N. V. YACHT CLUB CRUISE

One of the most successful affairs of any character in the history of the North Vancouver Yacht Club was the first annual cruise up the North Arm to Brighton Beach yesterday afternoon. The day was ideal and the waters of the North Arm were as smooth as glass except for the murmering tide at the Second Narrows.

There were ten boats participated in the event and in all seventy-seven persons took part in the cruise.

The boats left North Vancouver about 2.30 o'clock and arrived at Brighton Beach about 4.15 o'clock.

Brighton Beach is the summer home of Ald. Smith. He owns in all 100 acres, 600 feet of which is accessible along the foreshore.

Most of the boats were decorated in gala day attire and the holiday feeling was prevalent in every quarter.

Soon after the arrival at the destination supper was served on the picnic grounds which front and overlook a wide expanse of the Inlet waters. The cove is suitably adapted for a summer home and is an exceptional location for picnics.

To a great extent the success of the outing, especially at Brighton Beach, was due to the preparations made and the hospitality of the Misses Smith. They not only provided seats and tables, hot water and sandwiches to the visitors, but also had the trees hung with Chinese lanterns and after darkness set in the illuminations were most attractive. Each boat party brought lunch along and when all was spread out a most appetizing dinner was presented. Shortly after victuals were put away numbers of the guests climbed the bluffs which are easy of access from the beach and which end abruptly in a precipitous descent on the opposite side of the waters' edge. From these elevations the scenery is grandeur in itself. Looking both north and south the silvery thread of water winding in and out of the numerous islands and tinged a golden tint with the setting sun and the mountain tops east and west fringed with crimson and bronze, with here and there a bold bluff standing out in bold relief against the shadowy background all contributed to the effect of a western sunset and particularly so in such a picturesque spot as the North Arm of Burrard Inlet.

When dusk set in a large log fire was built on the beach and around this the entire party assembled.

In a short address Commodore Robertson expressed his pleasure at the number present and the wholeheartedness with which they were entering into the spirit of the undertaking. He wished especially to thank Mr. and Mrs. Smith and the Misses Smith for their hospitality and courtesy. The toast was replied to in fitting style by Mr. Smith who expressed his satisfaction of the fact that Brighton had been chosen for this notable event.

The remainder of the evening was passed with songs in which nearly every one took part. It was ten o'clock when the final parting was taken coffee and cake being served as the guests departed for the wharf.

With the Eleanor leading and with the other boats following in tow with the sailing craft bringing up the rear, the string filed down the Inlet. It was the intention to go all the way home in this manner, but the Cutty-Sark broke her tow line and went adrift. It was some time before the launches were loosened from the string and this broke up the line of March. As it was the boats kept pretty much together and landed at the boat house about 12 o'clock.

J. H. KELLER, M. A.
Principal North Vancouver High School.

Mr. J. H. Keller, who has accepted the position of principal of the new high school to be established in this city at the opening of the autumn session on August 30th is a native of Ontario, his native town being Unionville in that province. His education was acquired at Richmond Hill and Markam High Schools, Stratford Collegiate Institute and Toronto University. At the University he was for three successive years an honor man in modern languages. Mr. Keller was graduated with the degree of B. A. at Bishop's College, Lennoxville, Quebec, and procured his M. A. degree from the same institution in 1903.

Mr. Keller's experience as a teacher includes the following. Three and one-half years in the public school at Headford, Ont.; five years as principal of the Cookshire academy, Cookshire, Que.; nine years as principal of Sherbrooke academy, Sherbrooke, Que.; one year as principal of the high school at Grand Forks, B. C., and one year as assistant high school principal at New Westminster.

Mr. Keller's record in his profession has been one of marked and uniform success from the standpoint of actual results. At Headford the school advanced from number three standing to number 1; at Cookshire, where all schools are ranked according to marks gained by successful candidates, the academy stood number five in the province when he took charge and steadily moved up until it stood number one. Its rank was also advanced from that of a model school to that of an academy. At Sherbrooke Mr. Keller's success was even more conspicuous, the academy experienced very rapid growth in all respects and during eight years 233 pupils were sent up for the government examinations of whom 208 were successful. At Grand Forks thirteen candidates tried the different examinations, of whom twelve passed. At New Westminster last year, where Mr. Keller was assistant principal, seventy per cent. of the candidates were successful.

Mr. Keller was one of a number of applicants for the local principalship, any one of whom would have filled the position to advantage and in selecting Mr. Keller out of a list of names representing teachers, prominent in the profession because of success attained, the trustees are confident that North Vancouver has secured an educationist who stands in the foremost ranks amongst his contemporaries in the province and one whose administration will win for the local high school a reputation second to none in the Canadian west.

ATTENDED METHODIST CONFERENCE

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. G. P. Graham and E. M. McDonald, the federal minister for Pictou, reversed the order of things at the Capital yesterday when they attended the Methodist General Conference now sitting in Victoria. The Premier gave a brief address as did also Hon. G. P. Graham.

PRIVILEGE GRANTED

During the three days of privilege allowed those having burning to do in connection with land clearing very many availed themselves of the opportunity and around the city and especially in the West Capilano section, many large fires were lit which were, however, considered safe due to the recent rains. The non-restricted period opened on Sunday morning and closed on Wednesday morning. Fire Warden Smith reported that everywhere through his district west of Lonsdale Ave. was in a practically safe condition and any fires that were thought to be smouldering away were to all appearances extinguished during the wet weather.

W. K. Burnett, a former resident of this place and for many years a member of the staff in the bank of B. N. A., Vancouver, returned to the coast this week after having been absent for about a year. During that time he held an important position in the Bank of B. N. A. in New York and afterwards severed his connections with that institution and spent about three months visiting the scenes of his childhood across the Atlantic. The call of the west brought him to North Vancouver where he will live retired.

WILL BUILD BLOCK

Mr. C. Wiegand, who now has under construction on First street just east of St. George's Ave., a two story block is contemplating the erection of another block in the near future on his other property on First street immediately east of the Russell House. It is understood that the ground floor will be for stores with suites of rooms above.

THIRD STREET THE CHAMPIONS

The strenuous labors of the four city baseball teams, 3rd, 1st, 4th and Real Estate constituting the city league have ended for the season and the former carried off the laurels and incidentally the mayor's cup and the medals presented by Dr. Morrison to the individual members of the winning team. The composition of the league has been rather unique particularly towards the end of the season when First street and Fourth street co-operated as one team and the Real Estate men practically pulled out of the league altogether. Notwithstanding this Third street retained the lead in spite of the combined forces of their opponents. The final standing of the league was:

	Won	Lost	Ties	Pct.
Third Street	4	1	2	.800
Fourth Street	4	2	1	.666
First Street	3	3	0	.800
Real Estate	0	5	1	.000

BAND CONCERT

The North Vancouver city band provided an excellent program in their new band stand in Victoria park on Wednesday evening. The large number of adherents evidenced their appreciation of the music by their repeated applause. The occasion was the formal opening of the new stand which has just recently been erected by the council for the use of the bandsmen and on this account Bandmaster Chance arranged a special program which was accomplished with commendable effectiveness. The program consisted of nine pieces and was of a variety and up-to-dateness in accord with the musical aspirations of Mr. Chance. The latter was heard to remark that when the season closed and he had got in a winter's drilling with his players he was confident that the North Vancouver city band would not have to take a back seat with any of the bands in the province.

C. E. CONVENTION

The North Vancouver delegates to the C. E. Convention at Victoria returned last Monday well pleased with the work accomplished in this popular branch of the church's work. Those composing the North Shore delegation were Miss Tuck, Miss K. Campbell, Mr. Stone and Messrs. D. and H. Hutcheson. They report that the whole convention was a marked success in every particular.

NORTH ARM REGATTA

A successful regatta is in prospect at Woodlands tomorrow when the campers of that popular summer resort will hold their first annual affair of this kind. The management is composed of most responsible parties and preparations are being made in anticipation of a large meet. The program will include gentlemen's single paddle canoe, ladies' single paddle canoe, married men's skiff race, lady cox, girls' double paddle canoe race, mixed tandem canoe, gasoline launch race, boys' unrigged skiff race, gentlemen's double paddle canoe race, gentlemsn's inrigged skiff race, lady cox, gunwale race (standing on the gunwale), crab race, upset canoe and tilting canoe. In addition to these there will be a series of swimming events. The entries for the races are required to be in the hands of the secretary, Mr. J. E. Ward, 421 Richards street or P. O. Box Woodlands, not later than Thursday, the 18th inst. First and second prizes will be offered for each event.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO PARENTS

Names and addresses of all students desirous of enrolment in North Vancouver High School for ensuing term, should be communicated to Mr. A. R. Steacy, Chairman of Board of Trustees, before the 20th inst.

CITY COUNCIL

At last Monday evening's meeting of the city council a letter was read from the deputy commissioner of lands, Victoria, acknowledging city's receipt in pursuance of Chief Fire Warden Gladwin's recommendations relative to protecting the timber lands and water supply in the vicinity of Lynn, Capilano and Seymour Creeks and promising the attention of the minister when he returned. Filed.

The B. C. Building News wrote asking to be supplied with photos of mayor and aldermen and any construction notes obtainable for insertion in their publication. Filed.

Sister Mary Amy, principal of the Indian boarding school, laid claim to exemption from taxation in respect of the school being a charitable institution. The request was granted.

Plan of lot 6, D. L. 548 was approved. The plan was passed.

The engineer made a number of recommendations regarding the subdivision of D. L. 552 and reported on the construction of the B. C. Electric Ry. Co's. line through this property.

Another recommendation from the engineer was to the effect that the B. C. E. R. Co. be asked to put in a crossing over their tracks on 4th street and Queensbury Ave., and that certain drains be put in to drain the water from between the tracks. The recommendation was adopted.

Financial accounts were passed as follows: Board of Works, $2,534.30; Water comm., $754.65 and fire committee for 12 days bush fire fighting, $452.65. Some of the men received as high as $60 for the 12 days' work and Ald. Fowler thought it was about time that the city was making new arrangements in the fire department. The fire chief was instructed to notify the council of bush fires hereafter so that expenses might if possible be collected from the parties responsible for starting the fire. A number of recommendations of the board of works were passed. The fire committee recommended that 6 firemen at $60 a month be employed, that a team of horses be purchased and that stalls be arranged for in the station. It was adopted.

An invitation was received from Reeve J. Y. McNaught to accompany the Dominion ministers on a trip of inspection up the Inlet the following day. It was accepted with thanks.

On the recommendation of the mayor bids for the recently passed by-laws, with the exception of the bridge by-law, will be sent to Victoria to receive the assent of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, totalling $100,440 will be called for in the open market at once.

Steps were authorized for the disposal of the school property in D. L. 273.

A special meeting will be called shortly to consider questions for submission to the U. B. C. M. convention which meets early next month.

The clerk was instructed to write for information regarding water rates in other cities.

The two bridge by-laws, the fire establishment by-law and the school extra-ordinary expenditure by-law were reconsidered and finally adopted.

An informal discussion was entered into on some of the questions which were thought advisable to bring before the U.B.C.M. convention and among others was some change being made in the election of the aldermanic board so that there could be more continuity of work from one council to another.

The local fire brigade had a call to Lonsdale ave. north yesterday about noon where a bush fire in the vicinity of Western Ave. had assumed menacing proportions. A number of houses on Lonsdale ave. about a block distant from the fire area were within the danger zone but the arrival of the fire fighters speedily relieved the situation.

ATTENDING THE EXHIBITION

Many North Vancouverites are availing themselves this week of the opportunity of attending the big Vancouver exhibition at Hastings Park. On Tuesday, the opening day of the exhibition when the opening ceremonies were conducted by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the city played the part of the deserted village during the afternoon when many of the stores and offices closed to take in the celebration. Throughout the week interest on the part of the North Shore people in this popular show in Vancouver continued unabated and especially in the evenings when the local launches were kept busy accommodating moonlight parties across the Inlet.

MR. GIBSON EXPLAINS

Editor Express:

Sir,—I wish to make a statement of the facts concerning the death of my horse reported to have been abused by me in an article published in a recent issue of your paper.

The horse, an apparently healthy animal, was being used along with another horse on the day in question in connection with some clearing work near the corner of Hendry Ave. and Keith road. My assistant and myself had just finished the day's work and were preparing to hitch up to start home. I drove the horses across the tongue and was in the act of hitching when this animal lurched toward me and backed against the wagon, at the same time kicking out viciously. I did the only thing possible and picked up a switch and tried to straighten him up for it was dangerous lest he should get tangled up in the wheel and perhaps throw the other horse. He started to lay down and I turned around for some other means to keep him on his feet and when I approached again I found him dead.

(Signed) J. GIBSON.

P. S.—He was in the habit of laying down even in harness after being worked.

WOMEN'S BEAUTY

It Can Never Be Perfect Without Luxuriant Hair

A head of luxuriant hair is sure to be attractive. But nature has not crowned every women with glorious hair. Some very loveable women she has treated rather scantily in this respect.

For instance, there are tens of thousands of women in Canada today who have harsh, faded and lusterless hair, who are unattractive simply because they do not know that nowadays even the whims of nature can be overruled by the genius of science.

If you are a woman without beautiful hair, do not permit your attractions to be hidden because of this slight misfortune.

Go today to The Lonsdale Pharmacy and buy a large bottle of Parisian Sage for 50 cents, use it each night, and you will notice the harsh, repulsive hair disappear, and in its place will come soft, silky, bright and luxuriant hair.

NORTH VANCOUVER, AUG. 19, 1910

NORTH VANCOUVER HIGH SCHOOL

The opportune nature of the action of the Board of School Trustees in taking steps to establish an institution of higher education in the form of a High School in the city with the opening of the autumn school term will be readily recognized by all who have at heart the educational interests of the North Shore and who are at all familiar with the facts with reference to the school population in the city and the district at the present time.

The number of children of school age in the city and the district is fully seven hundred on an inside estimate while the number at present residing on the North Shore who are qualified to attend a high school cannot be estimated at less than thirty-five. Of this latter number a considerable percentage will doubtless not be available for one reason or another for attendance at high school. At the same time there were at least eighteen students in this city who were in regular attendance at Vancouver high school last term and it is, therefore, reasonable to conclude that the local high school should begin with an attendance running from twenty to twenty-five students.

Such is the situation as it actually exists at the present time. If expectations were based only on the school population as it stands today, it is quite evident that, starting with twenty pupils, in attendance at the high school, a public school population of seven hundred would regularly supply high school entrance classes sufficiently large to effect a steady increase in the numbers of the high school student body. Once a high school is an actual fact on the North Shore, however, its very presence will doubtless encourage public school pupils to qualify for attendance in the largest possible numbers and will likewise induce many of them to proceed with a high school course, who, otherwise would not avail themselves of this more advanced education.

But far from remaining stationary, the public school population of North Vancouver city and district is destined to increase at a very rapid rate. For several terms past, this increase has been sufficiently rapid to make the problem of keeping public school accommodation up to the requirements a very persistent and imperative one and future prospects practically assure the fact that this problem will be even more formidable for the years to come. There are, therefore, no uncertainties whatever attached to the matter of an ever ready supply of new students for the local high school. In point of fact, there is very good reason to conclude that the time will not be far distant when the problem in this department as well as in the public school department, will resolve itself into that of providing adequate accommodation for the increasing numbers of students desirous of availing themselves of the advantages of such an institution.

In another important respect the establishment of a high school will exert a favorable influence upon the increase of the residential population of the city and the district, for the reason that many families having members who have been in attendance at high school or who are eligible for such attendance will make their home on the North Shore, who in the absence of such facilities, would locate elsewhere.

That the action of the trustees in this matter is timely is further evident from the fact that the high schools of Vancouver, at which local pupils have been permitted to attend, are now so overcrowded that the city is face to face with a somewhat embarassing problem as to accommodation. Inasmuch as the North Vancouver contingent has been sufficiently large to form a nucleus for a local high school, it is quite in order that this city should no longer trespass on the magnanimity of the neighboring city, but that it should assume its own responsibilities in this respect. In point of fact, no other course could be considered becoming North Vancouver under the circumstances.

Again, failure to establish a High School with the opening of the autumn term would have necessitated the postponement of that departure for a full year for several reasons, namely, students wishing to qualify for the several examinations for which they are prepared at the high school require the full year for the purpose, consequently all local high school students in the absence of a local school would of necessity start the work in the Vancouver schools at the opening of the term. To undertake to open a high school locally with the New Year term would only result in failure inasmuch as students could not be expected to break away from the schools at which they were attending in the middle of the year, thus handicapping themselves in the race for the sake of attending a local school. Further than this, as the summer holidays mark the logical close of the school year, teachers naturally hold themselves in readiness for a change at that time, if they are at all open for such and consequently the facilities for procuring the services of the best instructors are immensely better at the close of the summer than at the close of the winter term. To start high school work during the winter would have been to court failure to a greater or lesser degree and to postpone the movement for another year would have been detrimental to the educational and other interests of the city so that the trustee board have acted wisely in the course which they have adopted.

Owing to the fact that the new school building on Upper Lonsdale Avenue will not be completed for some time, temporary quarters for the high school have been secured at the corner of Lonsdale and Eighth street. Every necessary provision will be made for the comfort of the students and all requisite equipment will be procured, in order that the work may proceed under the most favorable conditions until such time as the two rooms intended for high school purposes in the new building are available.

In Mr. J. H. Keller M.A., the trustee board have secured as principal a man of scholastic attainments, of extended experience and pronounced success in his profession. Parents having children for whom they desire the advantages of high school training, have every assurance that the instruction imparted in the local school will be fully equal to that to be found anywhere else, while the fact that the classes will be smaller than in very large schools will afford opportunity for more or less personal attention to students which will materially assist their progress and enhance their probabilities of success.

North Vancouver high school should receive unanimous and hearty support from its inception, from all those who properly appreciate the educational interests of the city as well as from those who are in any way interested in advanced education.

THE FEDERAL PARTY AND THE NORTH SHORE

It is earnestly to be hoped that the efforts being made to induce Sir Wilfrid Laurier to visit North Vancouver before finally proceeding on his return journey will meet with success. There are without doubt many obstacles in the way of this being accomplished as the demands made upon the time and the attention of the Premier are probably sufficient to occupy months instead of days in order to comply with them all. At the same time North Vancouver is a component part of and is destined to become a very important factor in that great metropolis which is to repose about Burrard Inlet and inasmuch as it is so readily accessible from Vancouver, it is not at all unreasonable to entertain the hope that Sir Wilfrid may arrange upon his return from Prince Rupert to accord the North Shore a few hours of his time. That a right royal welcome awaits him should he honor this side of the harbor with his presence, goes without saying.

Should it transpire, however, that the Premier is unable personally to accept the invitation extended to him, it would be gratifying to North Vancouver citizens if he would be good enough to prevail upon some of the members of his party to make the visit upon his behalf. In view of the fact that extensive railway developments are pending on the North Shore and that Second Narrows is soon to be spanned by a railway and traffic bridge toward the cost of which $600,000 is already subscribed—$350,000 of which is contributed by the district and the city of North Vancouver and $250,000 by the provincial government—it would be quite in harmony with the general fitness of things if the Honorable Geo. P. Graham, Minister of Railways for the Dominion, would be good enough to avail himself of the opportunity afforded by his presence in Vancouver, to accept the hospitality of the district and the city of North Vancouver for the purpose of inspecting our magnificent waterfront (with particular reference to the proposed location of Second Narrows bridge) and of familiarizing himself upon the ground with the salient features of those splendid resources and possibilities of which the North Shore is the possessor. It would certainly be a matter of very keen regret upon the part of the citizens of North Vancouver should the friendly advances being made in this regard, fail to accomplish, at any rate, that amount of success.

A large majority of North Vancouver's prominent Liberals as well as many of the North Shore Conservatives attended the large public meeting given in the Horse Show building in Vancouver on Tuesday evenin when the speaker of the occasion was Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Many o those who secured reserved seats for the evening arrived too late and had to take pot luck which was extremely unsatisfactory on account of the immense crowd.

A Literary Column

Somewhat About Books and Writers

The formation is announced of an English academy of letters on the lines of the world famed L'Academie Francaise. The birth of the French academy came about in this fashion. Certain writers were in the habit of meeting privately in the house of one conrart for the discussion and exchange of views and opinions. Richelieu accidentally heard of these meetings, and being of opinion that a body of men who should have jurisdiction in the realm of language and letters would be a desirable national institution, forthwith by letters patent on the second of January, 1635, founded L'Academie Francaise. The need of a similar institution which should have authority in the sphere of English literature has long been apparent. The purity and elegance of the English tongue has been open too long to attack by individuals and cults who have sought to fasten their foibles upon it. There is room alike for the adoption into the vocabulary of new and potent phrases, and for the preservation in their ancient dress of words, whose formation and spelling stretch dimly back to the dawn of letters. Those who may be interested in the question of spelling reform which is often brought forward, might read with advantage, Archbishop Trench's lectures on the study of words, which though delivered over half-a-century ago, still hold high place among etymological treatises, not least of their merits being the fascinating way in which the subject is grouped under the various heads. Of the Poetry in Words, of the Morality in Words, of the History in Words, of the Rise of New Words, of the Distinction of Words, and the Schoolmaster's Use of Words.

George Borrow's works have a great hold upon the reading public, there must be an enormous number of copies of "Lavengro," "Romany Rye," and "The Bible in Spain." The weirdness of the style, the unconventionality and wanderlust of the man, his faculty for getting in and out of uncommon happenings together, enthuse very unlikely material into life-long Bonovians. His philology was always coming out on top and the scene in the dingle where he teases the long suffering Isabel into tackling the conjugation of Armenian verbs is side-splitting and by contrast the pathetic scene at his father's bedside is one of the most affecting.

CROP CONDITIONS

Ottawa, Aug. 12.—The census bulletin shows that the conditions of field crops in Canada this year have been greatly modified by temperature and rainfall, and that between the east and the west it is hardly possible to make a statement of averages that will not be misleading. In the eastern provinces growth has been uniformly good throughout July, and the percentages of condition have been high for every crop; but in extensive tracts of the northwest provinces drouth has prevailed and crops are reported in every stage of condition. The northerly parts of these provinces have been largely exe pt from the drouth and there the per cent. conditions are high. It is difficult to indicate fairly an average of conditions for the east and west which does not take account of the areas sown, and these have been considerably reduced since the June report. The August report will give revised figures from which yields may be estimated.

In comparing the per cent. condition of crops for 1909 and 1910 it should be remembered that fall wheat, rye, peas, buckwheat, mixed grains, beans, potatoes, hay and clover and corn are principally produced in the eastern provinces, and spring wheat and flax mostly in the northwestern provinces, with oats and barley in nearly equal proportions in the two regions.

The average condition of spring wheat is 77 for 1910 to 84.57 for 1909, and of oats 79.57 to 87.78 for all Canada, which is substantially lower than the averages for the east. In the three northwest provinces the condition of spring wheat is 62, of oats 58.62 and of barley 63.60.

The estimated yield of fall wheat in the country is 18,724,000 bushels, being 26.47 bushels per acre. The hay and clover crop is estimated at 15,490,000 tons, or 1.80 tons per acre, and of alfalfa 1.92 tons per acre.

A new farming settlement has been opened up at Brouse, B. C. near to the town of Nakusp. A number of settlers have already taken up holdings and others are following.

The Nelson News says the coast is just becoming awake to what the Kootenay possesses in the Sheep Creek gold camp. The interest which the coast people are taking in the new camp is but in its infancy.

TETE JUANE CACHE

"Centuries ago an old towheaded French trapper used to travel this trail in the spring, bringing out his winter's catch of furs to Fort Edmonton, nearly three hundred miles eastward on the plains. He it was that told of the great pathway through the mountains. So in time it came to be known among the settlers as the Yellowhead's pass. On the west of the mountains, where the old man used to make his base for his trapping excursions and leave his supplies or cache, his nickname may still be read on every map of British North America as the "Tete Juane Cache," the French mission taught Indians' way of describing the place where the yellow-headed man left his supply of flour and bacon brought in once a year from the settlements on packhorses."

Following the lead of several of her sister municipalities Burnaby is now working on a water system for supplying the residents of the district with water and also as an effective protection against fires.

HOLIDAY RAMBLES IN THE BRITISH ISLES

(Written for the Express)

Yorkshire would not be nearly so charming a holiday ground as it is if it were any nearer London than it is, yet when we travel thither we would lessen the miles if we could. When we find that we cannot shorten the miles we determine to shorten the minutes. This explains why, when I went from London to Scarborough last week, I chose the quickest route, the Great Northern. I fear that few of us in these modern days are philosophic when we consult timetables.

The world knows too much of Scarborough, "Queen of Watering Places," and too little of Bridlington, Filey, Whitby, and Saltburn-on-Sea, her sister resorts on the Yorkshire coast.

I am not saying that Scarborough does not deserve her distinction, her place of high supremacy. Indeed, I readily grant that her claims on the public's favour are many and great. Yet I am jealous for the good repute of her humble sisters —Bridlington, Filey, Whitby, and Saltburn-on-Sea. They also have fairness, beauty and powers of enchantment. They also can give holiday-makers their full desire.

Bridlington—its own people call it "Brid"—is Scarborough on a smaller scale, but without Scarborough's enclosing cliffs. That is, it has a Spa, a quay, terraced gardens, a parade, a foreshore, pierrots, a band, a pavilion, and magnificent sands. Like Scarborough, it deliberately seeks to entertain its summer guests, and provides for their happiness a multitude of pleasures. It is coy, smiling and winsome, eager to please, and successful in its endeavour.

Northward from Bridlington, its white cliffs in easy view, is Flamborough Head of evil fame, for on its rocks through many centuries vessels have smashed themselves and drowned their passengers and crews. I had graphic evidence of the terrible nature of this part of the Yorkshire coast, a steamer's boiler-head and other vestiges of wreckage being pointed out to me by the fishermen. They told me, too, sad tales of death and destruction, and of the fate of comrades who had lost their lives in efforts to succour others.

Flamborough Head has some very remarkable caves, which every visitor to Scarborough, Filey and Bridlington aims to see and explore, and which play no small part in one of Blackmore's romances, "Mary Anerley." At Speeton, three miles farther along the coast, the cliffs are the nesting-place of sea-birds, and the scene, in consequence, of many deeds of bold daring, for fishermen at the peril of their lives descend the rocks to gather eggs.

Simplicity and Peace

Midway between Bridlington and Scarborough is Filey, a resort which appeals irresistibly to those who love simplicity and peace. It is a most restful place with perfect sands, an ideal spot for family holidays. Of all the resorts along the Yorkshire coast Filey pleased me most, for it gave the surest promise of repose for mind and body. It is built for the most part on the summit of a high cliff, which forms a wide bay. Filey has a "brig", a natural breakwater, and when the waves lash against it the sight is one not soon to be forgotten. Among the charms of Filey is a thickly-wooded ravine, a sylvan solitude, leading from the town to the sea. If one were to ask me where to go for a quiet holiday I think I should say to him "Filey."

A Moorland Walk

From Filey I travelled by train past Scarborough to the village of Cloughton, not to see Cloughton, but to begin there a tramp over a Yorkshire moor.

The first part of the road to the moors was between pine woods which made the air sweet and delicious with their fragrance. Then came the moorland, with the thick heather spreading its blackness everywhere—a blackness soon to be turned to purple. In the far distances the ridges were white with the mist that ever gathers on the wolds. Before me the fire of the sunset burned dully through watery clouds.

Of animate life there was little to be seen. Here and there black-faced sheep stared at me when my approach disturbed their peace.

The only sounds that broke the stillness were the curlew's wild notes and the cuckoo's soft call. Man's presence on the moors was marked by turf-heaps, the fuel for his winter fires. Of almost pathetic interest were a few thorn trees growing, beside a fallen wall of stones. Their sparce branches were flung outward, rigid, like the tatters of a ragged banner in a gale; on the north side of their trunks not a limb! They were mute witnesses of a stubborn and barely successful fight for dear existence against the mighty blasts which had swept and continue to sweep the uplands of the moors.

ROBIN HOOD'S BAY

It was ten o'clock when I reached a wayside inn, but the twilight lingered still—bright enough for a little company of men to finish their game of quoits. In the early hours of the morning I completed my journey over the moors, and by a road through dales, to Robin Hood's Bay. Here is a place to stir the imagination, to conjure up pictures of smugglers and revenue men, of secret cellars, and furtive barter. Here Robin Hood had a refuge and from this place he made sallies on the monks and abbots of Whitby. This picturesque fishing village still retains its ancient countenance. The march of time has not straightened or widened the steep and tortuous streets which lead to the sea. So attractive is Robin Hood's Bay that there has grown up a new town on the summits of the cliffs, and this new town will expand, for Robin Hood's Bay leaves haunting memories.

WHITBY AND SALTBURN

Whitby is four miles to the north—a town split in two by the River Esk. On a bold ridge, known as the East Cliff, stand the ruins of Whitby Abbey, a landmark for many miles. Here, too, is an Anglian cross, a memorial to Caedmon, the Saxon singer, the father of British poetry. The West Cliff, across the river, is where the world of fashion makes its abode. As a summer resort Whitby is a captivating place not only because of its beautiful situation, and of the charm of its antiquities, but also because of its hinterland—the valley of the Esk, the moors of Goathland, and the delightful villages which lie near at hand. The longest vacation spent at Whitby will prove to be all too short.

Beyond Whitby are several watering places, of steadily increasing fame—Sandsend, Runswick, Staithes, Saltburn, and Redcar. I can scarcely do more than name them. Saltburn is a place held in high favour by the ironmasters of the north, many of whom live here all the year round. Its sands are said to be the finest in Europe, a statement which those who see them have no trouble in believing. So fine are they that every year they make a speeding-ground for motor car trials. Redcar, five miles beyond, is a trippers' rendezvous.

Of Scarborough I need say not a word more than I have already said. My plea today is not for her, but for the lesser-known resorts which share with her the business and honor of making attractive the Yorkshire coast.

Signals of Distress

North Vancouver People Should Know How to Read and Heed Them

Sick kidneys give many signals of distress.

The secretions are dark, contain a sediment.

Passages are frequent, scanty, painful.

Backache is constant, day and night.

Headaches and dizzy spells are frequent.

The weakened kidneys need quick help.

Don't delay! Use a special kidney remedy.

MacGregor evidence proves this statement.

James Simpson of MacGregor, Man., says: "I think Booth's Kidney Pills a very fine remedy. They have completely relieved me of a very sore lame back, and swelling and cramps in my limbs. I knew this was caused by a weakness or derangement of the kidneys. I used several remedies which did not help me to any extent. Then I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills and procured a box. They were very quick in relieving my back and the swelling and cramps have left my limbs. I am pleased to recommend Booth's Kidney Pills as an A. No. 1 remedy.

The Port of Missing Men

BY MEREDITH NICHOLSON

utes that the deck lights had been out of order pointed to an espionage that was both close and daring. He was greatly surprised and more shaken than he wished Shirley to believe. The thing was disquieting enough, and it could not but impress her strangely that he, of all the persons on board, should have been the object of so unusual an assault. He was in the disagreeable plight of having subjected her to danger, and as they entered the brilliant saloon he freed himself of the ulster with its telltale gash and sought to minimize her impression of the incident.

Shirley did not refer to the matter again, but resolved to keep her own counsel. She felt that any one who would accept the one chance in a thousand of stifling [illegible] enemy on a steamer deck must be actuated by very bitter hatred. She knew that to speak of the affair to her father or brother would be to alarm them and prejudice them against John Armitage, about whom her brother at least had entertained doubts. And it is not reassuring as to a man of whom little or nothing is known that he is menaced by secret enemies.

He scrutinized every name on the passenger list.

The attack had found Armitage unprepared and off guard, but with swift reaction his wits were at work. He at once sought the purser and scrutinized every name on the passenger list. It was unlikely that a steerage passenger could reach the saloon deck unobserved. A second cabin passenger might do so, however, and he sought among the names in the second cabin list for a clew. He did not believe that Chauvenet or Durand had boarded the King Edward. He himself had made the boat only by a quick dash, and he had left those two gentlemen at Geneva with much to consider.

It was, however, quite within the probabilities that they would send some one to watch him, for the two men whom he had overheard in the dark house on the Boulevard Froissart were active and resourceful rascals, he had no doubt. Whether they would be able to make anything of the cigarette case he had stupidly left behind he could not conjecture, but the importance of recovering the packet he had cut from Chauvenet's coat was not a trifle that rogues of their caliber would ignore. There was, the purser said, a sick man in the second cabin, who had kept close to his berth. The steward believed the man to be a continental of some sort, who spoke bad German. He had taken the boat at Liverpool, paid for his passage in gold, and, complaining of illness, retired, evidently for the voyage. His name was Peter Ludovic, and the steward described him in detail.

"That will do," said Armitage, grinning at the ease with which he identified the man.

"You understand that it is wholly irregular for us to let such a matter pass without acting," said the purser.

"It would serve no purpose and might do harm. I will take the responsibility."

"Zmai —; travels as Peter Ludovic."

Armitage carried the envelope which he had cut from Chauvenet's coat pinned into an inner pocket of his waistcoat, and since boarding the King Edward he had examined it twice daily to see that it was intact. The three red wax seals were in blank, replacing those of like size that had originally been affixed to the envelope, and at once after the attack on the dark deck he opened the packet and examined the papers, some half dozen sheets of thin linen written in a clerk's clear hand in black ink. There had been no mistake in the matter. The packet which Chauvenet had purloined from the old prime minister at Vienna had come again into Armitage's hands. He was daily tempted to destroy it and cast it in bits to the sea winds, but he was deterred by the remembrance of his last interview with the old prime minister.

"Do something for Austria—something for the empire." These phrases repeated themselves over and over again in his mind until they rose and fell with the cadence of the high, wavering voice of the cardinal archbishop of Vienna as he chanted the mass of requiem for Count Ferdinand von Stroebel.

Chapter VIII

"THE KING IS DEAD; LONG LIVE THE KING!"

JOHN ARMITAGE lingered in New York for a week, not to press the Claibornes too closely, then went to Washington. He wrote himself down on the register of the New American as John Armitage, Cinch Tight, Mont., and took a suit of rooms high up, with an outlook that swept Pennsylvania avenue.

It was on the evening of a bright April day that he thus established himself, and after he had unpacked his belongings he stood long at the window and watched the lights leap out of the dusk over the city. He was in Washington because Shirley Claiborne lived there, and he knew that even if he wished to do so he could no longer throw an air of inadvertence into his meetings with her. He had been very lonely in those days when he first saw her abroad. The sight of her had lifted his mood of depression, and now, after those enchanted hours at sea, his coming to Washington had been inevitable.

Many things passed through his mind as he stood at the open window. His life, he felt, could never be again as it had been before, and he sighed deeply as he recalled his talk with the old prime minister at Geneva. Then he laughed quietly as he remembered Chauvenet and Durand and the dark house on the Boulevard Froissart, but the further recollection of the attack made on his life on the deck of the King Edward sobered him, and he turned away from the window impatiently. He had seen the sick second cabin passenger leave the steamer at New York, but had taken no trouble either to watch or to avoid him. Very likely the man was under instructions and had been told to follow the Claibornes home, and the thought of their identification with himself by his enemies angered him. Chauvenet was likely to appear in Washington at any time and would undoubtedly seek the Claibornes at once. The fact that the man was a scoundrel might in some circumstances have afforded Armitage comfort, but here again Armitage's mood grew dark. Jules Chauvenet was undoubtedly a rascal of a shrewd and dangerous type, but who, pray, was John Armitage?

The bell in his entry rang, and he flashed on the lights and opened the door.

"Well, I like this, setting yourself up here in gloomy splendor and never saying a word. You never deserved to have any friends, John Armitage!"

"Jim Sanderson, come in!" Armitage grasped the hands of a red bearded giant of forty, the possessor of alert brown eyes and a big voice.

Senator Sanderson.

"It's my rural habit of reading the register every night in search of constituents that brings me here. They said they guessed you were in, so I just came up to see whether you were opening a poker game or had come to sneak a claim past the watchdog of the treasury."

The caller threw himself into a chair and rolled a fat, unlighted cigar about in his mouth. "You're a peach, all right, and as offensively hale and handsome as ever. When are you going to the ranch?"

"Well, not just immediately. I want to sample the fleshpots for a day or two."

"You're getting soft; that's what the matter with you. You're afraid of the spring zephyrs on the Montana range. Well, I'll admit that it's rather more diverting here."

"There is no debating that, senator. How do you like being a statesman? It was so sudden and all that. I read an awful roast of you in an English paper. They took your election to the senate as another evidence of the complete domination of our politics by the plutocrats."

Sanderson winked prodigiously.

"The papers have rather skinned me; but, on the whole, I'll do very well. They say it isn't respectable to be a senator these days, but they oughtn't to hold it up against a man that he's rich. If the Lord put silver in the mountains of Montana and let me dig it out, it's nothing against me, is it?"

"Decidedly not! And if you want to invest it in a senatorship it's the Lord's hand again."

"Why, sure!" And the senator from Montana winked once more. "But it's expensive. I've got to be elected again next winter—I'm only filling out Billings' term—and I'm not sure I can go up against it."

"But you are nothing if not unselfish. If the good of the country demands it you'll not falter, if I know you."

"There's hot water heat in this hotel, so please turn off the hot air. I saw your foreman in Helena the last time I was out there, and he was sober. I mention the fact, knowing that I'm jeopardizing my reputation for veracity, but it's the Lord's truth. Of course you spent Christmas at the old home in Maryland—one of those yule log and plum pudding Christmases you read of in novels. You Englishmen"—

"My dear Sanderson, don't call me English! I've told you a dozen times that I'm not English."

"So you did, so you did! I'd forgotten that you're so sensitive about it," and Sanderson's eyes regarded Armitage intently for a moment, as though he were trying to recall some previous discussion of the young man's nativity.

"I offer you free swing at the bar, senator. May I summon a Montana cocktail? You taught me the ingredients once—three dashes orange bitters, two dashes acid phosphate, half a jigger of whisky and half a jigger of Italian vermuth. You undermined the constitutions of half Montana with that mess."

"The sprinkling cart for me! I've got a nerve specialist engaged by the year to keep me out of sanitariums. See here, I want you to go with us tonight to the secretary of state's push. Not many of the Montana boys get this far from home, and I want you for exhibition purposes. Say, John, when I saw "Cinch Tight, Montana," written on the register down there it increased my circulation seven beats! You're all right, and I guess you're about as good an American as they make—anywhere—John Armitage!"

The function for which the senator from Montana provided an invitation for Armitage was a large affair in honor of several new ambassadors. At 10 o'clock Senator Sanderson was introducing Armitage right and left as one of his representative constituents. Armitage and he owned adjoining ranches in Montana, and Sanderson called upon his neighbor to stand up boldly for their state before the minions of effete monarchies.

Mrs. Sanderson had asked Armitage to return to her for a little Montana talk, as she put it, after the first rush of their entrance was over, and as he waited in the drawing room for an opportunity of speaking to her he chatted with Franzel, an attache of the Austrian embassy, to whom Sanderson had introduced him. Franzel was a gloomy young man with a monocle, and he was waiting for a particular girl, who happened to be the daughter of the Spanish ambassador. And, this being his object, he had chosen his position with care, near the door of the drawing room, and Armitage shared for the moment the advantage that lay in the Austrian's point of view. Armitage had half expected that the Claibornes would be present at a function as comprehensive of the higher official world as this, and he intended asking Mrs. Sanderson if she knew them as soon as opportunity offered. The Austrian attache proved tiresome, and Armitage was about to drop him, when suddenly he caught sight of Shirley Claiborne at the far end of the broad hall. Her head was turned partly toward him. He saw her for an instant through the throng. Then his eyes fell upon Chauvenet at her side, talking with liveliest animation. He was not more than her own height, and his profile presented the clean, sharp effect of a cameo. The vivid outline of his dark face held Armitage's eyes. Then as Shirley passed on through an opening in the crowd her escort turned, holding the way open for her, and Armitage met the man's gaze.

It was with an accented gravity that Armitage nodded his head to some declaration of the melancholy attache at this moment. He had known when he left Geneva that he had not done with Jules Chauvenet, but the man's prompt appearance surprised Armitage. He ran over the names of the steamers by which Chauvenet might easily have sailed from either a German or a French port and reached Washington quite as soon as himself. Chauvenet was in Washington, at any rate, and not only there, but socially accepted and in the good graces of Shirley Claiborne.

The somber attache was speaking of the Japanese.

"They must be crushed—crushed," said Franzel. The two had been conversing in French.

"Yes, he must be crushed," returned Armitage absentmindedly, in English; then, remembering himself, he repeated the affirmation in French, changing the pronoun.

Mrs. Sanderson was now free. She was a pretty, vivacious woman, much younger than her stalwart husband—a college graduate whom he had found teaching school near one of his silver mines.

"Welcome once more, constituent! We're proud to see you, I can tell you. Our host owns some marvelous tapestries, and they're hung out tonight for the world to see." She guided Armitage toward the secretary's gallery on an upper floor. Their host was almost as famous as a connoisseur as for his achievements in diplomacy, and the gallery was a large apartment in which every article of furniture, as well as the paintings, tapestries and specimens of pottery, was the careful choice of a thoroughly cultivated taste.

"It isn't merely an art gallery. It's the most beautiful room in America," murmured Mrs. Sanderson.

"I can well believe it. There's my favorite Vibert—I wondered what had become of it."

"It isn't surprising that the secretary is making a great reputation by his dealings with foreign powers. It's a poor ambassador who could not be persuaded after an hour in this splendid room. The ordinary affairs of life should not be mentioned here. A king's coronation would not be out of place—in fact, there's a chair in the corner against that Gobelin that would serve the situation. The old gentleman by that cabinet is the Baron von Marhof, the ambassador from Austria-Hungary. He's a brother-in-law of Count von Stroebel, who was murdered so horribly in a railway carriage a few weeks ago."

"Ah, to be sure! I haven't seen the baron in years. He has changed little."

"Then you knew him—in the old country?"

"Yes; I used to see him—when I was a boy," remarked Armitage.

Mrs. Sanderson glanced at Armitage sharply. She had dined at his ranch house in Montana and knew that he lived like a gentleman; that his house, its appointments and service were unusual for a western ranchman. And she recalled, too, that she and her husband had often speculated as to Armitage's antecedents and history without arriving at any conclusion in regard to him.

The room had slowly filled, and they strolled about, dividing attention between distinguished personages and the not less celebrated works of art.

"Oh, by the way, Mr. Armitage, there's the girl I have chosen for you to marry. I suppose it would be just as well for you to meet her now, though that dark little foreigner seems to be monopolizing her."

"I am wholly agreeable," laughed Armitage. "The sooner the better and be done with it."

"Don't be so frivolous. There, you can look safely now. She's stopped to speak to that bald and pink justice of the supreme court—the girl with the brown eyes and hair. Have a care!"

Wealth Produced in the Dominion

The natural effect of increase in business has been to direct to Canada a great volume of immigration, and that, again has reacted for the benefit of business. One of the most encouraging features of the immigration is that so many are coming in from the States and Great Britain. The tide of emigration, which 12 years ago flowed from Canada towards the United States, is now reversed and immigrants of the very best class are pouring from the United States into Canada. Last year alone the Dominion received 90,996 immigrants from the States who brought with them in money and goods at least $85,000,000. The total immigration for the year was 181,281. All signs point to this being the greatest immigration year in the history of Canada. The reports for April, 1909, show the arrivals from the States were 12,069 and the figures so far available for April this year indicate that the number will exceed 14,000. For the three months of January, February and March, 1909, 12,913 immigrants arrived from Great Britain, while for the same period this year the number is 23,355, and that in spite of the fact that all who arrive, and who have no relatives or employment to go to, are required to have at least $25 in their possession.

MANUFACTURING

Having now observed how the country has grown in its financial, industrial and commercial business, it may be of interest to look at the various department's of the Dominion's business to see how they have grown from small undertakings, comparatively to immense proportions they now have attained. Some idea of Canada's progress may be gathered if the industries are taken up section by section. Unfortunately, we are just on the eve of the date of another census of the Dominion and we are also too near the end of the Dominion year to have the revised government returns for the year ending March 31st last; but we have the results of the monthly bulletins issued, and so we are able to come very near to what will be the correct figures for the year. During 1909 it is estimated Canada exported nearly $30,000,000 of manufactured goods of which $10,000,000 went to Great Britain and about the same amount to the States. These figures are nearly double what they were in 1899. The capital employed in Canadian manufacturing concerns amounts to over $1,200,000,000 and the values of the products of these manufacturing concerns exceeded $1,000,000,000, against $481,750,000 in 1899. Canada's tariff has led to the establishing of over 150 branches of United States manufacturing concerns in the Dominion, and the capital of these branches is estimated at $200,000,000. It is estimated that at least 1,000,000 workers are employed in Canadian manufacturing concerns.

AGRICULTURE

Agriculture in all its branches has shown a marvellous expansion during the last ten years, and in almost every department the increase is fully 70 per cent, except in dairying which is showing occasional decreases, because of the steadily increasing home consumption. The wheat production in 1899 was almost 48,000,000 bushels while in 1909 it was 167,744,000 bushels. The value of last year's yield was $141,320,000. The total value of last year's field crops amounted to $532,992,100. The grain exported reached 60,000,000 bushels and valued at $53,782,028, as against 31,000,000 bushels and values of $18,100,000 respectively in 1899.

LIVE STOCK

As regards cattle and live stock generally on Nov. 30, 1909 Canada had 2,118,165 horses, valued at $288,000,000; 2,917,476 milch cows valued at $103,000,000; 4,630,000 other cattle valued at $126,000,000; 2,931,746 sheep valued at $5,750,000, and 3,670,000 swine valued at $34,000,000. The total value of Canadian live stock was, therefore, $558,790,000 in 1909, against $320,000,000 in 1899. The value of animals exported reached $11,798,02, which was an increase on 1908 but a decrease as compared with previous years owing no doubt, to Britain's embargo on live cattle. In dairying Canada's exports are, as already stated, falling off, although the production increases. The total of her dairy products amounts to $100,080,000 of which $22,000,000 is exported. As a fruit growing country Canada is growing in importance. The fruit farms of British Columbia are assuming immense magnitude and are already valued at several million dollars. Nova Scotia and Ontario, with Prince Edward Island are the other great apple and general fruit growing provinces. Last year Nova Scotia exported 600,000 barrels of apples. The grape and apple crop of Ontario are valued at over $15,000,000.

LUMBERING

The Canadian lumbering trade is difficult to value, because each of the provinces has practical control of the lumber within its area. The Dominion government returns, as far as completed, indicate that last year fully $200,000,000 was invested in the trade, and that the output was worth a little over $120,000,000, of which output fully $40,000,000 was exported. There are restrictions on pulp wood export, the intention being to encourage the manufacture of pulp and paper in the Dominion. The governments are all paying considerable attention to reforestation, and the results are so far very satisfactory. It is calculated that Canada has an inexhaustible pulpwood area, in view of the reforestation plans adopted.

MINING

The immense mineral wealth of Canada is a factor of the magnitude of which few have an adequate idea and it is daily becoming more apparent that even the provincial gavernments have no certain figures relative to the mineral area of the various provinces or the Dominion as a whole. The mineral production of 1909 reached over $92,000,000, of which nearly one half was exported. These minerals include gold, $10,000,000; copper, $9,000,000; silver, $12,000,000, and coal, $5,000,000. Nickel matter amounting to about 38,000,000 pounds is annually sent to the United States smelters and efforts are to be made to have this smelting done in Canada. During the past year Cobalt produced $12,000,000 of silver ore. Great as this record is it is but beginning.

FISHERIES

The fisheries of the Dominion are the most extensive in the world. Canada has almost 13,000 miles of sea coast line and innumerable lakes and rivers all teeming with fish. In 1908 Canada's fisheries production reached $25,410,000, of which $13,400,000 was exported. The fishery equipment of the Dominion is valued at $26,000,000 today, and employs 72,000 men on the water and 14,000 on shore. The vessels number 1430 and the boats over 40,000. These figures show an increase of nearly one-third since 1899.

The Kootenay Jam Company of Nelson, has shipped to Calgary an entire carload of jam made from this season's strawberries.

Coal has been struck at Bergen on the V. V. & E., near Myncaster. It is claimed to be of good coking quality.

An additional $2,000 has been granted by the government toward the building of the Harrison-Cape Fife road on Graham Island.

The Dominion Coal and Coke Co., organized by Vancouver business men will shortly begin extensive development of coal properties along the Similkameen river.

THROWN FROM BUTCHER CART

An employee of the Seymour Lumber Company by the name of Leach was accidentally thrown from a butcher cart in which he was riding into town yesterday and as a result sustained a number of scalp wounds that required medical attention. None of the cuts were of a serious nature and he was able to go about after being bandaged up in the office of Dr. Newcombe.

Vancouver and New Westminster are scheduled to play lacrosse in New Westminster tomorrow.

NEW HOME FOR KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

The above illustration gives an excellent idea of the building to be erected by the Pythian Castle Hall Company on their property at the corner of Fourth street and Chesterfield Avenue. The building will be located on the inside lot and will face Fourth street. It will consist of two floors and a basement. The basement will be constructed of solid concrete throughout, one half of it will be utilized for public storage and warehouse purposes and the other half will be divided between a kitchen, banqueting hall and furnace room.

The entire main floor will be devoted to a capacious assembly hall. This hall will be of steel construction throughout and will afford a floor space measuring 38x70 feet absolutely free from pillars or other constructions. The hall when completed will present a very artistic appearance as the walls will be divided into panels each of which will be decorated with a design in plaster fresco work. The stage will be large and provided with every convenience in the way of dressing rooms, etc.

The upper floor will be occupied by the lodge room which will measure 38x52 feet, in addition to which anteroomes and other accessories will be conveniently arranged.

The contract price for the building is $9,760, which does not include heating plant. It has not yet been decided whether the heating will be by means of hot water or by hot air. Negotiations are now in progress to ascertain the relative cost after which a decision will be reached.

Matt. B. Martinson is the successful tenderer and the contract calls for the completion of the building by December 24th next.

VANCOUVER EXHIBITION

Vancouver's first annual exhibition was opened at Hastings Park last Monday and was formally declared open on Tuesday by the Premier of the Dominion of Canada, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, G.C.M.G., P.C.

This is Vancouver's first real attempt at an annual exhibition, her citizens having heretofore contented themselves with participating in the New Westminster show. The time has arrived, however, when Vancouver's population requires an attraction at home and the result of the efforts of some of the leading and enterprising citizens is to be seen this week at the Hastings Park where a revelation awaits the visitor. Transportation by the B. C. Electric railway has been provided to the gates of the fair grounds and this is supplemented with an endless array of motor cars. The feature of the grounds is undoubtedly the handsome main building which occupies a prominent position at the south west corner. It was constructed by Messrs. Layfield and Williams, the latter being a resident of this city. Its architectural beauty needs only to be seen to be appreciated. This building contains the fruit and fancy exhibits as well as flowers, ore, glass and numerous other classes of a similar nature. The automobile and carriage building is also worth while visiting and here the latest in those lines are on exhibition. Down along the south side of the enclosure is placed the fowl and dog buildings and other buildings for various purposes.

The race course occupies a large portion of the grounds and some of the classiest races in the history of the province are being held there this week. The new and large grand stand impresses one with the magnitude of the assembly expected.

The Skid Road provides the amusement portion of the exhibition and is likened to the renowned Paystreak at the Seattle exhibition.

Taken as a whole the exhibits are up to the standard and while it is not to be expected that there would be a showing of exceptional merit, the exhibits are worthy of much praise both for number and quality.

The grounds have not yet been seeded down, but ere another season comes around the place will present a much improved appearance.

SERIOUS FALL

Mrs. J. C. Williams of Lonsdale Ave. and 4th street sustained a badly sprained ankle on the ferry wharf in Vancouver on Tuesday and has since been confined indoors. She and Mr. Williams had just returned from the Vancouver exhibition and were alighting from their carriage on the wharf when her foot turned underneath her as she touched the walk with the result that it was given a severe wrench. When they reached home the injured member was exceedingly painful.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

R. J. Smythe has rented a house on St. George's Ave.

Mr. A. Jamieson has rented a house on 4th street He moved in the first of the week.

Mrs. T. Hutchison of Keith road left yesterday for a week's holiday at Port Mellon.

Mrs. Agent, a late arrival in the city is contemplating erecting a house on her property on 22nd street east.

Mr. A. E. Palmer of the Bank of Hamilton, who has been ill at St. George's hospital, is making satisfactory progress toward recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Hardy and family of St. George's Ave., returned the beginning of the week from a vacation trip to Point Cowan, Howe Sound.

D. B. Ames, a recent arrival from England and a representative of several English firms, has leased the house of Mr. Chisholm on 5th street east.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Knight and family of Winnipeg are expected to arrive tomorrow. They will be the guests of their father, Mr. H. Knight, the practical plumber of this city.

The St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society take this means of thanking the merchants and others of North Vancouver who so kindly donated prizes for the annual picnic which was held on the 30th of July on the Capilano flats. W. Cumming, secretary.

Prominent among the numerous stalls at the Vancouver exhibition is the stall of Messrs. Simpson and Wight, florists and seed merchants, and Messrs. Albertson and Jones, confectioners, whose large refreshment stand is located on the north side of the large building. The former occupies a position upstairs in the main building.

Mayor May, Reeve McNaught and Councillor Allan were passengers on the Victoria boat bound for the Capital in company with Premier Laurier's party on Wednesday. Business in connection with the Second Narrows bridge and developments on the North Shore was the object of the trip. W. J. Dick is slated from this side of the Inlet to accompany the premier's party to Prince Rupert and if possible to arrange for a visit to North Vancouver on their return.

In another column is noted the dissolution of partnership of Mr. Henry T. C. Eves, one of North Vancouver's pioneer real estate men, and Mr. Percy King who has been in the business for the past year and a half along with Mr. Eves. Mr. King is retiring from the business and for the present Mr. Eves will conduct the affairs on his own hook. Mr. King will probably open up in business on this side of the Inlet in the course of a few weeks but for the present he has not decided as to his future movements.

MAYOR MAY AT THE CAPITAL

In an interview which Mayor May had with the Provincia, Minister of Public Works at Victoria yesterday the former was assured of the support of the latter in relation to the extension of Third street through the N. V. Indian Mission. The facts are already known that the difficulties now arising exist only between the Dominion and Provincial governments as the Indians have all signed the agreement with the city of North Vancouver for this undertaking and it only remains with the two governments to relinquish their revisionary rights.

While in the Capital Mayor May attended the banquet given to Premier Laurier and he was also present and participated in the trip of inspection around the interesting points in Victoria. His Worship returned this morning on the early boat and expressed his entire satisfaction with the results of his trip.

TRIP MISCARRIED

Through some miscalculation the proposed trip of inspection around Burrard Inlet for the benefit of the visiting Dominion ministers and which was to have been given under the auspices of the officials of the city and district of North Vancouver did not materialize along the lines arranged for. The program which the ministers were to follow were under the guidance of the Vancouver Liberal executive, and while Reeve McNaught had endeavored to bring about the Inlet trip and especially a visit to the site of the Second Narrows bridge his calculations could not be brought into effect. Officials of the district office including Clerk Farmer, however availed themselves of the transportation afforded and enjoyed a short outing.

CITY TAX SALE

Out of the 80 parcels of property included in the tax sale list offered by the city of North Vancouver at auction to cover delinquent taxes, about 40 parcels were disposed of last Friday afternoon. The prices obtained were below normal which perhaps is accountable to the important counter attractions in Vancouver on that day and the general state of the market which while resting easy is nevertheless quiet all over. Many of the lots were outlying, the more valuable holdings having been settled for and taken off the list before the date of the sale. The balance of about 30 lots will be auctioned off this afternoon commencing at 2 o'clock.

POULTRYMEN'S ASSOCIATION

The outcome of a conference of a representative gathering of B. C. poultry breeders held in the main building at the exhibition grounds, Vancouver, yesterday, was the formation of the B. C. Poultrymen's Association. The new organization will affiliate with the American Association.
