WARNING.—GLANDERS.

IN districts where the existence of Glanders is suspected and especially in neighbourhoods where actual outbreaks have occurred the adoption of the following precautions by owners of horses and others interested will do much to prevent the spread of the disease and the establishment of fresh centres of infection.

1. Horses or mules having a nasal discharge or other suspicious symptoms should not be admitted to livery or feed stables or yards, blacksmith shops, church or school sheds, railway stock yards, private stables or other places where they are likely to come into direct or indirect contact with animals of the equine species.

2. All stables, yards or sheds used for the accommodation of horses or mules should be regularly and frequently cleansed and disinfected in the manner prescribed below.

3. After cleansing the premises thoroughly, and burning all debris, the interior should be well gone over with hot steam, or boiling water, adding to the latter at least one quart of crude carbolic acid to each five gallons after which the entire surface should be thickly coated with a hot solution of fresh lime wash, to which crude carbolic acid has been added in the above memtioned proportion.

Outbuildings, fences and tying posts with which infected animals have been in contact should also, when possible, be thoroughly treated in a similar manner.

All ordinary harness and stable utensils, which have been in contact with infected animals or infected premises, should be thoroughly soaked in a hot solution of crude carbolic acid of a strength of one part to twenty.

Materials which might be injured by the above treatment such as valuable harness, robes, cushions, etc., which have been in contact with infection should be placed in an air tight room and fumigated with Formaldehyde after which they should be thoroughly cleaned.

4. In stables where outbreaks have occurred or where diseased animals have, inadvertently or otherwise, been stabled, even temporarily, the cleansing and disinfection should be especially thorough and in such cases it is safest to remove and burn feed boxes and mangers when of wood: iron articles can be rendered harmless by passing them through fire or by immersing them for some time in boiling water. All litter from suspected animals should be burned or carefully fenced until used.

5. Farmers and others should, whenever possible, avoid admitting strange horses or mules to the premises occupied by their own animals especially of the same species. It is a good plan to reserve an isolated building for outside horses or mules, but where this is impossible they may be accommodated in cowstables, cattle not being subject to glanders infection. Such horses and mules should be watered from special pails, which, together with all other stable utensils used on or about them, should be carefully cleansed and disinfected before being used for other animals. Stalls occupied by strange horses or mules should be well cleansed and disinfected, and if at all possible, left unoccupied for some time.

6. Where new horses or mules are purchased in or from districts where glanders exist, they should, unless carefully tested with Mallein prior to purchase, be stabled apart and closely watched for some time before being brought in contact with other animals of the equine species.

7. It must be borne in mind that while nasal discharge, or ulceration, enlarged glands, the presence of farcy buds, unaccountable swelling of the limbs and general unthriftiness often characterize cases of Glanders, the disease exists in many animals without, for the time being, any external manifestation whatever, the only means of detection in such cases being the Mallein test, and that these occult or latent cases are in some respects the most dangerous because unsuspected. Our experience shows that it is possible for animals of this class to convey infection to others without themselves developing acute symptoms. It is therefore plain that great caution should be exercised in the purchase or handling of strange horses or mules especially in those districts where the disease has become established.

8. The carcases of animals dying from or slaughtered as being affected with Glanders should, when possible, be burned or, failing this, buried at least six feet beneath the surface.

9. Owners of premises where outbreaks have been dealt with should bear in mind that Inspectors cannot recommend release from quarantine unless disinfection has been carried out in a satisfactory manner and that compensation for animals slaughtered cannot be paid until a certificate of cleansing and disinfection has been received by the Minister of Agriculture.

10. Horse owners should have no hesitation in reporting to this Department or to its inspectors the existence of actual or suspected cases of Glanders. The disease has been spreading rapidly of late years, and it is a matter of public interest that every fresh centre of infection should be discovered and dealt with as promptly as possible.

J. G. RUTHERFORD,
Veterinary Director General.

Department of Agriculture,
Ottawa, March, 1906. 11

The Winnipeg street railway strike is over, the company and the men compromising. The men get one cent an hour increase.

LOCAL NOTES.

T. G. Bell welcomed his new trotting stallion on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wylie and Mr. Wylie Jr. returned on Tuesday from a visit to Vernon. Mr. F. H. Barnes has secured the contract for the residence to be erected on the Wylie estate.

Miss Harvey, of Victoria, is visiting at the home of her brother Mr. H. W. Harvey.

J. Arland left on Tuesday for Three Valley, where he takes a position in the sawmill there.

H. Murray, of Armstrong passed through on Tuesday en route for Revelstoke.

The Veterinary Surgeon General's Department, at Ottawa, states that the report that has been circulated saying that the crusade against glanders had ceased, was not correct. He says that the inspectors will continue their work tillall trace of the disease is eliminated from the province.

A May Day attraction will be afforded Enderby in the Lawn Social to be held on Mrs. Richardson's lawn on May Day under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Ladies Aid.

Construction has commenced on the Kootenay Railway, and ten miles will be constructed running south from Golden.

No little interest has been centred on the "boat" which A Fulton has had under construction during the past few days. On Tuesday it was given its first trial on the river, and to the unbounded satisfaction of the designer and builder, it "swam like a duck." The "rig" consists of a platform, fastened on the top of two cigar shaped water tight compartments, of 12 inches in diameter, pointed at each end. The boat sets high on the surface of the water, and with three persons aboard it is easy work for the man with the oars. Failing to get a suitable gasolene motor, Mr. Fulton intends to fit the boat with a stern paddle wheel, which will be driven in a similar manner to which a bicycle is propelled. An amusing incident occured during the trial trip of the "Flyer," when a well-known citizen demonstrated the fact to his and everybody's entire satfaction, that the "boat" was quite capable of being upset.

Dr. Verner went to Salmon Arm on Sunday on a visit to Lewis Haines, who was so badly injured from an explosion of stumping powder. Dr. Verner found his patient resting easy, and that says his recovery is now certain. The accident occured on Saturday while the injured man was engaged in blowing out stumps. It appears that, having lighted a fuse, he was in the act of carrying away a can containing some thirty sticks of powder and some caps, when a spark from the burning fuse fell in the can and caused a terrific explosion. Mr. Haines was blown away some forty feet and the end of a building close by completely blown out, whilst the roof of another was lifted off. Dr. Verner was speedily summoned to the assistance of the injured man and found that he was suffering from lacerations caused by the pieces of tin and rocks and a portion of one heel blown away. Of course the shock to the system was very severe and marvel is that he was not blown to atoms.

A Compliment.

No greater courtesy could be extended than the one conferred by the 100,000 Club of Vancouver requesting of Wm. Elson, of Eden House, Enderby, the honor of his presence at Vancouver's "Birthday Celebration," held in that city, Friday, April 6th., 1906, by Dr. A. R. Baker, President, and Norman Norcrop, Secretary. Mr. Elson is sorry that he could not accept the honor, especially so, as it augurs well for a growing time for Port Moody. "Never mind, gentlemen," sa's Mr. Elson, "We will have the pleasure of shaking hands yet from the head of the Inlet, to the Narrows."

COUNCIL MEETING

The regular weekly meeting of the City council was held on Wednesday evening, all members being present.

Ald. Worthington introduced a by-law for granting permission to the Columbia Flouring Mills to construct and operate a tramway. This measure was much discussed, owing to the unsettled state of the controversy as to the ownership of the road between Harvey & Dobson's store and the river bank, and over which the tramway would have to run. It was considered by some members to be unwise to grant any such permission at this time. However, the by-law passed its first reading with a slight amendment.

A letter was received from L. Norris, Government Agent, Vernon, re the opening of a road along the line of G. R. Lawes' property and over the hill to Mr. Gunter's place.

Tenders for a slush scraper were opened. W. R. Megaw, Vernon, $12.50, f.o.b., Vernon; B. Francis, Armstrong, $11.00 f.o.b., Enderby. The clerk was instructed to order one from Mr. Francis.

The receipt of prices, etc., of pipe and the materials necessary for the installation of a waterworks system claimed the rest of the session. Many letters were read. The council made a rough estimate, with the prices and other data at their disposal, which totaled $14,000. Adding 20 per cent. for contingencies it was apparent that a gravity system could be installed here at a cost of not more than $20,000. This being so encouraging, the council were of the unanimous opinion that they were warranted in going further into this proposition.

Citizens Meeting.

A meeting of the citizens of Enderby is called for to-morrow, Friday, April 13th., and will be held in the Orange Hall, Bell Block. At this meeting the affairs of Curling Club will be discussed; and also the plans, etc., for the holding of a celebration in Enderby, on May 24th. All interested are asked to be present, and it is hoped that a large number will be in attendance.

Preserve this Issue.

In another column will be found an advertisement signed by the Veterinary Director General, of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, entitled: "Warning.—Glanders." This notice contains much valuable information respecting this scourge; and in the light of this disease being so prevalent among the horses of the valley, we would strongly urge, if not all our readers, at least those who own or handle a horse, to preserve this paper, or cut out the advertisement for future reference in case of need. It behoves all of us to be extremely careful how we handle horses, especially as the disease is so dangerous to human beings; and we hope this warning will receive due attention and consideration.

A lacrosse game will be played in Armstrong on Monday next between Armstrong and Vernon.

We are asked to state that Messrs. Harvey & Dobson, the Enderby Trading Co., and J. C. Metcalfe will close their stores up tight on Good Friday after the arrival of the morning train We are glad to see this, as it gives the boys in the stores a chance to get out. The post-office wicket will be open for one hour after the distribution of the mail for the delivering of letters, etc.,

The World Printing and Publishing Company announces that it has in preparation a review of the industrial, agricultural and commercial conditions and prospects of the province of British Columbia, which it is intended to make the most comprehensive and accurate work of its kind ever issued. To this end the services of experts in their several departments have been engaged. The first edition will consist of 30,000 and will be ready about May 1st.

Notes and Comments

When talking to strangers or visitors it is well for a knocker to keep his hammer out of sight and speak well of all, no matter how small he may know himself to be. The man of average intelligence knows that a knocker despises himself because he is despised by others, and betrays it in his looks. No man ever got rich by knocking other people. Success can't come that way. He will die unregretted and be buried in a shroud of mortgages. Whatever fault you have to find with your fellow townsman, do it to his face like a man, but don't roar like a coward behind his back.

In the light of the uneasiness which the terrible increase of consumption is making all over the world the use of a paper handkerchief is now advocated by leading London physicians, in the hope that the course of of the white plague might be stopped. It is argued that the linen handkerchief, which is carried in the pocket and becomes heated, is necessarily a disseminator of undesirable germs, and, with the aid of the laundries, a constant circulation of deadly organisms is kept up. It is customary in many of the English sanatoria to provide patients with paper handkerchiefs, which, after use, are placed in receptacles where they are immediately cremated. Most of the handkerchiefs used in the sanatoria are of Japanese make, but there are others of English origin. Not only, it is argued, will the spread of consumption be checked, but it will prove to be a means by which a myriad of diseases can be kept under.

We commend the above suggestion to the Provincial Anti-Tuberculosis Society, and to those who are working with the ultimate goal before them of forming a like society for the Okanagan.

Oh city fathers, hear our prayer.
Our wives and little children spare,
Enforce that law most strict and strong
That calls for chain or rope or thong
So stay and hold the frighted steeds
From rushing off at maddened speeds.
Strengthen then the law's strong arm
Shield our babies from all harm
That doth arise from careless man
Who leaves untied his team and van.
Extort the fine that soon will stay
The wild and reckless runaway.
Oh city fathers hear our prayer.

The Interior of British Columbia is to have a college. For some time the scheme has been on foot and being quietly matured by those who had the matter in hand. The college is to be established at Summerland on the Okanagan Lake and the Baptists are the people behind it. It is the intention of the promoters to do the first two years University work in the near future. The whole Okanagan Valley is strongly behind the movement, realizing that one of the chief needs is for an institution where the higher branches of learning can be taught. Many sites have been placed at the disposal of the promoters, together with very large contributions.

The CHURCH CALENDAR

This season of the year of the Episcopal calendar is one of marked contrast, insomuch that the church emerges from the forty days of Lent, a season of penitence and solemnity, into the glorious festival of Easter, the most joyful feast of the Christian Church. Friday of this week is the penitential and solemn day called Good Friday, on which is commemorated the crucifixion and death of our Lord. Then, two days later, the Church rejoices at the triumph of Christ over death, when on the third day He rose again. This day is called Easter Day, which probably derives its name from Eastre, a Saxon Goddess, whose festival was annually kept about the same time as Easter. In the ancient church the celebration of this festival lasted eight days; and at the present day the Sunday following Easter Day, being the octave of that day, is kept as a time of rejoicing. It was formerly the favorite time for performing the rite of Baptism. The day was looked upon as one of relaxation as the austerities of lent were over. A rubric in the Church of England prayerbook states that all communicants shall communicate three times in the year at least, of which Easter is to be one.

To-morrow, Good Friday, is a day of special solemnity in the service of the Catholic church. This day is perhaps the most sacred of the Holy Days of the Church's year, inasmuch as it commemorates the crucifixion of our Lord. This day has been kept as a day of mourning, of rigid fast, and of special prayer from a very early period. For the service on this day special psalms are appointed, and one of the three special collects is a prayer for "all Jews, Turks, heretics and infidels." In England Good Friday is dies non, and all business is suspended. The day in Canada is a statutory holiday, and except among the members of the Episcopal church, meets with no religious recognition.

Hints on Seed Planting.

Nearly everybody sends in their orders for seed planting at one time, and on the first warm day in spring they "make garden," and plant them all in the same day.

If the weather continues warm and fine, quite likely all the seeds will germinate and grow nicely, but if a cold and rainy week follows, then all the tender seeds such as beans, corn, cucumbers, squash and melons rot, and the seedsman gets a raking down for selling poor seeds. The disgusted planter sends to another seedsman and buys a new supply, which he plants, and probably by this time the weather has changed warm again and seedsman No. 2 is the whole cheese.

Gardeners should remember that seeds of mangols, carrot, peas, beets, onions, cabbage, lettuce radishes, turnips and sweet peas are quite hardy, can be planted early and will germinate in one to three weeks, while the tender ones above mentioned should not be planted until settled warm weather, about June 1st, in this locality, when they will germinate in a week or ten days.

To have a succession of fresh, tender vegetables throughout the season you should continue growing seeds and setting out fresh plants every two weeks until August. Sow spinach seed in September for winter and spring use.

A Big Load

The biggest load of logs ever stacked and hauled on sleighs in this province was put up and hauled yesterday at Camp No. 3 of the Bowman Lumber Company, situated about two and a half miles below Camborne, says the Camborne Miner. The load consisted of 42 cedar logs six tiers high and seven logs to a tier, and measured 16 feet 3 inches from the ground to the top of the load, with a width of 14 feet 10 inches. The logs were 16 feet in length, and the number of feet contained in the load was 15,377. It was hauled by two horses and photographs of it were taken by Mr. Tucker of Arrowhead, and the Miner has arranged to have cuts made of the different views, which will be reproduced in a future issue of this paper, together with a descriptive article. The load was put up by J. G. McCarthy and his men, who now hold the record of British Columbia for the biggest load of logs hauled.

My Strangest Case

BY GUY BOOTHBY.

Author of "DR. NIKOLA," "THE BEAUTIFUL WHITE DEVIL," "PHAROS, THE EGYPTIAN," Etc.

(Copyrighted, 1905, by Ward, Lock & Co.)

Taken altogether, it was a room that had a strange fascination for me. I had been in it many times before, but was always able to discover something new in it. It was a conglomeration of cupboards and shelves. A large variety of costumes hung upon the pegs in the walls, ranging from soldier's uniforms to beggar's rags. There were wigs of all sorts and descriptions on blocks, pads of every possible order and for every part of the body, humps for hunchbacks, wooden legs, boots ranging from the patent leather of the dandy to the toeless foot-covering of the beggar. There were hats in abundance, from the spotless silk to the most miserable head coverings, some of which looked as if they had been picked up from the rubbish-heap. There were peddlers' trays fitted with all and every sort of ware, a faro-table, a placard setting forth the fact that the renowned Prof. Somebody or Other was a most remarkable phrenologist and worthy of a visit. In fact there was no saying what there was not there. Everything that was calculated to be useful to him in his profession was to be found in the room.

For my own part I am not fond of disguises. Indeed on only two or three occasions, during the whole course of my professional career, have I found it necessary to conceal my identity. But to this wily little Frenchman disguise was, as often as not, a common occurrence.

Half an hour later, two respectable elderly gentlemen, looking more like professors from some eminent Lycee than detectives, left the house and proceeded in the direction of the Folly theater. The performance was almost at an end when we reached it, and we mingled with the crowd who had assembled to watch the audience come out. The inquiries we had made proved to be correct, and it was not very long before I saw the man I wanted emerge, accompanied by a female, who could be no other than Mme. Beaumarais. Hayle was in immaculate evening dress, and, as I could not but admit, presented a handsome figure to the world. A neat little brougham drew up beside the pavement in its turn, and into this they stepped. Then the door was closed upon them, and the carriage drove away.

"That's my man," I said to my companion, as we watched it pass out of sight. "To-morrow morning I shall pay him a little visit. I think you were quite right in what you said about the money. That woman must have made a fairly big hole in it already."

"You may be quite sure of that," he answered. "When she has finished with him there will not be much left for anybody else."

"And now to get these things off and then home to bed. To-morrow will in all probability prove an exciting day."

I accompanied him to his room and removed the disguise which had enabled me to see Hayle without his being aware of my identity, and then, bidding my friend good night, returned to my abode. Before I went to bed, however, I sat down and wrote a report of my doings for Miss Kitwater. Little as I had to tell, the writing of this letter gave me considerable pleasure. I could imagine it coming like a breath from another world to that quiet house at Hampstead. I pictured the girl's face as she read it, and the strained attention of the two men, who, needless to say, would hang on every word. When I had finished it I went to bed, to dream that Gideon Hayle and I were swimming a race in the Seine for five gigantic rubies which were to be presented to the winner by Miss Kitwater.

Next morning I arose early, went for a stroll along the boulevards, and returned to breakfast at eight o'clock. In the matter of my breakfasts in Paris, I am essentially English. I must begin the day with a good meal, or I am fit for nothing. On this particular occasion I sat down on the best terms with myself and the world in general. I made an excellent meal, did the best I could with the morning paper, but my French is certainly not above reproach, and then wondered when I should set out to interview the man whose flight from England had proved the reason of my visiting Paris. Then the door opened and the concierge entered with the words: "A gentleman to see monsieur!" Next moment, to my overwhelming surprise, no less a person than Gideon Hayle entered the room.

CHAPTER IX.

At the moment that I saw Hayle enter my room, you might, as the saying goes, have knocked me down with a feather. Of all that could possibly have happened, this was surely the most unexpected! The man had endeavored to get me out of his way in London, he had played all sorts of tricks upon me in order to put me off the scent, he had bolted from England because he knew I was searching for him, yet here he was deliberately seeking me out, and of his own free will putting his head into the lion's mouth. It was as astonishing as it was inexplicable.

"Good morning, Mr. Fairfax," he said, bowing most politely to me as he spoke. "I hope you will forgive this early call. I only discovered your address an hour ago, and, as I did not wish to run the risk of losing you, I came on at once."

"You appeared to be fairly desirous of doing so last week," I said. "What has occurred to make you change your mind so suddenly?"

"A variety of circumstances have conspired to bring such a result about," he answered. "I have been thinking the matter over, and not being able to determine the benefit of this hole-and-corner sort of game, I have made up my mind to settle it once and for all."

"I am glad you have come to that way of thinking," I said. "It will save us both an infinity of trouble. You understand, of course, that I represent Messrs. Kitwater and Codd."

"I am well aware of it," he replied, "and in common fairness to myself, I can only say that I am sorry to hear it."

"May I ask why you are sorry?"

"Because you have the honor to represent the biggest pair of scoundrels unhung," he answered. "And in saying this I pledge you my word that I am by no means overstepping the mark. I have known them both for a great many years, and can, therefore, speak from experience."

Before going further with him I was desirous of convincing myself upon the point.

"You knew them, then, when they were missionaries in China, I suppose?"

"That's the first time I have ever heard what they were," he replied. "Kitwater a missionary! You must forgive my laughing, but the idea is too ludicrous. I'll admit he's done a considerable amount of converting, but it has been converting other people's money into his own pockets."

He laughed at his own bad joke, and almost instantly grew serious once more. He was quite at his ease, and, though he must have known that I was familiar with the story, or supposed story, of his villainy, seemed in no way ashamed.

"Now, Mr. Fairfax," he went on, "I know that you are surprised to see me this morning, but I don't think you will be when we have had a little talk together. First and foremost, you have been told the story of the stones I possess?"

"I have heard Mr. Kitwater's ver*sion of it,"* I answered, cautiously. "I know that you robbed my clients of them and then disappeared!"

"I did not rob them of the stones," he said, not in the least offended by the bluntness of my speech. "It is plain that you do not know how we obtained them. Perhaps it's as well that you should not, for there's more behind, and you'd go and get them. No! We obtained them honestly enough at a certain place, and I was appointed to carry them. For this reason I secured them in a belt about my waist. That night the Chinese came down upon us and made us prisoners. They murdered our two native servants, blinded Kitwater, and cut out Codd's tongue. I alone managed to effect my escape. Leaving my two companions for dead, I managed to get away into the jungle. Good heavens! man, you can't imagine what I suffered after that."

I looked at him and saw that his face had grown pale at the mere recollection of his experiences.

"At last I reached the British outpost of Nampoung, on the Burmah-Chinese border, where the officers took me in and played the part of the good Samaritan. When I was well enough to travel, I made my way down to Rangoon, where, still believing my late companions to be dead, I shipped for England."

"As Mr. George Bertram," I said, quietly. "Why under an assumed name, when, according to your story, you had nothing to fear?"

"Because I had good and sufficient reason for so doing," he replied. "You must remember that I had a quarter of a million's worth of precious stones in my possession, and, well, to put it bluntly, up to that time I had been living what you might call a make-shift sort of life. For the future I told myself I was going to be a rich man. That being so, I wanted to start with a clean sheet. You can scarcely blame me!"

I did not answer him on this point, but continued my cross-examination.

"You reached London, and sold some of the stones there, later on you disposed of some more in Amsterdam. Why did you refuse the dealers your name and address?"

Once more he was quite equal to the occasion.

"Because if I had told them, everybody would have to know it, and, to be perfectly frank with you, I could not feel quite certain that Kitwater and Codd were really dead."

"By that I am to presume that you intended, if possible, to swindle them out of their share?" I asked, not a little surprised by his admission.

"Once more, to be frank with you, I did. I have no desire to be rude, but I rather fancy you would have done the same had you been similarly situated. I never was much of a success in the moral business."

I could well believe this, but I did not tell him so.

"When did you first become aware that they were in London?"

"On the day that they landed," he answered. "I watched every ship that came in from Rangoon, and at last had the doubtful satisfaction of seeing my two old friends pass out of the dock-gates. Poor beggars, they had indeed had a hard time of it."

"Then you could pity them? Even while you were robbing them?"

"Why not?" he answered. "There was no reason because I had the stones that I should not feel sorry for the pain they had suffered. I had to remember how near I'd been to it myself."

This speech sounded very pretty, though somewhat illogical.

"And pray how did you know that they had called in my assistance?"

"Because I kept my eyes on them. I knew Mr. Kitwater of old, you see. I watched them go into your office and come out from a shop on the other side of the street."

The whole mystery was now ex*plained. What an amount of trouble* I should have been spared had I only known this before.

"You did not approve, then, of my being imported into the case?"

"I distinctly disapproved," he answered. "I knew your reputation, of course, and I began to see that if you took up their case for them I should in all probability have to clear out."

"It is doubtless for that reason you called upon me, representing yourself to be Mr. Bayley, managing director of that South American mining company? I can now quite understand your motive. You wanted to get me out of the way in order that I might not hunt you? Is that not so?"

"You hit the nail upon the head exactly. But you were virtuous, and would not swallow the bait. It would have simplified matters from my point of view if you had. I should not have been compelled to waste my money upon those two roughs, nor would you have spent an exceedingly uncomfortable quarter of an hour in that doorway in Holywell street."

This was news indeed. So he had been aware of my presence there? I put the question to him.

"Oh! Yes! I knew you were there," he said with a laugh. "And I can tell you I did not like the situation one bit. As a matter of fact, I found that it required all my nerve to pretend that I did not know it. Every moment I expected you to come out and speak to me. I can assure you the failure of my plot was no end of a disappointment to me. I had expected to see the men I had sent after you, and instead I found you yourself."

"Upon my word, Mr. Hayle, if I cannot appreciate your actions, I must say I admire your candor. I can also add that in a fairly long experience of—"

"Why not say criminals at once, Mr. Fairfax?" he asked, with a smile. "I assure you I shall not be offended. We have both our own views on this question, and you, of course, are entitled to air yourself if it pleases you. You were about to observe that—"

"That in all my experience I had never met anyone who could so calmly own to an attempt to murder a fellow-being. But supposing we now come to business."

"With all my heart," he answered. "I am as anxious as yourself to get everything settled. You will admit that it is rather hard lines on a man who can lay his hands upon a quarter of a million of money to have a gentleman like yourself upon his trail, and, instead of being able to enjoy himself, to be compelled to remain continually in hiding. I am an individual who likes to make the most of his life. I also enjoy the society of my fellow-men."

"May we not substitute 'woman?'" I asked. "I am afraid your quarter of a million would not last very long if you had much to do with Mlle. Beaumarais."

"So you have heard of her, have you?" he answered. "But you need have no fear. Dog does not eat dog, and that charming lady will not despoil me of very much! Now to another matter! What amount do you think your clients would feel inclined to take in full settlement of their claim upon me?"

"I cannot say," I answered. "How many of the gems have you realized upon?"

"There were 93 originally," he said, when he had consulted his pocket-book, "and I have sold 60, which leaves a balance of 33, all of which are better than any I have yet dis*posed of. Will your clients be prepared* to accept £30,000, of course, given without prejudice?"

"Your generosity amazes me," I answered. "My clients, your partners, are to take £25,000 apiece, while you get off scot-free, after your treatment of them, with £200,000."

"They may consider themselves lucky to get anything," he retorted. "Run your eye over the case, and see how it stands. You must know as well as I do that they haven't a leg to stand upon. If I wanted to be nasty, I should say let them prove that they have a right to the stones. They can't call in the assistance of the law—"

TOWN & DISTRICT . NOTES .

The Methodist Ladies' Aid will hold a Handkerchief Sale in the Orange Hall on Easter Monday afternoon, April 16. A grand concert is being arranged for the evening, at which an excellent program is promised.

A football club has been organized at Armstrong. Wake up, Enderby!

At a meeting of the Interior Band Association held at Vernon on Tuesday evening last, it was decided to hold the annual meet at Revelstoke on Labor Day.

T. Holiday and F. J. Bird, of Armstrong, figured in an explosion of stumping powder last Friday. Several sticks were being thawed out, says the Advance, when they exploded, together with a box of caps. Mr. Holiday was severely burned, while his companion escaped uninjured; and the house was badly wrecked.

Mrs. A. Richardson came in from Summerland on Saturday on a short visit to friends in town.

Walter E. Truesdale surprised his many friends by a visit to Enderby early in the week, coming in on Sunday's freight. Mr. Truesdale says that he is glad to get back to the mountains, and that there is no climate like that of the Okanagan. He is now district agent for the Confederation Life, with headquarters at Nelson.

We are pleased to see that Mr. Burnet is around again, and that he is recovering from the injuries received as the result of a fall, brought about by an attack of faintness which overtook him last Saturday week.

W. T. Broderick left on Saturday for Revelstoke, after making a short visit to his home in Enderby.

J. A. Morrison, our genial station agent has now an assistant and no longer is the public inconvenienced. Mr. Goddard is the assistant's name, who came from Revelstoke to here.

G. Ormesby left on Saturday for Annis, to open up the shingle mill which the Kamloops Lumber Co., operate at that point.

Geo. Heggie, the popular manager of the Stepney Ranch, is a very busy man these days. In addition to the superintending of the work of laying out the land and the planting of four thousand fruit trees, he is also preparing plans for building a new dairy and cow stable, and the installation of a system of waterworks on the ranch. It is proposed to obtain the water from either a neighboring creek or by an artesian well.

Mr. A. Wheeler sang as a solo, "The Outcast," in the Methodist church on Sunday evening last. Mr. Wheeler possesses a powerful yet musical voice, of exceptional fulness and compass. His rendering of the piece was most impressive, and was much appreciated by the congregation.

Rev. D. Campbell came up from Armstrong on Monday afternoon on business in connection with the proposed new Presbyterian church.

In response to a suggestion from the Mayor, at last week's session, the council placed themselves on record as being in favor of the proposed Sunday legislation which the Lord's Day Alliance of Canada are now bringing before the Dominion House at Ottawa.

Messrs. F. C. Wolfenden and J. McDonald, directors of the Armstrong Light and Power Company spent a few hours in town on Monday last. These gentlemen have a proposition for the supply of electric light to Enderby, which they wish to lay before the council, and which has been given to Mayor Bell, with that intention. This company is willing to supply the corporation with 100 Kilowatts, (equal to about 1400 16 candle power lamps,) for $135 a month. The council would have to pole and wire the town, at an estimated cost of $1500, and put in transformers, and retail the current supplied by the Company. If this proposition is favorably received by the city council the Company will send their consulting engineer to this place to make a report upon the scheme.

Mr. Elson, of Eden House, reports that he is planting out this spring 137 trees, and 200 small fruits. Of the fruit trees, 100 were supplied by the Coldstream ranch at Vernon, and consisted of the following varieties:—Canadian, Baldwin, Salome, Rome and Winesap; while the remainder came from an Oregon nursery. The small fruits came from Mr. Elson's estate at Port Moody. Mr. Elson says that those from the Coldstream were very satisfactory; while on the other hand, those from across the line were most unsatisfactory. In the first place, his order was for 40 trees, of which only 37 were received; and secondly, the order was much substituted. Mr. Elson says that he is pleased to learn that the Coldstream people intend to go extensively into the nursery business.

Mr. and Mrs. Wylie returned on Friday from their trip to the coast, and proceeded to Vernon on a visit to lake points.

Messrs. W. A. Dobson, W. P. Gooch and W. H. Harvey visited Vernon on Monday.

We call attention to the advertisement of the Farmers' Institute, in which it is stated that members can secure stumping powder at a cost of $6.05 per case of 50 pounds, being $3 cheaper than store price. This opportunity of getting powder at cost price is only one of the many advantages attached to the holding of a membership card in this Institution, at a cost of 50 cents.

The rates which have been struck by the Kamloops City council for the yearly taxation are: For general purposes, 2 mills; for school purposes, 5 mills and for interest and sinking fund, 12 mills on the dollar. This makes a gross rate of 19 mills or a net rate of 17.84 mills. By the adoption of the Loan principle in providing for permanent improvements and extensions, the rates which Kamloops citizens will have to pay have been reduced from 29 mills to 19 mills at one jump.

Good Friday, this week, and Easter Monday next week, are both statutory holidays.

A very necessary piece of work in the grading of Mill street, from the track to past the King Edward Hotel, was commenced on Monday, and which when finished will greatly improve the street in from of the new hotel. This will give Messrs. Bell & Murphy an easier and shorter way in which to reach their house; and when the C.P.R. tear down the old shack which stands on their property at this point, the view from the hotel verandah will be greatly improved.

A. B. Currie, of Salmon Arm, who is in the hospital here, is rapidly recovering. Kamloops Standard.

As was reported in our write-up of last week's council meeting it would appear that $20,000 will cover the entire cost of a system of the supplying of water for Enderby. The estimated revenue to be derived from the supply of water to the town is not less than $2,000. So we find that if it cost $20,000 to install the system it would be self-supporting, with a good margin to spare. The interest and sinking fund on $20,000 debentures, for 25 years at 5 per cent. is not quite $1500. Even if the system cost $25,000 it would still be a paying investment.

FIRST ANNUAL REPORT

—OF—

The Burrard Sanitarium, Limited,

and Second Report of The Institution.

A PHENOMENAL RECORD

UPWARDS of one hundred surgical operations were performed, all with complete success, and only one death out of over two hundred patients treated. Seven patients were in the Sanitarium at the opening of the year, 205 were admitted during the year, making a total of 212 treated. Of these, 99 were males and 113 females. 112 were surgical, 81 medical, and 19 obstetrical. 12 patients remained in at the close of the year.

The total days treatment were 3190, an average of 19.46 days per patient.

Out of the 212 patients treated only one death occurred, being less than 1-2 per cent. This one death was due to suppurative pyelitis, complicated with heart disease.

Patients were admitted from the following localities:—

The Baths and Massage Department have been eminently successful under the management of Miss Millington. During the year, 954 treatments were given, and as the patronage has gradually increased, it has become necessary to engage an assistant. Early in the year a souvenir prospectus was published and copies mailed to the many friends of the institution.

The offices, reception rooms, halls, and most of the private wards have been neatly painted and decorated, adding greatly to their appearance. The increase of our work in the East End has necessitated the opening of branch offices in that part of the city for the convenience of our patrons.
