. T. Barr, who is touring B.C., spent a day here last week. Tourists do not seem to realize what they miss in passing Salmon Arm—one of the prettiest spots on the C.P.R.—with hunting and fishing galore, and no end to the beautiful scenery.

Wm. Monteith reports his mineral claim—the Simco, on Mt. Ida—as looking well and giving satisfactory assays, under development. Mr. Monteith has great faith in the Mount Ida mineral belt. There has been some very rich ore shipped from the Silver Sceptre, running as high as $1,000 per ton in silver and gold.

Another valuable claim is the Silver Thread, owned by Andy Currie, and we may expect to see shipments of ore from here in the near future.

The Weather.

Walter E. Truesdale, government observer at Enderby, furnishes the following record of the temperature, and general state of the weather for the month of August:

We would like to know how many carloads of produce is shipped from Mara but billed at Enderby station.—Armstrong Advertiser.

What's This For?

"Wanted, at Comaplix, a second-class female teacher."—Kootenay Mail.

Storming of Port Arthur.

The storming of Port Arthur, on Aug. 22nd, which the foreign despatches say is progressing, is inviting attention. The brave resistance which General Stoessel is making is evoking high praise, and the war office and public are hoping almost against hope that he will be able to hold out in spite of the heavy odds against him; that the Japanese are unable to gain a foothold in the inner defences is considered to be encouraging.

"Where Fortune Smiles."

Eight years ago we had the pleasure of seeing Percy Godenrath receive from a Christmas tree a large sponge neatly wrapped in a shoe box. It was sent him by those friends who knew only one side of his nature, and were not big enough to grasp the other. Percy has a very receptive side to him. He is also very perceptive. In the supplement he lately put out to the Kamloops Sentinel, "Where Fortune Smiles," he has demonstrated these characteristics in a marked measure. He is to be congratulated on the artistic finish of the undertaking. It is of great value to the district that it advertises.

Self-rising Flour.

A despatch from Vancouver, Aug. 17: The wholesale price of flour jumped ten cents per barrel today. The Vancouver agents for the big milling companies of the east stated today that they expected that within a very short time flour will be selling at $6.

During the past three weeks an advance of 30 cents per barrel has taken place in the selling price of flour. Before the rise that commodity was steady at $5.40. Local jobbing houses are still quoting carload lots at $5.60, and it is not likely the price will be raised till a large amount of the present stock on hand is worked off.

At the Range.

Renewed interest is being taken in the practices of the rifle association. Heretofore the shooting has been rather difficult for the members, owing to the condition of the ground at the range, but this week a revolving target was made and the ground put in better shape. The shooting will, hereafter, be in the regulation style, and the practices conducted strictly according to militia rules. Following is the score of those shooting last Thursday: J. C. English 30, Wm. Anderson 28, Wm. Hutchison 24, A. M. Baird 21, H. M. Walker 19, A. E. Roberts 18, W. E. Truesdale 16, A. Todd 15, E. B. Haynes 14, R. P. Bradley 13, Wm. Hogart 10, R. Hancock 10.

Time He Learned.

The Canadian government has lodged a formal complaint with the British authorities regarding the indignity offered to the flag of the Dominion by a British Consular officer in a South American port, a few weeks ago. The flag was torn and trampled on, and the Consul said he knew nothing of a Canadian flag.

Sad, but Not Disappointed.

The electors of Lillooet, by their ballots, have again returned a supporter of the McBride government in the person of Archie McDonald. While better things were expected of that constituency, the result is no great disappointment.—Kootenay Mail.

Enderby, B. C.

Let not our sensibilities be so delicate that we cannot ask for what we want and smile if we cannot have it.

LAND FOR SETTLEMENT.

Just over the chain of hills that skirt Enderby on the west there are thousands of acres of excellent agricultural land still open to settlement. Men who know the country and what constitutes good fruit and farming land, say that within a four hour's walk of Enderby, there is as good land open to the homesteader as can be found anywhere in the Okanagan Valley at $10 an acre. The country is of a rolling nature; much of it is open, and all of it is well watered by lakes and streams. It is an ideal country for cattle ranges. There is no road leading into the country, but one can go by horseback over the sparcely timbered hills west of town into the very heart of it, without experiencing any of the hardships that are usually encountered in getting into a new country.

Those people who do not see much in the future of Enderby, are looking through blue glasses. There is country enough within a radius of eight miles of Enderby that has never been touched by the plow, to produce yearly more grain and fruit and vegetables, and horses and cattle and hogs and eggs and butter, than the entire output of the Okanagan Valley now amounts to. With here and there an exception, no real farming is being done in this end of the Valley. Only a few acres are put into crop, while the great bulk of the land on most of the farms produces nothing. There are thousands of acres as fertile as any that is cultivated that is as wild today as it was thirty years ago.

Twenty-nine years ago, Rev. Jas. Turner held the first divine service that was ever held in this end of the Okanagan Valley. It was in the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Fortune. Every resident within a radius of 15 miles attended the service. His congregation numbered five. They were Mr. and Mrs. Fortune, Mr. Lumby, F. Bennett, and Herman Wickers. Today there are two towns situated within that radius, six schools, and a resident population of perhaps 1,800.

WHAT HAVE WE FOR IT?

The question of government owned railways will be brought before the people of Canada this year as it was never before. The Conservative party has made it its battle cry. "Shall we have a government owned railway, or a railway owned government?" our Conservative friends ask. And the people answer nothing. Canada is a magnificent country, and Canadians are a magnificent people, but we let the politicians do all the thinking for us. What does the average voter care about it; whether the government owns the railway or the railway owns the government? Isn't it more a party question?

In the past the people have undertaken nine-tenths of the obligations of the railways built in Canada. The Dominion or Provincial governments have stood behind every railway that has been built in Canada. The debt has been shouldered upon the people. What have we to show for it? What does the government get out of it? What have the people to show for all the money, bonuses, and land grants that have been given away?

The Grand Trunk Pacific may start building at this end at the same time work is begun at the eastern terminus. Hon. Raymond Prefontaine, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, is reported to have announced at a meeting of the Board of Trade in Vancouver that "it is the intention of the Grand Trunk Pacific to begin work at both ends of the line from Winnipeg to the Pacific Coast at the same time."

The total cost of the waterworks to the people of Armstrong is only between $600 and $700 per year. This covers running expenses, interest and sinking fund. One dollar a month covers everything. Soon the water system will have paid for itself, and Armstrong will have a valuable asset, and the residents will get their water for little or nothing. Enderby might do likewise.

FLY TIME.

The common house fly shows amazing stupidity. Shoo her out of one dish and she flies into another; thrust your fork at her and she gaily jumps on to the fork. From the fork she tumbles into your plate and gets herself all "stuck up"; then she sits on the edge of your plate to clean her wings on her legs and jumps into the tea. You toss her into the air with a spoon and in a moment she's glued to your forehead, or sliding about on your bald pate. You strike at her and she sidesteps and skates the other way. Then she sits upon your ear apparently studying the anatomy of that organ. Driven from there she performs many feats upon the end of your nose, and then looks calmly into your eye as if to see if you really meant it. And all the while she is so free and independent! It makes one wonder what sewing society she must belong to.

Judging from the tone of the Armstrong Advertiser's Enderby correspondent, our reporter's reference to Mrs. Piggie's basket picnic at Mara lake two weeks ago, caused Mrs. Piggie and Mrs. Piggie's friend of the quill some uneasiness. We regret exceedingly that such is the case. By way of punishment, we have fined our reporter three cents. We are convinced that a kink in a sow's tail is precious as stupidity in a woman's love, and should not be tampered with. It is her kink. All dishwater smells alike to us.

"Neglectful Carelessness."

The Liberal papers of the province seem to fear very much the raid which they prophecy the Grand Trunk Pacific intends making upon the resources of this province. Had the Liberal government at Ottawa taken any thought for the welfare of British Columbia, the corporation which is to have the building of the new transcontinental road would have been compelled to have commenced work at the Pacific end of the line, and British Columbia would not have been asked for any supplementary assistance such as it now appears will be necessary if the province is to reap any benefit from the construction of the Northern line. The G.T.P. has the province by the hip, owing to the neglectful carelessness of the government at Ottawa; and if the provincial government, for the benefit of the province is obliged to enter into any arrangement with the Grand Trunk to ensure the commencement and construction of the British Columbia division in a way and at a time which will ensure to the advantage of the province, the Ottawa government is alone to blame should the terms appear hard."—Kamloops Standard.

No More Sentiment for Mose.

Daniel J. Sully, the dethroned cotton king, made a trip through the south last winter, and when he came back he told a story of an old negro who had been working for a cotton planter time out of mind. One morning he came to his employer and said:

"I'se gwinter quit, boss."

"What's the matter, Mose?"

"Well, ash, yer manager, Mistah Winter, ain't kicked me in dis free mumfs."

"I ordered him not to kick you any more. I don't want anything like that around my place. I don't want anyone to hurt your feelings, Mose."

"Ef I don' git any more kicks I'se goin' to quit. Ebery time Mistah Winter used ter kick and cuff me when he wuz mad he always git 'shamed of hiself and gimme a quarter. I'se done los' emuff money a'ready wid dis hesh foolishness 'bout hurtin' ma feelin's."

MAKE REGULAR IN THE DARK WOODS.

ELOISE HAWTHORNE has compiled a book of Contemplations, containing thoughts from the writings of Elbert Hubbard. You can buy the book for five dollars. Its value depends upon your own condition of mind and heart. It might be worth its weight in gold, and you might be glad to sell it for a mess of pottage. In looking through it the other day my eyes fell upon these words: "Pay as you go."

"I am not sure," says Mr. Hubbard, "just what the Unpardonable Sin is, but I believe it is this disposition to evade the paying of small bills.

"Ask the grocer, the liveryman or the butcher, who are the folks that contract bills and never pay, or pay when they dam please, and he will tell you they are the aristocrats. The blacksmiths, stone-masons, carpenters and farmers look you squarely in the eye; speak to you frankly face to face, and if they promise to pay you Saturday night and cannot, they come around and tell you why. I have been despoiled of hard earned dollars, and had my reputation ripped up the back when I ventured to ask for my own, but never excepting by those who have a Thursday.

"If you wish to lessen the worries of the world and scatter sunshine as you go, don't bother to go a-slumming, or lift the fallen, or trouble or reclaim the erring—simply pay your debts cheerfully and promptly. It lubricates the wheels of trade, breaks up party ice, gives tone to the social system and liberates good will.

"Especially pay the people who work by the day and toil with their hands. A dollar means much to the man who spades your garden—never humiliate the man by making him ask for his dollar. Give it to him immediately the work is done, and if he did it well, tell him so. Let us pay as we go. The cheerfulness and good will we give out with our money will in turn be given out by those we pay it to."

Our Water Works Threatened.

It might have been in a little bayou on the Spallumcheen river. An old darkey's flat-bottomed boat was shelved on a mud bank. The mud was too deep for him to get out and push, and he got madder and madder. In his exasperation he saw a woman stooping down at the landing some yards above to fill her pail from the stream.

"Git out er dat!" he yelled angrily. "Ef ye takes a drop outen dis yere bayou till I gits afloat agin, I'll mek ye pay fer it ef I hev ter wade asho' ter do it!"

Pa's Mark of Distinction.

"Where is your papa, my little man," asked a visitor at the door of a farm house, as bright little Johnnie answered the knock.

"Papa jest went to the pig pen to feed the pigs. You'll find him out there with 'em. He's got a hat on."

Canada the Magnificent.

In the August report of the Canadian high commissioner, the Right Hon. Lord Strathcona, G.C.M.G., etc., to the minister of trade and commerce, he says: The following extract from a report on the Congress to the association of Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom by the secretary of that body will doubtless be read with interest: "After the business proceedings had terminated, the delegates made extended tours through Canada, and were received at various points by representatives of the provincial governments and cities, as well as of the boards of trade. We had thus many opportunities of conversing with leading Canadians in the different provinces, as well as of seeing the country; and of ascertaining how far it is capable of development, both as respects agriculture and manufactures.

"The general opinion was, that Canada enjoys enormous natural advantages in the possession of magnificent waterways, noble forests, vast prairies suitable for wheat growing, and great mineral resources, all of which are awaiting development. It would be difficult to find a country which is so favorably situated in regard to its possible commercial future; and all that seems necessary is the addition of a large population capable of utilizing these resources, and of giving them a commercial value."

He Read the Advertiser.

"Some folks git stuck mighty easy," remarked Farmer Clovertop, looking up from his copy of the Podunk Advertiser. "For all they think they're so all-fired smart, the city folks is havin' artificial ice shoved off on 'em. I'd like to see anyone fool me on ice."

A Good Talk on Gambling

To use his own words, Elbert Hubbard is not "a member of the Christian Endeavor Society, the Epworth League, the Baptist Union, the Knights of Columbus, or the Society for the Suppression of Vice;" but he is a man who does a "heap o' thinking" of the right kind. In the Philistine for July, he gives this heart-to-heart talk on gambling: "As a cold business proposition, let me give you this: I would not trust an amateur gambler as far as you could fling Taurus by the tail. I will not do business with a man who plays cards for money if I can help it. No individual in my employ—or anybody else's—who plays cards for money can ever hope for promotion.

"A professional gambler may be honest, but your clerk or business man who indulges in a quiet game of draw, is a rogue, a liar and a cheat.

"And the man he cheats most is himself. And the only man he really deceives is himself.

"And the man who deceives himself and cheats himself will get no chance to cheat me if the matter can be avoided. Beware of the white face, the soft hands and the impassive smile of the poker player!

"The amateur gambler is not necessarily a bad man—primarily his intents are honest. He plays first simply for recreation; then to add interest, the game transforms itself into pennyante. From this to betting all the money he has, is a very easy evolution when the fever is on.

"He wins. But to quit when you have won, and not give your opponents a chance to win their money back, is more or less of a disgrace.

"He plays again—and loses. Then he wants a chance to get his money back. He plays first only in the evening—an hour after supper. Then if he can get away from work at four o'clock and play until supper time, he will do so, just as scores of government clerks do at Washington. In the evening he plays again—excitement is in the air—challenge is abroad—he will come out even, and then quit. Men who have work to do cannot play all night and do business the next day, so midnight may end the game. But Saturday night the game goes on until daylight.

"Of the 'morality' of gambling, not anything need be said—all I affirm is, that it is simply absurd to enter on a habit where success is defeat, and to win is a calamity.

"The successful amateur gambler graduates into a professional; he has to, for business men shun him.

"No man who plays cards for money can keep his position long. The fact is, none of us have a surplus of brains, and if you are going to succeed in business, all the power you have to your credit is demanded. The man who can play cards at night and do business in the daytime, hasn't yet been born.

"Life is a bank account, with so much divine energy at your disposal. What are you going to do with it? If you draw your checks for this, you cannot for that—take your choice. And above all, do not draw on the Bank of Futurity by breathing bad air, keeping bad hours and bad company.

"The man who succeeds in business is the one who goes to bed before ten o'clock at night; and only one thing is he jealous of, and that is outdoor exercise.

"Gambling robs a man of rest; and the keen edge of his life is lost in shuffling the pasteboards. All he gives to his employer or the world is the discard. Outside of his play he is a weak, inefficient person, and his weakness is very apt to manifest itself in burdening his friends. The curse of gambling does not fall on the gambler alone, any more than does the drunkard alone suffer for his fault. Suffering falls upon every one within the radius of the gambler.

"If your gambler is on a salary, he very often comes around for his wages before pay day; then he gets to discounting his salary to a money shark; then, if he can, he will 'borrow' his pay before he earns it, without first consulting you. He intends to pay it back—oh yes!

"He wins and pays it back. This encourages him to borrow more the next time. He takes more in order to win more. He is now obliged to play heavily because his debts are accumulating. It is an old story, and dozens of men in Sing Sing can tell you all about it.

"One bad feature of the poker game is the poker-face—the impassive, white face with its cold smile. It reveals nothing—nothing but untruth. And the principal reason it reveals nothing is because there is nothing back of it to reveal: it does not token truth, talent, sympathy, kindness, love, nor intellect.

"Our actions and thoughts are building brain cells, and the gambler is building cells of folly. His face is astute as the face of David Harum. It gives nothing away. In time, the habit of the man becomes fixed—he is a living lie. He lies to friends, family, employer, and business associates. He forever plays a part. Life to him is a game of bluff. And get it out of your head that the liar does not look you squarely in the eye. The poker-player is a scientific liar, running on the low gear, and his eyes look calmly into yours. He is astute. Astuteness is only valuable in protecting us from astute people. It adds nothing of value to the community. Astuteness adds no beauty to the world, nor does it make life for any man happier.

"In strict scientific economics the gambler is a parasite and a thief. He consumes but does not produce."

Easy Solution.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman tells an admirable story of the advice given by an Englishman, a Scotchman, and an Irishman, respectively, to a gentleman whose servant was constantly breaking articles in the household.

The Englishman in his blunt, honest way, said to the employer, "Oh, get rid of him! dismiss him."

The Scotchman's advice was, "Stop the money out of his wages."

"But," said the master, "he breaks more than his wages amount to."

"Then," said the Irishman, "raise his wages."

In the Pulpits

What the Local Pastors Talked About Sunday

"Quench not the Spirit," was the subject and text of Rev. Mr. Campbell's sermon, Sunday morning. We have face to face dealings with God. It is a matter of great importance how we conduct ourselves in these dealings; what we do with the Holy Spirit when it comes unto us. The gift of the Holy Spirit, said Mr. Campbell, is the greatest gift of heaven unto man. It comes to us in a word, or a thought; we know not from whence, nor at what hour. Most unexpectedly it comes. But it ever comes for a divine purpose, and we must be ever careful lest we do not answer it. In secular things we are our own judges as to what we shall do with our thoughts and our impulses; but in the matter of the Spirit it is not our's to say how we shall receive it nor what we shall do with it. It is God's way to use us by the Holy Spirit for His purpose; and if we attempt to use the Spirit for any other thing than that intended by Him, we lose it, and are left desolate and barren. Nothing can be accomplished in the salvation of men without the Holy Spirit. Our own efforts cannot accomplish anything. We fail utterly when we try to do the work of God in our own strength.

There are many ways by which the Spirit is quenched. The way of neglect, of misuse, of folly, of thoughtlessness; but the worst is when we flaunt in the face of the Spirit our sins. Without the admittance of the Spirit into his life, man is utterly lost. Quench the Spirit and what have we? Only death. Our highest aims and aspirations cannot amount to anything.

The Holy Spirit is not easily quenched. It comes to us time and again, even after we have turned it away. No man is so given to evil that he has not felt in his heart the touch of the Divine hand. But repeatedly turning the Spirit away leads men to hardness of heart and of conscience. What must be the condition of the man who has grieved the Spirit to such an extent that he no longer knows its coming!

Speaking from 1 Peter 3:10, Rev. Mr. Venables addressed his congregation Sunday morning, on the subject, "He that will love life." After defining life in its dual sense: animal and spiritual, Mr. Venables said: "The question then is, not whether the higher future life is worth living, but whether existence under mere animal conditions is worth living?" Life rightly used, he said, has much joy and happiness. There is the sweetness of domestic love, so beautiful and so helpful; the pleasures of friendship; the greater allowance of health and strength in comparison with sickness and bodily suffering; the pleasant surprises that often come in our way quite unexpectedly; nature with all her beauty: all these are great blessings. But we do not value them as we ought to do: we don't thank God enough. We look too much at the dark things of life and don't consider sufficiently the many bright things, because we have come perhaps to look upon them as a right. But they are the Gift of God. Concerning the higher life, Mr. Venables said: "Surely that life is worth living. What will be the great comfort of old age? Surely the quiet communion with God; the nearness of the other life: as this one draws to its end, the other comes nearer and nearer. Surely, too, the knowledge of a life well spent, will be a joy in the last days of our life here. There is pleasure in work for God; in the study of His Holy Word; in teaching the young; ministering to the sick, raising the fallen: all these have pleasures of their own."

Rev. Mr. Roberts took his text from the 24th verse of the sixth chapter of Matthew, for his discourse Sunday evening. "Ye cannot serve two masters." This is a very trite saying, said he; one that is so ordinary that we would hardly expect it to come from so divine a person as Jesus. But there is more in it than the mere words express. Christ did not mean to convey the single meaning that men cannot serve two men as masters. He would have us learn a far more important lesson. Our aim in life is our master. We never can reach higher than we aim. What we strive to be that we will become, just as surely as we persevere. We cannot have two aims in life. Our whole mind and body and intellect must be centered upon one object. We cannot prosper and have ambitions today that are contrary to the ambitions of yesterday. We cannot switch from God on Sunday to Mammon on Monday and the other five days of the week. We must have an eye single to the Glory of God: that is, we must serve him the same in our business during the week as we do in our worship on Sunday, in the church.

Many people, he said, think that being a Christian means the observance of certain orthodox church rules. But orthodoxy is simply a means by which we are trained to seek after the salvation of God, and the observance of all these regulations is only a preparatory step leading to the high calling of Christ Jesus. If we are to make anything of our lives we must seek diligently to serve only the best that is in us, at all times and in all places. We cannot allow our evil nature—our passions, to have the mastery at any time, for in so doing we serve Mammon.

Canadian Apples Abroad

In his report, the Canadian High Commissioner of London says, regarding Canadian apples: "The fruit crop in Great Britain was a complete failure, a greater failure than even that of the previous year, and it was to be expected that heavy supplies would be needed, and Canada has naturally contributed largely to make up the shortage. It would appear that there is an increasing demand, and large quantities can now be disposed of without causing any disastrous decline in prices, when quality and condition are reliable. The Canadian apples, by universal consent, were distinguished by general excellence, except in a few instances when frosted consignments came to hand. I am glad to be able to report that generally the packing of the fruit is well spoken of, the system of inspection and grading now established being much appreciated on this side. In this connection, I may quote observations offered by a well-known house in the trade: "As a suggestion, we think it would be a great improvement if similar arrangements to pool farmers' apples could be made as have, we understand, been carried through so successfully by the establishment of creameries to the benefit of the Canadian cheese trade.

"A shipment of a straight line of one mark of one description of apples is quite the exception as regards Canada. Some Boston friends of ours frequently send us lines of 1,000 or more barrels of Baldwins under one mark, all evenly packed and graded, and the saving in samples and opens alone is considerable, apart from the advantage to shippers of having a brand which thus becomes so well known and reputed as to be a guarantee of quality.

"Liverpool has been hitherto the centre of the Canadian apple trade, and is still largely so, but consignments are now being made to Manchester and other markets, and of whatever advantage it may upon occasions be to individual shippers to get more closely in touch with consumers, it should not be overlooked that such decentralization must lead to more irregular and less satisfactory results generally; in as far that the focusing of demand and competition of buyers at the Liverpool auction sales is diminished by the loss of attendance, and orders of buyers who find their requirements sent to their door, and in the purchase of which they have only the competition of their immediate neighbors, similarly situated, to contend with."

Some six years ago, grafts of some noted English varieties of apples were sent out to growers in Nova Scotia, and the firm who forwarded them advise me that they have now received some of the fruit of the trees in question, which realized high prices.

Shippers are now using very extensively a new package for apples in the shape of boxes. They are very highly spoken of in some quarters, as the following remarks by an important firm in the north indicate: "The market for Canadian apples might be vastly increased and developed in Great Britain were they to be sent across in smaller packages than the ordinary sized barrel, and we are very glad to notice that the custom of sending apples across in boxes of a handy size seems now to be growing. We think any further development in that way will largely increase the field for Canadian apples on this side; and that the large sized barrel, which has been used in past years, has greatly stood in the way of consumers purchasing supplies of Canadian apples, where—as must have happened in many cases—a barrel was too big a quantity for them to buy at a time, and where in many cases they might not even have accommodation for an apple barrel. The putting up of articles, such as apples, in small handy packages is on the increase in several trades which come under our notice, and we think it does a great deal to increase the demand, particularly for articles which are not actual necessities."

If Russia has lost 37 of her original 9 warships at Port Arthur, and has 7 left, how long would the Manitoba wheat crop feed a homing pigeon?—Progress.

NOTICE is hereby given, that 30 days after date I intend to apply to the Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works for a special license to cut and carry away timber from the following described lands, situated in the Osoyoos Division of Yale District, on the East side of Mabel Lake, commencing at a post marked W. Irwin, planted South of Tappen Creek, thence South 80 chains, thence East 80 chains, thence North 80 chains, thence West 80 chains to point of commencement, containing 640 acres, more or less. W. IRWIN.
