FORT GEORGE HERALD

We solicit enquiry on all such matters.

VOLUME 1, NO. 67 SOUTH FORT GEORGE, B.C., DECEMBER 9, 1911 $3 DOLLARS PER ANNUM

CITY AND DISTRICT

The canyon crew who have been working at the improvement of a steamboat channel in the Fort George canyon, returned here last week. Fred Hayden, in charge of the work, has vastly improved conditions of navigation there. The eastern, or main channel has been rendered navigable by the blowing out of the reef which has hitherto impeded up-stream navigation by steamboats, and has driven them into the tortuous by-channels. The eastern channel carries the main volume of water and is straight. The reef that has been removed reached from the shore within about 40 feet of a large rock island, leaving a narrow channel which fell over the submerged portion of the reef. This channel has been run in high water on the down-stream trip by steamboat but was a dangerous undertaking, and it was at this point that the old steamer Charlotte met her doom.

Thirty six boxes of dynimite were used on the reef. Three big shafts were sunk and cross-sectioned, whcih were fired simultaneously after the reef had also been blown away from the outside.

It is expected that very little difficulty will be met with in navigating the Fort George canyon by way of the improved channel.

Arrangements are being made to hold a leap year dance in the theatre on the night of January the second.

The Cariboo Observer must have a stand-in with the government. It has carried an advertisment telling the public that certain reserves have been cancelled, since the twenty-sixth of August. Those reserves are pretty well cancelled by now.

Dan Brewster, a local contractor, completed the new bridge across the slough on the Hudson:s Bay property recently to replace the old structure of jack pine poles which has done service for a number of years. The new bridge is well constructed and is built to last.

The coast press has begun to take uo the matter of boosting for a Peace river railroad from Vancouver. They are afraid of losing the trade of this country by competition from Edmonton and Alberta. They will have to get one very quick move on to change the inevitable.

W. J. Mackay writes from Vancouver, stating that that city has seen brisker times. He met Mr. Ludwig, who worked under the Houston estate on the Tribune, which used to be published here, and who is late of the defunct Lillooet Advance who is now on his way to the Antipodes.

Since the jail has been built it has been kept very busy. Indians of the drunk and disorderly brand are regular occurances since the distribution of the first payment for the Indian reserve, and Stipendiary Magistrate Herne is teaching the red men that their orgies are not only distasteful to the public but against the law, by sentences of hard labor in and about our recently acquired jail.

A report of the sale of the Indian reserve in the Victoria Times, appearing as a telegraphic despatch from Winnipeg is a rather mixed up announcement. Apparently Mr. Reginald C. Randall, one of the assistants in the local land office, arrived in Winnipeg and gave out the announcement that the money had deen paid out to "Chief Joseph Quah and his 200 Crees."

It is to laugh.

The Cariboo Road: A great highway always.

TheCariboo road is now in its declining years. The great highway, built by Gustavus Blin Wright so many years ago, will ere lang cease to be the supply route for this vast new area of the province brought into the development zone by the location of the G. T. P. mainline through its breadth at a latitude hundreds of miles from the present railroad facilities.

When one pauses to consider that every pound of material in this district save those few commodities manufactures on machinery similarly imported is hauled into the country over a waggon road 220 miles long to the foot of navigation, or some hundreds of miles further during the six months when navigation is closed, the development of this section under such a handicap of primative conditions must impress the visitor with the energy and enterprise of the pioneers.

The Cariboo road will always have a heavy traffic. It is built to last, and has cost the government an enormous sum for construction and maintenance. When the steel permanent way has been forced through the barriers of natural engineering difficulties into this section of the province the freight waggon will be superceded by the touring car of the pleasure seeker, who will take advantage of the length and excellence of the highway from the C. P. R. to the G. T. P. throggh the very centre of the province.

Many writers have covered exhaustively the local color of the route. The old tumble-down road houses, and the new ones. The "knockers" that take every advantage offered them by the traffic past their doors to slander and lie about this section of the country—as foreign to them in most instances as darkest Africa—to the incoming throng. The Herald has frequently been requested to devote some space to the antics of these "knockers". We refuse to clutter these columns with lamentations regarding the futile ravings of the depreciative wayside dwellers to whom our remarks are applicable. There are certain houses along the Cariboo road where the traveller bound northward meets with courteous treatment and is not forced to listen to the opinions of disgruntled individuals who regard the development of the northern section as detrimental to his own atmosphere of freight teams and tired travellers.

The lower Cariboo country will reap inestimable benefit from the construction of the railroads through the northern interior of British Columbia. There will undoubtedly be a great resumption of activity in alluvial gold mining properties of low grade character, impossible to work under present conditions. There will be a ready market for a larger producing agricultural area than the district can obtain, although its agricultural possibilities at the present appear to be illimitable, and the thousand and one benefits accruing to a country by the advent of steel rails and rolling stock will apply with as lar reaching force and effect in old Cariboo as in any other section galvanized into life and action by the shriek of a locomotive whistle.

The Cariboo road had witnessed the passing of a number great armies of those bent upon various enterprises in the north land. The gold rush days with their sour-dough comedy-drama have passed and gone. The railroad survey gangs have passed along the way. The pioneer settlers straggle in over the great white waggon road, but the last big rush has not yet commenced. With the opening of navigation next year an army of people bound for Fort George will press forward over the route. The future of the place is now assured. The G. T. P. have now purchased the Indian Reserve for townsite purposes, and great development is toward. It is up to the dwellers along the route to cast off the stigma of reproach with which they have been besmirched by countless condemning tongues, and by the written words of trained observers.

Away with false prophesies.

Exit the knocker obscured in a cloud of alkali dust.

Ready the glad-hand.

Boost, for prosperity and advancement.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS : : : :

N. H. Wesley, who recently purchased the pre-emption of Henry Couture, across the river from South Fort George, is now having the land sdb-divided into acreage. Mr. Couture leaves shortly for South America.

A real estate deal of considerable magnitude for the time of year, was closed here this week by M. C. Wiggins, who negotiated a deal transferring Lot 483 from W. L. Collins and associates, of Quesnel, to John Bronger, of this place, for the sum of $11,000. The intention of the new owner is to subdivide into acreage tracts. The lot is generally referred to as the "Lusby place," as it was at one time the pre-emption of a man of that name who was drowned in a canoe accident in the Giscombe rapids with two others

Chas. G. MacElroy, general manager of the Fort George Trading and Lumber Company of this place, recently purchased a lot adjoining the Bank of B. N. A. on which he intends to erect a residence in the early spring. N. H. Wesley put the sale through.

The Wild-cat Province No interferance; Ideal territory: Plenty of scope.

The province of British Columbia seems to be distinguished as a first class stamping ground for wild-cat promoters and flim-flam operators of all sorts and descriptions. Perhaps this is due to the fact that the province of British Columbia is a young and very sparsely populated country, mountainous, and rich in resources deposited by a bountiful providence. So in various parts of the world brigandage is practiced by bad-actors who find their security in some inaccessible mountain fastness, and desperate criminals haunt such lone regions as the Texas pan-handle and hole-in-the-wall country, immune from arrest.

It does not redound to the credit of this fair province of ours, bounded by the tranquil Pacific on one side and the rest of Canada on the other, that such a deplorable state of affairs should exist, but unfortunately they do. The government have no remedy to offer. There was a time when B. C. mining propositions were a drug in the old-world markets. A surfeit of wild-cat floatations had been crowding each other upon London capital and London was tired of them. Then Whittaker Wright, the king of wild-cat mining promoters, who dabbled in B. C. amongst other countries, shuffled across the great divide by the suicide route in jail, calling a halt to such stunts, and the get-rich-quick promoters who were trading upon the richness of the province, whose development of lode minerals with the advent of railroad transportation had begun to awaken the interest of the mining world scuttled to other fields. The public had cheerfully supplied cash in exchange for nicely printed share certificates until the graft was worked out and the get-rich-quick promoters exchanged their "sucker lists" and sought other means of seperating the coin from credulous ones in fields and pastures new.

Of late years the townsite fakirs seem to have challenged the supremacy of the mining-stock vendors to the almost total extinction of the latter gentry. The province of B. C. had a Land Act under which owners of any crown granted land may subdivide their holdings into any sized lots and peddle them off to a credulous public far removed. The government must necessarily become a partner to these transactions in so far as they have a right under the Land Act to one quarter of all townsites surveyed, excepting those on land deeded by the Crown prior to the year 1896. We have noted the literature of rank out-and-out wild-cat promotions strengthened by statements in their advertising literature that the government of the province of British Columbia and the promoting firm were joint owners in the property. To the poor suffering public who were unaware that a townsite could not be on the market unless the government held a one-quarter interest, this seems to add the ear marks of genuineness to a proposition over which some faint evanescent shadow of doubt might have hovered before the eyes of the poor ten dollar a month investor, the legitimate prey of the flim-flammer.

The advent of the G. T. P. through a remote part of the province, far removed from the present railroad systems of B. C., have given the real-estate fakirs a magnificient opportunity to play their game to the limit. We have seen townsites surveyed in impossible places and placed on the market, to be withdrawn from sale only through pressure brought to bear by the government in a roundabout way. Take as an instance the so-called townsite of Birmingham, located on several lots across the Fraser river from this point. The promoters of this townsite surveyed the tracts into streets and lots. Fifteen thousand stakes were cut by the local mill when the property was being boomed, to mark off the lots. The government refused to make their selection of lots in this case, and so quashed the proposition, as they could defer making their selection for an indefinite period which is really a very ungovernmentlike thing to do. The same sort of promotion was floated at the mouth of the Little Salmon river by a man named Fred. T. Cromwell, who endeavored to sell a townsite named Fraser City on the strength of its situation at a point where an abandoned G. T. P. survey left the Fraser river, whilst the located line of the railroad traverses the shore line across the river. Both the promoters ol these townsites knew that their propositions were counterfeit townsites, rigged up solely for the purpose of levering hard-eared cash out of the pockets of the small investor on the pretext of future values. In both these cases the government took some sort of judicious but uncertified action to kill the promotions, being without legislation on their statute books, brought down with the intention of providing a censorship over townsite promotions which they could certainly control by adequate legislation for the protection of the investor.

There are many townsites on the market sold and deeded to the public which would have remained in their state of native verdure, undefiled by the survey stakes which gridiron their surface and distinguish them from the surrounding wilderness as towosites, had the government at Victoria taken the necessary action to guard against the floatation of wild-cat properties. We have devoted a great deal of space to the exposure of Fort George properties which will classify under the wild-cat heading, and have been floated under misrepresentation. All wild-cat townsites of course depend absolutely upon misrepresentation for their very existance. It is up to the postal ities to enter against this practice, but the postal authorities can hardly be expected to butt-into the affairs of townsite promotions in which the provincial government own a one quarter interest. The press could smash the promotion of misrepresented wild-cat townsites as fast as they spring up, but the press is gagged in most cases by the very advertisments that induce the small investors to sink their penny-bank hoardings into the proposition misrepresented in their columns.

The government would be wise to bring down legislation which would require land which owners desired to townsite to have certain qualifications, or the assurances of the owners of the expenditure of a certain sum in the development of the site, governing such assessment by the acreage, pro rata. A standard sized lot should be insisted upon, and in places where numerous additions are being sold by different owners, they should be required to conform to some sort of system.

Witness the wild mess made made of townsites hereabouts. Up the Nechaco river a coast firm has townsited 20,000 25-foot lots. Some of their additions have been on the market for the past three years and are now in precicely the same state

PUBLISHED BY THE

NORTHERN INTERIOR PRINTING CO.

J. B. DANIELL, PRESIDENT

Devoted to the interests of Fort George and the entire Northern Interior.

J. B. DANIELL, Editor.

Saturday, December, 9 1911

The Victoria "Week" states editorially tnat British Columbia has had about enough of bogus townsites, and cites instances of the graft as it appears seeping through a veneer of apparent genuineness, in the Hazelton country.

The Hazelton affair is a fair example of the workings on the inside of such a contingency. The controversy is between the promoters, who wrangle as dogs over a mildewed bone, whilst the public await the outcome with a fist full of money to lay on the victor. Then other complications arise, such as the wheels within wheels in the Grand Trunk Pacific Railroad Company's ranks themselves.

Some day the story of the big transcontinental railway Company's townsite and development concern will be written in full. Its five shareholders will help to tell, perhaps: An interesting story, surely, and one very few newspapers have the courage to try to relate now.

The Herald has hammered and smashed at the biggest townsite promoting concern in this province, in spite of the efforts of its very complete organization to suppress us, until the boss promoter has entered suits for libel against us—or states that he is about to do so. When this matter comes before the courts we can promise some interesting sidelights upon townsite promotion in British Columbia; the men behind the propositions; the methods of promotion, and the sort of men who victimise the public by initiating these promotions.

The very parliament buildings at Victoria are full of silent partnership men. The "higher ups." They must know that the propositions being floated, sometimes in their interests, are not bona fide propositions, investment in which will benefit the investor not in the least—to put it mildly.

We are surprised to see the Victoria Week skating round the edge of this very large and serious problem at all, but as long as the subject is handled so judiciously—well.

There is one sure method of killing bogus promotions and relegating their enterprising manipulators to realms they will find more susceptable to their operations if such a repressive power were brought to bear, and that is by the press.

Just as long at townsite promoters can buy full page advertisments to feed their wildcats on and at the same time assure themselves of the journal's good will, these confidence men will prosper, and wax exceeding fat.

as that in which they were found when surveyed into lots, although by gross misrepresentation the whole site was sold in a brief period.

The Herald takes this matter up as the representative newspaper of the Northern Interior country. We wish to see development proceeding along those lines which promise no reaction of a nature calculated to upset the progress of the country when those hordes of investors who have blindly put their money into this country on the strength of its great future and the advertised statements of unscrupulous promoters, are able to reach this district by rail and seek the values they will not find in many propositions.

Our Prices Will Not Advance

WE take this opportunity to inform our many customers and the public generally that the low prices which have prevailed in our store through the summer months will be maintained throughout the winter.

WE have been fortunate in receiving most of our heavy goods before the close of navigation and having our own teams will be able to bring our goods over the road at the minimum cost.
