WM. M'KINLEY LAID TO REST

While World Mourns, the Murdered President Makes His Last Journey.

Impressive Ceremony in the Ohio Town That Was His Home.

Canton, Ohio, Sept. 19.—As the time approached for bearing the body of the dead President from the McKinley home to the church today, the little cottage of North Market street was the centre of a vast concourse of people. Regiment after regiment of soldiers, acting as guards, were in triple lines from curbs back to the lawns. In front of the McKinley cottage was drawn up the two files of bearers, eigh soldiers of the army, and eight sailors of the navy, waiting the order to take up the casket. At this time the black chargers of Cleveland troops swept down the street, the riders four abreast, in their brilliant Hussars uniform with flags bound in creep and every sabre hilt bearing the fluttering emblem of mourning. Their coming was the signal for the approach of the President and members of the cabinet.

It was 1.15 o'clock and the time had come for taking up the body. A brief service had been held within the darkened chamber, Dr. Manchester saying a prayer while the relatives gathered around, and Mrs. McKinley listened from the half opened door of her adjoining room. A solemn hush fell upon the multitude as the bearers advanced with measured tread. Not a bugle blast; not a strain of the hymns the dead ruler had loved so well, went up. The scene was majestic in its silence. As the casket was borne along above the line of heads could be seen enfolding Stars and Stripes and on top great masses of white roses and delicate lavender orchids. Tenderly the coffin was committed to the hearse and the silence was broken as the order to march passed from officer to officer.

The great procession now took up its mournful journey, passing under the sweep of giant arches, robed in black, between two living lines of humanity massed along the streets, covering house to house and filling the windows. The church bells were tolling, mingling their dismal tones with the cadence of the funeral dirge. At either side of the hearse marched the guard of military and naval honor, the generals on the right led by General Miles, and the admirals on the left, led by Admiral Farquhar. Then came two long lines of carriages for the relatives and friends, and after them the innumerable military and civic organizations that are assembled to pay this last honor to the fallen chief. In the line were division after division of Knights Templars, Knights of Pythias, Masons, Odd Fellows, and representatives of benevolent orders, Chambers of Commerce, as well as delegations of citizens of cities and towns throughout the state and country. It was 1.50 o'clock when the procession passed the court house and turned into Tuscarawas street to the stately stone edifice where the funeral services were to be held. At the church entrance were drawn up deep lines of soldiers with bayonets advanced, keeping a clear area for the advancing casket and the long train of mourners. The hearse halted while President Roosevelt and the members of the cabinet alighted. Again they grouped themselves at either side of the entrance and with uncovered heads waited the passing casket. Then the flower covered coffin was brought from the hearse, and as it passed within the black draped entrance, the President and his cabinet followed within the edifice. The mourners, too, passed inside but the stricken widow was not among them.

She had remained behind in the old home, alone with her grief.

The scene within the church when the casket was carried in on the brawny shoulders of the soldiers and sailors was profoundly impressive. The members of the Senate and the House of Representatives had proceeded the coffin through the door at the side of the chancel through which it entered. They were ushered in as at state ceremonies by the sergeant-at-arms of each body. Senators Allison, of Iowa, and Bates, of Tennessee, headed the senatorial representation, of which there were about 40, and Speaker Henderson and Representative Dalsell of the House, of which more than half of the membership was present.

It was after 3 o'clock when the silent and anxious throngs outside the church saw the solemn pageant appear through the church doors. First came the guards of military and naval honor, the generals and admirals, forming a double line leading from the entrance to the waiting hearse. Again the flag draped casket with wealth of flowers, appeared and was committed to the hearse. The President and members of cabinet, followed arm in arm and stepped into the waiting carriages. The relatives entered their carriages next. Then the squadron of troopers broke their battalion front and wheeling into platoons took up the march to the grave.

The line of the funeral march from the church to the cemetery was about one and a half miles in length. For hours before the time set for the commencement of funeral services at the McKinley home, the streets along the entire length of the line of march was crowded with spectaors. From the gates of the cemetery to the doors of the church there was on each side of the street an almost unbroken line of soldiers and on all the intersecting streets detachments of the militia were posted about 100 feet from the thoroughfare on which the cortege was to go and nobody was permitted to pass in either direction. It was exactly four minutes after four when the funeral car bore the remains of the dead President through the gateway of his last resting place. Twenty minutes after that time the brief services at the vault were over, the members of the family and the distinguished men of the nation who had come so far to do him honor, has passed through the gates on their homeward way.

Washington, Sept. 19.—Twenty years after the death of Garfield, the nation's capitol was again in mourning; the wheels of government were locked and the voices of people were uplifted in prayer for the soul of Wm. McKinley, while his mortal remains were being committed to the tomb in his Ohio home. As if by common instinct men, women and children, white and black, came to a sudden halt in whatsoever they were engaged and sat or stood as still as statues, wheresoever they chanced to be, and the great city was as quiet as a prayer meeting. To the people of Washington, the late President McKinley was more than an official, he was their kindly guardian and they divided their token of respect with the whole nation.

Justice Brewer of the United States supreme court, delivered the principal addresses at the First Congregational church. His key note was the need of imposing upon all Americans the necessity of a personal respect for the law. It was the duty of the citizen to show by his own conduct and example that society was the culmination of human happiness.

London, Sept. 19.—From all parts of Great Britain the British Colonies and the continent are being received very many telegrams giving evidence of the universality of the smypathy for the people of the United States in their great affliction. The great cathedrals of Canterbury, Edinburgh, Dublin, Glasgow, and other cities and the churches of all denominations through out this land were filled with congregations, generally headed by the mayors and corporations.

London, Sept. 19.—A stately service, similar in most respects to that held in memory of Queen Victoria on the day of her burial was conducted in St. Paul's cathedral today out of respect to the memory of the late President McKinley, and was attended by six thousand persons.

Lord Mayor Frank Green, the sheriffs, aldermen and councillors of the city attended the services at the cathedral accompanied by several provincial mayors who had visited London for the purpose of taking part in the ceremony. Dr. Gregory and fourteen other clergymen were engaged in the service. The Archbishop of Canterbury, the Most Rev. Fred Temple, leaning feebly on the arm of one of the clergy, pronouced the benediction.

A QUIET DAY IN MONTREAL

Duke and Duchess of York Respect Burial Day of the Late President.

Visits Paid to Several Educational, Religous and Charitable Institutions.

Montreal, Sept. 19.—As a sympathetic tribute to the memory of President McKinley, the Duke and Duchess of York refrained today from participation in public functions and limited their movements to a round of visits to religious, charitable and educational institutions, including McGill University, where each received the honorary degree of Doctor of Law. Large crowds again assembled on the streets to greet and cheer them when they appeared but the general public was excluded from the institutions which they visited.

They drove to McGill University at 10 o'clock and were met by Lord Strathcona, chancellor, Principal Peterson and the entire faculty. They were shown the convocation hall in the Royal Victoria college where the conventional academic robes were placed upon them. Lord Strathcona, as chancellor, read a formal address and in replying the Duke congratulated Lord Strathcona and Sir Wm. McDonald for the large endowments given by them to the university. After the Duke's reply the chancellor again addressed the Royal couple as graduates of the university. The Royal couple then proceeded to the new medical hall of McGill and assisted in its formal opening. Dr. Craik, dean ofthe faculty, read an address and the Duke in replying praised Lady Strathcona and Hon. Mrs. Howard for their liberal donations to the building fund. The Duke and Duchess next drove to the Royal Victoria hospital and were shown through the institution by Lord Strathcona, and R. B. Angus, president of the Hospital association. From the hospital the Royal couple drove to Laval University where the clergy and students gave them a cordial greeting. Archbishop Bruscnesi addressed them in a speech of welcome and the Duke replied briefly. From Laval they proceeded to the Diocesan college where the Provincial synod of the Anglican church was in session. Bishop Sweetman of Toronto, read the address of welcome and the Duke responded.

Later on in the day the Duke and Duchess were driven to the Villa Maria convent. They were met again by Archbishop Bruchesi who with Sister St. Mary Caroline, the superior, showed them through the historical old building. In the recreation hall a formal address of welcome was read by a pupil and there was a short musical programme. The Duke and Duchess of York were accompanied on their several visits by a number of their suite and aside from the presentation of addresses everything was very informal.

They conversed very freely with those whom they met at the different place visited, and there was a general absence of ceremony.

The Governor General and Countess of Minto left early in the day to prepare for the visit to that of the Ducal party but Premier Laurier remained in attendance and assisted at the different informal receptions held during the day, aside from the cheering when the crowds caught sight of the royal party there was no street demonstration made and the city was generally very quiet.

Flags at mid mast for President McKinley were displayed all over the city and pictures of the dead President draped with purple or crepe, were in many windows. At St. James' church at 12 o'clock special memorial services for the dead statesman were held and many attended.

The Duke and Duchess of Cornwall carried from Montreal two handsome presents. He was given an artistically inscribed gold medal commemorative of the visit from the city and she received a jewel from the ladies of the city. The latter is in diamonds and pearls and is in the shape of a maple leaf.

The Ducal party leave Montreal at 9 o'clock a. m. tomorrow for Ottawa.

THE ETHICS OF SWEARING

Legal Lights Discuss in Police Court the Use of Strong Expletives.

Foreman of the Post Office Building Fined Ten Dollars and Costs.

At the police court yesterday the larger part of the morning was spent by the opposing counsel in the case that was up for trial, in arguing as to what was meant by swearing and creating a disturbance. Louis Daviaux, foreman of the work on the new post office now being erected, was summoned to appear on information laid by the superintending clerk of the works and architect, J. A. Macdonald, charging him with creating a disturbance on Ward street. As reported in yesterday's Miner, the charge was laid as the result of a dispute between the architect and the foreman as to the quality of the material being used, which terminated by the architect handing the foreman a written order, telling him to consider himself dismissed, on receipt of which the other said: "Go to h--l D— you." The architect, however, went to the police station instead, and swore out an information which resulted in yesterday's trial.

P. Wilson represented the Crown and S. S. Taylor, K. C., looked after the interest of Mr. Daviaux. The first witness called was Mr. Macdonald who stated that he was superintending architect; that he had had considerable friction with the foreman right along. On the morning in question he had noticed that the stone which was being used to fill in the bottom of the vault, on which the concrete floor was to rest, had a large quantity of dirt in it. He called the foreman over, saying, "Here, this won't do at all." He also told him he wanted better material put in, the specifications calling for broken stone only, otherwise he would stop the work again. The foreman replied that he would not stop for him again. Mr. Macdonald then went into the office and wrote out an order of dismissal and gave it to Daviaux, telling him to get off the works at once. The foreman then retorted in the language given above.

Mr. Taylor—Under whose orders do you act, Mr. Macdonald?

Mr. Macdonald—Those of Mr. Ewart, superintendent of architecture, at Ottawa.

Mr. Taylor—Did you have any instructions from Mr. Ewart to discharge Mr Daviaux?

Mr. Macdonald—No more than what was contained in the specifications for the works.

The specificatons were then filed by Mr. Wilson, with the consent of Mr. Taylor, and the paragraphs relating to the case were read. In one of these it was stated that the architect had the right to discharge the foreman if he refused to obey orders or conducted himself improperly. Another section said that by architect was meant the superintendent of architecture at Ottawa or any assistant acting under his instructions.

Several other witnesses from among the workmen engaged on the building, were called, and it was shown that Mr. Daviaux had called the words he had used to Mr. Macdonald, out very loudly, so that all had heard them and a bystander had come nearer to them to observe what was going on, although none of the workmen had considered it of sufficient importance to pay any attention to, as there had been several other squabbles before in which loud words had been spoken by the parties on the works.

Mr. Taylor then moved for a dismissal of the case on the grounds that under the specifications Mr. Macdonald had no right to dismiss the foreman unless under written instructions from Ottawa, that under these circumstances the irritation displayed by the foreman in receiving his dismissal was perfectly justifiable and that instead of creating a disturbance he had expressed his indignation in very mild terms considering the provocation. The disturbance created could not have been of very much account when as the only notice taken of it had been to bring one man ten feet nearer to hear what was going on. It had been shown from the statement of the compainant himself that frequent quarrels had occurred between the foreman and the architect, in which both parties had used strong language.

Mr. Crease said that he would prefer to hear the rest of the testimony.

Mr. Daviaux was then called on the stand. His account of the affair was substantially what had been given above. When Mr. Macdonald had called his attention to the stone and told him it would not do he answered, "Use sense, man. We cannot pick up the stone with pinchers; we have to shovel it, and a little dirt must get in."

When Mr. Macdonald gave him his notice of dismissal he got mad and said some things he was sorry for as he was not a man who was in the habit of swearing but "if a man jump on your toe and you say 'get off,' and he jump on other toe and keep on jumping you must say something. I often say darn, but damn, oh, no! except when very mad, and that architect he make me mad. When he go away I cool down and go on with work. I did not have any bad feeling left towards Mr. Macdonald. If Mr. Macdonald and my brother fall in the lake, I pull Mr. Macdonald out first.''

Mr. Crease—Why?

Mr. Daviaux—Because my brother he would float longer. When Mr. Macdonald told me to quit, I say, "You go to hell." I may have said something more but I do not remember doing so. There was not enough dirt in those stones to feed one little canary bird.

A long discussion during the taking of the evidence took place between Mr. Taylor and Mr. Wilson as to what was swearing. Mr. Taylor held that a man could only swear by some specific deity or person. Mr. Wilson held that the only being that could send a man to hell was invoked in saying "damn" and therefore that whether the first part of the sentence was swearing or not the latter part undoubtedly was. Mr. Taylor could not agree with this. Mr. Daviaux had been, as he thought, unwarrantably interfered with, and used what was not as strong language as could be heard on the street any day. There was not as much excitement caused by this alleged disturbance as by an ordinary dog fight. The provocation was great, and it was only natural that Mr. Daviaux should express his indignation in words more forcible than were generally used.

Mr. Crease stated that he could not agreed with Mr. Taylor as to the language not being swearing. He said that even Mr. Daviaux acknowledged that he ought not to have used the words he did. The words were spoken loud enough, it appeared by the evidence, to be heard by people at the Hume hotel across the street. He, therefore, would impose a fine of $10 and costs.

Mr. Taylor said that he would reserve the right to appeal the case if his client saw fit.

Brantford, Ont., Sept. 19.—The Trades and Labor Congress has decided to ask the Dominion Government to levy a per capita tax of five hundred dollars on all Chinamen entering Canada. The Government's attention has also been called to the fact that many government employes secure holidays to engage in other occupations.

ANARCHIST MESSAGES.

Believed an Important Clew Has Been Found.

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 19.—On the person of a wounded prisoner, an anarchist, the police found a letter mailed from Los Angeles two weeks before the shooting of President McKinley, which promises to furnish a clew to a conspiracy. The letter contains two printed circulars, a strange mixture of letters and figures. They have been partially translated. Some expressions already deciphered, "Beats at Buffalo Expositions," "Whatever happens is to be repeated," "Lincoln's assassination," "Real anarchist known only to Lews, the light," "Anarchist dreams of doing duty," "So in the matter of the President's life," "People perish for lack of wisdom," and others. The circular is headed "The Eagle Eye.' Words are ingenously woven with numerals, broken at points so as to appear as biblical references.

MARTIN AND THE PREMIER

Irrepressible Joe Has Conference With Dunsmuir on Political Situation.

Likely That the Cabinet Will Resign and McBride May Be Sent for.

(SPECIAL TO THE MINER.)

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 19.—News of Brown's defeat in New Westminster was not unexpected by the ministry, Wells who went to the Mainland during the last week of the campaign having apprised them that the fight would be very close one even if Brown succeeded in holding the seat. Speculation has been rife all day as to the action of Premier Dunsmuir. Politicians regard the vote as a decisive blow at Martinism, and at the Dunsmuir-Martin combination, and say the Premier should either resign or appeal to the country at once. If the Premier had his way he would likely follow the former course. Not accustomed to brook opposition to his plans, Martin seems to have anticipated that the Premier might take hasty action of this kind and came over last night and this morning was with him for a long time.

At noon the Premier went over to the buildings and the executive council was summoned. The result of Joe's suggestion soon were seen in the summoning of Helmcken to the caucus, the Premier evidently having determined to open negotiations with those whose support he spurned before. They are still in caucus at the time of the writinig of this despatch. It is certain that Helmcken will not join forces with the present administration.

It is regarded here as likely that McBride will be sent for or Curtis, or possibly a coalition of the two if the Government resigns. A cabinet of young men like McBride, Curtis, Tatlow, Murphy and Helmcken or McPhillips would receive strong support here.

REMARKABLE TRIBUTE.

Over a Million Miles of Telegraph Wires Were Stilled Yesterday.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 19.—One feature that was unique in history characterized the McKinley obsequies. It was the silencing of the telegraph. Never before since electricity was first put into use as a means of communication from city to city and from country to country has there taken place, it is said, anything parallell even in a small way. What was done this afternoon on a scale that was gigantic.

Upon orders from the officials of the different telegraph companies, or upon common impulse of operators were direct instructions were not received, the entire telegraph system of the United States was suddenly hushed for five minutes at 2.30 this afternoon the hour set for lowering the precious body into the grave at Canton. At that moment on all the huge network of wires from the Atlantic to the Pacific not a "sounder" in the land gave a single tick and the great American cables were pulseless as the corpse of the late Chief Magistrate himself. It is estimated that fully 100,000 telegraphers thus simultaneously paid homage to the memory of McKinley. The total number of miles of wire affected was upwards of a million and a quarter. In the Western Union Chicago office the hundreds of operators all rose at their desks when the moment came and joining the services sang with deep feeling the President's hymn "Nearer My God to Thee." The Associated Press, the Postal Telegraph Co., the North American Co, and Chicago & Milwaukee Co., and all similar organizations were included in the general order.

GOVERNMENT REBUKED.

The election of Mr. Thomas Gifford and the defeat of Mr John Cunningham Brown in New Westminster is a rebuke to the Dunsmuir Government and its alliance with Mr. Joseph Martin and his supporters which may prove fatal to the dominant ministry. The electors showed their disapprobation of Mr. Joseph Martin and his methods at the general elections in 1900 when the popular verdict was overwhelming anti-Martin. Premier Dunsmuir showed his contempt for that verdict by calling into the cabinet as finance minister Mr. Brown, who was Mr. Martin's chief supporter, and besides this it is an established fact that Mr. Dunsmuir has made Mr. Martin his advisor in political and other matters and that the electors deeply resented this was shown by their verdict at the polls in New Westminster on Wednesday. It was, indeed, a most crushing defeat for the government. What could have induced the Premier to have such a political bedfellow as Mr. Martin is past understanding. Mr. Dunsmuir has ever been prone to have his own way and to take the bit in his teeth. As the possessor of a large fortune he has had for some years full sway with it has and managed his affairs successfully. In an endeavor to carry the methods of conducting his private affairs into the concerns of the province he has split on the rock of public opinion. In carrying on his own affairs his employes were his servants and were compelled to obey his commands and respect his wishes, but as the premier of the Province he was a public official and theoretically, at least, the servant of the people and chosen to carry out their wishes. Unfortunately he forgot this fact and thought he was the master with the result that he finds himself in a most awkward position with a crisis and a dissolution of his ministry staring him in the face. The dispatches yesterday mentioned that he would probably advise the Lieutenant-Governor to ask Mr. Joseph Martin to form a government. This would be but another attempt to go contrary to the expressed will of the people and would only end in disaster to the premier and his poltical friends.

A poll of the house, made by prominent politicians, gives the opposition 16, the government 14, and doubtful 7, and when the House meets the Government should be defeated.

It is nothing short of a pity that the governments of the Province could not be organized on some basis that would be lasting. Their lack of stability and the change of policy put into effect by each exerts a bad influence on business and industrial affairs, which should not be the case. What is most needed is a strong man for Premier who with his weight and wisdom would be able to gather a ministry around him that would command the respect of the electors so that they might be retained in office for a reasonable time instead of having the country disturbed and business affairs rendered uncertain by disruptions every few months. The people are weary and disgusted with the present condition of affairs and desire nothing so much as a stable government, but no ministry can be sound and enduring that has any trace or savor of Martinism in it.

KNIGHTHOOD IN FLOWER.

King Edward during the visit of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York has been graciously pleased to confer honors on nine of the residents of Canada. There will be disappointment in certain quarters over the few that have been named for preferment by the king, as it was thought that the premiers of the several provinces and the mayors of the leading cities would have knighthood conferred upon them. It is said to have been on the cards that Premier Dunsmuir would receive the honor of being made a knight and that when this had become an accomplished fact he would have been willing to retire to the shades of private life with the credit of having been a premier of the Province of British Columbia and the right to be ever afterwards called Sir James Dunsmuir. The King has ruled otherwise and he will probably soon have to return to private life and be satisfied with the plain title of Jim Dunsmuir. Then there is Frank Fletcher, mayor of Nelson. Doubtless, he too, had his dreams of being called Sir Frank Fletcher and living to an honorable old age to be always called Sir Frank, but if he had such aspirations the announcement that only nine Canadians have been honored will shatter this dream, and he will declare that the "saddest words of tongue or pen are those said words it might have been."

Four politicians were honored, these being Sir John Boyd, chancellor of Ontario; Louis Jette, Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec; Joseph Pope, under secretary of state; Oliver Howland, mayor of Toronto, who was the only mayor honored.

The universities were well recognized, Principal Grant, of Queens; Principal Mathieu, of Laval, and Principal Peterson, of McGill, being recognized.

The railway interests were recognized and Mr. Thomas G. Shaugnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific railway, was made a batchelor knight.

Out of compliment to the Governor-General, doubtless, his private secretary, Major F. S. Maude, was honored, by being made a companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. The Major is a man of more than ordinary ability, is pleasing personally and these qualities, too, assisted him in obtaining the coveted honor.

King Edward evidently does not believe in too general a distribution of knighthoods, as it would tend to cheapen the distinction given by them and so very wisely restricted the number in Canada to nine. It is singular to note, however, that not one of the members of the Canadian contingents, who fought so bravely in South Africa have been rewarded with knighthood, but doubtless His Majesty, in his wisdom, thought the promotions and the honors which they obtained already sufficient recompense for the loyalty, patriotism and gallantry which they on all ocasions displayed.

PUT TO TORTURE.

It is said that Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, was subjected by the police of Buffalo to what is known as the "third degree" of torture in order to induce him to make a confession. It was held by the police that the end justified the means, but the system of torturing prisoners it had been thought, had long since been abandoned by civilized nations. It was found that those tortured were often willing to confess to anything in order to secure a cessation of the agonizing pains to which they were subjected and would acknowledge anything that their tortures suggested. In this way persons perfectly innocent were made to seem to be accessories to infamous crimes and were convicted and executed on testimony wrung from the victims of torture. Czolgosz deserves to be executed for his crimes and certainly will be, and this should satisfy justice. If he has accomplices the machiney at the command of justice in New York should be sufficient, without resorting to the Tenth Century and clumsy method of torture, to find out who they are. That the officers of the law in Buffalo should have resorted to such a barbarous and obselete method in the case of Colzgosz is nothing but a reflection on their ability and their humanity, and their action is altogether indefensible. It is only second in barbarity to the method pursued in the Southern States of lynching negroes arrested for crimes. It is a practice which is not sanctioned by the laws and is plainly a breach of the constitution, which declares that no cruel or unusual punishment shall be inflicted on any person, but in some of the larger cities the police have their "sweat boxes" and other appliances which they use to compel confessions from prisoners. Nothing, however, can be found on the statute books authorizing these and they are palpably and plainly illegal and not in consoance with the spirit of the times. The law of the state of New York says that murderers shall upon conviction of murder in the first degree be electrocuted, but nowhere does it give the police or any other officals the right to torture in order to extort confession. Czolgosz is certain to be electrocuted, but he should not be tortured in advance. The extreme penalty of the law should be sufficient to satisfy even the most savage.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The London Lancet says: Chemical analysis would assign practically no nutritive value to the juicy fruits, for they consist of little more than a cellulose envelope containing a solution of sugar, the amount varying about 17 per cent., as with grapes, to about 1.4 per cent., as with lemons. The amount of water in fruit is considerable. In watermelons it is no less than 95 per cent., in grapes 80 per cent, in oranges 86 per cent., in lemons 90 per cent., in peaches 88 per cent., in apples 82 per cent., in pears 84 per cent., in plums 80 per cent., in nectarines 83 per cent., and in strawberries 90 per cent., not a fruit in the whole category containing less than 80 per cent. The irrestible conclusions, considering these facts, is that fruit plays an important role in diet as a thirst quencher. Certainly when fruits are freely represented in the diet less fluid requires to be consumed, and fruits would appear to be endowed with a subtle, inimitable flavor which is ample inducement to imbibe fluid in this most wholesome form.

F. G. Fauquier, the ex-gold commissioner found guilty of misappropriating government funds, was sentenced on Wednesday to two years imprisonment, which was not a heavy sentence for the crimes which he committed. Two years, however, should be sufficient to show the ex-commissioner the error of his ways, and by that time he will doubtless have impressed deeply upon his mind the folly of treating government funds as his own and when the prison gates are opened to give him liberty he should emerge from them a wiser and a better man. The wonder is that a man of Faquier's intelligence and ability should have ever given way to temptation. Doubtless at first he took the money instrusted to his care with the intention of returning it, and kept on taking more till his larcenies aggregated more than he was able to repay. In this way many a man, who had no intention at first of stealing, has eventually found himself wearing the motley garb of a convict. It was probably his weakness rather than a deliberate intention to steal, that lead to his downfall, but the law does not recognize the means by which a man becomes guilty of a felony, but rather the fact that he is guilty.

MINING NEWS.

(SPECIAL TO THE MINER.)

Grand Forks, B. C., Sept. 19.—Anthony McMillan, managing director of the Snow Shoe Gold-Copper Mines, and J W. Astley, chief engineer, arrived here today and held a conference with S.H. C. Miner. Jay P. Graves, and A. C. Flummerfelt of the Granby Smelter. Subsequently Mr. McMillan said: "We are considering the question of erecting our own smelter or the alternative of sending out ores to a custom smelter. Data is being gathered but no decision will be reached until the arrival from England of G. S. Waterlow, one of the directors. Some time ago the ore in sight in our mines was estimated at five hundred thousand tons but this figure, owing to recent development work, is far below the reality. A large open quarry, all in ore, was started a few weeks ago. The mines are located in Phoenix camp less than two miles from Phoenix. The company which owns four claims was successfully floated in London this spring. The capital is two hundred and fifty thousand pounds. It is considered likely that the Snow Shoe smelter will be built here on a site adjoining the Granby smelter.

A number of men who had been laid off at the Eva mine at Camborne came in the Robson train last evening. They stated that there was but one man left at work on the mine.

The following items concerning the Slocan are culled from The New Denver Ledge:

The electric ore finder which has been so successfully used at various properties in this division, is now at work at the Reco and Ruth.

Four men were put to work on the Black Hawk and Daisy group, in the Ten Mile camp, last week by W. E. Bore, for Ernest Mansfield.

Work was started this week on a 300 foot tunnel to be run on the Legal, a promising Lemon creek property owned by W. S. Johnson and A. R. Bolderston.

Mike McAndrews is working on the Linnet, near Cody. Mike refused $25,000 for this property last summer, and he fully expects that it will make a mine next winter.

The Hewett, the big dry ore mine shipping from Silverton, sent out six carloads of ore last week. The farther this property is developed the better it is proving. It is now looked upon as one of the big things of the camp.

Great as has been the record made by the Arlington mine in the past year, it is said by those in a position to know that the real value of the property has not been realized even by the owners themselves, and that years hence the output of this greatest silver mine in B. C. will astonish the mining world.

The work of hauling the ore from the Arlington mine dumps to Slocan City was started the past week. W. C. E. Koch brought in 12 head of horses last week from Washington to do the hauling. The Nelson smelter bought the dumps outright, paying something like $18,000 for the 2,000 tons.

The big Galena tunnel being driven on the Last Chance to tap what is known as the Galena ledge at a vertical depth of 1,000 feet, has been driven 1,800 feet and is expected to encounter the ledge almost any day. It is the greatest tunnel project that has been undertaken on any Slocan property.

Kaslo's copper mine, the True Blue, is proving of more than ordinary importance. At a depth of 140 feet the ledge is nine feet wide with a paystreak of clean ore 16 to 18 inches wide. This ore runs 23 per cent. copper, and assays from the remaining portion of the ledge give 7 per cent. copper.

The Reco mine, at Sandon, a property that was made famous a few years ago as the producer of the richest galena ore in the world, when a shipment of 17 tons netted $17,000, is again to the front with what is said to be a better showing of ore than it has had in its history. The shoot of ore averages eight inches in width, is 120 feet long and has been proved continuous to a depth of 130 feet. When the rawhiding season opens shipments from this property will be resumed.

W. A. Coplen is again in charge of the mineral exhibit at Spokane's big fair. Speaking of British Columbia's exhibit Mr. Coplen says: "British Columbia is well represented. There is ore from the Slocan, Rossland, Fort Steele, Similkameen, Summit, Ainsworth, Kamloops and Vancouver, and to add to the numerous beautiful things is a number of choice cabinets that are the pride of some of the citizens of this city. Among those worthy of careful attention is E. B. Van Osdel's made up of both rare and common minerals, all classified It is a valuable collection for study as well as for mere inspection. Another is owned by O. P. More, containing some pretty crystals and rich samples of ore, among which is seen the famous Treadwell ore. There is another cabinet of my own, principally made of choice, rich samples of are from the Upper Columbia districts."

Chas. Dempster, of Rossland, was in Nelson yesterday on his way to the Slocan-Republic mine. Mr. Dempster stated that last week a party of the directors of the company from Michigan, had inspected the property, and were much pleased with its appearance. It had been decided to build a wagon road from the mine to Slocan City, a distance of five miles on which work was to be started immediately.

A pack train of supplies was taken out yesterday to the Star claim at the head of Eagle creek, which Oscar Johnston and his brother have started to develop.

Shipments of ore from the Mother Lode mine will commence arriving at the Hall Mines smelter about Monday. It is expected that about twenty-five tons a day will be shipped. The ore is well suited for fluxing.

FAVOR PARTY LINES.

Nelson Liberal Association Adopts a Resolution to That Effect.

At the annual meeting of the Liberal Assocation held in the Board of Trade rooms last evening a resolution in favor of conducting the next provincial campaign on party lines was adopted. The resolution reads as follows: "Resolved, That this association declares itself in favor of conducting the next provincial campaign on party lines, and the president is hereby directed to appoint a committee of three to prepare a circular letter for distribution among the other Liberal associations of the Province, asking them to co-operate with the Nelson organization in this matter."

President Gibson appointed the following committee, R. C Campbell-Johnston, S. S. Taylor, and John A. Turner, to prepare the circular as directed.

The association re-elected the old officers to serve for the ensuing year: President, J. A. Gibson; Secretary, George C. Taylor, Dr. Hall, Alderman Gillette, H. E. Conan, and Hugh McDermott.

Short but eloqent addresses were delivered by President Gibson, S. S. Taylor and John A. Turner, and others, and the meeting was of an enthusiastic character.

THE CITY

The boys belonging to the public school are organizing an Association Football club, and will meet each afternoon after school hours for practice on the school grounds.

Arrivals from Spokane state that the Salvation Army band from Nelson won much praise and appreciation during its stay in that city. At all the meetings at which it played there were immense crowds to hear it.

The balmy air of yesterday drew many people out boating on the lake. A large number also took advantage of the half holiday to go grouse hunting in the coverts close to the city. A few birds were secured, but there appeared to be more hunters than grouse.

A meeting for the purpose of forming a press association for Eastern British Columbia will be held at Halcyon Hot Springs on Monday, September 30th. There will be two sessions, one in the afternoon at 3 o'clock and the other at 9 p. m. The proposed programme includes the inauguration of the institution, consideration of the constitution and the election of officers.

The best drill of the season of the local company R. M. R. was held at the skating rink last evening. There was a good attendance, among them several recruits. The company is filling up rapidly, being within five or six of full strength. As soon as it is completely filled up shooting will commence so that it will be finished before inspection which takes place about the 10th of October.

Yesterday afternoon the business men of Nelson paid a graceful tribute to the late lamented President McKinley by closing their places of business. It will long be remembered as a notable occasion as not only the stores dealing in staples were closed but the fruit and tobacco stores which usually keep open no matter what happens were closed up tight. The action of the businessmen was taken as a sincere compliment by the citizens of the United States in Nelson, and will help to cement that kindly feeling between the two nations which has been engendered during the bereavements which both nations have suffered this year.

With the coming of winter a number of men around town have been endeavoring to lay in a supply of winter firewood. Across the lake there were numerous complaints during the past week of men cutting wood on private land and paying little attention to the protests of the owners. One indignant rancher living opposite Nelson, is reported to have chased a party who had felled some of his best trees, off the premises with a shot gun. A lady who was alone at home that day on another ranch, seeing men cutting down trees and transporting them in the shape of cordwood on to scows went down to remonstrate and was told to go to a place where wood is not supposed to be in demand. Along the Nelson Granite road wood, is also being cut and removed by unauthorized persons off private lands.

NELSON BOAT CLUB.

Ways and Means Committee Appointed to Raise Funds for Regatta.

A general and well attended meeting of the boat club was held last evening in Fraternity hall for the purposes of making preparations for the big regatta of the North Pacific Association of Amateur Oarsmen, to be held at Nelson next year, and for the consideration of other matters.

A committee was selected consisting of Messrs. Selous, Croasdaile, Mathews, Holt, Winter, Beaven and Wragge to devise ways and means, such as getting up dances and entertainments for the raising of funds for the proposed regatta. In connection with the raising of funds the matter of providing a boat house was bought up and it was decided, after considerable debate, to wait until the club had money on hand before venturing on the matter of purchasing such a convenience as a boat house.

The secretary and captain were instructed to purchase from Clasper, of London, Eng., a four-oared cedar racing shell and after some minor matters had been discussed the meeting adjourned.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 19.—A special to The Tribune from Sault Ste. Marie says: The steamer Nicholas which arrived here from Duluth today brought report that the Steamer Hudson foundered off Eagle river last Monday, her crew of 25 men being drowned in the heavy sea. The story clears up the mystery surrounding the sinking of a steamer with two stacks seen from the shore Monday when the report was sent out that the crew had been rescued by a steamer nearby That steamer now proves to have been the Nicholas. Mr. McLean says he had all he could do to keep his own vessel afloat in the heavy sea and was unable to succor the men who were hanging to the rail of the sinking Hudson. The Hudson was bound from Duluth to Buffalo with a full cargo of flour grain and general merchandise.

Florence Hot Blast

Our New Idea Deflector Fire Pot greatly increases the heating capacity of the stove, and in connection with the deflector ring forces the heat to the floor. The base is hot, the floor being warmer than with a base burner.

The Hot Blast Attachment takes in the cold air through a duct at the rear of the fire pot, the heated air being discharged in a circle at the top of fire pot, over fire, thus consuming all the gases and products of combustion. It can be operated in connection with the front draft door, or independently, by a screw register in the rear of base, insuring complete control of the stove with nearly perfect combustion.

The large Hot Air Circulating Flue on the back takes the cold air from the floor and ejects it, intensely heated, through the top adding greatly to the heating capacity.

Where the stove is operated according to directions we guarantee it to consume all the gas contained in soft coal, thus deriving the benefit of all the heat in the fuel consumed, causing a truly remarkable saving of fuel over any other stove on the market. The stove will hold fire from 24 to 48 hours without attention.
