THE EDENOGRAPH

VOLUME I. NUMBER 24. ENDERBY, B. C., OCTOBER 26, 1904. PRICE, $2 A YEAR

Enderby Doings

You can get a meal at 15c to 75c at the Royal Cafe.

Reserved seats for "My Friend from India" are being liberally taken.

The dining room of the Enderby Hotel has been again enlarged, and plates can now be set for 60 people.

A. W. Lee, route agent of the Dominion Express Co., was in Enderby the past week and established a money order agency at the drug store.

A friend writes to say: "When Liberal get Conservative and Conservative get Liberal, is not that Socialism? Bedad it is; it is bedad!"

For Sale—Two Jersey-Durham cows. Long milkers; giving over 300 pounds of butter each, yearly. Apply to H. W. Harvey, or G. C. Salt, River Bend, Enderby.

The electors of this district will not be permitted to decide who shall represent them in the Dominion house on the same day the rest of the electors decide—Nov. 3—but must wait till the 22nd.

Geo. R. Lawes received a check for $10 last week, prize money won on his fruit exhibits at the Armstrong fair. Prize money tells the tale, and Enderby fruit exhibitors generally bring a share of it home.

The Annual Meeting of the Enderby Rifle Association will be held on Friday afternoon immediately at the close of the shoot, instead of in the evening as announced last week. Members are asked to make note of the change.

D. Nairn & Co. have placed in stock a number of copies of D. W. Higgins' book, "The Mystic Spring," tales of British Columbia life, told by a British Columbian. Mr. Higgins was one time speaker of the Provincial house.

Mr. J. M. Robinson, sec.-treas. of the Summerland Development Co., writes: "A friend presented me with a copy of your paper at the station yesterday. I like the brightness and crispness of the writing. Enclosed find $2." Thank you, friends.

Complaint is made by persons using the Mara road of the can nuisance, and the question is asked, if there is not a more out-of-the-way place to be found for dumping grounds for oil cans and rubbish than along the road just across the bridge. Frequently horses are frightened by the piles of rubbish.

On Sept. 22 we sent a package of stationery to Salmon Arm, 16 miles distant from Enderby. On Monday we received this letter, dated Oct. 22: "Stationery came to hand to-night." Will some one kindly tell us what route the Dominion Express Co. takes to reach Salmon Arm so quickly!

A. Fulton, an experienced plumber and tinsmith, has opened for business in connection with the hardware establishment of R. P. Bradley. An addition is being built to the Bradley block to accommodate the plumbing business. Mr. Fulton is ready to furnish estimates on all furnace work and roofing.

Mike Huppel, the pioneer settler on Mabel Lake, is happier than a small boy who has been presented with a baby sister. His brother, who has traveled pretty much the old world over, as acrobat, tumbler and general entertainer, has arrived from Chicago to spend the winter at the Huppel manse away up among the pines.

E. H. Robinson, sign, house and carriage painter, has established himself in Enderby. His first piece of lettering was painting the name and business on the roof of the Harvey block. His work speaks for itself. He is now engaged on a big job of letter work for the Enderby Trading Co., and THE EDENOGRAPH, on the wall of the Bell Block.

The brick masons are finishing the Sharpe block today. This is the last brick building to be erected in Enderby this fall. Chris Hanson, who has had charge of the work on this block and the Bell block, has exercised great skill and taste in the finishing work, giving both buildings a handsome, finished appearance.

L. O. L. No. 446 will celebrate the opening of their new hall in the Bell block by a lodge meeting on Friday, Nov. 4th. Three degrees will be conferred on candidates and the local members will be assisted in the work by members of the Armstrong and Vernon Lodges. Refreshments will be served. The public opening of the new hall will take place later.

A number of citizens met in the reading room last Thursday evening to take up the matter of a library. Mr. Roseman explained the condition in which the matter now stands, and after due deliberation a committee of Messrs. Truesdale, Bell and Harvey was named to inquire into the probable cost and to formulate a plan to organize a literary society for the winter months, to work in connection with the library. The committee is to report to a general meeting to be called by the committee when they are ready to report.

A party of loyal local Liberals went to Salmon Arm on Sunday with Mr. Ross. Just how it happened report does not say, but just when they were all enjoying the ride to the fullest, one of the wagon wheels hit a stump squarely in the middle and the quartette were dumped, caudal over cranium, all in a bunch over a fence into the bush. One of the party bumped his head on a stump, and was considerably injured but they managed to pull themselves together and reached the Arm safely.

Settlers Organised.

At the meeting of the settlers of Enderby district at Wm. Elson's home last Saturday evening, the Association was revived and put in shape to cooperate with the Provincial body in the interests of the settler. Wm. Fenton was elected president of the Enderby branch, S. Teece vice-president, and W. Elson secretary. The main object of the Association just now, is to bring its influence to bear on the Dominion government to secure a refund of the money paid to the government under the old law by the settlers, thus placing the early settler on an equal footing with the man who has taken up land under the free entry act. A committee was appointed to present the matter to Mr. Ross at the meeting in the Town Hall Saturday evening.

Angry Britain.

It seems that the Russian Pacific squadron has made a great blunder, and one that will cause serious complications with Great Britain. Last Friday night, the Hull fishing fleet was fired upon by the Russians, without warning, and one trawler was sunk and several others badly damaged. The captain and mate of one of the fishing boats were instantly killed by Russian shots and many of the fishermen wounded.

The unfortunate affair has caused all England to become enraged, and the government has sent a long and urgent note to the Russian government detailing the circumstances of the attack. The contents of the note have not been given out officially, but it is stated from the foreign office that it contains the significant announcement that "the situation is one which, in the opinion of His Majesty's government, does not brook delay."

Mr. Blair's New Job.

When Mr. Blair resigned his position as chairman of the railway commission, the Conservative press took it as further evidence of his opposition to the Liberal railway policy. That was only eight or ten days ago. Now the assurance comes from Ottawa that Mr. Blair will shortly take up his permanent residence in Montreal, where he intends to open a law office. He has accepted a solicitorship connected with David Russell's many financial interests at the princely salary of $20,000 a year.

"My Friend from India."

An attraction which should please our theatre patrons—particularly those who are fond of a hearty laugh—is "My Friend from India," a world-famous comedy which is to be presented at the Enderby opera house on Friday night. The organization presenting this hilarious mirth producer is known as Walker's Comedians, so called because the director of its destinies is Mr. C. P. Walker, the well-known Winnipeg theatre manager, and also that it may be distinguished from the inferior companies with which the boundless west has been sorely afflicted. There is surely an evening of wholesome fun coming to us on Friday evening.

Policy and Prosperity.

The Nelson Tribune sagely remarks: "Canada has prospered much during the last eight years. So has the United States In the one country the Liberals profess to be a free trade or tariff-for-revenue-only party. The Republicans stand for protection to home industries—high protection at that. If both countries are prosperous, the question arises, what has the policy of political parties to do with the prosperity?

Ready, Aim, Fire!

The executive of the Rifle Association are very anxious that every member should appear at the range on Thursday and Friday of this week, as it is imperitive that the full number of rounds are fired. The men will be arranged in squads so that it will not be necessary to remain at the range all day.

The world is a great wheel of fortune. Take another turn at it.

Just About Home

"All who want to go to hell, keep their seats."

This is a quaint way some revivalists have of inducing the backward ones to stand up. It is not so elegant, but it expresses a truth that might be enlarged upon.

If you don't want to be anything, keep your seat.
If you don't want to do anything, keep your seat.
If you don't want to get anything, keep your seat.

There's nothing surer. Inactivity breads inertia, and inertia—

Speaking of Enderby, let's recount: Did you ever live in a town that had the natural beauties of scenery; the excellencies of location; the possibilities for growth and business!

Perhaps you have, but you never saw anything to surpass it. Situated at the gateway of the most fertile valley ever watered by the hand of Nature, on the banks of the lazily running waters of the winding Spallumcheen; surrounded by thousands of acres of fruit land, grazing land and land for cereals and roots; meadow land, bush land and bench land; the hills clothed in a dense growth of timber; and the town itself compactly built with substantial business blocks and tidy homes—not large but large enough, and growing!—why, bless, you, we have an Eden, did we but know it.

But even in Eden we must keep the hustle up to keep the serpent down.

"Nothing succeeds like success." Of course, we know that success is simply doing things, therefore nothing succeeds like doing things. It seems to be a universal law that the universe itself will slightly tip in the direction of the man or community that tries to help itself. There is no stopping it—"like begets like"—helpfulness breeds helpfulness. No man living in the Okanagan Valley need experience any qualms of conscience for inducing his friends to locate here. It is all one vast garden, and will one day support thousands where today it supports hundreds.

The opportunities for money making are great. And for the comforts of life, no spot in the northern country offers more than here for anything like the same expenditure of labor and money. This is particularly true of Enderby district.

The committee having in hand the matter of town incorporation have not forwarded to the Lieutenant-Governor the petition asking for incorporation. They have three-fourths of the property owners now on the petition and are holding it simply to make it as nearly unanimous as possible. They are assured of seven-eighths of the property holders. Incorporation cannot be granted before January 1st.

With the town placed upon a basis of self government, and run in the interest of the town only, first, last and all the time, Enderby will shortly be made an ideal spot for home-seekers.

With the Talkers

Last Friday evening Ernest Mills, the Socialist candidate for this District, addressed a meeting at the Town Hall. He was assisted by Ernest Burns and Mrs. Burns, Socialist speakers of more or less prominence. The meeting was well attended; in fact, the crowd was larger than that which greeted either Mr. Burrill or Mr. Ross.

Mr. Burns opened the meeting. He told of the ills that the man who labors is heir to, and offered Socialism as a cure for everything. His address was of the kind to make man wish he had never been born, and to stir up a feeling of dissatisfaction in the man who is ever ready to blame someone else for his hard lot. It was not, however, a talk that was calculated to turn men of reason to seek reformation for the evils through the party whose cause he espoused. He did not try so much to show the advantages of Socialism as to tear down the existing order of things.

Mrs. Burns followed her husband. She spoke in a brighter strain, though with done the less venom. Her object of attack was the grinding capitalist, and the slaves she particularly wanted to free were the bachelor boys and girls, whom she pictured as agonizing things, dying for love yet too poor to get together. Her references to local conditions seemed to be particularly uncalled for, and were sure to do more harm than good.

Mr. Mills was the last speaker of the evening His remarks were clear-cut and the impression of sincerity went with every word. He spoke proudly of the growth of Socialism, and pleaded earnestly on behalf of the working class that his hearers would break away from the two old parties and support the cause of Socialism—the workingman's only friend.

On Saturday evening a large number of the electors of Enderby gathered to hear Duncan Ross, the Liberal nominee, tell his story. Mr. Bostock was billed to appear with Mr. Ross, but was suddenly called to Kamloops and drove from Armstrong to Salmon Arm after the meeting Friday night. Mr. Murphy, M.P.P., was to take Mr. Bostock's place, but he, too, failed, and Mr. Ross had to do all the talking.

Mr. Bell acted as chairman, and had many nice things said of him for his brief, pointed remarks. Mr. Ross on being introduced, proceeded slowly to tell all the bad things he knew about the Conservative party, and what good he knew and believed of the Liberal party. It used to be said that when you see one circus you see them all. This can as truthfully be said of political meetings and political speakers. The only difference is in the brand that is given out.

Mr. Ross is a fluent and pleasant speaker, but not by any means a convincing one. There seems to be a doubt behind every expression. The result was that the meeting was somewhat cold and lacking in enthusiasm, though the candidate spoke pleasantly for an hour and thirty minutes.

He prefaced his general remarks with brief references to local issues. Touching on the matter of Refund, he said he had just been waited upon by a committee from the local settler's association. He had never heard of the question before, but since the matter had been brought to his notice he would do what was in his power to have favorable action taken. He was not in a position to speak for the government at Ottawa, not knowing what representation had been made to the department.

The speaker indulged in the usual campaign radiator talk, and blamed the Conservative party for every evil that the Liberals have been asked to adjust. And he went on to show how sincerely desirous the Liberal leaders are to bring about better conditions for the lumber men, and to secure better terms for British Columbia in the construction of the new transcontinental road, but were unable to do so while the Conservative party is in power at Victoria. He referred to the present prosperity of Canada, and contrasted it with the conditions prevailing under Conservative rule. Then the factories were silent and the best of our Canadian young men were going to the United States. Today the factories are working overtime, and our Canadians are flocking home again, and are bringing their good American cousins with them.

Mr. Ross' reference to government ownership was unique. He said in theory he was in favor of such ownership, but did not believe it was possible under the present system of party politics. And then he described the system as he understood it—a system of grab, and filch, and hold—spoils. And the logical deduction that one would draw from his words was that he preferred to hang to this system rather than fight to purify the system and make possible what he confessed was a good thing. Mr. Ross closed without showing why the postoffice is free from the corruption that he would have government-owned railroads get into. And the audience sang "God Save the King" and went home happy.

SALMON ARM ITEMS.

D. Ross was seen here Sunday eve. He seems to be on a still hunt. Why not let the people know what he is going to do with the timber limits around here. Besides, several other important local matters should be explained to the committee in general.

Mr. Hanson, of Revelstoke, is here looking around for a farm.

J. Hart is building a new house on his farm.

Mr. Reed has the lumber on the ground for a house on his farm.

J. W. Murren has his octagonal residence about finished.

Jest So. Jes' So.

Some editors have very little to do when they start to pick holes in the management or editorial work of their contemporaries. Because we desire to apologize to our readers for omiting to publish the school report the week before last owing to a shortage of capital letters which were used in the publication of the prize list of the show, was no reason why THE EDENOGRAPH should reprint the apology under the heading, "Any time will do." If we would sooner leave an item of news out altogether than publish it without capitals and periods, that is our business, and the only ones who have the least right to say anything on the subject are our subscribers. We may not be gifted with Lowery wit [illegible] or have an owl roosting in our office, but when it comes to minding our own business we hope we will always do that.—Advertiser.

Enderby, B. C.

If you cannot make the world laugh with you, it will laugh at you.

RAISE YOUR LIMIT.

It is never safe to venture beyond your depth if you cannot swim. But, on the other hand, if you can swim at all you will learn to swim much better if you venture out into the deep.

Launch out!

Don't hang timidly to the shallows!

This is true of all life; we are too ready to be content with little rather than put forth an effort to get better things. In all branches of business and in every vocation of life, we see men content to do a dollar business when they could have a five-dollar business if they would reach for it; or satisfied with the indifferent development of one talent when they might develop ten talents if they would put forth the effort. Where one man fails because he has over-stepped himself, one hundred fail because they will not step far enough—will not launch out.

In the Okanagan Valley—in Enderby district—there are scores of men on excellent farming land—been there for years—who are as poor today as when they took up the land. They lack faith in themselves and the land they own; they will not reach out. There are hundreds of men in the Northwest who have had their attention directed to this favored section of B. C., and who expect, some day, to locate in the Okanagan Valley. But they are timid—they will not launch out.

If these friends would just look ahead a few years! And build accordingly. If they would but move! They have a fortune within their grasp! There are thousands of acres in this Valley that have never been touched by the plow—land as good as any under cultivation; and other thousands of acres that have only been scratched. If you are a worker we need you in the Okanagan. Here Nature richly repays every effort that is made to help her do the thing well. It is the California of Canada.

Market! We have an ocean of hungry throats to feed. There will never be a lack of market for Okanagan products. The mining sections and the great Northwest will always be hungry for our fruits, and vegetables, and hay, and grain, and our meats and flour and lumber. No section in the Dominion offers opportunities so good.

Launch out! If you are willing to work you are sure to win.

VOTE HONESTLY.

Next week the people of Canada will be called upon to decide between Laurier Liberalism or Borden Conservatism. If this were the only question at stake—if it were simply a question of party politics—it would matter very little which party were elected, for really, it is hard to distinguish between Laurier Liberalism and Borden Conservatism. Canada is bigger than both parties, and will continue to progress in spite of either. But there is a question in this campaign that has never been raised in any other. It is the question of government ownership of the railroad shortly to be built. There is no mistaking the railway policy of the leaders of the two parties. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's government has already entered into an agreement with the Grand Trunk Pacific people whereby the Dominion is to raise seven-eighths of the funds necessary to build the road while the Grand Trunk people raise the other eighth and take a lease on the road for fifty years after it is built. Mr. Borden contends that if the Dominion must raise seven-eighths of the cost of construction, it should raise the other eighth and build and own the road.

It is for the people to decide which policy is to be carried out. They are deciding a question of much more importance than party supremacy. It is whether Canada is to provide the cow, pay for the milking and take the skimmed milk while the railroad builders walk off with the cream, or whether we are to take both cream and milk and pay only for the milking. These words of Goldwin Smith are applicable here. They were given in a recent address before a farmers' convention at Toronto:

"Be not, then, slaves of the machines, or dupes of a party name; cease to hitch up on polling day, 100 on one side and 100 on the other, merely to cancel each other's votes. Mark the ballot in what you believe to be the real interest of the farm and the country—doing thus the best for yourselves, you will be doing the best for all. Let no quarter be given to corruption. If a candidate has been guilty of it, let him not get off with professions and promises, which he will probably break. He is the deadly enemy of the common weal. The worst of it is that people demented by party, are apt to wink at corruption in a partyism; the consequence is that morality in public life is sinking below the common level. Public men in the struggle for power do things which they would be ashamed to do in private life, and for doing which they might even be put in the dock. When a bad case comes up in parliament, one man only is found to prefer his public duty to party—honor to that solitary man."

Boiled Down.

The Toronto Telegram, Independent, gives the following condensed analysis of the Grand Trunk Pacific "bargain": "Why should Canada own the Grand Trunk Pacific railway when Canada merely assumes an indirect liability for seven-eighths of the whole construction cost, and will never be called upon to pay one cent in the discharge of that liability?

"Why should Messrs. Cox, Hays and partners own the Grand Trunk Pacific railway when Messrs. Cox, Hays and partners merely assume an indirect liability for one-eighth of the construction cost, and will never be called upon to pay one cent in discharge of that liability?

Canada endorses the notes which provide credit for seven-eighths of the cost.

Messrs. Cox, Hays and partners incorporate a company which provides credit for one-eighth of the cost.

Canada is merely the endorser of the note, but its endorsation supplies the credit that builds the line.

The company incorporated by Messrs. Cox, Hays and partners is the maker of the note, but the notes of such a company would not build a street railway without the country's endorsation.

If Canada does not pay for the railway when it endorses the notes which build the railway, it is equally true that Messrs. Cox, Hays and partners do not pay for the railway when they make the notes which can be turned into working capital on the strength of the country's endorsation.

Canada is secured against loss from its endorsation, but it is secured by the property which its own credit creates.

The Grand Trunk Pacific promoters arrange to "finance" one-eighth of the cost of a trans-continental line, and own the whole property in fee simple or by a fifty-year lease which completely alienates the ownership of the eastern section from Canadians now living.

"Canada is to get the railway for nothing," and yet Canada provides the credit which finances seven-eighths of the cost of the whole property which Canada will not own.

Surely Messrs. Cox, Hays and partners get the railway for less than nothing when they have only to finance one-eighth of the credit that creates a property which they will own in fee simple or under the easy terms of a fifty year lease.

With The Owl

HANK REKLAW IN THE DARK WOODS.

I WAS much impressed, some little time ago, by hearing a pilot to the skies lay great stress upon what he termed sacrifices in the Christian life. He went on to say that from the cradle of man's second birth to the grave, it is one continuous line of trial, tribulation and sacrifice, and that in the end the faithful scarcely are saved! Is this teaching right? Is there any sacrifice in the Master's work? Is it in harmony with the experience of those dear souls whose lives have been and are being spent practically in His service? Christ did not teach a life of sacrifice. "My yoke is easy, my burden is light," he said. Why, then should we make it heavy and so difficult? All is gain, all is joy, when we live obediently the life He intends for us to live amongst our fellows. To act justly and with mercy, doing our duty daily because it is our duty, is better than sacrifice.

Take the testimony of men and women the world over, whose lives are practical, and manly, and womanly; do they tell of laborious days of sacrifice and sorrow? Not at all. Their's is one long, blessed experience of service, of happiness, of love. They never know the meaning of sacrifice; every moment, every hour, every day, they live quietly, joyfully, always acting in His service; with no pining for anything better, no room for more joy, no thought of reward, here or hereafter. They seek to serve—that's all. Why teach men that service means sacrifice? It does not. To grow we must serve. When we feel that we are sacrificing something to serve another, we had better, first, get the selfishness out of us. Christ sacrificed nothing when he gave his life upon the tree! He simply demonstrated his love for mankind, and He gained as much as we in the exercise of it. It is so in everything we do for others.

When I hear a man talk of sacrificing something for somebody else, it always makes me feel like telling him to think less of No. One. When we forget ourselves in our work we have nothing to sacrifice. I am reminded here of the words of that dear soul, Dr. H. Clay Trumbull, who was known and noted for many brilliant achievements: in the field of letters, of exploration, of research; as an army chaplain, as a public speaker of national prominence; thirty years an editor and writer whose name is a household word in three continents. In a personal letter to the writer, two years before his death, he said:

"If I could not believe in God's constant care of me, with more than a father's love, and more than a mother's tenderness, life wouldn't be worth living to me. You know I am just now, and for about two years have been, a 'shut in,' unable to move without assistance; but it is good to feel that God enables me still to do something in his service for others. I have published two little books from this room, and I have two or three more that I hope will be of service. I could not have done this, had I been able to do my usual work in my office."

Not one word of "sacrifice" there! It might be noted that Dr. Trumbull was spared to finish all the books he had under way, and more, before he was called home. It was all joyous service.

Can't find anything better

That is the opinion of men who are expert fruit growers and have gone over this tract of land. It is right in the town; a few minutes' walk from the Postoffice. Land is continually raising in value. We have sold a number of these blocks, but have a few choice building sites left. You won't find lots of better value. The town will continue to progress; it has only fairly started. Property will continue to increase in value; building lots will never be less valuable than they are today. Your best opportunity is NOW. Price of Lots, $10 to $70

PITHY AND POINTED.

A young man may die but an old man must.

THE LIGHTNING AT WORK.

Steam power is to be superseded by electricity in the government dock yards at Kiel, Germany.

Electricity is to be used to convey passengers to the top of the Washington monument, Washington, D. C.

The electric fan bids fair to supersede the punkah coolies of India. The regular price for four coolies to divide up the 24 hours is six cents each. With electrical fans the work can be done for one-thirty of the cost, and considerable inconvenience may be avoided.

It has been suggested that the electric heaters of trolley cars be connected to the controller on the platform, so that when the highest speed is required the heaters will be cut off. They require some little time to cool off, so that the heating effect will be sufficient. This will reduce the demand for current by the heaters when full speed is necessary. It requires quite a percentage of the total output of the generating plant in the winter to heat the cars.

SCIENCE GLEANINGS.

Large deposits of the rare earths, such as zirconia, thorium, ittrium, etc., have been located in Central Tasmania.

Great Britain's contribution to the immense photograph of the heavens, which is being prepared by all the leading observatories throughout the world, is making rapid progress at Greenwich observatory, according to the report of the Astronomer Royal. The catalogue of star places resulting from this observation is also being printed.

Mr. Albert Wilde, of the Royal Society of Great Britain, has been presented with the Society of Arts Albert medal. This is a most highly prized trophy, and is awarded for momentous discoveries in science. In the present case it was awarded to Mr. Wilde "for the discovery and practical demonstration of the indefinite increase of the magnetic and electric forces from quantities indefinitely small." The modern dynamo is based upon this principle, and it is adopted in all modern dynamos.

THE EDENOGRAPH.
Enderby, Oct. 5, 1904.

If I Should Die Tonight

If I should die tonight
And you should come to my cold corpse and say,
Weeping and heartsick o'er my lifeless clay—
If I should die tonight,
And you should come in deepest grief and woe—
And say: "Here's that ten dollars that I owe,"
I might arise in my white cravat
And say, "What's that?"

If I should die tonight
And you should come to my cold corpse and kneel,
Clasping my bier to show the grief you feel—
I say, if I should die tonight
And you should come to me, and there and then
Just hint 'bout payin' me that ten,
I might arise the while,
But I'd drop dead again.—Ben King's Verse.

Just Let's Be Big.

The virtuous fathers used to say to daughters who had lapsed, "Never you darken that door again." These parents occasionally disowned their sons because they did things they ought not. But fond parents do not express themselves that way quite so much as they did in the good old days agone,—and how fortunate that they have gone!

The world is getting better.

The Little Man is still a bit afraid his family may be disgraced, or he himself lose caste, through the fault of another.

So in turn if his acquaintances happen to have the applause of the world, he gets up close and rubs off all the glory he can make stick to himself.

Should these friends drop into disgrace—or seeming disgrace—he makes hot haste to get out from under.

Oh, it is a fine thing to be loyal: who cares whether the reports be true or false! If our friend stumbles we will help him rise, and in helping him to rise we will rise ourselves. It is a great privilege to pardon: it is better still to look through the fault and see so much to admire that you perceive nothing to forgive.

If your friend reveals his humanity and the rabble forsake him, it is your opportunity---stand by him. If death, disgrace, or poverty comes to your friends---then is the time they need you.

Do not court the rich, the influential, the learned---let them go. They can do without you. "A man is known by the company he keeps"---that is so, and depend upon it, that the man or woman who is intent on associating only with the best, has a very small bank balance of worth and virtue, and the fear is, that some social cyclone will wipe it out.

Be Big, and associate with any one with whom fate casts your lot. The question of "who is my neighbor?" is just as paramount now as it was two thousand years ago.

Your neighbor is the man who has fallen among thieves, been beaten sore, robbed, and left for dead. Your neighbor is the man who needs you.---Fra Elbertus.

B. C.'s Development.

The following article from the Inland Sentinel shows the progress and development of the agricultural industry around Kamloops. The same is true of every farming district in the interior of British Columbia:

"Enquiries have been made recently from all over the United States, Canada and the Motherland, with respect to the agricultural capabilities of this section of the Province. Were those inquirers to drop into Kamloops this week and take a run over to the exhibition building, they would receive such an answer there would be no room for question. Fruits, large and small; legumes, vegetables and dairy products in abundance, show how generous is nature, how fertile the soil and how adapted the climate to the production of these things.

"Within the past five years the amount of land brought under cultivation in the districts tributary to Kamloops, has doubled, and thousands of fruit trees have been planted out where dozens were before. It was said so positively and repeated so often, that British Columbia was a mining, fishing and lumber country only, that it became almost accepted as conclusive that agriculture must always fill a very subsidiary position among the provincial industries. What has been done during the past few years has, however, opened the eyes of the many to the fact that there is no better field for mixed farming and fruit growing than this Province."

Under The Olive Tree

WITH HANK BENLAW

Let's be frank.

Now is a good time to start work in your garden.

Every tree knows where the water is and they send roots after it. Do you?

The man or woman who would be happy must find happiness in his or her work.

A flower garden around every home in Enderby—what an Eden our's would be!

If you have a man about the place that won't obey orders get rid of him—it pays.

"Giving happiness is the only secret of getting it,"—or anything else worth having.

When you hear one man apply an epithet to another, look him squarely in the face—he is that thing.

Thinking and doing go first-rate hitched up together, whether it's on the farm or in the counting house.

The man who can tell us how to reform the world will often refuse to break himself of chewing tobacco.

All men who are in the line of Truth, and are doing their work the best it can be done, are instruments of Deity.

If, when we go to hell, each must carry his own brimstone, must we not, when we go to heaven, carry our own angel food?

It is only mean men who flout the ability that is beyond them, and take flings at the men who do things which they cannot do.

It was Paracelsus who first said, "There are some things that cannot be avoided, but no man need wear side-whiskers unless he wants to."

Boys, you don't have to go to war to become heros. When there is only one piece of pie to be divided between you and sister, let sister have it.

Be very careful how you go into the Best Society. Elbert Hubbard tells of a man who ventured in, once, and sank over his ears. They got him out, but he was never any good afterwards.

A creed is an ossified metaphore. It is the men outside of the church who raise the dust about outworn beliefs—the people inside do not believe anything—they only think they do. Men of the highest type of spirituality are not, and seldom have been, members of a church.—Philistine.

The noblest prayer that a man can offer is this: "God, give me the frankness of a little child." I was returning from the post office the other morning when a little boy with rosy cheeks and big, boyish brown eyes, accosted me with, "Can you build a house? Yes, you build a house, with a stove in it. We want to live in it. Build it with two stoves—a kitchen stove and another stove to keep it warm." And the little fellow stood, confidently expecting the house to be built forthwith. There is a deep lesson in that curly-headed little fellow's frankness. He was ready to ask for what he wanted. He did not waste his own time nor our's getting at it.

In the Pulpits

What the Local Pastors Talked About Sunday

The subject of Rev. Mr. Campbell's sermon at the Presbyterian church Sunday morning was that of Child Training. Without naming a text he referred to the words of Solomon, "Train up a child in the way it should go and he shall not depart therefrom," to express the commonly accepted fact, he went on to show the great responsibility that is placed upon parents and those having children under their care and training. There may, perhaps, be seeming exceptions to the general rule, but it is accepted as a positive truth that the child's early teachings never forsake him and afford strength and help and guidance in the trials and temptations of after life.

This thought comes first in the consideration of the question of child training: the child must be trained. No boy or girl can be brought to intelligent, God-fearing manhood and womanhood without it. Then comes the thought: the child is worth training; and lastly, the child can be trained. There is no more hateful expression than to say that, no matter what is done for a child he will be bad in spite of all. And no man or woman can excuse himself or herself for the conduct of a child upon such grounds as these. There is the imperial "ought" in every case, and, try as we may, we can never get around our duty to those whose lives come under our hands for moulding.

There cannot be a more blessed work for any of us than the moulding of a child's character. The teaching of cleverness is of very little importance compared with the instilling of qualities into the child that give strength of character, honesty of purpose, sincerity and truth. It is of little consequence to grind into the child mind, "Is it an ox."

It is impossible for parents to deceive their children in the matter of sincerity in their Christian experience. If the parent is not sincere himself he scarcely can expect sincerity in the child.

═

The subject of Harvest was preached upon in the Methodist church Sunday evening by Rev. Mr. Roberts, taking for his text Gen. 22: 8. After briefly referring to the harvest of the grain fields, showing the faithfulness of God to His promise made in the text, and how man co-operates with the Divine to bring about the harvest of the crops, he brought the figure down to the moral life of men. There are three fields in which we are sowing: body, intellect and soul. If we sow to the body we reap corruption; when we sow to the intellect and the soul we reap the things that are higher, and life eternal. In sowing to the body by dissipation, over work, laziness, we reap the harvest of a wrecked body, early death, poverty and its resultant vices, disease and impurity.

In sowing to the intellect we may be sowing seeds of death or life. The books we read, our thoughts, our desires, all contribute to our upbuilding or our undoing. We cannot live without taking and giving impressions. Let them be good ones.

The body is the home of the soul. Through the intellect we learn how to worship, but the soul is for worship and love. We sow bad seeds in the soul by actual transgression, but more often by carelessness, indifference, coldness of heart and hypocracy. Not all who say "Lord, Lord" shall enter into heaven, but those who do the will of the Father, shall reap the harvest of eternal life, here and hereafter.

═

Taking for his text the example of Daniel, found in the sixth chapter of that book, tenth verse, Rev. Mr. Venables preached in the St. George church Sunday evening on Prayer and Courage. The secret of Daniel's greatness was in his fear of the Lord. Darius admired Daniel because he was a man of prayer. And how did he pray? If we were to speak to men of praying three times a day, they would say that such a habit might do very well for people leading a retired life, but impossible for a man with work to do.

Was Daniel's a life of retirement: had he no business? Was his a life with no hindrances to prayer? Surely if any man could make an excuse he could, for he was the ruler of the great empire of Babylon. Even if our work or engagements do prevent our doing as Daniel did, yet we may have the spirit of prayer. We can lift up our hearts to our Father.

And now let us look at Daniel's courage. His enemies knew that they could not find anything against him except they found it against him concerning the law of his God. When they had the king make a decree that any man who for the space of 30 days, should make any petition of any god or man, except to the king alone, should be cast into the den of lions, they were sure of catching Daniel. Daniel knew their plans. He knew he was watched. But did he hesitate? No: he said it were better to serve God and die than sin and live.

THE MARKET.

Never, for many a day, was there such a supply of poultry as that on the New Westminster market last market day. The full grown chickens were well represented. They cleared out at from $6 to $8 per dozen. Broilers experienced their share of the prosperity. The younger fry brought from $3.25 to $5 per dozen. Ducks were also numerous and sold out at from $7 to $8 per dozen.

Eggs are still commanding a high price. The case lots were nearly all grabbed up at 40c. Retailed the eggs were bringing 45c per dozen all along the line. The butter was again much in evidence and the price was steady at 30c per pound.

In the vegetable department the trade was very lively. Potatoes were selling at $16 per ton; onions brought $1.50 per sack, cabbage was 40c per sack and turnips were 50c per sack.

All fruits have disappeared with the exception of apples, which were getting from 50c to 90c per box.

The Annual business meeting of the Enderby Rifle Association will be held on Friday, Oct. 28th at 8 p.m., in the Orange Hall, Bell block. All members are requested to be present.
