Miss Stoughten returned to Enderby this morning after three months' tour of the Holy Land.

A branch agency of the Dominion Express Co., has been established at the Magnet Pharmacy.

Honestly now; how much would you give if that fly would stand still long enough for you to swat him?

There is considerable shooting out of season along the Spallumcheen river. Siwashes are the guilty parties.

Port Arthur is advertised to fall on Monday next. Reserved seats on sale at Ed Harrop's preserve counter.

P. G. Holland, of Victoria, has taken the place of T. Sutherland in the post-office, and Mr. Sutherland leaves this evening for the coast.

Messrs. Braden and Johnston are cutting 8 to 10 thousand feet of lumber a day at their mill on the road near Salmon Arm. They employ six men, and find a ready market for their product.

Ashley Hayden had his hand crushed between two heavy timbers at the saw mill last Friday. The wound was dressed by Dr. Bentley, and Hayden went to the Vernon Hospital, Saturday morning.

Dr. McDonald, the popular dentist, was in Enderby from Friday to Monday, but owing to illness was not able to fill his engagements, and left for his home Monday evening. He will return in a few days, and will be found in the east corner of J. C. English's furniture parlor.

The step taken by the Kamloops Lumber Co. to bring to justice the culprit or culprits who maliciously attempted the destruction of property and imperiled the lives of workmen in the Enderby mill, must meet with the hearty applause of the community. No punishment is too severe for the person guilty of such a cowardly and malicious piece of mischief.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Bell returned from their eastern trip this morning. Mr. Bell states that the fair at St. Louis was on a very magnificent scale, the buildings and grounds covering a section of ground one mile wide by two in length. The Winnipeg fair was also most interesting. On his return he visited Nelson, and reports disastrous forest fires are raging in all parts of the country.

Aner Matthews and J. W. Evans have just closed a deal with H. W. Wright whereby they take over the old livery stable. They will erect a new and modern livery barn in a short time. In the meantime they will utilize the building as it now stands, and will do a regular livery business. Mr. Matthews is a practical liveryman, and will give Enderby first-class service.

It has become absolutely necessary for the government to appoint a constable for Enderby. This district has been neglected in many ways by the Provincial government, particularly in the matter of an officer of the law. At present there is no one here to quell any disturbance, or to guard against crime. And the population of Enderby is fully 500—a large part of which is a floating population.

Dr. Simpson has a fruit farm near Salmon Arm that cost him over $5000. He pays $500 yearly as taxes. His apple crop is now ready for shipment. But Dr. Simpson cannot haul his apple crop to Salmon Arm because the government will not repair the road. Last Spring the road-bed slid away, leaving only a narrow walk. The attention of the government was called to the need of repairs; but the entire year has been spent in dilly dallying, and nothing has been done.

Oh, the misery of being a cow! In addition to having to wear a bell, the owners make them climb rail fences, break down garden gates, turn over boxes, lumber piles, and eat up fruit trees, flower gardens, and everything that is green and belongs to other people. Then they convert what they have been forced to steal into milk and take it home to the man, who turns around and sells it to you at eight cents a quart. Some very naughty things have been said about So-bossy, but if our devil is any authority on such subjects, So-bossy will be chewing her cud with Abraham when these mean things called men are toasting their chins where Dives is.

The Weather.

Walter E. Truesdale, government observer at Enderby, furnishes the following record of the temperature, and general state of the weather for the month of August:

At the Range.

Fifteen members of the rifle association attended the weekly practice last Thursday. Several names were added to the membership roll this week. Following is the score: A. Todd 11, R. P. Bradley 4, J. C. English 24, Arthur Emeny 11, Jas. Emeny 14, E. B. Haynes 11, A. Lentgens 4, J. W. Graham 10, C. A. Hancock 17, W. H. Logan 17, S. Waby 12, W. R. Hancock 23, W. H. Hutchison 22, W. E. Truesdale 13, R. E. Wheeler 30.

Wanted—Store hogs, from 60 to 100 pounds in weight; highest price paid for same. Stepney Ranch.

A Cake of Soap.

We have just received a message addressed to "Mrs. H. Walker" asking her to call at the Enderby Trading Co's store and get a cake of soap. It comes all the way from Toronto. John Taylor sent it. Personally, we don't know John, and we hope Mrs. H. does not. He is no gentleman. Any man who will send a letter across the continent to tell our Eve to get a cake of soap, has too much of the serpent in him to get close to our purring corner. We do not know that she will, but we hope the lady in question will abstain from all such wiles of the devil. Her mother fell at a sample, and pulled father down with her. That was some years ago, and never since have women been able to rise above the sample evil.

Mrs. Walker is not home at this writing. When she returns, and the children are tucked snugly into bed, we will deliver John Taylor's message, but don't want her to go gallivanting after Bob Peel for soap samples. We do not use Eclipse soap at our house. If John will send along a stick of his best, we might turn it over to our barber.

Buttermilk is at all times good for the complexion, and also is a fine preventive both of sunburn and freckles, therefore all through the summer months should be used whenever it is possible to get it fresh.

Missionary Study Class.

Mrs. F. H. Hale and Mrs. J. Dunwoodie are the prime movers in the organization of a Foreign mission study class in Enderby. The first meeting will be held to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the home of Mrs. Hale. These classes for the study of missions are the outgrowth of a movement inaugurated at the Ecumenical Conference of Foreign missions held in 1900. During 1902 the plan was tried, and proved most successful. The first course in the regular series was introductory and historical, showing the progress of missions from apostolic times, to the close of the 16th century. The general idea and the special topics have been taken up with great and unexpected enthusiasm in nearly all of the forty women's Foreign missionary societies in the United States and Canada. "A study of India," will take up the attention of the members of the Enderby class.

It is the intention to make these studies fascinating and instructive. All desiring to take part are asked to be present Thursday afternoon.

Whole cloves will more effectually exterminate moths than camphor, tobacco, or cedar shavings.

When a man goes into the kitchen to help his wife, she has to drop everything and wait on him.

Summer Picnic

A general picnic will be held by the Methodist Sunday School on Friday, August 19th, in the grove skirting the shore of the little lake on the Smedley property, adjoining that of Wm. Folkard, three miles from Enderby on the Mara road. The spot is an ideal one, and everything is being done to make the event the happiest ever held, for the children as well as the grown-ups. Swings and games of every kind will be provided, and a big picnic dinner served to all.

Teams will be provided to convey the children to and from the grounds. They will leave the Methodist church promptly at 10 o'clock. Other conveyances are being spoken for to carry those of the adults who have no other means of getting there.

It will be a basket picket. This means that you must take enough with you for yourself and your neighbor to eat. Let the children take with them to the church their baskets of good things, or leave word for the rig to call, and the committee in charge will see that they are taken to the picnic grounds. Dinner will be spread between 12 and 1 o'clock, and the afternoon devoted to picnic sports.

A general invitation is extended to all. Primarily it will be a picnic for the children of Enderby, but an enjoyable day is assured to everybody who will take part.

$500 Reward

The Kamloops Lumber Company, Ltd., offers the above reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who, on or about the 14th day of August, wilfully and maliciously placed a piece of timber in two pulleys on the lower floor of the mill, thereby endangering life and property.

Notice is given that on account of the above occurrence, no one excepting employees on duty shall be allowed under any circumstances on the mill premises without written permission obtained from our office, and anyone found trespassing thereon will be prosecuted.

Big Fruit Crop

A trip through the Salmon Arm country is a revelation to one who has never been that way before, and whose only source of information about the section is from government statistics, and what can be gathered from what is said and written about the place. In the matter of age, Salmon Arm is well up in years; but its development has been slow, and, until recently, rather indifferent. Today, it is stepping out of its comotose period, and soon it will be heard of as the greatest fruit-growing section in British Columbia.

This, of all years, has been the most trying to fruit and vegetable growers,—owing to the drought that has prevailed throughout the interior—but the orchards and gardens of Salmon Arm look as healthy and strong as in any other year, the only effect of the dry spell being in the grade of the fruit. It is smaller than usual, but for flavor and quality it is quite up to the standard.

The orchards of Dr. Simpson, P. Owens, Robt. Turner, Messrs. McVicar, McGuire and Forbes are in excellent condition, and the fruit abundant and perfect in growth. That of E. M. Harris is not up to standard, owing to the lack of cultivation, but the fruit is of good quality, and the trees clean and healthy.

The vegetable gardens throughout the district are in prime condition, the growth of everything but potatoes being up to the average.

The hay and grain fields could not be better, the drought interfering very little, if any, with the growth of the crops.

Salmon Arm is moving rapidly in the direction of finding itself. Two general stores supply the trade with the best on the market. The Coronation Hotel furnishes good accommodation to the traveling public; a boot and shoe maker has recently opened a shop there, and W. E. Pratt, veterenary surgeon and druggist, has opened a pharmacy. J. M. McCallum has established himself in the real estate business, and business generally is showing a marked revival.

Jas. Watteraton, proprietor of the Coronation Hotel, will take charge of it on Sept. 1st. Robt. Seifert, who has had charge for a year, retiring.

Property in Salmon Arm is now on the market, with all objectionable stipulations removed, and there is not any doubt that a building revival will shortly attract attention to the Arm.

Salmon Arm Items.

The apple and plum crop promises to be a bumper one.

The Farmers' Institute meets here on the first Saturday in each month, at 8 p.m.

Arrangements are being made to open an Exchange here for shipping produce and buying supplies.

Will Savage left on Saturday morning for his home, in Vancouver, after spending two weeks holidays camping here.

A very successful and enjoyable ice cream Social was held here on the 12th, under the auspices of the Methodist Ladies' Aid.

There is a noticeable increase in our population, between 30 and 40 settlers having moved here in the past four months. Still there is room for many more.

The B.C. Fruit Growers' Association will hold a meeting here on August 24th, at 2.30 p.m. It is expected that addresses will be given by J. C. Metcalf, president; W. J. Brandreth, secretary; R. M. Palmer, Martin Burrill and Maxwell Smith. Everybody is welcome to this meeting.

To Let — Comfortable furnished rooms for single men. Inquire at the Drug Store.

McDonald Elected.

Advices from Lillooet District this morning state that Mr. McDonald, the Government candidate, was elected in the ballot taken Tuesday, by a majority of 30 to 50. Last reports he led by 32, with some places yet to be heard from.

A Motherless Home.

A shadow of gloom was cast over Hullcar last week by the death of Mrs. G. Parkinson; mother, wife, friend; known and beloved by all. The funeral was held Friday, Rev. Duncan Campbell officiating. Forty members of the Armstrong Lodge of Forresters attended the services in a body. Messrs. J. Crane, D. Crane, Geo. Lynn, D. Matheson, D. Graham and Wm. Pringle acted as pall bearers.

Deceased leaves a husband and six children, the eldest not yet 16. Her death was a great shock to the community. The infant lived but a few hours.

Burning Timber.

Forest fires are doing great damage in the vicinity of Salmon Arm. At Notch Hill and Tappen Siding, men have been fighting fire for several days past. Tuesday night, a week ago, the entire crew of C.P.R. graders, stationed at Salmon Arm, were ordered to Tappen and fought the flames all night. Several hundred feet of track was burned out and had to be replaced. Jas. Howard and Chas. Langsley, settlers at Tappen, lost their cabins and contents.

Like Enderby's Shootists.

General Howard was an invalid guest at a dinner given by a boys' patriotic club. His attention was called to a little fellow who gave evidence of greatly enjoying the dinner. The Mail and Express gives the conversation that took place between them:

"You eat very well, my son," said the old soldier.

"Yes, sir."

"Now, if you love your flag as well as your dinner, you'll make a good patriot," General Howard's eyes beamed on the boy.

"Yes, sir; but I've been practising eating twelve years, and I ain't owned a gun but six months," was the laconic reply.

Random Thoughts.

Contraband of war is anything you don't want the other fellow to have.

There is a sign on the great gate of heaven: "No Bill Collectors Admitted." That's why it's heaven.

When Port Arthur really does take a tumble there won't be a soul left who will believe the news.—Progress.

There have been statesmen cool-headed enough to steer nations through a dangerous crisis who utterly lost their presence of mind when the baby held its breath.

Spices in pickles should be used whole, slightly bruised if desired, but preferably not ground; if ground, they should be tied up in thin muslin bags.

In making pickles use none but the best cider vinegar.

THE EDENOGRAPH.
Enderby, B. C.

The Okanagan Valley has thousands of acres of the most fertile land under the sun waiting for settlers.

A BLOT ON EDEN.

Perhaps we should not say anything about it, but, really, this Indian reservation business is the darkest blot on the face of the earth—about Enderby. Looking up and down the Valley one can see where the white man has entered the bush and cut out a home for himself. Clearings here and there, and yonder, indicate where he has carried his industry, and planted the ensign of progress. Farms, green and yellow with waving grain, show what a little work and perseverance can do. Comfortable homes, well-built barns, healthy orchards, and a happy, contented people.

Turning from this scene in the direction of the Indian reserve, we see a sickening contrast. This vast stretch of land east of the river—the finest in the valley—is wild as nature made it. The Indians have no use for it, and the white man cannot enter upon it.

In the hands of the Indians, it will raise only one crop each year—mosquitoes, because they come without cultivation.

It means something when this can be said of a town. Quoting from a letter from the Toronto Engraving Co. to THE EDENOGRAPH: "It no doubt is a source of much satisfaction to you and your fellow townsmen to know that the town has so completely outgrown itself. We wish the same could be said of all Canada."

WAKING UP.

Tributary to Salmon Arm is one of the best fruit-growing sections in the whole of British Columbia. The soil is a sandy loam; rich, and easily cultivated. It is thickly wooded; but where clearings have been made, and fruit trees planted, the results have been most surprising. Perhaps no section has been more neglected than this. Salmon Arm's development has been retarded in many ways, particularly by its own people. They have failed to realize its possibilities, and have contented themselves with a very little, when they might have had a great deal.

Only recently has there been any awakening. Today, investors are seeking property there, and business men are turning that way. How soon the Arm will attain the position its resources and possibilities warrant rests entirely with those who have the land in hand. If the proper inducements are offered, Salmon Arm will become one of the best agricultural towns on the mainline.

Milk Must be Pure.

Stringent regulations have been drafted for the sale of milk and management of dairies throughout the province. These have been compiled by the provincial board of health and approved by the government, and are now in effect.

Attention is first devoted to cowsheds. It is required that such shall be sufficiently lighted with windows and ventilated; the minimum air space for each cow being 600 cubic feet. Sheds must be thoroughly cleaned out at least once a day, and unpainted interiors must be whitewashed in May and October of each year. Furthermore, drains must be provided leading to outlets at reasonable distance from the sheds. Proper water must be provided constantly, and the receptacles used are to be cleaned regularly.

All milk cans must be thoroughly cleansed with steam or boiling water after being used, and it is unlawful to leave milk in any place where it may be contaminated from the atmosphere or infected with disease germs. Persons employed in the handling of milk are required to notify the board of health of any infectious diseases, and to cease from handling milk until authorized.

Additional regulations are provided as follows: No cow shall be milked for the purpose of obtaining milk for sale

(a) Unless at the time of milking the udder and teats of such cow are thoroughly cleaned;

(b) Unless the hands of such person milking such cow also are thoroughly clean and dry as possible, and free from all infection and contamination;

(c) Unless the cow from which milk is obtained is free from disease;

(d) Unless the cow from which milk is obtained is free from any discharge, and has "cleaned."

(e) Unless the cow from which milk is obtained is a longer period than twenty days before or five days after calving.

Milk intended for sale shall have the following minimum composition:

(a) Fat, 3 per cent.

(b) Solids not fat, 9 per cent.

(c) Total solids, 12 per cent.

Water existing in cows' milk in excess of 88 per cent. shall be an adulteration.

Drugs or coloring matter for any purpose whatever shall not be added to milk offered for sale.

The penalty for breaches of the foregoing regulations, a delendent upon conviction may be fined $100 and costs, or six months' imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the magistrate.

Sunday Amusement in Mexico.

"The American Sunday," the monthly organ of The Sunday League of America, in an article entitled, "What are We Coming To," says:

"Let Americans read this, and let American women blush for shame at their five hundred sisters present on God's day at this shocking exhibition:

El Paso, Texas, March 20.—"The last bull will be killed by Cuco," in large display type, read the headlines of this afternoon's bull fight bill at the splendid new arena, modeled after the ancient Coliseum, recently completed at Jaurez, Mexico, just across the Rio Grande from El Paso. The announcement as a feature of the sport was carried out, indeed, tragically so; for not only did 'Cuco,' whose name is Antonio Fernandez, a celebrated matador, kill the bull, but the beast mortally wounded him, goring the matador just after the populace shouted its plaudits to the daring swordsman.

The bull, the last that entered the arena, was one of four wild Mexican bulls that furnished the Sunday afternoon's entertainment to 500 Mexicans and 2,000 Americans, tourists and residents of El Paso.

All the animals were splendid specimens of bovine flesh, agile, powerfully built and ferocious. The last bull was particularly angry. Maddened by darts thrust into his shoulders as he charged at his tormenters, and his anger intensified by the attacks of daring picadores—two of whose mounts he had gored—the bull was wild with fury, when the trumpeter blew a blast announcing that 'Cuco' would drive his sword into the animal's heart.

The matador stood with sword aimed at the oncoming bull, and as the animal charged did not move from his feet save to slightly lean forward to meet the charge. The sword went deep into the animal's shoulder and on into the heart. The bull dropped to the ground.

'Cuco' turned to lift his cap and sword to the judges, and bow to the applauding audience. In a moment the bull had leaped to his feet and gored the matador through and through. The bull then dropped to the ground dead.

Women fainted and were carried from the arena, while several men applauded the act.

'Cuco' was covered with one of the banderillo's capes and was carried from the ring in a dying condition.

Two consumptives were seized with hemorrhages as a result of the scene, and were taken from the arena. Among the spectators were 500 American women.

Mexicans keep this sport up because of the patronage of American tourists. Strange, indeed!"

Way of Man.

Man of twenty, women plenty;
Wine and wit galore.
Man of thirty, still quite flirty,
Drinking; women more!

Man of forty, would be naughty,
If he had the vim.
Got paresis, went to pieces,
That's the last of him.

HANK PEKLAW IN THE DARK WOODS.

SPEAKING of the Dukhobors, did you never stop to think of the number of people you have met in your experience in life who are, in a sense, dukhobors in everything but diet? All of them are not "religious," as religion is commonly understood, yet all have a belief that is little short of fanaticism. They dukhobor life to themselves and their neighbors until they become a sort of nuisance. Like the Dukhobor, they have convictions, and are honest in them. Laboring under these convictions they say things and do things, in the name of honesty, that bring pain into the lives and homes of others, and do no good.

No man because he is honest, or believes he is, should bind another down to his ideas of Truth. What I know of Truth today may not be, will not be, my ideas of Truth tomorrow—if I am advancing in the way of Truth. Each day I must know more of Truth. If I do not, my ideas shall become stale, and bigotry, like gangrene, shall get into my soul.

The Dukhobor's soul is bound up in his bishop. The soul of the man who dukhobors life is bound up in his ideas of yesterday. While each may always be honest, he will not always be wise. No man can have wisdom who limits his thoughts to those of others or confines his ideas of today to those of yesterday. The Dukhobor has small consideration for his wife and daughters. He is quite willing to hitch them to a plow. So long as he can stand in with his bishop, and takes a jaunt now and again to find Jesus, he thinks he is doing the right thing. His bishop's word is supreme. The mother's word is nil.

History is full of proof. Where such a condition exists Truth is buried beneath the gangrene of bigotry. Nations and men have been made great by mothers and wives of thoughtfulness and love. A priest-ridden people have never stood ace high either in intelligence or morals.

It is so with the man who dukhobors life. He is a stickler for hand-me-down laws, but neglects the spirit. He had a vision of Truth years ago, or custom declares so-and-so to be the case, and he hangs to it, regardless of the need of growth. Truth, like knowledge, remains with us only while we use it. We cannot rest on what we have known of it. Yesterday's ideas turn like sweet milk to clabber.

Canada's Greatness.

Herr A. Wagner, editor of the great German newspaper, the Tageblatt, of Berlin, recently visited Victoria, after traveling through Canada. Herr Wagner's mission to the Dominion is, principally, to obtain trustworthy information regarding the opportunities which this country presents for the immigrants from Germany or Austria, especially those who possess small capital. The work of gathering this information will occupy Herr Wagner fully five months, says the Victoria Colonist.

It is his intention then to return to Germany and deliver a series of lectures, illustrated with many fine photographic views in stereopticon, for the purpose of giving the German people a correct conception of the conditions existing in this part of the world.

Herr Wagner says that it has long been his opinion that Canada is peculiarily adapted as a country for immigrants of the German race, and that while great numbers of Germans and Austrians are going to Brazil, Argentina and other countries of South America, the more congenial climate of Canada and the Northwest, Manitoba, and in British Columbia, should serve as inducements to bring many thousands of those intelligent, thrifty, and hard-working Germans to the Dominion.

It is interesting to observe that it was owing to the representations made by Herr Wagner to the Austro-Hungarian government that the Galicians to the number of twelve thousand came to the Canadian Northwest a few years ago. Herr Wagner interviewed the Austrian and the Hungarian ministers of state, and found them very pleased to learn the facts which he had to present to them regarding the Dominion of Canada. One result of those conferences between Herr Wagner and the members of the ministries was the permission granted immediately afterwards to the agents of the Canadian Pacific Railway and of the Dominion government to open offices in the principal cities of the Austrian empire—a concession which can be best understood by those who have tried, without influence, to obtain similar concessions from European governments.

Upwards of 150,000 emigrants leave Germany and Austria every year bound for the South American countries and the United States. For many years Herr Wagner has made the study of Canadian conditions his work, and he has done splendid service in changing the erroneous idea prevalent throughout Central Europe, that Cadada is not a desirable country for settlers from Germany and Austria.

Besides delivering his course of illustrated lectures throughout the German and the Austrian empires, Herr Wagner will write a number of special articles for the Tageblatt on Canada, and its suitability for the German settler. From what he had seen on his way West, he said he was more than ever convinced that Canada was peculiarly suited for the people of his own country, and that it offered unlimited possibilities for the settlers who should come out to take up land and cast in their lot with the Canadian people.

In British Columbia there was a greater variety of callings open to the settler; the Northwest and Manitoba being mainly attractive for the farming and cattle raising advantages. Here, however, the varied industries of mining, fishing, lumbering, as well as fruit culture and regular agricultural pursuits, offered many inducements to the settler with some capital. Herr Wagner had made earnest representations to the governments of Germany and Austria regarding the necessity of immigrants from those countries landing in Canada with a little money. Many, he was sorry to say, had arrived at Quebec destitute, having not even enough to pay their railway fare westward. He was sure that this state of matters would be remedied at once, and that the class of immigrants arriving from the German countries would be found provided with sufficient funds to carry them, at least, to their destination in the West.

How Long Should We Sleep?

A hard and fast law cannot be laid down as to how long we should sleep, but there seems to be a unanimity among doctors that the number of hours devoted to sleep should be eight. At whatever hour a man retires, he should have his sleep out. Seven hours is probably sufficient for most men, but to take much less than this is a mistake that soon punishes itself. Of course, much depends on the quality of the sleep. The man with healthy mind and body is himself conscious when he has had enough of "Nature's soft nurse," and everyone should be careful not to over indulge in the "chief nourisher of life's feast," for it then ceases to be "sore labor's bath," or the "balm of hurt minds." It is worthy of note that many of the men who have lived to a great age, and many of those who have become distinguished, were in the habit of retiring early and rising early. Franklin said, "He who rises late may trot all day, and not have overtaken his business at night." Dean Swift declared that he "never knew any man come to greatness and eminence who lay in bed late of a morning." Sleep robs a man of a great deal of precious moments in life when it becomes an indulgence. Peter the Great always rose before daylight, whether at the docks as a ship's carpenter, at the anvil as a blacksmith, or on the throne of Russia. "I am," said he, "for making my life as long as I can, and therefore sleep as little as possible."

Be Your Own Fortune Teller.

It might be made a useful thing if we could get into the habit of telling our own individual fortunes, instead of relying upon hysterical or swindling clairvoyants. We should make up our mind to be our own fortune-teller. The usual soothsayer with the itching palm looks at your line of life, your line of luck, your line of fate; but you can tell your own fortune better than he can. Don't look into the lines of your hand: look into your heart, into your mind, into your ways of living. It does not matter how long a distance your fate line may run; but it does matter a great deal how long you are able to stick at a thing that you have once undertaken. Don't believe the gentle witch who tells you that you will fail because your line of fate is broken. But tell yourself that you will fail because your line of effort is so often broken. Never mind the life line or its vagaries. That line has nothing to do with your life or your death. Its shape simply shows how you happened to close your hand and form its wrinkles when you were an unborn baby. But there are other lines that you can read, inside of yourself, and these will tell you some truths about your chances for a long life—or a short one. If you see in your past life a long line of drinks before breakfast—or after breakfast, for that matter—you may predict for yourself a not very long and not very useful life, and be proud of your accuracy as a prophet later on. If you see in yourself other lines of foolishness—late hours, dissipation—if you find yourself sleepy as your work begins, when you ought to be at your best—you may safely predict for yourself shortness of days and lack of usefulness in them.

Small Boy's Diary.

There is a certain 9-year-old boy in town who is keeping a diary. The book was given him last Christmas by a relative, and his father had forgotten all about it until he accidentally found the volume the other day. Curious to see what his small son had written in it, he opened the book and found that the diary had been faithfully kept. Here are a few of the entries:

"I am nine years old today. Looked in the glass, but whiskers ain't sproutin' yet."

"Sassed a boy. Got licket."

"Pop borrowed 10 cents for segar, that makes $1.15 he owes me. Wonder if I'le ever get it."

"Jimmie——stole my ball. I lickt him for it."

"Ast Pop for some of my money and he giv me a nickil. I wan that doler."

"We feloes got up a baseball club today. Ime pitcher. If I had that doler 15 I could get a unaform."

"Pop got paid today and gave me my money."

"Mamma borrid a doler. Darn these people anyway. A feloe can't save nothin."

"Ast Pop about banks. I wan to put my money were nickils aint so skarse."

"Got lickt again."

There was more of this, but "Pop" had read enough. As a result, there was a conference, and now the arrangement is to pay 5 per cent. a week interest, and settle every pay day. The kid got his "unaform."

WITH HANK REKLAW

Praise is a better incentive than criticism.

No man can help another that does not help himself.

Nobody is altogether bad, nor can he be altogether good.

There can be no triumph where there is no willingness to bear the trial.

Truth may not hang well to some people, but most o' us can profit by hanging on to truth.

Someone has said that "some women take boarders so as to afford to have a husband."

The mistakes of our friends may cause us greater distress than the malignity of our foes.

Better to be a barnyard wolf and go hungry to bed, than to live in luxury and not experience the joys of service.

The best proof we know that women are angels, is this: that so many of them can be happy with such a poor excuse for a husband.

The world is one big family. We get from it what we give to it. A smile for a smile, a frown for a frown; good for good, evil for evil.

The brightest jewel in the crown of life is that of service, for service means sacrifice, and no character can reach its best without sacrifice.

Woman's clubs are not altogether bad. It is said that the patent "Batchelor's button" came in shortly after these institutions became popular.

There is more religion in doing your duty today, as well as you can, than there is in pulling a long face and getting upon your knees to tell the Lord how to run things.

In the Pulpits

What the Local Pastors Talked About Sunday

In his Sunday morning discourse, Rev. Mr. Campbell took for his subject the Sabbath. Without naming a text he referred to the commandment, "Remember the Sabbath to keep it holy," and to the words of Christ in Mark 2:27, "the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath." Most men, he said, were ready to admit that the Sabbath, as an institution, was a good and necessary thing. Some take it as a day of rest, others as a day of worship, and others as a day of pleasure. But the Sabbath was ordained by God as a holy day, and if we take from it this character we take from it all that God intended it to be. When we give the day any other character than that put upon it by God, we make His will conform to our's, and use the day that he has given us to satisfy desires that are purely selfish.

Were it not for the Christian and Jewish religions, the world would not have a Sabbath day; and to use it for any other purpose than that ordained by God, is not our privilege. There cannot be any dispute as to the character of the day. The only question is, what is holiness. Rest is not holiness; neither is pleasure. Holiness must be that which is highest and best in man; therefore, if the Sabbath is to be used as God ordained, then we must devote it to the observance of those things which make us better than we are.

The church, Mr. Campbell said, is a means of grace. When we neglect to attend it as such, there can be but one result: there can be no grace. When we refuse to recognize it as a means through which God speaks and works; when we will not submit to discipline, we refuse to accept the means that God has given whereby we can become what He has intended us to be. Whatever men might think about the Sabbath, its use and character, God made it a holy day, and as such it must be recognized.

The saddest feature in the lack of Sabbath observance, is seen in the children. They are permitted to forget the over-ruling power of God, and are reared in ignorance of the religious importance of the Sabbath and its many means of grace. The Sabbath is looked upon by them as a day of indolence and pleasure—not as a day of holiness.

"Knowing and Doing," was the topic of Rev. Mr. Venable's sermon, Sunday evening. Taking for his text the Lord's answer to the Jewish lawyer's question, "What shall I do to inherit eternal life?" "This do and thou shall live," Mr. Venables said: "This man had to learn what every one of us has to learn, that in religion, knowledge and practice must not be separated." Knowledge, he said, is power only when it is put into practice. The chief object of all education should be to enable a man to do the duties of life in the spirit of the Master. The separation of knowledge and practice is simply disastrous. The absence of religious education in our schools was, he thought, a deplorable thing. If we want the youth of the land to grow up to be right thinking, right feeling, right doing, we must begin by teaching them the knowledge of God. Education that is not based and grounded upon the faith of the Gospel of Jesus Christ can only end disastrously. It is the duty of parents, and those who have the care of children, to see to it earnestly that their children are taught in the knowledge of God. There is only one way under heaven whereby we can be saved—and that is in the name of Jesus. What will be our punishment if we fail to teach that holy name to those whom the Lord bade to come unto Him?

As a means of grace and religious education, Mr. Venables spoke earnestly in behalf of family reading and prayer. "I know personally that I have received much help and comfort from family prayers. I always like to visit a home where it is the custom: that lifting up into the hands of God the joys and sorrows and hopes that are common to all. Faith, like a child, must take the shortest steps first, and so we must not despise the day of small belief, and, following the law of Christ even in the small details of Christian duty, we shall go from strength to strength."

The Divine Gift and the possibility of its loss, was the subject of the sermon preached by Rev. A. E. Roberts, Sunday evening. The text was, Judges 16:20, "And he wist not that the Lord was departed from him." The lesson was drawn from the life of Samson, who for twenty years was judge over Israel, and whose immense personal strength has become a proverb. Samson is noted in sacred history as one of the Judges—as a Nazarite from his birth, and as one endowed with supernatural power by the Spirit of the Lord. But his unrivalled bodily strength was counteracted by abject moral weakness, and Delilah used her woman's power over man's love to obtain the secret of Samson's strength. He played too long with sin, and when at last he arose to scatter his enemies as before, he discovered that the Spirit of the Lord had departed from him. Every individual is divinely gifted, though all gifts differ in quality and degree. Each man is unique in the history of mankind—God having given each a separate work to do. But the awful fact remains that we may lose the Divine gift. This loss comes (1) from neglect. Paul's advice to Timothy was, "Neglect not the gift that is in thee." Neglect in any calling means loss. The neglected farm is a positive loss to the owner and the community. Any man that neglects the divine gift brings upon himself the loss of that gift. The loss comes (2) from misuse. We misuse the gift that is in us when we turn it to ulterior ends or motives. Nero writing poetry while Rome suffers; Samson using his power for the gratification of his lower passions; the artist pandering to the lowest in man; these all used their gifts for a wrong purpose. Whenever we use our talents or powers for selfish indulgence, we are making the way easy for the loss of the gift that is in us. The greatest loss comes from (3) sin. This is the greatest enemy to the gift of God. Samson's fall is but a picture of every day experience. "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life. Let us not neglect that gift, for if we do we shall miss the reward of righteousness, and reap the wages of sin.

Keep Smiling.

A cheerful man has a creative power which a pessimist never possesses. There is nothing else which so completely sweetens life and takes out its drudgery, or so effectively eases the jolts on the road, as a sunny, hopeful, optimistic disposition. With the same mental ability, a cheerful thinker has infinitely more power than a despondent, gloomy thinker. Cheerfulness is a perpetual lubricator of the mind; it is the oil of gladness which dispels friction, worries, anxieties, and disagreeable experiences. The life-machinery of a cheerful man does not wear out or grind away so rapidly as that of one whose moods and temper sour and wear the delicate bearings, and throw the entire machinery out of harmony.

An Easy Solution.

One morning as Judge C——, of Virginia, was starting for the town, he was approached by one of his negroes, who with more or less confusion asked:

"Massa, when yo' goes to the c'ot-house will yo' gie me a license? I's gwine to be mar'ed."

"Married, are you, Sam? All right," called the judge, as he hastily drove off.

Arrived at the court-house, he spent a very busy day, and it was not until he was preparing to leave that he remembered Sam's license, and realized that he had not been told the name of the bride-elect.

"The old idiot, he never told me who he wanted to marry, but, of course, it's Lucinda. He's always making eyes at her." So saying, he returned to the court-house and had the license made out in the names of Sam and Lucinda. Sam was the first to greet him upon his return with the enquiry:

"Got my license, massa?"

"Yes, Sam, you old fool. You didn't tell me who you want to marry, but I remembered how you're always courting Lucinda, and got the license in her name."

"Law, massa!" exclaimed Sam, "'taint Lucinda, it's Kyarline. What's I gwine to do?"

"Well," said the judge, "the only thing will be for me to get another license."

"Massa," said Sam, "do yo' pay anyt'ing for dat license?"

"Yes, Sam, a dollar and seventy-five cents."

"Will another license cos' anyt'ing?" said Sam.

"Yes, Sam, a dollar and seventy-five cents more," replied the judge.

After scratching his woolly pate for a few minutes, Sam replied:

"Well, massa, I done axed Kyarline, an' she said "Yass," but dere ain't no dollar an' seventy-five cents diffunde in dem two niggers, so I'll jus' take Lucindy."—Michigan Christian Advocate.
