VOLUME 2. NUMBER 4. ENDERBY, B. C., JUNE 7, 1905. PRICE, $2 A YEAR

Enderby Doings

The Kamloops brick yard has a kiln about ready for the fire.

F. H. Hale has acquired valuable lumber interests at Fernie.

The Enderby Brick and Tile company started to burn its first kiln on Monday.

Ira C. Jones is building a two-story residence on Cliff street for Carl Johnston.

Dr. Brouse, of New Denver, expects to take a trip through the Okanagan this month.

A new Presbyterian church will be erected in Enderby this summer. It will be of brick.

There is a Snowball bush in the garden of Mr. Harvey's home that is the pride of the town.

Mrs. R. T. Stokes, from Okanagan Landing, paid a short visit to Miss Garnett this week.

H. W. Harvey's implement shed is filled with all the latest and best farm machinery on the market.

Messrs Strickland & Wellman started their milk wagon on Monday, and are making two deliveries daily.

Wm. H. Hutchison has improved his home property by erecting a handsome fence of fancy-cut pickets.

Frank Fulton, an employe of the K. L. Co., at Annis, was take with a hemorrhage last week and died.

Mrs. F. H. Hale and Miss Hale left on Friday evening on a three-month's visit to their New Brunswic home.

Lathers are at work on the interior of the hotel block. Next week the brick will be on hand for the veneering.

If you have not opened a savings' account in the Bank of Montreal, you are losing interest money and spending the dollars.

J. C. Metcalfe has a stock of Old Country shoes that are attracting attention from those who have crossed the briny.

The bar and sitting room of the Enderby hotel have recently been papered a fantastic shade and are greatly improved thereby.

The American Labor Union, No. 558, has been established in Enderby, and meets every Wednesday evening in the Orange hall.

Ernest and Jim Haynes left on Monday for Calgary. They know of some splendid openings in the Northwest and are looking after them.

The Kamloops Lumber Co. has had a vault, 6x8 inside measurement, built in connection with its office. The company is shipping about 30 carload a month.

H. W. Wright is tearing down the old barns opposite the bank corner. This will greatly improve the property, and may lead in the near future to the erection of a large brick block.

The B.C. Commercial Directory and Information Bureau Co. of Victoria, is preparing a new business directory of the province. Their representative did some business in Enderby this week.

Jas. Jarrett has the contract for the wood work on the residence to be erected by Manager Gibbs, of the Enderby brick yard. The building will be 30x38, story-and-a-half old English architecture.

H. P. Lee has put his Enderby office in the capable hands of A. E. Hale, who is listing a large number of properties for sale. Mr. Lee will leave for Calgary today to meet an excursion of Winnipegers.

M. J. Henry, the popular nurseryman of the Province, is out for business. He has an excellent stock of fruit trees, and declares he is fighting for the Okanagan trade, and is going to get his share of it "if it takes all summer." His ad tells the story.

Just look at that picture moulding received in stock last week by J. C. English. It is the best that money can buy for the trade, and he is now busy framing pictures.

Mrs. J. Wiseman has resumed the management of the Union Restaurant, relieving C. W. Ball, who will take up other business. Mrs. Wiseman will conduct the restaurant in the old-time good fashion.

Brown and Gillen are opening a bottling and soda water business in Hedley and have purchased about $4,000 worth of machinery for the plant and will commence operations in a few days.—Hedley Gazette.

One might travel through many a large town and not find a store so well fitted up and stocked as that of the Enderby Trading Co. The novelty hat rack, displaying 75 hats, is one of the handsomest and most serviceable labor and space savers on the market.

Officers for the ensuing term for Enderby Lodge, No. 35, K. of P., were elected last week as follows: C. C., Chas. E. Strickland; V. C., C. H. Giberson; Prelate, Ira C. Jones; M. of W., Jno Folkard; K. R. and S., A. E. Hale; M. of F., J. H. Bailey; M. of E., Frank Franklin; M. at A., F. R. Lawes; I. G., Walter Robinson; O. G., W. A. Covey.

Contracts for building 22 miles of the Great Northern's Similkameen Valley extension, between Oroville, Wash., and the International line, have been let to Spokane men. A thousand laborers will be employed for a year, as the work is unusually heavy. Material is being rushed into the field and operations will be in full swing within a month.—Hedley Gazette.

Out for Business.

H. P. Lee issued his first property list from his Enderby office this week. He has a large number of good bargains listed.

Speaking of Enderby he says:

Enderby has been especially fortunate in that it has never experienced the always undesirable boom, which so often takes possession of young towns for a time. The uniform growth of our town, though somewhat slow until a year or two ago, has been most satisfactory, and is evidence of genuine merit rather than a period of excitement.

Enderby is in the centre of a rich and fertile district of varied resources, and is a point at which the trade centres from the Salmon River, Deep Creek, Canoe Creek, and the upper and lower Spallumcheen Valleys.

Generally speaking the soil is very fertile, and varies from black muck in the bottoms to the clay and sandy loams on the uplands and slopes. Its great diversity holds forth grand opportunities for the grain grower, cattle rancher, dairyman, gardener, and particularly the fruit grower.

The land in many places is covered with light timber, thus adding much to the wealth of the country by bringing within easy reach of the rancher cheap material for building, fencing, fuel, etc.

Geographically we are well situated, being at the doorway of the best fruit market on the continent of America—Manitoba and the great Northwest—the demand from the source being far in excess of the supply.

The superiority of the quality and flavor of the fruit compared with that grown in other sections of the West, is attributed to the fact that the soil contains sufficient moisture to mature the fruit even in the driest seasons, thus obviating the necessity of irrigation. This also effects the solidity of the fruit, and is especially noticeable in plums, prunes, cherries and small fruits of all kinds, which when shipped long distances remain in a much firmer condition than the same varieties grown in localities where irrigation is necessary, or where there is an excessive rainfall.

As is the case in the development of every new country the pioneers obtained large tracts of land, much of which laid idle for many years. This has had a tendency to retard the progress and settlement of the district. Fortunately, however, that stage in the development of the district is past, and the large tracts are being sub-divided and sold into small holdings, which fact cannot fail to have a beneficial effect on the country.

And as the country is specially adapted to the cultivation of fruit, the small parcels of land will be in demand. Thus the Valley will be capable of supporting a large population.

The price of produce varies according to the season of the year, but the following may be taken as a fair range: Butter 20c. to 40c. per lb. Eggs 20c. to 40c. per doz. Baled hay (timothy) $11.00 to $18.00 per ton. Potatoes $10.00 to $16.00 per ton. Fruits in season:—Apples $1.00 per box of 40 lbs. Plums and prunes 75c to $1 per box of 20 lbs. Pears 4c. to 5c. per lb. Berries $2 to $2.50 per crate of 24 1-lb. boxes. These prices are f.o.b., and the demand is far in excess of the supply.

Besides being the Gateway City of the Okanagan, and the centre of a rich farming and fruit raising district, Enderby is also an important lumbering centre, the head office of the Kamloops Lumber Co. being here, together with one of the company's largest mills—with a capacity of 60,000 a day. It is also headquarters for the Columbia Flouring Mills. In addition to its lumbering, flouring and agriculture, Enderby has the making of a big coal mine at its back door. The Enderby Coal Mines, Ltd., is opening a large seam of coal on its property near town, and a producing mine is promised.

The payroll of the town is about $8,000 a month.

Before the Court.

During the past two weeks Constable Gardom has had eight cases before the magistrates, and only one was dismissed.

E. Bennet, of Mara, was charged with having deer meat in his possession during the closed season, and was fined $25 and costs.

John Cadden, also of Mara, was charged with sending an obscene letter through the mail, and was bound over for trial on $150 bail.

Seymore Chwille, chief of the Okanagan Indians, was charged with stealing $85 and a gold watch from the charmer Miss Selina. On this charge he was discharged, but on the charge of being drunk on the Enderby reserve and having liquor in his possession he was fined $25 and costs. With him were Francois and Johnnie Isaacs, each of whom was fined $25 and costs.

Then came Annie Jasen and Selina, charged with being drunk. They were fined $10 each.

Henry Drew, of Armstrong, was charged with supplying liquor to the Indians. He was heard at Enderby and at Armstrong, Attorney Murphy defending him at the latter place, and was discharged.

Wanted to rent—A 5-room cottage, must be in good repair. Address: EDENOGRAPH office.

The Pound By-Law

The City Council at the last meeting decided to bring the Pound By-Law into effect on and from the 15th inst. After that date it will not be lawful for cattle, horses, goats, sheep, swine, geese or ducks to be at large within the city limits. If found roaming at large it will be lawful for any person to drive or take such animals to the pound and deliver the same to the poundkeeper, and any person rendering this service to the city will be entitled to receive 50 cents for each animal so impounded, and 10 cents each for geese and ducks. It will be the duty of the poundkeeper to receive and impound such animals, and in case the owner or owners are known to him, to at once notify them. If, after ten days, the owner has not reclaimed his property, and is unknown to the poundkeeper, the poundkeeper may advertise the animal or animals for 24 hours by handbills in three conspicuous places, and then forthwith sell them by public auction. For his services the poundkeeper is to receive 50 cents each in respect to animals impounded by him in addition to a charge of 50 cents a day for feed, in the case of horses and cattle, and 25 cents a day for sheep and swine.

Any person attempting to reserve any animal from the custody of the poundkeeper or from any person who is lawfully driving or taking same to pound, will render himself liable to a penalty not exceeding $25 and costs or, in default, thirty days detention in the lock-up.

Any poundkeeper neglecting to provide animals in his charge with food, water and shelter will be liable to a fine of $10 and dismissal from office.

Special Day of Sport.

To offset the disappointment in connection with the 24th of May celebration, the baseball and football teams are arranging an afternoon of sport to take place at the recreation grounds next Wednesday. This is the regular half holiday observed at Enderby, Armstrong and Vernon, and it is the intention to pull off two games of baseball and one of football. The baseball team of Salmon Arm will attend, and either Vernon or Armstrong will be asked to be present.

It is the aim to make the day one of enjoyment to all, and the games will be hotly contested, and therefore good.

Council Business

At the meeting of the City Council last Wednesday evening, all the members were present, Mayor Bell in the chair.

A communication was read from the city clerk of Vernon, stating that that city had discontinued the use of dog tags, as they found them to be a source of danger to dogs, being liable to catch in bushes, etc.

In view of Vernon's experience it was deemed advisable not to enforce clause 2 of the dog by-law.

A letter from the Corporation of Vernon, wishing to sell an electric light plant was read, and the clerk instructed to decline the offer, as Enderby is not yet in position to deal with the question of electric lighting.

The Finance committee reported favorably on the following claims against the city, and they were ordered paid:

H. W. Harvey	$5.00
"	2.25
Thomson Stationery Co.	2.60
"	6.40
H. M. Walker, printing	20.50
Orange Lodge	2.50
Graham Roseman, cash paid out	7.65
D. Brenner	2.50
G. Bell, travelling expenses	2.50
Graham Roseman, 2 month's salary	33.33
	$84.95

The committee on town hall reported they had interviewed the Odd Fellows in reference to the building of a hall, and learned that the Lodge had finally decided to proceed with their project.

A special committee was appointed to purchase a safe for the city.

The By-law relating to the proceedings of the Council, and the assessment by-law were read the third time.

Peter Greyell was appointed pound keeper.

It was decided that the Pound By-law should come into effect on and from June 15th.

The clerk was instructed to write the recreation grounds committee explaining the position of the council with regard to the matter and expressing their hope that the committee would see their way clear to carry the scheme until the council were able to take it over.

A letter was read from the Mayor of Kamloops, advocating a union of the municipalities of the Province, stating that: "It is a need, alike potent to each one of us, that we, as municipalities, often suffer on account of encrouchments upon our rights, from large corporations, as well as by the legislative houses, Provincial and Dominion, which do not, in many instances, sufficiently protect the individual municipality, and in other cases, lays upon them burdens hard to be borne.

"As no doubt you are aware, there is a Dominion Organization known as the "Union of Canadian Municipalities," which has accomplished much before the Dominion Parliament, in the protection of municipal interests.

"The Province of Ontario also has a union of its municipalities, to watch matters of local interest, which has done excellent service. It appears to me that in no Province in our wide Dominion is there so much need of a municipal organization as here in British Columbia. I have written His Worship, Mayor Keary, New Westminster on the subject, intimating that should the different municipalities view the matter with favor, a meeting of the representatives of the B. C. municipalities might be held in the City of New Westminster, during the coming exhibition. I have His Worship's reply, in which he concurs in the suggestion, and states: 'will strongly support the movement.'"

The clerk was instructed to reply, and did so, thus: "Your communication was placed before the Municipal Council of this City at their last meeting, and I am directed, in reply, to inform you that my Council heartily concur in the views expressed by your Worship; they consider the proposition a most excellent one, and should the proposed meeting be finally arranged for, you can depend upon the attendance of a representative from this City."

Alderman Evans gave notice that at the next meeting of the council he would bring in a By-law to enforce the observance of the Sabbath within the city limits.

Will Stop the Baby Play.

Should the United States authorities adhere to their desire for a resumption of the Joint High Commission with Canada, and should the tribunal resume consideration of unsettled matters in dispute between the two countries, it is learned by the Vancouver Province's correspondent at Ottawa, that the Canadian Ministers will do all in their power to reach an understanding whereby the Alien Labor Laws now enforced against one another will be withdrawn. Sir Wilfrid Laurier never made any secret of his opinion that these restrictions against intercourse between the countries is vexatious and unstatesmanlike. The Canadian law was only passed because the United States had shut the door against Canadian labor. If our neighbors are prepared to exempt Canadians from this obnoxious legislation, the Dominion would no doubt gladly respond.

Robt. Bailey has completed the steel fence around the Gibbs property. It is of crimped steel wire, made by the Frost Wire Fence company, of Winnipeg, and in addition to being a handsome fence, is one of great durability and strength. Mr. Bailey is agent for the company here, and takes pride in showing the fence just put up as a sample of what his company turns out.

Togo's Great Victory

Latest despatches from Tokio and St. Petersburg, indicate that the Russians have been practically put out of business on the Pacific. Togo's victory was complete.

Admiral Rojestvensky lies wounded severely in a Japanese hospital. His life is in danger. He changed his flag ship five times during the battle. When his last ship was sunk he was rescued by a torpedo boat. The results show 25 Russian ships of a total fleet of 36 were sunk or captured. A cruiser and three torpedo boats reached Vladivostock. Three cruisers have turned up badly disabled at Manilla. The latter will be interned.

All the Russian battleships except the Orel and Nicolai I. were sunk. The terrible devastation wrought by the Japanese has not been explained from Japanese sources, and probably will not be, but it is believed the battleships were mainly sunk by submarine torpedo boats, used by the Japanese for the first time in active war. The Russian flagship was seen to tremble, a huge sheet of water went over her and she sank. Either this, or the Russian ships were pressed against the coast and into waters previously laid with mines, while the Japanese ships stood off and hammered them to pieces with shot and shell.

Reports state that the Czar is obstinately set against peace.

Vladivostock is the objective point of the next Japanese movement.

JAP VICTORY

Russia, and not only Russia, but the world, is learning a severe lesson in the war with Japan. It is learning that the much despised yellow man is superior in many respects to much applauded white man. It is learning that color does not count for much. It is learning that the yellow man has the courage, the honor, the brains, and the knowledge how to use them. The Russians have been out-generalled and out-fought on land and sea. They have been out-classed in deeds of mercy, deeds of gallantry, and deeds of honor. The "heathen" are teaching us lessons in strategy we never knew before; we are learning from them the practice of a humility that is dignified and elevating. Russia is a nation of ceremonial worship of God; the army goes to war with all manner of prayers and supplications for victory; the generals publish to the world what they are going to do, and then fail in every undertaking. The Japanese do not pray at all—they just fight. And one never knows what they are going to do until it is done.

After the naval victory of last week—the greatest in history—Japan has set the white races a'thinking. "What are we going to do with the little yellow devils," is commonly asked. The same question has been asked of every advancing nation and individual. The question has never been answered by any people. They do not need to have anything done to them or for them. They are doing it themselves. If the white peoples wish to retain the ascendancy, they must do it by meeting every advance of the yellow man. Opium will not do the trick. It must be real merit.

The Japanese victory in the East means more than Russia's defeat. It means the ascendancy of the yellow man, and, to cope with him, the advancement of every white race doing business with, or in competition with, the yellow man. Japan and China combined, and moving forward, shoulder to shoulder, reaching upward to a higher and grander civilization, will make our while peoples step lively there.

It doesn't seem to be so much a question of what are we going to do with the yellow man. Perhaps it is not now, but it soon will be a question of what he is going to do with us.

DOING ONE'S BEST

This habit of always doing one's best enters into the very marrow of one's heart and character; it affects one's bearing, one's self-possession. The man who does everything to a finish has a feeling of serenity: he is not easily thrown off his balance; he has nothing to fear, and he can look the whole world in the face because he feels consicous he has not put shoddy into anything, that he has had nothing to do with shams, and that he has always done his level best. The sense of efficiency, of being master of one's craft, of being equal to any emergency; the conciousness of possessing the ability to do with superiority whatever one undertakes, will give soul satisfaction which a half-hearted slip-shod worker never knows.

"When a man feels throbbing within him the power to do what he undertakes as well as it can possibly be done," says a writer in the Segnogram, "and all of his faculties say 'Amen' to what he is doing, and give their unqualified approval to his efforts,—this is happiness, this is success. This buoyant sense of power spurs the faculties to their fullest development. It unfolds the mental and moral, and the physical forces, and this very growth, the consciousness of an expanding mentality, and of a broadening horizon, gives an added satisfaction beyond the power of words to describe. It is a realization of nobility, the divinity of the mind."

A QUEST.

Long since, there lived a man reputed wise
(Some better things were said of him, some worse),
Who made his life a tireless quest to know
The way and Wherefore of the universe.

He wandered through solutions intricate,
And old and new philosophers he read;
This one converted, but another spake,
And made his faith apostasy instead.

His life was gift with vain analysis,
And subtle disputations held in thrall
His soul, that wildly dreamed to overleap
The mystery Life offers to us all.

But when Age left him twisted, gray and worn
He felt the barren purpose of his quest.
And longed to quite forget his mocking doubts
And live his last, few, trembling days at rest.

But Death had watched him with a cynic's eye—
And marked his shuffling feet, his sight grow dim,
And one still evening stood befre his chair,
And smiled, half kindly, as he beckoned him.

One passing through a certain field of graves
May find a stone of rather ancient date,
Which bears these words, the last philosophy,
Of him whose life they thus commemmorate:

"Here sleeps a man who sought to question God—
Who conjured with the everlasting Why;
Delved deeply into science, creeds and schools,
And learned this truth—that Man is born to die."

—W. L., in N. Y. Sun.

With The Owl

MANY REKLAW IN THE DARK WOODS.

HEAR men talk of their business and their work, if he be a mechanic, as if their occupation were separate and apart from their religion! Yes, and we do hear some surprisingly good people say of this one or that, "Mr. So-and-So is so engrossed in his business he never can find time to do this, or that, or the other"—some religious service, for instance. As if his religion and his work were two distinct things, demanding the exercise of different qualities of character! I would not cause a brother to lose ever so small a particle of faith in any belief that has given to him any comfort in the past, but how absurd it is to think that one can get to heaven by a route different from that in which he works! And isn't it a ridiculous thing to believe that one can have any religion apart from his life—his work! If a man sells booze six days in the week he can't have a religion without the intoxicating frills of the bar on the seventh. If one is cold, and cruel, and grasping in his business, during the week, he cannot put on a different religion on Sunday.

Follow this to a logical conclusion in your own mind and you will discover this, that a man can not have a religion apart from his business or occupation. It is in and through his work that a man expresses himself, and his work will reflect his religion. Men may pray long and loud, or they may not pray at all; they may preach and teach and exhort, or they may never say anything, but whether they say much or little, whatever they say or leave unsaid does not express their religion. That can find expression only in the work they do.

Our week-day doings prove our religion; not our Sunday doings. When men realize this, and conduct themselves in even the minutest detail of business as if they were co-partners with God—what then? Well, then we will not think any more about our religion than we do about our stomach—and when it is well and doing its work we do not know we have a stomach!

An Incident from Life

It happened in Field's tea room. It was at the rush hour and two professional girls wandered in and seated themselves at a table for four. The other two chairs were occupied by two very well known North Side society women, who were not strangers by sight to the professional women, but to whom the professional women were strangers. The one was a matron, young, handsome, noted for her gentle charm of manner and the winsomeness she had brought with her from the south. The other was a member of a northern family long accustomed to the best in life, independent, intellectual, and assertive. They were discussing a servant in tones that could not fail to reach the ears of the two professional women.

"Well you're a wonder if you can get along with her," said the Northerner—"I never had such a vixen in the house. And deceitful! Why a thief in the night is an honest man compared with her."

"Well, that is certainly strange, answered the Southerner. "I have never had a better maid. She is respectful, interested, and most susceptable to kindness, even if her temperment is somewhat peculiar.

"As I say, I don't understand it at all, returned the Northerner. "I tried to do everything I could for her, but she's left no stone unturned to do me harm ever since I discharged her. But you are such a saint.

"Nonsense," interrupted the Southerner, and just then the young girl who had taken their orders hurried in with a flushed face.

"Sorry ladies," she said, "but we are all out of chicken pie."

"Oh, now, that's too bad," said the Southerner, "but we can order something else."

"I'll do nothing of the sort," cried the Northerner. "Perhaps if we hadn't been forced to wait ages we could have had what we wanted. Give me what you have brought in."

The girl was not accustomed to the tone of superior command, and she winced.

The Southerner looked up and smiled at the girl.

"That's all right," she said kindly. "We are in a bit of a hurry and we'll just make these things do to-day."

"Well, it makes me angry," went on the Northerner as the girl turned to do the serving. "Why don't you have enough prepared to serve your customers?" she demanded.

"I have nothing to do with that part of it, ma'am," the girl answered quietly.

The Northerner stiffened, "I hate a girl who will answer back," she snapped. "There now, you've spilled my water."

"I—I beg your pardon, ma'am," said the maid, her voice quivering, "but I—I—

"There, never mind," said the Southerner, "we'll put the napkin over it, so."

The girl straightened with the understanding sympathy, and laid the table neatly. When she turned away the Northerner cried with exasperation.

"For myself, I can't endure a fawning maid. All I have got to say to you is, you're too good. No wonder your maids stay if that's the way you treat them. Who wouldn't? When I want a maid I want a maid, not a friend.

"Well, and don't you succeed? said the Southerner mischievously, and she refused to return to the subject of the first girl.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Cyclone or Two.

"Yes" replied the man from Arkansas when asked if he had ever experienced any cyclones in his locality. "I've been through a cyclone or two, and I don't hanker after any more."

"Can you give us any particulars about them?" was asked.

"Why, yes, a few. When the last cyclone came along I was out in the field plowing with a four-mewl team. I started to run for cover, but I had not gone more'n four rods when the wind picked me up and the next thing I knew I was astride the back of one o' them mewls, and we were both in a tree-top, 50 feet above the ground. The handles had been twisted out of the plow and driven right through the trunk of the tree, and one of the other mewls was hanging to them by his tail."

"That was a queer thing. And so you were left in a tree-top?"

"I was."

"And—and—"

"That's all"

"But I want to ask you—"

"I don't care to say anything more."

"But look here," said the questioner, "you were blown into a tree-top along with a mule, and—"

"Please don't press me, sir."

But can't I ask you how you got down?"

"Oh, yes, you can ask that and welcome, and I'll answer you that some fellers come along and chopped the tree down. I thought you was going to ask me if the wind blew my hatband off, and if I ever recovered it ag'in, and that's a question I hain't going to answer for nobody, no matter who it is."

WITH HANK HEKLAW

Let us have done with this fault-finding business!

Don't you believe it. No soul can live in a dead house.

The man who is growing will find many weeds to choke him.

When your religion makes you blush it is time you changed it.

If you can't appreciate Enderby's possibilities, do not doubt them.

A church parade is no criterion of the size and strength of God's army.

Aren't you glad it happened? It is so much easier to say McGinty than Rojestvensky.

We can better judge a man's religion through his business than by his prayers.

The mercantile world measures a man by his income, but life in the man is measured by his outgo.

Put the oil of kindness into your smiles, and you won't have to worry about so little a thing as your digestion.

Let us stop this cry about "a lost soul." Did you ever see one—did you ever see a damned person?

Old maids live self-possessed until they are 40; after that they don't much care—neither does anybody else.

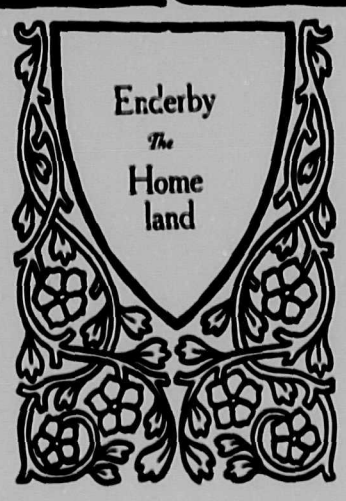
The farming that pays best is that which turns hay, grass and stubble into beef, pork, milk, butter, and eggs, with a side-chute for wool, horses and mutton.

I like the thought that Oliver Wendell Holmes gives us when he said: "The great thing in this world is not so much where we stand as in what direction we are moving."

Enderby has enough at its back to make a prosperous town of 2,500 people. Another year from now, and we will see extensive coal mining operations at our back door—to keep pace with our advancing agriculture and horticulture.

Someone has said that, "A woman can learn to love any man who treats her kindly—if he has money, and prospects of making more." And isn't this as it should be? What right has any man to ask a woman to share his poverty with him?

Man is happiest on this earth when he has congenial environment. Place an artist in the midst of famous paintings and he is in a heaven all his own; place the thinker in the company of thinkers and his paradise is there. Each is as happy as a farmer surrounded by cattle and hogs. And one is exemplifying as much of God in this life as the other—if he is doing his best in his sphere.



The Choicest Section in the Okanagan

Will always be found interesting to the homeseeker, for the homeseeker will always find here a place he can call home. THE EDENOGRAPH wants to be found in every home in the district. It is found in every home in Enderby. Why can't we make it a regular visitor to every home in the country round-about? It would also be an interesting visitor to the home in the East, and there is many a quiet moment in the lives of those dear ones across the seas when they would enjoy reading about the doings of the inhabitants of our Eden—where you, their boy, resides. Two dollars a year, $1 six mos.

What the Local Pastors Talked About Sunday

"Ye shall keep my sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary: I am the Lord." This text, from Lev. 26:2, formed the basis of Rev. Mr. Campbell's discourse in the Presbyterian church on Sunday morning. While admitting that the observance of external religious form was not all-sufficient in a Christian's life, yet if we take away the observance of the Sabbath and fail to reverence the sanctuary, the two great external means of grace established by God Himself, we take out of life all that is highest and best in and to and of and for man.

Aside from the plausible claim that man can serve God without either the Sabbath or the sanctuary, there is this other view that man cannot escape from: God established these institutions. And He said why they should be kept. Man's attitude of indifference to these institutions does not do away with his responsibility for their observance. The claim that man needs the seventh day to devote to fishing, hunting, and the like in order to prepare him for the work of the other six is only a shallow excuse, showing that such an attitude will not stand before even the poor judgement of this world. The Sabbath shall be kept holy and the sanctuary must be reverenced. This does not mean that they shall be used by man for his entertainment and pleasure. They have been set apart by God for a purpose, and He has stated what that purpose is.

A crowded church heard the Rev. Mr. Miller give his opening sermon in the Methodist pulpit on Sunday evening. He took for his text Acts 10:33: "Now therefore are we all hear present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God." We have here an account of a model congregation, a model preacher, a model purpose, and model results. It was a model congregation because they were of one spirit. It was a model preacher because he was sent of God. It was a model purpose because they were there to hear all things that were commanded of God. The results were model because as the preacher spoke the holy ghost fell upon all who were gathered before him.

With this introduction, Mr. Miller referred to his mission here and to the work the church should hope to accomplish. If pastor and people would gather together "to hear all things commanded of God," the results would be as sure as those of the memorable congregation told of in the chapter of our text. He hoped to have the undivided support of his people, feeling that he and they should know only Jesus and his love in their associations and work.

"A Head Like a Cow"

This is usually considered to be not a complimentary allusion, but if all heads were as level as that on a spotted white and red cow I saw last Sunday morning there wouldn't be half the heartburnings in this curious old world of war and woe.

A bunch of cattle were moving their lawn-mowers up and down the vacant lot beside the new hotel. There came upon the scene a poor looking heifer with its head in a barrel. It looked foolish, but not so foolish as a man with a barrel in his head. The other cows became frightened, and moved away. All but the cow with the level head. She sized up the situa- Oyama-like and tried the flank movement.

Walking up to the cow with its head in a sling, she tried to wiggle it off with her nose. This did not work. Then she squared around and poked the heifer in the ribs with her horns. This made the beast step sideways. If it attempted to go forwrad or backward the old cow would prevent it. Sideways, ever sideways, the hooked and hooker moved. They moved twenty feet or so directly into a lumber wagon. When the heifer was pretty well between the wheels the old spotted cow with the level head, hooked the heifer harder than usual, pushing it directly into the wheels. It wheeled quickly, the barrel caught in the wheels and dropped off.

The cow with the spots moved slowly away and continued to mow grass. The heifer surveyed the scenery and wondered what had happened.

A Case of Hogs

The Cranbrook Herald tells a good one on the C. P. R. agent at Rossland. Recently that agent billed a crate containing one hog to China Creek station. The China Creek agent received a crate that day containing an even dozen of animals generally known as pigs. He called down the Rossland agent for billing one hog when there were twelve, and the Rossland agent wanted to know if the China Creek agent had struck a new brand of booze. To further complicate matters a sawmill man to whom the hog was billed, called for his hog and the China Creek agent wanted him to pay express on twelve hogs instead of one. This request was indignantly refused on the grounds that one, and only one hog had been sent for. Rate cards, traffic sheets, and rules were carefully perused, but finally the express was delivered and the matter of payment left to arbitration. The Rossland agent was right.

He shipped one hog, but by the time the crate reached China Creek eleven little squealers had been born.

Bear this in Mind

There may be, no doubt there are, features about other parts of the Okanagan that will equal anything we have about Enderby in the way of nature's provisions for home-life, but certainly none can excell us. Climatic conditions are perfect; and for health and beauty, Enderby's location is unsurpassed. No cold damp weather, or hot sultry days.
