BUTCHERS' BARBECUE

The annual butchers' barbeque will be held in North Vancouver at the usual location on the grounds in front of the hotel North Vancouver tomorrow afternoon. This annual celebration is generally the incentive for a very large number of visitors to the North Shore, principally the meat cutters and their families. The barbecuing of the beef and mutton is always an attraction of much interest not only to those who have never witnessed the event before but to others it holds the same fascination year after year. The scene reaches a climax however when the butchers take the meat from off the pit and serve it out on slices of bread. The very agreeable odours at this time are enough to give the most fastidious a craving appetite.

CITY TAX SALE

The disposal of the balance of the lots at the city tax sale took place in the city hall last Friday. The prices as a whole were far below normal. This is not, however, taken as any criterion as there is little doubt that the properties will be redeemed before the time limit, one year, expires. The location of the majority of the land thus offered at auction to cover delinquent taxes was in D. L. 265 and 273 while the balance was scattered throughout the different parts of the city. The highest price obtained for a single lot was $450 and the principal purchasers were realty men.

REEVE McNAUGHT LEAVES FOR PRINCE RUPERT

The reeve is missing is all the information that can be elicited at the district municipal office. He left with Premier Laurier's party for Victoria last Wednesday with the intention of taking part in the reception at the capital, and there is no doubt but that he was a prominent figure in that event. He left no word when leaving when he would return or whether he would accompany the premier on the trip to Prince Rupert, although he was urged to do so in some circles. It seems apparent, therefore, that he has set his face to the north when he will try and gain the Premier's ear or that of Minister Graham in relation to inspecting Burrard Inlet and the site of the Second Narrows bridge and most probable of all extend an invitation to visit the North Shore when the party returns.

NEW BUSINESS PARTNER

Mr. C. R. Hickman has taken a partner in his grocery business on Lonsdale Ave., Mr. W. B. Hood, a recent arrival from Dundee, Scotland. Mr. Hood, while being new in the country is, nevertheless, an old grocer, having been connected in that line of business for a number of years in the old land. He has taken a substantial interest in the C. R. Hickman & Co. concern and as a result some branching out is contemplated. As a matter of fact Mr. Hickman has been looking for a suitable man to take an interest in the business and take some of the responsibility from his shoulders as in recent months the business has grown to such an extent that it is quite burdensome for one man to adequately look after the different branches in anything like an efficient manner. Another departure from the regular grocery business, but still in the food supply line is contemplated, but arrangements have not so far completed themselves as to be publicly announced.

BRUSH FIRE

A small brush fire on the south side of Keith Road between Chesterfield and Mahon Ave., came near becoming a conflagration of no mean proportion on Friday when the flames began to spread beyond the restricted area and commenced licking up the dry grass and low bushes in the direction of the large house owned by the North Vancouver Land and Improvement Association on Ottawa Gardens. The timely arrival of one of the officers of the law who had been notified of the danger led to the proper machinery being put in motion and shortly afterwards some of the members of the local fire department arrived on the scene and prevented any further spreading.

The work upon the foundation of the C. P. R. hotel at Balfour is to be commenced immediately.

POSTAL COLLECTION BOXES

On Sept. 1st North Vancouver will be equipped with 12 fine red mail collection boxes which will be so located throughout the city as to be easily accessible and an accommodation to every section.

The first installment arrived in this city yesterday in charge of Postmaster McMillan. He in turn gave them over to Mr. G. W. Sugden of Lynn Valley, who has been awarded the contract for the daily collection. This will be done in the meantime with a horse and rig although it was intimated at first by Mr. Sugden that an auto might be incorporated into the service.

The boxes are of the latest type and collection will be made twice a day at 9 a.m. and 3 p.m.

A sub-post office will be established at the corner of 8th street and Lonsdale Ave. and the location of the 12 boxes will be as follows: Corner of 1st street and St. Andrew's Ave.; cor. 1st street and St. David's Ave.; cor. St. David's Ave. and Keith Road; cor. Keith Road and Queensbury Ave.; cor. Queensbury Ave. and 17th street; corner of 17th street and St. Andrew's Ave.; corner 23rd street and Lonsdale Ave.; cor. 15th street and Lonsdale Ave.; junction of 13th street Keith road and Mahon Ave.; cosner of Keith road and Bewick Ave.; cor. 5th street and Lonsdale Ave.

LARGEST SHIP ON WAYS

The barkentine Georgina which has been lying in the stream off North Vancouver for the past week was hauled onto the Wallace ways Saturday evening to undergo repairs and an overhauling. The vessel, which is the largest ever taken on the local ways, looks a monster in comparison to the smaller craft heretofore accommodated at the Wallace shipyards, and the tall masts reaching far above the adjacent buildings appear to be much in excess of their actual height.

SOCIAL EVENING

A most delightful time was spent at the home of Mrs. Geo. H. Morden, 2nd street, last evening by the members of the social department of the Epworth League of the North Vancouver Methodist church. There was a large attendance and the evening was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

DINGHY RACE

The regular weekly dinghy race under the auspices of the B. C. Dinghy Racing Association was held over the North Vancouver course last Saturday afternoon and resulted in another win for Mr. Brewer's boat the We Two. Considerable time elapsed between the finish of the boats and the winner clearly outsailed all her competitors by a wide margin. We Two finished 8 minutes ahead of Ethel and 27 minutes ahead of the third boat, Jumbo.

MUST NOT SELL INFECTED FRUIT

"I wish to give due notice to the fruit growers of British Columbia that infected home-grown fruit will not be permitted to be sold this year. The regulations governing the same will be strictly enforced."

This is the dictum of Mr. Thomas Cunningham, provincial inspector of fruit pests. It was given in order that the information may be spread among fruit growers in all parts of the province.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO PARENTS

Names and addresses of all students desirous of enrolment in North Vancouver High School for ensuing term, should be communicated to Mr. A. R. Stacy, Chairman of Board of Trustees, before the 25th inst.

OBIT.—EDWARD CRAIG

The death occurred last Sunday evening after a severe attack of typhoid pneumonia of Edward Craig, aged 39 at Cedar Cottage. The remains were removed to the undertaking parlors of Greene & Simpson from where the funeral takes place today under the Independent Order of Oddfellows. Deceased was a brother of Mrs. Parkins of 2nd street of this city. John Craig, a brother from Aberdeen, arrived yesterday to attend the funeral.

City Council Holds Short Session
Ald. Schultz in His Customary Seat

The feature of last evening's council meeting was the fact that there were only two short notes in place of the usually long list of correspondence.

The re-appearance of Ald. Schultz in his customary seat created some little surprise amongst those who had not been apprised of his decision to abide by the wish of his fellow aldermen to retain his seat until the end of the term.

His Worship presided and all the aldermen were present excepting Ald. McRae.

Mr. Foreman, who is constructing a block on 1st street, asked what steps were being taken in regard to lowering the sidewalks and adjusting the drains on that street to conform with the new grade. He understood that the present sidewalk was 3 feet too high.

Ald. McNeish thought it was not practicable to lower the sidewalk until the street was permanently fixed.

The engineer said he considered it reasonable to lower the sidewalk along Mr. Foreman's building. The sidewalk there was about 1½ feet above the road. It was referred to the engineer.

Ald. Fowler asked what stage the clearing on the proposed bathing beach had reached.

Ald. McNeish said nothing had been done on account of so much work needed elsewhere.

Ald. Fowler said that after inspecting the water at this point and considering that the sewerage would soon be emptying into the Inlet he was of the opinion that the council should reconsider the adoption of this location.

Ald. Irwin was of the same opinion.

The previous motion was accordingly rescinded.

On the recommendation of the fire chief the following appointments were made for firemen to comprise the paid department: Samuel McDowell, Alex. Tanner, J. E. Sparks, David Renshaw, J. Garville, D. Echson.

The Mayor asked the newspaper representatives to publich Clause 7 of the Incorporation Act of 1906 having reference to the right of the city to lay its water mains along the Lynn Valley road which case came up in the courts this week. He thought that after reading the clause it could easily be seen how plain the city's contention was. He believed that some of the district councillors were not aware of the true facts of the case and were afraid that the same spirit was guiding the movements of the council as guided it when the telephone dispute was being argued. His Worship could not see how any council could consent to the case going before a judge after reading that clause. On motion the clause in question was handed to the reporters. It read: "It being understood that the city corporation may at any time by any member of the staff open up any part of the road through the district area that is traversed by the pipe line, to inspect or repair or renew the said pipe line or to lay additional pipe therein, provided (a) that the traffic on the said road is not interrupted without the consent of the district council and (b) that the road is reinstated in as good condition as it was before at the expense of the city corporation and to the satisfaction of the district council."

J. P. Fell wrote asking the council to come to some agreement relative to the park in the west end. Laid over for further consideration.

The following financial acounts were passed for payment: Finance, $541.25, Board of Works, $130.80, Police $205.30, Water Committee $20.35, Fire and Light $389.37, and Health $99.75.

The clerk reported the publicatio of four local improvement works which had not been petitioned against.

It was resolved to call for tenders to be in two weeks hence for two of these local improvement works, Lonsdale Ave. from 18th street to the city limits and 3rd street from St. David's to the city limits.

In the former case it was resolved to do the east side of the street first to be accomplished after consulting with the B. C. Electric Ry. Co whose tracks traverse this portion of the road.

The engineer said he would not like to promise that the street would be in a very passable condition at times.

A summer resident was present and stated that there were 12 families requiring water to their homes near the Moodyville townsite and that some of these families were going to spend the winter in their present quarters. He reviewed the previous action of the council requiring campers to pay for connecting pipes besides the water rates.

Ald. Irwin said that this put a different light on the matter.

On motion of Ald. McNeish and Irwin it was referred to the water committee with power to act.

Representatives from the Daily Province were present soliciting an advertisement for a special edition they were getting out. They were referred to the Joint Civic Advertising Committee.

It was resolved to hold some of the city's band concerts in the Japanese Gardens for the privilege of the citizens in the northern portion of the city.

Ald. Fowler asked what was the next move in regard to sewerage installation.

The engineer replied that the matter was in the hands of the city solicitor who was preparing a by-law for the city's portion, $40,000. This, he stated, would have to be submitted to a vote of the people.

The council then went into committee of the whole.

A special meeting will be held on Friday evening for the purpose of considering several important matters, prominent among which are the matters which are proposed to be brought before the annual convention of the U.B.C.M. which meets next month.

Father Jean, who has been assisting Father Petavyn of the Indian Mission school in this city in the nature of a holiday left the first of the week for Strathcona, Alta., where he will take charge of the parish there. On the trip east he will be accompanied by Father Grandin.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT

The tennis tournament which was held on the court of Ex-Alderman Crickmay on Saturday last was a most enjoyable and successful affair. The participants were local citizens and in every event the sets were keenly contested and there was no lack of interest throughout.

The results were as follows:

H. Woods and Simkins beat W. J. Irwin and Stockman 2 sets to love.

R. G. Ward and D. W. Reeve lost to R. Matthews and J. Loutit, 2 sets to love.

P. N. Bayliss and H. McPherson lost to E. Bayliss and R. Macnaghten jr., 2 sets to love.

G. Armitage and Hughes lost to E. T. Pollock and S. Humphreys 2 sets to love.

P. Ward and E. Adamson beat Hawkins and C. Hooley 2 sets to love.

J. Wylie Donaldson and F. Diplock beat C. Heaven and Rev. Hooper 2 sets to 1.

R. Matthews and J. Loutit lost to P. N. Bayliss and H. McPherson 2 sets to 1.

HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION PRIZE LIST

The prize list for the annual exhibition of the North Vancouver Horticultural Society and Farmers' Institute, which takes place in the Horticultural Hall, corner of 21st street and Lonsdale Ave. on the 9th and 10th of September, has been issued. It comprises an admirable and varied list of classes for which is offered a number of handsome cups and large moneyed prizes. Several new features, a departure from the previous shows, will be introduced this year.

PLEASANT EVENING

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Mee, 1st street, last evening, when the occasion marked the return of Mr. W. K. Burnett, a special friend of the family who has been absent in the east for about a year. The evening was taken up with music and games, the popular singing of Miss Mary O'Sullivan of Vancouver being the feature of the former. After refreshments were partaken of the friends dispersed at a late hour. Among those present were Miss Mary O'Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs. Smith, Miss Smith, Miss E. Smith, Mr. W. K. Burnett and Wilfred Mee.

CURRIE-HAYES

A very quiet wedding was solemnized this morning at the Presbyterian manse between Mr. Arthur Curry, a member of the dry goods firm of Curry Company of this city, and Miss H. May Hayes late of Dorhing, Surrey, England. Rev. Gillam officiated and only the immediate friends of the contracting parties were present to witness the ceremony. The bride, who looked becoming in a neat travelling dress, was attended by Mrs. Thos. Meakins, and the bridegroom was supported by Mr. R. C. Miller of Vancouver. The happy couple left immediately after the knot was tied on a trip to Victoria from where they will tour the Sound cities. On their return they will reside on 3rd street east.

JAMES ISLAND SALE

St. James island, one of the choicest of the famed Gulf Island group, was taken possession of by a syndicate of twenty prominent Victorians, and without any untoward delay a start will be made towards improvements which, with its many natural attractions, will make it one of the finest and doubtless the most popular pleasure resorts of the Pacific northwest. The purchase price was $100,000.

WIRELESS STATION CLOSED

The United Wireless station in Victoria Park in this city has been closed. It is not known even by the operator when it will be opened again and in the meantime he is engaged in the shipping end in Vancouver. The opinion is ventured however that the period will not be very lengthy as the system has been working so satisfactory from North Vancouver that its need will shortly bring about a continuation of operations.

Moyle hotel was gutted by fire on Monday last.

A very pretty dance was given by Mrs. (Capt.) Archibald at her charming home on Lonsdale Ave. last Friday evening. The guest list included a number of Vancouver friends.

On account of other arrangements the regular city band concert will not be held until Thursday evening this week. The band is engaged for the afternoon on Wednesday at the butchers' barbecue.

It is announced that Mr. Thos. Clark, one of North Vancouver's former popular young men, and now a C.P.R. operator at North Bend, is to be married on Wednesday of this week to a young lady of the latter town. It is understood that a portion of their honeymoon will be spent in North Vancouver where Mr. Clark's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Clark of 4th street, reside.

BUSINESS TRANSACTION

Mr. P. S. Thomas sold out his interests in the Lonsdale Pharmacy at the corner of Lonsdale Avenue and 8th street yesterday to Mr. A. J. Tyson. Mr. Tyson takes charge today and will continue the business a long similar up-to-date lines as heretofore adopted by Mr. Thomas.

The Lonsdale Pharmacy was nursed from its infancy to the present well established concern through Mr. Thomas's individual efforts and his genial popularity among his fellows and patrons. He will now retire from active business for a short time and enjoy a well earned rest.

The new proprietor, Mr. Tyson, is well and favorably known as a business man of this city, having been a partner with Mr. Dodds in the grocery business of Dodds and Tyson, which operated in the Flat Iron block for some time. Mr. Tyson is a druggist of some quality and there is little doubt that the business will be properly and efficiently handled by him. He is also well known in lacrosse circles in this city.

The Salmon Arm Observer has made its initial appearance as an eight-page paper.

CAREER OF THE NEW VICEROY

SIR CHARLES HARDINGE WHO WILL GUIDE INDIA THROUGH CRITICAL PERIOD IS NOTABLE MAN

Sir Charles Hardinge, the new viceroy of India, is the supreme type of an aristocracy that has adapted itself to the conditions of the democracy. He represents a hereditary ruling class, says the New York Post, which has beaten its swords into plowshares, and which, having abandoned its claim to rule by right, continues to rule by sheer virtue of its capacity for government.

The aristocrat of melodrama and of popular imagination is haughty, arrogant and licentious. Like the Bourbons, he has learned nothing and forgotten nothing. But the aristocracy which contrives to retain its dominant position under the form of democracy, has both learned and forgotten many things. It has adapted itself to its environment by abandoning the weapons of physical coercion and trusting to that intellectual and moral ascendency to which the mass of men will always do homage.

Sir Charles Hardinge is the perfect diplomatist. His personal characteristics qualify him in an exceptional degree for enunciating a policy in such a way as to reduce to a minimum the possible occasions for opposition and friction. He is a man whose culture and refinement impress everyone who comes into contact with him. His manners are gracious and dignified. He has no rough corners, no asperities. His temper and his expression are always thoroughly under control. He never loses his temper, he never raises his voice, and he never disclaims. There is about his manner however, something that suggests calm and resourceful strength. One feels that there is an iron hand beneath the velvet glove. Not for a moment, even when he defers to others, does he give an impression of weakness. There is about him nothing of that sly, insinuating, unctuous manner which is familiar among professed diplomatists.

MORE THAN A DIPLOMATIST

But Sir Charles Hardinge is much more than a diplomatist—the mere polished instrument for the expression of a policy which has been framed by others. A man of his wide knowledge and experience, and of such unusual ability and industry, could hardly avoid having a potent influence upon the policy of those with whom he was brought into contact, and especially upon the ministers of state, who come and go with every change of government. After winning his spurs in diplomacy, he was quickly withdrawn from the task of being a mere mouthpiece to that of helping to frame the foreign policy of the British Empire, and during the last four years, in which he has acted as permanent under secretary of state for foreign affairs, his influence has become so powerful as to cause uneasiness to many Liberals, who dread a dictatorship. The editor of The Nation, who has been one of the most frequent critics of the foreign policy of his own party, has written: "No one can question Sir Charles Hardinge's ability, his great experience, both in the east and in diplomacy, and the influence which he has acquired in the foreign office, where his association with policy has been hardly less powerful and direct than that of the secretary of state."

It frequently happens that the real powers behind the throne are unknown to the many. A remark by Sir Charles Dilke upon the four most powerful men in the British Empire was recently quoted by a friend. The remarkable thing about each of these men was that none of them figured largely in the public eye. Sir Charles Hardinge was one, and two others were the Archbishop of Canterbury and Lord Esher, concerning whom the Kaiser is said to have made some flippant remark in the famous unpublished letter which brought about the resignation of the Marquis of Tweeddale. It increases the point of this story that the friend had forgotten the name of the fourth most powerful personality in the British Empire. It would be an interesting exercise to fill in the blank.

RAPID RISE IN POWER

Sir Charles Hardinge's career has been one of lightning rapidity. After his Harrow and Cambridge days were over he proceeded at once, at the age of twenty-two, to Constantinople as attache at the embassy. Thereafter in rapid succession he passed through the ambassies at Berlin, Washington, Sofia, Bucharest, Paris, Teheran, and St. Petersburg, in which he served in capacities of ever-increasing importance, until in 1898 he was appointed first secretary to the embassy at St. Petersburg. His longest and most important services were in the near east in the Balkan states, in Persia, and in Russia, and he acquired a thorough proficiency in the Turkish, Persian and Russian languages. It was this experience, together with the avidity with which he made himself master of everything that pertained to the policy in these countries, that gave him his opportunity. For many years past the centre of gravity in world policy has been moving eastward. Britain has vast interests at stake in Asia and in the Eastern Mediterranean. Great events were brewing in Macedonia, in Persia, in India, and in China, and there was need of a man at the helm in the foreign office who knew the eastern question in all its phases. In 1903 Sir Charles Hardinge was recalled from St. Petersburg to be assistant under secretary for foreign affairs at home.

PERSONA GRATA AT COURT

Once he was settled in London, Sir Charles Hardinge's personal gifts soon made him a persona grata at court. The tact which had made him so successful a diplomatist was equally serviceable to him at court. Almost immediately after his recall he was given the rank of minister plenipotentiary to attend King Edward in his five weeks' tour of Lisbon, Naples, Rome and Paris, in which the foundations of the ententes with Portugal, Italy and France were laid. The king formed the highest opinion of his tact and character, and placed the greatest reliance upon his judgment.

Teacher: "What is a person called who steals?"

No answer.

Teacher: "Now, Tommy, suppose I were to put my hand in your pocket and take out a penny, what would you call me?"

Tommy (fully conscious of a scarcity of coin): "Please, sir, you would be a conjurer."

NORTH VANCOUVER, B. C. - - AUGUST 23, 1910

THE VANCOUVER EXHIBITION

The pronounced success which has marked the first annual fixture of the Vancouver Exhibition Association establishes upon a firm foundation another very desirable institution which has come to stay, which will add new features and develop into larger proportions from year to year and whose annual recurrence will constitute one of the notable calendar events in the life of the great metropolis upon both sides of Burrard Inlet.

While opinions may differ as to the particular lines along which an exhibition in Vancouver can be developed with the best prospects of success there cannot be any dissent from the general proposition that such an institution wisely and energetically managed can be guided to a position of importance which will make it a potent factor in promoting the general welfare of the city. The commanding position occupied by Vancouver as the future commercial metropolis of the Canadian west and the greatest seaport on the Pacific coast makes of that city a most excellent field for the building up of an exhibition on a large scale of a varied and most attractive character, and whose reputation as an annual fixture will extend afar.

The management is to be congratulated on the remarkable progress made during the comparatively short period covered by their operations to the date of the first exhibition. The grounds, recently redeemed from forest growth are beautiful for situation, of ample area for immediate requirements and conveniently located from the standpoint of the public. The buildings are a standing compliment to the ability of the management, being of commodious proportions, of artistic design and evidently so placed upon the grounds as to constitute a portion of a comprehensive plan for future additions to their number.

The general character of this initial effort reflects great credit upon the Board. The various exhibits were of a most attractive and gratifying character for a beginning, the attractions from day to day were of a varied and interesting order which afforded the crowds genuine pleasure while the details were arranged and carried out with a smoothness and precision which could not be excelled by exhibitions which have been in operation for many years.

It is understood that the patronage accorded the exhibition by the public was of such a liberal character and the interest created among prospective exhibitors and owners of attractive features of various kinds gives such encouraging promise for the future, that the directors already have in mind extensive developments in preparation for the exhibition of next year.

From all quarters there comes gratifying assurance that the Vancouver exhibition is destined to share in a marked degree the growth and the prosperity which is characteristic of British Columbia's young and lusty institutions in all departments of western enterprise while its many friends and supporters will wish for it and prophesy for it a career of exceptional success.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The results of the tax sale of city property held last week may be taken as a strong indication of the general tone of confidence which is everywhere evident with reference to North Vancouver. The total amount by which the city treasury was enriched was ample for the payment of all arrears of taxes, but the extreme reticence manifested upon the part of buyers toward bidding such figures as would necessitate the investment of any considerable sums of money, showed clearly that while they were willing to take a long chance if it could be obtained by venturing a small sum, they, nevertheless, considered that the probabilities of the several parcels being redeemed amounted to a practical certainty and that any amounts paid for purchases would ultimately prove to be simply loans advanced to delinquent tax payers at eight per cent.

Eighty parcels in all were sold, the total proceeds from which were approximately $6,500, or an average of about $80 per lot. The highest price bid in any instance was $450, while the highest assessed value of any lot offered was $1,500. This disparity o' values shows clearly that the uncertainty of securing title held prices down to practically the sum required to meet the claims against the property. Many parcels have already been redeemed during the few days that have elapsed since the sale, clearly indicating the probabilities with reference to the eighty pieces disposed of.

ENUMERATION OF CENSUS VALUES

The farm and urban values of the census of 1911 will be enumerated under the date of 1st June. They will include the real estate and live stock values of each enumeration district at that date, of the live stock and nursery stock sold in 1910, of the dairy products consumed at home, sent to the factories or sold, and of the animals slaughtered on the farm in the same year, together with values of other products of the farm.

Land and buildings and farm implements and machinery owned by every person in the enumeration district will be recorded separately for values in 1911, and the rent of land and buildings will also be recorded if leased in that year. Values will be taken for orchard fruits, small fruits and vegetables separately for 1910; but values of horses, milch cows, other horned or neat cattle, sheep, swine, poultry and hives of bees will be taken separately for 1911, at the date of the census.

The values of live stock and nursery stock sold in 1910 will include horses, milch cows, other horned or neat cattle, sheep, swine, poultry and hives of bees, and of nursery stock, which means fruit and ornamental trees grown for transplanting into orchards gardens and parks.

Dairy products consumed on the farm, and sent to factories or sold, refer to products of the year 1910. They include the values of milk, cream, home-made butter and home-made cheese.

Animals slaughtered on the farm in 1910 will be recorded for the values of horned or neat cattle, sheep, swine and poultry. Horses are not included in these values, as in our country their meats are not used for food.

The values of other products of the farm include those of eggs, honey and wax for 1910, and wool, maple sugar and maple syrup for 1911.

The enumeration of hired labor on the farm to the year 1910. It will give the total number of weeks of labor employed which means the number for all men who work for hire on the farm and the total amount paid for hire, including allowance for board. The payment should be reckoned for the full time of service, and should include the value of board. The inquiry relating to earnings for domestic service is asked for in Schedule No. 1.

In addition to the foregoing inquiries of values, a question is asked for the value of all lands and buildings not manufacturing establishments or mines owned in Canada in 1911 which are outside of the enumerator's district.

New Westminster cinched the league championship on Saturday by defeating Vancouver 8 goals to 4. The game was played in New Westminster before an exceptionally large crowd.

B. C. FLORISTS ASSOCIATION

The B. C. Florists Association met yesterday in the main hall at the exhibition grounds, Vancouver. The attendance was fairly representative and a number of important matters were brought up among others being the question of having better facilities provided at the exhibition grounds for the floral exhibits as it was pointed out that the upper story of the main building was too warm for the flowers. President Miller and Directors McSpadden and Knowlton were called in and the matter placed before them, and they promised a separate building for that purpose by next year. A revision of the prize list was discussed and taken up with the exhibition committee.

Wheezer or Sneezer

Have You Heard of Hyomei for Catarrh, Asthma and Hay Fever

If you wheeze or sneeze, hawk or spit, snuffle or blow, something is the matter with the membrane of your respiratory tract, and you need Hyomei.

And you need Hyomei because it will cure you of any catarrhal or inflammatory condition that exists.

It isn't a stomach medicine, or spray, or douche, but a very pleasant, healing, antiseptic balsam, from the eucalpytus forests of Australia. You breathe this balsamic air through a small, hard rubber inhaler, and it reaches every nook, corner and crevice of the membrane, and promptly kills the catarrh germs.

The Lonsdale Pharmacy will sell you a complete Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) outfit for $1.00 on the money back plan.

"I have been a victim of catarrh for many months, the glands around my eyes and nose being sore and swollen. My head felt dull and stuffy. Pains in the front and back of my head, also across my eyes were frequent and I had trouble in breathing, especially at night when trying to rest. I had doctored but got no relief until after using Hyomei. This relieved me in the first twenty-four hours and in less than two weeks I was practically cured. I cannot give too much praise to Hyomei." Mrs. Mary Philips, 153 McNab St., Hamilton, Ont.

The Port of Missing Men

BY MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Author of "The House of a Thousand Candles."

"To think of all these beautiful things in our own America!" exclaimed Shirley. "And you, Mr. Armitage"—

"Among the other curios, Miss Claiborne," laughed John, taking her hand.

"But I haven't introduced you yet," began Mrs. Sanderson, puzzled.

"No; the King Edward did that. We crossed together. Oh, M. Chauvenet, let me present Mr. Armitage," said Shirley, seeing that the men had not spoken.

The situation amused Armitage, and he smiled rather more broadly than was necessary in expressing his pleasure at meeting M. Chauvenet. They regarded each other with the swift intentness of men who are used to the sharp exercise of their eyes, and when Armitage turned toward Shirley and Mrs. Sanderson he was aware that Chauvenet continued to regard him with fixed gaze.

"Miss Claiborne is a wonderful sailor. The Atlantic is a little tumultuous at times in the spring, but she reported to the captain every day."

"Miss Claiborne is nothing if not extraordinary," reclared Mrs. Sanderson with frank admiration.

"The word seems to have been coined for her," said Chauvenet, his white teeth showing under his thin black mustache.

"And still leaves the language distinguished chiefly for its poverty," added Armitage, and the men bowed to Shirley and then to Mrs. Sanderson and again to each other. It was like a rehearsal of some trifle in a comedy.

"How charming!" laughed Mrs. Sanderson. "And this lovely room is just the place for it."

They were still talking together as Franzel, with whom Armitage had spoken below, entered hurriedly. He held a crumpled note, whose contents it seemed had shaken him out of his habitual melancholy composure.

"Is Baron von Marhof in the room?" he asked of Armitage, fumbling nervously at his monocle.

The Austrian ambassador, with several ladies and led by Senator Sanderson, was approaching.

The attache hurried to his chief and addressed him in a low tone. The ambassador stopped, grew very white and stared at the messenger for a moment in blank unbelief.

The young man now repeated in English, in a tone that could be heard in all parts of the hushed room:

"His majesty the Emperor Johann Wilhelm died suddenly tonight in Vienna," he said and gave his arm to his chief.

It was a strange place for the delivery of such a message, and the strangeness of it was intensified to Shirley by the curious glance that passed between John Armitage and Jules Chauvenet. Shirley remembered afterward that as the attache's words rang out in the room Armitage started, clinched his hands and caught his breath in a manner very uncommon in men unless they are greatly moved. The ambassador walked directly from the room with bowed head, and every one waited in silent sympathy until he had gone.

The word passed swiftly through the great house, and through the open windows the servants were heard crying loudly for Baron von Marhof's carriage in the court below.

"The king is dead. Long live the king!" murmured Shirley.

"Long live the king!" repeated Chauvenet and Mrs. Sanderson in unison. And then Armitage, as though mastering a phrase they were teaching him, raised his head and said, with an unction that surprised them: "Long live the emperor and king! God save Austria!"

Then he turned to Shirley with a smile.

"It is very pleasant to see you on your own ground. I hope your family are well."

"Thank you; yes. My father and mother are here somewhere."

"And Captain Claiborne?"

"He's probably sitting up all night to defend Fort Myer from the crafts and assaults of the enemy. I hope you will come to see us, Mr. Armitage."

"Thank you. You are very kind," he said gravely. "I shall certainly give myself the pleasure very soon."

As Shirley passed on with Chauvenet Mrs. Sanderson launched upon the girl's praises, but she found him suddenly preoccupied.

"The girl has gone to your head. Why didn't you tell me you knew the Claibornes?"

"I don't remember that you gave me a chance, but I'll say now that I intend to know them better."

She bade him take her to the drawing room. As they went down through the house they found that the announcement of the Emperor Johann Wilhelm's death had cast a pall upon the company. All the members of the diplomatic corps, had withdrawn at once as a mark of respect and sympathy for Baron von Marhof, and at midnight the ballroom held all of the company that remained. Armitage had not sought Shirley again. He found a room that had been set apart for smokers, threw himself into a chair, lighted a cigar and stared at a picture that had no interest for him whatever. He put down his cigar after a few whiffs, and his hand went to the pocket in which he had usually carried his cigarette case.

"Ah, Mr. Armitage, may I offer you a cigarette?"

He turned to find Chauvenet close at his side. He had not heard the man enter, but Chauvenet had been in his thoughts, and he started slightly at finding him so near. Chauvenet held in his white gloved hand a gold cigarette case, which he opened with a deliberate care that displayed its embellished side. The smooth golden surface gleamed in the light, the helmet in blue and the white falcon flashed in Armitage's eyes. The meeting was clearly by intention, and a slight smile played about Chauvenet's lips in his enjoyment of the situation. Armitage smiled up at him in amiable acknowledgment of his courtesy and rose.

"You are very considerate, monsieur. I was just at the moment regretting our distinguished host's oversight in providing cigars alone. Allow me!"

He bent forward, took the outstretched open case into his own hands, removed a cigarette, snapped the case shut and thrust it into his trousers pocket—all, as it seemed, at a single stroke.

"My dear sir," began Chauvenet, white with rage.

"My dear M. Chauvenet," said Armitage, striking a match, "I am indebted to you for returning a trinket that I value highly."

The flame crept half the length of the stick while they regarded each other. Then Armitage raised it to the tip if his cigarette, lifted his head and blew a cloud of smoke.

"Are you able to prove your property, Mr. Armitage?" demanded Chauvenet furiously.

"My dear sir, they have a saying in this country that possession is nine points of the law. You had it—now I have it—wherefore it must be mine!"

He turned to find Chauvenet close at his side.

Chauvenet's rigid figure suddenly relaxed. He leaned against a chair with a return of his habitual nonchalant air and waved his hand carelessly.

"Between gentlemen—so small a matter!"

"To be sure, the merest trifle," laughed Armitage with entire good humor.

"And where a gentleman has the predatory habits of a burglar and housebreaker"—

"Then lesser affairs, such as picking up trinkets"—

"Come naturally; quite so!" And Chauvenet twisted his mustache with an air of immense satisfaction.

"But the genial art of assassination—there's a business that requires a calculating hand, my dear M. Chauvenet."

Chauvenet's hand went again to his lip.

"To be sure!" he ejaculated, with zest.

"But alone—alone one can do little. For larger operations one requires, I should say, courageous associates. Now, in my affairs, would you believe me, I am obliged to manage quite alone."

"How melancholy!" exclaimed Chauvenet.

"It is, indeed, very sad!" and Armitage sighed, tossed his cigarette into the smoldering grate and bade Chauvenet a ceremonious good night.

"Ah, we shall meet again, I dare say!"

"The thought does credit to a generous nature," responded Armitage and passed out into the house.

Chapter IX

"THIS IS AMERICA, MR. ARMITAGE."

SPRING, planting green and gold banners on old Virginia battlefields, crossed the Potomac and occupied Washington.

Shirley Claiborne called for her horse and rode forth to greet the conqueror. The afternoon was keen and sunny, and she had turned impatiently from a tea to which she was committed to seek the open. The call of the outdoor gods sang in her blood. Daffodils and crocuses lifted yellow flames and ruddy torches from every dooryard. She had pinned a spray of arbutus to the lapel of her tan riding coat. It spoke to her of the blue horizons of the Virginia hills. The young buds in the maples hovered like a mist in the treetops. Towering over all, the incomparable gray obelisk climbed to the blue arch and brought it nearer earth. Washington, the center of man's hope, is also in spring the capital of the land of heart's desire.

With a groom trailing after her, Shirley rode toward Rock creek—that rippling, murmuring, singing trifle of water that laughs day and night at the margin of the beautiful city, as though politics and statesmanship were the hugest joke in the world. The flag on the Austro-Hungarian embassy hung at half mast and symbols of mourning fluttered from the entire front of the house. Shirley lifted her eyes gravely as she passed. Her thoughts flew at once to the scene at the house of the secretary of state a week before, when Baron von Marhof had learned of the death of his sovereign, and by association she thought, too, of Armitage and of his look and voice as he said:

"Long live the emperor and king! God save Austria!"

Emperors and kings! They were as impossible today as a snowstorm. The brave ambassadors as they appeared at great Washington functions, wearing their decorations, always struck her as being particularly distinguished. It just now occurred to her that they were all linked to the crown and scepter, but she dismissed the whole matter and bowed to two dark ladies in a passing victoria with the quick little nod and bright smile that were the same for these titled members of the Spanish ambassador's household as for the young daughters of a western senator, who democratically waved their hands to her from a doorstep.

Armitage came again to her mind. He had called at the Claiborne house twice since the secretary's ball, and she had been surprised to find how fully she accepted him as an American now that he was on her own soil. He derived, too, a certain stability from the fact that the Sandersons knew him; he was, indeed, an entirely different person since the Montana senator definitely connected him with an American landscape. She had kept her own counsel touching the scene on the dark deck of the King Edward, but it was not a thing lightly to be forgotten. She was half angry with herself this mellow afternoon to find how persistently Armitage came into her thoughts and how the knife thrust on the steamer deck kept recurring in her mind and quickening her sympathy for a man of whom she knew so little, and she touched her horse impatiently with the crop and rode into the park at a gait that roused the groom to attention.

At a bend of the road Chauvenet and Franzel, the attache, swung into view, mounted, and as they met Chauvenet turned his horse and rode beside her.

"Ah, these American airs! This spring! Is it not good to be alive, Miss Claiborne?"

"It is all of that!" she replied. It seemed to her that the day had not needed Chauvenet's praise.

"I had hoped to see you later at the Wallingford tea," he continued.

"No teas for me on a day like this! The thought of being indoors is tragic."

She wished that he would leave her, for she had ridden out into the spring sunshine to be alone. He somehow did not appear to advantage in his riding coat—his belongings were too perfect. She had really enjoyed his talk when they had met here and there abroad, but she was in no mood for him now, and she wondered what he had lost by the transfer to America. He ran on airily in French, speaking of the rush of great and small social affairs that marked the end of the season.

"Poor Franzel is indeed triste. He is taking the death of Johann Wilhelm quite hard. But here in America the death of an emperor seems less important. A king or a peasant, what does it matter?"

"Better ask the robin in yonder budding chestnut tree, monsieur. This is not an hour for hard questions!"

"Ah, you are very cruel! You drive me back to poor, melancholy Franzel, who is indeed a funeral in himself."

"That is very sad, monsieur," and she smiled at him with mischief in her eyes. "My heart goes out to any one who is left to mourn—alone."

He gathered his reins and drew up his horse, lifting his hat with a perfect gesture.

"There are sadder blows than losing one's sovereign, mademoiselle!" and he shook his bared head mournfully and rode back to find his friend.

She sought now her favorite bridle paths, and her heart was light with the sweetness and peace of the spring as she heard the rush and splash of the creek, saw the flash of wings and felt the mystery of awakened life throbbing about her. The heart of a girl in spring is the home of dreams, and Shirley's heart overflowed with them until her pulse thrilled and sang in quickening cadences.

The groom marveled at the sudden changes of gait, the gallops that fell abruptly to a walk with the alternations of mood in the girl's heart, the pauses that marked a moment of meditation as she watched some green curving bank or a plunge of the mad little creek that sent a glory of spray whitely into the sunlight. It grew late, and the shadows of waning afternoon crept through the park. The crowd had hurried home to escape the chill of the spring dusk, but she lingered on, reluctant to leave, and presently left her horse with the groom that she might walk alone beside the creek in a place that was beautifully wild. About her lay a narrow strip of young maples, and beyond this the wide park road wound at the foot of a steep wooded cliff. The place was perfectly quiet save for the splash and babble of the creek.

Several minutes passed. Once she heard her groom speak to the horses, though she could not see him, but the charm of the place held her. She raised her eyes from the tumbling water before her and looked off through the maple tangle. Then she drew back quickly and clasped her riding crop tightly. Some one had paused at the farther edge of the maple brake and dismounted, as she had, for a more intimate enjoyment of the place. It was John Armitage, tapping his riding boot idly with his crop as he leaned against a tree and viewed the miniature valley.

He was a little below her, so that she saw him quite distinctly and caught a glimpse of his horse pawing, with arched neck, in the bridle path behind him. She had no wish to meet him there and turned to steal back to her horse when a movement in the maples below caught her eye. She paused, fascinated and alarmed by the cautious stir of the undergrowth.

The air was perfectly quiet; the disturbance was not caused by the wind.

The dark form rose and poised for a spring.

Then the head and shoulders of a man were disclosed as he crouched on hands and knees, watching Armitage. His small head and big body as he crept forward suggested to Shirley some fantastic monster of legend, and her heart beat fast with terror as a knife flashed in his hand. He moved more rapidly toward the silent figure by the tree, and still Shirley watched wide eyed, her figure tense and trembling, the hand that held the crop half raised to her lips, while the dark form rose and poised for a spring.

Then she cried out, her voice ringing clear and high across the little vale and sounding back from the cliff:

"Oh, oh!" And Armitage leaped forward and turned. His crop fell first upon the raised hand, knocking the knife far into the trees, then upon the face and shoulders of the Servian. The fellow turned and fled through the maple tangle, Armitage after him, and Shirley ran back toward the bridge where she had left her groom and met him halfway, hurrying toward her.

The fellow fled, Armitage after him.

"What is it, miss? Did you call?"

"No; it was nothing, Thomas—nothing at all," and she mounted and turned toward home.

Her heart was still pounding with excitement, and she walked her horse to gain composure. Twice, in circumstances most unusual and disquieting she had witnessed an attack on John Armitage by an unknown enemy. She recalled now a certain pathos of his figure as she first saw him leaning against the tree watching the turbulent little stream, and she was impatient to find how her sympathy went out to him. It made no difference who John Armitage was; his enemy was a coward, and the horror of such a menace to a man's life appalled her. She passed a mounted policeman, who recognized her and raised his hand in salute, but the idea of reporting the strange affair in the strip of woodland occurred to her only to be dismissed. She felt that here was an ugly business that was not within the grasp of a park patrolman, and, moreover, John Armitage was entitled to pursue his own course in matters that touched his life so closely. The thought of him reassured her. He was no simple boy to suffer such attacks to pass unchallenged, and so, dismissing him, she raised her head and saw him gallop forth from a bypath and rein his horse beside her.

"Miss Claiborne!"

The suppressed feeling in his tone made the moment tense, and she saw that his lips trembled. It was a situation that must have its quick relief, so she said instantly in a mockery of his own tone:

"Mr. Armitage!" She laughed. "I am almost caught in the dark. The blandishments of spring have beguiled me."

He looked at her with a quick scrutiny. It did not seem possible that this could be the girl who had called to him in warning scarce five minutes before, but he knew it had been she. He would have known her voice anywhere in the world. They rode silent beside the creek, which was like a laughing companion seeking to mock them into a cheerier mood. At an opening through the hills they saw the western horizon aglow in tints of lemon deeping into gold and purple. Save for the riot of the brook the world was at peace. She met his eyes for an instant, and their gravity and the firm lines in which his lips were set showed that the shock of his encounter had not yet passed.

To move or not to move, that is the question in Hazelton B. C., at the present moment. Since it was found that this northern town was not to be on the main line of the G. T. Another side to the matter is deserving and as a matter of fact is receiving due attention, is that at the present time there are more than thirty-one individuals, firms and corporations doing business in Hazelton now and the prospects that the population will be greatly increased before navigation closes this fall. The line of the G. T. P. enters the Buckley Valley eight miles east of Hazelton.

The announcement is made of the establishment of another new dairy, vegetable, florist and small fruit business in the city. The parties behind the project are Messrs. W. S. Vivian and H. Snow. The former has been in the city but a few months but has already identified himself with many movements, more especially with St. John's church. He has also been connected with the fruit business here, having been employed by Mr. Keene on his fruit ranch on 15th street. Mr. H. Snow has for some time been manager of Mr. C. F. Jackson's dairy ranch and is well and favorably known. He is also secretary of the North Vancouver Horticultural Society. The new partners have acquired land from Mr. P. Larson on 19th street and will open up for business at once. A portion of the grounds will be glassed in for growing early tomatoes, etc., and for budding-out plants. Messrs. Vivian & Snow will announce their P. O. Box and telephone number later.

The tennis tournament which was pulled off so successfully on Saturday last on the court of Ex-Alderman Crickmay was arranged almost in its entirety by Mr. W. S. Vivian, of Messrs. Vivian and Snow. The tournament will be continued next Saturday and from the success gained last Saturday it is altogether likely that the attendance will be much larger. The proceeds are understood to be in aid of St. John's church building fund.

Sister Teresine, sister superior of St. Augustine school at Sechelt, B. C., who has been attending the Vancouver exhibition in connection with the Indian children's exhibit from that school returned home yesterday. During her stay here she was the guest of St. Paul's school, Keith road.
