Dear Miss Pfefferkorn :

Thank you very much for allowing me to read that part of your MSS. which deals specifically with clinical nursing. It is being returned herewith.

I am availing myself of the opportunity you have so kindly given me and should like to make the following brief comment. The first ten pages deal in considerable detail with situations already described at some length in my own manuscript. On the other hand, discussion of the developments that took place during the period 1910 to 1920 is apparently limited to two paragraphs (the last on page 8 and the last on page 10). Consequently, very little factual information seems to be available about a decade when great expansion was taking place in the Hospital services and there must have been corresponding changes in the clinical nursing field. It is suggested that any reader who was not herself a Hopkins graduate would find it rather difficult to follow the thread of the historical narrative.

I quite realize, however, that you may not agree that this point is well taken and, of course, I have no intention of insisting upon it.

With kind regards,

yours very sincerely

Ethel Johns
