PREMIER LAURIER IMPRESSED WITH NORTH VANCOUVER

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in a declaration unique in characteristics, stated to the delegation from North Vancouver, as the memorial from the North Shore was presented to him aboard the S.S. Prince George, just as the vessel was being tied up to the Johnson wharf in Vancouver, after having made a trip around the Inlet, viewing on the way the city and district of North Vancouver and the site of the Second Narrows bridge, "I see you have great ideas of your city and district, and so have I."

The government party who made the round trip was composed of the Premier, Ministers Graham and Templeton, Senator Bostock, Gibson and Roy and Members Pardee, McDonald and Ralph Smith.

The day was delightful and every facility was afforded the honored guests to see to advantage the sights on the North Shore. Reeve McNaught and W. J. Dick, the representatives of North Vancouver, who were aboard, outlined the proposals for the Second Narrows bridge and explained the requirements of the country north of Burrard Inlet for the construction of such a connecting link.

When the party returned to the Johnson's wharf they were met by other delegates representing North Vancouver and the Burrard Inlet Tunnel and Bridge Company, among them being E. W. McLean, E. Mahon, L. Rong and J. G. Farmer.

The reeve presented the address which was handsomely bound in green leather with North Vancouver in gold letters on the front.

The address was written in old German text and on the opposite side of the pages were views of the interesting points in the city and district selected especially for this, and exhibited the forest, agricultural, shipping, (the S. S. Lonsdale) mining, residential and other industrial lines.

It read:

To The Right Honorable
Sir Wilfrid Laurier,
Premier of Canada:

Sir,—The city and the district of North Vancouver bid you a hearty welcome to the Pacific Coast, and respectfully express the sincere regret of their citizens that it is not practicable for you at this time to visit the North Shore of Burrard Inlet.

Our municipal bodies and all our citizens welcome you as the Prime Minister in the government of Canada We realize how large a responsibility rests upon your government and how large an influence it exerts for the upbuilding and prosperity of this vast Dominion. We appreciate the high value of the work your government has done, and particularly the beneficent influence of the great new transcontinental railway, and we believe that your present visit is most timely to form a just and adequate idea of the needs of a country of such boundless resources.

We welcome you personally as one who has given many years of able, loyal and patriotic service to this our country, and who has earned, and who enjoys the respect and esteem of all sections of the community.

We thank you and your government for the consideration given to our own immediate interests, and we respectfully ask for your further co-operation in matters of vital importance to our communities.

We appreciate the steps taken by your government to have the entry to our magnificent harbor of Burrard Inlet at the first narrows widened, and we sincerely hope that this work will soon be carried to completion.

We confidently claim and firmly believe that we have in Burrard Inlet, one of the finest natural harbors in the world. It can be made available for an enormous shipping trade by the expenditure of a comparatively small sum of money.

We think that we are entitled to ask that it be put on the same footing as the harbor of Montreal, by being made a national harbor, governed by government commissioners and financed by national funds. This policy is the more urgent as there are at present several transcontinental railway systems seeking an entry to the harbor and to its trade, and it is most desirable that they get this entry on the best possible terms without creating hindrances to the establishment of national control. Already, large vested interests on the south shore of the harbor have to be considered, but we wish respectfully to call attention to over 20 miles of unimpeded waterfront and about 1000 acres of tide flats on the north shore vested in the government, which are simply ideal locations for docks, wharves, warehouses, elevators and manufacturing industries.

We hope that your government will take the matter of the establishment of a national harbor board for Burrard Inlet into early consideration, in order to utilize in the public interest these splendid assets.

We acknowledge the courtesy and kind support of your government in the matter of incorporating the Burrard Inlet Tunnel & Bridge Company, to undertake, with municipal and other funds, the construction of a joint railway and traffic bridge across the Second Narrows of Burrard Inlet, a tunnel under the First Narrows, and about 30 miles of railway to connect existing systems on the south shore with the bridge and tunnel, and to give railway communication along the whole North Shore of the Inlet. The municipalities interested are taking hold of this undertaking in a most liberal manner, and the provincial government has given a first grant of $250,000 in aid of the worthy enterprise. Assurances have been received from time to time that your government would assist these important public undertakings, and we take this opportunity again to bring this matter before you for kindly and favorable consideration. The bridge alone is to cost $1,250,000.

We cherish the hope that the Tunnel & Bridge Company, being owned and consideration of the matter of disposmunicipalities adjacent to Burrard Inlet, may eventually become part of our great harbor system and be the means of connecting the trunk railway systems with our splendid Pacific and National harbor.

We respectfully ask for your earliest consideration of the matter of disposing of Indian Reserves. We are vitally interested in this, as there are over 900 acres of choice land in North Vancouver reserved for the Indians, lying unimproved and contributing nothing in taxes, yet rapidly increasing in value through the expenditures of public money. The Indians have expressed their readiness to consent to the sale of these lands, which are all admirably suited as locations for industrial works. They are meantime of no real value even to the Indians themselves.

We trust that your visit to the Pacific coast will be one of unalloyed pleasure, and of benefit to yourself and to all your party. We should delight to entertain you in North Vancouver, and have you view some of the magnificent scenic resorts there, which have been of deep interest and pleasure to visitors from all parts of the world.

We have the honor to be, Sir,

Your obedient servants,

The City Council of North Vancouver
W. H. MAY, Mayor
THOS. SHEPHERD, City Clerk.

The District Council of North Vancouver,
J. Y. McNAUGHT, Reeve
J. G. Farmer, C.M.C.

BUTCHERS' PICNIC

The butchers' picnic at North Vancouver this year was a distinct departure from the time worn barbecue that has made that annual occurence one of special attraction each year, and the pit whereon the large chunks of beef and mutton were laid to broil, was always a drawing card for sight seers.

It is said that the price of beef this year is such that the butchers could not meet the advance, and as a consequence the time-honored barbecue, annually on the North Shore was replaced this year with a basket picnic.

There were several hundred butchers and the families enjoyed the outing on the green in front of Larson's hotel, on Wednesday. Games and races were provided and these amusements occupied the attention of old and young for the greater part of the afternoon

The usual array,only in larger numbers, of "skid road" attractions was the feature of the east side of the grounds.

The North Vancouver city band was in attendance during the entire afternoon.

The picnic concluded with a grand promenade concert and dance in the evening, in the pavilion adjoining the grounds. This was well patronized by the younger members of the gathering

CITY WINS WATER MAINS CASE

The case of North Vancouver City and North Vancouver District over the power of the former to lay additional pipes along the Lynn Valley road, came up in supreme court chambers before Mr. Justice Murphy on Wednesday morning. Mr. Burns, the solicitor for the district applied for an injunction restraining the city from proceeding with the work of laying the new pipe on the south side of the center of the roadway. In chambers Mr. Burns explained that the municipality had no objection to the city laying another pipe line, but it was desirable that it should be installed as close to the old main as possible, in order that the traffic would not be interferred with as this was his interpretation of the agreement existing between the city and district.

Mr. Justice Murphy said that as he read the agreement it gave the city a roving commission to go all over the road. It would be unreasonable to compel it to put one pipe on top of or under another. He must dismiss the application, he said, but in doing so, did not wish it to be thought that he was laying down a general rule.

Judgments in future must be continued to be determined by the concrete circumstances in each particular case.

The case was brought up in the nature of a test as to the relative power in connection with water rights in the district.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT

The semi-finals and the finals in the tennis tournament being held on the grounds of Mr. A. E. Crickmay, in aid of St. John's church, will be played on Saturday. The games have so far been well contested, and have attracted a great deal of attention, and a large attendance is accordingly expected on Saturday.

The first game of the day will be played at 10 o'clock a.m., when Messrs A. E. Crickmay and R. E. Macnaghten will meet Messrs. W. Vivian and G. D. Curtis.

The afternoon session will begin at two o'clock, when the following games will be played: Winners of the above game vs. Messrs. E. T. Pollok and S. Humphreys. Winners of the above two games vs. P. N. Bayliss and H. McPherson; J. W. Donaldson and F. Diplock, vs. E. Adamson and P.Ward.

WORK COMMENCED

A large gang of city workmen was started on the work of installing the city's new 16in. main along the Lynn Valley road, 25 feet south of the center, yesterday. The prompt action on the part of the civic authorities was taken as soon as the decision in the watermain's case between the city and district was handed down by Mr. Justice Murphy.

Harry Lambert has started the construction of a small bungalow on View street, near the corner of Larson's rd.

Mr. Pete Anderson and his son, in crossing from Pete Larson's ranch on Howe Sound to Horse Shoe Bay, ran into three bear, an old one and two cubs. They were fortunate in having a rifle along with them, and with it despatched two of the quarry ere they retreated into cover. The third got away unhurt. It is stated that the hides were in excellent condition.

HOLLYBURN GARDEN PARTY

Councillor John Lawson's charming home and grounds at Hollyburn, was the scene of a most successful and enjoyable garden party last Wednesday evening.

The entertainment was under the auspices of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church of North Vancouver.

Mr. Lawson's lovely place was found to be an ideal location for a garden party at a similar affair some few weeks ago, and his generous offer to again throw open his residence and grounds to the invasion of the church folk was received readily, and the result was that no time was lost in arranging the second entertainment.

The guests all arrived at Hollyburn about 8 o'clock abord the West Vancouver ferries. The return trip was also made over the water route, and when the concert was concluded,boats were in readiness to take the visitors home again.

An abundance of refreshments supplied the wants in that direction, after which North Vancouver artistes provided a most creditable entertainment of songs and recitations.

The attendance was large and it was not till a late hour when the last item on the program was followed by "God Save the King."

WEDDING BELLS

WEBSTER—BEDFORD

A very quiet wedding was celebrated in St. John's church the first of the week, the contracting parties being Mr. Robert Burrows Webster, of this city and Miss Ada Marion Bedford, of Amersham Common, Bucks, England. The Rev. Hooper officiated. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Webster left on a honeymoon trip to southern climes.

MILLER-MOFLEY

The wedding ceremony was solemnized last Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Renshaw, corner of 17th street and Mahon Ave., of Mr. Robert Miller, of North Vancouver, and Miss Lydia Mofley of Lynn Valley. The Rev. Gillam officiated and only the immediate friends of the contracting parties were present. The bride looked very charming in a neat travelling suit of grey, and was attended by Miss Alice Renshaw. The bridegroom was supported by Mr. John J. Traynor. The happy couple intend taking up their residence in Lynn Valley after spending a short honeymoon in a tour of the coast cities.

BAND CONCERT

The North Vancouver city band gave their regular weekly band concert in the Japanese Gardens on 21st street last evening, instead of in Victoria park. This was done so at the request of the city council, who wished to accommodate the northern residents of the city with a share of the city's musical entertainments provided by Bandmaster Chance and his players.

The concert was well attended and under the pleasant conditions prevailing at the gardens and the quality of the music, was highly appreciatedf

OPTIMISTIC OF DOMINION AID IN BRIDGE CONSTRUCTION

Seen on his return home by a representative of the Express, W. J. Dick expressed the opinion that there would something come of the trip to Prince Rupert with the Government party in relation to the claims of North Vancouver and the desirability of aiding the Second Narrows Bridge project.

While en route, he and Reeve McNaught had several conferences with the Premier Minister and Members Pardee and McDonald, and every opportunity was taken advantage of to vent the just demands of the North Shore residents, not only in the immediate vicinity of North Vancouver, but in the way of opening up a vast country abounding with mineral wealth clear through to Fort George, and including the fine agricultural valleys en route.

Mr. McDonald stated to Mr. Dick that he was convinced of the just claims of North Vancouver and of the Burrard Inlet Tunnel and Bridge Company, and what was most significant of all was the statement from the Premier himself to both the reeve and Mr. Dick, when he expressed the desire to see them in Ottawa at the opening of the session.

Both the North Vancouver representatives took this as a good omen and an indication that Sir Wilfrid had satisfied himself that consideration was due the dwellers on Burrard Inlet.

DELEGATION MEETS SIR WILFRED

When the S.S. Prince George, bearing the Premier's party from Prince Rupert steamed into Burrard Inlet last Wednesday morning, a temporary landing was made at Johnston's wharf at Vancouver, where members of the North Vancouver delegation, including J. G. Farmer, C.M.C., boarded the boat, which then backed away and started on a trip around the Inlet, incidentally taking a detailed survey of the site for the Second Narrows bridge

The North Vancouver representatives were at the premier's elbow as the vessel cruised past the sunny slopes of North Vancouver, and impressed upon him the industrial advantages of the North Shore's 20 miles of waterfront, abutting on one of the finest harbors in the world. The premier and Minister Graham were also given an outline of the facts relative to the Second Narrows bridge and this with a view to obtaining dominion aid.

After the S.S. Prince George returned to Johnston's wharf the memorial for North Vancouver was presented.

The trip Wednesday was primarily a North Vancouver undertaking and time will tell the results.

SCHOOL OPENS MONDAY

The public schools of the province open on Monday morning next at 9 a.m., and will conclude one of the most pleasant vacations, so far as weather conditions are concerned, enjoyed by the children for some years.

The provincial inspectors who assume duty during the coming term are J. S. Gorden, high school inspector, with Messrs. J. T. Pollock and R. L. MacLaurin added to the inspection force.

Since the last school term the education department has enlarged the scope of the free text book branch, now supplying fifth readers, Latin grammars and drawing books to the pupils of the lower high school grades.

THE LIONS FREE FROM SNOW

At certain times of the year, The Lions, which form a distinctive feature of the range of mountains to the north of the city of North Vancouver are practically free from the white mantle. That time has about arrived this year, and the brown bold bluffs standing out in strong relief against the blue beyond, look at their best for ruggedness at the present time.

Soon the white mantle of snow will hide these striking land marks, and the whole will be as one smooth stretch, apparently without ruffel viewed from a long distance.

CONGRATULATED

In committee of the whole last Monday evening, members of the city council congratulated Ald. Schultz on his decision to remain an alderman for the balance of the term, instead of persisting in resigning and of a consequence necessitate an election for the vacancy at this time.

The last and final installment of the big red letter boxes for mail collection throughout the city, arrived on Wednesday, and Mr. Sugden, the mail collector, was all day Thursday tacking them up in their different locations.

CITY BAND ENTERTAINS

The stilness of the night rang with music and revelry on Wednesday evening at the beautiful home of Councillor Thos. Allan in Lynn Valley.

The occasion in many respects marked a departure from the general rule of entertainments and in this connection was the initial appearance of Bandmaster Chance's City Band in Lynn Valley.

It was proposed to give Mr. and Mrs. Allan a little surprise in the way of a serenade, but dame rumor apprised the hosts of what was in store for them, and they accordingly took advantage of the shadow of coming events, and when the band boys arrived, they were exceeding surprised to see, instead of the dim flicker of a light through the window, an array of Chinese lanterns from the street to the house, and around the latter in double rows.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan were prepared, and their handsome residence was thrown open to the large number of guests who were invited to enjoy the surprise.

However, the band took possession, and set up in a circle on the front lawn. Lights were provided and in every detail accommodation was afforded.

A number of pieces were played and then all assembled in the house to partake of a sumptuous spread.

Song and laughter proceeded from the kitchen where the band boys, not being content with blasting their instruments made merry with mingled voices.

After the lunch was partaken of, the band again favored the audience with some dance music which was taken advantage of by those infested with the spirit of the light fantastic.

Ice cream followed during which Mr. Allan mounted the steps and made a very appropriate and taking address, in which he expressed his own and Mrs. Allans appreciation of the kindness of the band in favoring them with a visit. He wished the band every success.

Bandmaster Chance replied in fitting terms and in a comical strain.

Mr. Allan's home, which is the finest residence in the valley at the present time, is not only a credit to that section of the municipality, but also to Mr. Allan's tastes and ability as a designer.

A very short time ago the same spot was occupied with a log shanty surrounded by stumps. Now stands a most handsome bungalow, modern in every way. The interior of the rooms and ceilings are pannelled, and each of the panels is picked fir of the choicest grain. The front room is beautifully laid out with plate rail, meeting a most georgeous and picturesque paper and wide border to match.

The piano was well patronized, and while the band were resting between pieces, songs and instrumental music filled the air within and without with sweetness. Cards and other games were also provided for those who wished this form of amusement.

The large lawn at the front of the house encircled by flower beds, was spread over with seats which were all occupied as the night was delightfully pleasant.

The entertainment did not come to a close until the gong of the last car warned the guests that Lynn Valley was quite a way from North Vancouver by road, instead of by rail.

Final congratulations and good wishes from hosts and guests in turn brought a most enjoyable evening to a close.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Dean, W. H. Stoney, Monroe, A. Wheeler, R. Chance, Whiteside, Fugler, Woodworth, J. M. Fromme, Gibbons, Roscoe, J. G. OUR SILVER STANDS THE TEST OF TIME!

This is an age of ideas, an age of new things, but the people of the period, though always looking for the new, cannot turn from that which has already won its way into popularity and proved its worth.

Birks' sterling silver is one of the latter, its distinctive features and durability being recognized by all who know and appreciate true worth. In this line we are above the throng of manufacturers that cater to the buyers of the world.

Our silver is turned out by craftsmen who are masters of their profession, men who have grown up with the art. An art? Yes, because the silver produced by the famous "Birks" factory is a true work of art.

See our display of this excellent ware, and also remember that "Birks'" silver is sold direct from the factory, giving you the benefit of the large profit of the middle man.

HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION

The recurrence of the annual exhibition of the North Vancouver Horticultural Association and Farmers' Institute, marks an event which should be noted with interest by North Shore residents, and which should be accorded hearty co-operation upon the part of all. As this is the only annual show held on the lower mainland, in which the chief emphasis is placed upon the horticultural features, it will be recognized that the exhibition occupies a field which distinguishes it from the several annual fairs in other places, and a field which affords excellent opportunities for development and extension. There is a very large constituency about Burrard Inlet to whom the encouragement of the cultivation of the garden and the orchard appeals in an especial manner, and from this constituency a very valuable patronage can doubtless be procured by that association which specializes along these lines. It is well worth while from the standpoint of North Vancouver, that the attention of these friends of horticulture should be attracted in this direction.

The local work of the Horticultural Association and Farmers' Institute is of great value and deserves liberal support. There are very few items that render any city more attractive than the cultivation of flowers, the presence of well kept lawns, etc., and without doubt the presence of a well organized and energetic society, whose avowed object is the encouragement of such employment will have much to do as the years go on, with the beautifying of the city in these respects. The society has made provision in its prize list this year for substantial encouragement to these pursuits.

The board of directors have been according the affairs of the society very close attention and have been energetically pushing its interests in every possible way. The result is that the society is in a prosperous condition which should strongly commend it to the active co-operation of the local public. This co-operation may be extended by means of individual membership in the society and also by means of participation in the several efforts of the society from time to time. The annual exhibition which falls this year on September 9th and 10th, is in the first instance dependent for success upon the freedom with which entries are made in the different classes of exhibits. In this respect there are very many who could render valuable assistance by placing on exhibition, articles in their possession which appear in the prize list.

A cordial and widespread movement along these lines would ensure an exhibition of an exceptionally attractive character as for its internal features.

The presence of large crowds during the exhibition is likewise a very important feature in success. In this respect it is within the power of practically everybody to be of assistance. Loyal support to North Vancouver institutions should be a part of the working creed of all residents on the North Shore, inasmuch as this is the sure method whereby those institutions may be made lusty in their youth and launched upon a long career of usefulness and of prosperity.

Last year, notwithstanding the fact that conditions were unfavorable for fruit exhibits, the exhibition proved a pronounced success, and the society had the satisfaction of finding itself with a cash balance on the right side as a result. There is every reason why the results this year should be even more gratifying. Conditions are favorable for excellent fruit and flower exhibits, the success attained last year should encourage many more people to make exhibits in the different classes, and the larger population now at hand should result in a greatly increased attendance.

The board is making a specialty this year of the children's sports, a fact which should be appreciated by parents and children alike and which will doubtless add materially to the success attained.

HEROES OF TO-DAY

The spirit of true heroism has at all times called forth unstinted admiration from the human family, whenever and by whomsoever that spirit has been manifested. Exceptional rewards have been provided and have been conferred upon national heroes, and their names have been immortalized upon the pages of history.

Thomas Caryle in his "Heroes and Hero Worship" has given us a scientific treatment of the subject, in which the several varieties of hero are classified and notable examples of each are adduced and treated in a masterful manner.

Although none would wish for a moment, to detract to even the slightest degree from the well deserved laudations conferred upon those heroes of the race hitherto elevated to positions of honor and of perpetual remembrance among men, there is nevertheless, room for the observation that our ideas relative to the places in which the manifestation of the true spirit of heroism is to be sought, are in need of revision. It is time those ideas were modernized.

The world has made immense strides of progress during the past generation and conditions have developed, under which, not alone in exceptional circumstances such as deeds of bravery during the heat of battle, or high attainment in art, in literature, in science, in religion and in kindred pursuits, such as have been commonly termed the "higher walks of life,"—but likewise in the every day vocations, the common employments of life today there are developed situations to meet which, calls for the exercise of the heroic spirit in the truest sense of the term, and to a degree unexcelled by those whose names appear in the list of great heroes of the race.

The following extract taken from the columns of the daily press of recent date, and emanating from North Yakima, Wash., will serve to elucidate:

"To save the lives of the passengers in the coaches behind him, Engineer William Gordon, of Ellensburg, yesterday gave up his own life when he stuck to his post and set the airbrakes as his engine jumped the track at a switch near Selah station

The big locomotive, which was running at the rate of thirty miles an hour, toppled over an embankment and Gordon and his fireman, Meyers, of Pasco, were crushed to death, but none of the coaches except the mail car left the rails, and none of the passengers were injured"

The pages of history may safely be challenged to produce an instance which more fully exhibits the spirit of heroism. In point of fact, it may be held that such an act manifests a more exalted heroism than do many of those deeds, the performance of which have received national recognition.

Many acts of bravery performed upon the battlefield, and which have been conspicuously rewarded, have been performed under conditions peculiarly fitted to call forth such a spirit if it existed within the man at all, but here is a situation opening suddenly upon a man during the course of the discharge of the every day commonplace work—there is no martial display, there are no surroundings such as would serve to incite to deeds of daring—but out of "cold blood" so to speak, an ordinary man is suddenly confronted by a tremenduous alternative. He can jump, thereby saving his own life and allowing the trainfull of passengers to go to death, or he can stand firmly at his post and lose his own life to save those whose lives are entrusted to him.

Had those whose lives were hanging upon his decision been near or dear to him, therein would have existed an influence that might be expected to turn the scale in favor of the deed heroic, but every such incentive was altogether lacking. Those passengers were absolute strangers so far as he knew. Like a flash he was brought face to face with a terriffic issue, which arose out of the performance of those duties for which he was paid a daily wage. There was no time for deliberation, decision must be made instantaneously, the man's real inner nature found expression in the course that he pursued—he was a hero.

Did ever human being respond more nobly to the supreme call of duty?

In all the annals of history there can be found no instance in which any human being manifested in any act in a truer sense, the essential qualities of the most exalted heroism.

Nor is this at all an isolated instance of such conduct upon the part of men now-a-days, in the ordinary employments of life. Similar instances may be noted in almost any issue of the modern daily press. In all the trades to-day under conditions as they now exist, corresponding circumstances frequently develop and the results are uniformly the same.

The heroic deeds of these men are soon forgotten, their names, far from being immortalized, soon pass into oblivion, excepting as they may be gratefully remembered by those who were immediately benefitted by the sacrifice.

Nevertheless such instances show conclusively that the heroic spirit is diffused to-day throughout all classes of men and women, and that they may be depended upon to show themselves true heroes in the face of conditions which demand such action.

Such instances also instruct us to the effect that the proper place to seek for heroes to-day is among average men and women, among those with whom we exchange the passing nod or the friendly shake of the hand from day to day, among those with whom we are continually brought in contact in the business, in the trades, in the family, in our social or other relationships.

The spirit of heroism was never so widely diffused among all classes, as it is in our day, and it was never more grandly true that the ordinary man can be depended upon to perform the noble part in the time of emergency.

When it comes to a question of trusting
Yourself to the risks of the road,
When the thing is, the sharing of burdens,
The lifting the heft of a load;
In the hour of peril or trial,
In the hour you meet as you can,
You may safely depend on the courage
And skill of the average man.

'Tis the average man and no other
Who does his plain duty each day.
The small thing his wage is for doing
On the commonplace bit of the way.
'Tis the average man, may God bless him,
Who pilots us, still in the van,
Over land, over sea, as we travel,
Just the plain, hardy, average man.

So on through the years of existence,
All mingling in shadow and shine,
We may count on the every-day hero,
Whom haply, the gods may divine,
But who wears the swarth grime of his calling,
And labors and earns as he can,
And stands at last with the noblest,
The commonplace, average man.

PREDICT A RUSH TO SKEENA RIVER

Mining men are turning their attention more and more in the direction of the Skeena river and its tributaries and it is prophesied that before next summer is far advanced there will be a decided rush into different parts of the country.

Ben Severson, a prospector, who has been around Babine Lake this summer, came to Hazelton recently with samples of ore from new finds close to the lake. Some of the pieces were plentifully sprinkled with native silver, occurring as flakes and nuggets in the quartz. Other pieces wer largely composed of what passes f gray copper.

Prospecting for coal in Bulkley valley is being carried on more extensively this year than ever before. Many new seams have been found, some of them reaching over ten feet in width in places where for years it has been considered the seams were too narrow to be profitably mined.

Several claims have beea staked on the Babine and some good ore samples brought in. The values are chiefly silver contained in galena and gray copper, and compare favorably with assays obtained in any part of the district.

The Copper river promises exceedingly well also and there are vast fields yet to be developed in a mining way along the Skeena.

MEDICAL ASSOCIATION AT KAMLOOPS

The Medical Association concluded its two days' sitting in Kamloops with a trip to Fish Lake as guests of Dr. J. S. Burris and Dr. Bennett. The election of officers concluded the business of the annual meeting, the following being selected: Dr. W. O. Weld, Vancouver, president; Dr. C. E. Doherty, New Westminster, vice-president; Dr. A. S. Monroe, Vancouver, secretary; Dr. J. Helmcken, Victoria, treasurer. The next annual meeting of the association will be held in Vancouver.

WILL INSTAL OWN PLANT

The Western Fuel Co. of Nanaimo, alleging that the city is charging them excessive water rates in connection with the operation of their mines have resolved to instal a system of their own. A large force of men ha already been set at work at Chase river from where it is the intention t obtain the supply.

FOLDERS PICTURE NEW SAN FRANCISCO

The Exploitation and Publicity Department of the Panama-Pacific Exposition have issued a twelve-page folder on the proposed exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915. The folder it illustrated with panoramic views of the city, one taken just after the fire and the other taken recently, and two smaller views of the canyons of two streets in the "downtown district," showing the splendid modern appearance of the city. These folders will fit in a regulation business envelope and carry for the one postage. It is planned to request business houses throughout the west to enclose these little booster folders in all their eastern correspondence.

KETTLE VALLEY EXTENSION

L. M. Rece and Co. of Vancouver, contractors on the Kettle Valley railway, have been awarded the contract for a 35-mile extension of this railroad from Rock Creek along the west side of the Kettle river. Construction will commence at once. A 25 mile extension of the same road into Merritt will be commenced shortly.

The gigantic development project of the British Columbia Horticultural Estate Co. at Walachin, B. C., is attracting widespread attention not only throughout England but also in British Columbia on account of the very systematic manner in which the culture of fruit is being taken up. Altogether the property of the company totals 5,000 acres considerable of which is under cultivation and all of which has a plentiful supply of water.

C. McL. Fraser, upon retirement from the principalship of the Nelson public schools, was tendered a farewell reception and presented with a complimentary address and a well filled purse.

The city of Kamloops is adopting stringent license regulations. The provincial regulations have been followed to a considerable extent but in some instances the council have gone one better.

B. C. FRUIT IN WINNIPEG

British Columbia's fine fruit which has been too little known heretofore to be properly appreciated in the east will, beginning this fall, be exhibited annually in Winnipeg through the efforts of the Okanagan Fruit Union and the Canadian Pacific railway.

This year the exhibit was confined to the Okanagan country, but next fall a larger and better exhibit will be held which will include the fruits from other parts of the province.

Heretofore the Winnipeg fruit consumer has known but little about the magnificent fruit grown in this part of the Dominion. He has got the idea that it is more or less like the fruit of California and that it is not to be compared with that grown in Ontario. As a matter of fact, however, the peaches and apples grown in British Columbia are declared by competent judges to be superior not only in quality to the Ontario product but also in size and keeping qualities.

The promoters of these Winnipeg displays believe that they will be just the thing by which to get before the people of that section the information which they should have. In connection with the displays there will be suitable decorations, with views of British Columbia orchards where the peaches and apples are grown and other interesting scenery. The fruit will be given away as samples or sold at cost and the two car loads will likely in this way reach the largest number of people.

The Port of Missing Men

BY MEREDITH NICHOLSON

"You must think me a strange person, Miss Claiborne. It seems inexplicable that a man's life should be so menaced in a place like this if you had not called to me"—

"Please don't speak of that! It was so terrible!"

"But I must speak of it. Once before the same attempt was made—that night on the King Edward."

"Yes; I have not forgotten."

"And today I have reason to believe that the same man watched his chance, for I have ridden here every day since I came, and he must have kept track of me."

"But this is America, Mr. Armitage!"

"That does not help me with you. You have every reason to resent my bringing you into such dangers. It is unpardonable, indefensible!"

She saw that he was greatly troubled.

"But you couldn't help my being in the park today. I have often stopped just there before. It's a favorite place for meditations. If you know the man"—

"I know the man."

"Then the law will certainly protect you, as you know very well. He was a dreadful looking person. The police can undoubtedly find and lock him up."

She was seeking to minimize the matter, to pass it off as a commonplace affair of every day. They were walking their horses. The groom followed stolidly behind.

Armitage was silent, a look of great perplexity on his face. When he spoke he was quite calm.

"Miss Claiborne, I must tell you that this is an affair in which I can't ask help in the usual channels. You will pardon me if I seem to make a mystery of what should be ordinarily a bit of business between myself and the police. But to give publicity to these attempts to injure me just now would be a mistake. I could have caught that man there in the wood. But I let him go for the reason—for the reason that I want the men back of him to show themselves before I act. But if it isn't presuming"—

He was quite himself again. His voice was steady and deep with the ease and assurance that she liked in him. She had marked today in his earnestness, more than at any other time, a slight, an almost indistinguishable trace of another tongue in his English.

"How am I to know whether it would be presuming?" she asked.

"But I was going to say"—

"When rudely interrupted!" She was trying to make it easy for him to say whatever he wished.

—"that these troubles of mine are really personal. I have committed no crime and am not fleeing from justice."

She laughed and urged her horse into a gallop for a last stretch of road near the park limits.

"How uninteresting! We expect a Montana ranchman to have a spectacular past."

"But not to carry it, I hope, to Washington. On the range I might become a lawless bandit in the interest of picturesqueness, but here"—

She walked her horse again. It occurred to her that he might wish an assurance of silence from her. What she had seen would make a capital bit of gossip, to say nothing of being material for the newspapers, and her conscience as she reflected grew uneasy at the thought of shielding him. She knew that her father and mother and, even more strictly, her brother would close their doors on a man whose enemies followed him over seas and lay in wait for him in a peaceful park, but here she tested him. A man of breeding would not ask protection of a woman on whom he had no claim, and it was certainly not for her to establish an understanding with him in so strange and grave a matter.

"It must be fun having a ranch with cattle on a thousand hills. I always wished my father would go in for a western place, but he can't travel so far from home. Our ranch is in Virginia."

"You have a Virginia farm? That is very interesting."

"Yes; at Storm Springs. It's really beautiful down there," she said simply.

It was on his tongue to tell her that he, too, owned a bit of Virginia soil, but he had just established himself as a Montana ranchman, and it seemed best not to multiply his places of residence. He had, moreover, forgotten the name of the county in which his preserve lay. He said, with truth:

"I know nothing of Virginia or the south, but I have viewed the landscape from Arlington, and some day I hope to go adventuring in the Virginia hills."

"Then you should not overlook our valley. I am sure there must be adventures waiting for somebody down there. You can tell our place by the spring lamb on the hillside. There's a huge inn that offers the long distance telephone and market reports and golf links and very good horses, and lots of people stop there as a matter of course in their flight between Florida and Newport. They go up and down the coast like the mercury in a thermometer—up when it's warm, down when it's cold. There's the secret of our mercurial temperament."

"He's just up from the farm and doesn't like town very much. But he shall go home again soon," she said as they rode on.

"Oh, you go down to shepherd those spring lambs!" he exclaimed, with misgiving in his heart. He had followed her across the sea, and now she was about to take flight again.

He dimly understood as he left her in a gay mood at the Claiborne house that she had sough to make him forget the lurking figure in the park thicket and the dark deed thwarted there. It was her way of conveying to him her dismissal of the incident, and it implied a greater kindness than any pledge of secrecy. He rode away with grave eyes, and a new hope filled his heart.

Chapter X

JOHN ARMITAGE IS SHADOWED.

ARMITAGE dined alone that evening and left the hotel at 9 o'clock for a walk. He unaffectedly enjoyed paved ground and the sights and ways of cities, and he walked aimlessly about the lighted thoroughfares of the capital with conscious pleasure in the movement and color of life. He let his eyes follow the Washington monument's gray line starward, and he stopped to enjoy the high poised equestrian statue of Sherman, to which the starry dusk gave something of legendary and old world charm.

Coming out upon Pennsylvania avenue, he strolled past the White House and at the wide flung gates paused while a carriage swept by him at the driveway. He saw within the grim face of Baron von Marhof and unconsciously lifted his hat, though the ambassador was deep in thought and did not see him. Armitage struck the pavement smartly with his stick as he walked slowly on, pondering, but he was conscious a moment later that some one was loitering persistently in his wake. Armitage was at once on the alert with all his faculties sharpened. He turned and gradually slackened his pace, and the person behind him immediately did likewise.

The sensation of being followed is at first annoying. Then a pleasant zest creeps into it, and in Armitage's case the reaction was immediate. He was even amused to reflect that the shadow had chosen for his exploit what is probably the most conspicuous and the best guarded spot in America. It was not yet 10 o'clock, but the streets were comparatively free of people. He slackened his pace gradually and threw open his overcoat, for the night was warm, to give an impression of ease, and when he had reached the somber facade of the treasury building he paused and studied it in the glare of the electric lights as though he were a chance traveler taking a preliminary view of the sights of the capital. A man still lingered behind him, drawing nearer now, at a moment when they had the sidewalk comparatively free to themselves. The fellow was short, but of soldierly erectness and even in his loitering pace lifted his feet with the quick precision of the drilled man. Armitage walked to the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Fifteenth street, then turned and retraced his steps slowly past the treasury building. The man who had been following faced about and walked slowly in the opposite direction, and Armitage, quickening his own pace, amused himself by dogging the fellow's steps closely for twenty yards, then passed him.

When he had gained the advantage of a few feet Armitage stopped suddenly and spoke to the man in the casual tone he might have used in addressing a passing acquaintance.

"My friend," he said, "there are two policemen across the street. If you continue to follow me I shall call their attention to you."

"Pardon me"—

"You are watching me, and the thing won't do."

"Yes, I'm watching you, but"—

"But the thing won't do! If you are hired"—

"Nein! Nein! You do me a wrong, sir."

"Then if you are not hired you are your own master, and you serve yourself ill when you take the trouble to follow me. Now I'm going to finish my walk, and I beg you to keep out of my way. This is not a place where liberties may be infringed with impunity. Good evening, sir!"

Armitage wheeled about sharply, and as his face came into the full light of the street lamps the stranger stared at him intently.

Armitage was fumbling in his pocket for a coin, but this impertinence caused him to change his mind. Two policemen were walking slowly toward them, and Armitage, annoyed by the whole incident, walked quickly away.

He was not wholly at ease over the meeting. The fact that Chauvenet had so promptly put a spy as well as the Servian assassin on his trail quickened his pulse with anger for an instant and then sobered him.

He continued his walk and paused presently before an array of books in a shop window. Then some one stopped at his side, and he lokoed up to find the same man he had accosted at the treasury building lifting his hat, an American soldier's campaign hat. The fellow was an extreme blond, with a smooth shaved, weather beaten face, blue eyes and light hair.

"Pardon me. You are mistaken. I am not a spy. But it is wonderful; it is quite wonderful"—

The man's face was alight with discovery, with an alert pleasure that awaited recognition.

"My dear fellow, you really become annoying," and Armitage again thrust his hand into his trousers pocket. "I should hate awfully to appeal to the police, but you must not crowd me too far."

The man seemed moved by deep feeling, and his eyes were bright with excitement. His hands clasped tightly the railing that protected the glass window of the bookshop. As Armitage turned away impatiently the man ejaculated huskily, as though some overmastering influence wrung the words from him:

"Don't you know me? I am Oscar. Don't you remember me and the great forest, where I taught you to shoot and fish? You are"—

He bent toward Armitage with a fierce insistence, his eyes blazing in his eagerness to be understood.

John Armitage turned again to the window, leaned lightly upon the iron railing and studied the title of a book attentively. He was silently absorbed for a full minute, in which the man who had followed him waited. Taking his cue from Armitage's manner, he appeared to be deeply interested in the bookseller's display, but the excitement still glittered in his eyes.

Armitage was thinking swiftly, and his thoughts covered a very wide range of time and place as he stood there. Then he spoke very deliberately and coolly, but with a certain peremptory sharpness.

"Go ahead of me to the New American and wait in the office until I come."

The man's hand went to his hat.

"None of that!"

Armitage arrested him with a gesture. "My name is Armitage—John Armitage," he said. "I advise you to remember it. Now go!"

The man hurried away, and Armitage slowly followed.

It occurred to him that the man might be of use, and with this in mind

"Don't you know me? I am Oscar."

he returned to the New American, got his key from the office, nodded to his acquaintance of the street and led the way to the elevator.

Armitage put aside his coat and hat, locked the hall door, and then, when the two stood face to face in his little sitting room, he surveyed the man carefully.

"What do you want?" he demanded bluntly.

He took a cigarette from a box on the table, lighted it and then, with an air of finality, fixed his gaze upon the man, who eyed him with a kind of stupefied wonder. Then there flashed into the fellow's bronzed face something of dignity and resentment. He stood perfectly erect, with his felt hat clasped in his hand. His clothes were cheap, but clean, and his short coat was buttoned trimly about him.

"I want nothing, Mr. Armitage," he replied humbly, speaking slowly and with a marked German accent.

"Then you will be easily satisfied," said Armitage. "You said your name was"—

"Oscar—Oscar Breunig."

Armitage sat down and scrutinized the man again without relaxing his severity.

"You think you have seen me somewhere, so you have followed me in the streets to make sure. When did this idea first occur to you?"

"I saw you at Fort Myer at the drill last Friday. I have been looking for you since and saw you leave your horse at the hotel this afternoon. You ride at Rock creek—yes?"

"What do you do for a living, Mr. Breunig?" asked Armitage.

"I was in the army, but served out my time and was discharged a few months ago and came to Washington to see where they make the government—yes? I am going to South America. Is it Peru—yes? There will be a revolution."

He paused, and Armitage met his eyes. They were very blue and kind, eyes that spoke of sincerity and fidelity, such eyes as a leader of forlorn hopes would like to know were behind him when he gave the order to charge. Then a curious thing happened. It may have been the contact of eye with eye that awoke question and response between them. It may have been a need in one that touched a chord of helplessness in the other, but suddenly Armitage leaped to his feet and grasped the outstretched hands of the little soldier.

"Oscar!" he said, and repeated very softly, "Oscar!"

A LITTLE TOUR OF THE LINCOLNSHIRE COAST

By JOHN C. KIRKWOOD

"Spilsby, 10 miles"; "Spilsby, 6 miles"; "Spilsby, 3 miles." Always it is Spilsby if you are tramping or travelling in East Lincolnshire.

Whatever may have been Spilsby's claims to distinction in past centuries it is renowned to-day as the birthplace of Sir John Franklin, that indomitable sailor who sought so heroically the North-west Passage, only to perish with all his company in the inhospitable Arctic. Man is ever a martyr to his work. Loving his self-elected tasks, he pours into them a wealth of ardor, to find in the end that he has been but digging his own grave.

In Westminster Abbey is a memorial tablet for which Tennyson, who married the explorer's niece, wrote the epitaph:

"Not here! the white north hath thy bones, and thou,
Heroic sailor soul,
Art passing on thy happier voyage now
Towards no earthly pole."

And Dean Stanley added:

Erected by his widow who, after long waiting and sending many in search of him, herself departed to seek and find him in the realms of light, 18 July, 1875, aged 83 years.

In Greenwich museum is a room containing many pitiful relics of Franklin's last voyage, brought home by those who went in quest of him; and in the market-place at Spilsby is a monument to perpetuate his memory.

SKEGNESS

Coastwards from Spilsby is Skegness a seaside resort the fame of which has been carried far and wide. I saw it as I wished to see it—on a Bank Holiday, for Skegness is pre-eminently a place for multitudes. It has sands which seem to invite all the world to come and enjoy them, and the town itself is built spaciously.

A comparatively new place, Skegness is clean and bright, with wide and wooded streets. That it is a place held in high favor requires no other proof than the railway station. Here are so many platforms for arriving and departing trains that I was positively shocked, even offended. For days I had been enjoying quiet peace, green fields, and humble villages and after London these were very restful. And so, to be plunged suddenly, after a delightful journey from Firsby, into a miniature King's Cross was to be rudely wakened from dreamland. However, I had come to see Skegness, to discover it for myself. I whished to see the place to which the Great Northern Railway issues excursion tickets for 3s.—at the rate of seven miles for a penny, the most wonderful excursion out of London.

It is a mistake to think that Skegness is a place only for the tripper. It is a resort. A place of abode for many. Thousands come here to spend their vacations, to enjoy the boating and bathing, and the plenitude of amusements and entertainments which Skegness provides.

For hosts of men and women the ideal holiday is one which fills the cup of pleasure to the brim every day. They want, and will have, the companionship of their kind, the stir and whirr of roundabouts, the nonsense of Perriots, the fun of skittles, and the enthusiasm and foolishness of crowds.

SUTTON-ON-SEA AND MABLETHORPE.

Fourteen miles from Skegness, to the north, is Sutton-on-Sea, and three miles farther on Mablethorpe. Sutton-on-Sea is not for lovers of Skegness. Here come no great crowds.

It is a place for the toffs, according to one man with whom I talked.

Sutton is ambitious—it has a promenade, but there is little else that makes it kin with fashionable watering places. The finest sands imaginable are its chief charm—that and its reposefulness. Those who want sands and sea and quietness will find them in abundance at Sutton. It is a place to dream the days away, to be lulled by the ceaseless wash of the waves on the shore.

Mablethorpe is a brisker place, and possibly in the eyes of some more attractive. Like Skegness it has "life" But not every work-weary man and woman wants "life." Many wish to escape from the diseractions of the world they must dwell in for eleven months or more during the year.

They feel that they must in their short holiday relax themselves utterly and absorb vigor from sun, air, and the breezes wafted across the purifying seas.

BOSTON

My little tour in East Lincolnshire came to an end at Boston. I particularly wished to see this place because of its daughter city, Boston of Massachusetts, and for its "Stump," the famous tower of St. Botolph's Church.

It is interesting to recall here that Lincolnshire as a whole is remarkable for its many churches and for the religious spirit which was their origin. Everywhere you go you see churches, and in this flat country the grey square towers, with their diminutive pinnacles, appear to lie very close together. In North-West Lincolnshire, at Epworth, John Wesley was born, and at Aainsborough the movement, which culminated in the exodus of the Pilgrim Fathers had its birth.

Boston, more than any other place, is associated with the Pilgrim Fathers From this port the harassed Puritans sailed to Holland, and later to the New World, to find in these countries the freedom of conscience denied them in their own land. Often in their attempts to leave England they were betrayed and cast into prison, and their goods confiscated, for in those days it was unlawful to leave England without a licence. In the old Guildhall of Boston can be seen two of the grated cells in which some of these Puritan prisoners were confined. The mind revolts at the sight of them so dreadful, so cruel must have been the sufferings of those shut up in these cramped and torturing chambers

In St. Botolph's Church, John Cotton, the great preacher whose influence on the little colony of refugees was so pronounced and good, was at one time vicar, he himself having to flee to the American haven to escape arrest for his heresies. His connection with St. Botolph's has now a fitting memorial—the Cotton Chapel, the gift of citizens of the newer Boston.

THE BOSTON "STUMP"

The most visible of the glories of Boston is its "Stump," the magnificent tower, with its lantern top,which adds so much to the distinction of St. Botolph's. It rears its summit nearly 300 feet above the fen-lands.

Once it was a beacon to guide travellers safely over the marshes, and is still far and away the most conspicuous object, not only of Boston, but also of the country about.

In past days St. Botolph's bells were rung to warn all within sound of their clamor against tides which threatened to inundate the land, and of such tides there is a doleful and tragic record. Jean Ingelow has used this fact as the foundation of her stirring poem, "The High Tide on the Coast of Lincolnshire."

"The old mayor climbed the belfry tower,
The ringers rang by two by three,
'Pull, if ye never pulled before,
Good ringers, pull your best,' quoth he.
"Play uppe, play uppe, O Boston bells!
Ply all your changes, all your swells
Play uppe 'The Brides of Enderby' "

Of Boston's beginnings—of its rise as a port until it was second only to London, of its mediaeval fame as a trade mart, and of its gradual decay —I may not write now. Neither may I at this time tell over again the story of the reclamation of the fens—great ague-breeding marshes,with their population of "fen slodgers," or "stilt walkers"— fowlers and fishermen who resented and destroyed when they dared, the building of the dykes designed to convert the waste areas into fertile farms. All I can do now is to suggest to my readers that they will find it well worth their while to visit East Lincolnshire, with its ancient history and traditions, churches and castles, and towns and villages both new and old.

LARGE INVESTMENT

The Columbia Coal & Coke Company is prepared to expend $500,000 developing its coal properties at Granite Creek, and the Merritt Herald remarks that Granite may yet exceed the boom that made it a mush-room city about 25 years ago.

The B. C. Copper Company is building a $100,000 mill at the Napoleon mine. At the outset the mill will be equipped with 20 stamps and several large cyanide tanks. There is said to be $10,000,000 worth of ore available at the Napoleon.

Signals of Distress

North Vancouver People Should Know How to Read and Heed Them.

Sick kidneys give many signals of distress.

The secretions are dark, contain a sediment.

Passages are frequent, scanty, painful.

Backache is constant, day and night.

Headaches and dizzy spells are frequent.

The weakened kidneys need quick help.

Don't delay! Use a special kidney remedy.

MacGregor evidence proves this statement.

James Simpson of MacGregor, Man., says: "I think Booth's Kidney Pills a very fine remedy. They have completely relieved me of a very sore lame back, and swelling and cramps in my limbs. I knew this was caused by a weakness or derangement of the kidneys. I used several remedies which did not help me to any extent. Then I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills and procured a box. They were very quick in relieving my back and the swelling and cramps have left my limbs. I am pleased to recommend Booth's Kidney Pills as an A. No. 1 remedy.

Somewhat About Books and Writers

Those birds which migrate southward for the winter months have been holding their parliaments lately. I counted seventy marshalled in line on an electric light cable the other day, the recent break in the hot weather apparently causing them concern as to whether their alamanack was to be relied upon, so to speak, or as to whether winter had caught them unprepared. An interesting article appeared in the "Spectator" recently which touched upon the migration of millions of birds in summer to beyond the Arctic circle, amid the tundra swamp, where there are unfailing supplies of bird food in the summer months for both fruit-eating and insectivorous birds. The berries ripen in the summer, too late for the birds to feed upon them that year, and during the winter they are preserved as in cold storage to provide a luxurious feast for the birds in the early season of the next year, when in other latitudes there is but a scant supply of suitable food. Then the mosquitoes and flies are hatched out in myriads with the first long warm days of the land of the midnight sun, and afford a similarly early supply of food to the insectivorous birds. A somewhat similar relation between the sources of food supply and the human consumer existed in early times in fact the native races of America up to the present day afford an instance of seasonal migration. Primitive man must have been in the same position, having to move in the direction of his food supply. It is a matter of history how Pharoah made money at the time when he controlled the world's food supply. The advancement to a high state of efficiency of systems of transportation has enabled the peoples of modern Europe to keep their position on the map of the globe, and the development and control of the routes by which food may be transported quickly and safely is of the most vital importance to statesmen and people alike. Great Britain needs to import for food supply, about 400 million dollars worth of cereals annually.

WOMEN'S BEAUTY

It Can Never Be Perfect Without Luxuriant Hair

A head of luxuriant hair is sure to be attractive. But nature has not crowned every women with glorious hair. Some very loveable women she has treated rather scantily in this respect.

For instance, there are tens of thousands of women in Canada today who have harsh, faded and lusterless hair, who are unattractive simply because they do not know that nowadays even the whims of nature can be overruled by the genius of science.

If you are a woman without beautiful hair, do not permit your attractions to be hidden because of this slight misfortune.

Go today to The Lonsdale Pharmacy and buy a large bottle of Parisian Sage for 50 cents, use it each night, and you will notice the harsh, repulsive hair disappear, and in its place will come soft, silky, bright and luxuriant hair.

TAKE ACTION AGAINST JAPS

Complaints are coming in from West Capilano to the effect that Japanese are carrying on fire operations and burning brush in apparent defiance of the law. Mr. Turner who resides in that section informed the Express this morning that he had witnessed Japanese setting fires in the brush last evening, and had a witness who could testify to the same effect. He passed through North Vancouver en route to Vancouver for the purpose of placing the matter before the provincial authorities, and if no satisfaction is obtainable in that direction, he intends to prosecute the case himself.

He now holds the two cups for these events which he won last year, and this season he is desirous of making another win, as it will leave him only one more win to make in order to take possession of the open singles cup.

WOODEN WEDDING

The Rev. and Mrs. Gillam chose a most popular manner in which to celebrate the fifth anniversary of their wedding last Tuesday.

Mr. Gillam, instead of attending to his own pleasures on that occasion, brought back his own happy event by performing two marriages, one in the forenoon and the other in the afternoon.

In this way he sent four young people rejoicing on their way, and felt himself well repaid for the neglect of his own reminiscences.

FISHING PARTY RETURNS

Messrs. W. Braim, D. Hutchison, G. Campbell and W. Gerriard, composed a party of fishermen who returned last Monday evening from a successful six day's trout fishing expedition at Salmon Arm.

About 50 fine speckled beauties were reeled in together with a good mess of sea cod.

The party left the city last Thursday in Mr. Braim's launch, the Nezko. After arriving at the Skoocum Chuck, they had to lay to for a couple of hours in order to pass through the narrows, which at that point passes through a very narrow passage between numerous small islands. The channel is so narrow that the tide has not time to make the full run out before it is met by the return tide. This causes a fall of about 10 feet, which compels all boats to wait till the in-running tide raises to a level with the outpour.

In from Salmon Arm a very beautiful falls empties into the salt chuck, and over the falls Salmon river runs through a level stretch of territory, where it is possible to navigate a boat. A little farther on is a chain of two lakes and it was in these that the party did the most of their fishing.

On the return trip they were held up at Secret Cove and Bucanneer Bay on account of a strong head wind and high sea. When this passed, the passage into Burrard Inlet was made under the most favorable conditions.

Very little game was seen during the trip although the territory around Jervis Inlet is noted for being a hunters' paradise. Only a few grouse were raised, but as it was out of season, the pleasure of bringing home a bag had to be foregone.
