NEWS FROM BUSY EUROPE FLASHED UNDER THE ATLANTIC.

Great Things Expected of the International Labor Congress at Berlin—Socialism Versus Trades Unionism—Charles Bradlaugh's Daughter Cannot Sell His Library—Death of a Parachutist—Mysterious Shooting of a Young Woman in a Railway Carriage.

LONDON, August 8.—The international labor congress to be held at Brussels, beginning August 16, will probably do much toward deciding whether the workingmen of the world will march under the socialist or the purely trade union banner. If the proposition is successful to adopt as a uniform designation for all labor parties of the world, a common title containing the term "Socialist," then socialism will have triumphed at least in name. But if the socialist designation is omitted, pure trade unionism such as it is in England and the United States will have won a victory. Tom Mann said to your correspondent: "It is the parting of the ways, and for my part I am not a socialist." It is believed that the experience of this congress will go far toward solving the as yet undecided question of the practicability of international organized labor union. On the continent it is assumed that the question is solved, but not so among the workingmen of Great Britain. The meeting of the international congress of mines in Paris last April presented difficulties in the way of international action that had not been expected. British workmen found that they were expected to give much more than they received to have money appropriated by a majority vote that did not represent a majority. Great Britain, it is claimed, represents at least half the force and more than half the wealth of organized European labor, and it is also claimed by such men as Mann and Fenwick that English labor has nothing in common with that of the continent, and is well able to stand alone. On the other hand Burns and the socialists generally give hearty support to the principle of international action. Burns has a considerable following, but his English followers are not socialists in the definite meaning of that term. They are extreme radicals, people who want to tear down without much idea as to the building up. The real socialists of London are nearly all foreigners and have no more affinity to the native Britons than the native Britons have to them. According to Tom Mann, with whom the United Press correspondent had a long interview, on which these statements are largely based, socialism is an exotic in Great Britain and there is no room for it in the Anglo-Saxon nature. The coming congress in Brussels is the successor of the international labor congress held in 1889. This had nothing to do with the strictly socialistic Marx congress held at the same time and composed chiefly of German social democrats, including members of the reichstag. The Englishmen in that congress, of whom there were a few, represented only themselves. The English workingmen were represented by not less than thirty-nine delegates, some of them such as Fenwick, M.P., being purely trades unionists, and others like H. M. Hindman, purely socialists. It is but fair to the socialists to say they spared no effort to work in harmony with the trade unionists, and the latter were willing to tolerate the socialism of Hindman, but would have nothing to do with Marxism.

THE HEBREW QUESTION.

As the Rue Lancey congress cabled the congress that is to meet a week from tomorrow, these conditions with a similar representation of elements would be favorable for harmony. There is one question to come before the congress which at the time it was suggested was little expected to have the importance it has since assumed, namely the attitude which the organized workers of all countries should assume with regard to the Jewish question. This was offered by the American union of workers speaking the Hebrew language. It is expected to evoke an exciting debate for the English trade unions have their faces set against imported Hebrew labor, and the same feeling is spreading throughout the continent. The Jews on the other hand have eloquent and earnest advocates who will plead the rights of the chosen people to a place among the workers of the earth, it is believed in England that no plea will overcome the repugnance conceived toward the Russian refugees, but the Jew, it is said, will be satisfied if he can obtain an influential endorsement from America, which they look upon as the promised land. Among other subjects to be considered is the consecration of the first day of May to the principles of the eight hour working day. America will be interested in the proposition to hold the next international congress in Chicago in 1893, and to have at the same time a national demonstration at that place. The Germans will, it is expected, play a much more important part than in any congress previously held. German socialists are greatly elated by their recent defeats equivalent to victories in contests for the Reichstag, and by the position which they have compelled the older parties to assume of united opposition to socialism. In Germany they claim that alone of all nations the line is being distinctly drawn between the social democracy and the upper and middle classes that support the existing regime by constitutional representation. The victory of social democracy is in sight, and Germany will take the lead as the democratic nation. Such are the German arguments as to why Germany should have an influential voice in the international deliberations of workingmen. It is said that there is really no feeling between the Germans and French, and that they will fraternize as they did at the congress in Paris when the Germans sang social verses set to the Marseillaise and the Parisian workmen went out of their way to fete and honor them.

ENGLISH RAILWAY TRAPS.

The mysterious shooting of a young woman in a railway coach has revived the arguments in favor of a change of the style of passenger cars in vogue on English railways. Open compartments or the removal of the present high partition would make cases of assault upon lonely travellers, robberies, murders, etc., on the rail less easy of commission. Despatches from Bedford giving information as to the shooting referred to, state that the girl, who was on her way to London, gives her name as Leonore Marie, and says she has friends in New York. It is believed that she is an American actress. She wears a wedding ring and says that she recently became a widow after being married five months. She thinks that some one shot her by mistake for another person. The assailant was on the outside footboard and fired as the train was leaving Leicester. The police do not credit this story however; they are inclined to think that the woman shot herself, and the fact that the revolver with which the deed was done was found by the side of the track near where the train stopped seems to throw doubt upon the story.

CANNOT SELL HIS BOOKS.

The daughter of the late Charles Bradlaugh having been unsuccessful in her attempt to dispose of the great free thinker's library, now asks offers for any part of it, even to single volumes, being anxious to raise enough money to clear her father's name from the implications of debt. The library is an unusually well-stocked one and comprises over 7,000 volumes.

TO BE EXPECTED.

A parachutist named Higgins made a balloon ascension today at Leeds. He was accompanied by Miss Devoe. In ascending the balloon struck a telegraph pole. The car was upset and both the occupants fell to the ground. The woman escaped injury, but the man struck a fence in his descent and was instantly killed.

CITY POLICE COURT.

Quarrelsome Italians Have Their Grievances Adjusted.

Trouble among Italians formed the business at yesterday's police court.

Henry Zachero was charged with having pointed a gun at Guido Magnone on the 4th instant. Evidence was given by Como Vacaro, detailing the nature and circumstances of the alleged offense, which was fully borne out by other witnesses. His honor, considering the case proved, fined defendant $20 and costs, and bound him over in the sum of $200 to keep the peace.

Zachero was further charged on remand with having assaulted the said Magnone on the same date. The case was finally concluded by his being further bound over in the sum of $200 to keep the peace for six months.

The Salmon Pack.

During the last few days the run of salmon in the Fraser has almost wholly fallen off, and the canneries are practically idle. It is, however, believed that another short spurt of a day or two is expected during the incoming week, which is expected to be the final one in the sockeye run this season. The total pack for the river at the present time is about 80,000 cases, and this pack it is believed will scarcely be increased to 100,000 cases when the operations for the season are brought to a close. The total pack last year was 244,637 cases.

The Visiting Cricketers.

The Californian Cricketers played the Vancouver picked eleven at Brockton Point Athletic grounds yesterday, the home team winning the match by a good majority. Vancouver's score up to the lunch recess was 157 for five wickets. Saunders and Laurenson of the Vancouvers, played splendidly, making 44 and 52 respectively. The Californians played well and proved themselves very active and watchful as fielders, a department of the game in which they seem particularly to excel. The Californians play the Westminsters at Queen's Park tomorrow.

First Annual Meeting.

The first annual meeting of the British Columbia Deposit and Loan Company was held in Victoria last night at its office, Hon. Sir Joseph W. Trutch, K. G. C. M. G., in the chair. There was a numerous attendance and the president's statement and explanations were of a very satisfactory character. So far, the work done has been mainly confined to the object of the organization, which has been completed and everything is now in excellent condition. The following directors were elected; Hon. Sir Joseph W. Trutch, K. G. C. M. G., chairman; E. Crow Baker, C. T. Dupont, Thomas Earle, Thomas R. Hall, William Wilson and Henry Young.

Beyond Care and Sorrow.

Mr. John A. MacLean, who formerly taught school in Surrey and was very well known in Westminster, died of consumption a week or two ago at Montreal. Mr. MacLean before he left Westminster said he knew he could never get better, but went up to the mountains to try what the clear, bracing air would do for him. He was too far gone, however, and decided to go home to Prince Edward Island. Death came to him en route, while in Montreal. Mr. MacLean had been in this province four or five years, and few have been so fortunate in making many sincere friends. At Surrey he was extremely well-liked, the amiability of his character making him welcome wherever he went. In Westminster also, Mr. MacLean was well and favorably known and his untimely death will be deeply mourned by many here. Mr. MacLean's extraordinary stature attracted attention everywhere; he stood 6 feet 7½ inches in his stocking soles and was very fairly proportioned. He was said to have been the tallest man in British Columbia. He often took part in the Scottish games and sports here. The remains were taken to his former home in Prince Edward Island.

An Ottawa Wood Merchant's Little Joke—Hanlan and O'Connor Accept McLean and Partner's Challenge—Result of the Great Double Scull Race—St. Clair River Tunnel Pronounced Perfectly Satisfactory—Attorney-General Sifton Wins the Manitoba Bye-Election.

OTTAWA, Ont., August 8.—At the Privileges and Elections committee meeting today John Henri, wood merchant of Ottawa, said he was only joking when he offered to get the British Columbia contract for Baskerville for $10,000. Chailon, confidential agent for Thomas McGreevy, followed and said the judgment in the Supreme Court against his employer was paid out of the proceeds of Larkin, Connolly & Co.'s profits. He remembered paying the money, having got it from Robert McGreevy, besides $2,500 from Murphy.

SPECIAL BILLS.

Notice has been given of an application by Ada Donigan Cookshire at next session of parliament for a bill of divorce from her husband on the ground of adultery and cruelty. Also two other applications, one by Doctor Mead, Northwest Territories and the other by Valentine Sitter of Western Canada.

WON WITH EASE.

HAMILTON, Ont., August 8.—Fully 15,000 people witnessed the double scull race here this afternoon for the world's championship. The men were all in good condition and the water smooth as glass. The mile and a half stake was reached by Hanlan and O'Connor in eight minutes, three seconds, on the home stretch the leaders did not exert themselves, and when within a quarter of a mile of the finish they stopped rowing and Hanlan dipped his hand in the bay. They finally won a compartively easy victory by four lengths in 18.26. Gaudaur and McKay's time was not taken.

ST. CLAIR RIVER TUNNEL.

SARNIA, Ont., August 8.—Sir Henry Taylor, of the C.P.R., with other officials, inspected the St. Clair river tunnel and declared the work satisfactory in every particular.

A GOOD MAJORITY.

WINNIPEG, Man., August 8.—The bye-election for the North Brandon vacancy in the local legislature was held today. Attorney-General Sifton was elected by 173 majority over Cliff, Conservative.

FIRE AND DEATH.

THE CHAMPIONS ACCEPT.

TORONTO, Ont., August 8.—Hanlan and O'Connor have accepted the offer of McLean and partner of New Westminster to row a double scull skiff race on September 23rd for $1,000 or $1,500 a side. They have also consented to row a single skull race there.

[The result of yesterday's races at Hamilton and Westminster would seem to indicate that such a race as that mentioned in the despatch will not take place. The result would be quite too palpable.—Ed.]

HER JOURNEY ENDED.

Widow of the late Hon. John McMurich died last night in her 77th year after an illness of some weeks.

BY FOUR LENGTHS.

HAMILTON, Ont., August 8.—Hanlan and O'Connor won the double skull race by four lengths. Time, 18:26½.

Another Arrival.

The ship Blair Athol arrived on Thursday night in Esquimalt harbor, 145 days from Cardiff. She was loaded with 2,500 tons of coal for the naval yard. Capt. A. Taylor, her commander, had nothing of interest to report regarding the voyage. She was met off Cape Flattery by an American tug and towed to Port Angeles and then brought into Esquimalt. The Blair Athol will load out either from Tacoma or Portland for England.

PETERSON LEADS.

The San Franciscan Takes the Boat Race With the Utmost Ease.

Henry Peterson, the celebrated San Francisco oarsman, won yesterday's race with McLean in the official time of 20 minutes 17 seconds. Several other watches on the referee's boat agreed on 22:15 as the time, but it made little difference as Peterson could have won the race by a quarter of a mile had he chosen. The referee's boat, McPhee Bros.' elegant steam launch, Mamie, was in waiting at Wilson's boat house at 2 o'clock and those holding tickets, Messrs. P. Grant, P. Cleary, John Muirhead and five representatives of the press boarded her and set off up the river to examine the state of the course. The water was very smooth and there was no wind. The run to Sapperton was made in quick time and the buoys there adjusted. In returning to the city the launch was forced by the current upon the gravel bank on the upper side of the Glen stream. It became necessary to debark the passengers to lighten the boat so that she could be backed off. After a great deal of trouble she was at last floated, half an hour having been wasted. The passengers were ferried aboard and a speedy return to town made. Along the docks thousands of persons were packed in dense masses. Every steamer had a rolling load on and not a scow that floated on the river, but was literally black with spectators. The crowd had grown very impatient at the delay and were relieved by the appearance of the steam launch. Around the starting place the throng was tremendous. There must have been five thousand people visible from the barge anchored in mid-stream. After the outside buoy at the starting point had been properly adjusted the oarsmen were called out. At Wilson's boat house where Peterson was getting ready the excitement was intense. Bets running up into the hundreds of dollars were made. Thousands of dollars must have been booked. In a few minutes Peterson entered his trim little boat and with a couple of strokes that made the crowd stare with amazement, as Peterson pulled as he can pull, he shot out into the stream. He was greeted with cheers by the vast crowds. He looked very strong and "fit" as he dashed alongside the referee's boat and then back again to the float. Peterson won the toss for position, the inside course, McLean came out as this was announced and the Fraser river oarsman was also saluted with cheers. McLean demurred at the toss and it was done over again. Peterson once more winning. Referee Clute then ordered the men to bring their boats stern on to the flag buoys; as soon as they were well and fairly set he asked, "Are you ready?" The men nodded, and at once the word to go was given. The start was very fair, both taking the water firmly, Peterson on the first stroke shot ahead half a length and started away rowing an easy 30 to the minute, which he gradually decreased to 28. McLean at once shot over out of his course into that of Peterson, and then began a zig zag dodging in and out of the steamers lying along the wharves. McLean was rowing 36 to the minute, and appeared from the very start to be tired and not rowing his usual strong race. Peterson kept creeping away from his opponent steadily, and passing the woolen mills there must have been about sixty yards between the men. It was the same thing all the way up to the turning buoys. Peterson rounded on to the home stretch exactly one minute ahead of McLean and came down pulling the same long, easy, regular stroke, and always increasing the distance between himself and the other man. The wash from several steamers which had followed the race was encountered by Peterson at the woolen mills, but he had plenty of time to slow down and ride the waves nicely. He then shot ahead again, increasing the distance until there was 120 yards of good daylight between the two boats. Cheer after cheer greeted the San Francisco oarsman as he passed along, and he waved his hand to the crowds on the docks. The winner rowed fairly up to his flag buoy, turned and pulled over to the referee's boat to ask if it was all right. Receiving assurance that there was no protest, he rowed over to Wilson's boat house and dressed. A regular ovation was given him by his friends, whose delight knew no bounds. The San Francisco sports who had staked heavily "smiled all over" as the phrase is. McLean pulled in about forty seconds later and was given a hearty reception by all hands for doing what he could. It was clear that he had not the ghost of a chance with the brawny Californian. He admitted that the race was fair and square. The result was a surprise to many, but those who know anything about rowing, say there should never have been a shadow of doubt.

The 1:15 special train from Vancouver brought a very heavy load of passengers, between 300 and 400 it is estimated. They got in in plenty of time for the race, and then assembled in full force at the lacrosse grounds and gave liberal vocal encouragement to their side.

McLean said before the race that he had more money wagered on this event than any other he ever engaged in; and more than that, he never entered a race with more confidence of winning than he did this one. He evidently miscalculated his own strength as well as that of his antagonist.

Peterson pulled a quiet gentlemanly race and did not indulge in any foolish antics when far ahead of his opponent, or slacken speed and allow the other to come up only to be left lengths behind by a few powerful strokes.

The stakes were duly handed over last night and Messrs. Peterson and Muirhead will have excellent reason to remember their pleasant little jaunt to the banks of the Fraser.

Californians v. Westminster.

Tomorrow at 10 o'clock sharp, as previously announced, the Californian cricket team, and the local eleven will try conclusions in a friendly match. The personnel of the two teams will be the same as given in yesterday's LEDGER. It is not often that a match with such a combination of clever players is secured in Westminster, and on account of this, it should be witnessed by a large number. The visitors are said to be in grand form. The home team, too, are in fairly good condition.

A Pointer to the Public.

District Lot No. 28 lies immediately adjoining the city limits. The continuation of Mary Street goes directly through it, and the Electric Tramway will in a couple of months be running its cars every hour of the day through the centre of this property. The lot (No. 28) is composed of 128 acres of land as level as a table. Contracts have been let to clear and grub the ground, and leave it in perfect condition for building purposes. Already six citizens have decided to erect handsome residences there, ranging in price from $4,000 to $7,000 each. The whole of this splendid piece of property (except some limited portions already disposed of) will be put on the market in a few weeks. One great advantage in buying a lot and erecting a residence on this property is that the owner will avoid heavy municipal taxation. Make a note of it, and wait till the property is put on the market before buying.

SUMMER SAUNTERINGS.

Since writing my last article I have sauntered 234 miles, and a most unexpected saunter it was; all the more enjoyable in consequence. It was a pleasant surprise a week ago, when I was solving some hot weather household problems, to have my husband announce that a race meeting was advertised at Windermere on the lower Columbia Lake for the 1st of August; the steamer Duchess to make a special trip to take it in. As he had some legal business to transact in the district, I might give him the pleasure of my company if I so willed. The thought even of boats and water was refreshing with the mercury at 95 degrees, so I did not hesitate to accept the marital invitation, and on Thursday afternoon, July 30th, we started for the new familiar Golden. The Duchess carried more than her full complement of 25 passengers, which made a very jolly party of friends and acquaintances. The Columbia river has been previously described, and its aspect was unchanged, except that the water was higher and muddier than in June, its peasoup color and consistency marring much of its natural beauty, and being utterly destructive of reflections; the foothills, too, looked brown and burnt up by the pitiless sun. The flowering shrubs had ceased blooming, and the fragrant breath of early summer had died out of the still balmy air. Leaving Golden at 5 o'clock on Friday morning, we reached Windermere at 9 the same night, feeling all the benefit from the cool air of the river which I had anticipated. Windermere, unvisited for weeks by rain, was deep in dust and dusky in vegetation, but the race course is beautifully situated and excellent of its kind, a long stretch of bunch grass turf, 300 feet wide, bounded on one side by a post and rail fence; on the other by a little elevation, at the base of which grow numerous fine fir trees, shading the grand stand to perfection. I will not describe the races, which were excellent—far better than those at Golden—further than by saying that the whole scene was most picturesque; a foreground of fine mountains, a background of wooded lake, miles of park country extending as far as the eye could reach, with a hundred Indians in peaceful war paint, attired in their brightest and gaudiest colors, all mounted, and many accompanied by their families. Several Indian horses contested various events, ridden bare back by wild looking, unkempt lads, like young centaurs. The squaws, race brought forth the six entries, and a fine exhibition of color in shirts and handkerchiefs, in which red and green predominated. I saw one dusky lady in a very artistic combination of a mauve skirt and a yellow handkerchief, which was most effective. They all had good horses and fancy names, Susanne, Cecile, Harriette, Marie, indicating half-breed influences and associations. I was much amused at their adaptation of their petticoats to the requirements of riding astride, the superfluity of these garments being confined above the knee by pieces of cord tied tightly around each thigh. The race was won by Sophie, on a good-looking gray. In the 100-yard foot race, five Indians and two white men entered. We were just noting down the color of their dresses in order to get up a sweepstakes, when, looking up, we found five bronze statues confronting us. Their toilette was expeditious and their deshabille most complete. The five Indians stood before us simply attired in girdles, with a strip of cloth bound round their loins. They were splendid specimens of their race, but did not succeed in beating the two trained runners who opposed them, which says something for civilized methods. We left Windermere at six on Sunday morning, arriving at Golden at four in the afternoon, which involved a night in Mr. Green's comfortable hotel, the Queen's, where we received the best of attention and accommodation. I had time on Monday morning before the express left for Donald, to visit the smelter of the Golden Mining and Smelting Company, a fine block of buildings containing all the newest and most complete machinery. It is under the charge of Mr. Fowler, a competent American mining engineer. He is collecting ore to "blow in" the smelter, as the technical term is, and has promised to send me a special invitation for the occasion. I feel when I see all those great machines working, furnaces roaring, and molten metal seething in the great crucibles, I shall have something to describe, only I am afraid my lady readers will not appreciate the experience. However, in this province, female education will be neglected if the treatment of its mineral wealth is to remain a dead letter to the fair sex.

HINTS ON HOME LIFE.

I am told I shall have all the agents of Wanamer, Sheet, Howe and other minor firms joining in a crusade against THE LEDGER and myself because of my attack on the sewing machine system. I wish I could conscientiously take it back, but I cannot, and I am so far consistant in the matter, that I have not possessed a sewing machine since I arrived in the country. Perhaps my censures were a little too sweeping, so I will qualify them. In large establishments and large families, there is doubtless great use for time saving apparatus. If much work is done at home, widths of material, skirt lining, and the seams of bodies are justifiable work for the machine, upon which hand sewing is wasted. In most towns, however, there is some seamstress to whom such work can be taken, who will run up long seams for a few cents; we possess one such individual, even in our small community. The presence of a sewing machine in which money has been invested calls imperatively for its use on all possible occasions, and it is to this general use that I object, and consider the temptation of the article. I dislike its employment upon underclothing, table or house linen. Nothing, to my mind, is more common than table cloths, napkins, sheets and pillow covers machine stitched. Nicely sewn and prettily marked, these articles should be the pride of every housekeeper, as they were of our ancestors, in the days when every woman brought her own hand spun and woven house linen in her dowry to her husband.

It is extraordinary how little pride the majority of our sex take in their household accessories. Women will waste money upon jewels, laces, fans and feathers, and economise in the quality and quantity of their house and table linen. Fine linen, fine glass, pretty table appointments—these should be the housekeeper's pride; next, quantity and quality in underwear, then the accessories of the toilet table, now so handsome in repousse or oxidised silver, the beautiful brushes, combs, large and small, silver mounted mirrors, button hooks, scissors and art glass bottles with silver stoppers, the dainty powder boxes and trays—what opportunities these for taste and refinement, which are always a good investment of pocket or pin money.

A DOUDOIR BEDROOM.

As I have dwelt constantly upon the necessity, I might even say the education of a pretty bedroom, which to girls of limited means, may seem almost an aggravation, conjuring up visions of costly furniture, rich carpets, plate glass mirrors, and inlaid beds, let me say for their consolation, that the simpler a girl's bedroom, the more elegant. A pretty brass bed, well designed and colored matting with a few rugs, plenty of art muslin, a place for everything and everything in its place; freshness and daintiness prevailing, these only are the requisites, either of the richest or the poorest household. Let me describe a boudoir bedroom I know of: The room is rather long and narrow, with a door near one corner, and the fire place in the middle of the side wall. Opposite are two windows. The walls are papered with a delicate gray green, the shade known as reseda, which is covered with a conventional pattern one shade darker, which is quite unobtrusive and a charming background, which should be the object of all wall papers. This color was selected because cool looking palm leaf fans, muslin curtains and draperies could be used with it for summer, and replaced in winter by brighter colors in which red predominates, a color which should be banished everywhere, I think, from May till October. The bedstead had been black, and is enamelled white, and the door is white with panels of reseda green. Any enterprising girl can do the enamelling herself, by procuring Aspinall's well-known enamel, which costs 50 cents per tin, and a tin goes a long way, and is perfectly satisfactory. It can be used upon any material, wood, tin, wicker, palm leaf fans, etc. It can be obtained of dealers in Westminster, Vancouver and Victoria. Four tins would be sufficient for all the enamelling a bedroom would require. A pretty Japanese screen concealed the bed, but this screen need not necessarily be Japanese. Any carpenter can make a pretty light frame, with the centre panel higher than the two side ones, on which art muslins can be fitted on a fine brass wire, or hung on tiny rings from a brass rod. The bed, however, with prettily embroidered quilt, and dainty drawn linen pillow shams, is rather a thing of beauty. Much less objectionable, at any rate, than the washstand, which is, however, carefully disguised, always obtrusively ugly. Instead of the conventional small cupboard, with drawer and a top, or the marble fixture abomination with its taps and unhealthy sewer gas vents of large cities, a large three-cornered shelf with a hole in the centre for the basin is fixed in one corner. This can be simply enamelled or covered with American white marbled cloth. Its height is that of an ordinary washstand, and its width according to taste and requirements. On the wall above this shelf are little oaken book shelves for bottles, etc., on one side, on the other towel rails or rings. In the centre of the corner hangs the sponge basket, and across the tap runs a neat brass rod with two curtains which will hide the washstand when not in use. They should be on large rings, so as to run easily, and not of too thick material, lest they should be in the way when drawn back. A good sized corner bracket enamelled to suit the room fixed above this arrangement with a quaint pot or other ornament set upon it, has an excellent effect. An arrangement suited to another corner, (which should have a good light) is a long, narrow mirror of an inexpensive kind with a narrow frame resting on the floor. This is invaluable for toilet purposes, but I prefer the mirror about one foot from the floor, resting on a little curtained shelf, or a jardeniere or flower box on the floor has a charming effect, as the flowers are reflected in the glass. If flowers are not desired in a bed room, ferns or foliage plants can be substituted. There are two tall cupboards for dresses at either end of the room, and they are enamelled and panelled like the door. One has hooks, and the other simply shelves. The windows are curtained with yellow and white art muslin, with frilled edges on one side and cretonne on the other. These are wide enough to draw across at night, but blinds are preferable. The space between the windows is filled in with a combined book case, bonnet cupboards, and shoe shelf. Get your carpenter to make you a tall wooden case, say five feet high, with two shelves at the top for books, then a shelf eighteen inches deep, with a row of pegs for hats and bonnets—this should have two doors with panels, and underneath this the space to the floor should be filled by two shelves hidden by cage or cretonne curtains for boots and shoes. Have the whole thing painted or enamelled to suit the room, stand an art pot, and one or two pretty objects on the top and you will have a useful and ornamental piece of furniture with a small outlay. The The arrangement of the fireplace and toilette table should be in keeping with and regulated by the other furnishings of the room, and when completed the whole has a very tasteful appearance.

BOOK CHAT.

One disadvantage of a literary temperament is to endow its possessor with the gift of insight, to make him or her an authority on the subject of book buying or borrowing. The position of a critic and caterer is always an invidious one, for the human mind closely resembles the human stomach in that what is one man's meat may be another's poison. Perhaps it was the reproaches of my idle friends that drove me to magazine reading, which involves fewer responsibilities. The instalment story is comparatively little patronised: it is too much of a mental discipline, for women, at any rate. The dear creatures like to take up an interesting novel and never lay it down until it is finished, sacrificing time, sleep, and duty to the excitement of the tale. For a person situated as I am, whose hours are limited to a fixed routine, the instalment system is admirably adapted. The present hot wave, however, has thrown more time upon my hands, by driving me into the house, which I do not love in fine weather, so it happens that I have actually been reading books lately; among others "The Philadelphian," by Jennings, which there has been some talk of on account of the career of its author, an Englishman, who, after an adventurous experience of journalism in America, has developed into a member of parliament for his native land. This work of fiction disappointed me somewhat; it is so very melodramatic in character, but the Philadelphian himself is well drawn. There is a murder, a case of bigamy and other incidents calculated to keep the most over-heated mind and body awake. It is published in the Franklin Square Library, and its price is fifty cents. Then there is "Kirsteen" by Mrs. Oliphant, which must appeal to all classes; by her also is "The Heir Presumptive and The Heir Apparent," her last and cleverest work of fiction. "Mine Own People" by Rudyard Kipling, is somewhat of a fraud, by reason of containing several old stories under a new name, which he apologizes for by a prefatory note in his own handwriting, saying that they were previously printed in America without his authority. It contains an appreciative introduction by Andrew Lang, which is worth buying the book for as the estimate of one who is esteemed a standard English critic. Kipling never bores me, though I read him twice or thrice over, but as all may not be of my opinion they are duly warned.

I suppose most of my readers have read "A Social Departure" by that brilliant young Canadian, Sara Jeannette Duncan. Possibly they have only heard of it and read extracts, as I did, in the Lady's Pictorial, where it first appeared in serial form, waiting for a cheap edition which has just appeared in Ivy's American Series. Much as the book has been written up both in England and the States, it has not been over written. Few women of any nationality are gifted with the powers of observation, the sense of humor, the imagination and pathos of Miss Duncan. She takes one from Montreal over the C. P. R. to Vancouver, thence to Japan where her house-keeping experiences are simply delightful in their quaintness, thence to India and then home by way of Egypt, the Suez Canal, Malta and Brindisi. "An American Girl in London," her latest work, which appeared serially in the Illustrated London News and Lady's Pictorial, where I read it, is also good, but the subjects treated are hackneyed, and lack the freshness of her first impressions. I know Miss Duncan personally, and have always felt interested in her career, which I foretold long years ago. I met her first in the office of the Toronto Week, to which we both were at one time contributors. The daughter of a farmer living near Brantford, Ontario, she enjoyed only such a high school education as her native town could give. Having a soul above teaching, she set out to shape her own fortune, and came to Toronto when in her teens, finding employment on the staff of the Globe and the Week. Becoming restless, she went to Montreal to study the French Canadian element for literary purposes, writing there for the Star. She did not find her task congenial, and made arrangements to go with Miss Lloyd, who appears as one of the characters in "A Social Departure" on a tour round the world, representing a syndicate of American newspapers, through Mrs. Erastus Wiman's influence. I met them en route at the Glacier, and travelled with them as far as Kamloops, on their now celebrated trip. Miss Duncan is only 25. She is tall, slight, and very interesting in appearance, without being strictly pretty. She is not a bit of a blue-stocking, but the best of company. Last autumn she married a gentleman in the Indian Civil Service, whose name I cannot recall, and she is now living in Calcutta. I have lost sight of Miss Lloyd, who was also a most charming girl, more esthetic and dreamy than Sara Jeanette. She also wrote very gracefully and well for the Week, but her style was rather too deep and thoughtful for the general public. However, I expect she will also distinguish herself in the literary world. Of Miss Duncan, Canada may justly be proud. She made her mark in England, which is the best test of her ability.

DAINTY DISHES—SALAD MAKING AND DRESSING.

There is perhaps nothing which more conduces to a feeling of coolness in the heat of summer than the sight of things which look refreshing. This is especially the case with eatables, though unfortunately, but little thought is ever bestowed upon the subject. Hot dishes, soups, fish, and steaming vegetables are put upon the table for dinner in summer as a matter of course, or rather of custom, and the only item in the dinner of a well-to-do family which looks cool is the fruit. Now there is nothing in the world which looks cooler on a table than a fresh dish of green salad, and there is nothing more wholesome or cheap, yet in how few houses is it ever thought of as an article of daily diet; and in how few where it is met with is it nicely dressed! I propose therefore, to give some hints as to the way to make a few nice salad dishes. Salad materials come first into consideration; there is the ordinary lettuce, beetroot, celery, tomato, radish, onion, cucumber, and others more or less rare. From these, various combinations may be made. They may be variously dressed, and lobster, crab, salmon, chicken or other cold fish or vegetables added. The choice of materials and the combination, however, depends necessarily very much upon the season of the year; so as we are now in summer, and I am speaking especially of the use of salads in hot weather, we cannot do better than begin with salmon. There are many people who may think a salmon salad so well known that a description of its composition is superfluous, but for those who know so well how to make it counter in how many houses they have eaten a really good salmon salad. The salmon, of which one and a half or two pounds will be ample, must be cooked and allowed to get cold; then cut into strips of about two inches wide from each side of the backbone—the remainder of fish which has come from the table may equally well be outlined, and make a tempting lunch, which all mankind will appreciate. Next, take two or three lettuces, according to size, have them thoroughly well washed and dried by swinging in a net, or pressing them in a clean cloth; if too large break with the fingers to the requisite size, never use a steel knife. If the lettuce is well it improverishes the dressing, and may thus spoil a good mayonnaise. When the leaves are dry and two or three eggs have been boiled hard, take a small china basin, one that will hold two or three quarts, and with the necessary ingredients within reach, begin the dressing of mayonnaise. Be sure and use the very best olive oil; bad oil is equivalent to or worse than bad butter. A teaspoonful of salt and half a teaspoonful of pepper are put in first, for if these are forgotten and added later, it spoils the dressing lumpy. The whites of the eggs are then drained off and the yolks put into the bowl. They are then well stirred for two or three minutes with a wooden spoon. Care must be taken that the stirring, when once begun, must be continued in the same direction or another cause of curdling will be produced. The best plan is to stand always with the bowl of the spoon towards oneself, from right to left. After the yolks are well stirred, a gill (eight tablespoons) of salad oil must be added in very small quantities, half a teaspoon at a time, the stirring continuing evenly and briskly. After the oil, vinegar or lemon juice, according to taste and consistency should be added. Too much of either will thin the dressing. Lemon juice will lighten the color of the mayonnaise; English vinegar will darken it, while tarragon vinegar, without altering the color, will very much improve the flavor. Be sure that all the articles in use are cold. Have the bowl and spoon set upon ice an hour before using, and mix the dressing in a cool place, or it will not thicken. When all is prepared, get your salad bowl or dish, then take a good thick layer of lettuce and dip in the mayonnaise and put in the bowl. Lay some pieces of salmon on the lettuce and drop a little dressing upon them. Then take another layer of lettuce, and so on until the bowl is filled. Garnish the top with slices of hard boiled egg and radish or cucumber.

Lobster and crab salads are made in the same way; if canned lobster is used, it must be carefully drained of all liquor when it is a very good substitute for the fresh article. Tomato salad should be sliced very thin, ice placed on the dish, and the dressing served in a small porcelain jug or sauce boat. Another way is to peel the tomatoes without scalding and put them on ice until very cold. Use the crisp part of one head of lettuce. Cut the tomatoes in halves, make twelve little nests with two or three salad leaves each, place half a tomato in each nest, and put a tablespoon of mayonnaise on each. This makes one of the prettiest and daintiest salads imaginable.

E. MOLSON STRAGGE.

Some slick Seattle slight-of-hand pocket artists were in the city yesterday, and it is reported tried a little of their trade among the great crowds at the race.

A Vancouver gentleman suggested at the station last night as the train went out for the Terminal City that Westminster call yesterday Black Saturday. The train moved out before the Westminster man could get a crack at him.

Port Simpson has adjacent to it the largest salmon canneries on the coast, and from its nearness to the seal fisheries it must also become the headquarters of the seal fishing industry and the large fleets therein engaged. It has back of it millions of acres of rich prairie land, which in time will be peopled with ranchers and farmers, who will contribute to the building up of a large city.

PORT SIMPSON

The Coming City of the North Pacific, is Now on the Market and offers one of the Best Speculations of the Day.

Port Simpson affords the same opportunity to investors today that Vancouver did ten years ago. Ten years ago lots in Vancouver that are selling for $2,000 could have been purchased for $20, and there was not so much certainty of a railroad to Vancouver at that date as there is today of a railroad to Port Simpson.

Nature has determined Port Simpson for a Metropolis. It possesses the only harbor on the North Pacific Coast, and that harbor is pronounced by all mariners (including a British Admiral) to be the finest and safest in the world.

Port Simpson is five hundred miles nearer to Japan than are Vancouver and Victoria, and with the completion of the railway from Port Simpson to Port Churchill, on Hudson's Bay—only a question of time—it will be on the shortest route between England and the Orient, and must command a large share of the trade of the Orient.

It is the only place on the North Pacific Coast that can be reached by the railways that are pushing northwestward from Edmonton and Prince Albert, and without any doubt will be the terminus of another transcontinental railway within a few years.

The property now offered to the public must, by reason of its location—which stands to the surrounding lands just the same as the peninsula on which Vancouver stands—be the site of the future city.

On Queen Charlotte Islands—situated in the Pacific Ocean, nearly opposite Port Simpson—there is an unlimited supply of first-class coal, and it is also thought there is a good supply of coal adjacent to the Port on Work Channel, which is to Port Simpson what Barrard Inlet is to Vancouver.

The Hudson's Bay Co. has had a trading post at Port Simpson for years, and it is the headquarters on the North Pacific Coast for the large and important trade of that rich and powerful company. The attention of the public is called to the fact that, as a rule, wherever the Hudson's Bay Co. has planted its trading posts, there have grown up important cities. Fort William, Winnipeg, Edmonton and Victoria are illustrations of this fact.

C. R. Tuttle, author of "Our Northland," published recently, concludes his interesting work as follows: "And in respect of transcontinental transport or travel from the United Kingdom to the far east, the advantages of the Hudson's Bay route, in connection with a railroad from Churhill to Port Simpson, will not only afford a safe national route, but so greatly minimize time and distance, that with its establishment Canada will become one of the most important parts of the British nation, and absolutely indispensable to the Mother Country. In view of these things, one may reasonably hope that England will eventually aid the Dominion in the construction of the Hudson's Bay railway. The importance of Canada to the parent country is so great that, in a few years at most, one may expect to see a disposition manifested on the part of the latter for closer federal relations. With this will surely come the means of a larger development of Canadian resources, the construction of railways in connection with Hudson's Bay, and the establishment of an extensive international commerce through channels on Canadan latitudes, and consequent national prosperity. Such are the prospects of Our North Land."

VANCOUVER WINS

In the Lacrosse Match by Four Games to One.

Probably the largest crowd of spectators that have ever turned out to a lacrosse match in this city surrounded the grounds and thronged the grand stands at the Queen's park yesterday afternoon. The match was between Vancouver and Westminster clubs, and was one of the provincial championship series, being the substitute for the match played at Vancouver two weeks ago, which was disallowed by the Lacrosse Association on account of one of the Vancouver players being ineligible at that time as a playing member. The sky was cloudless and the weather hot. It was nearly a o'clock when the men lined up before the referee, taking up the following positions:

WESTMINSTER.		VANCOUVER.
Coldwell	Goal	F. Rankin
McKenzie	Point	Suckling
Campbell	Cover Point	Swift
Ketchum, Cambridge, Lewis	Defence Field	Peard, H. Rankin, Scurry
Stewart	Centre	Smith

Dalgleish	Outside Home	Draper
Brown	Inside Home	Frost
F. G. Turner	Field Captain	Smith
Forin	Umpire	Fullerton

Referee, A. E. Wade, Victoria.

1—Vancouver	Draper	1 minute
2—Vancouver (Scrimmage)		8 minutes

THE PLAY.

Yesterday's match may be described accurately as a slashing one. Not merely slashing as indicating fast and fine play, but slashing in its strictly literal sense. Broken heads were the order of the day, and so long as the young fellows are content to amuse people in that way, the spectators should perhaps not object, except those whose tenderness of sheep and sentiment revolts at the sight of gore. The game was a succession of casualties, if that be the right word. The writer has witnessed many of the most famous matches in the annals of the game, but has never looked upon a game as wantonly rough as that of yesterday. The roughness most assuredly interfered with the effectiveness of the play, for a rough game is rarely an effective one. In the old days when Ross McKenzie, Sam Hughes, W. D. Ross, Jim Hughes, and the others of the great Toronto twelve played together, there used to be a good deal of talk of rough play, but it was scientific, and therefore effective. Both sides were to blame yesterday, and the match beyond a doubt will result in a lessening of the public approval of lacrosse as a manly and suitable pastime for the young men of the province to engage in. Public appreciation is a consideration of the first importance in sport of any kind, and it is a matter which the Lacrosse Association would do well to discuss earnestly, whether some finer spirit cannot be introduced into the game as it is played here than that which was predominant yesterday. As to the play the visiting team was lucky in scoring chance goals in the two first games, and still luckier in the ill luck which frowned upon the home men in failing to score on several occasions when there seemed to be nothing to prevent them from doing so. This, however, was also apparent—the home men were not playing up to ordinary form, otherwise the results would probably have been reversed. The visitors were quick to perceive this fact, and taking heart thereat, they redoubled their efforts to hold the champions in check. The luck they had in scoring the first two games in such short space served them up wonderfully, and the third was no sooner begun than the home men saw that the effort now was to prevent more goals being scored. They massed their men effectively at the points of defence, and the good generalship of their field captain in this regard were notable. The ball was hoisted out of bounds an almost innumerable number of times, fouls were claimed time and again, and time was thus killed after a fashion that cannot be described as other than brilliant. But these tactics were really a mistake, because the Vancouver men were playing almost if not fully as strong a game as the Westminsters, and if luck had continued to favor them, playing for goals would most likely have been more effective. But the game of lacrosse is susceptible of infinite variations in the methods adopted to win.

The first and second games yesterday was not very interesting, producing nothing that surprised the spectators so much as their rapid scoring. The big Vancouver contingent went almost daft with delight born of surprise, and threatened to crack the vault of heaven and bring on doomsday by the wild awfulness of their yelling. It was delirious to look on and listen. A joy that is so ravishing and that comes on so very unexpectedly is, however, not without its dangers, and it might be judicious to exercise a certain restraint when our Vancouver friends come over again.

The third game was a sort of warfare, in which every gentleman warrior looked bloodthirsty. There was a good deal of gore, too. Mr. Rankin's face was ripped open in the vicinity of the eye; Mr. Caldwell had his leg unfolded, Mr. Draper's under lip was slit through for an inch or two; Mr. Allen had his wind knocked out; Mr. Dalgleish's ear was cracked, and other little incisions inflicted on various of the warriors, not worth mentioning. They were taken off one by one from the field, the serried ranks becoming thinner one by one, till the Vancouver captain was heard to murmur, "Haste time, or presently we'll lack a quorum," after the fashion of the Iron Duke, "Come night or Blucher." But the winning of the third game gave a resting spell, and the fourth or fifth were indifferent.

It might be a capital idea to have an ambulance wagon on the grounds at lacrosse matches between those two teams henceforth. Two third-year medical students of the Bob Sawyer and Ben Allen type could accompany the wagon and manipulate the affectionate sticking plaster and the useful tourniquet. The referee could carry a spring rattle, and when a player was knocked down and sliced open he could pull the gong and the wagon would dash down the field, the students hanging on by their eyebrows; a stomach pump in one hand, a bonesaw in the other and a hip joint knife held in the teeth. This would add a relish and real battlefield, Red-Cross, St. John ambulance, first-aid-to-the-injured air to the game that would be more than delightful. The medics, besides, could get in some splendid practice, for a man who can stand playing lacrosse like yesterday's can stand having the wrong leg sawed off, his mouth sewed up instead of the gash further along his face, or any trifling little error like that. These happy revivals of Caracalla's gladiatorial arena should not be reprehended, but praised. To be sure there is at a slaughter house a vulgarly greater quantity of blood, but Queen's Park during a lacrosse game between the Vancouvers and Westminsters presents as sanguinary a spectacle as any old Roman could wish for.

THE LIBRARY.

To the Public: In the belief that many citizens are desirous of making contributions of books to the Public Library, the Commissioners beg formally to request that any who desire to contribute should send a list of such books as they intend donating to the undersigned, who will have an officer of the library call for them.

It would be a great convenience if these lists were sent in at once, for until they are received the work of making a selection of new books cannot well be concluded, or an order given to the booksellers for fear of duplication.

A considerable number of volumes taken out of the old library by citizens have not been returned. The Commissioners request that all parties holding such books return them at once to the new library so that they may be catalogued. I have the honor, etc.,

Allan Morrison,
Secretary Library Commissioners.
